Carrizozo Evens Up Things With Tularosa

Carrizozo came from behind last Sunday with a volley of hits in the 8th inning which netted them six runs and gave them victory over the Tullie boys by a score of 9 to 5. Carrizozo held the lead with a 3-0 score up until about the 4th inning, when Tularosa at last came to life and in the next 3 frames had our boys in such a high pitch of nervousness, that they began fumbling the ball all over the infield, and coupled with several wild heaves, Tularosa forged ahead with 5 runs. But they also lost their bearings in that eventful 8th and with the bases loaded and two men out, Louie Baca, who had a 2 and 3 count on him, at the plate, came across with a scorching double to left which spelled disaster for the visitors. "Red," pitching for Carrizozo, contributed to his own victory by poling out a homerun with a mate aboard. Walter LaFleur robbed his team of two scores when in racing from second to third he was hit by a hard hit ball which would have gone for a safety. Tough luck, Walt!

Lupe Flores tried his hand at hypnotizing when he beamed Tony "Skeeter" Perea, but little Tony proved to be his master as a dopester when the Carrizozo catcher made an attempt to nip Chacon of Tularosa off third base. The throw went wild and both runner and baseman rolled in a heap on top of the bag. When they got to their feet, Chacon was so dumfounded that instead of heading for home he dashed for the pitcher's plate. Umpire Gallacher and pitcher "Red" side-stepped and got set, as they thought the fellow was coming after them. This boner brought forth outbursts of laughter from the crowds—some yelling "kill him," others, "hog-tie 'im"—but Wayne Van Schoyck solved the perplexing problem when he said, "let Sheriff Brady convey him to Las Vegas immediately." That took the pepper out of Tularosa and the long faces shifted to the righthand dugout, including umpire Salcido and Joe Chavez. Some game!

Attention, Masons!

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., will hold a Special Communication Saturday night, Sept. 24, for the purpose of conferring the Third Degree. This will be Past Masters' night and the degree will be conferred entirely by the Past Masters. All Master Masons are cordially invited.

R. E. Lemon, Sec'y.

The Jericho Club dance at Lutz Hall last Saturday night was by far, the largest given since the club began its series of popular dances. The Revelers were highly complimented on their music and a general expression of approval was given to the event. The next Jericho Club dance will be given at the same hall, Saturday night, Oct. 22.

ANCHO NOTES

George Henderson is spending a few days in Ancho and Jicarilla this week looking after mining interests.

D. R. Williams and brother of Oklahoma are laying a pipeline from the Dale wells to their property in the Jicarillas this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Penix and daughter Mary Catherine of Corona spent Sunday with the Frame family. They breakfasted by a camp fire in the forest. Mrs. Chappell of Corona accompanied them.

Miss Frances Pruett was the week-end guest of Miss Edwina Peters at the Peters ranch home.

The dances given Saturday night at the Barnes ranch and in the Jicarillas were both well attended.

Mrs. C. C. Belknap was hostess to the Ancho Bridge Club Saturday evening. High score was made by Mr. Grover Pruett, who also made a little slam. Low score went to Mr. J. M. Frame. Refreshments of watermelon, cake and coffee were served.

A number of Ancho people attended the dance at Carrizozo. One couple, Miss June Caldwell and John Straley were married before the dance, surprising their many friends.

Herbert Ellis and brothers have sold their mines in the Jicarillas.

The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. Allen Kile, Saturday, September 24.

Word of the death of a sister of the Pruett brothers was received Friday. She was the eldest of the family and resided in Hooker, Okla. Her mother, Mrs. S. J. Pruett of Pastura, hastened to her bedside.

Woman's Club of Carrizozo

The first meeting of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo was held at the home of Mrs. Paul Mayer. Hostesses were Mmes. Glassmire, Young, Snyder, Clouse, Misses Thelma White and Ella Brickley.

Delegates to be sent to the State Convention at Alamogordo on Oct. 3-4, are: Mmes. J. V. Taylor, Clouse and Glassmire.

Miss Thelma White was installed as secretary by Mrs. Lemon. Flowers were judged and Mrs. Geo. Titworth won the prize, while Mmes. Young and Clouse received honorable mention.

The following program was in charge of Mrs. McCammon:

Guitar Solo, Mrs. Clouse; Debate—"Resolved that the Woman's Club is a benefit to husbands." Affirmative: Mmes. Lemon and Spencer. Negative: Mmes. Blaney and Paul Mayer. Judges: Miss Melaas, Mmes. Jordan and Lawson, all of whom decided in favor of the affirmative.

Mrs. M. U. Finley will entertain the Carrizozo Bridge Club at her home Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Doyle Rentfrow, who has been visiting her parents at Albuquerque for the past two weeks, returned home Wednesday morning.

Good-bye

Dillon vs. Miller

It looks as though the Republican nomination for governor lies between Prager Miller and R. C. Dillon, with Dillon having much the advantage.

There is always the possibility, of course, that neither Miller nor Dillon may be nominated and that some one not yet mentioned may be the nominee.

On the Democratic side there is a strong underneath campaign being made for Governor Seligman for renomination. He wants the nomination. Of that there is no doubt, but whether he can get it is another question.

During his administration he alienated Democrats all over the state, has aroused antagonism among the voters of both parties and, generally, his administration has been a flat failure.

The conditions have been hard for him, but beyond that he has gone out of his way to make enemies, both among Democrats and Republicans.

He may yet get the nomination, but if he does and the Republicans name Dillon, Seligman will be badly beaten. - Roswell Record.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Sager left Wednesday for Santa Fe where they will spend the week-end with the Chas. Spence family.

The Capitan Convention

The Republican convention to select delegates to the state convention at Albuquerque met at Capitan Monday with a large attendance. The committee on resolutions strongly endorsed the National administration, commended President Hoover, all of which was unanimously adopted.

J. B. French was elected as chairman of the County Republican Committee and Johnny E. Brady was elected secretary. The Carrizozo portion of the delegation were: Dr. C. E. Freeman, J. H. Fulmer, J. B. French and Meyer Barnett. The convention was harmonious in every detail and the delegation to the state convention went unimpaired.

The Model Cleaners cleaning and pressing plant has changed hands again and is now known as the C & F Cleaners, and conducted by Hale & Windham. These young men are experienced in that line of business and their motto is: "Your Personal Appearance is Our Chief Concern." See their ad on page 8 and give them a trial.

LOCAL MENTION

Mrs. J. D. Mueller, grandmother of our home boy, Marshall Beck, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beck since the latter part of July, will leave for her home in St. Louis Thursday evening. Mrs. Mueller has enjoyed a pleasant visit and is high in her praise of the climate in this section of the state. During her stay, she has made many lasting friends who will regret to hear of her departure.

Judge A. H. Harvey, Roy Shaffer and A. L. Burke left yesterday afternoon to be present at the second day's session of the Republican state convention at Albuquerque. The second day is when the real work begins; the first being taken up with appointment of committees and listening to the keynote speech, so they will be there at the big end of the game.

Attorney J. E. Hall and E. M. Brickley spent last Sunday in Mountainair.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson and Doctor's sister, Mrs. Williams, left for Santa Fe and Albuquerque and will spend the week-end in that section, returning home Sunday or Monday.

Miss Frances Charles came up from Alamogordo last Saturday to visit her mother, Mrs. Elsie Charles and sister Virginia. She was present at the Jericho Club dance, returning to Alamogordo so as to be able to attend school Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French and Sheriff J. E. Brady left Wednesday morning for Albuquerque to be in the foreground for the big Republican State Convention which held its first session yesterday.

Gerald and Kivas Tully of Glencoe were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday and attended the dance given by the Jericho Club that night. They complimented the dances very highly and said they had a pleasant time. There will be another big dance on October 22.

Miss Dorothy Dozier came down Saturday from Tucumcari and attended the dance given by the Jericho Club that night. During her stay, she was a guest of Miss Katherine Kelt. She returned home Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Trimble and children left Sunday for Artesia, after receiving news to the effect that a brother-in-law, R. T. Smith, had passed away at that place. They were accompanied by their nieces, the Misses Mable Champion and Florence Wake, who had been here on a visit.

Stephen Wohlgenuth and Emilio Duran were here from Tularosa Sunday to attend the Carrizozo-Tularosa ball game. Mr. Wohlgenuth and a brother, who was killed in the world war, chummed with Marshall St. John, one of our boys, when in the front lines.

Miss Marie Brunk, our county nurse, was a visitor at Las Cruces last Sunday.

Mrs. Elsie Charles entertained the Wednesday Bridge Club at the home of Mrs. Morgan Lovelace Wednesday evening.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Preparations for our first football game are well under way. Pep meetings are being held and everyone is singing the new school song. Have you heard it? It's good! Members of the Pep Squad were elected Monday. Post-Graduates: Katherine Kelt, Georgia Peckham. Seniors: Jane Kimbrell, Walt Grumbles. Juniors: Marvin Peckham, Mary Lewis. Sophomores: Carl Freeman, Maudie Warden. Freshmen: Norman Kent, Edith Norman. All are hard at work stirring up student loyalty. All students should do their part toward winning each game.

Last week, Miss Brunk paid us a visit and gave us a talk on her pet subject, "Sanitation." Typing has become very popular this year and the classes are large. Home Economics seems to be favored with the same popularity.

The Freshmen had a picnic in Nogal Canyon. Everyone reports a good time.

There will be a football game Saturday with Tularosa. Let's see everyone out. We need your support.

On Wednesday, the Post-graduates entertained us. It seemed like old times to have them with us again. The program was exceptionally good. Dorothy Dozier played a piano solo. A talk of local and historical interest was given by Georgia Lesnett. Sat Chavez, Jr., and Reid Dudley entertained us with old-time fiddling.

Business Men's Club to Alamogordo Wednesday

A fairly large crowd of the Carrizozo Business Men's Club were guests of the Rotary Club in Alamogordo Wednesday evening. They report the hospitality of the Rotary Club at that place as unsurpassed.

No More Horns!

The Roosevelt party from poor old New York is going through the west with 10-gallon sombreros, chaps and scalping knives, expecting to find themselves dressed like the people out here; but to the contrary, they found the people dressed up-to-date in every way and if anything, more so than the New Yorkers would. Were they at home. What did you expect to find out here, Dimmie, a lot of hicky?

Miss Sweet Entertains

Last Saturday evening in the dining rooms of the Carrizozo Eating House, Miss Louise Sweet entertained a number of close friends at a 6 course party dinner, the table decorations being roses, pink and white.

After dinner, the hostess and her guests attended the Jericho Club dance at Lutz Hall and thus completed an evening of pleasant entertainment. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Dugger, Mr. and Mrs. Clint Branum, Mr. and Mrs. Don English, Misses Evelyn Grumbles, Ella Bell, Helen Rolland, Messrs. Walter LaFleur, Frank James, Maurice Lemon and Murphy Muirhead of Alamogordo.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hunt were here for the third Jericho Club dance from their home in White Oaks Saturday night. They are always on hand at the baseball games and other entertainments held in Carrizozo.

"Did you learn who paid him?" Shad asked.
"Yes. The name I am not quite ready to disclose. You and I must go tomorrow and make a careful survey of the premises of Robert Royce. Within twenty-four hours I think that we shall have our man in jail. Meanwhile we must keep still and step softly."

"I have some news for you," Shad began. "We are at the end of the mystery."
Shad told of the doctor's strategy with the unfortunate girl and of the taking of the photograph, with the help of magnesium and powder, at night. He recited the dialogue that he had overheard. He presented the sealed envelope to his friend, saying: "There is the photograph. I have not seen it. The doctor says that it shows the murderer. He is sure of that."

Colonel Blake broke the seal of the envelope and looked at the photograph. "O—d!" he exclaimed as he put it back in the envelope.

He walked up and down thoughtfully, a serious look in his face. He resumed his seat.

"This is important," he said. "The talk you overheard and the photograph are the last links in the chain. It's a remarkable story, and there's a great hero in it."

The boy restrained his curiosity in the moment of silence that followed. It was broken by the colonel who said: "My boy, in this whole matter you have rendered me a great service. It has been the work of a man and a brave man at heart. My rule is to keep decisive evidence to myself until the one it affects is under arrest, but I think that you are entitled to see that photograph if you wish to."

"I bow to your judgment, sir. I can wait."
"Well, you will not have long to wait. How did you get on with Blackstone?"

Shad took from his pocket the little essay that he had written on The Foundation of the Common Law. The colonel read it carefully.

"Again you have surprised me," he said. "It is excellent. I don't mean to say that it is above criticism, but your ideas are well expressed and your judgment of the value of the factors is singularly mature. It is like that of a man."

Shad was quick to take his cue. He said, "Colonel Blake, this compliment is very welcome. You told me once that I was brave. Well, I am going to be braver now than I have ever been."

The colonel turned toward the boy, whose face was red with embarrassment. He asked:

"Shad, what is it?"
"I am in love with your daughter. Some time I want to marry her if she will have me. I want to ask her to wait for me until I am old enough. If I have done anything worth doing, it is because I loved her and wanted to win her admiration."

The colonel laughed. "My boy, I know how you feel," he said. "It's a terribly serious feeling. I can only say now that the court reserves its decision. At present let us confine our thought to the main issue. I am weary with much travel and must have rest. I'll go to bed and you go to your lodging. Tomorrow will be a busy day for both of us. I shall get a good team in the morning and call for you at eight o'clock."

Next morning Shad drove to Ashfield with Colonel Blake and the sheriff. They stabled their horses. The colonel asked Shad to telephone to Doctor Gorse and learn if he had any news to report.

The doctor answered: "Tell your chief that I must see him this morning, and that I will meet him at the Westminster hotel within the hour."
They waited in the hotel office until the doctor arrived.

Then the colonel, the sheriff and the boy proceeded to the shop of Robert Royce. The colonel addressed him in a serious tone.

"Royce, the time has come when I must have a frank talk with you," he said. "You will save yourself embarrassment if you lock your door and draw the shades. There can be no interruption of these proceedings."

Royce changed color. In a frightened voice he inquired, "What has happened?"

"I may have to arrest you. I have evidence enough to make you a lot of trouble. If you lie to me you shall suffer for it. What I want from you is the truth and the whole truth. I warn you not to conceal any part of it. Don't make a mistake and try to fool me. It won't work."
"What have I done?" Royce asked.
"That's exactly what I want to know," Blake answered. "You are in a critical position. I take it that you do not want to be tried for murder or for complicity in murder."

"Murder!" Royce exclaimed.
"Yes. You cannot prove an alibi. Moreover you had a motive as the only heir of your mother. You were intimate with the creek Algyre who has made a confession of his part in the killing of Oscar Perry and the attempt to put it on Bumpy Brown." Royce had risen to his feet with a distressful countenance.

"My G—d, sir!" he exclaimed. "I have been a fool but I had nothing to do with that crime. What can I tell you?"

Blake demanded: "Tell me all that you know about the girl Carrie Brown."

"That's like prodding me with a hot iron," he began. "But I'll tell you. Everything I know I'll tell you. She is a daughter of old Bumpy Brown. She came on to live with her father nearly two years ago. I was a friend of the old man. He lived in town and was drinking hard those days. She couldn't be happy with him and he was in no shape to take care of her. I fell in love with that girl."

Royce stopped. He leaned forward, his face in his hands. When he spoke again his voice showed signs of emotion.

"I never knew what it meant to be in love until I saw her," he went on. "My uncle gave her a job in his shop in Malone. The work was hard. She didn't like it. She was not very well. I got her a place in the store in South Bolton. It was a healthy country. She liked it. I went to see her once a week. I took her out riding."

"What Do I Know About the Murder of Oscar Perry?"

Royce paused again. Colonel Blake asked: "Were you engaged to her?"

"Well, I had asked her to marry me. She had not promised to do it. I began to see she did not care as much for me as I did for her. I would have gone through hell for her. By and by I learned that she was keeping company with another man. I couldn't find out who it was. I was told that she would walk off in the woods alone Sunday evenings and meet him. I am sure that she was fond of him. He didn't love her as much as I did—that's certain."

Royce took out his handkerchief and wiped his eyes.

"He seduced her," the young man went on. "My and by she was in trouble. I had quit going to see her. Hubbard wrote me the truth and said that something would have to be done. The girl had no friends. I went up there. I couldn't stay away. I felt sorry. I loved her in spite of all she had done. She wanted to go to a midwife up in the woods. She wanted to hide the disgrace as much as possible. I took her there. She had a baby and came near dying. I stood by her. I took Doctor Gorse up there to see her. He saved her life."

Colonel Blake arose and went to Royce's side and took his hand, saying: "You have told the truth like a man. You see, I know the truth, but I wanted to hear it from you. I have only one more question to ask. When you missed your revolver, cartridges and overall, had you no suspicion of the thief?"

"Algyre was in the shop the day of the murder. He told me that while I was out on an errand that day Bumpy Brown came in and went back to the office. I made up my mind Bumpy had done the stealing."

Colonel Blake answered: "I am satisfied."

The sheriff was speaking of the admirable attitude of the young harness-maker toward the unfortunate girl when a loud rap shook the door. Immediately the rap was repeated.

"You may open the door and resume business," said Colonel Blake. "Pardon the interruption."

The door swung open revealing Cyrus Doolittle.

"Ask him to come in," said Blake. "He's just the man I want to see."
"I'm in a hurry," said Doolittle as he entered with a serious look in his face.

The colonel stepped behind him, closed the door, locked it and put the key in his pocket. He turned to the newcomer and said:

"Doolittle, if I were you I'd be in a hurry myself. I think that you've been in too much of a hurry all your life. The day has come when you must sit down and think it over."

Doolittle had turned pale. "I'm due in Griggaby in an hour," he said, looking at his watch. His dark eyes were troubled. He stroked his brown beard.

"You are overdue at the county seat," Blake answered.

"What do you mean?"

As if making a random remark about the weather the colonel answered:

"I mean that you are going to jail this morning for the murder of Oscar Perry."

There was a little convulsive movement in the figure of Doolittle. In a second his muscles tightened. He stood erect. A look of indignation, on a background of death-like pallor, masked his face.

"No!" he demanded. "What do I know about the murder of Oscar Perry?"

Blake answered calmly: "Sit down, Doolittle. Don't try to make me believe that you've lost your memory. Why are you so excited? Pull yourself together and sit down and listen."

Doolittle slumped into a chair. He clasped his fingers around one knee and sat with his chin upon his breast, breathing deeply as he looked at Blake.

The colonel seemed to be touched with a sense of pity. He spoke in a gentle tone. "For years I have been your friend. I am still your friend. I know your story from beginning to end. I know every detail in it. I am not lying to you. I have the proofs in my possession. Some time ago you fell in love with a pretty girl. You made her believe that your wife could not live long. You gave her money and dressed her handsomely. She was young and unwisely. You won her affection. You began to dally with passion. It is the most dangerous game which honest people can play. You lost your mental and moral balance. You staggered. The old Cyrus Doolittle fell dead. You had seduced the girl. You were soon between the devil and the deep sea. Your good judgment and your sense of honor had been burned out of you by the fire of lust. You wrote a lot of nonsense in the girl's autograph album. I have it here. You said among other things:

"This, dear Carrie, is from one who hopes soon to be yours."
The unhappy man interrupted his tormentor.

"It's a lie!" he exclaimed in a woful voice like that of a victim on the rack. Beads of perspiration were on his brow.

"I do not wonder that you deny it," the colonel went on. "Surely those words were never written by my old friend, Cyrus Doolittle. He was a smart fellow. It was quite another man who committed that folly—a man blinded by his passion. He had resolved to possess himself of the girl as soon as possible. How was he to do it?"

Impossible to Acquire Real Ability to Spell?

It was a ruthless spelling bee that the Catholic Actors' guild held. According to all reports, the spellers who remained in the lineup towards the finish had to submit to heckling by the members already downed, and the announcer was severe with all attempts to get a word repeated. In the old-fashioned spelling bees it used to be all right to ask teacher to repeat while the speller thought furiously in the minutes gained.

The rule in this one was elimination of the person making an error. In school you went to the foot of the class and tried to work your way back to the top, but it was a hopeless game for a naturally poor speller. At the end of the session there was a gloomy little group down at the foot, always composed of the same sad individuals.

How the good spellers manage it is a mystery to those who cannot. They can tackle and conquer a word of which they probably never heard through some special faculty—probably just a sense of spell.—New York Times.

Creator of Bell Music
It is due to a Cambridge (England) man named Fabrian Stedman that church bells make music instead of merely noise. He was the man who established the ringing of changes as an art, and the bell-ringers recognized the fact when they held a great bell-ringing festival to mark his tercentenary recently. Of course, there were bells before Stedman, and some very ancient ones are still in use. The oldest in Britain, a bell in the parish church of Lanark, dates back to 1110. It is probably the oldest bell in Europe.

Most Spanish City

Lace Making in Seville.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SEVILLE, center for a few hours recently of a royalist uprising, is described as "the most Spanish city of Spain" by many of the visitors who travel down from Madrid and up from Cadix and come to a brief halt in this famed town of southern Spain, capital of ancient Andalusia, sun-swathed city of spotted shadows, where encroaching modernity seems ever to struggle futilely against the strongly entrenched, if slightly crumbling, glory of long ago.

And perhaps those folk who are wont thus to describe Seville are right. Probably nowhere else in all the Iberian peninsula does one come upon more definite traces of that luxuriant flower that was Old Spain than in this city of a quarter of a million souls, which straggles along the banks of the slow-moving Guadalquivir river.

In Madrid, in Barcelona, in other thriving cities of the North and East, one is in Spain, to be sure; but a Spain revisited, cosmopolitan, commercialized. In the high interior, from Caceres to Castellon, one likewise knows Spain; but it is a rural Spain, a credulous, cradled Spain, where the simple beauties of blue skies and verdant hillsides are somehow transmitted to one's daily life.

And in the mountain-top towns of the South, crumbled outposts of Moslem might, one finds the Spanish influence still strangely subdued by moldering remnants of the once far-flung Moorish empire.

But Seville is a delightful blend of the romantic past and the busy, quick-moving present. Along smoothly paved streets are churches hoary with age and beside them steel-framed office buildings.

Buried Roman City.
A few miles from Seville the buried Roman city of Italica, of which thus far only the arena has been fully excavated, gives mute, if muddy, evidence of that classic civilization which was in full flower at the birth of the Christian era.

Many of the carved treasures of Italica and of the other Roman ruins in Carmona, nearby, have been collected and may be seen today in the Provincial museum of Seville and in several private homes of the city. The great majority, however, are believed still to lie buried beneath clay coverlets, wherein generations of gnarled olive trees have embedded their roots.

And the Towers of Gold, while slight, grimy from steamboats' funnels in the Guadalquivir river, is not greatly changed from that day in 1220 when the Moorish governor of Seville conspired with the western sun's reflection to give it a name.

But it was the vicinity of western Christendom, building on the Orient's lavish splendor, that made the Seville of today. Not until mosques were transformed into churches did this city, nestling at the threshold of European civilization, attain its rightful place in the sun. Phoenician, Carthaginian, Roman, Goth, Jew, Saracen, Christian—all collaborated in the making of Seville; but the greatest of these carried a cross.

Their Home Life is Simple.
It is in the nature of things that the people of Seville should blend in their present lives a little of each of the eventual epochs of the city's past. Each race, in lingering and passing, has left something to the Sevilliano, whether it be in language, customs, architecture or in mere physical characteristics.

Few of these gifts appear uppermost today, however. Many racial threads twine through the tapestry that depicts the life in Seville as it is lived at present; but all of these strands have been happily woven into a fabric wherein is portrayed the glory of the past, the awakened strivings of the present, and a future that is at once promising and undetermined.

The ordinary visitor to Seville learns little about the home life of the Sevillanos, for their home life is a thing apart.

There is no great mystery about it. It is very simple, fulsomely satisfying to its several members, and complete unto itself. It is a taken-for-granted part of existence and seldom enters into the discussions and activities of everyday life.

Foreign admittance thereto is not desired—indeed, is not comprehended—and in fact there is little social intercourse among the families themselves.

Antique dealers are found on every hand. The resurrection and, if the truth must be known, the contemporary manufacture of "antiques" constitute one of the city's leading industries.

Plenty of Antiques.
The score and more of antique shops in Seville have long been the mecca of collectors from all parts of the world, with the result that many tons of old Spanish furniture, iron grilles, paintings by old masters, moth-eaten hangings and draperies, ancestral silk shawls, ceramic tile the secret of whose soft glaze has long since been lost, anciently wrought pottery, and many other highly-prized objects are shipped each year from Seville.

And no doubt many more tons remain to be found, bargained over, and eventually purchased, although it is well for the prospective buyer to remember that clever wormholes do not for antiquity make, nor rust-crusted iron bars for age.

This reflection brings to mind the old story (itself an antique), heard wherever the sale of antiquities has been developed into a fine art. The local version has to do with a young foreign student temporarily sojourning in Seville, who considers himself something of a connoisseur in the matter of old Spanish pottery.

One day he happens to pass the cluttered window of an antique shop and notices there, all but hidden by the brick-brac bestroving the showcase, a certain blue bowl, fascinating despite a thick layer of dust. A moment he studies it, and then, feeling that here indeed is a "find," he straightway goes inside.

But the grizzled old shopkeeper, while gently courteous, is firm withal and refuses to be tempted by an offer of 50 pesetas, declaring with many gesticulations that the price cannot possibly be a centimo below a hundred.

Then weeks of haggling follow, during which time the pride of possession enters deep into the soul of the student, while incidentally the shopkeeper comes down to 75 pesetas.

And then, just as the youth is on the point of leaving Seville and while he is still debating that extra 25 pesetas, black disaster falls. Two wealthy tourists enter the shop, and from beneath the very nose of the covetous collector carry the blue bowl away in triumph, having without demur paid the original price of 100 pesetas.

His voice trembling with disappointment, the student turns wrathfully on the old shopkeeper. "You sold it for 100, and yet you offered it to me for 75! And just as I am leaving, too!"

Reward for a Good Boy.
"You are leaving Seville, señor?" Twinkling old eyes regard blazing ones. "Then, amigo, come with me. You have been a good boy and . . ."

"Through a mysterious door at the back of the shop and into an unexpectedly large, well-lighted room, the student is conducted. There, after the old man has carefully unlocked a mammoth cabinet of carved wood and thrown back the doors, are discovered dozens of blue bowls standing in neat and silent companionship, each an exact replica of the "find" in the window.

"Because you have been a good boy and did not tell the people of my lower offer, I have the great honor of presenting you with one of these. No, amigo, you shall not pay. And see, you and I are great friends, no? You say you are leaving Seville tomorrow? Then I shall show you my greatest treasure."

A very small cabinet is thereupon reverently approached, gingerly opened, and nestling on a velvet cushion is an exquisite blue pitcher.

"Quite perfect, is it not, señor, save for that infinitesimal chip out of the lip? But it is old, my friend, centuries old. And I must tell you a very pretty romance about how it received that tiny blemish."

After hearing the story and with difficulty overcoming the old man's dogged resistance, the youth is finally permitted to purchase the pitcher for 75 pesetas, but only because "he has been a good boy."

There is a sequel to the story. The student, returning unexpectedly to Seville some days later and chancing once again to pass the antique shop, beholds there, all but hidden by the jumbled odds and ends of antiquity, sadly forlorn, a little blue pitcher, quite perfect save for a scarcely noticeable blemish in its dust-laden lip!

REVIEW: MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH.

GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.
LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 32:48-52; 34:5-8.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Goes to Live With God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Death of a Great Leader.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We May Learn from the Life of Moses.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the World Owes Moses.

I. Moses Debarred From Canaan (32:48-52).
This act of God strikingly displays the tragedy of an unfinished task. Moses was loyal to God and faithfully served him through a long life. Though his "eye was not dimmed nor his natural force abated," he was obliged to leave his work unfinished. This is true of all of us. However, the tragedy is only apparent. Life is a probation. The question is not of finished tasks, but fidelity in service and growth in divine grace.

1. The reason for (v. 51). It was sin. The nature of this sin is given in Numbers 20:1-13. It was his failure to sanctify the Lord at Meribah. This penalty, while severe, was not too severe, for the righteousness of God demands the meting out of penalty upon every transgression. This was too glaring a sin for the Lord to pass over, though Moses had served him faithfully for many years.

2. God's treatment of Moses (v. 49, 50). While it was severe, it was yet most tender. It was in keeping with God's nature. While God cannot pass over sin, he is always as gracious as his justice will permit. He appointed the place of Moses' death on the mount of vision. Moses was gathered "unto his people."

II. Moses Views the Promised Land from Mount Pisgah (34:1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain of Nebo from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed though he knew that he was to die there (32:50). He greatly desired to go into the land (3:25), but submitted to the will of the Lord. Though he was not permitted to enter the land, God gave him a view of the fullest dimensions of the land which was to be the inheritance of the people he had delivered and led for forty years. While Moses suffered this severe penalty, we should remember that his salvation was not affected. He was debarred from entrance to the land at that time, but we see him in the land some fifteen centuries later in a state of glory discoursing with Christ on the loftiest theme of the universe: namely, the death which he would accomplish at Jerusalem (Matt. 17:1-5; Luke 9:23-31).

III. The Death and Burial of Moses (34:5-8).

1. His death (v. 5). Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. God put him into the world for a purpose and as soon as that work was done he called him home. It is stated in verse five that he died according to the word of the Lord.

2. The burial of Moses (v. 6). God buried him. Moses had no human help or sympathy in his dying hour, but he had something better. The Lord was with him. His grave was concealed to prevent his people from making it a shrine.

3. The time of mourning for Moses (v. 8). They mourned for thirty days. It was customary to mourn for the dead from seven to seventy days. It is not wrong to lay away earthly friends even with tears, but as Christians we should not mourn as those who have no hope.

IV. An Encomium upon Moses (34:10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the greater prophet (Deut. 18:15-18) of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

1. Because of his intimacy with God (v. 10). "Whom the Lord knew face to face."

2. He was great in that he gave to the world a code of laws unequalled in the world's history.

3. He was great as a general in that he liberated the Israelitish nation from the oppression of the greatest nation of the earth.

4. He was great because he led two or three million Israelites through the desert for forty years.

5. He was great because he gave to us in the book of Deuteronomy three orations, which, according to the judgment of competent critics, stand at the head of the world's literature.

PITHY PICK-UPS

Home is the first most important school of character.

Be considerate and you will find men always compassionate.

Good morals are nobler than good manners, but not so popular.

Gospel has been well defined as putting two and two together, and making it five.

Higher Opening Suit Bids
EACH opening bid in the forcing system has certain definite characteristics and carries with it certain information highly important for the achievement of the best results in partnership bidding.

Opening suit bids of one and two are differentiated by their honor strength (the honor-trick requirement being twice as great for a minimum bid of two as for a minimum bid of one). But original declarations of one and two have this in common—the trump suit named, and usually does, require full trump support from the partner. Also, these declarations are apt to show hands of flexible type which offer another bid or support for other declarations.

Original suit bids higher than two also show different degrees of honor strength, according to whether they are immediate game declarations or bids for just one less than game (as three in a major suit or four in a minor). But all bids of three or more have two definite characteristics. In the trump suit, at least, these high opening bids announce independence of partner's support. They always show trumps of such abnormal length or strength as to contain without assistance at least five sure trump tricks. Also they reveal hands of inflexible type which will play to advantage only at the suit named.

The difference which distinguishes immediate game bids from bids of one less than game lies mainly in their honor strength requirements.

Opening suit bids of three in a major and four in a minor are not, strictly speaking, pre-emptive. They are strength-showing bids, covering the type of hands which just lack enough honor-tricks for a forcing two-bid, but are so powerful in honors and playing-tricks as to be with-in two tricks of game.

An original bid of three in a major suit requires (vulnerable or not vulnerable) 8 playing-tricks including at least 1½ honor-tricks in side suits.

An original bid of four in a minor suit requires (vulnerable or not vulnerable) 9 playing-tricks including at least 1½ honor-tricks in side suits. The forcing system does not recommend minor suit three-bids, but if used, restricts them to one meaning—a long, unquestionably established suit.

Immediate Game Bids:

Pre-Emptive

Original bids of four in a major or five in a minor show holdings of abnormal distributional value (trump length), but do not promise any defensive honor-trick strength.

An original bid of four in a major suit shows (not vulnerable) 7 playing-tricks; (vulnerable) 8 playing-tricks. No honor strength in side suits.

An original bid of five in a minor suit shows (not vulnerable) 8 playing-tricks; (vulnerable) 9 playing-tricks. No honor strength in side suits.

Examples of pre-emptive (game) bids are:

(Not Vulnerable)
Four Spades:
S-K-Q-J-10-5-7-8	D-Q-J-8-5
H-None	C-6-2
Five Clubs
H-None	D-A-10-9-4-2
S-None	C-K-J-9-8-7-4-3

If any value is to be realized from hands of this type they must be played at their suits, and the partner should be warned of the fact by an immediate bid for game. From its very nature, an original bid of this character can never be construed as an invitation for slam.

Pre-emptive bids are especially effective at contract because, though the many high cards missing from your hand may be against you, the specter of drastic penalties usually so terrorizes the opponents that they do not venture to over-call your pre-emptive declaration unless entirely sure of their grip. Thus, at a slight risk, you can often shut out a game or slam which the adversaries might readily have discovered had they been allowed the opportunity for an exchange of information.

For instance, if the dealer of the following hand, not vulnerable, should pass, the opponents could probably get together for a small slam at spades. Singly, it is doubtful that either of them would overcall an original bid of four hearts, especially if they were vulnerable.

Dad's Ultimatum

Father—So you want to marry my daughter?

Suitor—Yes, but first I want to know if there's any insanity in your family.

Father—No, and there's not going to be any.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food.

It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Best Sugar

The first factory for the manufacture of sugar from beets was erected by Edward Lee Church at Northampton, Mass., in 1838, and the following year it produced 1,800 pounds of sugar. A few other factories followed, but all were failures. In 1870, E. H. Dyer erected at Alvarado, Calif., a factory which became successful in 1879 and marked the beginning of the modern sugar-making from sugar beets.

Odd Postage Stamps

In the main hall of the South Kensington museum, London, is to be seen one of the most remarkable collections of postage stamps in the world. Every one of the hundreds of specimens displayed portrays some member of the animal kingdom in its native haunts. For the most part they are typical of the countries from whence they come.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's View

Ralph Waldo Emerson, "the wisest of Americans," mentions the name of Shakespeare twice as frequently in his writings as he does that of his next favorite, Goethe. He is reported to have said, "I am always happy to meet persons who perceive the transcendent superiority of Shakespeare over all other writers."

Hamlet's Sanity

Whether or not Hamlet was insane is a question which has disturbed critics for 300 years. It is interesting to know that most of the profound thinkers who have given the question deep consideration regard Hamlet as sane. It would seem that if Hamlet was insane there is no point in the drama.—Washington Star.

Bird Sheep Herder

The yakamik, a species of crane, is used by the natives of Venezuela, South America, in the place of shepherd dogs, for guarding and herding flocks of sheep. However far the yakamik may wander with the flocks, it never fails to find its way home at night, driving before it all the creatures entrusted to its care.

Best Things Are Nearest

The best things are nearest: breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.—R. L. Stevenson.

Man's Supremacy

Scientists tell us that what has lifted man above the brute creation with which he has so much in common is the fact that he can touch each of his fingers with his thumb! No other living thing can do that. Try experiments with your own hand, and see what a difference it would make if you could not do this simple-seeming act.

Glaciers Disappear

The evidence indicates that hundreds of small glaciers have disappeared altogether from the Yosemite National park during the last half century. The first "living glacier" discovered by John Muir in 1871, in the Sierra Nevada now has ceased to exist, it is reported.

British Pen

"A new hat is like wine to a woman," said a magnate the other day. It goes to her head very quickly.—London Muzzies.

APPEAL TO WHITES TO AID DYING RACE

Australian Aborigines Near Extinction.

Isolated for hundreds of years with no ferocious human or animal enemies, the aborigines of Australia led their primitive Stone age life until after Captain Cook planted the flag of Britain on that island continent in 1770. They were out of the track of the great migrations and knew not the harring hordes which swept over Europe, Asia and Africa from prehistoric times.

According to anthropologists, these aborigines were akin to the ancient Dravidians of southern India and the Veddahs of Ceylon; they migrated to Australia when it was still joined to the Asiatic mainland and drove the original Australian—the Tasmanian man—into the fastnesses of Tasmania, which later became an island. Homo tasmanianus was an even more primitive type than the mainland aborigines and the last of his race died in 1876, exterminated by the ruthlessness of settlers.

There are estimated to be about 60,000 full-blooded aborigines in Australia and about 16,818 half-castes. At the time of the white man's arrival, the natives probably numbered at least 150,000. They are rapidly dying off and only about a 1,000 remain in New South Wales and less than 100 in Victoria. Of all the aborigines, about 25,000 are nomadic and roam the northern territory and parts of Queensland and West Australia. In the northern territory, there are about 80,000 square miles of federal reserves and 1,700 square miles of missionary reserves for the natives. All aborigines except the nomads and the gainfully employed are wards of the state and receive free shelter, clothing and food.

Only recently has Australia tried to evolve a scientific policy for the conservation of the aborigines.

On the big cattle stations in the north the natives have proved adept stockmen and boundary riders. Observers say they have remarkable assimilative capacities.

Shadrach L. James, an aboriginal preacher, recently made a moving appeal to the Australian people to conserve his race. "The whole attitude of the white man toward the aborigine," he said, "has been all along to despise and humiliate him, to extinguish his self-respect, to suppress his ambition."

"Our so-called protectors are diligently attending to the care of my people, with the full conviction that they are surely passing out. Hence, all their efforts for my people are mere palliatives."

He then enumerates what should be done. His chief recommendation is that land and homes be provided for the aborigines and that his people be taught to become an agricultural and pastoral race.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

If "Ma" Wins Out

According to latest press dispatches, if Ma Ferguson is declared the winner by the Texas courts, she will have the opposition of many leading Democrats, including Dr. J. D. Sandefer, president of the Simmons University at Abilene.

Dr. Sandefer has announced that if Ma wins out, he will give not only his support, but his activity in the campaign to the Republican candidate and also the same to President Hoover. We quote Dr. Sandefer as follows—

"I will vote for the Republican nominee if Mrs. Ferguson is placed on the ticket," he said. "It is hard on a Democrat to have to do that, but the election of Orville Bullington as governor would raise the level of Texas politics and win the respect of the rest of the nation."

"Mrs. Ferguson's election would mean government by proxy. That in itself, is against our Democratic teachings. Her husband, who would rule the state, was found unworthy to be trusted with the state's responsibilities."

Dr. Sandefer was reared a Democrat. He was named for the president of the Confederacy, Jefferson Davis.

Vital to the West

Mining is vital to the West. In normal times, the mining industry is the foremost employer, purchaser and contributor to the cost of government in a large number of states.

Its prosperity is related to that of every other business—the banker, manufacturer, farmer, storekeeper, all look to mines for a large share of their livelihood.

In the pioneer days, the lure of precious metals was principally responsible for the development of the west—in these days mining is necessary to the west's future development.

The mines will come back. Their problems are gradually being solved. And in the meantime, it behooves every western state to do all it can to encourage the mining industry, and make its struggle for existence easier, by providing constructive regulation and a taxation measures.—The Manufacturer.

Farm Board to Sell No More Wheat or Cotton This Year —Iowa Farmers Still "Striking"—Germany Demands Arms Equality.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SALES of its wheat and cotton have been stopped by the federal farm board until next year, according to the announcement made by Chairman James C. Stone. He said the board and the American Cotton Co-operative association had agreed to the terms laid down by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for a loan of $50,000,000, stipulating that their holdings of nearly 2,000,000 bales of cotton be taken off the market until 1933.

J. C. Stone

Mr. Stone also announced that the board had sold all its stabilization wheat except 8,000,000 bushels. This means the grain stabilization corporation has disposed of more than 254,000,000 bushels of wheat since July 1, 1931, and more than 186,000,000 bushels since November 1 last. The stabilization corporation, therefore, is no longer a factor in the grain market. It still holds what Mr. Stone called "a certain amount of futures contracts" which will be held at least until after the beginning of the next year.

A loophole for the disposal of the cash wheat was left by the provision that, though this wheat would be kept off the market until the new year, this limitation would not apply to possible sales to foreign countries not reckoned as important buyers of American grain.

In making the announcement, Chairman Stone explained that the purpose of the arrangements was to make a better market for the farmers. The cotton growers, he pointed out, will get the full benefit of the market for their crop of this year without the price-dulling interference of the hold-over crop. The Cotton Stabilization corporation and the Cotton Co-operative association, Mr. Stone said, would gradually liquidate their holdings "during periods when more active demand is anticipated."

IOWA'S striking farmers did not approve of the truce called by the head of their "holiday" association and made preparations to renew the picketing of the highways around the larger cities. They also called on Gov. Dan Turner to try to induce the governors of several middle west states, at a conference in Sioux City, to institute an embargo "upon all food-stuffs from the middle western states at less than production costs."

Pickets outside Sioux City wrecked a number of trucks and injured the drivers, but the sheriff's forces then got busy and dispersed them and removed from the roads the formidable obstructions placed by the farmers. In Nebraska the picketing was abandoned for the present.

FINANCIAL circles of the country were intensely interested to read of the new plans for the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company of Chicago, largest bank outside of New York city. The directors voted to nationalize the institution and to set up special reserves of $40,000,000 out of surplus to cover losses incurred. As a further mark of conservatism they voted a quarterly dividend of $2 a share in comparison with $3 in each of the two preceding periods and with a former annual rate of $10. The bank's capital remains unchanged at $75,000,000.

The directors explained to the stockholders that "the development of a plan for nationalizing the bank was suggested by recent legislative proposals regarding the banking system of the United States, all of which indicate a distinct trend in the direction of a more unified national structure, strengthened and controlled by the federal banking authorities."

FRED HOVEY of Omaha, Neb., has been appointed head of the agricultural credit organization of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and already is busy in his office in Washington. For many years Mr. Hovey has been connected with the Stock Yards National bank of South Omaha. He is so familiar with conditions and the needs of the stock raisers of the West that officials of the corporation feel he is especially well fitted to carry out the live stock feeders' loan program. This is to be the first work undertaken by the new Agricultural Credit corporation and is looked on as of vast importance.

THIS year's national air races at Cleveland wound up in a blaze of glory for Maj. James H. Doolittle, who won the free-for-all race and the handsome Thompson trophy with his Gee Bee racer. His average speed for the 100 miles over a triangular course was 252.686 miles an hour, and he broke all American records for speed around a closed course. Three days previously Doolittle with the same barrel-shaped plane set a new record for land planes, his average speed on four consecutive laps being 292.287 miles an hour.

Mrs. Mae Halzlip of St. Louis broke the women's world speed record for land planes by attaining an average speed of 255.513 miles an hour in four dashes over the three kilometer course. She won the Shell gold plaque.

MEXICO has a new president in the person of Gen. Abelardo L. Rodriguez, who was chosen for the position by the congress after Pascual Ortiz Rubio resigned because of political differences and his ill health. Rodriguez, who has been holding the portfolio of minister of war, is one of the strong military figures in the republic and in 1929 suppressed the Escobar revolt. On taking office he issued a statement in which he said: "Naturally I shall continue the same friendly, cordial relations with the United States that have existed."

In the new cabinet Manuel Tellez remains as foreign minister and Alberto J. Pani as secretary of the treasury; several others were reappointed. Gen. Pablo Quiroga was given the war portfolio. The entire diplomatic corps in Mexico City called on President Rodriguez, and hundreds of congratulatory messages were received by him, including one from President Hoover.

BOLIVIA was reported to have flatly rejected the plea of the neutral Latin-American nations for a truce with Paraguay in their dispute over the Gran Chaco. The Paraguayans assumed that this meant war was certain and went ahead with their preparations. It was officially announced in La Paz that a Paraguayan force had attacked a defense post on the frontier and was repulsed by Bolivian troops.

Brazilian rebels in Sao Paulo state had an agreement with the navy that the latter would not indulge in hostilities for the time being; but the rebels fired machine guns on naval planes dropping manifestos over Montserrat, which seemed to end the semi-neutral attitude of the navy. Seven of its planes flew over Fort Itaipu at the entrance of Santos harbor and destroyed it with bombs. The federal forces were said to have made considerable gains from both the north and the south.

WHILE the Germans were preparing for the crucial session of the reichstag, called for September 12 by Hermann Goering, the National Socialist president of the parliament, the Von Papen government was keeping the rest of the world greatly interested if not excited by its demand for the arms equally which Germany insists was promised her in the Versailles treaty. The demand had been submitted to France in the form of an aide memoire and some days later was given to the public by Baron Von Neurath, foreign minister. It is really an ultimatum, announcing that unless the equality in armaments is granted by the powers, Germany will quit the world disarmament conference.

Before and after the publication of the note, Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, minister of defense, declared in addresses and interviews that if the demand were not granted Germany would arm anyway, and he was most emphatic in his statements. To newspaper men in Koenigsberg he asserted stormily: "I mean everything I have said. We will no longer stand for being treated like a second rate nation."

Premier Herriot decided that France's reply to the Germans should be a refusal to discuss their demands, and in this he was upheld by the cabinet. He also disapproved mixing up modification of the Versailles treaty with the disarmament conference, and in his answer said that if the Germans questioned the accepted interpretation of the Versailles treaty and the League covenant, the matter must be referred to arbitration by the League council or the world court.

Some stress was also placed on the fact that the military clauses in the treaty of Versailles form the basis of many other post-war treaties and that the entire edifice of post-war Europe will be imperiled if they are tampered with.

President Rodriguez

Hermann Goering

ON SEPTEMBER 11, the eighteenth anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, a fine memorial of that mighty struggle was presented to the French nation by America, whose citizens to the number 4,000,000 contributed its cost. The piece of statuary, entitled "France Defiant," rises 180 feet above a 60-foot pedestal, on an eminence overlooking the battlefield. It stands as high as a seven-story building, and is the largest monument in France. It was designed by Frederic MacMonnies and Edmondo Quattrocchi was the sculptor. The motif of the memorial is a woman symbolic of France at bay, supporting a stricken soldier son. An infant emblematic of the future clings to the hem of the woman's tattered robe. On the front of the pedestal is Marshal Joffre's famous message to the French army on the eve of the battle: "At this moment when a battle impends upon which rests the fate of our country no one must look behind. All must unite to attack. Any troop finding itself unable to advance further must hold the ground and fight until death. No retreat!"

JOSEPH V. MCKEE, who became mayor of New York on the resignation of Jimmy Walker, was informed by the citizens' budget commission that the city pays more than $1,000,000 every day in the year for salaries for its employees. Therefore he got busy at once on economies in a way that made the politicians gasp. First he announced that his own salary was reduced immediately from $40,000 to $25,000 a year. Then he served notice that, after October 1, no city commissioner appointed by the mayor would receive more than $12,000 a year. And more of the same sort was expected to follow. The budget commission pointed out that in the six years of the Walker administration 32,350 extra positions had been added to the city pay roll at a total cost of $120,633,223 a year—practically a third of the year's entire payment for personal service.

SCANDAL concerning labor employed on government jobs has been transferred from western projects to the lower Mississippi river valley. Charges have been made that workers in river flood control construction camps down there are held by contractors in a virtual state of peonage; that the men are working 12 hours a day at very small wages. Since this falls in the purview of the Department of War, Secretary Patrick J. Hurley took cognizance of the charges and sent Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of army engineers, to make an investigation.

LOS ANGELES, the prolific source of tragedies, provided another—the suicide of Paul Bern, moving picture executive and husband of Jean Harlow, a famous screen actress. For reasons that at this writing are unknown, Mr. Bern shot and killed himself in the beautiful home he presented to his bride when they were married two months ago. He left a note that only added to the mystery. It said he was making good "the frightful wrong I have done you" and wiping out his "abject humiliation" and Miss Harlow insisted she did not know what he meant and that they had been perfectly happy together. Mr. Bern, who was born in Germany 42 years ago, had been actor, stage manager and director, and in his work in pictures was very successful and popular. His associates said he had been acting strangely of late, and that his mother and three of his sisters had committed suicide.

One possible explanation for Bern's suicide was revealed when it was learned that for years before his marriage to Jean Harlow he lived with another woman. His brother asserted Bern continued to support her in a sanitarium after she had a nervous breakdown, and that Miss Harlow knew all about it. For ten years this woman lived at the Hotel Algonquin in New York city as Mrs. Paul Bern and paid her bills with checks sent to her forthrightly from Hollywood by the movie executive. She left the hotel last winter and had her trunks shipped to San Francisco.

RAPID progress on the government's $700,000,000 public building program was reported by the Treasury department in a review of authorized projects. The report said that specific authorizations aggregated $490,463,042 and that 230 buildings costing $71,400,210 had already been completed. It further reported 832 projects with a total cost limit of $224,588,323 were under contract either in whole or in part.

In regard to 186 projects costing $42,172,900, the treasury said they either were in the specification stage or that bids had been received for their construction. It was explained that Secretary Mills had not yet determined on the expenditure of the $100,000,000 provided in the relief act for public buildings.

MOST widely known of those who died during the week was Sir Gilbert Parker, Canadian novelist, traveler, lecturer and politician, who passed away in London at the age of sixty-nine years. He first gained fame as the author of "The Right of Way" and other novels.

INTO a bundle! A young Kansas jackrabbit will have a real story to tell his grandchildren about "the good old days." When P. D. Hiltman and C. W. Ash of Wellington were cutting wheat a few days ago the youngster jumped on the canvas of the binder. He was carried up the elevator and bound into a bundle of wheat. Mr. Ash stopped the horses and examined the bundle; he found the rabbit securely fastened; in the wheat. Apparently unhurt, the animal scampered away when released.—Kansas Farmer.

Mayor McQuillen Commended

Carrizozo, N. M.
Sept. 14, 1932.

Mr. Geo. T. McQuillen, Mayor, Carrizozo, New Mexico.

Dear Sir: In the discussion of Good Citizenship and Local Conditions as we know them, which is a part of our study of Christian Social Problems, a motion was made and carried to convey to you the appreciation of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Carrizozo, N. M., for the fine ideals of citizenship as expressed in your work as Mayor of our town.

We know that it is fortunate that a man of your calibre, who so understands the principles of good citizenship, will take his place in public office as you do.

It is, perhaps, a small service on our part, and yet, we trust, a worthy one as well as a part of our code of good citizenship, to express our appreciation of you as a public official who from year to year establishes in large part the ideals of our town, controls public environment, and frequently offers protection in various ways to every one but particularly to the young people and children.

Sincerely,
Woman's Missionary Society,
Signed: Mrs. J. L. Lawson,
Corresponding Secretary.

FORT STANTON NEWS

When Willie (Chihuahua) Hansen, one of our most ardent motor enthusiasts, a few days ago guided his ancient vehicle thru a herd of cattle that were being driven across the road, he was horribly astonished at seeing a big cow (a four-legged one with horns) looking at him from the rumble seat whereas, in a comfortable, reclining position, seemed to derive great pleasure from the involuntary ride. Our Willie at once brought his chariot to rest, stepped out and with a fence post he patted the bovine lady on her own rumble seat impatiently, requesting her to haul off. Reluctantly, with great indignation the cow disembarked, let out a long-drawn "mo" in demonstration of discontent and hastened to join her family.

First Typewriters
Typewriters were invented as a means of enabling blind persons to "write." The first typewriter made its appearance in 1714, but it was not until 1836 that Fancourt and Beach introduced machines with printed embossed letters which drew their attention to their possibilities for general use. After years of experiment Mr. Charles Sholes produced a practical machine for general use, which was put on the market in New York, in 1874.
