

FORT STANTON NEWS

Mrs. Curry, one of our charming nurses, has received orders for transfer to the marine hospital at Memphis, Tenn.

When our dashing chaplain, Rev. Ed Smith came speeding in his coupe over the Carrizozo flats a few days ago, a giant eagle, soaring majestically in the air above, suddenly swooped down, as in a lightning-quick strike for prey, and collided with the car, the impact knocking him unconscious.

When Miss Chauvin and Mrs. James a few days ago took an afternoon walk in the direction of the Carlson rabbit ranch, they were almost paralyzed from terror at being unexpectedly surrounded by a horrible, monster rattlesnake.

A great number of the Stanton folks took in the beauty contest held at Ruidoso on the night of July 31. They are all of the opinion that if all the girls had appeared in bathing suits, the first prize winner, although very beautiful, would not have won by such an easy measure.

"That's why I want to be there," Shad urged. "I'm crazy to go."

"Wait till my plan is finished and we'll see," said the colonel.

They were talking together when the telephone rang. The Western Union manager was on the wire. He wished to see Colonel Blake and would come right over to his room. He arrived shortly. Tram had just left his office. He had brought in a telegram to be sent. The manager drew it from his pocket and showed it to the colonel. It was as follows:

"To John O'Brien, Jr., Windsor, Ont., Canada. 83 80 29 27

Take offer of Den Revel if cash sent 23 22 19

quick. Tell Ville to love and reverse our venerable friends for future use. 10

I think Brock is reliable. Goods in 5

urgent demand here are numbers thirty-three, twenty-seven, twenty-five, twenty-two, thirty, twenty-nine, nineteen, ten, twenty-three, five. Sewel Tram."

Its cipher was built on a new plan. Soon Colonel Blake had arrived at the following translation:

"To John O'Brien Jr., Windsor, Ont., Canada. Take cash quick to Ned Lever Reverse House Brockville Urgent. Sewel Tram."

"You will observe again that the numbers are the key to the real message," the colonel said to the boy. "This time, however, the counting starts on the last word which is 'numbers,' and goes backward. I could have given them a better system but I suppose these boys were in a hurry when they made their plans."

The colonel turned to the telegraph man and asked:

"Do you know where Tram is stopping?"

"I think that he is stopping here. At least when I came in I saw him in the writing room. He sat reading a copy of the Watertown Times. There's a long article in it about Algire and the arrival in Ashfield of the two Pinkerton men."

The colonel arose, saying: "Slip out if you can without his seeing you. Don't send this message. Hold it until you hear from me. Good night."

In a moment Colonel Blake and his young friend went down to the writing room. There at its long table sat the hairy, bearded stranger who was undoubtedly Tram—a well-dressed, good-looking man of about thirty-five years. He was of medium height. His eyes were gray, his hair and beard of a reddish brown color. The colonel and Shad sat down opposite him and began to write. Tram was talking with a man who sat beside him. His manner of speech was deliberate, his voice low and amiable, his words were well chosen. He was a man of some education. There was a touch of humor in certain of his remarks. When this appeared he snuffed and gave a little grunt as if thus to signalize his safe delivery. He said of Algire that he was likely to get more exercise than he needed. Tram might have passed for a reputable business man who would contribute to every good cause in his community. His face had a benevolent expression but his eyes were active, shrewd and cunning. Soon he arose, donned his overcoat which had been lying on the back of his chair, and walked to the office and out-of-doors.

Shad and the colonel returned to their room. Immediately the boy gave his chief an imitation of Tram's walk and manner of speech.

"Excellent!" Blake exclaimed. "Don't forget it. I may see a chance to use you."

Shad's memory retained some of the stranger's sayings. He went over them again and again before they got into bed.

"You need only a mustache and some whiskers to make a perfect Tram at night. I'll think over the situation and give you words for your part. I am sure that the Murners slub at the college can supply you with the needed hair."

In a moment the colonel added: "It is evident that Algire is in need of available cash. The O'Brien telegram indicates it. The fact that he goes to a place so near the center of excitement as Brockville almost proves it. He is desperate. My wife will bring him across the river."

"He should have had plenty of money after the killing of Perry," Shad suggested.

"There's many a slip possible in such a matter. The real murderer gets scared. He holds off. He is afraid to draw a large sum of money out of the bank. If he should be arrested he would have to tell what he did with it. That was a matter he hadn't thought of. He prefers to pay in small amounts. That would lead to a quarrel and such a quarrel would be a help to us. Then Algire was a poker player. Suppose the poker party had fellows in it like Charley Hetch and Old Awee Doran. They would get him between them and steady their aim in a night."

"They got into bed. The colonel was soon asleep, but Shad's day did not end so easily. He was elated by the fact that he enjoyed the friendship and shared the confidence of Colonel Blake. Far into the night he lay thinking of the great adventure ahead. Above all he was eager for a chance to offer further proof of his manhood to Colonel and Mrs. Blake. He was now nearly eighteen. He felt old enough and of sufficient importance even to marry.

They were up early in the morning. Colonel Blake wrote a letter to the local telephone manager who was his friend. In the letter he said:

"If anyone seeks to communicate to-day or tomorrow with one Ned Lever in Brockville it is, I think, important to the interest of law and order in this county, which I am sworn to protect, that the effort should fail. It is no less important to them that this letter and its subject should be kept in the strictest confidence. Please burn this when read."

They reached Canton about seven o'clock. The colonel went to his home and Shad to his lodgings. The colonel urged the boy to go to his house with him.

"You'll get another breakfast," he suggested with a smile.

That was a consideration which made the boy pause and reflect a moment. His linen was now a bit soiled. Moreover he got a certain joy from the thought that Ruth and her mother would regret his failure to appear at their home. Of course Colonel Blake would tell of the invitation and his answer. So with pleasant words he declined it, not forgetting to ask that he be remembered to Ruth and her mother. He was now getting to be a rather well-spoken lad with a great pride in his personal appearance.

It was a busy morning at the office. A little before noon the colonel summoned Shad to his room.

"My plans are complete," said the lawyer. "You and the sheriff are going with me. We leave on the four o'clock train for Ogdensburg. A friend of mine will take us up the river in his steam yacht. I have borrowed a lot of hair. We'll graft it on you and see how it looks."

He opened a box containing a wig, a mustache and a beard. They tried them. The hair and mustache were sufficiently accurate in shape and color. "Go to a barber and get your hair cut close," said the colonel. "Get your bag ready for a night away and bring it here. We shall leave for the train at three-forty-five. We shall have a chance to talk as we ride."

When they were sitting together in a car almost empty, the colonel drew a sheet of paper from his pocket. It contained a diagram and some writing.

"Here is the layout of the dock as I recall it," he explained. "If the ferry boat is in the way I will have it moved. On either side there will be a group of barrels, the kind of thing you look for on a dock. Among these barrels the sheriff and I will be concealed—he on one side and I on the other. You would have the center of the stage. It is a point of some danger. I would advise you to keep out of it and on the side. I think that I know an officer in Ogdensburg who could play the part of Tram well enough."

Shad's courage had not failed him. "I want to do it," the boy urged.

Greece Credited With First Pleasure Gardens

The early history of Greece, which begins about 800 B. C., provides no records concerning garden development. While that country is credited with the first major development of the arts, its social customs did not encourage extensive home ground plantings. As a result, many public areas were improved and the first real pleasure gardens formed. These contained seats for rest and accommodations for recreation. Extensive landscape plantings were not made in Greece, however, until after contact had been made with oriental and Egyptian gardens.

About 327 B. C. Alexander the Great invaded Persia and India. In these countries he found gardens similar to those in Babylonia which bore

"All right. You're an unusual lad and I'd like to see you get the credit for this. I'm sure you can do it and I'll make the job as safe as I can. You'll be standing close to the ferry house. When you hear the boat and the signal you will step to the center of the dock and answer with two whistles. I expect that Algire will come ashore."

"You will say: 'Let the boat go. A gentleman of your talents should not be traveling in a rowboat. O'Brien is here with a steam yacht. Come on!'"

"You will walk toward the rear of dock. If he suspects nothing he will follow. He may throw a light on you. If he does you will look the part. If he follows you we shall close in on him with Winchester rifles and signal for the searchlight on the yacht's deck."

"Winchester rifles!" Shad exclaimed.

"Yes. We mustn't kill the man if we can avoid it. The light will dazzle him. If he refuses to throw up his hands and tries to draw his weapon I shall put his pistol arm out of business. I'm fairly quick on the trigger myself. There'll be some kind of shelter for you. I shall not know just what or where it will be until I look the ground over. You will have time to get behind it before the shooting begins."

"Suppose he doesn't get out of the boat? He may smell a rat and put back for Canada."

"In that case we shall have to head him off with the yacht or run him down if necessary before he gets to the shore, which is far out in the stream. If he comes to that dock he is our man. The devil couldn't save him."

They reached Ogdensburg and drove to Hall's dock where the yacht and its commander were waiting. Sheriff Colewell had arrived in a buggy. He had driven across country with the rifles. The yacht was ready to move. A surgeon famous in that land was aboard. They set out at once on their little cruise up the river.

Now, the owner of the yacht was the successful merchant, Mr. Shaw of Ogdensburg. By telephone the colonel had requested the help of his boat and crew "in a matter concerning the public welfare." He had further requested him to see that a dozen empty barrels were put on board.

"I'm going to try to arrest a rather desperate criminal," the colonel had explained. "One or the other of us may get hurt a little. Therefore we must have a surgeon aboard. It's only a short trip. We shall be back at Ogdensburg in the morning."

When the nature and details of the enterprise were laid before the boat's commander in his luxurious cabin he insisted on expressing his hearty good wishes with a bottle of champagne.

"Wait till dinner time," said the colonel. "We'll drink a glass with you then. It is not to be a careless night. I used to enjoy stepping on this kind of a banana peel and slipping down just for the fun of it. It jars me to fall these days, so I step careful. How is the searchlight working?"

"It's a wonder—a kind of a hooded sun," said Shaw. "I could count the hairs in your mustache with it a quarter of a mile away."

Darkness had fallen when they reached the dock in Morristown. The abandoned ferry boat was well out of the way. The crew put the barrels ashore. The colonel and the sheriff placed them to their liking. Some fifty feet back from the dock stood a small building occupied during the day by a collector of customs. No one was on duty there, the ferry having stopped.

The colonel stood a moment looking at it. The boy was at his side.

"This will be your shelter," the lawyer whispered. "Get behind it as soon as you can."

They returned to the yacht. It put out in the river, swung about and anchored down-stream a little and about a hundred and fifty feet from the landing far out of the way of through traffic.

Dinner was ready. Soon they were seated with their host in the main cabin, with cocktails and hors-d'oeuvres on the table.

"When a man is ruined and ready for the junk heap, as I am, cocktails are a consolation," said the colonel. "Until one gets wrinkles and comes and a cheerful voice, a bald head and a rebellious stomach he has no need of the consolation of strong drink."

Shad did not fail to understand that the colonel's remark was aimed at him. He took a sip from his glass with a teaspoon just to see how it tasted. He felt now like a man among men and it seemed necessary that he should know the taste as well as the meaning of this thing they called "consolation."

Modern Contract Bridge

By Lella Hatterley

No. 12. No Trump Take-Outs of a Suit Bid of One

WHEN the next player passes after your partner's opening suit bid of one, you must try to keep the bidding open if you have a trick-and-a-half in your hand. With no bid-able suit, and with your trick-and-a-half divided between two suits, a negative response of one no trump should be given. If he understands the forcing system, your partner will not misinterpret such a take-out for a strength response, but will realize that you are merely paying him the courtesy of keeping the contract open in case he has additional values or another suit which he is eager for a second chance to show. A take-out with one no trump is always a quite definitely weak response.

Holding as many as 2½ honor-tricks with no assistance and no bid-able suit, using the yardstick measurement, you would take your partner out of his suit bid with a jump to two no trumps.

The jump to two no trumps is not forcing. While it is strong encouragement for him to go on, partner may pass, and should do so unless he holds additional honor strength or values not originally shown. When you find in your own hand the 3 honor-tricks necessary to complete the yardstick measurement for game at no trumps (a total of 5½ honor-tricks) and have decided that a no trump take-out is your best choice, you must have the courage to jump to game yourself, not leaving it to your partner's imagination to do so.

Taking Out When You Hold Trump Support

Whenever your partner opens with a minor suit bid of one, even though you hold strength or length in the suit, do not consider assisting his bid until you are sure you would not be better justified in taking it out with a major suit or a no trump. Even an overcall in a second minor is better than an assist because, while not immediately improving the situation, such a take-out may eventually lead to a more favorable bid. The difficulty of stretching a hand to the five-odd tricks necessary for game in a minor must always be kept in mind. Even when holding ample trump support for your partner's minor suit, a raise should be the last, not the first thing to consider.

With a four, three, three, three division, which promises no distributional or ruffing tricks, it is usually advisable to take your partner out of a major suit even when you hold adequate trump support. To illustrate, suppose your partner opened with one spade, and this was your hand:

S-Q 8 6 4 H-A J 4 D-K 10 7 C-K 9 8

Even with your 2½ honor-tricks you could barely count sufficient playing-tricks for a single raise. To show the full strength of your hand your only logical response would be two no trumps.

Such take-outs are not unusual. It often happens that the responding partner, while having more than sufficient honor strength to keep the bidding open, is lacking in sufficient playing tricks to support his partner's bid. In such a case the only recourse is a no trump take-out, either a negative response or a higher bid according to the count of honor-tricks in your hand.

Various responses to partner's one spade bid which has been passed up to you:

- S-K J 63 Bid four spades

Great English Traveler

Sir Richard Burton was the first Englishman to enter Mecca, the first to explore Somaliland, and the first to find the Great Lakes of Central Africa. He was so skilled in the lore of the desert that he could travel almost anywhere among the natives without detection. Of the many books written by this famous traveler, the most celebrated in his translation of the "Arabian Nights." After his death an unpublished manuscript translation of the "Scented Garden" from the Arabic, was burned by his widow on account of its pornographic content. The destruction of this paper has been considered a great loss to literature. The devoted wife of Burton arranged a unique tomb for him in the form of an Arab tent of stone and marble.

The girl has now received a letter from a French workman living in a village near Verdun. He describes the place where his little boy found the balloon. It was the place where the soldier fell.

Bonus Marchers Ousted by Troops After Fatal Battle With Washington Police—Pomerene and Miller; Appointed to R. F. C. Board.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

COMMUNISTS and criminals among the "bonus marchers" in Washington finally accomplished their purpose, bringing on a bloody conflict with the police that made it necessary for President Hoover to call on regular troops to restore order. In the fighting one of the veterans, a Chicagoan, was killed and scores of policemen and members of the bonus army were injured.

As explained by the President in a public statement, the treasury officials had been for several days trying to get the veterans to evacuate buildings that were to be demolished in the government's construction program. Thursday morning they did leave those buildings but afterwards several thousands of them attacked the police and the rioting was continued for hours. The district commissioners asked for help and by direction of Mr. Hoover 8,000 soldiers from Fort Myer, equipped with tear bombs and gas masks drove the veterans from their camps and immediately burned the shacks they had occupied. The main camp, at Anacostia across the Potomac, was the last to be razed, after all the women and children had been removed.

The bonus army members who had not already gone home departed for Johnston, Pa., where they had been invited to make their new headquarters.

POSSIBLY because of charges that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was being run too much for the benefit of the Republican party, President Hoover appointed a Democrat as a member of the board, and he was elected chairman to succeed Eugene Meyer. The new member is Atlee Pomerene, former senator from Ohio and assistant counsel in prosecuting the Teapot Dome oil cases. In announcing the appointment Mr. Hoover said Mr. Pomerene had had a long service as a lawyer, business man and member of the senate banking committee.

Atlee Pomerene

Later in the week the President completed the board by the appointment of Charles A. Miller, Republican banker of Utica, N. Y., who was to be made president of the corporation.

The corporation's board was thus lined up in this way:

Democrats—Pomerene, Harvey Couch of Pine Bluff, Ark.; Jesse Jones of Houston, Texas, and Wilson McCarthy of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Republicans—Secretary Mills of the treasury, C. A. Miller and Gardner Cowles of Des Moines, Iowa.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader of the house, declared the President, by giving the Democrats a majority on the board, could not dodge the responsibility for the new relief law. Mr. Hoover, he said, "has had his own way about the kind of relief law we should have. If it fails, the responsibility will be his. He vetoed the Garner relief bill."

The first loan to a state approved by the board was $3,000,000 to Illinois, chiefly for relief purposes in Chicago. Governor Emmerson had asked for $10,000,000 as a starter, and probably more will be loaned to Illinois in the near future.

WITH the formal approval of both Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt, one of whom will be the next President, a war on governmental waste has been declared by the National Economy League at a meeting in New York. Six of the nation's most prominent men were selected to form a national advisory council, and all of them accepted and promised to work in support of the league's program which is aimed against extravagance of national, state and municipal governments.

These six men are Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Ellhu Root, Newton D. Baker, Gen. John J. Pershing and Admiral William Sims.

The league plans first to attack the payment of federal funds to war veterans who suffered no disability in service. Investigation conducted by the league shows that this class of veterans is receiving nearly half of the 1933 appropriation of $927,849,000 for veterans of war. The league asked congress to revise downward the veterans' benefits to the extent of over $450,000,000; but congress contented itself in the last session with appointing an investigating committee.

MAYOR JIMMY WALKER of New York finally sent to Governor Roosevelt his reply to the charges of corruption and inefficiency made against him by Samuel Seabury, who asked the governor to remove the mayor from office. Walker categorically denied all the accusations and asserted they were made and timed for political purposes only.

Governor Roosevelt received the 20,000 word document without comment.

It was believed he would act on the matter quite promptly. Tammany is involved in the controversy, and Tammany has just formally endorsed the candidacy of Roosevelt for the Presidency.

TEXAS seems to have lined up in the wet column. In the recent Democratic primary the proposal that congress be petitioned to submit repeal or retention of a national prohibition to the states carried by a vote of 801,893 to 120,883. However, the dries asserted that not half the Democrats expressed themselves on the question.

In the race for the gubernatorial nomination Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, former governor, led the field of seven contestants by a handsome plurality, but the others polled enough votes to make necessary a run-off primary. In this, Gov. R. S. Sterling, who was second, will be her rival, and declares he is confident he will win, as he did two years ago in like circumstances. The Democratic nomination in Texas is of course equivalent to election. In some of the counties negroes were permitted to vote in the primary for the first time since reconstruction days.

DIRECTORS of the Chicago Board of Trade have decided to fight the order of the grain futures commission suspending trading in futures on the board for sixty days. The board's attorney was instructed to file a petition in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and to carry the appeal to the Supreme court if necessary.

The commission's decision against the board was the penalty the commission sought to impose for the board's refusal to admit the Farmers' National Grain corporation to clearing privileges.

In the exchange of statements concerning the commission's action the latter body referred to "efforts of the board's president to discredit the administration of the law or to satisfy some antagonism has now gone so far as to make unfounded predictions creating business uneasiness."

"Those charges are utterly false," said President Peter B. Carey. "It was necessary for us to act quickly to retain public confidence when the commission itself informed the public, through newspapers, that the Board of Trade was suspended for sixty days when the board did not receive its notification until 10:30 Monday morning. "We succeeded in doing this because we refused to be muzzleed by the political office holders who have taken action against us. We want the public to know that this situation was not initiated by the Board of Trade."

CONGRESSMAN SHANNON'S investigating committee in Kansas City has been hearing a lot more about the damage done to agriculture by the federal farm board. First the grain men were called in, and they described the "colossal and tragic failure" of the experiment in price fixing and the "withering effect" the farm board had had on everything it has touched. The Farmers' National Grain corporation came in for some bitter attacks that were supported by figures.

Next day there was a long line of witnesses actually engaged in production of farm crops, and they were no less emphatic in their condemnation of the farm board, which, they asserted, the farmers never wanted. They were positive in their declaration that the farming industry is opposed to continuation of the agriculture marketing act.

After another day of farm witnesses, the committee moved to St. Louis for two days, and there heard a lot more testimony to the same effect.

DECLARING that the "legitimate and necessary expenses" of a member of congress eat up his entire salary so that it is impracticable for him to lay up anything for his family, Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut says he will not be a candidate for reelection in the fall and will resign his seat as soon as it is convenient. He intends to seek a job that pays better, hoping that the return for his labors "will at least be on the right side of the ledger." Probably he will resume the practice of law, but he says that if the importance of any future service he might be able to render demands it, no sacrifice would be too great for him to make.

J. Q. Tilson

Mr. Tilson has been a member of the house for twenty-two years, and for six years he served as Republican floor leader.

GERMANY was fairly quiet during the week, which preceded her important parliamentary elections, but the dictatorship over Prussia was maintained, with Franz Bracht as minister of the Interior and chief assistant to Chancellor Von Papen, who had been made commissioner of Prussia. The action of Von Hindenburg had been upheld by the Supreme court at Leipzig. Bracht, who is lord mayor of Essen, was to all intents and purposes the dictator of the Prussian state.

On Tuesday President Von Hindenburg, considering that public order and security were no longer endangered, lifted the state of martial law that had been put on Berlin and the province of Brandenburg and that had been in effect for six days. The executive authority thus reverted to the president of police of Berlin and the governor of Brandenburg.

Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, minister of war, in a radio campaign speech, served notice on the world that unless Germany is granted equality and released from the limitations of the post-war treaties, she will establish her own security by reorganizing her armed forces.

GERMANY decided that she could safely adhere to the Franco-British agreement that was formulated at Lausanne, but her acceptance was qualified with a provision that Germany will not become involved in any bloc formed to deal with war debts, limiting her adherence solely to problems affecting the "European regime." Italy and Rumania are among the nations that have signed the pact.

ENEMIES of President Machado of Cuba are determined to compass the downfall of his regime and perhaps his death. The severe course of the government does not check them in the least and bombings, shootings and assassinations are of daily occurrence. The Communists, as always, are taking advantage of the situation to stir up all trouble possible, and red mobs carrying banners inscribed "Down with the Government" have been having bloody encounters with the Havana police.

Among Machado's foes are counted many of the younger members of the island's best families. The other night the police arrested twenty young women, most of them teachers in the Havana normal school, when they visited in a hospital a woman who had been injured by explosion of a bomb she had made. Other arrests included a normal teacher, two physicians and a customs broker. Soldiers killed three brothers accused of conducting a campaign of incendiarism on sugar mills in the Matanzas district.

ONE of those marine tragedies that not infrequently shock the world occurred in the Baltic sea off the coast of Holstein. The German naval training ship Niobe was caught in a sudden storm, upset and sank, and sixty-nine officers and cadets perished. The steamer Theodore Huss was nearby and her lifeboats picked up thirty-seven men. The only officers saved were the captain and the first mate. Most of the lost cadets were trapped in a classroom between decks.

The Niobe was formerly owned and commanded by Count Felix von Luckner, the famous sea raider of war times. In Chicago, where he was visiting, the count said: "She was a good ship, so strong I did not think she could be sunk."

AMONG the deaths of the week were those of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, a veteran of the United States diplomatic service, in Vienna; Fred Duesenberg of Indianapolis, pioneer automobile manufacturer; Calc Powers, central figure in a drama of politics and murder thirty years ago in Kentucky; Florenz Ziegfeld, musical comedy producer who "glorified" the American girl; Reginald Fessenden, eminent as a radio inventor; Alberto Santos-Dumont of Brazil, one of the earliest and most famous of aviators, and Enrico Malatesta of Italy, for years a leader of anarchists.

IN CELEBRATION of the one hundred and fifty-seventh anniversary of the first United States postal service established by act of the continental congress July 26, 1775, Maj. James Doolittle made a most notable airplane flight. In 15 hours and 40 minutes he covered more than 2,600 miles, passing over 14 states. By stage coach and saddle horse the distance would have taken about four years in continental days.

Flying with Doolittle was Miss Anne Madison Washington, a direct descendant of General Washington's brother John. Another passenger was A. F. Maple, representing the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, under the auspices of which the flight was made.

During the day they dropped 30 packages of letters, bearing air mail stamps, at various points in their journey of historic interest.

ANDREW W. MELLON, ambassador to Great Britain, returned for a short visit at his home, having been given leave of absence to attend to private business. He emphatically denied the report, printed in London, that he would resign. The ambassador refused to discuss international debts or the political campaign, but said of the latter, "I will do anything I can."

The great dam at Aswan across the Nile river and 231 miles south of Cairo, is now being heightened for the second time. When completed in 1934, the capacity of the Assuan reservoir will store five billion cubic meters of Nile water, which will be utilized for the year around irrigation of thousands of acres of land in the northern delta.

After 4,000 Years

A great cemetery has been discovered by an expedition working at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan, Persia. Scores of graves have been opened, revealing the remains of a people some 4,000 years old. Their racial origin is unknown, but it is possible that they form a connecting link between India and Mesopotamia. "It is an awe-inspiring sight," says Doctor Schmidt, the leader of the expedition, "to look upon the remains of a hundred people, dead ages ago, exposed with their mortuary equipment to the sunlight, in one great necropolis. Thus we found them in the main mound at Tepe Hissar."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

From Roswell Record—

The Record is sorry that Senator Bronson Cutting takes the attitude he does on the use of troops to quell the rioting bonus marchers at Washington. Perhaps it was inevitable that he should take this view. The Senator naturally sees things from the bonus point of view. He is antagonistic to the President and to the Republican leaders at Washington. In fact, he has voted largely against Republican programs during his term in the senate. But The Record regrets that the only Republican senator from New Mexico should be so antagonistic to the Republican party. It is unfortunate for the party, for his attitude undoubtedly defeated the Republican candidates in the last election and may defeat Republican candidates in elections to come, including the senator, himself. It is extremely unfortunate for the Republican party in the state. In the Republican party in the nation this attitude on the part of the New Mexican Senator seems to be regarded with indifference.

Senator Cutting in his statement intimates that the use of troops at Washington caused more trouble and declares it should have been left in the hands of the police. It was in the hands of the police and resort was had to weapons, including guns. One man was killed and many others wounded, some of them severely. The troops intervened and that was the end of that. There was no more shooting, no one killed and no one severely injured. The intervention of the troops undoubtedly prevented a heavy loss of life and much more rioting. The Senator just has his facts mixed.

It is probable that a few politically prejudiced and misguided politicians will use the bonus riot in attempts to make votes against the President. Such action is extremely unpatriotic. Back in the days when President Cleveland had to use troops to maintain order in the land, a few Republican politicians tried to use it against him. Their efforts reacted. The nation always has and always will uphold all proper efforts to maintain law and order.

We have noted, as others have noted, that the Bonus Army's march upon Washington was opposed by the American Legion as a body. It was recognized by them that any attempt to force or coerce our lawmakers was extremely unpatriotic and bad. The sober judgment of the Veterans of the Nation opposed such a step. Time has vindicated that judgment. The very march of the Bonus Army itself made votes against payment in congress and turned the public opinion of the nation against it.

Are the Railroads Doomed?

People who say that the railroad has outlived its usefulness and must make way for the truck might well ponder over the statements of Professor Wm. Z. Ripley of Harvard University, who said in a recent article in the Los Angeles Times that 6,250,000 5-ton trucks would be required to move the traffic now handled by railways of the United States.

Such a fleet of trucks, says Professor Ripley, would form a solid column 30,000 miles long or a procession ten trucks wide, with trucks fender to fender, reaching from New York to San Francisco.

It is unbelievable that county, state and federal governments could afford to construct and maintain, at expense to the taxpayer, the additional tens of thousands of miles of improved highway which such truck traffic would require. Even were this possible it is the opinion of Professor Ripley that "veritable chaos would ensue were the nation forced to rely upon the highways alone for commercial intercourse."

Railroads given either reasonable free rein, or protected from unregulated and government-subsidized competition, can quickly adapt themselves to modern conditions, coordinate truck and bus with the rails, and provide a service to the public unexcelled in economy, convenience and speed.

Whatever arguments may be advanced in favor of the truck, railways remain and will continue to be the single vital factor in our national transportation system.

Gave Bride Blood; Now He Sues Her Washington.-Albert P. Hall, 908 B street, N. E., who last March gave blood for a transfusion to save the life of his bride, now is suing for absolute divorce from Verna Mae Hall, whom he charges with deserting him and marrying another man. The petition filed in District Supreme court through Attorney H. P. Long, complains the wife left home for days at a time shortly after their marriage less than a year ago, and that on September 14 of this year she married the man Hall names as co-respondent in Rockville, using the name of Eleanor Gainey. Mrs. Hall cut an artery in her right arm last March, a month after her marriage and was taken to George Washington hospital in a critical condition. The husband, who gave his blood for a transfusion, said it was the sixth attempt she had made to take her life.

ELECTRIC WIZARD DIES IN MYSTERY Fired as Middy for Franks in Electricity. Baltimore, Md.-Sulcde or experiment? Which caused the death of John A. Sygon, nineteen-year-old former midshipman, whose wizard-like pranks in electricity caused his resignation from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis? The young genius was found dead in his bed by his father, Col. Joseph R. Sygon, U. S. A. In one hand the youth clutched a tube of gas used to deaden pain. The youth had died of asphyxiation. The coroner's verdict was "suicide," but Colonel Sygon insists that his son died while carrying his experiments past the limit of safety. The phenomenal scientific gifts of young Sygon nearly set his austere Naval academy on its ear while he was there. He established a system of remote control in his room which enabled him to operate the elevators, the lighting system, clocks, bells and even the telephones. All sorts of queer things began to ensue. Finally the mysterious wires were located, and there was only one thing for the young cadet to do-resign. After young Sygon's resignation, he was offered positions by several large electrical firms, who felt that they could use the talents of the young jackknives, but refused.

Captain Sticks to Job at Sea as Home Burns Norfolk, Va.-A story of how a coast guard captain stuck to his work of trying to salvage a sinking vessel while his home burned to the ground within plain sight was related here. George R. Freeman, representative of the underwriters who carried insurance on the lost tawler St. Rita told the story. The St. Rita, he said, bound from the Carolina coast to Hampton with 175 barrels of fish, went aground on a quicksand near the Paul Gamiet coast guard station on the North Carolina coast. Coast Guard Capt. G. G. Snow and his crew rescued Capt. Frank Favolora and crew, and were rushing salvaging operations when Capt. Snow saw his home afire 200 yards distant on the shore. He decided it was useless to try to save it and continued with his work. His house was destroyed. The St. Rita, too, was a total loss.

Husband Kills Suing Wife; Takes Own Life Kansas City, Mo.-The filing of a divorce suit by Mrs. Anna Couch against Thomas K. Couch led to his shooting her fatally on a downtown street and then killing himself. The wife was forty-three years old and the husband was fifty-one. They had been separated only a short time before the shooting. They had lived together about twenty years, Mrs. Couch said before her death. When the divorce case was called by Judge Allen C. Southern a deadly silence fell over the assemblage because Mrs. Couch was at that time in a hospital. She had filed the divorce suit a week before.

Father of Six Fined $5 for 25-Cent Pipe Theft Binghamton, N. Y.-The next time, if any, William P. Athen, thirty-five-year-old father of six children, decides to steal a pipe he probably will get a worthwhile one. Athen was convicted and fined $5 for stealing a 25-cent pipe from a Binghamton store. Robbed While in Jail Portland, Ore.-While Paul Escalavis was serving a jail term, some one stole $130 of clothing from his hotel room, he complained to police.

London From a Bus Top

Steam Driven Motor Truck on a London Street.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

LONDON'S latest bridge-inspired song hit might be "Waterloo Bridge Is Falling Down." The bridge will be replaced by a new span.

Many travelers now are seeing London from a bus top, where they enjoy watching perky messenger boys with their tin-can hats cocked on three hairs, the huge policemen, the sandwich men and the clattering crowds of men and women on the streets.

In a private car the least snobbish feels himself aloof and superior. On a personally conducted tour one is only the pea tossed in the dishpan of a careless conductor's rhetoric. In a taxicab even the very reckless cannot refrain from watching the meter. But from a bus top one looks down, part and parcel of all he sees, understanding and being thrilled by a thousand activities.

It is true that one sees the centuries without order or sequence; but that is as it should be in London, where today, tomorrow, and 1,800 years elbow each other companionably.

Perhaps one leans over the rail to see a lordling sprawled at the wheel of a great car, all color and silver, on that Watling street which was one of the four thoroughfares by the aid of which the Romans held Britain; or to watch those who are to fly to Paris, stepping into the car that is to carry them to the flying field at Croydon.

Next, the bus passes a porter's lodge in which a duchess lives at the gates of the great house she can no longer afford to occupy. Or the brass triangle near the Marble Arch, which marks the site of Tyburn tree, a common gallows away back in 1193. Or that street of pallid houses built by a French architect that Napoleon's officers might have fitting quarters when he had conquered England. Or the horse guards, where massy sentinels in scarlet and buckskin and silver bestride horses of black silk. One marvels at the horses more than at the men. However do they train them to stand so still?

Reminders of the Past.
Yonder is Lansdowne passage, leading from Piccadilly into Curzon street. The street is the citadel of the highest fashion, lined with gloomy houses. A steel bar is still set across the passage, that no highwayman may gallop his horse through it to safety in the fields, as one formed the reprehensible habit of doing a hundred years ago.

Nearby is the Shepherd's market, which is in its essentials that a shopping district in London in Dick Turpin's time, and a little public house whose customers are almost wholly the James Yellowplushes of today. A wealth of gossip about their masters might be gathered there by one admitted to their intimacy.

On Whitehall one may see the window through which a king walked on his way to the block. Over the rail of Hyde park one may glimpse the little gravestones of the dogs' cemetery; then hurriedly glance at the new Devonshire house, wherein apartments may be leased for 200 years at an incredible number of pounds the year.

Trafalgar square is the natural center of London for the adventurer. It is true that Charing Cross, a long stone's throw down the Strand, is accepted as the geographical center, if there can be a geographical center of a map, which is messed about as is that of London by the oxbow-head of the River Thames.

At any rate, the 600 square miles of the greater city include all parishes any part of which may be within 12 miles of the cross, or of which the whole may be within 15 miles.

Going From Nelson's Column.
But Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square is the North pole to the visitor's compass. If he were able to mount to Nelson's eminence, as steep-jacks sometimes do, and there revolve upon his heel, he would discover that each quarter turn would reveal a new aspect.

Down Whitehall is the ancient City of Westminster, with the houses of parliament and the abbey. The Strand opens to Fleet street and the offices of the great newspapers.

Over Covent garden, a bit more to the left, one might sight the Bank of England and the heart of the old Roman city. Another turn left and the markets, the Charterhouse, the British museum.

Left once more and the theater district; Soho, where are the foreign restaurants beloved of novelists, and the fashionable shopping districts. Just a bit more and clubland and Mayfair and a glance at Buckingham palace.

Then Hyde park and the Admiralty, and the circle is complete. All reached best by busses.

Trafalgar square is a place of perilous delights. Eight streets debouch upon it, each filled with roaring traffic coming from unexpected angles, and made more perilous to an American by the English insistence upon the left-hand turn.

One leaps from safety island to safety island across these streets, as if they were stepping stones in a torrent—omnibuses, steam lorries, donkey carts, limousines, the small, barn-swallowlike cars which taxation has thrust upon English motorists, brewers' vans drawn by elephantine horses, screaming motorcycles with the latest editions.

Once Trafalgar square was the king's mews, where various monarchs stabled their horses. Honest artisans shaped weapons for English gamecocks in Cockspur street. Fronting on the square is the national gallery, crammed with treasures of art. Of all the 1,500-odd churches in London, the visitor is apt to carry away the most vivid memory of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. The gray and white and black pillars of its majestic portico gain added value, of course, when seen across the open square.

In a little house which once stood here, Ben Johnson wrote "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," which some people hold to be one of the finest ballads in the English language, though deprecating the sentiment. Heine and Ben Franklin and Charles Dickens have roomed close by.

The Mall and Buckingham Palace.
From Trafalgar, too, the visitor can peer through the fine Admiralty arch down the Mall, at the farther end of which stands Buckingham palace. Eventually he will discover this to be a large and almost violently ugly stone-fronted building behind a tall wrought-iron fence, and that time is wasted on it except during those stirring moments when the soldier guard is changed.

He may recall that it was down the Mall that Charles I walked to the headman's block, and that it was named after the French game of paille maille that Charles II played upon it.

Across the square is the statue of Charles I, perhaps the finest equestrian figure in London. One bridges centuries of English history by a glance at it. Queen Eleanor's cross first stood upon this site, the twelfth—or was it the thirteenth?—cross erected by the sorrowing King Edward I to mark the places where her casket was set down for the night on the long route from Lincoln to her tomb in Westminster. That was in the Thirteenth century.

Much is to be seen hereabouts in the compass of a short walk before definitely embarking on a cruise through London's streets. A turn to the left leads to Maiden lane, where Voltaire and Turner once lived. One may pause at Hule's oyster house for a snack, not because of hunger, but because this has been the resort of English actors since 1750. Fielding and Pope and Goldsmith used to frequent it when it was "The Bedford Head" and the home of the Remonin club. A vast white-painted door, set with brass like the quarter-deck of a yacht, a populous bar behind which two lively maids are busy, a great fire under a marble mantelpiece.

Lively Covent Garden.
Just around the corner is Covent garden, once the convent garden of the abbey of Westminster. It has been the great market for fruits and vegetables ever since 1634. A lively, sad, industrious place, in which the coster's donkeys furnish the comic relief. Under the great piazza, which was a century ago London's most fashionable walk, old women sit all summer long shelling peas. Something of a comedown from the patches and ruffles, and the small swords and the snuff.

It is to be feared the Covent garden opera has somewhat declined. At all events, when one visits the fine old house two jazz bands may be heard offering interminable tom-tomming for a horde of dancers.

Here is Bow street and its police station, where the scarlet waistcoats of the "Bow street runners" gave the world its idea of a uniformed police force—or so Bow street says. On the Russell street corner is Will's coffee house, where Dryden sat in judgment on plays, and which is just as it used to be, above the street level. Charles Lamb lodged at No. 20 Russell street and the National Sporting club, most aristocratic of boxing clubs, is at 48 King street. At No. 4 York street Dr Quincey wrote his "Confessions." Half the charm of London is in its history.

Lesson for August 14

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DUTIES TO MAN.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Leviticus 19:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Interpretation of the Commandments.

The first table of the law sets forth the duties Godward, the second toward, the fifth commandment is the centerpiece of the Decalogue, keystone of the Sinaiic arch.

I. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12). This commandment rests upon the fundamental basis of fact that parents stand with their children in the place of God.

1. How this commandment may be broken.

(a) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents: (1) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman." (2) By living such lives as cast reproach upon them. (3) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(b) By disobedience. It is right that the child should obey its parents and it is the responsibility of the parent to see that obedience is rendered.

(c) By not supporting them in old age. When parents are no longer able to care for themselves it is the children's duty to care for them.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(a) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3). (b) That thou mayest live long upon the earth.

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 17). The Scriptures show man's life to be sacred. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

By sinful anger (Matt. 5:22). By hatred (1 John 3:15). By immoderate use of meats and drinks. By immoderate recreation. By selling adulterated foods and diseased meats. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees. By failing to provide proper food and clothing for wives and children. By sending children to toll in shops and factories. By suicide. By infanticide. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14). This is a bulwark thrown around the home. The home is not only the oldest of God's institutions, but the foundation of them all. This commandment may be broken:

By unclean thoughts, affectionless purposes, and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19). By unchaste conversation. By wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; 2 Pet. 2:14). By immodest apparel. One's clothing is a strong factor in revealing character. By actual adultery. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15). This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. Many things are legally right which are morally wrong. This commandment may be broken:

By taking that which belongs to another. By using false weights and measures. By selling adulterated foods and inferior goods. By extortion. By employers defrauding employees, and employees failing to do honest work or to put in full time. By borrowing and not returning. By going into debt, knowing that payment is impossible. By usury. By graft. By lying advertisements. By making assignments to escape payment of debts. By gambling. By strong nations oppressing weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16). The sin aimed at by this commandment is a most deadly one—that of lying. This commandment may be broken:

By actual lying. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God. By slander—speaking against another falsely with a purpose to injure. By false-bearing (Lev. 19:16). This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness. By creating a false impression (Exod. 23:1). By a breach of promise. By withholding the truth. By perverting the meaning of a statement. By exaggeration. By flattery. By recommending for a position of honor and trust a man who is unfitted for it. By granting a church letter to a man who is unworthy.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17). This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another.

GLEANINGS

Each one sees what he carries in his heart.—Goethe.

Consistency is a jewel that is often traded for success.

The first lesson in Christ's school is self-denial.—M. Henry.

Men may rise on stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things.—Tennyson.

POULTRY

NO REVENUE FROM MALES IN FLOCK

Wise Poultryman Will Get Rid of Roosters.

The only object of keeping male birds is to get eggs for hatching and that season is past. The farmer should remember that the rooster is consuming feed which neutralizes the profits from a laying hen. A still more important reason for disposing of the males is the production of infertile eggs. We hear a great deal about egg quality. The best way to improve egg quality is to produce infertile eggs.

Fertile eggs do not keep well. Five per cent of all eggs marketed are a total loss because of chick development. Besides a large proportion of rot is due directly to chick development being retarded. The object of a hen in producing eggs is to reproduce herself. If males are present and the egg is fertilized, the embryo starts to develop within the body of the hen. When a proper temperature is again maintained this development continues. There will be a slow growth at any temperature above 70 degrees Fahrenheit. A temperature of 84 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit for three days will produce as great a development as one day at a temperature of 103. A temperature of 104 to 110 for one day will produce an embryo as far developed as three days at a temperature of 103.

Production of infertile eggs is especially advantageous during the summer. Such eggs do not develop germs, stand shipment well, withstand heat, are easily preserved, slow to decay and cost less. The hen will lay as well or better with no males present in the flock. An infertile egg can thus be produced and, if unwashed, may keep indefinitely. A large percentage will dry up before they will rot.—Missouri Farmer.

Weight Important Point in Breeding of Chicks

An advantage not often mentioned, that early hatched chicks have over late ones of the American and English breeds, is the greater weight. This is no little consideration when the hens are sold after a year's lay with a cut of 25 to 40 per cent in price for hens under four and one-half pounds.

The Massachusetts experiment station has compiled records covering six years' work with Rhode Island Reds. Each year, the flock was made up of two batches, eight weeks apart, one in March and one in May. The chicks were out of the same matings, fed and cared for alike as nearly as possible. At twenty-one weeks of age, the average weight of the March pullets was exactly five pounds; the best year, they weighed 5.18 pounds and the poorest year 4.83 pounds. The May pullets averaged 4.27 pounds for the six years, 4.42 pounds being the best and 4.10 pounds the poorest. The comparative weights remain about the same throughout life.—Wallace's Farmer.

Movable House Best

The light, movable growing shelter is coming into more general use by poultrymen everywhere. It is regarded by those who speak with authority as the greatest improvement in poultry housing since the introduction of the open-front house. On a suitable range it provides conditions similar to those that are enjoyed by wild birds—easy movable quarters, freedom from mites, ample ventilation, cool roosting quarters, no overheating or sweating, no germ-laden, dusty air.—Los Angeles Times.

Broody Birdies

Broody birds cause loss of eggs, loss of freshness, breakage of eggs. Take the broody birdie off the nest after dark and snip a celluloid band on the leg. Put her back on a slat-bottomed nest for three days. If she has to be put in a slat nest three times for broodiness, it is time she was eaten. Fatten her and use the ax. Broodiness is an inherited trait, just as certainly as shank color, plumage color or other distinguishing marks.

Reduces Flock Costs

One way to reduce flock costs is to cull the year-old hens and retain them another year, states University of Illinois poultryman. Such hens have gone through their most expensive depreciation. If they are well bred they should make good producers another year, though their egg yield may not be quite as high as pullets. Keeping old hens increases hazard of disease, and where possible it is desirable to brood a new lot of chicks and replace the flock with pullets.

Painting the Brooder

Unless the premises where chicks are kept and all appliances used are known to be absolutely free from lice and mites, and it is certain that chicks have never been exposed to them, it is a wise precaution to paint or spray the brooder with a mixture of four parts crude petroleum and one part kerosene, allowing it to dry thoroughly before using. Puffs of insect powder on the chicks when in the brooder, about once a week, will destroy any lice.

Merry Christmas. Shortly before the holidays one of those personal tragedies overtook Jack's mother with the result that she had to acquire some artificial teeth. She was sensitive about it, and had told no one outside the family, though, of course, Jack had heard it discussed in the home circle. Imagine his mother's feelings, then, when, the day after Christmas, she heard her son boasting to a neighbor: "Gee, we had a dandy Christmas this year! We got a new car, and a

BABY "WENT TO ALMOST NOTHING"

Then Eagle Brand saved the day!

"We ARE sending you a picture of our daughter, Alice Ann," writes Mrs. Joel Buttgercit, 132 Arch St., Verona, Penn., "to show you what Eagle Brand has done for our baby when three other baby foods failed.

"Our baby weighed 9 pounds at birth and went to almost nothing. Then we tried Eagle Brand, and with her first feeding, she seemed satisfied. She started to pick up right away and at eight months weighed 26 pounds and had 8 teeth.

"Writing could never express our gratitude for what Eagle Brand has done for our baby."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

Every picture and letter published by The Borden Company is voluntarily sent us by a grateful parent or other relative.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Brady and Mrs. Emma Banos attended the dance at White Oaks last Saturday night. Mike is a member of the "Revelers," the snappy orchestra which will play for the big Jericho Club dance at Lutz Hall, Saturday, August 20.

This office is in receipt of a nice postcard, showing the White Way of the city of Los Angeles from Mayor Geo. T. McQuillen. His worship seems to be having the time of his life attending the Olympic Games and watchin' the bathin' beauties, etc.

Harry Straley of Ancho was a Carrizozo business visitor on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Sanchez, the Misses Carmel and Louise Pino were week end visitors at the Abe Sanchez and Benigno Gallegos homes.

Jim Luna of Lincoln reports that the dance given at that place last Friday night was quite a success, and wishes to announce another dance for tonight, August 12. Music by "Heavy" Stewart's orchestra from Capitan. All are invited.

T. G. Grafton was down from Angus Tuesday on business and while here paid this office a pleasant visit. Coming from the mountain regions, we think that T. G. was responsible for the big relief we enjoyed on that afternoon in the way of a nice shower. Come down again, Mr. Grafton.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Marquez of Tucuman passed through here Tuesday night and went on to El Paso where Mr. Marquez received medical treatment. On the return trip they stopped over for a visit of one week with the Saturnino Chavez family and other relatives.

R. A. Hunnicutt and son William were here from Capitan Saturday. They said that rain was badly needed on the Nogal-Mesa, where their ranch is situated.

Mrs. Jane Patterson and son Dan of Denver passed through here Tuesday evening and went on to Alamogordo for a visit with the J. E. Farley family. They came up yesterday, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Farley, and after visiting for the day with Mrs. Elsa Charles and two daughters they returned to Alamogordo. Mrs. Patterson is Mrs. Farley's youngest sister.

Earl Black of El Paso and E. S. Jones of Los Angeles came in this morning and spent a portion of the day attending to some business, after which they shook hands with old friends. Both gentlemen were once residents of Oscura, and Earl, being a printer, was at one time employed on the Outlook. They will leave for El Paso this afternoon.

William Booth Dies

At an early hour yesterday morning, William Booth, old resident of Lincoln County, passed away at the age of 84 years and 10 days.

Mr. Booth came to this county about 30 years ago from Maryland and at that time, he was employed at the coal mines at what was then known as Coalora, a short distance west of Capitan. After the closing of the mines, he came to Carrizozo, where he lived until his death. Up until a few years ago, he had the contract for supplying residents in the outskirts of town with water and was succeeded by Chas. Smith, who still operates the water wagon. "Uncle Billy," as he was called by those who had known him for so many years, was a quiet, unassuming man, and many incidents are often recalled of happenings in early days in which he was connected, but none in which he lost a single friend. On the contrary, he kept his acquaintances and continually added to his list.

He leaves a wife and many old friends to mourn his passing. Funeral services were held at the home yesterday afternoon at 3:30, with Rev. Jordan conducting the same and the remains interred in the local cemetery.

A party of five people came down from White Oaks Wednesday consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn, Mesdames I d a Gallacher, Laura Sullivan and Miss Edna White, all of the above named ladies attending the meeting of the Missionary Society at the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer. Mrs. Gallacher and Miss White arrived here the latter part of last week from Oklahoma City and will be the guests at the Cleghorn home for the remainder of the month. Mrs. Gallacher is a sister to Mrs. Cleghorn, J. B. and Clyde Collier. She has been a resident of Oklahoma City for the past three years.

A. P. Jones was in town from his ranch beyond the Malpais on Wednesday of this week. A. P. is an ardent baseball fan.

W. R. Lovelace was a Carrizozo business visitor from his ranch near Corona yesterday.

John Scharf was down from White Oaks Tuesday and while in town made this office a friendly call.

Muy Grande, Bonito Peaches

This office gratefully acknowledges the receipt of a box of fine peaches from our old friend, Perry Humphrey at Tularosa. His ad appeared in this paper for the past two weeks. His peaches are now ripe and ready for purchasers. If you want to see choice fruit, call at this office and look them over—better yet, drive down and make a purchase.

Another Letter from Charles Gordon

The Outlook office is in receipt of another very interesting letter from Chas. Gordon, formerly of Fort Stanton but now at New Orleans, La. He speaks of being on an excursion from New Orleans to Pensacola, Florida, a distance of 750 miles, all for the paltry sum of $2.00 for the round trip. Sounds incredible, as Ripley says, "Believe it or Not," we certainly don't doubt his word. Charlie seems to be enjoying his stay at that place, for they have the best of radio programs all the day long. He sends his best regards to his friends in Lincoln County, as he says that so many people he knows, by reading the Outlook, "it seems as if he were home again."

We, the undersigned committee, beg leave to report that we have audited the books and accounts of E.M. Brickley, Trustee of the Carrizozo Community Hall for the period beginning Jan. 27, 1931 and ending Aug. 6, 1932, both dates inclusive, and we've checked the combined audits and find all correct. We have examined all checks, deposits and find all correct. We have initialed the check book stub, the balance as shown on the books of the bank and the machine list of checks and deposits. We find that the bank records show a balance of 25.87 and the Trustee a balance of 15.87, the difference is due to the fact that check No. 729 to Maude L. Blaney has not been presented for payment.

We have certified an original and four copies of this report, and we have requested that one copy be delivered to the Carrizozo Outlook and one copy to the Lincoln County News for publication, one copy to be posted in the local postoffice and another copy to be filed with the
