

LOCAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. Montie Gardenhire and Miss Beulah Condon were here from Capitan Monday and witnessed the "Dirigible" at the Crystal Theatre that night.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher, brother, S. W. Wells, and nephew, Ralph Greeno, left last Saturday for Palmdale, Calif., where, after a month or six weeks' visit, Mrs. Gallacher and Ralph will return to Carrizozo. On her return, Mrs. Gallacher will devote most of her time to further improve the condition of her pretty flower beds and lawn.

Albert Ziegler, of Ziegler Brothers General Store, returned from Chicago last Sunday morning. He left everybody feeling fine at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Gutknecht, where Mrs. Ziegler will visit until spring opens. Mr. Ziegler returned by way of St. Louis. He said that the east has had an exceptionally mild winter, more so than any of the past ten years.

Murray Morgan, of the Alamogordo News, was here last Saturday, and made this office a friendly call. He left late in the afternoon, going from here to Glencoe to meet Mrs. Morgan and returning to the "City of Trees."

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower and children were down from their ranch near Ancho, Tuesday, purchasing ranch supplies at our business houses.

Lupe Gabaldon is here this week from Claunch, on account of the illness of one of his nephews with pneumonia. At this time there is no change for the better in his condition. Lupe will remain until assured that the young man is out of danger.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rountree were here from Capitan yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lemon made a trip to Roswell Sunday, visited with Maurice for the day and returned home in the evening.

J. B. French and John Brady, who attended the meeting of the Republican State Central Committee last Saturday, returned Sunday. Mrs. French accompanied J. B. to Santa Fe, and they made the return trip by way of Albuquerque.

P. M. Melton, daughter, Rita, and Mr. and Mrs. Kingston were here from the Melton ranch, north of town, Monday. After making purchases of our merchants, they returned home in the afternoon.

J. M. Frame was down from Ancho Saturday evening, made the Outlook a friendly call and visited the Lyric Theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. M. U. Finley returned Sunday from a trip to Clovis and Roswell. At Clovis they visited at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Harry Lyman, and at Roswell they visited at the home of their other daughter, Mrs. Dewey Pilant. With no less affection for their daughters, let us venture to say that the crowning attraction of the visit was the grandchildren at both places. Funny, isn't it, how these wee bits of glad sunshine shorten distances from our loved ones, sometimes?

Scared Yellow

During the past week we have noted locally several instances of citizens "scared yellow" over the depression and who went about cutting off small trivial expenses in an effort to save when they are worth many thousands of dollars—scared yellow. It is a different matter for those who do not know where their next meal is coming from scarcely, to cut their expenses—many have to make heavy sacrifices of comfort and even necessity—as compared to those miserly beings who though having plenty, grow more miserly.

A great deal of the responsibility for the present economic situation in the United States is caused by the hoarding of money—miserliness—uncharitableness—by people who are "scared yellow."

This tendency by a portion of our population has called forth within the past day or so a ringing call from President Hoover to the people "to enlist with the war-time unity and courage in the patriotic fight against money hoarding."

We note a spirit unworthy of the citizens of a great nation. There is not going to be any revolution; our government is not going to fall; our industries are not going to fail us; our capitalistic and labor systems are not going to be changed—at least until some system better shows up—so why be "yellow?"

The most that can be said is that the present order of things needs some severe adjustments which are coming slowly and surely, rather than with revolutionary force. The Star Spangled Banner yet waves, and will wave over our grand-children, and great-grand-children.

America will go on to new peaks of triumph in government, science and art. Why, why be yellow?—Alamogordo News.

Dual Birthday Party

Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Trimble of the Carrizozo Bakery entertained at a dual birthday party in honor of their two little daughters, Mourine, aged five and Billye, one year old, respectively. A large gathering of children participated in the merriment which consisted of games of a childish nature.

A large two-story birthday cake adorned the table, which was the handiwork of Daddy Joe, the baker and into the task, he put his best loving efforts. On the lower story were five candles, while on the upper, which was allotted to the baby, appeared one lone candle for the "boss of the house", which is the baby's position in all homes. Aside from host, hostess and little guests, those of the grown-ups present, were: Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Mosier, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Beckett, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wyszong, the Misses Mable and Lena Mackie. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the well arranged affair.

In a letter from W. E. Renick, cleaner and presser, formerly of this place, but now located at Socorro, he says he likes his new location very much, and sends regards to Carrizozo friends.

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F., held a well attended meeting Tuesday night.

Edward Franklin Haskins

Edward Franklin Haskins was born in DeKalb, Mississippi, January 17, 1873; died in Carrizozo, New Mexico, Tuesday morning, February 9, 1932.

Mr. Haskins came to Lincoln County in 1889. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Amanda Johnson. To this union three children were born: Frank, Pearl, and Alvin. He married Miss Izora Reasoner, May 18, 1913. There are seven children of this marriage: Claude, Allie, Edward, Wilson, Lenelle, Tommie and Louola. Mr. Haskins joined the Methodist Church in Mississippi in his youth.

Besides those mentioned, he leaves to mourn his departure, a brother, James Haskins, and three sisters, Mrs. Quinnie Johnson, Mrs. Addie Thornton and Mrs. Ollie Nelson.

Funeral service to be conducted in the Methodist Church, date not yet announced, by the Rev. John L. Lawson. Interment in the White Oaks Cemetery.

Southern Pacific Installs Chlorinator

Last Saturday marked the finishing of one of the latest improved chlorinators, which was installed this side of Nogal Lake, which acts as a reservoir for water coming through the pipe line from the Bonito Dam.

The water goes through the chlorinator after leaving the lake, and is thoroughly purified before coming to Carrizozo. The process relieves the water of all impurities, such as bacteria, etc., and our people may now rest assured of the fact that our water will be absolutely pure at all times of the year. The work was done under the supervision of Assistant Division Engineer, B. S. Sines, and A. B. Zumwalt, Supt. of the Bonito Water System.

Cent-a-Mile Excursions

Continuing its efforts to facilitate holiday travel in New Mexico and five other Western States the Southern Pacific Company today revealed plans for a four-day series of cent-a-mile excursions in connection with Washington's birthday.

The low-fare roundtrips may be started February 19 to 22, inclusive, with final return limit of March 1, according to announcement by C. P. Huppertz, agent for the railroad here.

Territory included in the excursion program extends from El Paso to Portland, and from San Francisco to Ogden and Salt Lake City, Mr. Huppertz stated.

Methodist Church

Harmonious Meeting of State Central Committee

Just the opposite to what some enemies of the Republican movement in the state would endeavor to make it, the Republican State Central Committee meeting at Santa Fe last Saturday was decidedly harmonious. Opposition papers pretend that there was a fight, and that the Cutting forces won out. The fact of the matter is, there were some discussions on certain topics, but none that would have a tendency to incite discord. A careful reading of the proceedings of that body in an unbiased manner is all that is necessary.

Herman Kelt was a visitor to Santa Fe last Saturday.

AMERICAN LEGION

The Benjamin I. Berry Post No. 11, of the American Legion at Carrizozo, met last week for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected:

Commander, Carl E. Freeman
Vice-Commanders, E. I. Griffin and James Perry
Adjutant, E. M. Barber
Chaplain, Joe West
Historian, S. E. Greisen
Sergeant at Arms, Claud A. Branum.

Several new members have joined the local Post, and it is hoped to have a membership of more than fifty in the very near future.

The Legion has many activities which they are sponsoring, but the major activity for 1932 in which the organization is interested is that of unemployment. A National drive has been started in which the Legion hopes to place one million unemployed in jobs during the present month. The movement is endorsed by President Hoover, Congress and Commander Stevens of the Legion.

A dance will be given at the Community Hall on the night of Feb. 22, and this will be Washington's birthday. It is hoped that a large number of people both old and young, will attend. The proceeds will be devoted to charity and unemployment in our own locality and other parts of Lincoln County. Officers and members of the Legion Posts at Corona, Ruidoso, and all in sympathy with the movement, are invited to attend.

Oscura Observations

O. W. Moore is visiting his wife and son at the Thornton ranch home. Mrs. Moore is the former Miss Gladys Thornton.

Mayor L. A. Whitaker purchased a Ford Coupe from the Carrizozo Auto Company this week—look out, Leap Year!

Wm. Wettstein, the genial postmaster, is putting in shelving this week and will put in a stock of groceries in a few days.

Sunday was a grand day—we had our preacher with us. We had Sunday School and also a good sermon attendance. The attendance was 33, showing a marked increase.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor motored to Socorro to spend Sunday with their daughter and sister. They will also celebrate Mrs. Taylor's 77 birthday.

C. H. Thornton also had a birthday Sunday, and passed around the cake which was very good, being made by his daughter, Mrs. Moore. Many more happy birthdays; Mr. Thornton.

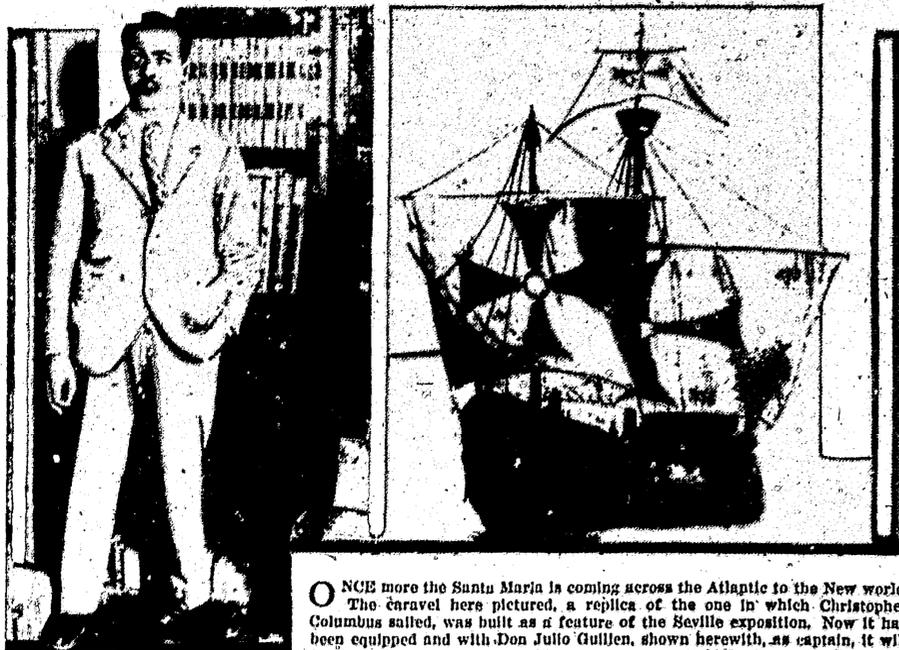

Lee Hancock of Corona was an Oscura visitor this week with a calf buyer—but nobody has anything to sell, as we are all prosperous in our district.

Miss Dorothy Brill is a guest of her aunt, Mrs. Sam Ward this week; we are enjoying Miss Brill's visit very much.

Mrs. Dixon, our lovable school teacher, was entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thornton.

Wm. Calvo entered the Wm. Beaumont Hospital this week for three or four week's treatment.

Try a few of these whey dishes, they will be enjoyed.

Whey Sherbet.

Take one quart of whey, the juice of one lemon, one tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water, one and one-fourth cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of crushed pineapple or cherries, berries or orange juice. Mix and freeze as usual, adding the fruit when the mixture is partly frozen.

When used in bread making, instead of water or milk, scald it always to insure the bread from souring. Whey should be scalded if kept for a day or two, then it may be served in any way desired.

Whey Pie.

Take two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of corn-starch, one cupful of whey, one lemon and grated rind, a bit of salt, one tablespoonful of melted butter and two well beaten eggs. Mix and bake as a custard in one crust. Or cook and pour into a baked shell, using the egg whites for a meringue.

Whey Salad Dressing.

Take one cupful of whey, one-fourth cupful of vinegar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one-eighth teaspoonful of turmeric, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth cupful of sugar, and a dash of cayenne. Heat the whey, add the dry ingredients well mixed, then add the butter and cook until smooth. A bit of mustard may be added if desired and one egg substituted for the flour. DISHES FROM WHEY

IN THE early days of our country when milk was not as plentiful as it is today, whey was used for drinks, added to bread and used by the beauty specialists as a skin-whitener. All these accomplishments are still available, if you have the whey.

Whey may be prepared from commercial rennet or junket, or it may be obtained from the natural souring of milk. Whey is the water left when the curds of milk are formed. It has much nutriment in it—salts, mineral matters and sugar. In many hospitals, babies who cannot take milk

OUR BEDTIME STORY

PETER IS IN DESPAIR

NEVER had Peter Rabbit felt great or despair in his heart than when he found who was following his tracks through the Green Forest. He didn't know where to go or what to do. If only it were anyone but Shadow the Weasel! From Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote or Hooty the Owl he could find safety to a bramble-tangle or a hollow log. But there was nowhere that he could go that Shadow the Weasel could not follow. When the ground was not frozen he had fooled Shadow by running in wet places where the ground was swampy and the water destroyed his scent, but now these places were frozen hard. Even the Laughing Brook was frozen over.

"Oh, dear!" sobbed Peter. "He'll get me this time. He surely will, I might just as well give up right now. It isn't the least use in the world to run. He can run as long as I can. I can't move without leaving tracks. Oh, how I hate this snow!" Peter said this last in a very bitter tone, quite forgetting that it was the snow which had given him warning. If he had stopped to think a minute he would have remembered that Shadow can follow tracks on bare ground by means of his wonderful nose quite as easily as he could follow those tracks in the snow, and that if there had been no snow Peter wouldn't have seen Shadow's own tracks, and so would have been caught before he had the least idea that he was being followed.

Peter was too frightened to run and he was too frightened to sit still. Anyway, that is the way he felt. Every second that he sat there was bringing Shadow nearer. With terrible fear in his eyes Peter stared back the way he had come. Then he made up his mind. "He'll not catch me without as long a run as I can give him," muttered Peter, and made a long jump sideways. Then away he went through the Green Forest, lipperty-lipperty-lip, lipperty-lipperty-lip, as fast as he could go. Never had he made longer jumps. Every little while he made a lying jump to one side, sometimes to the right and sometimes to the left. This was to make Shadow stop and hunt for his tracks. Once, after a long run straight away, he turned and hurried back in the direction from which he had just come, not in his own tracks, of course, but off to one side. Then he hid under a snow-covered bush and watched. His heart thumped dreadfully as he squatted there watching. After a little he saw a slim white form go bounding past. It was Shadow! He hadn't given up the chase.

Peter waited only until Shadow was out of sight, and then with a little hopeless sob he started on again. He had seen that Shadow was running easily, quite as if he enjoyed the chase. Peter himself was beginning to grow tired and to get out of breath. He thought of the dear Old Briar Patch. He couldn't go there, for Mrs. Peter was there. How he did wish he had heeded her and not come over to the Green Forest! But it was too late for regrets. There was nothing to do but keep on running. So Peter ran, lipperty-lipperty-lip, lipperty-lipperty-lip, but his jumps were shorter now. And somehow behind him he knew that Shadow was drawing nearer and nearer, running with long bounds that didn't seem to tire him at all.

"The Thinker" Explained. Bobby was a sore trial to his mother because of his slowness in getting dressed. He never seemed to remember where he had put this and that article of apparel.

On one occasion he was taken to a museum where he saw a reproduction of Rodin's "Le Penseur." His mother explained that the title meant "The Thinker."

Bobby studied the figure intently for a moment, and then said, "He's probably trying to think where he left his clothes."

Fighting Pheasant Ring-necked pheasant cocks are notoriously good fighters, routing domestic roosters and even cats, but the "fighterest" one of record is in Pennsylvania, according to Norman Wood, of Coatesville, in that state. This particular pheasant was holding sway in a part of a field in which it is believed there was a brood of chicks. A bull, followed by cows, entered the cock's domain. The pheasant, resenting this intrusion, proceeded to prove his right to the title of "game" bird. Repeatedly he flew against the cattle which, overcome by surprise, gave ground until the herd, followed by the astonished bull, made a hurried though dignified retreat.—Exchange.

Japan's Military Seizure of Shanghai Creates Dangerous Situation—China Demands Forceful Steps by League of Nations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MORE trouble for the world develops in the Orient. Japan, pushing her campaign to put an end to the anti-Japanese boycott in China, and with this added provocation of riotous demonstrations against her Nationals in Shanghai, assembled 24 warships at that great port, and the military occupation of the city was begun by a force of about 3,000 marines. To protect the foreign settlement, four regiments of American marines and several battalions of British troops were standing by, and warships of those nations were hurrying to the scene.

Meanwhile, before the council of the League of Nations in Geneva Dr. W. W. Yen, the Chinese minister to the United States, set forth his country's side of the controversy and demanded that the council enforce the league covenant without delay. In Washington President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson were considering what America might do in the crisis. They proposed to Great Britain that the two nations apply economic embargoes or boycotts to trade with Japan, but the MacDonald government seemed reluctant to do anything more than to dispatch warships for the protection of the international settlement.

The mayor of Shanghai had yielded to the Japanese demands, but new demands were put forward and immediately thereafter the Japanese marines were landed and proceeded to seize Chapel, the Chinese quarter. As they swept through the district they encountered the desperate resistance of several thousands Chinese troops, whereupon planes were brought into action and Chapel was thoroughly bombed. Conflagrations nearly destroyed the densely populated quarter and the fatalities were undoubtedly heavy. The bloody battle continued for hours and at one time the Chinese defenders had recaptured the important north railroad station. The Japanese had previously made their way across the Whangpoo river to Pootung, site of big Japanese cotton mills, and evidently intended to advance further into Chinese territory. Also they had shelled and occupied Wousung, the fort at the mouth of the Whangpoo. Their warships at the same time had gone up the Yangtze and three cruisers were lying off Nanking ready to shell that capital city. The Chinese Nationalist government was busily mobilizing all its strength and calling on the League of Nations for help. Chiang Kai-shek, former president, was made premier and apparently was virtually the dictator.

WHAT course the United States government would follow was uncertain, but the stiffening of its policy toward Japanese encroachments was indicated by the sending of four more warships to Chinese waters from Manila. They were destroyers and their presence was requested by Rear Admiral Y. S. Williams, commander of the Yangtze patrol.

Secretary Stimson cable to Tokyo asking the intentions of Japan and received what was called a reassuring reply, but it was stated in Washington that President Hoover was proceeding on the theory that Japan would be violating international law if she landed troops on Chinese soil for any purpose but the protection of Japanese Nationals and their property. Russia came into the picture again when Japan asked permission to use the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchuria to transport troops to Harbin, where Chinese soldiers were marauding. Russia flatly refused the request, stating it intended to observe neutrality.

WHEN the league council had heard both Dr. W. W. Yen and Naotake Sato, the Japanese delegates, Joseph Paul-Boncour, who replaced Briand as chairman, warned Japan to go easy at Shanghai. He admitted that the situation was grave. Yen not only relies on the nine-power treaty and the Kellogg pact, but he also threatened to invoke Article XV of the league covenant, which is followed by Article XVI, and the latter is the one that provides for sanctions against nations that resort to war. Furthermore, "war" might well be made to cover such operations as those of the Japanese against the so-called Chinese bandits. Some of the nations in the league are mighty timid in the matter of sanctions. Yen in his talk took a stronger position than the Chinese have previously taken before the council and his characterization of the acts of Japan was forcible and uncompromising. He complained, too, about the slowness in the formation of the league's commission of inquiry and in its getting to Manchuria, where it will not arrive until April.

HAVING abandoned the reparations conference in Lausanne, France and Great Britain are still trying to solve the problem without the aid of the United States. Premier Laval in conversation with Lord Tyrrell, British ambassador, suggested a temporary plan, calling for a moratorium on reparations until after the American elections. The moratorium would expire before December 15, when the next French payment to the United States is due.

After the French elections in May and before expiration of the new moratorium a conference would be called at Lausanne or elsewhere to negotiate a permanent agreement. Such a plan would be in line with the American attitude that Germany's reparations creditors agree among themselves before the question of adjusting war debts is broached.

ONE notable result of the whole Manchurian affair is the announced determination of Sir Eric Drummond to relinquish, early next year, his position as secretary general of the League of Nations. He has held that office since the days of the peace conference and has been a most important figure in the organization. Several governments sharply criticized the secretary because of the extreme position taken by the league at the beginning of the Manchurian embargo, and some diplomats accused Sir Eric of trying to force the powers into committing themselves to action in defense of the covenant which might have led to war with Japan.

Sir Eric was evidently disgusted with what he considered the weak action of the league council, especially at the Paris session, and felt that the league had suffered great loss of prestige. The other league officials do not wish to lose his services and it was considered possible they might prevail on him to change his mind about resigning. This, however, seemed likely only if the council would take a sterner attitude toward Japan.

SEVERE loss was sustained by both the business and the sporting world in the death of William Wrigley, Jr., which occurred at his winter home in Phoenix, Ariz. The Chicago capitalist, known universally as the magnate of chewing gum and the owner of the Chicago Cubs of the National Baseball league, had many other and vast interests, including banks, mines, real estate projects and the moving picture industry. Born in Germantown, Pa., 70 years ago, he ran away at the age of eleven and started business in New York as a newsboy. In 1891 he went to Chicago and formed his own company, which soon began the manufacture of chewing gum and was vastly successful. All his varied enterprises resulted in bringing Mr. Wrigley a great fortune. Estimates by his associates ranged anywhere from $20,000,000 to $100,000,000. He was the majority stockholder in the $63,000,000 William Wrigley Jr. company, whose earnings in 1930 exceeded $12,000,000.

WHATEVER may be the final outcome, Lieut. Thomas H. Masnie of the American navy, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, will not have to pay the death penalty for the killing of Joseph Kahahawai in Honolulu, a suspected attacker of Mrs. Masnie. The four defendants in the sensational case were indicted by the grand jury in Honolulu, but the charge is second degree murder, the penalty for which is 20 years to life imprisonment.

A transcript of proceedings of the grand jury indicated that body attempted to make a report earlier and that Circuit Judge Cristy refused it. The transcript revealed he pleaded with them to "lay aside race prejudice," to consider crimes as defined by statutes, not as defined by individuals.

Cristy repeatedly told the grand jurors that whether the accused four should be punished for killing the Hawaiian was a question for the trial jury to decide. The defense attacked the indictment on the ground that the grand jury was coerced by the judge.

DARTMOOR penitentiary, the historic English prison near Plymouth, was the scene of a violent mutiny in which more than 300 convicts fought desperately all one day with the guards and police. The rioters, who were enraged because no sugar was served with their porridge, burned the principal buildings before they were subdued. There were no fatalities, but 96 of the prisoners were wounded.

CUBA'S financial affairs were aired before the senate finance committee and it was revealed that a son-in-law of President Machado had a part in a loan of $50,000,000 made by the Chase National bank to that country. Carl J. Schmidlapp, a vice president of the bank, said $500,000 had gone to Jose Oregon as an official of the Chase company's Cuban branch for distribution to the banks that took part in the loans. He said the relative of the Cuban president had only a minor part in negotiating the loan and denied he was employed for that purpose.

Herbert D. Brown, chief of the United States bureau of efficiency, testified that a report he had made of conditions in Panama had been changed by officials of the National City bank. He said his report had pointed out a way by which the country could avoid borrowing, but that the bank went ahead and loaned it $4,000,000.

HUEY LONG of Louisiana finally abandoned the governor's chair and went to Washington with his pink pajamas and took the oath of senator. Correspondents and visitors to the National Capital anticipate that his presence in the upper chamber will provide many interesting incidents. Before being sworn in Senator Long told interviewers that the Democratic party was sure to lose if it nominated Franklin Roosevelt for President, but could not be beaten if its choice was either Pat Harrison, Robinson or Garner. His fourth choice, he said, was Al Smith. He asserted that prohibition is not a party issue and should have no place in a platform.

Back in Louisiana Paul N. Cyr for the second time took the oath of office as governor and prepared to file suit to oust Alvin O. King, named by Long as governor when he went to Washington. Mr. King occupied the executive offices in Baton Rouge and had heavy guards stationed there.

TWICE in two days the advocates of a large navy were badly jolted. First the house naval committee agreed to shelve the Vinson ten-year warship authorization bill, though giving the measure its approval. Then the naval committee of the senate indefinitely postponed action on the Hale bill authorizing all warships needed to bring the navy up to the tonnage limits allowed by the London treaty.

CHARLES G. DAWES, president of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board, were busy getting ready to start the machinery of the huge concern, and the senate committee on banking had before it the names of two Democrats appointed members of the board by President Hoover. They were Harvey C. Couch of Arkansas and Jesse H. Jones of Texas.

Final approval of the $500,000,000 treasury investment in the reconstruction corporation was given in both branches of congress to a report reconciling the different provisions of the senate and house.

Both political parties were supporting the next item on the President's program, which was to give aid to depositors in closed banks through a corporation to make loans on sound but unliquid assets in those institutions. Two bills were under consideration, one drafted by Republicans and providing merely for the establishment of this corporation, and the other introduced by Senator Glass directed, mainly at overhauling the country's banking system.

REAR ADMIRAL MOFFETT, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics, told the house naval committee that the airship Akron was far superior to any other airship ever built; and immediately afterward E. C. Davidson, general secretary of the International Association of Machinists, related to the committee the story of how an investigation of the materials used in the Akron which two men charged were faulty led to the dismissal of the men by the Goodyear company. Many defects were left in the airship, according to the two men, E. C. McDonald, an inspector, and W. B. Underwood, a workman.

Admiral Moffett denied the allegation, made in a letter, that the Akron would "collapse from her own weight" if forced to land without a mooring mast. He said the airship could carry five small or four large airplanes, which would not need wheels because they are handled by trapeze arrangement on their upper wings.

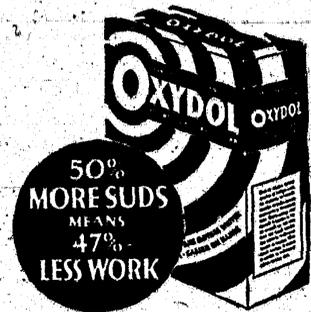

WHAT was denominated a Communist uprising troubled the government of Salvador, but martial law was proclaimed and the revolt was quickly suppressed.

On the other side of the world, in Kashmir, thousands of Moslems were reported to be looting and burning the homes of Hindus, and the maharajah appealed to the British for help.

Disturbances continued in Spain, where the government was confronted with an attempt to set up a proletarian dictatorship. The decree dissolving the Jesuits of Spain was put into effect and the property of the order confiscated.

FIFTY-SIX men perished when the British submarine M2 went down near Portland and failed to come up again. It was reported that the vessel exploded.

Wisdom in Advertising When Business Is Dull

There are certain businesses, and comparative ones, too, that show no decline during this period of business depression, either in volume or profit! What is the reason for this? An examination of published financial statements reveals this to be true even in the case of a few large retail merchandising corporations. An examination of certain other available figures indicates that these same concerns have not reduced their advertising appropriations during this depression and in many cases have even increased them.

Any business, large or small, that keeps up its advertising in both good times and bad has a powerful advantage over its competitor that reduces or discontinues its advertising! The average business at the first blush of depression begins to cut expenses, and the first item is usually advertising. Its larger or wiser competitor keeps right on advertising in depression and takes what business there is away from the concern that has ceased to advertise. In other words, the concern that does not advertise is out of competition with one that does! I am not saying that advertising would totally turn the tide of present business conditions—it is not the complete remedy for the disease that besets us, but it would aid to a large degree. At all events, if all competing businesses would continue their advertising, why, the available business in times of depression would be more evenly divided.—David Gibson, in Lorain Journal.

Presumption
Dr. I. K. Olfendick, head of the trachoma research department of the Rockefeller Institute, ended a description of the Geneva anti-trachoma conference with a story.
"So to think, even after the germ is found that the malady is conquered," he said—"well, that is to be like the boy in the swimming pool. "The boy was displaying, one by one, the treasures that were contained in his pockets. "And this," he said, "this here is a washer—for makin' automobiles!"

Why Not?
"Now, which of us shall wait for the other?"
"The one who arrives first."

Is Your Gasoline Tax Money BUILDING GOOD ROADS OR ENRICHING RACKETEERS?

You pay a tax on every gallon of gasoline you buy. Your state levies this tax to pay for building good roads.

But your state is not getting all the money paid as a gasoline tax. RACKETEERS ARE TAKING AN ALARMING AMOUNT OF IT! They are selling bootlegged gasoline on which they pay the state no tax—but they make motorists pay all or a part of the tax. The racketeer keeps this tax money himself!

You get your tax back in the form of good roads when the state collects the tax. You get nothing when racketeers get your money. And remember—if your state got all the money paid as tax, it could well afford to lower its gasoline tax!

If you want your money to go into road building instead of into the racketeers' pockets, make sure the gasoline you buy is not bootlegged. Buy gasoline made by a reliable, law-abiding company and sold under a dependable, well-known brand name, and be certain that your tax money goes to your state and not to the racketeers. That's the only way to beat the racketeers.

CONOCO Gasoline is a branded gasoline you can buy with safety at the sign of the CONOCO Red Triangle.

Castings Pearls Before Swine

With the Disarmament Conference on and striving with all its might to enact ways and means whereby war and bloodshed may be avoided, the Japs and Chinese are engaged in the very thing they agreed not to do in their league agreement. All efforts, it seems, that could be brought about to prevent strife between the two nations, have been of no avail, and the longer the conference lasts, the longer and more fierce the conflict becomes.

We had hoped that all countries on the face of the globe were fed up on this hideous war stuff. More especially do we see the evils of it when we come face to face with our young men in the prime of life, maimed in body and depressed in spirit as a result of this fiendish practice. With all the misery we see in this country, it is nothing to compare with conditions across the sea, where those who have been over since the war say that it seemed that every other man they met was a cripple, hopelessly a victim to poison gas, or otherwise suffering from internal injuries which will carry them to their graves.

If these unfortunate conditions among the young men in the flower of manhood, is not enough to make us sick of that heathenish practice and with, as we have said, nations now clashing while others are striving to prevent a repetition of these horrible things which belong in hell, then it would seem that our efforts have all been in vain, and we are still strangers to peace. Inasmuch as the civilized nations of the earth are with one accord in favor of disarmament, the Japs and Chinks should not be recognized as in the pale of civilization at all, and should be thrown out and left to their gruesome, fiendish desires to fight it out. After all, it is our opinion that a good Jap or Chink is a dead one, and you cannot satisfy them with peace propositions. Let them go back to their walk in the mire.

Watch Us, We Are Coming Back Strong

(Martin Green, in Burlington, Iowa, Post.)

New York, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Editor Post: The economic depression from which the United States is just emerging is the seventh major attack of "hard times" that this country has been through in less than a hundred years. The people who are scared almost to death for fear that America can't come back are not a bit worse scared than were the same type of timid-minded folk in each of these previous panics.

But as we all know, America came back stronger than ever. The first great financial crisis was in 1857, when practically every bank in the United States suspended payment, half of the property of the entire nation was sold in bankruptcy proceedings and there was no work for anybody and nobody had any money. But we came back so strongly that in less than twenty years our national wealth had been multiplied by three.

We came back from the crisis of 1857, went through a terrific and devastating Civil War, and again doubled our national wealth in the course of sixteen years. Then we had the panic of 1873, and that was followed by another great revival and again doubled our wealth, until the panic of 1893. We came back from that one richer than before, and we did the same thing after the crisis of 1907 and of 1920. Everybody knows how rapidly our wealth increased between 1921 and 1929 how prosperous everybody was in those fat years.

There is only one way to foretell the future, and that is by studying the past. It is as certain as anything can be that we are coming out of the present crisis toward a greater and more widespread prosperity than we have ever known. And if we have any sense we will take greater precautions against another depression than we did against this one.

THE RUNAWAYS

By H. IRVING KING
(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WFO Service)

EDITH JAFFREYS had two admirers who counted—William Lester and George Calton. As a rule, Lester was away ahead of Calton in the race, but just now a quarrel with William had brought George within measurable distance of the winning post.

The quarrel was about—well, several things; one thing leading to another, as they will when two positive characters get to arguing—smoking by women, bobbed hair, "ships and shoes and sealing wax and cabbages and kings."

The first time Edith had refused George Calton, George felt that life had turned to dust and ashes. Each subsequent refusal left him less and less afflicted. Edith had become merely a habit with him, but she had so long been the object of his dreams that he thought she was so still and made love to her automatically.

The evening after Edith's great farewell with William, George made his semi-annual proposal. This time it went, "Edith, when are you going to throw over Bill Lester and marry me?" "Mr. Lester and I, with my consent, will never meet again," she answered. "And, George, I will marry you at any time."

George was amazed at his own sensations. He knew that he ought to be deliriously joyful; but subconsciously he had a feeling of dismay.

The answer flashed across him suddenly. Helen Marlowe! Yes, hang it! he was in love with Helen Marlowe and engaged to Edith Jaffreys. George groaned as deeply on this, the first night that Edith had accepted him, as he had on the first night she had rejected him.

Edith, after George had gone, at first fairly gloated over the hopeless agony that William Lester would suffer when he learned of her new engagement. Then she began to be sorry for him, and by the time she turned off the light and got into bed she was crying. Next morning she thought: "If William will only apologize for his outrageous conduct perhaps I might—but I'm engaged to George!" She was moody and irritable all day, revolving impossible schemes to extricate herself.

George had proposed and been accepted on Wednesday. Thursday he did not show up. Friday afternoon Edith packed her bag. She had a great aunt living out on Long Island. Meantime George had been going through the same mental processes as Edith. "I shall go crazy if I think of this much longer," thought he. "I can't face this girl! I'll disappear for a while; that's what I'll do. Something may turn up in the meantime."

He packed his bag and bought a ticket for Champpville, Long Island. It was a small town. He had never been there; but he had heard it had a good hotel which was open the year round. At this season the hotel would not be likely to have many guests, and there was no chance of encountering anyone he knew.

Five people got off the train at Champpville. Three of them hurried through the little station, to waiting automobiles. Two stood on the platform and stared at each other in consternation. The two were George and Edith.

"Why George?"
"Why Edith?"
Silence for a minute and then: "Were you going somewhere?" from George.

"Oh, no," said Edith, "were you?"
"Of course not," replied George, trying to assume a look of childlike innocence.

Just then an automobile came rushing up to the station on the further side and two familiar voices were heard in the waiting room.

"I knew we should not get here by the time the train did," said the voice of Helen Marlowe.

"What's the difference?" replied the voice of William Lester; and then he and Helen saw George and Edith standing there staring at each other.

With a joyful cry Helen rushed out. William followed more cautiously, as not entirely sure of his reception. "Then you got Jack Huntington's wife all right!" cried Helen. "You see, to making up his house party, he quite forgot to send you invitations. But as soon as William and I arrived, he wired at once. But gracious! how did you make the train? He only wired half-an hour ago. Edith where are your trunks? Gone astray? Phone at once and find out about them. But first, William, you drive Edith over to Soundedge in the two-seater and send back a car for George and me. George is going to get a wiggle in the meantime. He has avoided me for two days."

Edith had never been so glad to see anybody in the world as she was to see William. They made it all up on the ride to Soundedge. Before she got into the car she said: "Remember what I said to you Wednesday night? Of course, you understand I was only joking?"
"Oh, perfectly," replied William with beaming face.

SONG OF THE WEEK
Sweet and Lovely

Sweet And Lovely Sweet-er than the rose - 45 in May—Reproduced by permission of the copyright owners.
JUST before I came East to start my radio broadcasts, I dropped in at the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles to hear Gus Arnheim and his Orchestra. Gus is an old friend of mine and a fine musician. He told me he had a new song he wanted me to hear.
Then he played "Sweet and Lovely" which he had just written with Harry Tobias and Jules Lemare. The minute I heard it I knew it was going to be a big hit. It had everything. A great melody that was "different," but very singable, and a clever lyric that I felt sure would catch the popular fancy.
To get everything out of this song, I find it best to take it quite slowly and that is the way I have sung it on my radio programs. I have occasionally heard it played quite fast, and always feel that the infectious swing of the melody is partly lost.
It is interesting about Jules Lemare. That is a pen name of Nell Moret, one of the best song writers on the Coast. He has written such big hits as "Choo," "Hawatha" and "Moonlight and Roses."
"Sweet and Lovely" is my "Song of the Week" then, and if I am not badly mistaken it's apt to be the song of the Month and probably longer.

Back to the Days of Young A. Lincoln

A. Lincoln

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

You are riding in your automobile on a paved road from Peoria to Springfield, Ill. Off to the west runs a branch road, also a modern highway. If you follow it, in a little while you come to the town of Petersburg—just another little Middle Western city. But keep on going south. Now you are following a winding road which leads up on the bluffs overlooking the Sangamon river. Suddenly you forget that you are riding in an automobile and that you have been speeding over a modern concrete road. You forget that this is 1932. For a hundred years roll back and it is the year 1832. The magic which has brought about this transformation is the sight of a little cluster of log cabins scattered over a grassy tract of some 60 acres which unfolds before you.

The cabins are empty, it is true, but if you have any imagination at all, it's easy enough to people them. Come over here to this cabin. The sign in front of it says that it is the Offut store. Walk inside. There behind the rough plank counter a tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is unrolling a bolt of calico and holding it out to the appraising fingers of a woman in a homespun dress. Do you recognize him? No?

Well, then, come over here to this big double log cabin. The sign on the front says it is the Rutledge tavern. It is evening and in front of the fire which blazes in the big fireplace at one end of the room is a group of men. It's pretty likely they'll be listening to a story which this same tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is telling. Back in the shadows you may be able to see the form of a young girl—an unusually attractive girl even though she is dressed in calico. She is the daughter of the tavern-keeper and her name is Ann. But if by chance the tall man isn't in the Rutledge tavern let's take a look in another cabin nearby. It's the cooper shop of a certain Henry Onstott. There's a fireplace here, too, and stretched out on the floor in front of it is this young man we've been seeking. Of course, you've guessed who it is by now. But just in case you haven't, ask him to let you take his book for a moment. Look on the flyleaf in front and there you'll see the name "A. Lincoln."

Of all the memorials that have been erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln this one on the banks of the Sangamon river in Menard county, Illinois, is unique. It is no imposing edifice of marble or granite. It contains no work from the chisel and mallet of a great sculptor, portraying once more the familiar face and form of the Great Emancipator. But when the projected reconstruction work is completed, the village of New Salem, where Lincoln "passed from raw untutored youth to strong intellectual manhood" will be a place where his fellow-Americans can go and in the atmosphere of that place they can more nearly feel a spiritual kinship to him than in any other place dedicated to his memory.

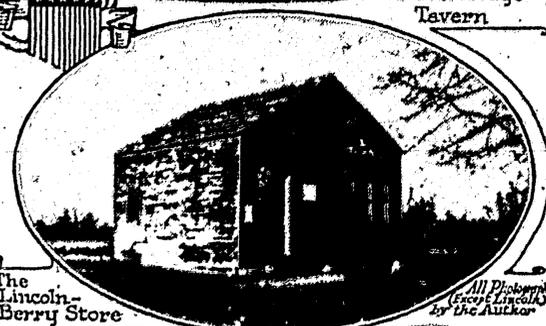

Of Old Salem park, the state park which has been established there, a recent bulletin of the Illinois department of public works and buildings says:

"It was a small town but it gave birth to a great soul. When Lincoln at the age of twenty-two, drifted down the river in 1831 and stranded his boat upon the famous mill dam at Old Salem, the town was only two years old, but in these two years it had gained a population of one hundred inhabitants and scattered along its one long street on either side there were in the neighborhood of 25 cabins of varying size including the large, two-story double room tavern. Here he came a friendless overgrown boy, untaught, uneducated, with a knowledge of only the barest rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetics. Here he chopped wood, tended store, became a merchant for himself, narrowly avoiding bankruptcy and ultimately failed in commercial lines. He was appointed postmaster, using his hat for his office. He acted as surveyor and his monuments are yet taken as authority. . . . Here he studied grammar, philosophy and law and leaped to debate against men of learning.

"During his residence here his character was formed; his education was completed, his name of 'Honest Abe' acquired; he caught the urge to serve humanity in a big broad, unselfish way. Heroic sweet chapters were written into his great life which grip the hearts of men throughout the world. . . .

"With Lincoln's departure in 1837 for wider fields, Old Salem having served its purpose, went into a decline and became a deserted village. Its cabins were removed to Petersburg where fortunately one was preserved. This was the Onstott Cooper shop where by the light of the cooper's shingles, Lincoln studied Shakespeare, Burns and Blackstone. It has been returned to its original foundation at Old Salem.

"Salem is the old Biblical word meaning 'peace' and here if you have any sentiment coursing in your blood, you will find peace. Perfect peace hovers over this serene, stately eminence of green jutting out into the quiet sea of prairie and woodland. Old Salem never ceased to mean much to Lincoln. He expected to make it his rural home after his second Presidency. . . . Research work has brought to view the original foundations of every log cabin along these forgotten streets, the almost obliterated road leading out of the village to Springfield and the path from Offut's store where Lincoln clerked, down to the grist mill where he was wont to officiate. Soon all log cabins will be restored on their original foundations and all cabins, shops and mill will be furnished as they were in 1831.

"When this work is tactfully done, the semblance of a vanished era will be perfect. The associations, the taverns, the homes, the old well which is now in use, the paths of a great life will be eloquently imparted to us. The six happiest and most fruitful years Abraham Lincoln had spent up to this time in his life will be before us more vividly than tongue or pen could describe them."

So far the buildings which have been restored are the Rutledge tavern, the Offut store, near which took place the famous Armstrong-Lincoln wrestling match; the store where Lincoln and William Berry were business partners; the Henry Onstott cooper shop and the Hill and McNamar store. There is also a handsome stone structure, which is said to be a "black" museum, containing many interesting Lincoln relics. Although the original town was named New Salem, the state park and the restored village is called Old Salem. This was necessary because there is a New Salem in Pike county, Illinois, and a town of Salem in Marion county. So to prevent confusion, it was thought best to call the resurrected town Old Salem.

It was during Lincoln's life in New Salem that there became associated with his name some of the innumerable stories so familiar to all of us. Some of them are sufficiently authenticated to be accepted as fact but others are pure legend. Not the least of the services of the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge in his monumental biography of Lincoln, published by the Houghton Mifflin company some four years ago, was the confirming of some of these legends and the disposing of others so that an authentic portrait of Lincoln emerged from the great mass of evidence of which he consisted.

The high spot in Lincoln's career at New Salem in the mind of most people, no doubt, was his romance with Ann Rutledge, daughter of the tavernkeeper, over which so many writers have rhapsodized, albeit usually inaccurately. There was a very substantial basis of fact for the legend which has sprung up about this love affair, but it was not the "grand passion" which has been so often depicted. Of her Beveridge says:

"Ann appears to have been the most attractive girl in New Salem and was courted by the two most prominent and prosperous young men of the village, Samuel Hill and John McNamar. McNamar was her favorite and she became engaged to the thrifty young financier with whom, it would appear, she was very much in love. Lincoln, too, 'had great partialities' for her, but McNamar stood in his way. . . . McNamar and Lincoln were friends and the young merchant did not know that Lincoln was 'paying any particular attention to any of the Young Ladies of my acquaintance' as, indeed, he was not at that time. On her part, Ann was not then 'favorably impressed' with Lincoln, who was 'young, poor and awkward' and without prospects, while both Hill and McNamar were 'up in the world'."

McNamar went by the name of McNeil in New Salem, a name which he had assumed when he left his home in New York to seek his fortune in the West and pay off the debts which his father had accumulated. His only reason for the change of name was in order "to avoid pursuit by his parents" and there was no disgrace attached to that change. But it led to tragedy just the same. For McNamar went back East, fell ill and with other troubles piling up on him, his letters to Ann, to whom he had confessed his real name, became infrequent and finally ceased coming to New Salem.

"Troubled that letters from her betrothed no longer came, Ann told her parents of McNamar's change of name. Suspicion instantly sprang up and possessed the Rutledge family. Rumor of the circumstances soon ran from cabin to cabin in the little hamlet; gossip made the worst of the situation. . . . Ann had been abandoned."

"So stood matters when Lincoln, through whose hands (as postmaster at the time) her correspondence with McNamar had passed; began his courtship, the nature and course of which are misty. No positive engagement resulted, although it seems that there was a tentative agreement to marry, 'conditional,' however, asserts Ann's brother, 'to an honorable release from the contract with McNamar.' Indeed, when urged by her younger brother, David, to marry Lincoln, Ann refused until she could see McNamar again and 'inform him of the change.'"

But she was destined never to see him again for she died on August 25, 1835. "When Lincoln came from the bedside of the dying girl, observers noted that he was . . . 'looking as if he were dead,' he appeared gloomy and dejected. Again, in the village, 'old people' wagged their heads and said that he was mentally unbalanced, this time because of sorrow. 'But various opinions obtained as to the cause of his change, some thought it was an increased application to his law studies, others that it was deep anguish of soul (as he was all soul) over the loss of Miss R.'"

Beveridge then quotes another biographer of Lincoln as saying "Gossip and imagination have represented this early romance as casting a shadow over his whole after life, and as having produced something bordering upon insanity. The picture has been somewhat too highly colored and the story made rather too tragic." It was sufficiently tragic for the first love of Ann Rutledge for some three months later McNamar came back to New Salem to find his betrothed dead.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way. Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

A Candle in the Wilderness

A Tale of the Beginning of New England By IRVING BACHELLER

WNU Service Copyright by Irving Bacheller

"He accepted the challenge to fight another Turk. They crashed together and splintered their lances. They drew pistols and fired. A bullet rang on Smith's breastplate and glanced off. Smith's bullet tore into the left arm of the Turk, who could no longer control his horse. Soon he fell faint and stunned. Smith cut off his head."

"The Turks demanded another fight. It came the next day when Smith fought a giant with battle axes."

"Our captain lost his ax and was nearly outdone. His horsemanship saved him until with his falchion, he ran the Turk through."

"When we were defeated in battle he was wounded and lay a night with the slaughtered dead. He recovered, was taken to Axopollis and put on the auction block. He was kicked and handled and felt over like a horse and sold to the highest bidder. He went to a bashaw in Nalbrits. When the bashaw had nothin' else to do he'd kick Smith. It was his only amusement. He kicked once too often. They were alone in a barn where Smith was threshin' with a flail. Smith broke the bashaw's neck and ran away. There's a man for ye—credit to the blood in his veins! He had a rough hand in war, but in peace he were gentle as a dove. He never sored his lungs again. He got back to London where we met and shipped together for the New world. Don't worry, boy, ye're born under a lucky star. Be a man like John Smith. There's the quirk that wins."

From that time on the young man was in better heart."

Old Achawat was as strong and tireless with his paddle as the younger men. There were long carries where the standing water was rough as the sea in a storm. Clouds came out of the west and as night was falling on a long carry black clouds came over split with fiery flashes and roaring with thunder. The party halted and began to prepare for rain.

"The great bird!" Achawat exclaimed, pointing upward. In a curious dialect he asked the white men if they would some time get him a little thunder bird. He would be afraid of a big one but he thought that a little one would be a better friend than a dog.

The red men were busy gridding great spruces and, with sharpened pole-ends, stripping off cylinders of bark about five feet long. Soon every man had a water-proof arch of bark to cover him for the night. Being on high ground under thick foliage one needed only a blanket to be fairly well protected from the weather.

Next evening they reached the big camp on the island just off the Canadian shore. In the midst of it a great fire was burning and the red men were dancing around it, their bodies bent, their heads lowered like the head of a charging bull, their arms moving as if they were kneading dough, while hoarse grunts and weird cries came from their lips.

Achawat took them to the tent of Father Cauvet who was talking with a chief of the tribe. He read Robert's letter in the freight. He shook their hands, saying:

"I could welcome you with a better heart if Satan were not in possession of the camp. Some warriors came in today with an Iroquois captive and we are in the midst of a Witches' Sabbath. The girls and women have been torturing the poor creature with their teeth and presently he will be burned till he is dead and boiled in a kettle and eaten. We would better go to the far end of the island for the night than stay here and listen to his death song and the yelling of his tormentors. It would be like looking into hell."

They gathered up their blankets. "Achawat, you came with us," the Father commanded, as they went away in the darkness of the greenwood to the west shore of the island, followed by the Indian. Even there the horrors and the devilry came faintly to their ears—the high treble of the death-song, the shouting and the wild laughter.

The young man groaned as he heard it.

"Boy, it is a message good for the soul of you," said the priest. "Do you not realize how hard has been the struggle of our fathers, in ages gone, to put Satan down and how great is the blessing of industry and government? These wild folk are like the wolves, the lynxes and the catamounts of the forest always seeking prey. Then even eat rats and mice, as do the cat family, but they are more cruel than the beasts, because Satan is in them."

They slept little and arose soon after daylight. Achawat had left them in the night and gone back to his people.

"He could not keep away," said the Father. "We shall find him lying with the others, their bodies full of flesh, in a drunken stupor."

"I should think these swine unworthy of the sacrifice that you are making," Robert remarked.

The Father answered: "They are swine, and yet they are men. Their fortitude is heroic. Their patience is sublime. They are hospitable to all save an enemy. They have keen intellects and sometimes an eloquence that is moving. They ask: If God made heaven and earth where was God before heaven and earth were created? They ask many questions which we cannot answer."

They returned to the camp. It was silent. The fire had burned low. Achawat was lying with the others under a rude bark-covered shed along side the smoldering embers. It was a strange mingle of dogs and bare bodies. The girls and women and young ones, who always get out of the way when a feast is on, as the Father explained, had returned to camp and were eating together before a fire some ten yards aside. Their favorite dogs were with them. As they ate they wiped the grease from their hands on the hair of the dogs. They made the white men welcome, who sat down among them and ate dried fish and moose and blueberries. "Their heaven is paved with blueberries," the Father explained as they began eating.

The meat was well cured but was filled with surprises, for a quantity of hair, dirt and twigs had been beaten into it.

In the four days that the Englishmen spent with these nomads of the waste they saw a life so strange and revolting that only a small part of it may be here recorded—children three years old still nursing at their mothers' breasts, women giving birth to children without help or the slightest outcry and the same day going on with their work of building cabins for the winter, while the men were asleep by the fire. The girls could not be distinguished from the young men save for their double girdles at the middle and below the breasts, and their beads and earrings.

A band of scouts from the forests south of the river came into camp one evening and reported that they could find no Iroquois south of the great river. The Englishmen were told that their journey would begin at daylight in the morning. A band of the friendly Hurons arrived that evening.

The sorcerers began their work. The devil killer borrowed Robert's sword and began howling and hissing and slashing the air so furiously that the sweat poured down from his brow to his feet. With wild yells he redoubled his efforts and at last pretended to see and exterminate the accursed one. Some of the warriors had a sweat under a low arch of poles covered with blankets and heated with hot stones. They were like a dozen fighting cats in a barrel howling, hissing and kicking as the sweat proceeded.

A Huron sorcerer, hailed as Oscuta, undertook to cure a sick man by taking a small red-hot stone from the fire and putting it in his mouth and hissing and growling in the face of the invalid as he blew out his breath. Later he showed his mouth to the white men, who could see no evidence of burning. Father Cauvet explained that the savages have a mysterious art in evading the effect of heat. He had seen a woman walk through red fire apparently unscathed.

He told them that the sick man would be left to die alone if he were unable to walk when the camp moved.

Robert and Amos set out with a band of twenty braves in the morning. The Indians' otter skins were stored in a big water-proof sack of moose hide. They reached the outlet of the great lake, but the Dutch trader had not yet arrived. The braves began to make a rude shelter when they heard a tapping in the near forest like that of a clasp. It frightened them. They ceased their work. One of them tapped on a tree.

It was part of a system of mystic signals known to these children of the forest. In a moment an Algonquin scout hurried into their presence with whispered explanations. It was like shouting at a herd of deer. What a scurry of greased bodies! What a splashing as his braves sprang for their canoes; the scout among them! In a few seconds the whole feet was out in deep water and speeding away. Their expertness in boarding their moving water steeds astonished the white men. It was, doubtless, the result of much training in the art of getting away. There was no crossing of purposes, no confusion. Every man knew his place and went to it.

"They can move quicker than a cat before a bulldog. Ye git one o' them lazy pups skeered an' he can travel for God's sake," Amos whispered. "I don't blame 'em. It's poor fun to be burned alive and cooked. There's a big band o' Iroquois near us—you can bet on that. Hell's kettles!"

A flight of arrows hissed out of the edge of the forest near them and fell in and around the last canoes of the fleet. One struck the arm of a brave and clung there wailing as he bent to his task. Another was imbedded in the bare back of the stern paddler in the last canoe. While Robert looked he saw a red line stream down below the arrow. Still the wounded men held their pace with no apparent lessening of their energy and courage. In a moment ten canoes filled with Iroquois warriors had taken water and in pursuit of the fleeing northernmen.

"Now by the hazard o' the spotted die! I reckon we got to go to some other place about as rapid as our nags can carry us," said Amos.

In their haste the Algonquins had left their sack of skins and a much smaller one half-filled with dried meat. Amos hauled out an armful of fur and stuffed it into the meat sack. He slung the burden over his shoulder.

"Now goodbye, mother, dear! I'm a goin' away," he quoted as he beckoned to his comrade.

They waded and climbed over dead timber at the edge of the small river for some twenty rods where they went ashore and hurried southward, keeping their pace until darkness fell upon them. At a noisy brook they drank and ate and lay down for the night.

"My God!" Amos exclaimed with a laugh. "Them netops went as quick as a ghost at cockcrow."

"I never saw a scared cat move quicker," Robert answered.

"We made a monstrous quick move ourselves," said Amos. "My nags is tired."

"So are mine."

They were up at daybreak and continued their journey, browsing on fish and flesh as they walked. They bore southeastward and, after a tedious and uneventful journey, came to a well-trod path going due west.

"This is an Indian path," Amos whispered. "I reckon the lake is near."

They proceeded with great caution. Soon Amos said: "There's been no man travel on this path for days. A moose and two deer went over it last night. We'll spur our nags and push along faster."

Coming to the top of a hill they could see the broad sunlight waters below them. There Amos climbed a tree and satisfied himself that the coast was clear. A mile or so out he saw a shallop with a full sail heading southward. There was no other sign of life on the water or along the shore. The sun was about two hours high in the east.

Amos descended and they hurried on to a sheltered cove and a sloping sand beach. On a flat rock near the water were the dying remnants of a campfire. There were tracks in the sand.

"Some fine lady has been here this mornin'," said Amos. "Look at that little shoe print. I reckon they camped here last night. I seen their shallop headin' south. It's a place where the savages when they are in these parts come down to trade with the Dutch."

In a moment Robert saw a white handkerchief hanging over the water on a dead branch. He pulled the branch toward him, released the handkerchief and examined it.

"Od's blood!" he exclaimed. "This is Peggy Weld's handkerchief. The odor of roses! I always observed that when I was near her and here are the embroidered initials 'P. W.'"

"Jerusalem, the golden!" Amos answered. "We missed 'em by less than sixty minutes. Never mind, boy, Amos is happy. We'll tag along after 'em with a shallop of our own afore mid-day."

"What do you mean?" Robert asked with a look of distress in his animated face.

"I swear by the dew claws o' the devil, we're in luck," said Amos. He pointed to a great hemlock which, leaning from the lakes' edge, had lately fallen into the water. It was hollow at the butt. A spread of its green branches protruded from the lake surface as high as a haystack.

"What's in your mind?" Robert asked.

"A contrivance! I reckon it will save our legs and keep us out o' the pot a day or two. This is a highway o' Satan. An Englishman with his white carcass has got to be careful of it in these parts. Ye shln up a tree and keep watch. If ye see or hear anybody, rap thrice like a clasp. The time has come when I must take a chance, as the lady said when she got married."

Odd Oriental Tastes

Koreans, like many Orientals, live mostly on rice. They cook their seaweed in oil and serve it with slices of red peppers. Kimchee, a kind of sauerkraut, is a favorite Korean dish.

To the north, the natives of Kamchatka relish the tongues and the marrow of the bones of reindeer, but the piece-de-resistance is the meat of un-lora fawns. From the stomach of the reindeer the natives obtain their greens—half-digested balls of moss. A delectable native dish is reindeer manure which has been surrounded by dough and dropped in boiling water. Boiled fish eggs are considered a delicacy.—Exchange.

Lesson for February 14

JESUS AND THE MAN BORN BLIND

LESSON TEXT—John 9:1-41. GOLDEN TEXT—Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Blind Man See. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Sight to a Blind Beggar. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Did for a Blind Man. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Light of the World.

1. Working the Works of God While It is Day (vv. 1-5).

The disciples' problem (vv. 1, 2). In their minds all affliction, negative and positive, was God's retribution for sin. Therefore, they argued that this man's blindness proved his sin. They recognized also that the effect of sin is sometimes hereditary. The common philosophy of men about us today is that sickness, disease, and all sorts of calamities, is God's judgment for sin.

2. The Lord's answer (vv. 3-5). Jesus affirmed that in this case there was neither sin on the man's part nor that of his parents, but that it was an occasion for the display of the works of God and that he had come to execute this task while it was day because the night would come when no man could work. Since Christ is the light of the world, the task which challenged his attention, was the opening of this man's eyes. The purpose of Jesus in working miracles was not a mere exhibition of miraculous power, but "to illustrate in the physical sphere his power in the spiritual sphere." It was illustrative of man's utter helplessness in his own salvation. The natural man is blind and dead (II Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:1). God, by his Spirit, must quicken the soul dead in trespasses and sin before he can see to take hold on Christ, the remedy for sin.

3. The Man's Eyes Opened (vv. 6, 7).

1. The means used (v. 6). Jesus spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle and anointed his eyes. Observe that the means used in this miracle were a little less than foolish in themselves. The object must have been to show the man the utter inadequacy of the means to the accomplishment of the end, that he might be convinced that the power was of God.

2. His obedience (v. 7). He immediately obeyed. He did not stop to question the reasonableness of the command. Obedience only to that which seems reasonable is not obedience at all. He did not inquire as to what would be the result.

3. The Man's Testimony (vv. 8-30).

In his testimony we have a fine example of the development of faith.

1. He testified to his personal identity (v. 9). This was very easy. His self-consciousness enabled him to know that he was the same man who was born blind.

2. He testified as to how it was done (vv. 11-15). So definite was his experience that he was able to tell just how it was done.

3. He testified that the one who opened his eyes was a prophet (v. 17).

4. He testified that this healer no doubt was sent of God (vv. 30-33).

5. He worshipped him as the Son of God (v. 35).

IV. The Results of His Confession.

1. As to the people, they were divided in their sentiment (v. 10). Some believed Jesus was from God because of his works. Others believed that he was a sinner because he did his work on the Sabbath day.

2. As to the man, they cast him out (v. 34). Faithful testimony will often result in ostracism from religious people, but there must be faithfulness.

3. As to Jesus, he found the man (v. 35). Being cast out by men, he found himself in the arms of Jesus. He was led on to a deeper faith. He first saw Christ as a miracle worker, then as a prophet, and finally as the Son of God.

This whole lesson may be viewed from three angles:

1. As an acted parable of a life that issues from faith in Christ. It is an illustration of the spiritual sphere in terms of the physical.

2. The testimony of the deity of our Lord. This testimony is fourfold:

a. The miracle itself an unheard-of work that a man born blind should receive his sight.

b. The unwilling admission of the enemies themselves who made a public and official investigation.

c. The testimony of the man himself.

d. That of his parents.

3. An illuminating example of the development of faith.

SAGE REMARKS

Talk without action saps the will. Example is the school of mankind.

Good is best when soonest wrought. As the purse is emptied, the heart is filled.

If you wish your neighbors to see what God is like, let them see what he can make you like.

The Trouble

Prof. I. L. Sharfman, political economy expert of the University of Michigan, speaking of the Hoover-Laval conference, told an anecdote.

"The trouble with the world is everybody knows just what the other fellow ought to do, but takes no thought about what he ought to do himself."

"I found a young bride absorbed in a dry-looking volume."

"What are you reading?" I asked her.

"An excellent thing" she said. "It is called Happiness in Marriage."

"What advice," I said, "does it give to wives?"

"I don't know," said she, "I'm reading the advice to husbands."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

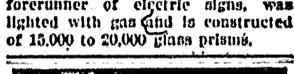

A Mother's Experience

Lamar, Colo.—"My youngest child was past 18 when little Ruby arrived and I was in my 44th year. The doctor and nurses were very uneasy about me," said Mrs. Viola Brown, Clay Creek Store, Star Route South, "but I had taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for several months, also a few bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which is a great tonic and blood medicine and fine for liver trouble with which I had been bothered before, and I got my health back quicker than I ever did with my other children even when I was much younger. Ruby is a bright, healthy child." All druggists sell.

Relief of Old Days

A striking relic of the old Comstock days was unearthed at Virginia City by Albert Dressler, of Berkeley, a souvenir hunter, when he found an imitation glass cigar five feet long that was used to advertise a famous cigar store 50 years ago. The device, forerunner of electric signs, was lighted with gas and is constructed of 15,000 to 20,000 glass prisms.

New Light on an Old Question
"Do you think a man could get to Heaven without joining the church?" asked several men of a preacher. "I think he could," replied the preacher. The men laughed, patted the preacher on the back, and called him broad-minded. "But," said the minister, "let me ask you a question—why do you want to go to Heaven that way?" They could not answer. "Why don't you ask me another question?" suggested the preacher. "Why don't you ask me if a man could get to England from America without going on a boat or a flying machine?" "Well, we'll ask you that. Could he?" "I see no reason," said the minister, "why a man could not get to England without going on a boat or a flying machine, provided he was a good swimmer and carried sufficient food about his person to eat on the way, and furthermore had sufficient strength to buffet the waves, and also lucky enough to get by the sharks—but suppose he eventually would arrive on England's shore, do you think he would get there ahead of the fellow who goes by ship?"—Selected.

DOERING'S

A New Purina Product, Ingredient X for Chicks

St. Louis, Mo. "Cluck, cluck. Have you had your Ingredient X today?" Such will be the daily interrogation of mother hen to baby chicks as the result of an announcement today of the development of Ingredient X in the research laboratories and on the experimental farm of the Purina Mill.

"Ingredient X," explains Dr. H. J. Smith, in charge of the research work which developed this growth factor, "is simply the blending together of the proteins in a ration in such a way as to make them work together perfectly, much like the gear wheels of an automobile. In other words, Ingredient X is proteins synchronized or properly meshed together."

The experiment involved the studying of some 52,000 chicks in battery brooders and on the Purina Experimental Farm. They were weighed 308,502 times in order that everything be checked to the minutest detail.

In beginning this far-reaching protein study some six years ago many sources of proteins—all that can be obtained in commercial quantities—were used in many and various combinations and fitted with what is known as a basal ration made up of the carbohydrates, fats, vitamins and minerals known to be essential to growth.

Starting feeds for baby chicks with Ingredient X are handled locally by F. E. Richard.
