Fr. Mitchell's Silver Jubilee

This is a gala week for Father Mitchell, pastor of the Santa Rita Catholic Church, as he celebrated his silver Jubilee in honor of his twenty-five years of service in the ministry. The first event was a supper served to his guests, the priests from all over this part of the district and headed by Archbishop Dager from Santa Fe.

The second was a dinner with fitting ceremonies yesterday and a supper in the evening, after which, the entertainment at the High School Auditorium was given in his honor by the pupils of the Santa Rita school, under the supervision of the Sisters of Mercy, the program of which appears in this issue of the Outlook.

The Jubilee Entertainment, which was the main feature of the week, was witnessed by an appreciative audience that completely filled the big auditorium, and was much enjoyed. The characters performed their parts in excellent manner, showing careful training on the part of the Sisters of Mercy and they also displayed merited talent which earned for them, applause from time to time as the entertainment went on. Much credit is due to teachers and pupils for the successful outcome of the undertaking, which drew the last curtain on the Silver Jubilee.

Father Mitchell entered the Priesthood twenty-five years ago and he has served in the ministry continually for that long period, during which time he has been sent from one place to another, wherever needed and mostly did he go to places which were in need of being revived, so much was the valuation of his services.

He has made many sacrifices during his ministry, laying aside self-gratification in his zeal for being useful in the service. No place was so remote and no conditions so distasteful but what he has responded with pleasure. The ceremonies this week in his honor, fitting and appropriate, are but in a small measure, the just dues to this deserving Reverend gentleman.

Uncle Fred Neighbauer, who has been ill at the Johnson Hospital for a week or so, was able to go to his ranch home Wednesday.

Mrs. Wayne Van Schoek, Mrs. John Townsend and Mesdames Percy Welch and Dean Curbelle and their children were Carrizozo visitors Tuesday.

Murray Morgan and the Independent

We are glad to receive on our list of exchanges the Mountainair Independent, edited by our good friend Murray Morgan, formerly of the Alamogordo News. The sheet is neat, tidy, well edited and well printed.

Murray has a good field in Mountainair; if the business interests will respond to his live-wire methods and support him in the generous manner which he deserves, Murray will experience no trouble in doing well.

The local merchant who fails to support his home-town paper, signifies by that action that he doesn't believe the struggling enterprise has a right to live—but we believe things are different in Mountainair. We wish Murray and all the interests of that locality the best of success.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brubaker were here Tuesday from Capitán, J. A. having some school matters to take up with the County Superintendent concerning the Union High School.

A Shrine of Flags at West Point

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

JUNE 14 is Flag day and on that day patriotic Americans will pay tribute to the emblem which "symbolizes the freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which our forefathers sacrificed their lives and personal fortunes" and which "represents a nation of over 100,000,000 free people, its Constitution and institutions, its achievements, and aspirations." Everywhere—over homes, business offices and public buildings, the Red, White and Blue will be displayed in celebration of the anniversary of the day when the Continental congress in session in Philadelphia "Resolved, That the Flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

There are several places in the United States which have become "flag shrines" because of their association with the history of our flag and there could be no more appropriate celebration of Flag day than a visit to one of these shrines on that day.

One of them is the little house at 253 Arch street in Philadelphia, where once lived Elizabeth Griscom Reas, famous in American legend as "Betty Ross," who, even though she may not have been, as the legend has it, "the maker of the first American flag," was certainly one of the early ones. Another is the reconstructed Fort Mifflin in Maryland where was displayed the flag which provided the inspiration for Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner." Still another is the case in the National museum in Washington where is displayed the very flag which Key saw "by the dawn's early light." It was this flag which gave him the inspiration for the immortal poem that has become our national anthem—"The Star-Spangled Banner." Then, too, there is the monument in Old City cemetery in Nashville, Tenn., which marks the last resting place of Capt. William Driver, the New England sea captain, who first called the flag "Old Glory."

Interesting as all of these are because of their individual parts in the history of our national emblem, there is no place, perhaps, where so much flag history can be found in one place as in the museum at the United States Military academy at West Point. In its cases are displayed colors which not only cover more than a century of American history but which, as individual flags, played their part in stirring events in all of our wars from the Revolution to the Spanish-American war.

One group of flags which has a special appeal during this, the Washington bicentennial year, is composed of British and Hessian colors which were once the property of Gen. George Washington, having probably been surrendered at Yorktown in 1781 with the command of Lord Cornwallis. These flags were bequeathed to George Washington Parke Custis, son of Washington's adopted son and grandson of Martha Washington. Custis bequeathed them to the War department, who received them in 1853, whereupon Secretary Floyd sent them to West Point.

Meager as are the records for these flags, the labels on them suggest innumerable thrilling stories of the days when Washington and his Continentals were fighting what so often seemed to be a hopeless fight for American liberties. Here is one described as "British king's colors

- 1.—The museum at the United States Military academy at West Point. Note X-arrangement of the stars on the American flag in the middle.
- 2.—One of the Hessian flags, captured at Trenton and once the property of George Washington.
- 3.—Ansbach-Bayreuth, German mercenaries' colors, captured at Yorktown.
- 4.—A battle-torn British flag, which became the property of the Americans when Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown.
- 5.—British king's colors or regimental Union Jack of the Seventh Royal Fusiliers. Probably the first British flag captured during the Revolution.

or regimental "Union Jack of the Seventh Royal Fusiliers. Probably captured at Fort Mifflin, October 15, 1775, and was therefore the first British flag captured in the Revolution." What memories of the brilliant exploits of "Mad Anthony" Wayne or of the stubborn fighting in the redoubts at Yorktown are called up by the label on this one near by: "British king's colors or Union Jack, Queen Anne pattern, 1707. History not known, but this may be the flag of the Seventeenth regiment, lost at Stony Point, or the Forty-third, Seventy-sixth or Eightieth regiments, lost at Yorktown."

There are half a dozen or more flags described as "Ansbach-Bayreuth, German mercenaries' colors, bearing the date of 1770, captured at Yorktown" and "Flags captured from the Hessians, one taken at Trenton, and two others either captured at Trenton or at Yorktown." No doubt Washington often looked upon these colors, while they were in his possession, with particular pride for they were relics of the two high points in his career as a soldier.

Reminiscence of the fierce border wars in New York during the Revolution, when green-coated Tory and black-painted Iroquois carried the tomahawk and the torch against their erstwhile neighbors who had espoused the Patriot cause, are two flags close by those previously described. One is labeled "Captured English colors, probably Revolutionary war or War of 1812. Imitation British king's colors or Union Jack. Queen Anne pattern 1707. Probably a Tory or renegade flag and believed to be the flag of Colonel Butler's Rangers carried in the Susquehanna region during the Revolution and at the Wyoming massacre, also believed to have been taken at Fort George in Upper Canada, May 27, 1813." The other is even more historic if the following inscription is correct: "Captured British colors, Revolution or War of 1812. Imitation British king's colors or Union Jack. Queen Anne pattern, 1707. A Tory flag which has an olive green St. George's Cross. May be either Sir John Johnson's Royal Green's flag captured at Fort George in Upper Canada May 27, 1813. Or it is possible that this flag was captured by Colonel Willett at Fort Stanwix, New York, August 3, 1777."

Close by the British and Hessian colors captured during the Revolution are the colors of another foreign enemy captured in a later war—Mexican flags taken by the troops of Scott and Taylor below the Rio Grande. And there are American flags there, too, which played an important part in that conflict. One of them is designated as "The first flag hoisted over York Cruz and the Citadel at Mexico City. The hoists on it carried the Mexican flag on the National palace in the City of Mexico and by the same hoists was carried this American ensign on September 14, 1847."

But even more interesting is the story which is placed on another American flag tells. It reads "Regimental colors of the Eighth United States Infantry, carried by Lieut. James Longstreet, regimental adjutant, in the storming of Charabusco. It was the first flag planted on the fortifications by Capt. J. V. Bomford and Lieutenant Longstreet and it was the second flag planted on the battlements of Chapultepec by Lieut. George E. Pickett. It was claimed by the regiment to be the first American flag to enter the city of Mexico." Such is the record of this flag in the Mexican war. Is it necessary to remind any American that these same men who carried it then rose to greater fame in a greater conflict later—Longstreet as a general in the Confederate army on many a hard-fought field from 1861 to 1863 and Pickett as the leader of that immortal charge up the slope at Gettysburg?

The "Civil war" flags in the museum are legion, including such notable colors as General Sheridan's headquarters flag for the Cavalry Reserve Brigade, First Division, Cavalry Corps, Army of the Potomac, with its record of 55 battles and the colors of the Fifth cavalry, the "Fighting Fifth" of later Indian fighter fame, with 61 battles on its record. But perhaps the most historic "Civil war" flag there is one which is labeled thus: "Flag of the First New York Zouaves (Col. Ephraim Elmer Ellsworth's Zouaves). It is claimed that this flag was placed on the staff of the Marshall house in Alexandria, Va., May 24, 1861, by Colonel Ellsworth after he had pulled down the Stars and Bars. He was shot dead by the hotel proprietor while descending the stairs. There is some doubt as to whether or not this is really the flag since it has 30 stars on it and the American flag did not have that number of stars until between October 31, 1864, and March 3, 1867."

Not so historic, perhaps, as the Ellsworth flag (if it is indeed the Ellsworth flag) but having connected with it a remarkable story is another carried by the Thirtieth United States Missouri Volunteer Infantry regiment. Here is the story: On Sunday morning, April 6, 1862, at the Battle of Shiloh the Confederates attacked soon after sunrise. The regiment advanced to a bridge near Shiloh, leaving its camp flag flying and only a few sick men to protect it. One, a boy named Beem, was a member of the color guard. The regiment was forced to retreat through its own camp. Cannon balls were flying through the air and one of them passed through the flag. Beem hauled down the flag, undressed wrapped the flag around his body and dressed in larger garments made his way safely through the thick of the fight in time to save the regimental flag. For this he was commissioned as an officer. This flag was presented to Professor Church of the military academy facility in 1874 by Col. Crafts J. Wright of Glendale, Ohio, who commanded the Thirtieth Missouri during that historic Sunday battle. "It was not such a peaceful Sunday morning," wrote Colonel Wright. "My regiment lost 80 killed and wounded in about an hour, among them all of my field and staff officers."

The story of the improvised flag at Fort Stanwix is somewhat paralleled by another improvised flag which is on display in the West Point museum, described as follows: "Handkerchief flag, made of a colored handkerchief, eight stars in a blue field. Used by United States troops in an expedition in the Philippines. Above is the official record but it is probable that a small number of men were detached from the main body and sent on an expedition during the Insurrection of 1896-1902. Not wishing to be without a flag wherever they went, they made this one from the material available."

Lesson for June 12

JUDAH THE TRUE BROTHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:13-45:15. GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! PRIMARY TOPIC—Keeping a Promise.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Benjamin's Big Brother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Boys and Girls Can Do for Their Family.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—True Brotherhood.

I. Joseph Severely Tests His Brethren. (42:9-17).

Driven by sore need because of the famine, Joseph's brethren came to Egypt to buy food. As Joseph personally dispensed the food, he immediately recognized his brethren upon their arrival in Egypt, but they did not recognize him. In this test Joseph

1. Accused them of being spies (42:9-17). He declared that they had come to see the nakedness of the land. In spite of their protests of innocence, he cast them into prison and demanded that their younger brother be brought as a proof of the truthfulness of their word.

2. He kept Simeon as a hostage (42:18-35). Joseph declared that because he feared God he sent the rest home with provisions for their families, demanding that Benjamin be brought to him. To further impress them with his wisdom and power, Joseph ordered the money of every one to be restored in his sack. Upon the discovery of the money they exclaimed, "What hath God done to us?"

3. Benjamin's peril (44:1-34). By a clever device Joseph's cup was placed in Benjamin's sack and was used as an occasion for bringing them back on the charge of theft. Convinced now of their sins and realizing the seriousness of their situation, Judah pleaded for the release of Benjamin. Benjamin was now being held as the one supposedly guilty of theft.

II. Judah's Pleas (44:18-34).

1. For the turning away of Joseph's anger (vv. 18-32). In this plea he recited the history of the family, their coming to Egypt, and appealed to Joseph on the basis of the effect upon Jacob, their father, if Benjamin were not permitted to accompany them home. In most powerful and persuasive language he set forth the love of Jacob for Benjamin, the son of his old age, and the sole survivor of his beloved wife, Rachel. His plea was as much for his father as for Benjamin.

2. That he himself might be kept in slavery instead of Benjamin (vv. 33, 34). In this he showed his true worth, that is, as being worthy of the trust reposed in him by Jacob his father.

III. Joseph Reveals His Identity (45:1-15).

After such a plea as Judah had made it is not surprising that Joseph could no longer restrain himself.

1. He declared his identity (vv. 1-3). This act on the part of Joseph troubled them. It ought to have made them glad. Under ordinary circumstances this would have been a time of exulting joy, but their sins were in the way. This not only affords a beautiful example of forgiving love, but most beautifully illustrates Christ's dealing with his brethren, the Jews. When the seven years of famine came his brethren who had left him and sold him were compelled to come to him for aid. Joseph dealt severely with his brethren to test them and to bring them to repentance.

2. He bade his brethren come near to him (vv. 4-5). When he revealed himself to them, the remembrance of their sins pierced them through. How just it would have been now for Joseph to take vengeance upon them. Joseph's first question was about his father, showing that his desire was to put their thoughts far away from their crime. He invited them to come near unto him and assured them that God had overruled their crime for salvation. They meant it for evil, but it was part of God's plan for good. He comforted them. This is exactly what Christ will do for his brethren, the Jews. He will become reconciled unto them and become their Saviour and Benefactor.

3. Just as all Egypt was obliged to come to Joseph for sustenance, and become the servants of Pharaoh through him, so will all the world come to Christ for his blessing and be reconciled to God through him.

4. Joseph sent his brethren away with good news (vv. 9-15). As soon as Joseph's brethren knew him and were reconciled to him they were sent with glad tidings to their father. As soon as the Jews come to know Jesus Christ as the Messiah he will send them away to the ends of the earth with the good news of his saving grace.

Mrs. Putnam's Great Solo Flight Across the Atlantic—House Rejects Legalized Beer—Hoover Against Democratic Relief Plans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Mrs. G. P. Putnam

EXACTLY five years after Charles A. Lindbergh completed his epoch-making flight from New York to Paris, Amelia Earhart, who is now Mrs. G. P. Putnam, landed in Ireland after the first solo flight across the Atlantic ever made by a woman.

I made this flight just for fun," said Mrs. Putnam after landing, and she admitted her achievement meant nothing to aviation.

LEGALIZED beer lost another fight, and won't have a chance again until the national conventions meet in June and go into spasms over the wet and dry plank for their platforms.

SOME peculiar things are resulting from the prohibition controversy. The Democrats of Texas, formerly very dry, in their state convention adopted a resolution proposing re-submission of the Eighteenth amendment to the states.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho says he is not going to attend the Republican national convention, and there are indications that he will walk in his tent throughout the campaign.

PRESIDENT HOOVER voiced his opposition to the Democratic proposals of big government bond issues for construction of federal public works as a measure for relief of unemployment.

ADAMANTLY against the reconstruction finance corporation with $1,500,000,000 additional capital for loans for self-liquidating projects that would furnish jobs for the unemployed.

Mr. Carey selected a rather unfavorable time for his attack, inasmuch as just then the wheat market showed a decided tendency toward higher prices.

ADMIRAL MAROTO SAITO completed a Japanese "combination" cabinet to replace the government which retired upon the assassination of Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai.

COMMITTED hearings on Representative Fred Britten's bill to place the Hawaiian Islands under an army or navy commission began and attracted a large number of witnesses and spectators.

CHIEVED on by a throng of Tammanyites and by the Democratic minority members of the Hofstadter legislative committee, Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York confronted Counsel Samuel Seabury and undertook to defend or explain away numerous alleged facts that had been brought out before the committee.

MARKING for identification of a number of mysterious and unexplained letters of credit issued by Mayor Walker in which no names were made public.

REPLIES from the party leaders were prompt but scarcely satisfying. Senator Jim Watson, majority leader of the senate, said: "The letter is three months too late."

SYNOPSIS Ragged and starving, a boy of about sixteen is befriended by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morrison. The boy, Shad (Sheridan), is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their daughter, Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in the village of Amity Dam, and meets a youth of his own name, Bony, and Bumpy Brown. Bony considered a drunkard because of his previous lapses from strict sobriety.

CHAPTER V—Continued "When Cyrus Doolittle came to my shop about five o'clock on November tenth, I was chatting with a man who had been telling about the scandalous talk of the old tinker. After Mr. Doolittle laid I locked the shop and went upstairs to my room and got me a big-toe-eat—Then I lit a lamp and lay down on a bed and read some story papers. I didn't have a telephone. So when Mr. Doolittle woke up and asked me to let him out of the shop about half past eight I didn't know of the shooting. I told him then that he'd better look out for the tinker or he'd be done up. I was at Doolittle's the day that Cyrus put him off his place. The old man acted dreadful vicious."

"I know it looks bad, but I don't think he's guilty," said Shad. "What are your reasons?" "He is not mean enough," was Shad's answer. "It's the same old reason that has been pleaded since Cain killed Abel," the colonel laughed. "I don't complain because a boy's heart is better than his head. It ought to be. Come over to the house and spend the night with us."

"I'd like to, but I must get back to-night. Could we go and see Bumpy a few minutes?" "Certainly, I'll go with you." Bumpy was glad to see them. He smiled, reaching through the bars and shaking their hands cheerfully as he had been wont to do in Brown's cove. "I've wanted you to know that you've got at least two friends," said Shad. "Friends! I used to have more friends than you could shake a stick at. They're all gone but you and the woman. I miss her dreadful."

"I guess you ain't scared," this from Bony. "Scared! By Jeedix! Bumpy exclaimed. "A man who has shook hands with death as often as I have ain't apt to be nervous."

"I will pay $1,000 for the conviction of the criminal who wounded my wife and killed her father." "CYRUS DOOLITTLE." "Maybe we can make a lot of money," Bony went on. "If we do, we'll go nuts. I'll tell you why it ain't Bumpy Brown. You remember that man you see down the road that got over the fence an' went behind Dot's barn. That must 'a' been about five minutes after seven. You thought, but couldn't be sure, that he wore a broad-brimmed hat. Forty minutes later Jack Labarge met a man two miles down the road in the dark."

A Man Who Has Shook Hands With Death as Often as I Have Ain't Apt to Be Nervous.

Food Value of Tapioca Discovered in Odd Way

"Tapioca," which is of native Brazilian origin, is the name applied to a vegetable food obtained from the starch in the roots of the plant known as bitter cassava, which is indigenous to tropical America. According to a Latin-American tradition, the food value of the cassava root was accidentally discovered by a Spanish explorer lost in the jungles of Brazil. He had heard from the Indians that the sap of the cassava plant was highly poisonous, and, preferring a quick death by poison to a slow one by starvation, he ate a bowl of soup prepared by boiling cassava roots in water. Instead of dying he lived to tell the world how this pleasant and digestible food saved him from starvation. As a matter of fact the milky juice of the bitter cassava is highly poisonous and therefore cannot be eaten in its natural condition without danger, but the application of heat, as the explorer discovered, destroys the poisonous property. Big Mouth Has No Value Although the mouth of the baleen whale, the largest creature in the world, is so large that a man could stand upright in it, its throat is scarcely large enough to admit a man's fist and the tube by means of which its food reaches its stomach is about the size of a walking stick. Since this huge animal is toothless, it can therefore eat only very tiny creatures.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Wise-Cracking Jimmy
(N. M. State-Record)

Jimmy Walker, wise-cracking mayor of the greatest city on earth, is proving to be a thorn in the side of Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of the Empire state and leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

Following an investigation by the Hoffstadter legislative committee, Samuel Seabury, council for the committee has announced that the governor will be asked to remove Mayor Walker. Mayor Walker has received from very dear friends gifts and other valuable things, running into hundreds of thousands of dollars, it was disclosed in the investigation. The committee apparently takes the zordid view that all of the donors were not guided by friendship and purely altruistic motives in showering so many splendid gifts upon the mayor.

Governor Roosevelt is far out in front in the race for the nomination for President. He now has pledged, more than a majority of the delegates who have been elected, but is short of the two-third majority required in the Democratic convention.

If Governor Roosevelt removes Mayor Walker, he will turn Tammany into the proverbial hornet's nest. Such a course would not help Roosevelt's chances of either in the convention or in the election, so far as the state of New York is concerned and if he fails to remove Mayor Walker, he will offend other powerful elements, not only in New York, but all over the country. Nothing could have been more unfortunate, so far as Governor Roosevelt is concerned.

Frank Ashe and the Labor News

The El Paso Labor News with Frank Ashe as editor made its first appearance in the journal-arena last week, a copy of which is now on our desk. The Labor News is the official organ of the United Brotherhood of Train and Engine Men; it is a standard-bearer of which the organization should feel proud.

The paper abounds with crisp editorials and other articles written for it by carefully selected writers are up-to-date and show that the contributors are alive to the problems which now confront that portion of the people in whom they are deeply interested—the laboring element of this country.

We are not acquainted with the full personnel of the News, but we know Frank and fully believe that under his editorial management, the paper will become a power in the Southwest. It carries each week a striking cartoon bearing on some current event effecting the labor movement. It is not radical, but on the contrary it carries reason and good arguments in all its reading matter. Best of wishes, Frank; this goes for everyone connected with the Labor News.

Rabelais was known as the "Father of Biduals."

Detroit—Seated at her desk in a bank here, Mrs. Marguerite Bolton saw with horror a masked man whom she recognized as her husband attempt an unsuccessful holdup but was mercifully spared the sequel when a few minutes later police cornered him under a porch and shot him to death.

Mrs. Bolton, who had never informed her employers of her marriage 18 months ago and was still listed as Marguerite Harris, single, managed to continue at her work even after word of the killing reached the bank until bank police came and took her into custody.

Mrs. Bolton collapsed when the police questioned her.

Told Her of Plan. After identifying the bullet-riddled body she was taken to police headquarters and admitted that her husband had told her he was so desperate for money he was going to rob the bank but that she had believed him to be joking. She did not know what the police records revealed, that Bolton had served time in Kingston prison for robbery at Windsor, Canada, in 1922.

A pass key to the bank was found in the dead man's pockets. His wife admitted that she had lost her key a month ago but found it the next day and so did not report the loss to the bank. It now is believed Bolton abstracted it from her pocketbook long enough to have a duplicate made for his own use.

As police re-enacted the crime, Bolton used the key to admit himself to the bank before employees arrived for the day's business and concealed himself in a vault used for storing stationery and other supplies.

Birkett Duty, a teller, entrusted with opening the money vault, suddenly found himself confronted by an armed and masked man. He grabbed him, shoved him into the vault and tried to slam the door upon him. Then he rushed to a telephone and called police.

Bolton, meanwhile, had pushed open the vault door and ran toward the front door, flourishing his pistol. The door was locked and he was delayed long enough in opening it for Duty to seize a pistol and fire at him twice.

Wounds Prove Fatal. Police arrived in automobiles a few seconds after Bolton had fled, still wearing his mask. Pedestrians hit the officers down an alley on his left, and Anna Warren, sergeant, pointed out his hiding place beneath a porch. Bolton refused to come out and a shooting ensued in which he received wounds that proved fatal.

Mrs. Bolton said that she met her husband two years ago in a dining room where she waited tables after banking hours because of the necessity of helping to support her family in New Haven.

He told me he owned a drapery store on Jefferson avenue and had made considerable money in the Texas oil fields. Soon after we were married, I never suspected he had been in trouble of any kind. This is the first I knew he served time in a Canadian prison for robbery. He never told me.

After he quit the drapery business he bought two trucks, but could not make money with them, so he sold them two months ago. Two nights ago he told me he was going to have some one rob the bank.

"We had a terrible fight over it. He drove me to work next morning, but did not speak to me. Last night he telephoned me that he was going to stay over night with a brother in Windsor. That was the last time I talked to him."

Mrs. Bolton, who has been working in Detroit for five years, declared the slain man was a model husband.

The House of the Three Ganders... by Irving Bacheller

In this story the "North Country" comes into its own. Even in the villages the Adirondacks press closely about; white birches shimmer in the sun; still, dark waters reflect pursuer and pursued. The country store which is the clearing house for gossip; the blacksmith's forge, the office of the country lawyer, Angel Alley where the tombstones are cut, the Sunday morning match in the Sob Works; canoes, camps, ferry-boats; deer, trout, wild geese—the local color is strong and convincing, as might be expected from the pen of a man who was born and reared in the region he describes.

Humor and wisdom shine through the tale, often in homely phrase. With the same quiet mastery that marked Eben Holden, The Light in the Clearing and A Man for the Ages, Mr. Bacheller proves again that a story rooted in the soil needs no surface trickery to make it compelling. This well-worth-while story that will appeal to every reader of good American fiction will appear serially in these columns. Be sure to read it.

Where the Wonders of Electricity Will Be Shown.

WELL on its way to completion, the electrical group of A Century of Progress, Chicago's World's Fair in 1933, is here shown as seen from an airplane. The structure is 1,200 feet long and 300 feet wide. Steel trees—the framework of which is visible in the picture—hanging gardens, electrical fountains, cascades flowing down the facade of the semi-circular unit, and brightly colored and landscaped terraces are among the interesting features of this group.

YOUNG FOLKS' STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HOW can it be so hot in a cool place? Just ask Farmer Brown's Boy. He knows. He had gone to the Green Forest because he had thought it would be cooler there than anywhere else on that dreadfully hot day. And he was right. In the depths of the Green Forest it was fairly cool. You see the trees made shade, and it was only here and there that the Jolly Little Sunbeams could find a way through the millions of little leaves of the trees. So Farmer Brown's Boy was quite comfortable as he walked silently through the Green Forest looking for the cause of Sammy Jay's excitement.

When at last he reached the big hemlock tree which was Busy Bee's storehouse, and which at that very moment Buster Bear was robbing of its honey, Farmer Brown's Boy was still quite cool and comfortable. But no sooner did he discover what was going on than he broke out into perspiration just as if he had suddenly stepped into a very warm place. Of course the air wasn't any warmer something to put in his stomach. Buster was making the funniest noises you can imagine. There would be a growl and whine of pain as a bee found a particularly tender spot and thrust her sharp little lance into it, and right on top of that would be a grunt of pure enjoyment as he scooped a lot of honey into his mouth. It was funny. Yes, sir, it was a funny sight to see. Buster squirmed and twisted as the bees stung him, but he didn't once stop his greedy scooping out of that honey. It was smeared all over his face. It had dripped down on his black coat. He was getting himself into a dreadful mess. But it was plain to see that he didn't mind this, in the least. In fact, he didn't mind anything, not even the stings of the bees. He had forgotten everything but his stomach.

Farmer Brown's Boy wanted to stay and he wanted to go. He wanted to stay to see what Buster would do when he finished all the honey. He wanted to go because, in spite of the fact that every time they had chanced to meet Buster Bear had run away as fast as ever he could. Farmer Brown's Boy couldn't get over the idea that Buster might not always run. You see Buster is such a big fellow with such great claws and teeth that Farmer Brown's Boy just couldn't help feeling a wee bit afraid of him.

Now about this time Busy Bee and her fellow workers made up their minds that do what they might they couldn't drive Buster Bear away, and the least excited of them began to load themselves with sweets from their storehouse to carry to a new storehouse. They knew that they had to begin their summer's work all over again, and they didn't propose to waste any time in crying over what had happened. They would save something from the wreck with which to make a new beginning. So most of them hurried to load themselves with honey before greedy Buster Bear should get all of it. But a few, still, mad clear through, were flying about looking for new enemies, and some of these discovered Farmer Brown's Boy.

In an instant they had darted at him. Before he knew that he was discovered what felt like half a dozen red-hot needles were thrust into him and the angry hum was all about him. That part of the Green Forest to which he had gone because of its coolness had suddenly become a hot place, and with every thrust of those little lances it became hotter. Farmer Brown's Boy was no longer in doubt. His mind was made up. He wanted to go, and to go as quickly as he knew how.

WHEN SOMEONE LEAVES US

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FRIENDS are not only made together playing, For idle friendships seldom last for long; But friends together working, planning, praying, Know finer friendships that are doubly strong. There's a neighbor's friendship with a neighbor, The sort of friendship heaven has understood, A brotherhood, a sisterhood, of labor, Together working for some common good.

So we have worked, have planned, have prayed together, Have formed new friendships, firmer found the old, Have sung our songs, and even mocked the weather, Each day a link, each link of shining gold. Some joy perhaps may come from hours of pleasure, But hours of labor bring the true reward. A better friendship heaps the fuller measure Of those who work together with the Lord.

And when we part, for sometimes there is parting, We only leave old vineyards for the new, For there are other vineyards to be starting, In other fields is other work to do. Whoever goes, although some dear friends leaves us, We shall remember every kindly grace, And know that you, although your going grieves us, Are working with us in some other place. HONEY AND CANDY

HONEY, sugars, dried fruits and candy, the purest that can be made, are all quick energy foods. The tired shopper, with a chocolate cream or two or any like amount of candy will take new hope and plod on. Our physicians now are recommending candy as an essential for children; we are advised to remember "to treat candy and other forms of sweets as food."

They have a place in every well-balanced diet, just as all other varieties of food have. Pure candy is a safe and requisite food for children as well as for adults.

The fondness for sweets is a natural craving and should be indulged wisely, as it is an expression of a definite bodily need.

The wise parent will give the child candy for dessert, or far enough from the meal to not satisfy the appetite and allow the child to refuse the food served at the table.

By experiment it has been found that sugar in some form is most quickly absorbed and assimilated, thus giving quick energy.

Tuck in a piece or two of candy in the luncheon basket, be it for young son's or father's, they both will appreciate the kind attention. Our candy manufacturers tell us that peppermint flavor is called for in candies more than all other flavors combined. As one has several flavors from which to choose and many varieties of candies, soft or hard, he is indeed hard to please who cannot find kinds to suit.

One need never hesitate when debating about an appropriate gift, for a box of candy is always in season and always enjoyed. Therefore, when in doubt, give candy.

With bridges such an everyday affair, we find even the cubes of sugar in dainty boxes, formed in diamonds, hearts and clubs, making even the cup of tea or coffee more attractive and appealing.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 8 Biddable Suits

WHEN you search your hand for an opening bid, if you hold the requisite 2 1/2 honor-tricks, look first for a BIDDABLE SUIT, remembering always that even a four-card minor takes precedence over a no trump, provided the suit is "biddable."

Biddable suits are: A FOUR-CARD SUIT headed by 1 1/2 HONOR-TRICKS. A FIVE-CARD SUIT headed by 1/2 HONOR-TRICKS. A SIX-CARD SUIT headed by NO HONOR-TRICKS.

Sound minimum four-card suit bids: A Q X X or A J 10 X or K Q 10 X

Sound minimum five-card suit bids: K X X X X or Q J X X X

Sound Minimum six-card suit bids: 10 X X X X X

Opening bids of one or two, regulation suit take-outs, and forcing bids do not require any greater strength than about three trump tricks in the bid suit. But with four-card suits, the approach-forcing system does not advocate defensive or take-out bids of more than one. Only when you are making a forcing bid or take-out, or have previously bid a longer suit, is a bid of two on a four-card suit recommended. When vulnerable, four-card bids require some plus value.

In some cases even the following suits may be bid: A J X X, K Q X X, K J 10 X, or Q 10 X X X. But it must be remembered that such bids are exceptions, not advocated for ordinary hands. It is important throughout all the contracting to keep in mind the limitations of biddable suits. Because at all times in defensive bidding, taking-out, rebidding, etc., as well as in original bids, you must be sure that any suit you mention is biddable. Sometimes in responding to an informational double you are forced to mention an unbiddable suit, but no voluntary bid should be made on such a suit, except in some cases on shaded suits.

Opening the Bid, Third and Fourth Hand

In making an original bid, the position of Dealer and of Second Hand are almost identical in that each makes his declaration before his partner has had a chance to bid or pass. After the Dealer and Second Hand have passed, Third Hand is in a different position, because his partner has shown that he cannot be counted on for honor-tricks. Therefore unless Third Hand has at least three honor-tricks he should pass; and Fourth Hand should follow the same rule.

Defensive rather than offensive strength is the thing to be considered when a player reopens the bidding and gives his opponents a second chance to enter the contracting. Should your opponents have an advanced score, even three honor-tricks would be insufficient for a third or fourth hand opening bid.

Remember that a hand is always stronger defensively when the honor-tricks are distributed rather than massed. The distribution of your honor-strength and protection in major suits are always important factors to keep in mind when opening doubtful Third and Fourth Hand bids.

At the same time, do not allow yourself to be so fearful of opening the bidding that you are tempted to pass out sound minimum Fourth Hand bids which might result in securing your side a partial score or even, occasionally, a game. Your partner, although he has passed originally, may be just under his quota of honor-tricks, or may hold some very long suit, sufficiently strong for a secondary bid.

An old bridge wheeze which has cost players many points in the loss of valuable partial scores is: "Never open fourth hand unless you can see game in your hand."

Actually to see the probability of game in your own hand you would have to have a holding of extraordinary strength; either great trump length, or at least 5 1/2 honor tricks. The question to ask yourself before opening a Fourth Hand bid is not, "Can I see game?" but, "Can I see enough defensive tricks to hope that, with about one trick from my partner, I can save game against any bid my opponents are apt to declare."

Another misunderstanding, which occurs among less experienced players is that the position of Third or Fourth Hand carries the same restrictions on bids following the opening declaration as it does on the original bids. Once the contracting has been opened a player's original position in regard to the dealer is an affair of practically no moment.

Snakes Are Missed The importation of great numbers of reptile skins into the United States from French Indo-China is said to be responsible for an alarming increase in the rat population of the territories of the latter country from which the reptiles were taken. Snakes destroy many rats and other rodent pests, so this condition does not seem unlikely in view of the fact that 30,750 pieces of reptile skins were imported to this country from French Indo-China in the final quarter of last year alone.

Mighty Gotham

Where Central Park Halts the Northward March of Architectural Giants.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

DESPITE its youth and experience compared with London, and the recent flow of gold toward the British capital, New York retains its position as the world's leading banker.

New York is a city of superlatives. It is man's incomparable feat! As incredible almost as that ants should have built the Andes! Go up on any high hotel roof after sunset and watch the city come to life. By electric moons, rainbows, and fixed comets you see Manhattan blaze from dusk into gorgeous theatrical illumination.

Its twinkling skyline ebbs and flows in tides of tempo and color. As each edifice melts into new lights and shadows, all the architectural phantasmagoria of the ages, linked even with earth's ancient scars, seems to unfold. In fancy you see a phantom city, a kaleidoscopic riot of Alps and Acropolis; Ming tombs, Taj Mahal, and Pyramids; Gibraltar, Panama canal, Tower of Babel, with Grand canyon and Yangtze gorges formed by street caverns far below; Cologne cathedral, Pike's Peak, and St. Peter's, a Chinese Wall against a Sahara desert of lamp-lit sky; towers and turrets, mosques, minarets, domes, steeples, roof tanks and penthouses all heaped and crowding and seeming to burn as smoke moves in electric light.

Next day, from the same high place, see it again—realistic, noisy, its streets crowded with traffic. New York never rests. Higher and ever higher rise the skyscrapers. Their mastodontic bulk; their grace of geometric design; their dizzy height and fearsome beauty—at first they almost hint that man's monsters have run away with him. Stare up at such a building and it fairly dominates one's mind and body.

From their upper stories you see bits of fog floating by. Miles to the east stretches Long Island; to the south is the Statue of Liberty, and Staten Island; to the west spreads New Jersey, and to the north that part of the city beyond Central park.

Below lie mere pigmy structures of six and eight stories. Here and there, up from among them, other skyscrapers rise in this swiftly changing region of Mid-Manhattan. In their myriad windows one sees girls pounding typewriters or powdering their noses; but, save for a faint metallic city hum from far below, there is no sound.

Vertical Travel Is Immense.

These high buildings, that visitors from all over the world stare at with such astonishment, make New York what it is—the supreme wonder of the modern world. When the first "skyscraper," of only 13 stories, went up on lower Broadway, people feared it. Those in adjacent houses moved out in alarm. Now, higher and higher they go—50, 60, 70, 85 stories. So many there are, and so high, that today the vertical travel in New York actually exceeds the horizontal. In other words, elevators carry more passengers than do all the surface cars, elevated trains, taxis, busses, and subways combined.

In one skyscraper 21 elevators cover a mileage equal to the run of the Twentieth Century Limited from New York to Chicago, daily. One of the big problems in New York is getting the occupants of skyscrapers in and out on time. The larger buildings hold anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000, and even 20,000 workers. In some are found people from practically every state in the Union.

Even with express elevators, it takes nearly an hour to empty some of the larger buildings and get the people away from the ground floor and entrances, because of congested subways. If they all came down at once, it would pile people up ten or twelve deep in the streets around a building.

The New York skyscraper is a city in itself, with all a city's problems of traffic, water, heat, lights, sewage, fire and police protection, and cleaning. Its total floor area, equals that of many a farm. To run the elevators of one of them requires a starter, six assistant starters, 35 operators, and a crew of ten maintenance men.

Since water from fire hydrants can be squirted upward only about 150 feet, and since firemen cannot drag a hose up 50 or 75 stories, a skyscraper has its own upright water mains, tanks and high-pressure pumps, with an elaborate system of alarms and extinguishing apparatus.

Beneath one building are turntables for busses from railway terminals

Tunnels lead from it in many directions. Through them thousands of its tenants arrive each morning after many miles of underground travel, and through them one may wander, as in the streets of a subterranean city. In this human-prairie-dog town are more than 50 places to eat, and stores selling everything from office supplies and lingerie to thermos bottles, sunray lamps, cigars, books and haberdashery. From these commercial catacombs one may ride all the way out to Long Island without ever coming into the open air.

Speed in New Construction.

But New York's greatness is not in structure alone. It lies also in the speed at which life moves and new buildings displace the old. This swift transition stuns even the blasé New Yorker.

Troy was wrecked and rebuilt nine times. Here, history repeats. Compare the skyline now with pictures of the same region made only ten years ago. You will see that palatial homes have been demolished and whole residence districts swept away to clear sites for higher buildings. You see buildings like the famous Waldorf-Astoria turn to junk, and hard on the heels of its wreck come giants like the amazing Empire State building.

To widen streets, houses are sliced off in front as with giant shears. Four hundred buildings wrecked to extend a subway spur; trainloads of dirt hauled to the river front and dumped to make a park below Riverside drive. In cyclonic devastation, whole neighborhoods are razed for new bridge approaches.

Swiftly the old landmarks fade. Only Grant's tomb and similar objects of sentiment seem safe. If even the Sphinx stood on Fifth avenue, somebody would probably want to wreck it to build a skyscraper! Here is no space for stately things. By many cuts and running it fast, imagine this picture shown in, say, two or three hours. You would see old buildings crumbling down and new skyscrapers hastening heavenward, pushing up like giant mushrooms. It would be unendurable.

Compared with medieval cities, think how fast New York grows. Today, in New York, bricklayers may run walls up two stories in a day. A building of 50 floors is begun and finished in about the same time it used to take a Sioux to kill a buffalo and tan its hide for his wigwam.

Between crowds and skyscrapers is reciprocal affinity. Each is the cause of the other. Into that part of Manhattan below Fifty-ninth street there comes to work every morning an army of people equal to the population of Paris or Chicago. No other spot on earth is so crowded with men and houses.

It reminds you of one certain rock near a coast where cormorants, gulls, and pelicans all come to roost. Other islets are near, but the fanning birds crowd and felle only their favorite rock. They pack it so tight that if one bird raises a wing to stretch, another is pushed into the sea.

On, Under and Over Manhattan.

Thus men crowd Manhattan rock. Not only that. They bore holes in it, dig tunnels under rivers, and push bridges over to it, so that still more men may reach it hastily. The passengers on its transport lines each year outnumber all the people in the world. Those passing through Times Square subway station alone last year equaled in number half the inhabitants of the western hemisphere.

So jammed is Fifth avenue now that in busy hours a man walking goes faster than a bus. In many streets, motors average less than four miles an hour.

New York's fight to keep men and things in motion knows no lull. It has built a great elevated express highway, a novel thoroughfare many feet above the street. It runs along the Hudson river water front from Canal street north to Seventy-second, with ramps for access and egress at a few important cross-town streets. At Seventy-second its outlet is Riverside drive.

Think what this means to crowded New York! A broad, free path of two 30-foot roadways, with no grade crossings, able to carry from 5,000 to 9,000 motor cars an hour, at a speed of 25 miles—right over all congestion.

Then there's the new tunnel, to run under tidewater from Brooklyn out to Staten island. It will take two to four years to bore this bold submarine highway.

SUPREME IN THEIR OWN ENVIRONMENT

Australian Natives Masters of Woodcraft.

Among the wonders of empire are living men of the Stone age whose forefathers saw the rise and decay of all bygone civilizations.

Ignorant as they seem to us, the aborigines of Australia in their own environment are as much in advance of our most brilliant scientists as our scientists are in advance of the average man. Our cleverest men would starve to death if dropped down without food, clothing, or weapons in the heart of Australia, but the Stone age men thrive and flourish in such conditions.

They live solely by hunting, their knowledge of the habits of wild things being uncanny. If they were not the world's most marvelous trackers they would have died out ages ago. They can read every scratch and mark on the ground as easily as you read this paper, and can tell whether the creature they are chasing is young or old, what it is doing, and where it is going.

They eat anything, even snakes and lizards, and once they get on its track a creature is doomed, for they never give up until they get it. Nor do they make the mistake, common to the whites, of trying to dig out of its burrow an animal that is not at home.

Their crude form of writing by burning or carving dots and lines on sticks—stick messages—enables them to send any information by runner to distant members of their tribes. But even more wonderful are their smoke messages. They seem to converse in smoke as easily as the airplane writes in smoke in our own skies.

Starting the fire by rubbing one piece of wood against another, they select their materials in the most careful manner. Familiar with the type of smoke given off by different woods, they make smoke of various densities and colors, thick clouds, light spirals, or surrises in brown, yellow, black, blue, or pink; and every change of color and form has its meaning in their age-old code.

Widespread Belief in Unicorn Through Ages

From very remote antiquity down to the present time, China and Japan have preserved a belief in a powerful one-horned wild animal, in the varied form of a horse, an ass or an ox. The encyclopedias tell us that Ctesias, a learned Greek physician and writer, who died about 330 B. C., in one of his treatises speaks of white or red wild asses of beautiful shape, with single, long white horns upon their heads, which existed in India. He goes on gravely to inform us that drinking cups made from the horn of a unicorn rendered safely innocuous any poison poured into them, a belief which persisted into and past the Middle ages.

The origin of these stories it is difficult to find. No remains of any such animal have ever been discovered, nor do writers claim to have actually seen a specimen of them. And yet the belief in their existence is so widespread in several parts of the world that it might be made to appear foolish to deny that any such creature ever existed. A glance at the heraldic presentation of a unicorn in the British royal coat-of-arms should serve to show the absurdity of attempting to identify the ancient unicorn with so ungainly a one-horned animal as the rhinoceros, as would some writers.

Lightning's Freak

Dick Blankenship was sitting on the front porch of his home in Richlands, Va., when lightning struck a tree in the yard and killed a cow and six pigs standing beneath it. Blankenship was unharmed, but the pipe he held in his hand was burned to a crisp, and the soles of both his shoes were neatly ripped away.

Unhonored and Unsung

In August, 1918, an English soldier raided single-handed a German headquarters and captured some documents which he could not read. The other day he accidentally learned that they were the Hindenburg defuse plans which enabled the allies quickly to win the war. He's now wondering who took the credit he should have gotten.—Collier's Magazine.

Nothing ages like laziness.

Early Use of Carpets
Carpets, in the earliest days of their importation from Turkey into England, were considered far too precious for use on the floor, and being small in size, were used for table covers.

Pictured here is Bobbie Holcombe, 1841 Howell Mill Rd., Atlanta, Ga., riding "Eagle." He has always been an Eagle Brand baby, has never been sick, and at seven months weighs 21 pounds.

This 5-month-old daughter of Mrs. W. Gerkech, 3 Prospect St., New Rochelle, N. Y., was "small and thin when born, and so formula would agree. On Eagle Brand," her mother writes, "she has gained steadily and is now the picture of health."

This husky life-saver—well-built, and strong—is Edson R. Tamblin, Jr., 130 Union St., Ridge-wood, N. J. He is an Eagle Brand baby—just two years old—and tops the scales at 52 pounds.

Judge a baby food by the babies it builds

Look at them—three of the hundreds of thousands of babies that are raised, each year, on Eagle Brand. Their mothers sent their pictures to The Borden Company—as countless mothers do each year—because they are proud of the look of these babies—eager to have us show other mothers what Eagle Brand does in building a fine physique, a happy disposition, a good foundation for health through the years.

Look at the way their bones are shaping—strong and sturdy. See how their healthy, normal growth is making them fine-looking, "well-favored"

And then consider this: In the 75 years since Gail Borden put Eagle Brand on the market, three generations—millions—have been raised on this wonderfully digestible food. No other food, except mother's milk, has such long-continued, practical evidence of its success in baby building.

Recently, in a famous baby clinic, this practical evidence was scientifically verified—in a feeding test with 50 average infants. Judged by X-ray pictures of bone structure, blood counts, weight and height records, every modern check on growth, these Eagle Brand babies proved themselves ideally nourished.

Baptist Church

We frequently hear people putting up many and varied excuses for their failure to observe the Sabbath in Christian ways. One says "It is the only time I have for fishing"; Another, "I just have to fix up the car." Still another: "I have to make a business trip." And still another says "I am so worn out by the end of the week that I simply have to rest." And there are many who assert that they can worship God out of doors as well as in church. This last statement is probably true in theory, but sadly lacking in fact. Very, very few stop to worship God while they are taking their Sunday car rides in the out of doors.

There will be fishing, and business trips and car rides, and week-end excursions, and even cars will need to be repaired after you have ceased to be interested in any of these things.

"There is a time for every thing under the sun," and for most people, Sunday is the only time to get religious inspiration, and to worship the Lord God "six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. But the seventh day is a Sabbath unto Jehovah, thy God."

Which shall it be? The Gathering of spiritual strength to your immortal soul, or the gratification of personal desires and impulses?

Try going to church at least once next Sunday.

Repossessed Piano Bargain

We have one Piano in the vicinity of Carrizozo that is being repossessed on account of owner moving away; almost half paid for; will turn over to a responsible party who will agree to continue the payments, rather than return to factory; Piano almost new; splendid tone; unusual bargain. Write A. A. Jones, Representative Kimball Pianos, 103 S. El Paso St.

The building of the new cottages is nearing its completion. The only work now remaining is the construction of porches and sidewalks which are to be made of concrete.

A nice piece of engineering, being accomplished by the station mechanics, is the new stretch of road which will eliminate the sharp and dangerous curve at the Second Bridge, where the road from the Fort leads off to Capitan. This curve had caused numerous accidents and some fatalities in the past.

The Stanton Baseball Team defeated Carrizozo in a lively game played here last Sunday. The score was 5 to 1. The Fort boys displayed lots of pep and very good ball playing, despite their lack of practise.

Gustav C. Sundberg, our famous explorer and big game hunter, has taken up the lucrative vocation of Taxidermy. His cabin is lavishly decorated with trophies, all mounted by him, of every animal from a mouse to an elephant, bagged on his hunting trips to far corners of the world. His favorite sports are bulldogging rhinoceroses and tying square knots in large boa constrictors. He is very modest about his experiences. At intervals, he entertains his intimate friends by relating some of his thrilling and hair-raising experiences in darkest Africa, Siberia, India, etc. His body bears scars from encounters with wild beasts, some of which he killed unarmed and single handed. Another incident is when Gus, who had only a set of brass knuckles, fought off a horde of the most savage cannibal tribes in the upper reaches of the Congo, who had his generously proportioned physique sized up for a lucious barbecue. To complete his collection of animal trophies, he is at present searching for a specimen of the elusive Whiffle Bird, only found roosting in Whiffle Trees at the midnight hour.

Mayor McQuillen's Father Died at Detroit, Michigan

On the morning of May 31, at Detroit, Mich., G. R. McQuillen, aged 82, father of our esteemed Mayor, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ricamore. He passed on while his daughter was about to serve him with the breakfast meal. He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters, Mesdames Harding, of Fort Worth, Texas, Ricamore of Detroit, and one son, G. T. McQuillen of Carrizozo. The sad news coming just at the end of the month when the Mayor's services are so in demand and this handicap, coupled with the great distance to Detroit, made it impossible for the Mayor to attend the funeral.

About The V-8

A great many people are becoming impatient about waiting for delivery of the Ford V-8. The reason for the delay in receiving these cars is due to the fact that the Carrizozo Auto Co. is trying to co-operate with the railroads and have their cars shipped by rail instead of by truck, this necessitates shipment from Kansas City instead of from Denver, we hope that the people will appreciate the efforts of the Carrizozo Auto Co. in this, as it is working a great hardship on them, as well as the people who are waiting.

Mrs. O. S. Baldwin and Miss Eva French of Knoxville, Tenn., arrived at Roswell and were met by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French and taken on a trip to see the Carlsbad Cavern. The ladies will visit here for at least one month, during which time they will be taken to our mountain resorts, such as Eagle Creek, Pine Lodge, etc. They will visit Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Faos. before they return home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. McIntuck were present at the ball game at Fort Stanton last Sunday — the result being just too bad for the home team. Mac took part in the ball game, with the slanting out of a three-base hit or Texas League at Corona still fresh in everyone's mind.

Mayor McQuillen, Fire Chief J. M. Beck, Ray Harkey and Dennis Bigelow will leave for station Sunday to attend the State Firemen's Tournament which begins at that place Monday. They will return about next Thursday.

Claud Braum had an ad in last week's Outlook for the sale of pigs and the ad to run two weeks, but the pigs mentioned in the ad were sold before the second issue of the paper came out, so he secured some more pigs to satisfy the demand. Yea, verily, it pays to advertise, even though it is only to sell pigs.
