A Car for Everybody

The FORD V8 has met with unanimous approval by everyone who has seen or ridden in it since its arrival here a week ago. When viewing this car one must not overlook such elements as the finest quality of materials, simplicity of design, which of course insures simplicity and smoothness of operation power, in sufficient quantity to meet the desire and needs of the car owner. Absolute reliability, lightness in weight, and last but not least its amazing low price. A surplus of horsepower has been put into the V8 as well as in the four-cylinder model. This increases safety and efficiency.

Gruelling tests have been given this car for months before its delivery to branches. What ever has been proven of practical value will be found in this new car. Not one element which goes to make up safe, economical and comfortable transportation has been omitted in this car. It is a car for all classes of people, regardless of station of life.

Obituary of Rev. J. H. Skinner

John H. Skinner was born in the state of Louisiana, Feb. 9, 1853 and the family came to the state of Texas when Mr. Skinner was a mere child and his father died shortly after their arrival. Texas, at that time, was a wild frontier, thickly settled with Indians and amid such surroundings he was reared to manhood.

In the year of 1872 he was united in marriage to Miss Pinky Alice Bourne and they came to New Mexico in 1881. This was the same year in which Billy the Kid was killed and the country surrounding here had not recovered from the excitement of past events in which the noted outlaw was the central figure. There were many prospectors in the mountains, but between Fort Stanton and Bonito where the Skinners located, there were but two families residing.

Fort Stanton was then a military post at which, General John Pershing was a young lieutenant. At Lincoln, there was but one store, owned by a man by the name of Delaney and his clerk was George Curry, who afterwards was appointed Governor of the territory. Work was scarce those days, but young Skinner was ambitious; he went to Socorro, worked in the mines and was unable to visit his family more often than once each month on account of the distance and slowness of travel of those days. From the time of his arrival here until several years ago, he preached at different places over the county to people who were always glad to hear his sermons and his wholesome advice. He was an Oddfellow in every sense of the term and at his funeral, his brethren paid their last loving tributes to his excellent Christian character and becoming manhood. His career is ended, but his good example remains. To the faithful wife and children, the order to which he belonged and the many friends over the county tender combined sympathy.

Net Catch Is the Town's Net Profit

SO PLENTIFUL are the herring that make their way up and down the shallow waters of the famous brook at Pembroke, Mass., that the town has hit upon the novel idea of furnishing motorists with nets and then charging them 25 cents a dozen for their catch. It is estimated that over 120,000 herring make their way up this brook every day.

Men Who Love

By BERTHA LEAH CROSS

THE woman stood at the edge of the wood, in the dying light of day, her head lifted watching the blue bulk of the mountain, and the glided orange that arose from behind it. Her figure was slim, and she might have been a high priestess at her devotions so still was she. With a sigh, her gaze dropped to the gloomy cavern of the woods, and she peered, expectant, down the path which stretched way into the blackness where the pine trunks snuggled closely together for companionship.

WHY HOARD THINGS THE WORLD NEEDS?

We don't mean gold! Why not quit hoarding sympathy? Let it flow freely. Why keep your emotions pent up? Why not give your nobler feelings a chance for circulation? Why hoard kindness? It doesn't do you any good, much less your neighbor. These are the days when multitudes are down and out. Why not give those who are hungry for a little attention a handout? Why not give them the glad hand of applause? It will not impoverish you and it may make them rich.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PATIENCE be you young or old. Brings its own reward, we're told. Buster Bear doesn't believe it. He doesn't see it that way at all. He is willing to admit that it does some times, but not always. No, indeed, not always! Perhaps that is because the reward isn't always what Buster wants it to be. You know how it is when we set our hearts on a thing and then don't get it. The disappointment makes us overlook some of the good things we do get. I suspect that it was this way with Buster that day when he discovered Busy Bee in the Green Forest.

honey. Can you imagine any sweeter thoughts? Buster knows a great deal about Busy Bee. Ever since he was a little cub he has been interested in Busy Bee. I am afraid it has been a selfish interest, but none the less it has been a real interest. It has led him to find out a very great deal about Busy Bee. He knows that Busy Bee makes honey. He knows that she gathers the sweets from the flowers of the Green Meadows and the Green

So Buster sat and dreamed and watched the flowers and waited for Busy Bee to return.

Forest and that in a secret storehouse she packs these sweets away in the form of honey. He knows that sometimes this secret storehouse is in a hollow tree, sometimes in a hollow log, and sometimes even in a cave among the rocks. He knows that Busy Bee never wastes any time, not a single minute, but from morning till night is at work gathering the sweets of the flowers and making them into honey. He knows, too, that she isn't a safe person to interfere with, that she carries the sharpest of little lances with her all the time, and little as she is isn't the least bit afraid to use it on even such a big fellow as he is. Yes, indeed, Buster Bear knows a great deal about Busy Bee.

When she flew away from those flowers in the little opening among the trees in the Green Forest, she went so suddenly that Buster didn't see in which direction she flew. "Never mind," said Buster himself, "she'll come back; and next time I'll be sharper and see which way she goes. This is a very pleasant and comfortable place, so I'll just wait until she returns."

So Buster sat down where he could watch those flowers, made himself comfortable and waited for Busy Bee

JUST BALANCING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A BIRD upon a twig, Just balancing, A bird not very big Or anything; Although the branches sway In every breeze, He sings, the best he may, His harmonies.

And what are we? Like him We dip and dance, Upon a swaying limb The sport of chance. The sky not always blue, The winds at rest, We sometimes live it through And do our best.

Our hold on joy is poor, And winds are strong, And little is secure For very long, And yet to heaven's Word Still let us cling, As bravely as a bird Just balancing.

to come back. And while he waited he dreamed—day dreams, you know—and they were very pleasant dreams. They were sweet dreams, the very sweetest of dreams, for they were all of honey. He dreamed of a great hollow tree and that he had climbed it and, with his great strong claws had torn it open and found more honey than he could eat all at once, and Buster can eat a great deal. He smacked his lips quite as if that honey were real, and not just dream honey.

So Buster sat and dreamed and watched the flowers and waited for Busy Bee to return. He waited and waited. He was very patient, was Buster Bear. With such pleasant dreams it wasn't hard to be patient. You see, he felt that patience might make those dreams come true. When Busy Bee should come back for more sweets he would follow her straight to her secret storehouse. So he waited and waited.

The Jolly Little Sunbeams were very comforting and pleasant. It was very, very still and beautiful there. His stomach was reasonably full. Altogether Buster Bear was very comfortable. He blinked at the flowers. He nodded. Presently he lay down, and then—well, then those sweet day dreams became still sweeter sleep dreams. Yes, sir, Buster Bear fell asleep. And while he slept, Busy Bee returned and went away again, not once but several times. The Black Shadows had begun to creep throughout the Green Forest, when at last Buster opened his eyes. He scrambled to his feet and shook himself. Then he gazed a rumbly-grumbly crowd of disappointment. He knew that Busy Bee would not return again that day, but had gone to bed for the night. His patience had brought no

BACK YARD GARDEN

A LITTLE garden at the back of the city lot, a bit of space where green things may grow in neat rows, a half dozen tomato plants, bush beans, carrots, radishes and onions—what a joy it can add to one's life. Even where space is not such a factor a small garden near the kitchen where it may be tended is to be recommended.

A garden south or west of the house gets more protection from cold winds, and better sunlight. Any kind of soil with proper handling will make good gardens. Place the rows so that they get as much spacing as possible, making the garden look trim by the proper spacing and placing of seeds. Plan the crops so that the soil is working all summer. The time to plant depends upon the date of the last frosts, which is not always reliable, but many of our vegetables like lettuce, radishes, turnips, spinach and parsley are not afraid of a little cool weather.

Where one has space for corn, it must be planted after all frost danger is past. Corn is one of the most satisfactory of vegetables to raise. In good soil, with plenty of moisture and heat, with a few hotings, a crop will respond that will delight the heart. There is nothing equal to the fresh juicy golden bantam or the country gentleman, and later the luscious milky ears of the evergreen.

When the last frost is over plant early beets, onion seed, carrots and such tender vegetables as the bush bean. Now the tomato plants may be set out, the cabbage and eggplant as well as pepper plant and cucumber seed may be sown, also melon and squash. Do not have these near enough to mix the pollen, or the melons will not be of good flavor.

Old-Fashioned Remedy for Economic Illness

Some old-fashioned remedies for depression are being brought out into the open by the long-suffering public. Here's one worth a place in the Hall of Fame, contributed by Mrs. Lydia O. Larson of Knoxville, Tenn., to Collier's Weekly: "I am sick and tired," snaps she, "of hearing all our troubles blamed on congress, Wall Street, tariffs, distribution system, etc. The germ of our sickness is cultivated in our homes by ourselves. A little more cooking, scrubbing and sweeping, at the sacrifice of a few hours of bridge, won't hurt any woman. A little less gambling and some additional leg-work isn't going to make any man poorer, either. More backbone and less whininess is what we need. I will close now, as I have to look for a washboard I discarded about two years ago."

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 23 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment." Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know. For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drugstore—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and it after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

No. 7: 'Lark Boat Builder Confesses Cruel Hoax in Lindbergh Case—Terrible Tragedy at Sea—Gossip of National Politics.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BREAKING down under long continued examination, John H. Curtis, the Norfolk boat builder who had put himself forward as an intermediary in the Lindbergh baby case, confessed to Inspector Harry Walsh of the Jersey City police that his story was a hoax and his "negotiations" with the kidnapers were entirely a fake. He said he never knew such persons as those he named as Colonel Lindbergh and to meet whom the distracted father made many trips to sea on a yacht in company with Curtis. In his brief written confession of his cruel swindle Curtis said he "became insane on the subject for the time being, which caused me to create the story in its entirety," and that he was "brought back to his senses" by a telephone conversation with his wife.

Curtis' activities the night of the kidnaping were being investigated. He was locked up and later arraigned on charges of giving false reports that hindered the apprehension of the persons guilty of the crime. If convicted he may be imprisoned for three years or fined $1,000, or both. He waived preliminary hearing.

Arrested in Brooklyn for abandoning his family, Frank Parzych, a thirty-year-old narcotic addict, told detectives—and clung to the story after more than twelve hours of questioning—that he was one of a band of seven men who kidnaped the child and that the baby died after the man carrying him down the ladder from the nursery window accidentally dropped him to the ground. The police were inclined to believe this story was false.

Through the authorities of the entire country are of course hunting for the kidnapers and murderers of the baby. New Jersey is still the center of the operations, and the investigation there is in the charge of William H. Stevens, attorney general of the state, and of Prosecutor Erwin Marshall of Mercer county. Neither of these men is optimistic, fearing the case will be added to the list of unsolved crimes because, as Mr. Marshall said, whatever trail there was is now virtually dead. The necessary excessive caution of the police while the child was still thought to be alive lessened the chances for solving the mystery. However, Attorney General Stevens by no means gave up. At a conference of state, federal and county police and investigators in Trenton, a plan was established for co-ordinating all activities in the hunt for the murderers.

ONE of the worst marine tragedies of recent years occurred near the entrance to the Gulf of Aden when the new French liner Georges Philippar of the Messageries Maritimes suddenly burst into flames and was destroyed. The loss of life is uncertain at this writing, but probably about 100 persons perished. The survivors were picked up by several steamships and landed in different parts. Two British vessels took 254 of them to Aden, and they said at least 100 of the thousand odd aboard the doomed ship were trapped in their cabins. Many others lost their lives in the stormy sea.

PROMINENT bankers and industrial leaders, convinced that public fear and uncertainty have prevented the federal reserve system's policy from taking full effect in the stimulation of recovery of prices and of prosperity, have formed a committee of twelve to aid in putting to work the hundreds of millions of dollars being poured into the market by the system in its program for credit expansion.

These gentlemen gathered in New York at the call of George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, with Owen D. Young as their chairman. The following statement was issued:

"Governor Harrison of the Federal Reserve bank of New York has called together a committee composed of bankers and industrialists for the purpose of considering methods of making the large funds now being released by the federal reserve banks useful affirmatively in developing business.

"Its purpose will also be generally to co-operate with the Reconstruction Finance corporation and other agencies to secure more co-ordinated and so more effective action on the part of the banking and industrial interests."

SPEAKER GARNER put forth his own plan for depression relief, and it was endorsed by Representative Rainey, leader of the house. Its main features are:

1. Appropriation of $110,000,000 to be expended by the President in his discretion for the relief of destitution.
2. Increase of $1,000,000,000 in the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for loans to state and local governments, corporations and individuals for the purpose of increasing employment.

3. A bond issue of $1,000,000,000 for construction of federal public works in the interest of revival of industry and increase of employment, this expense to be met by a tax of one-third of one cent a gallon on gasoline.

OUR senators are not yet willing to give us real beer, even as part of a plan to bring relief to the unemployed. By a vote of 24 to 61 they rejected Senator Tyding's amendment to the tax bill. This amendment would have legalized 2.75 per cent beer with a tax of 24 cents a gallon upon it which was calculated to yield $200,000,000 annually for amortization of a construction bond issue and an additional $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 that would have allowed that amount to be stricken from the tax bill.

WITH the near approach of the Democratic national convention speculation as to the chances of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the nomination grows intense.

His pre-convention manager, James A. Farley still believes he will be nominated on the first roll call. He asserts that Roosevelt will be sure of 691 votes to 403 for all other aspirants, and that before the tally clerk gets down as far as Wyoming and the territories, enough states will change their votes from favor to support of Roosevelt to put the New York governor across the two-thirds line—770 votes.

One of the most prominent of the "dark horses" has taken himself definitely out of the running, Owen D. Young, who had a large and hopeful body of supporters though he never had been an avowed candidate, made the "final" announcement that he would not accept the nomination if it were offered him. In a letter to John Crowley, publisher of the Times of Little Falls, Young's home town, he said his reasons for this decision were "so controlling as not to be open for argument." It was assumed the chief of these reasons was Mrs. Young's ill health.

AL SMITH has by no means surrendered. In a radio address he set forth his personal platform containing planks designed to cure the ills from which the country is suffering. The main features were:

- Balance the national budget.
- A manufacturers' sales tax to meet the $1,500,000,000 deficit.
- Reduction of national expenditures to an "irreducible minimum."
- Opposition to a veterans' cash bonus.
- Repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.
- Immediate modification of the Volstead act, to permit wines and beer.
- His previously proposed bond issue for public works to relieve unemployment, the bonds to be amortized by proceeds from a wine and beer tax.
- Defeat of President Hoover's proposal to relieve unemployment through funds of the reconstruction finance board.
- Cloth the President with power to extend, if need be, the moratorium on international debts "until a real solution can be reached."
- Suppress "all blocs which bedevil legislation."

SENATOR WATSON of Indiana, majority leader of the senate, does not think congress can possibly get through its necessary business without a summer session before June 14, when the Republican national convention opens, so he proposed to other leaders of both parties that a recess be taken from June 4 to July 11. Speaker Garner demurred, believing all legislation can be disposed of before June 11, so a decision was postponed until June 4. If it appears then that congress can end its work by June 11, the recess plan will not be pressed.

UNLESS reparations payments are maintained, Rumania, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia will refuse to pay their international debts. This was decided upon at a conference of these nations, which form the little entente, at Belgrade, and it will be their attitude at the coming Lausanne parley. It is not a new position for them, and is the same as that maintained consistently by France, their great friend.

Jugoslavia is especially concerned about reparations, since the amounts due it were estimated on the basis of damage done. The Jugoslavs fear Germany cannot be persuaded to resume payments, in which case they will lose annually an increasing amount beginning with $10,000,000 and reaching eventually $28,000,000, or a total in all of $875,000,000. Jugoslavia's war debts to the allies total about $300,000,000, so that full cancellation of reparations and debts would cause a loss of $575,000,000.

LOU T. REICHERS, a daring American aviator, was the first of this year's crop of would-be transatlantic flyers, and he failed. Hopping off from Harbor Grace, he sought to fly to Paris with a landing at Dublin. But he got lost in the clouds when nearly across the ocean, came down not far from the south end of Ireland and was picked up by the steamship President Roosevelt, whose commander, Captain Fried, and chief officer, Harry Manning, have rescued many persons from death at sea.

CAPT. ROBERT DOLLAR, the aged and spectacular dean of the shipping and lumber industries of the Pacific coast, died at his home in San Rafael, Calif., after an illness of several weeks. Born in Scotland in 1844, he began work as a lad in Quebec and rose steadily to the dominant position he held at his death.

The coast guard lost its able commander when Rear Admiral F. C. Billard passed away in Washington, where he resided. He was fifty-eight years old and had been ill two weeks. Dr. B. J. Cigrand, founder and president of the American Flag Day association, died at his home in Batavia, Ill.

HENRY L. STIMSON, secretary of state, returned from Geneva, says his conversations there convinced him that Europe agrees with the United States on what can and must be done in regard to the far eastern situation and will co-operate with Uncle Sam. He is certain neither Japan nor Russia wants war, and he indicates that the great powers will strive to keep the Manchurian trouble localized, at least for the present. However, the authorities in Washington are rather alarmed by the military situation in Manchuria because of the continued concentration of troops along the frontier.

JAPAN is in a state of ferment and the occidental mind can scarcely figure out what the results may be. Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai was assassinated by a group of young army men and at the same time military terrorists raided and bombed various buildings and did other damage in Tokyo. These events signalled the outbreak of an actual military revolt against the existing government and its course in national and especially international affairs. Inukai's cabinet resigned and plans were made to install Kicaburo Suzuki, new president of the Seiyukai party, as premier. But the representatives of the army served notice that a national cabinet must be formed not based on political parties. The vice chief of staff declared the army would refuse to approve any nomination for war minister in a party cabinet. The constitution provides that the war minister must be a general of the army, so the army can prevent the formation of any ministry that it disapproves. Late dispatches from Tokyo indicated that the army would have its way, and all over the world there was speculation as to what might be the effect on Japan's relations with China and especially with Russia.

Prince Satonji, last of the elder statesmen, was called to Tokyo to try to effect a compromise.

HARRY J. LEIK, superintendent of Mount McKinley National park in Alaska, and three companions climbed both peaks of the mountain, the first time this ever had been accomplished, and discovered that tragle disaster had befallen a group of scientists headed by Allen Carpe who had attempted to scale the mountain for the purpose of measuring cosmic rays. Carpe himself and Theodore Koven lost their lives. Koven's body was found on Muldrow glacier, and it was certain that Carpe had fallen into a crevasse. The lost leader was regarded as the ablest mountaineer in America. He was working under the direction of Prof. Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago, who had expected to join him in Alaska to continue the cosmic ray study.

Two other members of Carpe's party, E. P. Beckwith and Percy T. Olton, Jr., both of New York, were safe, encamped on the glacier, Leik reported. Beckwith was seriously ill with fever and was rescued by airplane. N. D. Spadeveckoja, also of the party, had left the camp to seek aid and was missing.

HINDUS and Moslems in Bombay fought each other for days and about a hundred were killed and many injured before the British troops could quell the riots with rifle fire and tanks. The strife between the two races spread to Calcutta and there, also, it was necessary for the police to fire on the mobs.

POPE PIUS XI issued an encyclical entitled "Charitas Christi" in which he called the world to prayer, penance and mortification to save itself from "the peril of terrorism and anarchy" and "the still graver evils that are threatening." For this purpose he set aside a period of eight days for "reparation" on the octave of the feast of the Sacred Heart, beginning June 3.

THE commune of Venice has bought the Rezzonico palace, on the Grand canal, where Browning wrote "Asolando," and where he died on December 12, 1889. From the heirs of Browning the palace had passed to Count Hirschel de Mincio. It had been offered for sale for some time, but on account of the difficult times had not found a buyer.

Thus abandoned, the palace had already given signs of falling into decay, and in the ceilings, frescoed by Tiepolo, marks caused by water and damp had begun to appear. The commune of Venice decided to buy and restore it.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Modern Contract Bridge

By Lelia Hatterley

Opening Bids of One

There can be but one opening or original bid on each deal. All bids which follow this first bid are designated by different terms and influenced by different factors. The opening bid may be made by the dealer, by the second hand after dealer has passed, by the third hand if both dealer and second hand have passed, or by the fourth hand if all the others have passed. Third or fourth hand original bids require greater minimum strength than such bids when made by the dealer or second hand.

The original or opening bid is the most clear-cut in its requirements. In the approach-forcing system, the opening bid most often employed is the bid of one in a suit, because a sound suit bid, even a four card minor, is always preferred to a no trump.

An original suit bid of one in a major or minor is declared on the same type of hand. While neither ever shows a suit which cannot be played at the trump named, such a declaration must be regarded as primarily for the purpose of conveying information to your partner; information which he is expected to act upon throughout all the subsequent bidding and play of the hand.

When playing contract according to the approach-forcing system, Dealer or Second Hand looks over his cards and announces one spade, heart, diamond or club, he is practically "talking across the board." In language entirely fair and equitable, because it is understood, or may be, by every player at the table, such a bid says:

"Partner, I have sufficient length in this suit to play it as trumps. It may be a four card suit with at least 1 1/2 honor-tricks at the top, or a longer suit with less top strength. But most important of all, I have 2 1/2 defensive tricks somewhere in the hand; tricks which should prove winners whether we or the opponents secure the final contract. This much I promise from my hand. There may be something more, but you can be sure there is nothing less."

Or if the declaration is one no trump:

"Partner, I have at least 2 1/2 honor-tricks distributed in three suits, and my hand contains no biddable suit." In the position of opening the bid third or fourth hand, the bidder shows a minimum of three honor-tricks.

As the prime requisite for a sound opening bid is a definite number of honor-tricks, the primary need for a sound approach-forcing player is a thorough knowledge of honor-trick values.

The approach-forcing system has discarded the old-fashioned quick-trick count in favor of a more accurate method of computing the probable value of honor cards held singly and in combinations. The standard table of honor-tricks follows:

THE DEFENSIVE VALUES OF HONORS
AK	2
AKJ	Honor-tricks
AKQ
AQ	1 1/2
AQJ	Honor-tricks
AJ10
KQJ
KQ
Acc	1
AJ	Honor-trick
KX and QX
KX and KX
KJX
KX
KJ alone
QJX	1 1/2
QJ10	Honor-trick
QX and JX
In different suits
QX and QX

Plus Values: King alone or QX or J10X when unable to combine with another honor in hand. Two such plus values equal about 1/2 honor-trick.

"6X" always means one or more cards below the 10.

Note: When you have an uncounted honor in a suit that has yielded 2 honor-tricks you cannot combine this uncounted honor with a "plus" value to another suit.

When Husbands Slip

THIS woman's husband was run down, irritable, unhappy. She didn't know what was the matter with him. It worried her. She was afraid he would lose his job.

She saw it build up his vitality, ease the nerve strain, pep up vigor and appetite. She recommends it now to all her friends.

"HOW LONG, QUEEN?" ASKED THE DOCTOR

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, sat in with a few friends during a recent visit to Boston and proceeded to drop formally with a resounding thump.

The crowd—got to fanning, and somebody mentioned King Albert of the Belgians. Mr. Baker chuckled and then unbuckled this one:

"Queen Elizabeth, who came with the king and the crown prince on a visit to this country after the war, is a lady who takes great interest in many scientific matters.

"The party had made its tour and was in Baltimore, the last city before sailing. The sights had been seen, the dignitaries had been received, the program was finished. And the Queen Elizabeth remarked that she remembered the city as the residence of Doctor Meyers, world-famous alienist and psychiatrist. She said she would like to meet him, and was forthwith driven to his hospital.

"She was escorted to his office and sat down while somebody went to find the doctor. Meanwhile, however, the doctor returned to his office without knowing that anybody was looking for him.

"He rambled in, went to his desk and sat down in an absent-minded fashion. Then he pulled a pad over to him, and picked up a pencil.

"Let me see," said he, "what is your name?"

"I am Elizabeth, queen of the Belgians," said her majesty. The doctor began making rapid notes on his pad. Then he looked up and asked, "About how long have you had this idea?"—Frank Sibley in the Boston Globe.

Two-Year Trip in Eight Days

Major Ewart S. Grogan, who 32 years ago made a tollsome two year journey, mostly on foot, the length of Africa, recently covered the same route from Cairo, Egypt, to Cape Town, South Africa, in eight days. He made the trip by air, and instead of "roughing it" as before he looked down on Africa from a comfortable armchair in an air liner and relaxed at stops in rest houses.

Down-Hearted

Olls, going home from school one evening, was apparently down-hearted. A sympathetic neighbor asked what the trouble was, and he said: "Dyspepsia and rheumatism."

"Why, you poor boy. How can that be?" she asked.

"Well, I had to stay in after school because I couldn't spell them," Olls told her.

A frog that never goes near the water is one of the curiosities noted by Arthur Loveridge, of Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology on a trip through East Africa. He found this type of frog in an exceedingly dry and sandy region.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Forced to Abandon Gold Standard

The opinion is being offered that America is being forced gradually away from the gold standard. Failure to balance the budget, whatever this may mean, and a treasury deficit running into billions, accompanied by a treasury complete collapse of industry, and capped finally by insufficient quantity of medium of exchange, all are contributing to urge us to the cognage of our fathers.

Simple as the assertion sounds, the free coinage of silver, if placed in operation at once, could save us from the grave evils that threaten the life of our great nation.

The precipitation of billions of silver dollars into the very midst of trade would mean a new world of plenty and consequent happiness to the people.

Then, why not? Because, and only because, Wall Street for bids. Wall Street is bloated and pie bald and pitted with greed. She is a 100% demonstration of a degenerate civilization. — Burlington, Ia., Post.

The Impossible

has happened at last. The Democratic state convention of Texas has adopted a resolution calling for submission of the 18th amendment.

The vote was 851 to 664. And Senator Morris Sheppard was left off the delegation which was instructed to support Speaker Garner in the Chicago convention. If somebody had said five years ago that this could ever happen in Texas, he would have been seized and sent to the asylum. — Gloomy Gus in the State Record.

How to Steal an Auto

The latest scheme of auto thieves comes from Eastland, Texas, where a graveyard for stolen cars was discovered; four autos and one truck were found under 60 feet of water in a lake. Owners of cars at that and also at nearby places, have identified and recovered their cars, with the exception of a truck which will be returned to the rightful owner after identification. Many schemes have been invented to hide stolen property, but this one takes the cake. What next?

Borah Sulks in Tent

Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, has announced that he will not take part in the Chicago Convention, which is almost certain to re-nominate President Hoover.

Borah was one of the most powerful and dramatic figures in the campaign of 1928.

It was he, rather than Candidate Hoover, who made nearly every important statement that was made for the Republican party. If the Idaho statesman is dissatisfied with results, he should realize that much of the

Irving Bacheller

For a quarter of a century the name of Irving Bacheller has been as familiar to millions of readers as their own — and as beloved by all. His strong and beautiful novels reflect all that was significant in our pioneer life, with its homely endeavor, its taciturn courage, and its incorrigible Yankee humor.

Irving Bacheller is a product of the "North Country" of which he writes. He was born in the village of Pierpont, N. Y., September 20, 1850. As a boy he roamed the woods, fished the lakes and streams and hunted the game then to be found on the mountain sides.

For a time he taught a "North Country" school, but his ambition was to write, and in the early eighties he went to New York where he secured a reporter's job on a Brooklyn paper. After a time he organized a newspaper syndicate. Then he became Sunday editor of the New York World. It was while he was on the World that the inspiration for "Eben Holdet" came to him. He went back to the "North Country" to write it, and has since devoted his time exclusively to literature.

The countless readers who have followed Bacheller through the years and the new readers who are turning to him today will find that his pen has lost none of its old magic. In "The House of the Three Ganders" we see again the qualities that have made him the master-chronicler and interpreter of a vanished America.

CULINARY TRIBUTES TO GEORGE WASHINGTON

This year of celebration in honor of Washington brings to mind the cherry tree story so familiar to every American school child. So that cherry recipes might almost seem to be an essential part of any patriotic celebration in 1933.

Fortunately we need not be patriotic at the expense of enjoyment, for the cherry in one of the most delicious and refreshing fruits. And still more fortunately, cherries lose little if any of their deliciousness in canning.

The deep red of these cherry dishes will lend a festive note to your table. They are amply nourishing, tempting to the appetite and yet their cost is in harmony with the economy we are all practicing nowadays.

Masquerade Pudding

1/2 cup quick cooking tapioca slightly beaten
1/2 cup sugar 1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt 1 egg white, scalded

Add tapioca, sugar, and salt to milk and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over egg yolk, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened, stirring occasionally. Remove from fire and add flavoring. Fold in egg white. Turn into molds. Chill. Unmold. Serve with Cherry Red Sauce, or with sauce of apricots or prunes. Serves 10.

Red Sauce for Masquerade Pudding

1 1/2 cups canned red cherries
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
Dash of salt

Heat cherries to boiling. Combine sugar, flour, and salt. Add to cherries and cook until slightly thickened, stirring well. Chill. Makes 1 1/2 cups sauce.

Deep Dish Cherry Tapioca

1/2 cup quick cooking tapioca
1 teaspoon salt
4 cups hot water
and cherry juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed

Add tapioca and salt to water and cherry juice and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add lemon juice, sugar mixed with spices, butter, and cherries. Pour into greased baking dish and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 45 minutes. Serve plain or with cream. Serves 8.

In this cherry pie none of the refreshing juice is lost by boiling over in the oven. The small quantity of tapioca used is just sufficient to bind in the juices and yet in no way is the cherry flavor altered.

BACK-TRACKING an OLD TRAIL

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SOME time this summer a gray-haired New Yorker will be setting out upon a romantic journey. For William H. Jackson, eighty-nine-year-old "pioneer photographer" and at present research secretary of the Oregon Trail Memorial association, is going to back track on the trail of youth. Here is the way he told about it recently in announcing his plans:

"About the end of June the season of the Rocky mountains will subside for another season and the roads will again be passable. Then I will start out on my annual trek over the Old Trail. You know, I first went over the trail back in the days of the Indians and the covered wagons with my little mule, 'Hippo,' for company. I'll use an auto this trip. It won't be much like an ox-cart for seeing the country, but it's so much better than the train. And I guess a man who could 'bullwhack' can handle a steering wheel on the Old Trail, even if he is close to four score and ten. This time I shall go alone. But I probably will pick up various friends along the way. . . . folk we have interested in our project of placing monuments and markers at the historic spots on the Trail. Last year we placed 100 from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast, and 60 more on the pony express trail of '61.'"

Indebted as the posterity of America will be to this association and its active gray-haired research secretary for their work in marking historic spots on the famous "highway of a westward facing nation," the Oregon Trail, posterity is even more indebted to the work which William H. Jackson did many years ago with his camera in preserving scenes which soon passed away forever and for the work which he is still doing in preserving more of those scenes through another medium—that of brush and canvas.

Jackson was born in Keeseville, a little town in the Adirondacks of New York state, in 1843. The traveling which was to characterize his whole life started early, for when he was just one year old his family moved to Georgia. They soon returned to New York but so strong was the wanderlust which became lodged in young Jackson that he refused to go to school after he had finished the eighth grade. At the age of fifteen he had only one desire and that was to draw and paint. He came naturally by that ambition, for his mother was a landscape artist and his father an experimenter in the making of daguerotypes, the forerunners of modern photography.

"Various kinds of picture making occupied my time for a while," says Mr. Jackson. "I made family portraits; I painted landscapes on window screens, a fashion in those early days; and I painted a row of big jars as part of the scenery for a play about 'The Forty Thieves' of the Old Arabian Nights. The chief scenic artist for the local theaters gave me an approving slap on the back for my good drawing in this first attempt at scene painting.

"None of these beginnings brought in much money but they were good practice. To this hit-and-miss art training was added a few months work in the studio of a portrait painter which improved my technique somewhat."

But the opening of the Civil war put an end to this work and when Lincoln issued his call for "300,000 more" Jackson joined the Highland Light Guards, later entering Company K, Twelfth Vermont Infantry which with other troops became the Second Vermont Brigade. As soon as Jackson's commander discovered his talent for drawing he was detailed to sketch maps of picket lines along Bull Run so at the age of nineteen he held an important and dangerous post in the Union army. After the war was over, Jackson returned to his home in the Adirondacks where for some time he was busy making photographs of the local heroes home from the war. At that time he earned what was considered a magnificent sum, $25 a week. But soon the wonderment associated itself again and he decided he went. He headed for Detroit but got only as far as Chicago and then worked his way on to Detroit by painting signs, teaching the art of coloring photographs and picking up other odd jobs. Eventually he got as far west, as St. Joseph, Mo.

Here he secured a job of driving ox teams from Nebraska to Montana, "bull whacking" as it was called, for the wages of $20 a month. For a year, 1868 to 1867, he was engaged in this work, freighting from Nebraska City on the Missouri via Fort Kearney, Julesburg, Fort Laramie and South Pass and to the valley of the Great Salt lake.

The following quotation from a letter which young Jackson wrote to his parents dated "Great Salt Lake City, October 30, 1868," is a graphic pen picture of the life of a bullwhacker in those days. "The program of a day's work will give you some idea of the kind of a life we have been leading. In the morning, just as day is breaking and when sleep lies heaviest upon us, the night watch makes the rounds, pounding on the wagons and shouting 'Roll out! Roll out! The bulls are coming.'"

"Shouldering one of the heavy yokes I begin looking for my old off-wheeler. It is hardly light enough yet to distinguish objects clearly and I have some difficulty at first in telling one ox from another. But I finally get my last pointer yoked and having previously put the wheels on the tongue I drive around the other five yoke, connected with chains, and hitch them on ahead. I am ready to pull out, usually just as the sun is appearing above the horizon. . . ."

"About ten o'clock the train is corralled, unyoking quickly done, and the cattle turned out to graze in charge of herder, and we proceed at once to get breakfast. The train is divided into four messes, the men taking turns at the various duties. This is frequently accompanied by a good deal of contentions wrangling because there are always shirkers that always fall to do their share of the work. The details bring the wood and water. The cooks for the time being bake bread in the big dutch oven, make two or three gallons of coffee, slice up half a side of bacon, and if hardly necessary to shout 'Grub pile!' for the whole mess is right there, impatiently waiting. Each one helps himself with tin cup and plate and retires to the shady side of a wagon experiences for a brief half hour complete satisfaction."

"The afternoon drive sometimes brings us into camp so that it is quite late by the time we get supper. One of the greatest difficulties in cooking is the matter of providing fuel. Wood is scarce and along most of our route entirely lacking. The only substitute available is buffalo chips. It makes an excellent fire for cooking purposes when entirely dry, but when wet it is the meanest stuff imaginable to get along with, trying the patience of the cooks to the utmost."

"My heavy suppers with the great quantities of strong coffee that I drink just before going to bed frequently result in dreams that verge on nightmares. At first, when the novelty of my adventure with its attendant work and worry was uppermost in my mind I had lucid dreams almost every night and invariably they related to my team of bulks. Sometimes I imagined them out of control and about to plunge over a great precipice. Wild with terror I would tumble out of my wagon in my desperate attempt to head them off from destruction, only to be yanked back by my bed fellow or brought to my senses by the night watchman. Billy and I slept on a buffalo robe with long shaggy hair. On one occasion I began tugging at this robe so violently that I nearly threw Billy out of the wagon. Of course he was in a high dudgeon and wanted to know what I thought I was doing; dreaming still, I replied 'I can't get my confounded leaders' heads around!'"

After a year of this work, young Jackson decided he wanted to start up in the business which he knew best as he went to Omaha and in 1866 he and his brother, who had come on from the East, set up a shop with a shingle over the door which read "Jackson Brothers, Photographers." This was the period when Omaha was booming with activities connected with the building of the Union Pacific railroad. Young Mr. Jackson saw in the starting of the railroad a wonderful chance for pictures. So he left the business in the hands of his brother and started out to record what was happening.

"In those days," says Mr. Jackson, "photography was different than it is today. The pioneer photographer of that time had to be something of a chemist, artist and mechanic all put together. When he wanted to take pictures on the road he had to carry chemicals, trays, glasses and what not, for each plate had to be prepared on the spot for every exposure. So when I started out from Omaha in 1868 I was equipped with a complete portable outfit for developing pictures en route."

Dr. F. V. Hayden head of the United States geological survey of the territories, organized to obtain definite information about those vast regions opened to the settlers by the new railroad, saw the pictures which Mr. Jackson took on that trip. He liked them so much he decided he must have Jackson along on his own surveying trip which he was slated to take along the old Oregon Trail, across Wyoming and back by the Overland Stage route. Thus it came about that William H. Jackson was the first man to make photographs of the marvels of the old Oregon Trail country.

Although he was appointed official photographer of the Hayden survey, he received no salary, but his equipment was provided and he was permitted to keep all negatives he made, for his own use. Most of his photographic supplies he carried in the ambulance which accompanied the party, but he also was provided with a little donkey which he named "Hippo," "Hippo" carried his working kit.

This survey of Doctor Hayden's started in August, 1870, and from Independence Rock followed the old Oregon Mormon trail along the Sweetwater river. Returning, it followed the old Overland Stage route across southern Wyoming and at Fort Saunders disbanded for the season. So pleased were Washington officials with the pictures taken on this first survey that they appointed Jackson to accompany future surveys as photographer and for ten years he remained with Doctor Hayden in this capacity. In 1871, he took pictures of Yellowstone. He was the first to make photographs of the marvels of this country and his pictures, as well as the discoveries of, and specimens collected, by Doctor Hayden and his party, played an important part in the creation of the Yellowstone National park in 1872. The last expedition of the Hayden Geological survey to the Rocky mountain region was made in 1878, the present United States geological survey then being instituted. Mr. Jackson accompanied this final expedition.

Having completed his work as a pioneer photographer, Mr. Jackson eventually settled in Detroit and took up photography as a business. For 25 years he was connected with the Detroit Publishing company, retiring from that company a few years ago. Since that time he has been busy writing about his experiences in the old days, making paintings from his notes and sketches and promoting the work of the Oregon Trail Memorial association. And this summer he will citizen his career by one more trip over that historic route where he was once a bullwhacker and the first and outstanding member of his profession—that of photographer of the Wild West.

The number of irrigated farms in New Mexico increased from 11,290 in 1920 to 14,347 in 1930. The total value of the irrigated farms, including land, buildings, and implements, was $9,310,485. All irrigation enterprises in the state are reported to represent a total investment of $19,834,380. Nearly 60,000 acres are irrigated by pumped or flowing wells. The existing irrigation systems are capable of supplying irrigation water to 666,669 acres while in 1929 the irrigation area was estimated at 527,622 acres.

It is estimated that the cotton crop in New Mexico will exceed 92,000 bales. The average yield per acre is estimated at 412 pounds of marketable lint compared with 375 pounds in 1930.

Crop conditions in the irrigated districts of New Mexico are favorable, but rain is needed on the uplands. Planting is well along, only cotton and late feed stuff being in the seedling stage. Acreages generally are about normal, except for wheat and cotton, which are slightly under the acreage of last year.

POULTRY

CHICKS HAVE RIGHT TO PROPER START

Therefore, Give Attention to "Hatching" Eggs.

Successful Colorado poultrymen who produce eggs for hatching find that it pays to give close attention to (1) the condition and care of the breeding flock, and (2) proper care of hatching eggs before they are set.

More farmers and poultrymen than usual are hatching their own chicks with setting hens—the good old fashioned method—reports O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman at the Colorado Agricultural college.

"The breeding flock from which hatching eggs are being produced," says Ufford, "should be carefully culled to eliminate hens that are too fat, lack vigor or health, or have serious defects of type and color."

"Bacillary white diarrhea, a serious disease of young chicks, comes from hens in the breeding flock that are affected," he adds. "It is not possible to recognize such hens except by blood testing the individual birds."

Green feed and sunshine supply vitamins that are needed for normal health and growth of chicks, it is pointed out. The baby chick first makes use of vitamins when it is developing in the egg, but the egg will not contain these important elements unless the breeding flock is fed a ration that supplies them. Therefore the flock should have plenty of sunshine and a well-balanced ration—that includes green feeds, minerals and water.

Losses Sure When the ### Chicks Are Overcrowded

Crowding always results in enormous losses and occurs just prior to the chicks taking to the roost. It may be discouraged by maintaining heat but eventually the chicks will take to the corners. It might be ideal but impractical to construct a round brooder house, but one can eliminate the corners in a house with square corners. A scheme of this kind consists of inclined wire netting frames about 2 feet wide placed in the back and sides of the house. The inner edge is next to the floor while the outer is elevated about a foot from the floor. It is, of course, necessary that these frames fit tight so that it is impossible for chicks to get underneath. With this arrangement as the chicks crowd out they are elevated and there is no danger of the chicks being suffocated. Usually small roosts are nailed on the upper side of the frame and it is only a short time until the chicks are roosting. The old idea was that too early roosting caused crooked breast bones, but that idea has been exploded so that now the advice is to get the chicks roosting as soon as possible.—Missouri Farmer.

Estimating Oil Need

Five hundred chicks kept in confinement for the first four weeks will eat about 200 pounds of mash and will need four pounds or two quarts of cod-liver oil. The same number of chicks will consume close to 350 pounds of mash the first eight weeks and, if confined, will need two and one-eighth gallons of cod-liver oil. From this, one can estimate the amount of oil that will be needed and can make the purchase and have it ready when the chicks are hatched. Cod-liver oil may be secured from the local drugist, or the county agent or farm demonstration flock co-operators in the county can supply the names of companies that sell the cod-liver oil.

Brooder-House Litter

Grated corn cobs make satisfactory litter for brooder houses, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. The coarsely-ground cobs make as good a litter as chopped hay or straw. Some poultrymen prefer to use commercial litters. Sand does not make a good floor covering unless the chicks are well fed all of the time. Chicks placed on sand sometimes fill up on its producing indigestion and other unsatisfactory results.

Graded Eggs Sell Best

The average per capita consumption of eggs in Canada is 351, nearly an egg a day for every person, and the highest consumption of any country. Canadian officials credit this to the fact that eggs are carefully graded, and that the Canadian housewife goes to market and buys eggs with confidence. She knows that eggs graded as extras are of the highest quality and can be used for any purpose in the home. Every egg passing into trade in that country is graded.—Prairie Farmer.

Bantam as Foster Mother

The little bantam hen assumes an important role in the pheasant rearing programs of many of our states. In these projects the common little bantam hen is given the job of hatching the pheasant eggs and looking after the chicks. If this kind of hen isn't used, game breeders advise that at least a fairly small chicken hen should be placed in charge of a clutch of pheasant eggs, because a large, clumsy specimen is quite apt to kill some of the young chicks.—Ohio Farmer.

Wrecks are bad things, but it seems that in nearly every case, those who have lost their cars in such misfortunes, immediately apply for Fords. To fill one of these wants, Roy Shafer and Johnno Wells had to make a flying trip to Roswell Tuesday to bring in one of the new models for a customer who lost his car in a wreck on the Nogal road the first of the week.

Congress will be interested to learn that a whiskey still was located last week in one of the penitentiaries of a certain eastern state. An explosion led to the discovery. When the violation of a law will go to that extent it would seem that something must be done with the present wild-horse condition.

At Corona on June 11, there will be some spirited horse races. The black Gilbert horse will race the Corona gray mare for a purse of $200 and Charley Baker's bay horse will run with the Jolly horse for a purse of $100.

Two of the leading jockeys of these parts will contest for the prizes. Shorty Miller will ride the black Gilbert horse and the gray mare will be ridden by her owner, Earl Wilson. This little mare is the offspring of the J. R. Jenkins stock of fast horses and a lively contest is expected. This is Wilson's first entry with the little gray Miss and she is said to be a skimmer and coming from such stock as she does is a strong card for her. In the second race, Miller will ride the bay and Wilson, the sorrel.

LOST—On Main Street, a fish reel. Return to the office of Dr. R. E. Blaney and receive reward. It.
