Hi School Reporter: What Hi School Students Think of Their Teachers

Teacher Z is always finding fault with everybody. She always had one pupil for her pet and two or three to pick on. She didn't teach me a thing because she always worried about her beau who was supposed to come and see her. Teacher Z looked like something you see in a nightmare after Thanksgiving dinner. She had a mean disposition. You couldn't get anything out of her lessons. I didn't hate her, but I didn't like her very well either.

Teacher Z had a hot temper. You would think she had 100 eyes. She was cross and rude. I think, though, that she was sick. She gets off the subject and then gives you zero for knowing nothing. I like her the least because she is incompetent.

She does not care for children and therefore is not interested in their progress. She was always fretting about something and never tried to help any of her pupils. She was partial and gave high grades to the students she liked. She was homely, very cranky and would never answer any questions. All she cared for was money.

Teacher Z criticized too much. She quarrels with the kids all the time. She is stubborn and never has a jolly word. She accuses people of things they have never done. Teacher Z has a sour-look that turns something wrong inside. She was too cruel, but it was really not her fault as she was not in her right mind. She taught Latin and Ancient History and judging by the way she talked she must have been standing on the sidelines when Brutus plunged the fatal knife into Julius Caesar.

Teacher Z was very inconsiderate. I have no class with her but when I see her I think of hard tests. All of the students disliked her and when they went to her classes they were as mean as could be.

Store Windows

Our merchants have their windows nicely arranged and artistically decorated in advance of the coming holiday season.

Anything the heart could wish can be found at our stores and you may sample your wants by a glance at the display windows. You can't beat 'em.

Hotels and cafes are also making preparations for the holiday trade, and taking it all around, Carrizozo feels the depression less than other places. — We'll have Santa Claus anyhow!

Ben C. Sanchez, Sabino Vidaurri and Juan Martinez motored to Santa Fe Tuesday afternoon, attended the funeral of the late Archbishop Daeger on Tuesday and returned home that night. Joaquin Ortiz also accompanied the above party.

Jesse May of Nogal was a Carrizozo business visitor Tuesday.

Merchants Donate Trucks

In their zeal to assist Mayor McQuillen in improving the streets, different merchants have donated trucks to haul the gravel into town. The Mayor is certainly a leader and heads everything for the benefit of Carrizozo.

Back-Hendricks

Tuesday evening in the office of Justice of the Peace Harvey, Marshall Beck of Carrizozo and Miss Willie Hendricks of Fabens, Texas, were united in marriage.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Hendricks of Fabens, her father being cashier of the First National Bank of that place, where the young lady is held in the highest of esteem by her many friends and acquaintances.

The groom is a Carrizozo boy and a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beck. After graduating from our High School, he entered State College and graduated from that institution in 1930, and on a glowing recommendation from the faculty, he entered the service of the Westinghouse Electric Company, with which corporation he is connected at present at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The young couple met at State College and their acquaintance ripened into a love affair, and the old, old story of romance which resulted in their marriage Tuesday, repeats itself. They will remain here at the home of Marshall's parents until Christmas, when they will go to Pittsburgh to make that city their future home. The best wishes of their many friends and admirers both at Fabens and Carrizozo will go with them.

Miss Brickley Improving

E. M. Brickley and daughter Ruth made a trip to Albuquerque last Sunday so that Miss Ruth could be ready for school Monday morning. Word received from the young lady Wednesday was to the effect that she is doing nicely, her recent accident not interfering with her studies.

New Lunch Room

The Sunshine Lunch Room opened this week in the rear of the Carrizozo Bakery and the proprietors invite you to give the new place a call. Read their ad on page 8.

Nogal Items

The Helen Rae Gold Mine is being worked steadily. From 7 to 12 men are working daily and grinding out some of the good, old, yellow metal.

Amos L. Gaylord was down from his home in Nogal Canyon and reports fine winter weather, except very cold nights. We believe that a little moisture combined with the ideal weather we are having would help check some of the flu and bad colds so prevalent among many families.

We are very sorry and grieved to learn of the serious condition of Elmer Zumwalt, at Douglas, Ariz., and our sympathy goes out to the Zumwalt families.

Mrs. Ethel Robinson, teacher in the Nogal school, was confined to her bed Monday with a bad attack of the flu. Miss Irene Zumwalt filled her place while she was unable to teach.

The Cherry Sisters, pride of the '90's are attempting a comeback. This act is so ridiculously awful that they have become famous in presenting the same. Their famous theme song "Cherries ripe and cherries red" has been sung by them all over the nation.

We see by the El Paso papers that they are selling 60-watt Japanese electric light globes at a give-away price of 5 cents. Mind you, the Japs pay the duty on the globes and are able to sell them for a nickel. And yet, we have unemployment. Wait till the Democrats have their Free Trade!

The work of graveled the streets is progressing nicely; in fact most of the business thoroughfares have a new coat of gravel. "I'm making these men work," says Mayor McQuillen, referring to his gang.

All set for the home-talent P. T. A. Minstrels to be given at the Hi School Auditorium Friday evening, Dec. 9 — (this sounds more genteel than by saying night.) The Minstrels are under the direction of Miss Hazel Measas. Your favorite entertainer will be present. — Come and laff.

"Howcum every time I pick up a copy of your paper I notice you have so much to say about beer," remarks a local man. Answer: So does Congress.

"The debt problem is not our baby." Roosevelt — headline. Well, let's see. It was under the Wilson administration that the money was loaned out, wasn't it?

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) C. 1912, Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for December 11

THE CHRISTIAN USE OF LEISURE

Nehemiah 8:9-12; Zechariah 4:4-5; Matthew 11:16-19; Mark 4:30-32; I Corinthians 10:23-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God, I Cor. 10:31. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Watching Children Play.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Pleasing God in Our Games.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Best Way to Rest and Play.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian's Rest and Recreation.

The topic of today's lesson is rather a strange one to attempt to set to the texts selected by the lesson committee.

By leisure is meant freedom from one's regular occupation. The instructed Christian gladly uses his leisure in the worship and service of God.

1. Hearing the Word of God Read (Neh. 8:9-12).

The people turned aside from their common interests and demanded from Ezra, the scribe, the reading of God's word. The Mosaic economy provided regular periods for cessation from secular activities, such as the Sabbath, the Sabbath Year and the Year of Jubilee, so as to afford recreation and spiritual refreshment to the people.

In the case of these Jews, this period of reading of the Word of God meant not only physical refreshment, but spiritual revival.

1. Conviction of sin (v. 9). "The word of God is quick and powerful" (Heb. 4:12). It brings conviction of sin (Acts 2:37).

2. Weeping turned into joy (vv. 10-12). Forgiveness follows perception and confession of sin. When the sinner is forgiven, God would have him enter into joy. Continued mourning would not atone for sins that are past. "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

3. Blessing to be shared with others (vv. 10-12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others. Pure religion goes out to minister to the poor (James 1:27).

4. Obedience of the people. From the reading of the Scriptures they found the Feast of Tabernacles had long been neglected. They kept the feast in a way that had not been known since the days of Joshua (v. 17).

11. Children Playing (Zech. 8:4-5). Playing is natural to children. The street pictures a time when the streets of Jerusalem shall be safe for the play of children. This will be realized when Jesus Christ reigns as king.

111. The Need of a Vacation (Mark 6:30-32). The tragic death of John the Baptist had taken place, and the disciples had just returned from a strenuous missionary tour. Christ perceived their need and invited them to come apart with him for a time of rest. It is a grave mistake to assume, because we are engaged in the Lord's work and the need is so urgent, that a vacation can be dispensed with. Such periods are needed in order that we may work again.

This retreat, called by Christ, was for the purpose of hearing a report of their work, to take counsel about the work, and to be refreshed by prayer.

1V. Do All Things for the Glory of God (I Cor. 10:23-33).

The occasion for this teaching was the uncertainty as to the right attitude toward things sacrificed unto idols. In mingling with society many perplexing questions arise such as, amusements, way of spending Sunday, way of spending a vacation, enjoyment of luxuries, etc. This portion of God's Word contains principles adequate for guidance in all of these matters.

1. "All things are lawful for me" (v. 23). This declaration is limited, of course, by things which are right in themselves. It is not true that a Christian is free to do things which are wrong in themselves. He can only indulge in lawful things as they are expedient and unto edification.

2. "Let no man seek his own" (v. 24). The Christian's law of life is selflessness. The one dominated by love considers the other's interest rather than his own.

3. "Do all to the glory of God" (v. 31). This is the grand and supreme life of the Christian. In all our concerns we should have God's glory before us constantly. How could one ask God's blessing upon the intoxicating cup, dancing, gambling, theater going, Sunday desecration, etc?

4. "Give no occasion for anyone to stumble" (v. 32). We should so live that no one can ever say that we have been the occasion for their downfall.

5. Follow the example of Jesus Christ (I Cor. 11:1). Christ gave up all for the sake of others.

He Is With Us Wherever we be, whatsoever we are doing, in all our work, in our busy daily life, in all schemes and undertakings, in public trusts, and in private retreats, he is with us, and all we do is spread before him. Do it, then, as to the Lord.

Contrast In the scientific and natural world, men obey no further than they understand; in the spiritual world they understand no further than they obey.

Long Years of Service Warren county, New Jersey, points with great pride to a stretch of roadway which bears the proud title, "First concrete road laid in New Jersey." This stretch of road is just twenty-five years old this year and to the motorist traveling over it, that would not be apparent were it not for the sign which tells its age. The road is in as good condition as that attached to it, although the attaching sections are much more recent of installation.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified crocote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, crocote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to crocote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Wealth From the Skies Aid from the skies during a drought came to Julian Bailey, farmer living northwest of Heber Springs, Ark., but it differed from any he had hoped for, and it enabled him to sell a product that few farmers take to market. The heavenly assistance took the form of a 37-pound meteorite, which fell on his farm. Bailey sold it to a Rochester (N. Y.) firm of $650.

Don't Burn Leaves Leaves represent nature's way of storing energy from the summer sunshine. In the autumn they fall, and soon decay, to become nature's fertilizer. Burning destroys the work nature has done to help enrich the soil. Leaves, weeds, waste, hay or straw should be plowed under or piled in a corner and a little earth thrown over them. The Christmas Eve Burglar

FANNIE HURST

TWENTY years of conservatism and impeccable ethics in his dealings with men had finally succeeded in grinding into Thomas Mare's consciousness one bitter, outstanding conclusion. The alleged law of compensation was no law at all.

Men who practiced ruthless tactics with their fellow-men seemed to be the ones who succeeded. Women who defied the cardinal virtues, which in the recesses of his old-fashioned heart Thomas still held sacred, seemed to be the ones who reaped. More usually than not, the wages of sin seemed to be not death, but more of life.

As he grew older and more bitter and more resigned to the disillusionment of the twenty years since he had been on his own in the struggle for existence, Thomas found himself more and more frequently citing some of his bitterness in the presence of Adalia, his wife, who was part of the reason for the bitter resentment that tugged at his heart, like a tide.

No more than in his own case did there seem any reason for the sudden kind of fate that dogged at the life of Adalia. She was a good wife. More than that, she was a good mother, and if ever a woman played her game of life fairly and squarely, with due regard for others, with fidelity toward her husband, and adoration toward her children, that woman was Adalia.

And yet here was the afflicted Christmas since Thomas had married her, and only the annual heartbreak of inadequate holiday spirit, inadequate funds, and fear of facing her children on Christmas morning, to confront her in the way of holiday anticipation.

The slow anger that had been lying in embryo in the heart of Thomas throughout the years of their marriage seemed to catch fire this time. What had Adalia done except be sweet, sacrificing, tolerant and gentle, to do the things the instantly drab fate that tugged at her footstepers since her marriage to Thomas?

What had Thomas himself done except try, as conscientiously as a man knows how, to fulfill his obligations to employer, family, children, and his God; and why was he, at forty-five, unable to get footing on the ladder of success beyond his wretched role of assistant gardener in the household of a Wall Street magnate who lived on Long Island?

Deep within the rebellious heart of Thomas Mare, rancor against his employer, against the little-girl daughter of his employer, against the whole scheme of society that made his state of oppression possible, began to burn and rage and finally sweep through his being.

Another Christmas at hand, another period of beholding Adalia scraping and pinching to afford her children the minimum joy of this season; another Christmas day, dreaded because it would expose the disappointment and yearning concealed by the valiant little faces of his youngsters; another Christmas of being obliged to face the denied face of his wife across the lean dinner table, and of trying to ignore the fact that life was peremptorily, cruelly passing them by.

The plan to improve upon the scheme of his universe and somehow obtain for his broad soma of the compensations which had all of their lifetime been denied them, began to grow in the heart of Thomas Mare the third month after he had obtained his position as assistant gardener on the Longman estate in Long Island.

For a man to reconcile himself to a society that was built on foul undergrowth was folly. Months of that secret mental fodder succeeded in rooting within Thomas Mare the impulse and the courage to carry out an act that two or three years before would have seemed to him to be the act of a mad man.

Thomas Mare had reason to know that in a drawer of a desk in the room in which Theodore Longman slept, there usually reposed a roll of bank notes sufficient to keep Mare's family in luxury over a period of years. To Longman this sum represented merely the running funds of a vast household. To Mare this sum represented escape, a fresh start in another part of the world with Adalia, opportunity for his children. And curiously, stubbornly, almost fanatically in the mind of Thomas Mare was the determination that this year there would be no little frustrated faces around his Christmas table, no scheming on the part of Adalia to cover up heartache.

The Marees were going to have their first real Christmas; and in his desperation Thomas even said to himself the Marees were going to have their first real Christmas, even if a fly-by-night promoter named Theodore Longman was going to be found dead in his bed on Christmas day.

Secretly, cautiously, subtly and with a finesse that amazed himself, the plans of Thomas Mare took shape. So clever these plans, that even in the eventuality of having to use force once he found himself in the apartment of Theodore Longman, it would be impossible to trace the crime to the innocuous second gardener.

The family of Mare was about to be emancipated. "Papa, am I going to get a sled for Christmas?" Here it came again, the innocent and authentic desire of his innocent children, that frightened look in the face of Adalia; that heartache look.

The plans of Thomas Mare took shape, and there was within him neither fear nor indecision. Christmas eve came and with it the rounding up of plans he had been carefully making over a period of nine weeks. Nothing failing him, at seven-thirty o'clock in the evening, Thomas Mare had reason to know that reposing in the upper right-hand drawer in the bedroom of Theodore Longman would be a bundle of bank notes amounting to six thousand three hundred and fifty dollars. At eight o'clock of that Christmas Eve, Thomas Mare had reason to know that most of the household would be assembled in the great lower hall helping to prepare a great Christmas tree for little Miss Matilda Longman, age eleven.

At eleven o'clock, according to custom, Theodore Longman would retire to his bedroom, turn on his reading lamp for an hour or two before he fell asleep. At one o'clock the watchman of the grounds, a good-natured Irishman, named Curry, would be down at the third gardener's little cottage for a tweak of midnight eggnog. That was the hour upon which Thomas Mare staked and staked hard.

Ironically, every move on the chess-board was precisely as Thomas Mare had planned. Not a slip-up; not a break in the chain of events. The Christmas tree stood bright and magnificent in the hallway, decorated and shimmering by ten o'clock. At eleven Theodore Longman was stretched out in his bed, his night lamp burning and a stack of magazines under his fingers. At twelve o'clock that night lamp flicked out. At one o'clock, Curry, with the good-natured air of indulging in unforbidden fruit, was sitting in the third gardener's cottage drinking eggnog. At ten minutes past one, Thomas Mare, with a flashlight in his hand, and his cap pulled down over his face, was standing beside an open drawer in the bedroom of Theodore Longman, who was snoring. There was the bundle of bank notes with a rubber band around it precisely as he had known it would be! And for the life of him, to his degradation, to his humiliation, to his self-loathing.

Thomas Mare could not lift out that bundle of bank notes. Not for the life of him, not for the soul of him. And so, impotently, blinded with rage, stifling with humiliation, the figure of Thomas Mare, leaving the bank roll, turned and tiptoed from the chamber of Theodore Longman.

It was long about breakfast time on Christmas day just when Thomas Mare, sunk in the abjectness and shame of he knew not what, was beginning to dread the little breakfast table circle of the frustrated faces of his wife and children, that the summons came.

Theodore Longman, waiting in the paneled study of his Georgian house on the hill, informed him that, at triple his salary, Mare was to become general superintendent over the premises. What Longman did not add was that, at one o'clock that morning, he had watched a man with a cap pulled down over his face and a flashlight in his hand, stand beside an open drawer containing six thousand three hundred and fifty dollars and, snuffering, turn away, leaving it untouched. EDITORIAL COLUMN

"Casting Pearls Before Swine"

When Charles Bertrand Arnold, 16, was brought to trial for the killing of an aged lady in Chicago because she refused to let him have the loan of her automobile, the lady's son, aged 30 and a cripple, begged the court for clemency for the boy on the grounds that he was only a child and asked that the court give him a chance to begin anew in the world.

With all due regard to the young man's forgiving nature, if the request were to be granted, it would put a premium on all acts of this nature over the country and render the courts of no avail. Right now, when we are devising ways and means to put down crime of all kinds, what a black eye would this give to society — to allow a red-handed murderer like this, who had reached an understanding for himself, to go free to repeat such acts on other people.

Another mushy-headed alienist says that the boy did the killing with his left hand, which was the nearest to his victim. And had he committed the act with his right hand, he would have had to turn completely around and in so doing, he would have had time to deliberate and thus avoid the deed. When men of this type seek to impress such views on a sympathetic public, they should be put behind bars, out of reach of society, which is too often prone to look differently on such atrocious crimes than they justly deserve. If one is so willing a murderer at the age of 16, his liberty would only mean another avenue to more crimes of a like nature. In other words, he would always be of the same stripe and liberty would mean nothing to him but repetition of crime.

Quite to the contrary, do we see the fellow who having gone to death by lethal gas in Nevada, after saying he deserved what he was about to get, waived his hand to those present and got off the earth, where he could do no more harm to society. There never was a murderer on trial but who had, to some extent, the sympathy of a certain element of fickle-minded women, who by allowing such sympathy to get the upper hand of better judgment, placed a false sense of premium on such acts of outlawry—thereby, "casting pearls before swine."

Harvey Land Trade Halted

After pending for 6 years, negotiations of C. M. Harvey, president of the El Paso National Bank, involving the exchange of his 13,000 acre timbered 8-mile ranch in the Clouderoff region for 90,000 acres of sheep lands in the vicinity of Carrizozo, came to naught yesterday.

According to Associated Press dispatches from Washington, D. C., the interior department decided the exchange could not be made. The department held that Harvey couldn't give a clear title to his ranch because the mineral rights to the land are held by the state of New Mexico.

John H. Edwards, assistant secretary of the interior, said the decision was based on an opinion prepared by E. C. Finney, department solicitor, and ended all negotiations looking toward the proposed transfer.

Sheep men in the vicinity of Carrizozo were opposing the exchange, claiming that the land sought by Harvey would block in some of the sections on which their wells were located.

Harvey said he wanted the large acreage to increase his sheep ranching activities. Harvey's 8 mile ranch is known as a hunter's paradise, in addition to its valuable timber. — El Paso Times.

HELP SANTA CLAUS
This has been a very hard year on Santa Claus and he is in need of help if he is going to get toys for all the good little boys and girls this Christmas. It would just simply be too bad if any good little girl or boy should fail to receive a visit from Santa Claus; so he has figured out a plan that will enable him to do a lot more work between now and Christmas. This is the plan: If all the boys and girls who have toys that they have used until they do not like to play with them any more, will bring them to the schoolhouse, and the boys in the Manual Training Department will fix these toys up, paint them and get them ready for Santa Claus; he will call for them and carry them to the little boys and girls, who will be glad as can be to get them.
Now, all you boys and girls who have toys or dolls that are old, soiled or broken, bring them right away to school, so the boys have time to fix them up before Santa Claus calls for them.

Letter to Santa Claus

Dear Santa Claus:—Send me a lamp and a doll in grip. That's all I want.—From Bertha Chavez to Santa Claus.

President Confers With Roosevelt and Congress Leaders on War Debts—Hitler Offered German Rule Under Conditions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Dr. Raymond Moley

PRESIDENT HOOVER and President-Elect Roosevelt held their scheduled conversation of the war debts in the White House Tuesday and exchanged views as to the wisest course for the United States government to pursue.

Dr. Raymond Moley, an authority on sociology and crime, was one of the so-called "brain trust" that traveled with Roosevelt during the campaign, and it was he who assembled much of the material for the governor's speeches.

The President, as is well known, favors action looking to revision of the war debt settlements, but knows congress would not sustain him in this position; so it was thought probable he would merely tell the debtors nations that the United States declines to suspend the December 15 payments and that there is no immediate prospect of reduction of the terms.

WEDNESDAY morning the President and Secretary Mills went over the whole matter again with 13 leaders of congress, including Speaker Garner, the Vice-President-Elect, and these: Senators Smoot, Watson and Reed, Republicans, and Harrison, King and George, Democrats; Representatives Collier, Rainey and Dougherty, Democrats, and Hawley, Treadway and Bachrach, Republicans.

Czechoslovakia joined Great Britain, France and Belgium in the petition for suspension of payments and revision. Italian ministers decided that Italy would pay its debts punctually and Premier Mussolini approved.

OVER in Berlin there were conferences during the week that were vital to the future of the reich and of intense interest to the rest of the world. After talking with leaders of various parties, President Von Hindenburg summoned Adolf Hitler, chief of the National Socialists, who had demanded control of the government for his party and the post of chancellor for himself.

Adolf Hitler

The president demanded that Hitler agree to respect the majority of Von Papen's emergency decrees and that his cabinet would have to be backed "by a majority or almost a majority" of the reichstag.

At this writing the outcome of the conference is in doubt. Hitler was still trying to get assurance of a majority in the reichstag, but this seemed a feat almost impossible, as Hugenburg's Nationalists and various other relatively small parties were holding out.

REDUCTIONS in the budget of approximately $500,000,000, requested of the cabinet by President Hoover have been met. The cuts in appropriations for the fiscal year beginning June 1 next were settled by the cabinet at about $700,000,000, but it was explained that this would be offset "by certain increases in uncontrollable items, such as interest and amortization on the public debt and tax refunds to the extent of about $150,000,000."

The White House statement said "the administration is determined to present a balanced budget," and leaders of congress appear equally determined to keep down the regular appropriations at the short session.

WESLEY L. JONES, veteran Republican senator from Washington, who was defeated on November 8 for re-election, died in the Mount Baker sanitarium in Seattle. He had served in congress for 33 years, was one of the most uncompromising of the drys, and at the time of his death was chairman of the powerful appropriations committee.

Governor Hartley of Washington appointed E. S. Grammer, a Seattle lumberman and a Republican, to fill out Jones' unexpired term, thus assuring the Republicans of a majority in the short session.

WHAT did the President say to Fred Britten? That was the question that was agitating the proponents of a bill legalizing beer. "The wet congressman from Chicago admittedly went to the White House in the hope of finding out what Mr. Hoover would do to such a bill if it were passed in the short session, and as he came forth he announced he was convinced that the President would not veto it. Rejoicings among the beer boys!

Then came swiftly Theodoros Joslin, one of the White House secretaries, with the flat assertion to the newspaper men that "the President had declined to discuss beer with Mr. Britten." Cheers from the drys!

Notified of this action on the part of the White House, Mr. Britten stuck by his guns, asserted that Mr. Joslin knew nothing about what had been said during his conference with the President and reiterated his prediction that Mr. Hoover would approve beer legislation.

RAYMOND ROBINS, the long misanthropic social worker and prohibition advocate, was found in the mountains of North Carolina, masquerading as "Reynolds Rogers," a mining engineer and prospector. Identified by his nephew and then by his wife, he insisted for several days he did not know them and was in reality "Rogers." In other respects his mind was clear, and after a rest in a sanitarium and medical care he recognized Mrs. Robins and his own identity and was declared to be on the way to normal health.

Raymond Robins

The psychiatrist in charge said Mr. Robins had been suffering from amnesia or a similar mental malady.

SUPPORTERS of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty now fear that it will not receive consideration at the short session of congress, because the opposition has come forward in such strength. One of them, Senator Walsh of Montana, thinks it will reach a vote before March, but will not predict the outcome. Should the ratification or rejection of the pact go over to the new congress, its fate would depend largely on the attitude of the new President. This, it was hoped, would be revealed by the testimony of Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York power authority, who was scheduled to appear before the senate foreign relations subcommittee after the Thanksgiving holiday.

Powerful opposition to the treaty developed at the fourteenth annual convention of the Mississippi Valley association in St. Louis, on the ground that one article would dry up the Illinois waterway, now nearly ready for opening, and the lakes-to-the-gulf water route. The article in question, it was said, takes from congress its rights to prescribe diversions from Lake Michigan for navigation purposes. The Mississippi Valley association has in the past endorsed the St. Lawrence project, and it still does—but it opposes the treaty in its present form.

YOSUKE MATSUOKA, the smooth, smiling representative of Japan in Geneva, appeared before the council of the League of Nations and set forth his country's position in relation to Manchuria and China. In effect he defied the league and ridiculed the findings of the Lytton commission whose recommendation of the internationalization of Manchuria he declared unthinkable.

"Establishment of the state of Manchukuo seems to be the only solution possible," said Matsuoka in fluent English. "We have violated neither the covenant of the league, the nine-power treaty nor the pact of Paris. We acted in self-defense and spontaneously, and when we acted the independence movement developed spontaneously."

Matsuoka assured the council that China was a dismembered nation which was a prey to rival war lords and was menaced by communism. Had China or even Manchuria been properly governed, the present situation would not have arisen, he said.

Wellington Koo replied with eloquence and spirit for China. He charged that Japan had kept China in turmoil as part of a plan to conquer Asia and the world in successive stages. Matsuoka had complained that Chinese boycotts were hurtful to friendly relations. Koo inquired whether friendly relations still existed. He explained that the boycott was a self-imposed sacrifice and, the most humane method of resistance to aggression yet devised. Then he whipped forth a clear threat in behalf of the Chinese government to legalize, extend and protect the boycott.

The league council was helpless, for there was no chance for conciliation, so the whole affair was referred to the assembly of the league. Whatever the assembly may do, the statements of Foreign Minister Uchida and the war office in Tokyo make it plain that Japan intends to maintain the status quo in Manchuria.

LATEST advices from Manchukuo say that the Japanese there have just launched a great military drive against the 33,000 Chinese who have been threatening from the north. In China it is declared these forces are under the command of Gen. Ma Chan-shan, whom the Japanese claim to have killed in battle some months ago.

General Ma

General Ma made a name for himself as the gallant defender of Taitshar, against the Japanese a year ago. Later he served with the Japanese army, but only, as he later revealed, to obtain Japanese secrets.

The Chinese forces are concentrated in the northwestern part of Heilungkiang province.

FORMULATING a new agricultural policy for the nation will be the task undertaken by the American Farm Bureau federation when it meets in annual convention in Chicago December 5. President Edward A. O'Neal in his call for the meeting said:

"As did those fighting farmers of 1787 crystallize the hope of a new people into the Constitution upon which this nation is founded, so will the organized farmers of today, meeting at Chicago in the fourteenth annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation, build a new policy seeking through the rehabilitation of agriculture the salvation of this nation."

The federation's drive for legislation that will place the industry on a paying basis will be vigorously prosecuted, according to the pre-convention announcement. Steps to correct the tariff on those commodities produced in surplus, must be taken by the coming congress. It is said that millions of bushels of American corn would find a market in home industries if it were not for the competition in products produced by cheap tropical labor and imported in this country free.

"If America is to continue as a protected nation agriculture must be given protection," said Mr. O'Neal. "Either we must have tariff for all or tariff for none."

SENATOR F. BYRNES, Democrat, of South Carolina, has announced that he will ask the first Democratic senate caucus at the December session to agree not to confirm any of President Hoover's recess appointments, these including several appointments to the home loan bank board, the tariff commission and other bodies.

"President-Elect Roosevelt should have the privilege of appointing persons to serve in his administration and on whom he will depend for the success of his administration," Byrnes said.

AFTER serving 23 years as president of Harvard university, A. Lawrence Lowell, one of the world's foremost educators, has resigned. No reason was given in the announcement, but Doctor Lowell is seventy-six years old and it had long been known that he desired to retire as soon as the new house plan, which he regarded as the capstone of his career, was working smoothly.

UNIVERSITY of Michigan, with an unbroken list of victories, won the football championship of the Western Conference, with Purdue a close second. Yale defeated Harvard in their annual battle which still holds chief interest in the East.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Kate Walker

"KEEP the light burning, Kate." These were her husband's dying words. And for 33 years tiny Kate Walker, who stood but 4 feet 10 inches with her shoes on, remained faithful to her trust, tending the giant beacon on Robbins Reef in New York bay. During these years veteran boatmen estimate that Kate Walker saved as many as 75 lives.

The young Kate had come to this country from Germany, and opened a boarding house at Sandy Hook. Here her excellent cooking made a very favorable impression on Capt. Jacob Walker, keeper of the Sandy Hook lighthouse. They were married in 1882. Shortly afterwards Captain Walker was transferred to the lighthouse on Robbins Reef. Four years later he became ill of pneumonia. Kate not only nursed her husband, but tended for him the huge light that was his trust. Upon his death, she was officially appointed keeper at Robbins Reef by President Benjamin Harrison.

There were two small children at the lighthouse in those days. Every morning the young mother rowed them across the bay to school on Staten Island. Every evening she called for them. She became an excellent oar-woman and distinguished herself time and again by the courage with which she braved high seas to launch her small boat and row out to the rescue of people who were in grave danger. Not once during her thirty-odd years of guardianship did the light on Robbins Reef fail.

Robbins Reef lighthouse is one of the most important in this country, guarding a busy marine thoroughfare. By day and night the ships from the seaports of the world pass it by, moving in and out of New York bay. Kate became able to recognize every ship by the sound of its whistle. Once, when in New York city, the sudden blaze of a factory whistle caused her to stop short. "If I didn't know that the Richard H. Morse had been scrapped years ago," she exclaimed, "I would have said that was her whistle." So sure was she of her identification, that inquiry was made. It developed that the discarded ship, purchased by the factory for its own use.

With the passing of years Kate's son Jacob grew old enough to be her able assistant. In 1919 she retired from the service, and went to live in a little white cottage on Staten Island, where the beams of the light on Robbins Reef could steal into her bedroom window at night, assuring her that all was well on the high seas.

"Tom" Hunley

IN 1862 there was enlisted in the Union forces engaged in the Civil war a drummer boy named Tom Hunley. He was a frail little fellow, whom the soldiers often teased with looking more like a girl than a boy. But his father, Jeremiah Hunley, enlisted in the same regiment, kept Tom close at his side, and protected him not only from the taunts but even from the friendship of their comrades in arms. And for three years little Tom drummed the Northern troops along their weary marches and into desperate battle, and only two people, his own father and General Grant, ever knew that he was no drummer boy, but a little girl!

Tom's father carried the secret to his grave a few years after the close of the war. And General Grant told none. So that it was not until 60 years after her heroic deeds that the drummer boy herself, then a white-haired old lady, Mrs. Anna Glad of Oakland, Calif., told the strange story.

Jeremiah Hunley and his five motherless children lived in a border state. When the Civil war opened, two sons joined up with the Union side, two with the Confederates. Then the father was called. Afraid to leave his only remaining child, Anna, then ten years old, alone, friendless in a contested territory, he cut off her hair, dressed her in boy's clothes, told her to answer to the name "Tom" and set off to join the Union army. For two years "Tom" gallantly accompanied her father through some of the bloodiest battles of the war, her secret unsuspected.

Then, one day, General Grant inspected his troops. He was particularly struck with the diminutive drummer boy, decided she was too small for action, and ordered her mustered out and sent home to her mother! There was only one thing for her father to do. As soon as he could gain a private hearing with the general he explained that the drummer boy was no boy but his own daughter, and laid before him the circumstances which had prompted the deception. He begged that he might be allowed to keep her with him. And General Grant straightway shook the little drummer's boy's hand, swore himself to keep her secret, and ordered her retained in the service.

Thus it was not until the end of the war that little Anna Hunley returned to the dress and life that befit a little girl.

Luckey's Milk Dairy

If you happen to be in the neighborhood of Luckey's Milk Dairy, it would repay you to stop and take a look at the improvements recently made and you will be shown about the place with the greatest of pleasure.

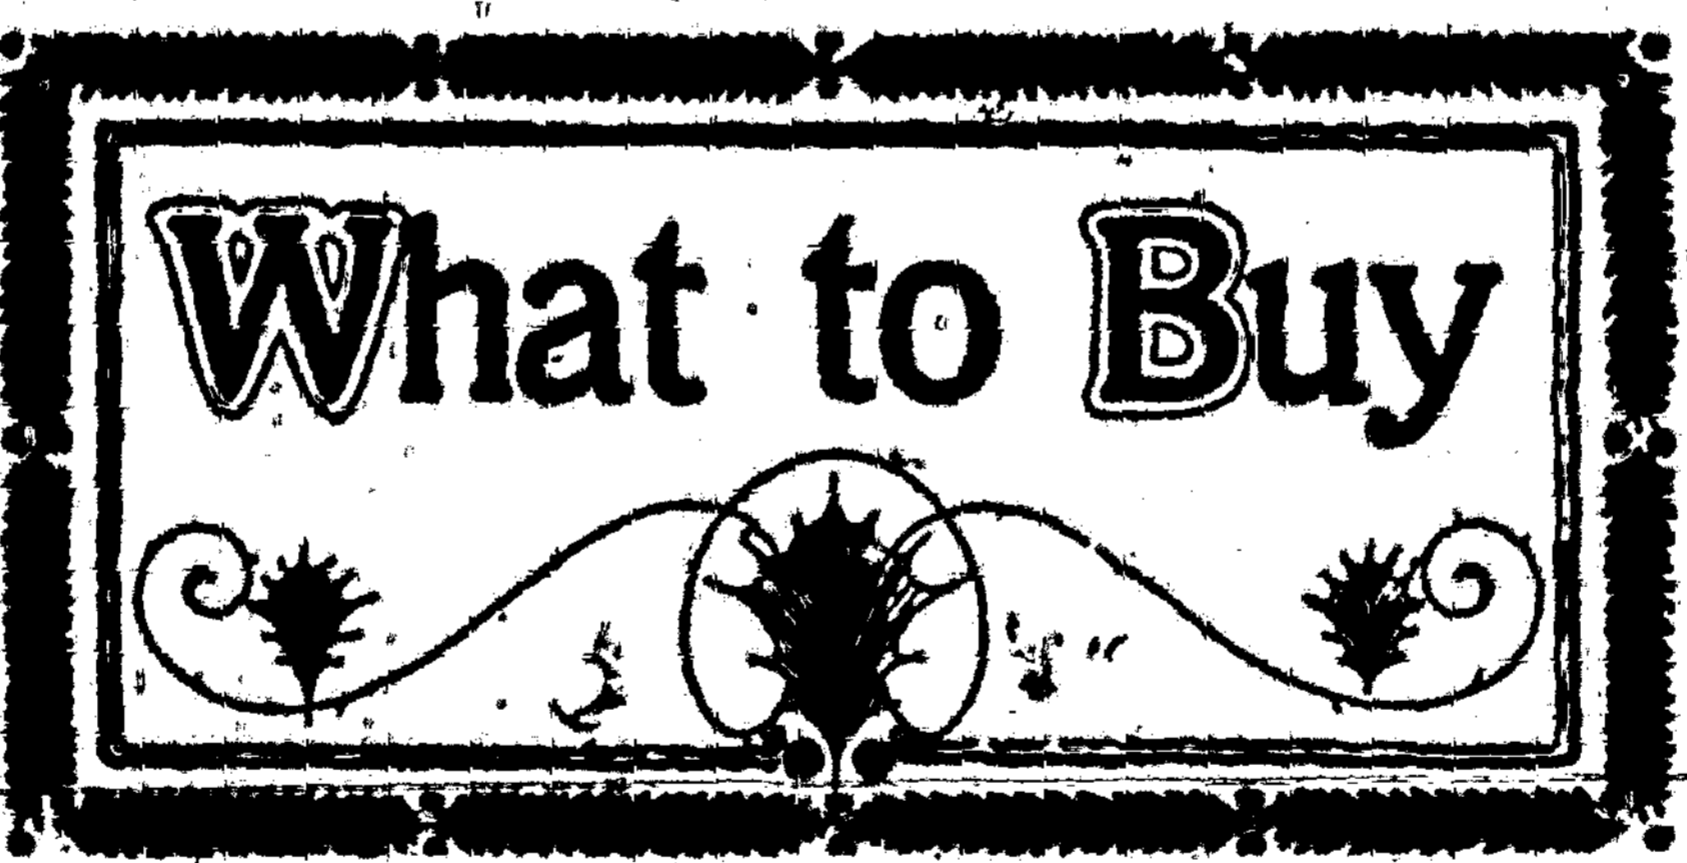

The new dairy building about completed is 50 feet long by 24 feet wide and is second to none in this part of the state in convenience and sanitation. The floors, stall and mangers are all made of concrete and is the work of the owner of the dairy; the frame work was done by W. J. Langston.

There are 16 stalls separated by strong iron barriers and the steel stanchings through which the cows are fed are arranged so that it is impossible for one cow to interfere with her next door neighbor. The manger extends the full length of the building as also does the drain and the refuse is carried away to a deep cesspool at a far distant point on the ranch.

The dairy is well ventilated, provided with electric lights at each stall and elsewhere over building. When milking time arrives, the cows file into the dairy to their respective stalls to be fed and milked with the latest and most sanitary milking machine method. The completeness and convenience of everything about the dairy and above all, the sanitary condition of the same in the dairy and the house where the milk is bottled adjoining the dairy, satisfies the visitor of the fact that up-to-date methods and constant care of an enterprise like that above mentioned which is so essential to the public health, is rewarded with meritorious results.

Mrs. Petra R. Gonzales, mother of Mrs. Maggie V. Chavez, who has been confined to her bed for the past ten days on account of illness, is now up and much improved in health.
