

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

This is the third and last installment in the series. This week quoting from replies received, we shall describe Teacher H or the most effective teacher, disregarding likes and dislikes. The following are selected excerpts.

"Teacher H makes you to learn without having to drill it into you. It seems that if she wants you to learn a thing, you learn it and know it the rest of your life. Teacher H is a good teacher for he explains every little thing and then if you don't understand it, he explains it again. Most of the students are orderly when he is out of the room and that shows that they respect him. The teacher I learned the most from was stern, but was kind to those who were kind to her. Teacher H taught me like nobody's business.

Teacher H has such an interesting way delivering lectures that I am sure to remember what she says. Teacher H was sometimes cross, but she made you learn. Teacher H was fair and square. If we didn't have our lessons we had to stay until we got them. When we got out, we knew something. Teacher H knew what to do and how to do it. Teacher H was very effective in the study hall. When he stepped in, all of the students began studying and never had to be told but once.

Briefly summarizing, Teacher A is helpful, capable, kind, humorous, impartial and has a distinct personality. Teacher Z is cross, unable or unwilling to explain, partial, conceited and lacking in a sense of humor. In most cases Teacher A and Teacher H were identical. In other cases Teacher H was effective, but as an effective machine. Teacher A is Teacher H plus that invaluable something known as personality."

It is hardly fair to conclude this discussion without some reference to the type of students that the teachers like. At some future date we hope to give you a brief classification of students.

The Math classes have worked hard and are well advanced in their work even though the semester was short. In January the Plane Geometry students plan to take a standardized test published by the State Teachers' College at Emporia, Kansas.

On Friday we had our Christmas program. There were several entertaining numbers by the various classes. We had a Christmas tree and gifts were exchanged. Those who wished to donate their gifts to the Christmas toy fund. We had a very nice Christmas and hope that you, too, had a Merry Christmas.

The young lady was in the act of taking a bath, when an electric lamp on the wall overhead, fell into the bathtub, caused a contact and before help could come, the young lady was electrocuted. At the time of the accident, the mother was at Silver City and hurried to Fabens as soon as the sad news reached her. The news was phoned here to Mrs. J. M. Beck Tuesday night.

Here at home and elsewhere, especially at the University, she has continually added to her long list of friends, all of whom will be showering her with congratulations.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Stokes of Midland, Texas. He came here with his brother, Dewey Stokes, about two years ago and purchased large ranch interests about four miles east of town from R. C. Sowder and at that place, the newly married couple will make their future home. The Stokes Brothers are natural ranchmen and our community has been greatly benefited by their addition. During the time he has resided here, T. J. has made many lasting friends. After their marriage, they went to Midland to spend the holiday season and will be at their ranch home shortly after the new year and their many friends will have the glad opportunity of offering their congratulations.

1. Andrew Jackson, the first Democratic President, who was occupying the White House in 1833. (Author's Note: To forestall those who say, "But wasn't Thomas Jefferson the first Democratic President?" It may be pointed out that Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and John Quincy Adams were known as "Republicans" or "Democratic-Republicans" and that Jackson was truly the first Democratic President.)
2. Replica of the "Stourbridge Lion," the first practicable locomotive to run upon a permanent railroad track in America. The Lion's trial trip was made at Honesdale, Pa., on August 9, 1829, and it paved the way for other railroad ventures which by 1833 were proving the practicability of this form of transportation.
3. A stage station and a stage coach, which in 1833 was the principal means of transporting passengers and mail.
4. Chicago's "sky-line" in 1833.
5. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic President who will occupy the White House in 1933 after three Republican administrations.
6. The "railplanes," an entirely new form of high speed transport which has now been developed to a practical working conclusion. It can be built over existing railways, making it a fast passenger service. The passenger cars, which are self-propelled and driven by air screws fore and aft, are stream-lined and suspended from a steel girder.
7. The very latest thing in air mail planes.
8. One of the main groups of exhibition buildings for the Chicago Century of Progress exposition which will open in 1933, with their modernistic set-backs, terraces and multi-levels for traffic.

Ezekiel Webster confessed, from a cold sense of duty.

"Jackson was, as no President before him, the choice of the masses. His popular vote in 1824 revealed not only his personal popularity, but the growing power of the democratic elements in the nation, and his defeat in the house of representatives only strengthened his own and the people's determination to be finally victorious. The untrained, self-willed, passionate frontier soldier came to power in 1828 as the standard bearer of a mighty democratic uprising which was destined before it ran its course to break down oligarchical party organizations, to liberalize state and local governments, and to turn the stream of national politics into wholly new channels. It was futile for men of the old school to protest and to prophesy misfortune for the country under its new rulers. The people had spoken, and this time the people's will was not to be denied."

In 1833 there will be another Democratic President in the White House. Obviously it would be futile to attempt to demonstrate any similarity between Andrew Jackson and Franklin D. Roosevelt for both the heredity and the environment which produced the two men were so different as to make any logical correlation impossible. But since the forces which work to place men in positions of power and responsibility are invariably more important than the men themselves, isn't it more important that there is a plausible similarity between the forces which placed these two Democratic Presidents in the White House? A century ago there was a political revolution after four decades of rule by the Federalists and Democratic-Republicans (into which the Federalists had gradually merged). The election of last November had all the aspects of a political revolution after twelve years of Republican rule and there is something singularly appropriate to that election in Professor Ogg's words about the election of Jackson: "It was futile for men of the old school to protest and prophesy misfortune for the country under its new rulers. The people had spoken and this time the people's will was not to be denied."

So in 1933 the American people face the future under a new administration not only in their National Capital but in many state capitals as well. They have been promised a "new deal" for such was the slogan of the winning Presidential candidate. Whether or not he will be able to carry out that promise, with all its implications, to their satisfaction remains to be seen. For, granting him the utmost in sincerity and honesty of purpose, the fact remains that factors over which he will have no control will shape the destiny of the nation during the next third of the century and those factors, rather than the actions of one man or group of men, will make the "new deal" whatever it turns out to be.

There can be no doubt that the principles of which Andrew Jackson was the exponent profoundly influenced the history of the United States during the third of the century which followed 1833. But they were merely political principles and their influence on our history was negligible compared to the influence of the social and economic forces which were set in motion during that time.

It was this decade which saw a new social consciousness being aroused in the nation. For the first time men were beginning to question actively the right of one race to hold in bondage another race. New Year's day, 1851, saw the publication of the first number of William Lloyd Garrison's Liberator and within two years there had been organized the American Anti-Slavery society. More than that, the common man was beginning to become more conscious of his rights as a man and a citizen. Many of the states had rid themselves of the old property and tax qualifications for voters, the property qualifications for officers had been eliminated or had disappeared and nearly all the state officers, including judges, were being elected by popular vote instead of being chosen by the legislature or governor, as had been the case formerly.

Coincidentally with these social movements were economic movements which were to revolutionize the life of the American people. It was an era of industrial progress, of internal improvements and of national development in a number of material ways. Albert Bushnell Hart, the historian, has declared that "In the 36 years from 1820 to 1840 more labor-saving inventions were brought forward than in the whole history of mankind before. The American manufacture of edge tools began; the invention of planing machines revolutionized wood-working; platform scales were introduced; the Naumath steam hammer was patented in 1842; the iron cook stove was put on the market about 1840; friction matches (invented in England in 1827) slowly began to take the place of the old flint and steel; the first crude Colt's revolver was patented in 1835. To furnish power for cotton and woolen mills, paper mills and other industries, dams were built on the falls of the rivers in the eastern, middle and southern states. . . . The methods of farming were changed by farm machinery. In 1834 McCormick patented the first horse reaper, the basis of the present elaborate mowers and reapers.

Transportation began to undergo a change. The steamboat made the sailing vessel obsolete and it pointed the way to the necessity for internal improvements such as canals. But almost overnight there came the railroads to cheapen transportation, stimulate travel and build up new states and cities. Then began the opening of public lands, the rush into the West (its population increasing from 2,600,000 to 7,000,000 from 1820 to 1840) and the demand for more laborers bringing a strong current of immigration from abroad.

So the young giant of the New world, Uncle Sam, got away to a flying start on the road of progress, a race which has continued to the present time. The year 1833 is as good a year as any other from which to date this progress.

What of the year 1933? Will the historians of the future write it down as another beginning of a new era of progress—social, political, economic and spiritual progress? We who live in this year cannot answer that question. But if we learn anything by the lessons of the past, we can at least recognize some of the stirrings beneath the surface of everyday life which may give a hint of the changes that are to be.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for January 1. JOHN PREPARES THE WAY FOR JESUS

Mark 1:1-11. GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Mark 1:3. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Faithful Messenger. JUNIOR TOPIC—The King's Messenger. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Heralds of the King. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparing the Way for the Christ.

Since the Lessons for the first six months of 1933 are mainly taken from the Gospel according to Mark, it is necessary to grasp the central purpose of this Gospel. In the Old Testament it is set forth an august portrait of the Messiah. He is the Branch, the King (Jer. 23:5); the Branch, the Servant (Zech. 3:8); the Branch, the Man (Zech. 6:12); the Branch of the Lord (Isa. 4:2).

The fourfold account contained in the Gospels, placed alongside the Old Testament predictions, fits exactly. Matthew presents him as the King; Mark, the Servant of the Lord; Luke as the Kinsman-Redeemer, and John as the Son of God. The central theme of Mark is the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God (1:1). The key verse is Mark 10:45, "The Son of man came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." The key words are "straightway," "forthwith," "immediately." The picture of the divine Servant energetically doing the Father's work is most beautiful, for the girded one is as beautiful as the arrayed one.

1. Who is This Servant (v. 1)? This servant who so fully and energetically executed the divine will is the very Son of God.

11. The Forerunner of the Divine Servant (vv. 2-8).

1. Who he was (vv. 2, 3). He was John the Baptist who was prophesied of more than five hundred years before (Isa. 40:3).

2. His mission (v. 2). It was to prepare the way for Christ's coming. He represented himself as but a voice of one crying in the wilderness. He was therefore God's voice proclaiming the divine will and purpose. He was content to be but a voice.

3. His message (v. 3-5).

a. Prepare ye the way of the Lord (v. 3). It was customary for servants to go before distinguished personages and prepare the way over which they were to travel. In this preparation there was to be a removal of stones, the leveling of the surface, etc. John's message meant therefore that the people should remove from their hearts everything which hindered the incoming of the Lord. He called upon them to humble themselves, to bring down the high places, of pride and straighten out the crooked places and confess their sins.

b. The baptism of repentance (v. 4). In preparation for the coming of Christ, people were to repent of their sins. Those who repented were to be baptized. Baptism was to be administered to those who repented as an expression of penitence which led to forgiveness of sin.

c. The coming of the Messiah (vv. 7, 8). The coming one was to be much greater than himself, so great that John was unworthy to loose the latchet of his shoes. The superior dignity of Christ was not only in his person but in the work he was to perform. John merely baptized with water but Jesus with the Holy Ghost.

4. His success (v. 5). People from all over Judea and Jerusalem went out and were baptized. John's dress and demeanor were in keeping with his stern mission. He was clothed with camel's hair and had on a girdle of skin. Locusts and wild honey constituted his food. His food and dress indicated that he had withdrawn from the world as a protest against its follies and sins.

III. The Divine Servant Baptized (vv. 9-11).

Jesus was not baptized because he sinned and therefore needed repentance, but because he had taken the sinner's place and was about to accomplish his work which would constitute the basis of all righteousness. He was now dedicating himself to the task of bringing in righteousness through his sacrificial death. Observe in connection with his baptism:

1. The opened heavens (v. 10). This indicated his connection with heaven.

2. The descent of the Spirit upon him (v. 10). This was the divine seal to his work.

3. The voice of approval from heaven (v. 11). This made clear to John the fact that Jesus was the Messiah.

A Divine Man God will not have his work made manifest by cowards. It needs a divine man to exhibit anything divine.—Emerson.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HEAD of us lies a new year—1933. Although it does not mark the "turn of the century" nor yet "reaching the half-way mark"—both of which furnish a logical excuse for pausing to take stock, to look back and to see what progress we have made socially, politically, economically and spiritually; yet there is ample reason for doing that very thing just now. For 1933 will round out the first third of the Twentieth century and if there is anything in history repeating itself, the next third will be filled with events of the greatest significance to the future of our nation. Certainly that was true during the corresponding period in the Nineteenth century and a comparison and contrast of 1833 and 1933 cannot fail to be of interest and, perhaps, of value to Americans as they face the new year.

In 1833 there was a new type of President in the White House, a Democratic President. Andrew Jackson was his name and his being there had come about through a veritable political revolution. Its significance has been well appraised by the historian, Frederic Austin Ogg, in his volume "The Reign of Andrew Jackson—A Chronicle of the Frontier in Politics" in the Yale University Press series "The Chronicles of America." He writes:

"Jackson's election to the Presidency in 1829 was correctly described by Senator Benton as 'a triumph of democratic principle, and an assertion of the people's right to govern themselves.' Jefferson in his day was a candidate of the masses, and his triumph over John Adams in 1800 was received with great public acclamation. Yet the Virginian was at best an aristocratic sort of democrat; he was never in the fullest sense a man of the people. Neither Madison nor Monroe inspired enthusiasm; and for John Quincy Adams even New Englanders voted, as

Old Toys Recall Pleasant Memories

On the eve of Christmas came a message over the wires of a gathering at the home of George White, governor of the great state of Ohio, who with his family at the fireside, opened an old chest containing relics of long ago, when the children were young and believed strongly in the coming of Santa Claus.

Now these things would seem strange to other people than to the governor's family, but to the father, mother and the five children now grown to manhood and womanhood, they meant more than perhaps their tongues could express. The articles were a ragged teddy bear, a hair-as-doll with but one eye, a train that wouldn't run and other childish toys which brought back tender memories, for they once belonged to the children in the long ago, when they looked and waited for Santa Claus.

These were treasures that money couldn't buy. We fashion in our imagination the delight with which the children, now grown up, would fondle and love the toys with which they played in childhood.

The one-eyed doll was, no doubt, one of the girl's first love - and no doll, no matter how fine or expensive, could ever take its place in the childish heart.

The train that refused to run couldn't be replaced with the Golden State Limited, and the ragged teddy bear was in a sense a treasure, worth its weight in gold.

How these cherished relics bring back visions of childish happiness! It reminds us of the old sweet song which ran like this -

"One summer's eve with pensive thoughts
 I wondered to the old sea shore."

And as the poet sings of gathering shells from the shore as in his childhood, he finished with these lines:

"A dream came o'er me like a spell
 I thought I was again a child."

DE E. BRADSHAW, NEWLY ELECTED HEAD OF W. O. W., IS NATIONALLY KNOWN

As General Attorney He Was Active Legally in Nearly Every State

De Emmet E. Bradshaw, who was elected president of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Association at a special meeting of De E. Bradshaw the Beveridge Camp in Omaha, Nebraska, on November 30, was formerly general attorney of the organization for 18 years.

Mr. Bradshaw fills the unexpired term of the late W. A. Fraser, who died while in Europe. Mr. Fraser was buried in Dallas, and special memorial services were held in his memory at national headquarters.

The newly elected president was born in a log cabin in Arkansas. He taught school as a youngster and then attended LaCrosse collegiate institute. Later he was graduated from National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio. He attended the night law school of the University of Arkansas and started his practice in Little Rock.

Mr. Bradshaw was very active in politics and business in Little Rock. He became associated with Woodmen of the World as head consul for the states of Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi before being elected to the Board of Directors while J. C. Root was first president of W. O. W.

Mr. Bradshaw came to Omaha in 1910 as General Attorney and with Mr. Fraser reorganized the Association into the strongest fraternal insurance company in the world. He engaged in litigation on behalf of W. O. W. in nearly every state with a very large degree of success.

Members of the Board of Directors regard Mr. Bradshaw as one of the outstanding legal minds in the fraternal insurance field. His profound knowledge of insurance law and his natural leadership are his chief assets.

"No man was ever more fortunate than I in his mother," said Mr. Bradshaw. "Her loving prayers follow me all the days of my life, and I owe all of my success to the early training and care she gave me. I am glad to say that though she is 96 years old, she is still able to get around the house, taking care of her duties, making quilts, knitting lace."

Mr. Bradshaw is a past president of the Fraternal Society Law Association and also of the Legal Section of the National Fraternal Congress. As general attorney, Mr. Bradshaw approved more than $200,000,000 of bonds purchased for the organization, and is largely responsible for the excellent securities it has in its portfolio.

W. O. W. has had a steady consistent growth during the 42 years of its existence. It has approximately 400,000 members throughout the United States. Its net assets on December 1 of this year totaled more than $110,000,000, which is an increase in net assets of $4,500,000 during one year.

Among the features of W. O. W. are Radio Station WOW in Omaha and the World Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, Texas, for members afflicted with tuberculosis.
