Cyclone in Carrizozo

Strange As It Seems - the garage on the old Donaldson residence was the scene of a cyclone Tuesday night, blowing down the solid 'dobe walls. It was quite a dust, or sandstorm.

Mesdames C. O. Garrison and Frank Abel received an announcement this week of the arrival of Samuel Williams Keller, at Hollywood, California. The proud parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ford Keller, who resided here for some time. Mr. Keller was clerk for trainmaster T. W. Cardwell.

Active OddFellowship

In spite of the extreme cold snap and high winds prevailing Tuesday night, Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., held the best attended meeting of the winter season.

After the business session, one candidate received the Initiatory and two candidates received the First Degree of OddFellowship.

The seating capacity of the hall was taxed to overflowing, and the degree work was pronounced far above the average by critics in attendance. There are four candidates taking the degrees at the present time and several more applications on the secretary's desk. Taking fraternal matters as an example, this order is progressing ahead of normal times and paying no heed to the depression.

High School News Notes (Ansel Swearingen)

Well, it won't be long till school will be out again. The time surely does fly after the Junior play and that's out of the way now. The Juniors presented "The Patsy" at the H. S. Auditorium Saturday night and I have to admit it was a pretty good play. I even enjoyed a little of it. Under the skillful direction of Miss Evrard, those Juniors worked out a good play, no foolin'.

The boys went to Vaughn last Friday and won their first game in the tournament by beating the team from Stanley. They then lost to Corona and were eliminated. The boys have played in hard luck all winter but next year they will make a brilliant showing.

And more about basketball. The Inter-class Tournament began Monday night, the Frosh and the Soph's starting the ball rolling at 7 o'clock. The Frosh played a mighty good game and nosed out the Soph's 22 to 1.

The next game those mighty Juniors picked on the grades and only beat them by five points, 11 to 6. Then the Frosh played the Seniors in the most exciting game of the evening. The Frosh were surely "on" that night and beat the Seniors 10 to 9. The evening's entertainment wound up by the Grades beating the Soph's 22 to 8. And we all went home from the biggest dime's worth of fun and enjoyment of the year - some of us grinning and some of us with faces a yard long.

After the Senior-Freshmen game, the Juniors went wild with joy and all of Tuesday we had to listen to them crowing around. But it was a different story on Wednesday and here's why. They had to play the Frosh on Tuesday night and the Frosh beat 'em worse than they beat the Seniors-9 to 6 was the score and you should have heard the excuses Wednesday morning.

The other games Tuesday night were as follows: Senior-Grades, 22-7 for Seniors. Freshmen-Grades, 13-8 for Freshmen. Soph's-Junior, 24 6 for Juniors. They were good games and worth a dime of anybody's money. Basketball season is almost over and the baseball season almost here. Let's hope for some hot times in baseball soon.

And last Thursday came the best Assembly entertainment of the year. The physical education girls put on a show of gymnastics which was very interesting as well as entertaining.

Shower Given

On March 4, Mesdames Frank Abel and S. O. Sproles were hostesses at a shower given at Mrs. Abel's home, honoring Mrs. Hubert Detloff. Dainty refreshments were served with St. Patrick's favors. Thirty-five guests were present all of whom enjoyed a social afternoon.

Miss Ella Bell of the First National Bank is spending a few days in El Paso this week, visiting her parents, engineer and Mrs. Earle Bell. During her absence, Wayne Zumwalt is relieving her at the bank.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Groce were here from Corona Sunday, spending the day with their son, Prof. and Mrs. Groce and daughter Wanda. They returned to Corona in the evening.

OSCURA OBSERVATIONS

When approaching Oscura, you first come to the depot, then take the cinder path to the right which leads to the postoffice, grocery store, chamber of commerce and the offices of the City Council. There you will meet Mayor Whitaker and Postmaster Wettstein, members of the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce. You may buy anything you wish in the grocery line, also tobacco, cigars, cigarettes. Bill will even sell you a twist of long green.

One of the most pleasant times of the winter season was experienced last Saturday night at the schoolhouse. Dancing was the feature of the event and many attended from Carrizozo, Tularosa, Three Rivers and White Oaks.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Some one has made the wise crack that if two or more men meet anywhere in the world and one of them is an Englishman, he will immediately get busy and organize a club, the institution being, of course, that the Englishman is by nature a "joiner." Even if that were true, the fact remains that he has little, if anything, on his American cousin in this respect. For reliable statistics show that there are in the United States more than 125,000 lodges or fraternal organizations which should presumably satisfy the longing of the majority of Americans for "belonging." But that doesn't take into account the innumerable clubs, societies, associations and other organizations and rare indeed is the American who doesn't belong to one or more of these.

All of these, of course, are organized for a "purpose"—social, political, civic, business, scientific, professional, patriotic and honorary—and those purposes are earnestly fostered by millions of earnest Americans. And some of these earnest Americans are so interested in fostering these earnest purposes that they make an earnest effort to see how many of them they can join and then base their claim to fame on the number of organizations to which they belong. But if some earnest American becomes just a bit tired of his membership in clubs which have a "purpose," he still has an outlet for his "joining" proclivities in some organizations which are not so purposeful. These are the ones which have sometimes been designated as "frank and fun clubs," and it is with this type of organization that this article deals. So if you are a "joiner" and are looking for other club worlds to conquer, take a look at the list at the head of this article and decide which one you would like to join. Of course, the qualifications for some of them may be a bit difficult for you to meet, but if you aren't eligible for one, you may be for another.

For instance, if you aren't a white person, six feet and one inch tall or more, you'd be almost instantly blackballed if you applied for membership in the National Society of Long Fellows or the Six-Foot association. The National Society of Long Fellows was started several years ago by Phil E. Zimmerman of Topeka, Kan., when he was hotel commissioner of the Sunflower state. Since that time the club has grown so rapidly that there are now several thousand members throughout the United States.

Some of the objectives of the club are to get larger bath tubs, shirts, socks and other clothing, higher swings, signs and ceilings, bigger seats in theaters and log room between the rows, restaurant tables that do not require the Long Fellow to hold them up with his knees and pull-man events in which they can sleep without doubling up like a jackknife.

Among members are John Aasen of Los Angeles, Calif., who heads the list with a height of eight feet, nine and one-quarter inches. Next tallest is Cliff Thompson of Wisconsin, who is eight feet and six inches. Three seven-footers are O. R. Williams of Oklahoma and Ruth Duncan and Forest Glenn of Illinois. Mr. Williams is seven feet and five inches, Miss Duncan is seven feet and one inch tall, and Mr. Glenn is half an inch taller than she. Ten-year-old Robert Wadlow of Alton, Ill., is a member. Robert is six feet and eleven inches tall.

If your personal appearance doesn't qualify you for that one, perhaps an absence of hair on your head will make you a Knight of the Gleaming Skull in the Bald Head Club of America. That club was started away back in 1900 when Paul Meade, a lawyer of New York, took a photograph of six bald-headed men seated on the steps of John Belden's store in Falls Village, Conn. By chance a copy of this photograph fell into the hands of John Rodemeyer, a Greenwich, Conn., newspaper man. And presto! John then and there formed a club. Now it has more than 1,000 members and at every annual banquet some member gives a stirring speech on "Hair-Tonics Which Bald-Headed Daddies Sell to Bald-Headed Daddies" or some such subject. (P. S. If you're addicted to covering your baldness with outlandish headgear, then there's a place for you in the Society of Men who Wear Funny Hats).

Next go to the circus? "Sure!" you answer. "Go every year—don't care much about it myself, but I have to take the children." But just because you're a regular attendant, it doesn't mean that you're eligible for membership in the Circus Fans of America—not unless at some time in your juvenile career you earned your way into the show by carrying water for the elephant. Karl Kne Knecht, an Indiana newspaper cartoonist, who founded the C. F. A. some five years ago, is authority for the statement that many successful men of today are proud of the fact that they once served the thirsty pachyderms and they're enthusiastic members of this club.

In a certain New York restaurant there's an unusual booth for diners. Over the entrance of what appears to be a tent are the words "Slide Show," and adorning the front are two large, gaudy circus banners. One boldly announces—"None—the Wild Girl—She Speaks No Language"—Playmates are Deadly Serpents." Another heralds "La Bella Rosa—Flower of the Orient—Queen of the Deserts—Favorite of Sultans." Inside the tent are painted banners, posters and photographs of circus performers and freaks.

This slide show tent is the luncheon meeting place of the "P. T. Barnum Top No. 1 of the Circus Fans of America." Each state and large city has its "Tent" or "Top" named for some famous circus man.

The organization is primarily for fun, yet it has a serious purpose, say its members—that is, to "help the circus, toward bigger and better things." Fans and lovers and friends of the circus are banded together to see it perpetuated, and are eager that greater glory may come to the tented shows.

If you missed out on the juvenile joy just mentioned, perhaps you used to pump a pipe organ. If so, your name can be spread on the roll of the Guild of Former Organ Pumpers, an association composed of those who, by their pledged statements, pumped a pipe organ in a church or chapel at some time in their youth. Its principal aim is serious—to perpetuate the memories of our decadent but honorable profession and to save for posterity some permanent evidence of the important part the pumper played in the musical and ecclesiastical progress of the ages. It has other aims—to encourage the singing of the old hymns at Sunday night gatherings and "to prove that every successful man did not earn his first dollar selling newspapers"—but its primary purpose is to achieve a belated recognition.

The guild was launched in 1926 under the favorable auspices of a natural divinity—"Acolus, the Greek God and Keeper of the Winds"—and with the slogan, "Pump for the Wind in Fleet-ting." The first meeting was held in New York city in 1923. Officers, named after the steps on the organ, were elected. And the roster of members now holds the names of some of America's foremost citizens.

Will Hays, the czar of the movies, did his pumping on a pipe organ in Sullivan, Ind., his birthplace. He received 10 cents for his efforts, and the dime was paid him at the conclusion of the morning church service. His mother then led him by the hand to his Sunday school class, where he placed the money in the usual collection.

James Cousens, United States senator from Michigan, pumped in the Presbyterian church at Chatham, Ont. He was paid $5 a year. He pumped conscientiously for two years. At the end of that time he collected the $10 he had coming, and this was a part of the original money he invested in stock of the Ford Motor company, which eventually made him one of the nation's richest men.

The late Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co., was also a pumper. He labored in the Presbyterian church at Springfield, Ill., and gladly accepted the 25-cent weekly stipend which was turned over quarterly.

But if in your youth you didn't turn an honest penny by pumping an organ, perhaps you did it in a printing office as a helper to the printer-publisher of the home town paper. If that was far enough back, you probably "pulled" a George Washington hand press, a bit of back-breaking labor necessary in the old days if the newspaper-reading public was to be kept informed on the affairs of the community. If you did this, then you're eligible for membership in the Ancient and Honorable Order of G. Wash. Pullers, a society founded at the suggestion of Harry C. Webster, an old Missouri "print" which carries on its membership rolls the name of a number of men who have risen high in the field of journalism and who are proud to say that they got their start in newspaper work at the lever of an old G. Wash.

Then there's the Cub Reporters' association, composed of men who as young journalists sought the adventure which is popularly supposed to be found in newspaper work, found it, perhaps, and now in the midst of busy middle age look back fondly upon the time when they tolled under the lash of a "Simon Legree city editor" and dreamed the dream of all cub reporters—that of "scooping the world on a big story."

Anyone who has been the victim of horseplay, hazing, kidding and razzing or even torture by the old-time, hard-boiled, demon city editor is eligible for membership. In the '90s quick hangings, dough prize fighting and "horrible crimes" meant hardships and toil for the cub reporter. He "hot-footed" it around for news, bumping into all sorts of hard and trying experiences. In the '90s barrooms were popular community centers, and crimes were jobs for reporters to solve.

Still in the field of journalism, there are the Fossils—old newspaper men who as boys are engaged in amateur journalism and are proud of their boyish efforts. And although such a society has not yet been formed, any newspaper man will tell you that there's a field for an organization to be known as the Association of Those Who Used to Be Newspaper Men Themselves.

Are you a radio DX'er? Do you sit up late at night "setting" new stations over your radio, either shore wave or long wave? Then you can be initiated into the Royal Order of Hard-Boiled Owls with Rubber Ears with the howling ceremonies which mark such an initiation.

Do you enjoy breaking the ice in a river, lake or pond and taking a bath there no matter what the weather may be? The Polar Bear club wants to hear from you, if you do. Do you ever subber frub hay fever? (Ker-choo!) The Hay Fever association will be glad to send you a membership application blank.

Do you have unlimited faith in the woodchuck as an accurate weather prophet? So do the members of the Slumbering Ground Hog Lodge, located at Quarryville, Pa. Organized by George W. Hense, Jr., who is Illibernal Governor, this lodge has for its chief aim to extol the virtues of the groundhog, which, they say, "has an intelligence of a higher order than that of any other animal from the tick of the blackberry to the elephant in the jungle" and they take an oath to "defend him, his family and his reputation, and to guard him as he slumbers."

It's not easy to get into this lodge for you have to be elected by the seven patriarchs after seven years of observation by the Defender of the Faith, the Chief Eye Rubber, the Patriarch de Luxe, the Bondless Treasurer and other officers. But once you are elected, you can join in the annual ceremony on February 2 around the groundhog's hole.

If you believe that there's more than one name for the colored boys who look after your comfort on the pullman cars, then you should join the Society for the Prevention of Calling Sleeping Car Porters "George." Organized by George W. Dulany, Jr., a Chicago banker, the society now has thousands of members all over the country; George Washington and George Dewey are their patron saints; George Ade is the poet laureate; George M. Cohan, the official song writer; George William, Cardinal Mundelein, the chaplain; Georges Clemenceau was French charge d'affaires; and George ("Babe") Ruth is sergeant at arms.

All of the foregoing are organizations to which almost anyone might possibly belong. But there are also others whose membership is necessarily rather limited to the certain professions. For instance, you'd have to be a sailor in the United States navy in order to belong to the Ancient, Honorable and Mystical Order of Lapa Lapa, although there are many landlubbers who are eminently fitted for membership. The only qualification the prospective member must possess is that he humbly acknowledge that he is a poor fish. But only sailors know how to initiate candidates properly, for it was two sailors who founded the organization at Shanghai, China, in 1927, and sailors are keeping the order going.

You couldn't belong to the Quiet Birdmen unless you were a World War aviator nor to the Caterpillar club unless you were an aviator who had to make an emergency parachute jump to save your life, and you would be barred from membership in the Whosit club unless you were a New York bond salesman engaged in selling municipal bonds.

The list of these interesting organizations could be extended indefinitely were it not for the fact that the author of this article has just received notice of a meeting of those interested in forming a Society for the Prevention of Forming More Societies and he feels obligated to leave at once to attend the meeting.

MUSCULAR-RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. It gets action and is not just a salve. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.
Tuning in on Heaven
We haven't any really constructive suggestions for the cure of our national tendencies to leave the narrow path, but sometimes we think that an amplifier for the voice of conscience wouldn't do any harm.—Boston Herald.

Impudence is not "personality."

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."
Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

A Candle in the Wilderness

They looked at each other and as they looked a little moisture came to their eyes. They breathed fast like those near exhaustion. Neither uttered a word as they turned and pushed their runners toward the smoke. Nearing the place whence it proceeded they saw back in the timber, now bare of foliage, the hull and mast of a large shallop. Built upon it and around the mast was a little house with gray bark sides and small windows of singlass. Alongside the hull and reaching upward some three fathoms a stone chimney had been built. At the steps leading to its door they got the grateful odor of frying fish. Suddenly a white man of middle age opened the door and looked down upon them with astonishment.

"In the name of God who are you?" he asked in Dutch.

"Wanderers in the waste who have lived through a dozen miracles," Amos answered in the same language. "I think that you are an angel at the gate of Paradise."

"Are you the lost men that Miss Weld and her brother have been looking for?" the Dutchman asked.

"The very same men," Amos answered. "This is Mr. Heathers. My name is Todkill."

"Well, well! We scoured the lake for you and some friendly Indians were helping us. I am Nicholas Van Brocklin. Miss Weld left a letter here for Mr. Heathers. Come in, come in and share my food and drink and shelter. I'm as lonely as a buck deer in the summer."

"I am! This is splendid!" the old pioneer exclaimed. "I'm kind of stowed with happiness."

Amos and Robert sat on a rustic lounge covered with a beaver-skin robe. For a moment neither spoke. There was a grateful sense of warmth in the room.

Amos blew his nose and wiped his cheek and said presently, "I'm made of hard stuff, but now I reckon we're like the boy who went off with Satan and by and by got back to his father's house."

Robert read the letter from Peggy aloud to Amos. These are its words:

"Dear Robert: We have spent a month in the wilderness trying to find you. I think that you may wonder why, but I am sure that if you have kept the medallion and have had the patience and the curiosity to wrest from its embrace the secret which it held, you will know why I have been glad to endure hardship and peril for your sake. It may be all in vain but I had to do my best. I pray God that this may fall in your hands. If it does it will open my heart and mind to you. Whatever you may have done I wish you to know that they are filled with the charity of St. Paul and of Jesus Christ. The magistrates, the church and every one I meet in Boston believe you to be in hiding because of your guilt. I do not share their opinion. It has been hard to stand against them but I stand. loved friend William had left him, for it was clear that all the brethren were convinced of his innocence. As they ate, Amos told of Tawandoha and his melancholy fate in the far mountain country.

"Old Tawandoha!" the Dutchman exclaimed. "Always I bowed my head to him. He would never drink fire-water. He was the bravest fighter, the wisest chief in the Long House. He was humane. Many a white man owes his life to old Tawandoha. He had a noble dignity and that was his only ornament. He would have no feathers and no gewgaws on his person."

Their host lived at Fort Orange on the North river. His sons and himself traded with the savages. In August the great hurricane which swept over the country drove their shallop ashore and bedded her so fast in the rising ground that they had not been able to get her back to water. They had built the little house above her to serve as a camp and headquarters on the Lake of the Iroquois, and brought timber for another shallop. The early deep snow had delayed their moving. His sons were over in the west end of the Long House more than a hundred leagues away. If Amos and Robert would stay and guard his camp he would go home for Christmas and return as soon as possible with sleds and help for his moving. Then Amos and Robert could go down to the fort with the party.

Sitting by the fireside with pipes and tobacco Nicholas said that the Iroquois would be coming south in a month or so with sledloads of meat and many captives. The meat taken in the upper mountains would come down the lake bound for the Long House. Unlike the nomad tribes of the north the Iroquois had learned to be a provident people but were quite as cruel as their neighbors. Many white men had been tortured and slain by them. They were now at peace with the Dutch but it was like thin ice, liable to break any moment. Power was the only thing they respected. White men would be secure when the savages were destroyed and not till then. Yes, he traded strong water for skins. If they didn't get it from him they would get it from others. He knew it was bad for them, but poisoned corn was also bad for crows. They were pests, and anything bad for them was good for the white man. You might as well try to make a hog fit for the parlor as try to civilize a savage.

Thus he voiced the sophistries of the rum trader, but Amos and Robert were in no mood to argue with him. After all they had seen they were quite willing to agree that savages were nearer to the beast than to men. Yet they were human, with certain admirable virtues which had rightly given hope to the good fathers in the north and to the rulers in New England.

The Dutchman gave them hot water for a bath, ointment with which to rid themselves of unpleasant company acquired in the Indian camps, and insisted that they occupy the two beds, while he took the lounge. They had a night of rest the like of which they had not known since leaving the hospitable roof of Madame Hebert.

In the morning, after a meal of dried fish and potatoes and blueberry cake with a refreshing hot drink made by stewing dried leaves of spearmint and raspberry, Van Brocklin washed the dishes and left his new friends.

These were his parting words: "You will find meat and flour and vegetables and drink in the hold. Help yourselves freely to anything you want. There is an abundance of fish in the lake. You have only to cut holes in the ice and bait and set your hooks. I shall return within ten days. I do not think that any Indians will be coming down the lake before then. Most of my strong water is buried in a snowdrift. If you stand firm and talk Dutch to them, they'll give you no bother."

CHAPTER XI

The Coming of James Roswell and Its Revelations

They had three delightful days of rest and comfort in the interesting boat-house of Nicholas Van Brocklin. Late in the third day a bitter wind from the northwest with snow began to whistle in the chimney and hiss against the bark walls. The bare branches of beech, birch and maple sang like whips. The frozen trees creaked and groaned, and now and then a report like a pistol-shot rang through the timbered slope when links of frost were broken. Leagues of the forest roof were bending and billowing in the blast. It reminded Amos of artillery fire when a great tree near them crashed down, clearing its way to the ground. They brought in a good store of wood.

Suddenly a band of twelve Iroquois hunters arrived, crowded into the house and literally took possession of it. They took off their racquets at the door. Their leader spoke a word of greeting. Then they shook themselves like dogs and sat down facing the fire, their blankets over their heads. There was no note of ill-nature in their conduct, but for a long time they were silent. Indians gave freely to honored guests. So presently they arose and began to help themselves to the stores of the little trading house—no doubt they felt entitled to its best hospitality. In spite of all the efforts of Amos to restrain them they ransacked the hold and drank all the wine and strong water they could find. They seized the meat, fish and vegetables, put them all in Van Brocklin's big brass kettle, boiled and devoured them. That evening the neat and cleanly room had become a noisome pen of prostrate, ill-smelling savages on the beds, lounge and floor. Some of them were drunk but not sufficiently so to make them violent or quarrelsome.

The storm abated next morning and there being nothing to eat in the cabin, the Indians went away on their racquets. Amos and Robert hung the bed covers on a line for the day.

Some of Them Were Drunk.

washed the linen and scrubbed the floors, for the house had suddenly become a rookery. It was no light matter to be visited by a number of savages.

The white men were on short rations of fish and wild duck—two of which Robert brought down with a musket which hung in the cabin—until about ten days had passed. The Dutchman came with sleds and two helpers and two unexpected guests—Mr. James Roswell, of Boston, and his guide and protector, an officer from the fort below. He had come by ship to the island of the Manhattan, then up the North river in a pinnace to the Dutch Fort Orange. There Van Brocklin had given him news of the men he sought. He coldly shook hands with Robert and Amos, saying: "I have come a long way to find you."

"Thanks. It is a friendly thing to do," said Robert. "I am glad to tell you that we do not need help."

"But there are those in Boston who need your help," Roswell rejoined.

"Who needs my help?"

"I reckon you know as well as I that William Heydon is suffering punishment for a crime. Most people are convinced that you committed it. I have come here on my own responsibility to ask you as a gentleman to tell me the truth and I rely wholly on your sense of justice and right."

"Tell me what has happened to my friend William Heydon," said Robert.

"He is suffering for adultery with one Mabel Hartley, once a servant in your house. At first she swore it on William. She fell ill and confessed to Harry Vane that she might have been in error as to the man. Later she said in my presence that her mind had changed—that as she gave more thought to the matter she was convinced that you and not William had been with her that night. Two days later the woman died of a fever in her lungs. William was released from prison and put on the limits of the town pending your return, the inhabitants and certain members of the court, especially Governor Vane, believing him to be innocent. But he has to wear around his neck a noose of hempen rope with a tail two feet long. This is a heavy burden, and it is your duty to him and to his friends to remove it."

It was a well-spoken argument, full of the note of sincerity. They were standing on the cleaned ice at the edge of the lake. Robert paced up and down in the shoveled area. He stood a moment looking off at the snow-laden forest. His face had paled. Both Amos and Roswell watched him with interest. Amos' hands were trembling a little. There was a touching note of despair in Robert's voice as he turned and said:

"A rope on his neck! Every morning he gets up to be hanged again by the neck and to be gazed at by the crowd. My God! This is torture! It is burning a man up by inches. And Harry Vane is governor!"

JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.

The hopes of the disciples were utterly shattered when Jesus told them about the cross. He had told them that he was going away and that they could not follow him. He consoled them by

1. Pointing to the Coming Reunion in the Father's House (vv. 1-3).

2. He asked them to trust in himself even as God (v. 1). Faith in the God-man, Christ Jesus, will steady the heart, no matter how intense the grief or how great the sorrow. Faith in God and Christ is one and the same thing, for Jesus Christ is not merely another God, but one with God. Christ himself is divine and therefore the revealer of divinity. Jesus Christ is the same object of trust as God himself. The believer should repose in him the same confidence and yield unto him the same submission as to God. Trust in Jesus as God is the secret of a quiet heart.

2. He informed them that he was going to the Father's house to prepare a home for them (v. 2). Heaven is the Father's house. Heaven is an eternal dwelling place. There is in it abundant room for all. There are "Many mansions." All who come to God through Christ will find room.

It is a prepared place for a prepared people.

3. He assured them that he would come again and escort them to the Father's house (v. 3). Jesus will not wait for his own to come to him, but will come and call forth from the graves those who have died and transform living believers, taking them all to be with himself forevermore in the heavenly home.

11. Revealing the Way to the Father's House (vv. 4-11).

Jesus informed the disciples that they knew the way to that place to which he was going. To this Thomas interposed a doubt, in answer to which Christ asserts that he is

1. The way to God (v. 6). He is something more than a mere guide or teacher—he is the way itself. He is the door of the sheepfold—the very entrance to the tree of life.

2. The truth (v. 6). He is not merely the teacher, but the truth incarnate. In Christ's incarnation the spiritual and material worlds were united. Therefore, every line of truth, whether spiritual or material, converges in him. No one can ever have the real truth about anything who does not have Jesus Christ. In him we have especially the truth about God. To pretend to know God while at the same time rejecting Jesus Christ is utter folly. Only as Christ reveals God can we know him (John 1:18).

3. The life (v. 6). Christ is not merely the giver of life, but he is the essence of life. Only those who receive Christ have life in the truest sense.

111. Assuring Them That His Work Was to Continue (vv. 12-14).

Jesus' going away was not to end the work which he had begun. This, no doubt, means that through the ministry of the Spirit-filled disciples the work which Christ began would assume larger proportions. There would be a much greater number of conversions than under his ministry. The means by which they were to get the power to do such wonders was prayer. God will surely answer prayer, not only because he loves his children, but through answered prayer his own name will be glorified.

IV. Promising Another Comforter (vv. 15-17).

The word "Comforter" means literally "one called to the side of another to give help, protection and deliverance." This Comforter is the Holy Spirit. Jesus was the Comforter while here on earth. The Holy Spirit was to be "another" Comforter. The condition upon which they might enjoy the comfort of the Spirit was obedience to Jesus (vv. 15-17).

V. Assuring Them of His Return to Them (vv. 18-24).

Although Jesus went away he did not leave his disciples as orphans. He is spiritually present all the time. The Father and the Son make their abode with the disciple who loves and obeys Jesus Christ.

Trust the Lord

Difficulties afford opportunities for learning God's faithfulness, which otherwise we should not have. It gives me great comfort to remember that the work is his; that he knows how best to carry it on, and is infinitely more interested in it than we are. His word shall not return unto him void; we will preach it then, and leave results with him.—Hudson Taylor.

Gratitude is the continuous echo which our hearts give to God's mercy.

POULTRY

GOLDS CAUSE LOSS IN POULTRY FLOCK

Can Be Greatly Reduced by Precaution.

Losses due to colds in the poultry flock may be reduced by guarding against overcrowding, improper ventilation, dampness, insanitation, and drafts from crevices in the walls back of the perches, according to B. H. Edgington of the Ohio agricultural experiment station.

Mr. Edgington said that wide variations in temperature between night and day, long periods of cold, damp weather, and rapid changes of environment are other contributing causes resulting in colds. The disease may affect birds of any age but is most likely to develop in young birds that are in overcrowded quarters or heavily infested with intestinal parasites, lice and mites.

The first symptom of a cold is a clear, watery discharge from one or both nostrils. In a few days this discharge becomes viscid, yellowish or gray in color, and resembles pus. As the disease becomes more advanced the discharge dries on the nostrils and interferes with breathing. The affected birds frequently sneeze, appear droopy and may have a watery discharge from the eyes.

Treatment of the individual fowl affected with a cold usually is impractical and rarely profitable unless the bird be of exceptional value. Attempts to administer medicinal agents in the feed seldom are successful owing to the lack of appetite possessed by the sick bird.

Fowls affected with colds are best removed from the flock, and if the disease is in an advanced stage it is best to destroy them. In attempting to control and prevent colds it is necessary to discover the reason for the low resistance of the birds and then to remove the cause.

Laying Age of Pullets

Matter of Importance

More than 100,000,000 pullets are needed yearly to take the place of the mature hens retired from the flocks and marketed because they have passed their prime as egg producers. It is estimated that there are more than 800,000,000 hens in the United States on farms and in poultry plants, or an allowance of nearly three hens working for each man, woman and child in the country.

In particular, farmers and poultry specialists are urged to hatch chicks early in order to bring pullets to the laying age in time to supply the autumn market when egg prices are highest, that is, between late August and January 1, after which the general run of pullets and hens are laying and prices drop to what is usually the low point of the year in April.

The use of the incubator and brooder is recommended as the most economical and labor-saving way of reproducing the flock, and also the most certain means in insuring an early hatch.—Exchange.

Use of Cod-Liver Oil

When using cod-liver oil with the scratch mixture or poultry mash, the quantity usually recommended is a 2 per cent by weight, that is, for 100 pounds of grain or mash two pounds of cod-liver oil should be used. This is a simple amount to apply, as a quart measure may be used, a quart being approximately equivalent to two pounds.

Feed treated with cod-liver oil should be mixed in comparatively small quantities so as to insure its entire consumption before the oil has a chance to become even slightly rancid. A few days of hot weather may result in losses of feed value through this factor.

Because of its vitamin content, which makes it something of a substitute for the health-giving effects of sunshine, cod-liver oil has sometimes been referred to as "canned sunshine."—Idaho Farmer.

Figuring Flock Profits

If you want to know whether your laying flock is paying its way divide the feed cost per 100 pounds by the price of eggs per dozen, multiply the result by three, and you have the answer in per cent of egg production necessary to pay the flock's feed cost, states Oklahoma Agricultural college poultrymen.

With this information, says the Prairie Farmer, you can soon find if there are any eggs left for profit and to pay labor costs.

Back Yard Poultry Keeping

Back yard poultry keeping has several advantages which make it worth attention at a time when every family is being urged to produce as much of its own food as possible, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Back yard poultry keeping provides recreation and occupation for adults and children, provides eggs that are strictly fresh, furnishes an occasional chicken dinner, and it is an outlet for kitchen and garden waste as well as a source of garden fertilizer.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs—no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Scott's Battle Cry

Eldorado, Kansas, Times:

The mild-mannered, soft-voiced, scholarly Charles F. Scott sounded the most stirring battle cry in his Kansas Day speech at Topeka Friday night that Republicans have heard in many a year.

For a year he has been in Washington where he has produced the best publicity material the Republican National Committee has sent out in a flock of capstans. He was full of his subject and he hung facts at the Kansas City audience that had all the fiery impact of machine gun bullets.

"I have come to implore you," he said, "to cast out fear, to put on your fighting armor, to summon up your fighting blood, and to fall in line, head up and breast forward, behind the great and gallant leader who for three years, with unwearied patience, with dauntless courage, with unrivaled wisdom and statesmanship has been fighting the battle, not of our party alone, but of the whole country, not of our country alone but for the whole world, and march with him to certain victory."

Mr. Scott's words were the best possible medicine for the Republicans. Party members in this state have shown a tendency to become affected with the "What's the Use?" virus.

They seem to have forgotten that the aftermath of the war caused the economic depression, that it would have come regardless of what President sat in the White House, that President Hoover has struggled to meet the problems facing the country, that his critics have had no other program to offer, that the Democrats and not the Republicans made the loans to foreign countries and left the job of collection to somebody else. Mr. Scott reminded them of these things and called upon them to arouse themselves and go into battle for a trustworthy leader.

The Scott speech has aroused a lot of favorable comment—and the reaction should not stop there. The Pittsburg Headlight's remarks on the subject are very significant. "He said what should have been said and which should be repeated," it declared in an editorial Saturday.

"The Republicans appear to have been scared away from support of the President by the efficiently organized and highly financed campaign to tear him down. The Republicans should get into the fight behind the President or they should disband and go into political retirement."

Izaak Walton League

New Mexico sportsmen are hailing with delight the recent organization of the New Mexico chapter of the Izaak Walton League. The work of this National Organization throughout the States of the Union is well known.

Formed expressly for the purpose of the propagation and preservation of game, fish and forest, with the principles in mind that game, fish and State and National public lands are communal property, and that class rule and control must be eliminated; and the benefits should derive to the whole ownership of all the people in common. The League's accomplishments have been steadfast and sure.

With the organization of the New Mexico unit, the powerful resources and years of experience of the national organization will, with proper support, come to the sportsmen and other citizens of New Mexico.

Present preliminary headquarters are in Silver City, and Mr. A. E. Fox, Secretary, Fort Bayard, N. M., will be glad to furnish further information.

County School Notes

(Mrs. Alice M. French, County School Supt.)

Provided the transcript shall show the individual to be in good standing. The total credit shall include a minimum of fifteen semester, or twenty-two and one-half term hours in education, one-third of which course in education shall consist of courses designated for preparation for teaching in high school. Teachers of academic subjects ordinarily should have at least six semester hours in the subject taught. In non-academic subjects, ability to do the work as evidenced by successful experience may be accepted in place of academic requirements.

Teachers in two and three-year high school must have a minimum of ninety semester or 135 term hours in a recognized normal school, college or university. The total credit must include 10 semester hours or 15 term hours in education, one-third of which must be in courses which offer direct preparation for teaching in high school, and at least five semester hours or seven and one-half term hours credit in each subject taught.

A high school pupil should not be enrolled for a subject which is more than one year above his grade classification, nor for a subject which is more than two years below his grade classification. If a pupil be enrolled for a subject which is two years below his grade classification, he must be required to do work in excess of that required of members of the class for which the subject is planned. Pupils of grades 9, 10, 11 and 12 may be enrolled in the same class except in extra curricular and allied activities.

The administrative officials of all schools should require each pupil to indicate, by the beginning of the second year, whether he will pursue the college preparatory course or the vocational course. This course should then be carefully planned with his interests, aptitudes and probable future in mind. This applies to pupils in two and three year schools as well as to four year schools. (In case a student takes up the study of a language, he must complete at least two units of work in this language for the units to count toward graduation.)

College Preparatory: English, three units; Laboratory Science, one unit; Mathematics, two units; Social Science, two units, one unit of which must be American History or American History and Civics.

In addition to the major in English the pupil must offer two other majors, one of which must be an academic subject. The two units in mathematics must be in addition to general mathematics if it be taken. General science will not be accepted as meeting the requirement of one unit in physical science, but may be counted as one of the three units of a major science. The sixteenth unit may be made up of fractional credits given for participation in extra curricular activities; athletics, etc.

Vocational Course: English, three units; Laboratory Science, one unit; Mathematics, one unit; Social Science, two units, one unit of which must be American History, or American History and Civics.

In addition to the major in English, the pupil must offer two other majors or three minors, or an equal combination of majors and minors. The sixteenth unit may be made up of fractional credits given for participation in extra curricular activities, athletics, etc.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Washington Bicentennial Opened by President Hoover—Stimson's Stern Warning to Japan—Chinese Pushed Back in Terrific Battle.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EVERY city, town and hamlet in the United States and most of the capitals of the world paid tribute to the character and achievements of George Washington on Monday, the two hundredth anniversary of his birth. The celebrations, fostered by Congressman Sol Bloom's commission, will continue in this country through most of the year in one form or another. Officially, the bicentennial doings were opened in Washington when President Hoover delivered an address before a joint session of congress which was attended by all high officials of the government, the members of the Supreme court and the diplomatic corps.

Standing before the brilliant gathering, Mr. Hoover called on the American people to rededicate themselves to those principles befitting a free people of which Washington was a living exponent. "We have need again," he said, "to bring forth the picture of the glories and the valor of Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill, the suffering and fortitude of Valley Forge, the victory of Yorktown. We have need to revive the meaning and the sheer moral courage of the Declaration of Independence, the struggles of the continental congress, the forming of the Constitution."

No part of these great events, the President reminded those who packed the galleries, "can be separated from the name and the dominant leadership of George Washington."

There were many other ceremonies in and near Washington. The President laid a wreath on Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon; the Richmond Light Infantry Blues and the Richmond Grays marched in a colorful parade through Alexandria; the National Education association in convention were addressed by Mr. Hoover; and in the evening there was a grand colonial ball in Washington and a "birth-night ball" at Gadsby's tavern in Alexandria duplicating as far as possible the last birthnight ball Washington attended there, in 1793.

THROUGH the medium of a letter to Senator Borah, Secretary of State Stimson served notice on Japan and the world at large that the United States still stands by the open door policy enunciated by John Hay in 1899, recognized by the Washington conference of 1921-22 and implicit in the nine-power treaty and other agreements concerning the Pacific. These facts he declared to be interdependent, and the maintenance of the integrity of China necessary for the welfare not only of China but of the whole world. In effect Mr. Stimson's statement is a threat by the administration that the United States will abrogate the Washington treaty limiting the capital ship strength of the naval powers and restricting American defenses in the western Pacific if Japan persists in disregarding the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. He said if the Pacific treaties had been faithfully observed such a situation as now exists could not have arisen.

COACHED by skillful German soldiers, the Chinese troops in the Shanghai battle area successfully withstood a terrific attack by the Japanese that lasted three days and cost untold lives. The invaders shelled the positions held by the Chinese along the line to the Woosung forts almost continuously, and repeated attempts to advance the infantry were made, but at the close of the operations the Chinese, badly battered, were still there. Two days later the Japanese airmen made a furious attack on Kiangwan, showering down huge bombs on the defenders; and then the troops again attempted to rush the Chinese positions, without any success. Reinforcements were called for and the Tokyo government, which had just won a victory in the elections, decided to send two more army divisions, and a full general to supersede Lieut. Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda.

The Chinese government, encouraged and determined to resist to the last, was hurrying more troops to Shanghai and the energetic T. V. Soong was making marked progress in his great task of raising money to keep up the fight. Large contributions were received not only from all parts of China but from Chinese in many other lands.

As the week neared the close the Japanese, enraged by the resistance they had met, launched a new offensive that was reported to be driving the Chinese back in disorder. This was the bloodiest battle so far in the Shanghai conflict. Japanese planes dropped cans of gasoline on Kiangwan and Miaohungchen, bombs ignited the explosive and conflagrations resulted.

JAPAN'S reply to the latest admonition of the League of Nations council was received in Geneva and was found to be a stiffly worded and resentful retort. The Japanese government, it said, could not understand why the appeal of the twelve powers was made to Japan, instead of to China, the real aggressor. The league pact, it added, does not exclude self-defense, nor does it leave China free to attack everybody in sight. Tokyo told the league that its observations are "obscure" and "superfluous," for Japan entertains no territorial or political ambitions in China. Japan, said the note, cannot consider China as an "organized people" in the sense used by the league covenant, and declares it is impossible to treat the chaos in China as if it were order. Altogether, the reply from Tokyo was little less than a slap in the face for the league council.

ONE seeming result of the war in the Orient was the approval by the senate naval affairs committee of the Hale bill authorizing the expenditure of $775,000,000 for the building of our navy up to tonnage parity with Great Britain and to the treaty ratio with Japan. Reversing its attitude of several weeks ago, the committee voted unanimously to report the measure to the senate with a recommendation that it be passed at once. A similar bill is still stuck in the house naval affairs committee.

BEFORE getting too far away from China, the latest developments in Manchuria must be recorded. With the assistance of friendly Chinese, including General Ma, who formerly fought them, the Japanese have carried out their plan to make Manchuria a state independent of China. They created a new state of Ankuo—which means "land of peace"—and it was announced that it would be ruled by Henry Pu-Yi, the young man who for a time was the "boy emperor" of China. Changchun was selected as the capital of Ankuo and public buildings there were being prepared for Henry's installation which was set for March 1. It was believed he would be declared president or dictator for life. Of course the government of Ankuo will be quite subservient to Japan.

This new state will not be permitted to exist unchallenged, however. Already rebellious forces have been collected and are reported to be moving against Hai Hsia, governor of Kirin province, and one of the leaders who organized Ankuo. Their attack was directed primarily at Imlempo, 90 miles from Harbin.

DELEGATES to the disarmament conference in Geneva will just talk until the Easter recess, which will begin March 19 and last probably two weeks. Then the subcommittees will get busy with all the proposals for armament reduction that have been made by the various nations. Meanwhile the delegates can mull over these thirty-five plans and the draft convention offered by the preparatory commission. Such was the decision of the steering committee, which apparently thought the delay would give things a chance to turn for the better. Ambassador Hugh Gibson and his colleagues of the American delegation didn't like this arrangement at all and said so, but they were overruled for France, Germany and Great Britain were in no hurry to bring matters to a decision.

FRANCE'S new premier is Andre Tardieu, and his ministry and policies have been promptly given a vote of confidence by parliament. Tardieu will make no change in the French disarmament and reparations policies, he told the deputies. The government, he said, will participate in negotiations with a view to adjusting the reparations schedule, but it will not permit repudiation of existing agreements. In the field of disarmament the new ministry agrees with the last that security is a prerequisite to reduction of arms.

One change made by Tardieu, however, was the subject of hot debate. He has united the army, navy and aviation ministries into a single ministry of defense, the portfolio being given to Francois Pietri. The premier defended the plan warmly, pointing out that the unified ministry gave France a tremendous advantage over other countries in discussing any scheme of disarmament and would enable the nation to make drastic cuts, both budgetary and direct, in certain branches of armament without sacrificing defensive strength.

GOV. WILLIAM H. MURRAY of Oklahoma is now a full-fledged candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Calling the newspaper men to the executive mansion in Oklahoma City, "Alfalpa Bill" handed out a statement to that effect. In it he declared he would "make no trades, form no combination nor compromise on any principle" for delegates or for the nomination. "If successful my hands will be free of baneful influences," Gov. Murray he said, "I feel reasonably certain of the election if nominated."

Thereupon this spectacular gentleman departed for Indiana where he made a number of addresses calculated to further his ambition.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana wrote to Governor Murray asking his opinion of the senator's bill to establish a bimetallic currency, and the governor's reply shows he thinks as did William Jennings Bryan.

"There can be no dispute about both gold and silver representing value, even without reference to value as money," he wrote. "Since a sound currency should represent a limited proportion of value, plus a reserve of actual money, and since there is not sufficient gold to do this without a diminution of the money in circulation, it would seem essential that silver should be added, as was intended by the Constitution."

"The government should coin a sufficient amount of money, gold and silver, to take care of normal business, and, in addition, a sufficient per cent to become the basis for 'token' money, through bank currency. The world will suffer until that is done."

SPEAKER GARNER'S plan for an economy committee to survey the possibilities of a reorganization of the government and reduction of federal expenditures was accepted by the house, the resolution being adopted by a surprisingly large bipartisan majority. The committee, which is to report by April 15, was named and began its work by asking President Hoover for his detailed views on reorganization and economies.

Drafting of the revenue bill increasing taxes to meet the deficit was started by the house ways and means committee. The measure will include a manufacturers sales tax that is expected to bring in $400,000,000. Secretary of the Treasury Mills told the committee that he didn't wholly approve of this feature but that the treasury would prepare a workable plan for assessment and collection of such an impost. It is proposed to apply the tax at the point of final processing before the article goes to the wholesaler. The same tax is to be levied on imported articles in addition to the tariff.

Representative Beck of Pennsylvania made an eloquent appeal to the house to refuse the appropriation of $11,300,000 asked by the appropriation committee for the enforcement of prohibition during the fiscal year 1933. The house applauded him generously and then voted to sustain the appropriation.

RAMON DE VALERA'S flanks fall party won the elections in Ireland and he is almost certain to be the next president of the Free State.

With seven districts yet to elect, he and his labor allies have 77 seats in the new dail eirann, to 63 for the government party and its independent supporters. President Cosgrave said he and his party had decided to go into opposition and not to seek any alliance to keep the flanks fall out of power.

The Irish Labor party, according to its leader, Thomas Johnson, will go along with De Valera in his program of economic reconstruction, but it stands by the treaty with England; and if De Valera tries to abrogate this, the Laborites will turn his party out of office. They can do this, holding the balance of power. In Dublin it is believed the life of the new government will be short.

THREE candidates will oppose Paul von Hindenburg for the presidency of Germany. The nomination of Adolf Hitler, leader of the Fascists or National Socialists, was formally made, as was that of Theodore Duesterberg, head of the steel helmet organization, he being the Nationalist candidate. The Communist nominee is Ernst Thaelmann. The entry of Duesterberg and Hitler indicated that their attempt to unite on a candidate to run against Von Hindenburg had broken down. Hitler's headquarters recently had denied he was seeking the presidency.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT of New York took the bull by the horns, defied Tammany and ousted from office Sheriff Thomas D. Farley of New York city. The governor said he was not satisfied with Farley's explanation of his income as revealed by the legislative investigation committee.

Farley has said he would give his support to Roosevelt's candidacy for the Presidential nomination, regardless of what action the governor might take in his case. Politicians did not agree on the possible effect of the governor's action.

First Aid-Home Remedy Week

Chicago, Ill.—"Assure Yourself Against Needless Suffering!" is the intensive slogan of personal action which prefaces national announcement that the eleventh anniversary of First Aid-Home Remedy Week has been fixed for March 13-19. The National Association of Retail Druggists, sponsors of the plan which Sterling Products, Inc., dedicated to the drug world in 1922, is joined in this campaign for nation wide preparation to meet unexpected accident and sudden illness, by the National Wholesale Druggists' Association and the National Association of Retail Drug Clerks. For the first time all State, Pharmaceutical Associations are also co-operating for greater preparedness for the physical emergencies of life. Several governors and mayors of municipalities have by proclamation called attention to the week which has, enjoyed a decade of increasing success.

"Fill That Medicine Chest Now!" is the command that has been made from the first week to the present campaign, and all of them have been timed during housecleaning days. Secretary S. C. Henry of the N. A. R. D. in an awakening suggestion to the retail druggists predicts record-breaking co-operation this year when the week affords opportunity for live wire druggists everywhere to use timely advertising in their local newspapers and thus insure additional sales in a helpful effort to maintain volume.

Animosity of War Softened by Time

A sword taken from an Uhlan officer, Baron von Lersner, in 1914, has been returned to that gentleman by Wing-Commander Marx, D. S. O., who received it. Wing-Commander Marx had landed at Ypres when he heard that a squadron of Uhlans were holding a chateau about two miles away, and that they had two British prisoners with them. He set out for the chateau with a force of marines. The Germans came out, fired some shots and fled. He chased two of them and the marines shot down the horses. Marx covered the officer with his revolver and the German surrendered and gave him his sword. He saw that the officer's horse was struggling in agony and was about to shoot it when he thought the German would like to do this himself. The Uhlan gave his word of honor that he would make no use of the revolver other than to shoot his horse, and he returned it immediately after. Marx then gave him back his sword. Arriving in Ypres Von Lersner once more surrendered his sword, and Wing-Commander Marx promised that if he came through the war alive he would endeavor to return it. Now after 17 years this promise has been redeemed when Marx heard that his old enemy was alive and working in a Berlin bank.—Montreal Family Herald.

Big Men Not Always Strong

W. Leonard Johnson, physical examiner for the New Jersey civil service commission, finds that size requirements for policemen are based on the belief that big men are strong. "By tests on 450 applicants for police positions, he found that size bore no relation to strength in men over 5 feet 6 inches tall, says Popular Science Monthly.

Further tests revealed that up to 165 pounds, weight bore some relation to strength, but above that none. He said these facts showed that physical requirements for patrolmen needed revision.

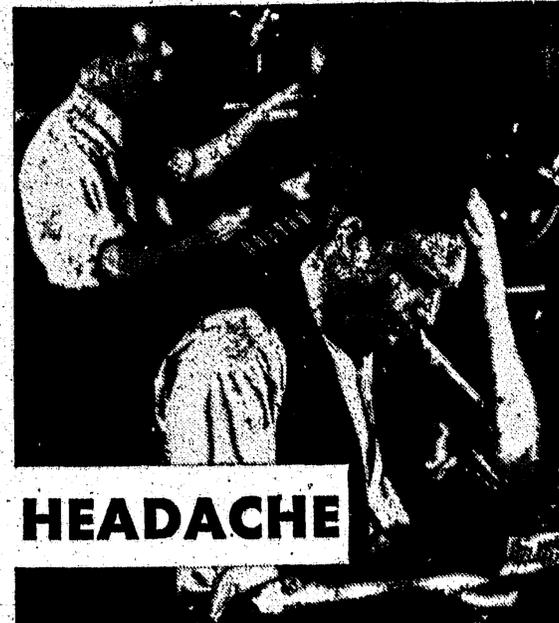

Peculiar Affliction

A motorcyclist, riding on a main road near Weymouth, England, heard a voice calling from a ditch: "Can you oil my knee joints?" The cyclist dismounted and found a former soldier, who apologetically said: "I've got artificial legs, and they've got so stiff through sleeping out in the rain that they won't work."

The Better Way

"I see Joe always takes a girl home in a taxi."
"Says it's cheaper than stopping at every soda fountain."

A city crowd is uniform which tends to make it interesting, but a country crowd—there's where you see individuality.

Nerves on edge. A head that throbs. You can't stop work, but you can stop the pain—in a hurry. Bayer Aspirin will do it every time. Methodist Church

One hundred and fourteen in Sunday School last Sunday morning and thirty-six at the Epworth League service in the evening. Watch those young people! Next Sunday morning the music and song service will be in charge of Miss Dia Herrington and her chorus from the fifth grade. About 25 of the children will take part. There will be a short sermon for the children. Here's a suggestion for you parents. Wouldn't it be well for you to come with the children to Sunday School and remain for their service at 11 o'clock? Remember Sunday School at 9:45 and the service at 11. And some of you older people might look in on the Epworth League service at 6:30 also. We are rather proud of those young people. The orchestra will be with us for the evening service at 7:30. And you SHOW ME STATE people we want every one of you at that evening service next Sunday night. In other words it will be Missouri night. All former Missourians are urged to be present. That does not mean Missourians only, but Missourians especially. Let us see how many there are here from the Show Me State. Special music for you, including Missouri songs. Later we will hear from Texas and other states, and there will be a special service for native New Mexicans also. But let's all gather and see and listen to the folks from the Big Muddy state next Sunday night. The meaning of the name Missouri is "muddy water." But Missourians are wise, remember that, else there wouldn't be so many in New Mexico. They have to be shown, but they know a good thing when they see it. More of them ought to see New Mexico.

The choir is busy practicing for the Easter service. And we can look forward to something good. Remember that hri-t-mas Cantata and govern yourselves accordingly when the Easter Songalogue is announced. If you can sing come and help the choir.

J. S. Ross, popular druggist at Paden's Drug Store, who has been seriously ill of late, is rapidly recovering, we are glad to report.

Additional Notes For Entertainment

In addition to other notes in this issue, there will be no speeches made and anyone making such will be shut immediately and buried when convenient.

The first appearance before the spotlight will be Juell Miller by proxy. She will sing "The Trail to Long Ago." Her place will be taken by Hilary Cooper, who will sing "Memories." This lady will be masked and you won't know her; the same will be true of the lady who doubles for Carrie Roberts and who will sing "Yesterdays."

The entire chorus will take the stage dressed exactly as they appeared ten years ago. They will sing "In Old California With You" and dance to the same tune. Ed Kelley has requested that the lights be on during the ballet act and by reason of the fact that his eyes are getting dim, his request will be granted. When this act is concluded, No. 2 will be put on. Watch the cards at the right of the stage, compare the numbers with those on your program and you will have all the information you will need. The performance will take approximately two hours. When Viola Kimbrell of Pecos, gives you her last bow and smile, it will be time for the 50 cent dance at Community Hall, given by the "Gloom Chasers" and donated to the cause. All business houses will be asked to close at 7:45 on the night of Saturday, March 19.
