Explode 'em

Terrific Plastering

Last Sunday at the local park, Carrizozo triumphed over Corona's ballsters 14 to 6 by hitting the pellet hard and at opportune times. Also the cool-headed pitching of the old mainstay, Pat Dolan. The game was very snappy and close for the first few innings, but our boys let loose with their heavy bombardment at about the 5th inning and were never much in danger of relinquishing their lead from then on.

Walter LaFleur, Manny Chavez, Curley Jones and Andrea Luercas did some heavy clouting, LaFleur hitting for the circuit twice, while Luercas followed suit by hitting one over the centerfielder's dome. Hilburn of the visitors also knocked a home-run, off of Johnny Jordan, who relieved Dolan in the last few frames. Nice work, boys—keep it up!

FORT STANTON NEWS

Last Sunday, our royal distinguished personage, Baron Alexander Geldish, favored several of Lincoln county's most beautiful vacation spots with a charming personal visit. The Baron's twenty-two carat gold-plated Rolls Royce glittered like a million diamonds as it purred sumptuously from the Fort toward the Ruidoso, via the beautiful Alto mountain road.

The Baron's party consisted of a few close friends who loquaciously described the unfolding scenery to him. The Baron stopped at the Rio Bonito where he caught a beautiful string of Cavilta fish with his platinum rod and reel. At the Ruidoso the Baron's magnetic personality created a furor amongst the fairer sex, and had not the Baron's husky bodyguard given him adequate protection he certainly would have been kidnapped—not for his fortunes but for his love. Undoubtedly the Baron has plenty of "IT."

At the Mescalero Reservation the Baron received the highest honors and acclaim of all when he was titled and christened honorary "Chief White Mule." After a frenzied war dance which tickled the Baron pink, he was presented with a most beautiful tepee, the covering of which was woven from the finest goofer feathers obtainable in the southwest. Then the Baron's palatial party hastened to Hondo where a lively rodeo was in progress. The Baron derived great enthusiasm from the varied feats performed by the riders. To him they recalled fond memories of his years spent in active service with the Russian Cossacks. He still proudly displays the regalia he wore in this famous detachment. His insignia is a golden wheelbarrow heaped high, with a pitchfork stuck in the top, and from this we presume the Baron followed the horses.

At Lincoln, the Baron surveyed the rippling Rio Bonito while he hummed the "Volga Boatmen," with a wary eye for more Cavilta fish. The moon was rising in magnificent splendor over the eastern hills when the Baron finally arrived at the Fort, and the nurses tucked him away tenderly away between silken sheets.

To date the Baron has received 20,679 female applications for his harem. He states that no more applications will be considered as he now exceeds Brigham Young's popularity. The Baron will leave in a few days on his world tour. We expect Lincoln county will be favored with a shower of feminine tears exceeding cloudburst proportions when he departs.

Life In Natal

Scene in a Zulu Beauty Parlor.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

NATAL, South Africa, has gone to the sea for a new industry. Sharks, once the dread hunters of the deep, now are hunted by Natal fishermen, aboard huge floating abattoirs, divide shark carcasses into twenty valuable commodities.

Natal, however, is not as famous for its industries as for its natural beauty. It has been called the Garden Province of South Africa. Whether one approaches the province by way of mountain, plain or sea, it is a vast region of perpetual green, fringed on the east by broad sandy beaches of the Indian ocean.

In Natal the traveler might often wonder whether he is in Africa or India, for here appear brown, barefoot women, vividly draped, with golden anklets and jeweled nose ornaments, in the shadow of little white temples enframed with eglines of India's gods. It was in 1900, in order to meet the labor shortage occasioned by slave liberation, that local sugar planters first imported Indian coolies. Nowadays Natal's white population hardly outnumbers that of her East Indians.

To glimpse the Zululand of today one must drive a hundred miles northward of Durban, along sea level; then climb into the hill fastnesses of what at first seems an almost unpopulated country. At long intervals your car passes some white man's sugar cane, flourishing at 2000 feet, or his far-removed neighbor's trading store and hotel; far by low the Zululand trader most accommodate wayfarers in a comfortable where, what with a quarter of a million acres of native reservations, dwellings consist almost exclusively of native kraals.

Zulus Keep Away From Roads.

But where are the natives? Are there no more than the few passing girls balancing baskets of corn on their heads, and the few squatting boys who carve wooden spoons while watching cattle? The truth is, while Zululand's little, circular kraals are scattered far and wide, they are seldom near roads and, when distant, melt indistinguishably into the background.

Zulus don't like being near roads. They like streams and hills. And besides if they lived too close to a road some white men would make them work on it. Nowadays, sadly enough, that food-seeking creature, the Zulu, too often forsakes his picturesque native dress for some hodgepodge of hand-me-down store clothes. To see true Zulu costumes and customs, one must stumble fortunately upon the right kraal at the right time. For instance, when a wedding ceremony is about to take place, beer making is in progress. Kafir corn, having been water-steeped until it has sprouted, is being pounded fine, then mixed anew with water to cause the fermentation which would produce—well, call it a mild near-beer. Men furnish assegais, oxhide shields, leopardskin smocks. Some women undergo primitive beauty parlor treatments that build their hair into high, red-dyed "permanent buns."

What one witnesses nowadays in kraal life is the working out of an administrative system based on those "scheduled native areas" which are found in all of the four provinces. Operating downward from the governor general, and through hereditary chiefs, their headmen, and the latter's representatives in each family or clan, this patriarchal system aims at conserving with a minimum of interference that which is best in Bantu law and tradition. A truly staggering problem, this, is "adaptation"! And it appears the more so when one realizes that it is scarcely a century ago that Natal, to cite one province only, was a black Paradise of a million or more Bantu tribesmen.

In the Days of Chaka. Paradise? Inferno, rather! The tribal troubles had begun when one Dingiswayo, a would-be warrior, fled to the cape for refuge. There he beheld the revelation of military drill and, moreover, acquired the services of a white man, who, returning northward with him, taught that drill to Dingiswayo's people. In turn, the sight of drilled Bantus infected the imagination of one Chaka, and thereupon this potential Napoleon of the Amazulu proceeded to weld his tribe into a truly terrible fighting machine. The great oxhide shield, the short stabbing spear, the outspread crescent formation that closed its deadly horns about the enemy—such were his ladder rungs to conquest. Moreover, he organized not only his warriors, but his maidens, marrying them off by regiments, male and female, when the valor of the former had been proved.

Spartan measures prevailed. Cowards in the fighting line were executed in batches after the action. Because one girl regiment defied the military marriage system, it was promptly massacred. And Spartan example triumphed. At the behest of this black dictator an entire regiment would unhesitatingly hurl itself over a cliff. His Amazulu became all-conquering, and he that bloody "Chaka the Terrible," who would, for instance, kill off eleven wives "because they annoyed him."

Rather a chancy host, this, for white men to visit! Yet in 1823 a certain adventurous Lieut. F. G. Farewell and some of his Cape friends actually bobbed up in Chaka's court. What a sensation these advance soldiers of white civilization created may be gauged by the fact that one of them, Henry F. Fynn, was at first supposed by the Zulus to be some sort of sea monster. And he, being Irish, no doubt copily admitted it, with "Sure, me name's Fynn, and haven't fishes any?"

In the end, Chaka was so impressed by his guests' ability to kill distant beasts with a "tube of thunder and lightning" that he granted the enterprising seekers trading rights and a generous slice of territory. And thus "Point Fynn" and "Fort Farewell" began appearing on rough maps of the site where today stands the charming seaport of Durban.

View it from its residential heights, where brilliant flowers brighten gracious gardens overlooking the red-roofed lower town. Or visit its park centered municipal square, or its bar-skirting Marine parade, or its shipping thronged docks, or its tennis beach, where big folk swim ashore on surf boards.

Durban Is Very New.

How Durban emerged from the wilderness you may comprehend from its pioneers who not long ago hunted back in what are now city parks. Only last year Hubert the Hippo emerged from somewhere up north and came slouching through Durban's streets in search of the Ideal river of his dreams. Hubert's prowling through Natal pervaded the news columns and inspired bedtime stories for many a week. Moreover, in the suburbs beyond the Umgeni river young Durbanites may visit the little gray monkey folk, where, amid aboriginal freedom, they will drop earthward to eat bananas from one's hand.

In 1823 Chaka was assassinated by his half-brother, Dingaan. Zulu hegemony continued under the latter, who kinged it in his great kraal, where, crouching on the floor of an ant heap mixed with blood, his satellites would gruesomely apostrophize him as "Thou vulture! Thou the bird that eateth other birds!"

Voorrekker Piet Retief and his comrades presented themselves at Dingaan's court, asking for a cession of lands. There, having been disarmed on a treacherous pretext, they were executed to the last man. This affair, together with subsequent massacres of the Boer settlers, showed that the white man's existence in Natal hung on a thread. Promptly concentrating a well-organized commando, Andries Pretorius met the Zulu king's 10,000 warriors and crushed them at the Battle of Blood river in 1838.

But now, with the English at Port Natal and the victorious Dutch forming a republic at Pietermaritzburg, an interracial clash became inevitable. The Dutch stole a march on the English and surrounded their encampment on the spot where the Old Fort now stands. A few years later the province was annexed by the British.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 6

The Distributional Count

TO START with an orderly process of constructive thinking concerning the worth of the actual cards which you hold when making the most usual bid at contract, a suit bid or one, let us realize how many tricks you are undertaking to win and ascertain what will be the probable source of these tricks. When bidding one you contract for seven tricks. Of course you are not expected to take all seven tricks yourself. Your hand is supposed to furnish at least four of the contract, and you are permitted to count on finding about three assisting tricks in your partner's hand.

To see how your own four tricks can be counted, let us take this clear-cut type of a minimum one heart bid:

S-364 HAQ93 D-A864 C-78

(When vulnerable, this hand would be too weak for an opening bid. Vulnerable, a four-card suit bid must hold at least a queen better than the minimum.) Obviously as only 2 1/2 of your tricks appear in honors, something additional must be produced from the length or distribution of your suits. One of these expected playing tricks is a small heart; because in bidding a suit, you are always permitted to count one playing trick for every trump over three, that is, one end trick in a four-card trump suit, two end tricks in a five-card trump suit, and three end tricks in a six-card trump suit. This brings your hand to a total of 3 1/2 playing tricks. Where is the other 1/2 to be found? In another "long-card," the fourth diamond, which has about a fifty-fifty chance of setting up as an eventual winner. In side suits, you may give the value of 1/2 playing trick to every card over three—just half the value of "long-cards" in the trump suit. Thus you get the value of the above hand as a total of 4 playing tricks which include 2 1/2 honor-tricks.

Now, suppose that you have bid one heart on the holding above described. Your valuation is sound because unless your partner has adequate trump support it is improbable that you will ever play the hand at hearts. If he held the balance of honor strength but lacked trump support, your partner would take you out. If he lacked both honor strength and trump support, the opponents would declare their strength, relieving you of your responsibility. In no case could you rebid such a hand at hearts, even though your partner gave you every encouragement to do so.

When opening an original bid in a suit, the estimate of your playing tricks is based entirely on honor-cards and long cards in trumps and side suits. Singletons or void suits cannot be counted as extra tricks because the trumps in your hand have already been estimated as playing tricks. To add a value for singletons or void suits would simply amount to counting the same tricks twice. A particular warning must be given against this error, often made by fairly experienced players. A short suit or void is as we shall see, an extremely valuable asset in the assisting hand to a trump bid. But in the declarer's hand it has only a slight promotional value, too indefinite to count.

The Count of Long Suit Tricks in Declarer's Hand

	In Declarer's Hand	In	Side Suit
	trump suit	trump suit	side suit
A 4-card length is worth	1 trick	1/2 trick
A 5-card length is worth	2 tricks	1 trick
A 6-card length is worth	3 tricks	1 1/2 tricks

As a matter of fact, in the first declaration of a suit bid, it is not necessary to count playing tricks. All sound opening suit bids of one show about 4 playing tricks for the reason that there must be no less than 2 1/2 honor-tricks in the hand and at least one long suit trick in trumps; an additional 1/2 trick can almost invariably be eked out somewhere. But in considering rebids, after your partner has raised, or sometimes after he has dealt your suit, it is absolutely essential that you count your playing tricks and ascertain how much, if any, additional value you have for a rebid. Remember that the bidder's sum of playing tricks is his total of long card tricks and honor-tricks. In other words, playing tricks and honor-tricks are not separate values but a sum total.

Check These With an Atlas

Some surprising facts have been compiled by the National Geographic Society. The city of Reno, Nev., is 300 miles farther west than Los Angeles. Jacksonville, Fla., is farther west than Cleveland, Ohio. One travels south from Detroit to reach the nearest part of Canada. At Panama the sun rises in the Pacific and sets in the Atlantic. New York city lies west of the Pacific—that part of it which touches Africa in Chile.—World's Work.

Place for the Booster

Boosters paralyze much of the sunshine in our drab earthly existence. A kind word, a smile, is relished by everyone. A grocer is the friend of no one. So try patting the other fellow on the back, instead of seeking him on the head.—Orin.

MADE BY THE MAKERS OF IVORY SOAP

Women said:
A fast working soap can't be safe!

BUT they didn't know about the New Oxydol suds!
Whether you're washing dishes or clothes, suds do the work. Oxydol makes 50% more suds—richer, quicker suds that rinse off clean, that leave no scum—that's why this safe soap can do so much and still be kind to hands and delicate things.

Never Positive Proof

That Atlantis Existed

According to ancient tradition, Atlantis was the name of a large island or continent which existed at a very early period in the Atlantic ocean, and eventually was sunk beneath the waves.

An account of it is given by Plato. His writings state that in the Atlantic ocean, over against the pillars of Hercules, there was once an island which was larger than Asia and Africa together (or the then existent notion of the extent of these continents), and near it lay other islands through which there was a passage to a large continent beyond.

Nine thousand years before Plato's time, said the tradition, the island of Atlantis was thickly settled and very powerful. It held sway over Africa as far as Egypt and over a large part of Europe, and the advance of its conquering power was checked by the valor of the Greeks. At last, during a violent earthquake, which lasted a day and a night and was accompanied by inundations of the ocean, the island was wholly submerged. The account adds that many years thereafter, the sea in this part was un navigable because of the shoals caused by the sunken lands.

This ancient legend may, and probably did, have some historical circumstances for foundation, but what these were no historian has ever been able to determine.

Modernistic Piano

Modernistic art has transformed the piano into something new and unfamiliar. A new art piano has been exhibited at the Leipzig fair in which the solid piano legs are replaced by steel supports, no thicker than a finger. The sides of the piano, a triangular grand, are made of plates of red glass, while the top and even the music rack are covered with glass.

Self-Condemed

People who complain that they suffer from ennui, are merely people tired of doing nothing and too lazy to do something.

Unlucky Dogs

One of the unluckiest things that can happen to a breed of dogs is to get fashionable, says the Cleveland Press. This means that the dogs will be transplanted in huge numbers from their natural environments to over-heated apartments. It means in many cases, that hardy animals bred to hunt and fight will have to eat chocolates and sleep on silk pillows.

One of the popular breeds these days is the Scotch terrier. Certainly a rugged, warm-coated, tough-fibered outdoor dog if there ever was one. Yet—believe it or not—full-grown Scotch terriers may be seen on the streets of Cleveland wearing knitted sweaters on cold days. Think of the humiliation!

He Said a Potful

"Why did you throw the pot of geraniums at the plaintiff?"
"Because of an advertisement, your honor."

"What advertisement?"

The greatest thrill a mother can know

HER BABY... thriving... gaining by leaps and bounds! His back, strong and fine as a little champion's. His teeth developing perfectly. His legs straight and sturdy. His skin rosy, his flesh firm, his whole body a living promise of health—radiant, buoyant health—through the years to come!

Can any food except Nature's food build such a baby? Millions of mothers have answered Yes to this question. And now more emphatically still a world-famous clinic answers Yes.

Living proof—in millions of healthy babies

Seventy-five years ago, Gail Borden gave Eagle Brand to the mothers of America. Today, Eagle Brand—second only to mother's milk in easy digestibility—is known as a wonderful infant food the world over. Eagle Brand has raised more healthy babies than any other food, excepting mother's milk. In practically every community are healthy, sturdy boys and girls, and men and women who got their start in life on Eagle Brand. In your own community, see how these Eagle Brand ex-babies compare.

What the scientists discovered
But newer still is the news from the world-famous baby clinic. Two physicians fed a group of 50 average babies on Eagle Brand for a period of several months—checking with care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure. Tooth development. Weight and height gains. Blood count... And those 50 Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves superbly nourished!

Mail coupon below for a free copy of "Baby's Welfare"—containing feeding instructions and directions for general care; also histories and pictures of Eagle Brand babies. We will gladly send your physician a report of above scientific test of Eagle Brand. Your grocer sells Eagle Brand—feeding instructions are on the label.

Things Look Bad to Mussolini

The outlook is very black, according to our friend Benito Mussolini. He says, in an interview in the London Express, that we are in for all kinds of war, political, economic and military. It's no use to look to the United States for help, he continues, for this poor old country has no policy and has been wrecked by prohibition and kidnapers. Europe is drifting right straight into disaster and revolution.

Evidently, Mussolini thinks the only thing to do is for the other countries of the world to do as Italy has done, turn the management of affairs over to some one strong, capable and wise man, like he is.

"Democracy is nothing," he says, "and the people are nothing. They cannot take care of themselves. They need saviors and there are no saviors." We are going to have a lot of wars everywhere.

Well, it is all too bad. Over here we are all absorbed in the matter of choosing some man to take the lead in affairs and really don't know that everything is going head over heels, right into a general smashup.

Maybe Mussolini is mistaken. We always have that consolation. There have been other Cassandras in his world and things kept on going just the same.

No man, at any time, can look over the world and tell you just what is going to happen. It takes a smart man to tell you what is going to happen tomorrow, let alone in the next 10 or 20 years.

We may get rid of the liquor question in the next five or ten years. We may even get rid of the gangsters, by locking some of them up and sending others back to their native lands.

Some, in that event, will land on Italy's coast and we suppose Mussolini will not like that. In the meantime, let's all keep steady and give our chosen leaders a chance. — Albuquerque Journal.

Looks Like Old Times

Looks like old times around here just now. Stopping in at Keene's blacksmith shop one day this week, we noticed everybody busy making cradles and pans for panning gold. These are being made for people engaged in placer mining, principally in the Jicarillas.

The Staff of Life

Bread is the "staff of life." Of course, you've heard this before, but what we refer to is, bread from your home bakery is what you should buy in order that the struggling enterprise may exist. The money you give to the local bakery stays at home, while that which you give for outside bread, leaves the town and never returns. Think it over.

The Sunbeams had their regular meeting Sunday, June 26, at the Baptist Church. There were fourteen present and also two new members more. The Sewing Club meets with Mrs. Jordan every Thursday at two o'clock. They are planning to have a hike Friday at 4 p. m. and look forward to having a fine time. We are always glad to have new members to help us enjoy our fun.—Earlene Berry, Secretary.

Who remembers the good old days when a preacher's religion was estimated by the amount of mileage he made in his sermons? If he would preach until his congregation fell asleep, he was wanted by every church in the community.

COLOMBIA ADOPTS MODERNIZING PLAN

NEW YORK—Keen interest is being evinced by American financiers, importers and world travelers in recent modernization developments throughout the Republic of Colombia, the nearest South American neighbor of the United States.

Most of the Colombian cities are being transformed from ancient colonial settlements into modern metropolitan centers having both the aspect and conveniences of those in the United States.

Cartagena, Colombia, Where Modern Architecture Vies with Old.

Sites. In addition, important railroad lines and motor highways are being extended and river channels opened to facilitate the movement of products from the inland to Barranquilla and Cartagena on the Atlantic, and Buenaventura on the Pacific coast of Colombia.

These transportation improvements have become imperative because of the rapidly increasing volume of exports from that country. Approximately 400,000,000 pounds of coffee, 11,000,000 stems of bananas, 15,000,000 barrels of petroleum, $3,000,000 worth of gold and $1,750,000 of platinum are exported from Colombia to world markets annually.

Coffee is Colombia's principal export product, as well as being a very important factor in the life of the country in general. More than 90 per cent of the annual crop of Colombia, which is the second largest coffee-producing country in the world, is exported to the United States.

Who Was the First President of the United States?

Samuel Johnston

John Hanson

George Washington

Thomas McKean

Samuel Huntington

(All Pictures, Courtesy Carnegie Institution of Washington.)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WHAT is it we celebrate on the Fourth of July?

"Why, the signing of the Declaration of Independence," you reply.

"But why celebrate that?" you are asked.

"Because it is the birthday of our nation," you answer. And in both cases, you're only partly right.

As a matter of fact, the Declaration of Independence was formally adopted on July 4, 1776, by the Continental congress, but so many members were absent on that day that no effort was made to secure their signatures to the immortal document. That was not done until nearly a month later. On August 2, 1776, the final copy of the Declaration was ready and the members then present (all whose names appear on it, except two—Thomas McKean and William Thornton, who signed later) affixed their signatures, thus giving the document an authority which it lacked up to that time.

So it depends upon a matter of interpretation, whether July 4, when the Declaration was formally adopted, or August 2, when it was signed, shall be considered as the "birthday of a new nation."

But now that this "new nation" has come into existence, obviously it must have a head or an executive officer if it is to be a "going concern." Granted? All right? Of course, we all know that the executive officer of this new nation of ours which came into existence 150 years ago is known as the President. So there logically follows the question "Who was our first President?"

"Why, George Washington, of course!" you answer. But are you sure of that? For again it's a matter of interpretation. To be absolutely sure that you're right, you should say "George Washington was the first President of the United States." Be sure to put in "of the United States." For there was no such nation as the United States and no such office in it until it was created by the "constitution," framed in 1787 and adopted in 1789, and George Washington was the first man to hold the office of President under the "constitution."

In recent years attempts have been made to prove that several men who hold the title of "President" and presided over the Continental congress were Presidents before Washington. But those attempts have met what seems to be a final and decisive answer, from Dr. Edmund C. Burnett of the division of historical research at the Carnegie Institute of Washington, who has spent 25 years in exhaustive research of the work of the Continental congress during the entire period of its existence from 1774 to 1781.

In a statement by Doctor Burnett, issued by the Carnegie Institution recently, he says in regard to the "President before Washington" theory:

"In this year of exceptional grace, the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-sixth, when we are celebrating the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, many old controversies revolving about the character and career of the Father of his Country have been revived—controversies which seemed to have been permanently relegated to the realm of tales that were told—and several new ones have pushed their way to the front to make their bids for a hearing.

"Among the themes which are not precisely new nor yet hoary with old age is one which declares that the first President of the United States was not George Washington, but that this distinction belongs to John Hanson, president of the Continental congress from November 5, 1781, to November 4, 1782.

"Similar claims, although on other grounds, have been put forth in behalf of other Presidents of congress, but only that in behalf of Hanson has been pushed with great vehemence or has attained any great vogue. In good time the legend John Hanson, first President of the United States, will also be assigned its appropriate niche in the Hall of Myths.

"The plain truth of the matter is that not one of the presidents of the Continental congress, from Peyton Randolph to Cyrus Griffin, was ever President of the United States, either in fact, by title of courtesy, or otherwise. The first to hold that office, the first to bear that title, was George Washington; and all those who seek to bestow the title of first President of the United States upon any president whomsoever of the 'Old Congress' are but chasing shadows, pursuing will-o'-the-wisps.

"The Hanson thesis, which has had its own variations in the course of its career, has now assumed substantially this form: John Hanson was the first President of the United States, because he was the first President of congress under the articles of confederation, the first constitution of the United States. This is the basic argument of the Hanson proponents, and it is to this argument that we shall, in the main, devote our examination.

"Was John Hanson actually the first President of congress under the articles of confederation? Those articles, it should be recalled, were adopted by congress on November 15, 1777, and two days later were sent forth to the several states with a plea for their speedy adoption. Some of the states readily assented, others ratified with certain provisos, while still others, led by Maryland, held back until their views with regard to the disposition of the western lands should be agreed to.

"By July, 1778, all the states except Maryland, New Jersey, and Delaware had ratified the articles as they stood, and a few months later New Jersey and Delaware also came forward with their ratifications; but Maryland stood stoutly by her demand respecting the western lands (and a most praiseworthy demand it was), and not until her demands had been essentially complied with did that state agree to ratify.

The final step was taken on the first of March, 1781, when the delegates of Maryland in congress, John Hanson and Daniel Carroll, appended their signatures to the articles of confederation.

"At the time of Maryland's ratification of the confederation Samuel Huntington of Connecticut was president of congress and had been since September 23, 1779. There was no new election of a president of the body at that time, but on July 9, 1781, President Huntington gave notice to congress that the state of his health would not permit him to continue longer in the exercise of the duties of the Presidency, and on July 9 congress chose as his successor Samuel Johnston of North Carolina.

"On the following day, however, Johnston presented his declination, offering such reasons as were satisfactory, whereupon Thomas McKean of Delaware was elected President. (July 10). McKean served as President of congress until the election of John Hanson, on Monday, November 5.

"It is to be observed, then, that two Presidents, Huntington and McKean, had served between March 1 and November 5, 1781, and another had been chosen but had declined the office. A chief question therefore is, whether the Presidents between March 1 and November 5, 1781, served under the articles of confederation, or whether John Hanson was the first to serve under and by virtue of that instrument. The question hinges on whether the articles of confederation were actually in force during that interval."

Doctor Burnett declares that they were actually in force. He continues: "To contend, as do the protagonists in behalf of John Hanson as the first President of the United States, that the articles of confederation did not come into force until the first Monday in November, 1781, is to contradict official record and official interpretation.

"As an instance of the lengths to which this contention has been carried, a recent biographer of John Hanson, after asserting that "the election of John Hanson of Maryland was the first act of congress of the United States, on its first day of existence," proceeds to lay down this strange doctrine:

"Between the signing of the articles and this first Monday in November no government was actually in existence, though congress continued to transact business simply because there was a great deal of pressing business to transact." He then remarks that, "during those few months there was a provisional president called Thomas McKean, . . . who was elected with the definite understanding that he was to retire with the formation of the first government November 5."

"It is scarcely necessary to point out that, aside from the evidences of fact already adduced, the argument that no government was actually in existence from March 1 to November 5, 1781, is fallacious and entirely contrary to long-accepted legal interpretation.

"It is true enough that, prior to the adoption of the articles of confederation, there was no written document accepted as a constitution or fundamental instrument of government of the United States, but numerous governments have flourished and do flourish without any such written instrument. It may not be amiss, in this connection, to point out that the congress itself, on the thirteenth of September, 1779, laid down the doctrine that "these states now are as fully, legally, and absolutely confederated as it is possible for them to be."

"The articles of confederation, so far as the main essentials of the instrument are concerned, did little more than put into definite written form the principles on which the government of the United States had theretofore been conducted.

"At all events, it is not to be gainsaid that, even at the time when John Hanson was elected president of congress, these United States were existing; their national existence from the fourth of July, 1776. They have continued to do so, and that assertion respecting the date of the nation's birth has held good both in fact and in law."

After discussing the conditions under which Hanson was elected President, Doctor Burnett says:

"In any event, John Hanson does have the distinction, if it be a distinction, of being the first president to be chosen for the definite term of one year, beginning on the first Monday of November. But this is very far from making him President of the United States.

"The evidence, it must be repeated, is conclusive that no president of the continental congress, by whatever name it may be designated, whether 'the congress,' as it first called itself, or 'the United States in congress assembled,' as it came later to be called, was ever President of the United States. And this is true for this best of reasons, among others: because no such office as President of the United States existed until it was created by the federal constitution, framed in 1787 and adopted in 1789.

"The office of President of the United States which that constitution created is an office wholly different in character from that of President of the old congress, whether before or after the adoption of the articles of confederation; so different, in fact, that almost the sole thing in common is the word 'President' in their respective titles.

"The president of congress was merely a presiding officer, and he was a member of the body over which he presided; he neither possessed nor exercised any executive authority. The President of the United States is almost solely an executive officer; he is not a member of the national legislature; and his contacts with the national legislative body, the congress of the United States, are of a definitely limited character.

"There is therefore only one rational conclusion that can be reached, and that is, that George Washington was the first President of the United States."

Lesson for July 3

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:1-10; Acts 7:20-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Moses.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Slave Boy Rescued by a Princess.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Preparing for Life's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Influence of a Godly Home.

I. Moses' Parentage (v. 1). Both father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being from the same tribe, they had a common bond of interest and sympathy. Amram had the good judgment to choose for a wife a woman who had sympathies and ambitions in harmony with his own.

II. Moses' Birth (v. 2). Two children, Aaron and Miriam, were born to Amram and Jochebed before Moses. However, Moses was the first one that his mother was assured was to be the deliverer of the chosen people. There was something striking about this child which caused her to believe that it was sent of God. She saw that he was a "goodly child."

In Stephen's speech (Acts 7:20) he asserts that the child was "exceeding fair." No doubt his mother believed him to be the deliverer of his people and instilled that truth in his mind from childhood. Because of this belief, she had confidence that somehow God would save him from the cruel decree of the king.

III. Moses' Preservation (vv. 3-8). Though Pharaoh's edict was in force Jochebed's faith was such as to cause her to ignore it and hide Moses for three months. The hiding of the child was not because of fear, but because of faith (Heb. 11:23). It was her faith that made her brave to ignore the king's order. The unflinching antidote for human fear is a vital faith in the living God (Eph. 2:7-11).

1. Placed in an ark (v. 3). Perhaps the story of how Noah and his family were saved in the ark suggested to his mother the expedient used, namely, the ark of bulrushes.

2. Ark placed in the flags by the river (v. 3). Doubtless she was familiar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe. She placed the ark at the particular place where it would attract attention.

3. Miriam watching (v. 4). She was, no doubt, stationed here by her mother. It is interesting to note the steps, as pointed out by another, by which God's plan was carried out:

a. A mother's wit (v. 3, 4). She devised the ark and placed the baby in it at the proper place and at the opportune time. She also instructed Miriam as to her action.

b. A woman's curiosity (v. 5). The strange object among the flags attracted the attention of Pharaoh's daughter, and she directed her maids to bring it to her.

c. A woman's compassion (v. 6). When the ark was brought and opened, the baby wept. The true woman is always moved with compassion at the cry of a motherless baby.

d. A baby's tears (v. 6). The tears of Moses aroused the womanly instinct of Pharaoh's daughter and she was therefore susceptible to the suggestion as to the care of the baby.

e. A faithful sister (v. 7). Miriam's question was in the form of a suggestion as to a nurse for the baby from among the Hebrew women. This suggestion met a willing response and Miriam called the child's mother. In the providence of God we see that Jochebed was hired to nurse her own child. The best nurse possible for a child is its own mother.

f. A faithful sister (v. 7). Miriam's question was in the form of a suggestion as to a nurse for the baby from among the Hebrew women. This suggestion met a willing response and Miriam called the child's mother. In the providence of God we see that Jochebed was hired to nurse her own child. The best nurse possible for a child is its own mother.

IV. Moses' Education (vv. 9, 10, cf. Acts 7:20-22).

1. At his mother's knee (v. 9). We thus see his education began at the proper time and at the proper place. It was during this period that his character took form. Here his mind was filled with the Word of God and he was made acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. In these early years, no doubt, the indomitable purpose was fixed, to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season (Heb. 11:24-26).

2. Adopted by Pharaoh's daughter (v. 10). At the proper time Moses was brought unto Pharaoh's daughter and adopted as her son. She called him "Moses," which means "drawn out," "because," said she, "I drew him out of the water."

3. Educated in the Egyptian court (v. 10). It was here that he became acquainted with the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:20-22). This was of great importance. It peculiarly qualified him to be the law giver and the historian of his people.

Small Offenses

A very small offense may be a just cause for great resentment; it is often much less the particular instance which is obnoxious to us, than the proof it carries with it of the general tenor and disposition of the mind from whence it springs.—Greville.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Banks were here again last Sunday to witness the Carrizozo - Corona baseball game. Mr. Banks is the engineer for the New Mexico Light & Power plant at White Oaks and they are both fond of the national sport and boosters for the Carrizozo team.

John Haven, the Three Rivers baseball fan, was here Sunday to see the game between Carrizozo and Corona.

Four carloads of wool were shipped out of here this week, the shippers being Wm. Gallacher, Mrs. E. H. Sweet and the Red Canyon Sheep Company. Mr. Gallacher had one car, the remaining three cars were divided between the Red Canyon Sheep Co., and Mrs. Sweet.

A. Geldish, C. White and W. Leinasar were over from Fort Stanton Monday on business and returned home in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Asman of Grand Rapids, Mich., who had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Haven at Three Rivers for about two weeks, left last week, accompanied by Mrs. Haven, who after visiting at the Asman home for several weeks, she will go to Tahlequah, Okla., and visit relatives at her old home. Meedames Asman and Haven are sisters.

Attorney E. M. Barber, Mrs. Barber and Mr. Barber's mother, Mrs. Mary L. Barber, visited the Jicarilla country last Sunday and viewed the mining activity at that place.

Little Elvira Terrill returned last Friday afternoon from El Paso, where she had been visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. C. B. Wells, for two weeks.

Miss Dorothy Gallegos, who had been visiting with the Mrs. Lola S. Medina, Isaac Marquez, A. Salcido and Rudy Ramirez families at Tucumcari for the past four weeks, returned home last Saturday morning.

E. H. Miranda extends an invitation to the people of Lincoln County to come to the big dance at Lincoln on the afternoon and night of July 4. Music by the "Martinez & Pina" orchestra. Refreshments and lunches will be served.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance P. Smith of Oscura visited Carrizozo friends Tuesday of this week; they report the street lights as working excellently at Oscura—they are now receiving bids for City Water.

Pat Withers was over from across the Malpais Tuesday, assisting Louis Nalda in shipping his wool. Pat is the hombre who got lost on the plains east of Hondo while driving a herd of cattle over to Artesia. Pat was without food for four days, but he came through muy bueno.

Chas. LeBaron was a Carrizozo visitor last Saturday from Nogal.

Alamo vs. Carrizozo S.-A.

The local Spanish-American baseball team went to Lincoln last Friday (St. John's Day) and dropped a close game to Lincoln by a 6 to 2 score. The hard-hitting Carrizozoans could not find the ball that day and went down to defeat. Among those who attended the game, were: Mrs. Maggie V. Chavez, daughter Bertha, Mrs. Florencia Miralles, son Flo, Jr., Syl Baca, Manuel Prieto and Walter LaFleur. The boys play Alamo-Carrizozo here next Sunday, July 5, 3:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Montie Gardenhire and infant son of Capitan visited relatives and friends at this place on Sunday of last week—also staying over for the big ball game between Corona and Carrizozo. Montie says "It was a trifle one-sided, but the final score seemed to suit the Carrizozo fans. Say, that Walter LaFleur wields a mean bat, driving out two home runs in a single game. The Carrizozo boys are improving as far as slugging the ball is concerned. Take all the fancy, errorless fielding, if a team can't hit the ball, they can't expect to win," Montie says.

Miss Lucille Crenshaw, County School Superintendent Clerk, is the proud possessor of a V-8 Ford and it 'cho is' a beauty. How do we know? Because we had a ride in it. Now we presume all the young and good lookin' men will be wanting to test the merits of Lucille's new car—and how!

Mrs. Wm. Ferguson of the Nogal Mesa and daughter Mrs. Frank Titworth, formerly Miss Mora Ferguson of Tinnie, were here Tuesday on a visit to Mrs. Ferguson's youngest daughter, Miss Frances, who was stricken with appendicitis last Friday, taken to the Johnson Hospital, where, after an operation, she is convalescing nicely.

One Corona fellow asked Manager Harry Miller "Where in (a bad word) did you get that baseball team?" The game was between the Corona - Carrizozo ball teams held at the local diamond last Sunday. The Corona boys have proven themselves the best of sports; they are 'laying for us' and say that it won't be the same thing the next time the teams meet—it's liable to be a different story.
