A very successful picnic was sponsored by the ladies of the Craft Shop last Wednesday afternoon at Nogal Lake. Dainty refreshments were served, and everybody enjoyed themselves immensely. The height of the merriment was reached when one of the ladies sacrificed one of her stockings which was needed in cooking the coffee.

Mrs. Curry's little son, who was seriously ill with pneumonia, snapped out of it quickly and is now on his way to recovery. Mrs. Curry, who had planned to leave for Memphis, Tenn., this week has postponed her departure till the last of the month.

The station mechanic forces have completed the big construction program which included the new cottages for patients and a new stretch of road across a 100-foot deep arroyo, with a ten-foot culvert and concrete reinforcement. Thousands of tons of dirt was hauled by two huge tractors.

The following story, although verbally delivered to the correspondent from a distant community and from sources generally of doubtful veracity, its authenticity has been emphatically assured — relates a strange and horrible experience of a certain manufacturer and vendor of —

Sh! Don't read aloud! It comes in little flat bottles or fruit jars, usually without cellophane wrappers, and the price ranges from six bits up, depending on quality and quantity. Anyhow, the said gentleman, as a bi-line and excuse, was raising a bunch of big hogs which were harbored in a pen behind his lair and which have a great deal to do with the story. One day when he was busily dispensing his wares to a jolly crowd of customers, he was suddenly thrown into great awe as he through the window spied the approach of the inevitable arm of the law in form of several prohis which were just getting out of their car and heading straight for the house. Inspired by Satan, his old friend and advisor in business, and in a desperate attempt to destroy the precious evidence, he grabbed a bunch of the above-mentioned evidence containers, rushed out to the hog pen and emptied the nectar in the trough. Grunting with delight over such a treat, the hogs eagerly commenced to lap up the intoxicating liquid. After a while, one of the biggest boars in the collection got an acute attack of feeble-mindedness, brought about by the consumption of a little too much whoopee beverage. Frothing at the mouth, grunting and screaming, he charged through the fence which broke into a million fragments. Followed by his brethren he broke into the house where the raiding party was now in full swing. The sight of the stampede would have been enough to throw chills up the spine of the most cold blooded person, and as the front door precautionously had been locked to prevent the escape of any of the delinquents, you can imagine, dear readers, the terror created among our friends. Among human screams and cries for help could be heard the grunting and screeching of moonshine-crazed hogs, which unmercifully upset and broke everything in their way snapping savagely at the legs of the officers and whoopee-makers. Finally, refuge was

New Superintendent Arrived at Capitan

Mr. Karl A. Cunningham, the new Supt. of the Capitan High School, arrived Wednesday, the 10th, and will be in Capitan making arrangements for the coming school year and those wishing to see him on school business will find him at the school or at his home.

Capitan is fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Cunningham, as he comes to us highly recommended, having been an instructor in the Junior and Senior High Schools of Roswell for the past five years. During that time he made a real place for himself in the educational and social life of Roswell. Mr. Cunningham is fully competent as a teacher and leader in school work. Previous to coming to Roswell he had two years work as instructor in the Dodge City, Kansas Hi School and is a graduate of Sterling College and did work at Kansas University.

He is married and has one child, and his wife has fully entered into the circles in life in which her husband has been placed.

obtained via windows and chimney, after which the enforcers of the much disputed amendment made off with what was saved of their catch. Drunken swine terrorized the town that day.

Killed in Crash

Henry Ansley, member of the editorial staff of the Amarillo, Tex. News Globe and former managing editor of the old El Paso Herald, was killed recently in an automobile crash when returning from West Plains to Amarillo after attending a political meeting in favor of Ross Sterling for renomination.

Mr. Ansley was the author of the nifty prose "I Like the Depression" which had a wide recognition in the leading papers on account of the humorous nature of the same.

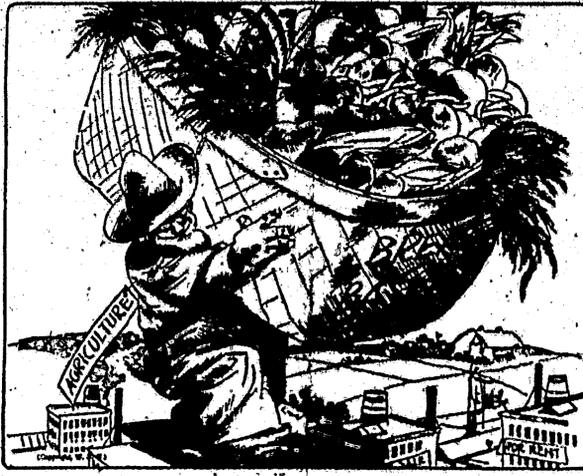

He was well known to many El Paso people, some of whom are former Carrizozo residents, and among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Fisher and the Ralph M. Treat family.

Joaquin Ortiz was here yesterday from Three Rivers and brought the news that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Yasabelita Martinez, had been bitten by a huge rattlesnake while out in her garden. She was rushed to Tularosa, where she received medical treatment and is doing nicely at present.

F. W. Skinner, superintendent of the Bonito Water System, was here Monday, attending to some business matters for the company.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher and sister, Mrs. L. Greenier are week-end visitors at El Paso.

County Public Health News

We are pleased to announce that under the auspices of the County Public Health Department we are going to be able to make dental work available for those children who at this time are not able to finance this most necessary correction. Dr. Blaney has most kindly offered to assist us and make either examinations or corrections at certain hours in his offices. This service is offered to any child in the county. Further announcements will appear later.

Miss Brunk, the county nurse, spent Monday and Tuesday at Corona where she met Mrs. Haystead of the State Bureau of Child Welfare and conferred regarding the child welfare work of the county. A meeting was held with the ladies of the Corona Legion Auxiliary at which plans for the dental clinic were discussed. These ladies and their community are to be commended for the splendid work they have done in getting the necessary funds for such important corrective work. They plan to hold this clinic in the near future.

A party of young men from Lubbock, Texas, came in last week after touring the state in search of a location. They were: Carl Hensley, Dude Hyatt and Percy Denton. They were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Jordan and after visiting Jicarilla, decided to return shortly and try their luck in mining.

Says Garner Will Put Texas in G.O.P. Ranks

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 18—M. H. Wolfe of Dallas, who led the prohibition forces in Texas when the saloons were closed, predicted today that speeches made by John Nance Garner, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, will drive Texas into the Republican column again this fall.

"I do not believe the people of Texas are religious bigots because they favor prohibition," said Wolfe. "Nor because they oppose Tammany Hall sitting in the president's chair. Texans have not authorized John Garner to apologize to the wet Democrats of the east about Texas voting dry."

Interesting

A group of administration office-holders held a meeting and asked Gov. Seligman to run for governor again. We can appreciate the interest of office holders in this problem. Their jobs depend on it. The governor has asked for a couple of weeks to think the invitation over.

Presumably the democratic governor believes that in two weeks he can determine whether the Republican Senator from New Mexico will support him.

If the republican senator is amiable, the democratic governor will go before the democratic party as a candidate.

Otherwise the democratic party may fall back on a mere democrat. The so-called two party system in New Mexico is interesting.—N. M. State Tribune.

Famous Wishes

I wish that I could get that Ford or Chevrolet Car to be given away by the enterprising and wide-awake Capitan Boosters' Club on Sept. 3.

While put after some cows a few weeks ago he suffered a bad fracture in one of his ankles in jumping over a fence, which caused him to hop around on crutches for a while, but he is improving nicely and will be ready to go to his new location at Cottonwood, about 6 miles north of Artesia, where he will superintend a school.

Carrizozo 14; Fort Stanton 5

Carrizozo literally murdered the horsehide all over the local diamond last Sunday to bury Fort Stanton by the one-sided score of 14 to 5. The Stanton infield played very wobbly, fumbling chances that should have been easy outs. Blackie pitched a nice game, but his teammates failed to give him proper support. Their base running was a little untimely, too.

Our boys had a hitting streak, nevertheless and were very consistent with the stick. Walter LaFleur and Tony Perea hit a homerun apiece. Two new men from Jicarilla were in the line-up and both played good baseball, one behind the bat and one in the outfield. The team plays a return game at Fort Stanton Sunday, August 21.

Mrs. Wm. Gallacher, who was ill at the Johnson Hospital for a few days, was able to return home Tuesday evening.

With deep interest he listened to their talk and their stories as the dinner was served.

"Are you seeking the guilty man tonight?" Shaw asked.

The colonel answered: "Strictly between ourselves I hope to show you the fellow that the Pinkerton men are after."

Shaw turned to the district attorney and said: "I guess that you know who killed Perry."

"It's a difficult problem, my friend. Twice I have thought that I knew the man. Then I have had to back-water."

Mr. Shaw told of an event which had begun to be a subject of gossip in Ogdenburg.

"I have heard that the bank robber disappeared from Ashfield in the evening of the first," he said.

"You needn't be afraid of him," said Shad.

The struggle in the river continued. The water boiled around the boy and his captives.

collar. The boat drew up to them. The colonel, who sat in the stern, took the hand of the boy, which was now disengaged.

"You needn't be afraid of him," said Shad.

That day Shad returned with more provisions to the little house at Brown's cove.

"I knew you'd be a-comin'," Bumpy shouted.

"Keep him till tomorrow," Shad suggested.

"Exactly!" Bumpy exclaimed.

"They had much to talk about, Shad told of his great adventure while they were at the table.

"By Jeezil! You ought to have sit at Gettysburg," said Bumpy.

"This place beats the world for good eating," Shad remarked.

"When they had washed and put away the dishes Bumpy said:

"That afternoon, sitting comfortably by a window in the warm room, Shad began the reading of Blackstone's 'Commentaries.'

"The colonel had let him take the first volume of the famous classic with the notion that it was like hitching a goat to a plow.

"It will be interesting to see what he says about it," he remarked.

"I wonder if the lad will surprise me again. I rather think that this will stump him."

Shad was a courageous goat. When the light began to fade Bumpy came in.

"Good, but there's some words here that are not in my dictionary. What does 'contravention' mean?"

"I don't just exactly know," Bumpy answered.

"I guess it has aughtin' to do with politics. It's like a snag in the river.

"I've put down a list of words that I've got to know about. I'll go up to the Dam early in the morning and see the doctor. He'll explain 'em to me."

Shad lighted the reading lamp. He found the story in which he and Bumpy had become interested.

"By Jeezil! You wait till I draw my boot an' looses my belt an' git my pipe lit. I want to be good an' ready."

He drew his boot and lighted his pipe with a silver at the stove hearth.

Shad began reading. Meanwhile the parrot stood holding his head down near the bars of his cage.

"Hello, darling. Hello. Are you happy? Praise the Lord! It was as if some unseen hand were petting him.

"Cur'us, ain't it?" said Bumpy.

"Do you mean that her ghost is here?" Shad asked.

"I don't call it that. It's a kind of mean word. It ain't friendly. I'd say angel was the word. Don't mind it. Go on with yer readin'.

Soon they were both absorbed in the moving tale and smiling or laughing at its quaint humor.

"I could smash the clock," said Bumpy.

"I didn't know book readin' could grab hold o' ye an' hang on so. Come to think of it, I'm hungry too."

Bumpy brought a snack of cold meat, doughnuts and cheese.

"I'm tired and hungry," he said.

Rebidding After a Take-Out Against Opposition

A TAKE-OUT, a keen ability in appraising a hand according to inferences and deductions is absolutely essential if one hopes to win games and slams and escape the payment of severe penalties.

In opening the first bid of a deal you are of course in the dark about all but your own individual holding.

Starting without a clue to the location of the outstanding strength, you can only surmise that it is divided and that the play of the hand will produce an average break of luck.

So much for the original declaration. The important point is that subsequent bidding may reveal the necessity for a complete shift in the appraisal of your hand.

Should your partner, however, take you out with two hearts and the same opponent overcall with three diamonds, your hand would have to be entirely revalued.

But suppose that after you have opened the above hand with a bid of one spade, the opponent on your left should overcall with a no trump.

The original valuation of your hand is greatly depreciated, with both the queen of spades and the king of diamonds divested of their trick taking probabilities.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, (C. 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for August 21

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 13. GOLDEN TEXT—And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend.—Exodus 33:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Talking with God. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Becoming Aware of God.

1. The Divine Command to Possess the Land (vv. 1-6).

1. The abiding purpose (v. 1). They were to go up and possess the land despite the fact that the calf-worship had broken the bond between them and their God. God spoke of them as the people whom Moses brought up out of Egypt, not as his own people. They had not shown any true penitence for their awful sin. Therefore God could not claim them as his own.

2. Divine aid promised (v. 2). Though their sins made it impossible for God to go with them, still he agrees to help them by sending an angel before them to drive out their enemies.

3. The threatened withdrawal of the divine presence (vv. 3, 5). God said, "I will not go up in the midst of thee, for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way." The presence of God in the midst of a sinning and impenitent people would mean death unto them. The mercy of God is often strikingly shown by his withdrawal from his people.

4. The effect upon the people (vv. 4, 6).

a. "When the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned." They knew that no angel could make up for the great loss of the personal presence of God. They called it "evil tidings." Surely no tidings are so evil as those which tell of the withdrawal of the divine presence.

b. They stripped themselves of their ornaments, showing that the articles which indicated gladness and joy could not be consistently worn when God had departed. We must be stripped of all that pertains to self and carnal pleasures if we would be clothed with the divine blessing.

11. The Tent of Meeting (vv. 7-11).

1. It was pitched outside of the camp (v. 7). As a token of the severed fellowship, the symbol of God's dwelling place, the tent of meeting was placed without the camp.

2. Moses in communion with God (vv. 8-10). Because Moses had not transgressed God's law, he still had fellowship with God. The visible sign to the people that God honored Moses was the descent of the "cloudy pillar" as Moses entered the tent of meeting.

3. Moses the friend of God (v. 11). This is one of the most beautiful expressions of personal fellowship to be found in all the Bible, if not in all literature. Friendship implies mutual confidence and sympathy, a disposition to share each other's secrets.

4. Joshua at home in the Tabernacle (v. 11). Joshua was not involved in the rebellion of the people

Hitlerites Demand Control of German Government— Bonus Army Is Ordered Home by Its Commander— Chapin Succeeds Lamont in Cabinet.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE more the voters of Germany frustrated the plans of Adolf Hitler and his National Socialist party to get control of the government of the reich. In the parliamentary elections the Nazis about doubled their representation in the reichstag, electing 229 members, but they were still far short of a majority. In consequence, Chancellor Von Papen and his cabinet, representing no party but with the backing of the Junker element, declared they would hold on. The Nazi leaders, who might combine with the Junkers, were said to have rejected that idea and were determined to demand the selection of one of themselves as chancellor and another as minister of the interior. Just what the outcome of the political struggle will be cannot be determined until the reichstag meets at the end of August.

Of the twenty-one parties contesting, only 13 gained seats under the official apportionment; thus eight parties lost their entire for the time being.

Besides the fact that it brought no Rightist majority, the election's next biggest surprise was the strength developed by the Communists, who will have 69 instead of their former 77 seats.

That the "middle of the road" course no longer appeals to the German voter was believed indicated by the crushing of the moderate parties of the right, even including Hugenberg's Nationalists.

MGR. IGNATZ SEIPEL, the great priest-politician who formerly was chancellor of Austria and still was helping direct the destinies of his country, died at his home near Vienna of diabetes and complications of the lung due to the presence of a bullet fired at him by an assassin eight years ago. Strangely enough his death saved the government of his party, the Christian Socialists, from defeat in the parliament and consequent downfall.

The government needed Seipel's vote in parliament to defeat a no confidence resolution introduced by the Pan-Germans and backed by the Socialists. Under Austrian law, deputies cannot vote by proxy. Seipel's severe illness prevented him from attending parliament. Less than an hour after Seipel's death, Chancellor Dollfuss appointed a local banker, John Wancura, to take his seat. Wancura hurried to parliament, arriving just in time to vote for the government. That vote saved the cabinet's life, the count being deadlocked 81 to 81.

PARAGUAY and Bolivia are in arms ready to engage in real warfare for possession of the disputed Gran Chaco region, where already their frontier forces have been fighting and the Bolivians have attacked several Paraguayan forts. Mobilization was ordered in Paraguay, and was expected any day in Bolivia. In both countries there were great demonstrations of patriotism and the war fever was high.

The United States appealed to the two nations to cease warlike activities, and submit their dispute to arbitration, being joined in this effort by Mexico, Colombia, Cuba and Uruguay. Argentine, Brazil, Chile and other Latin American countries added their pleas for a peaceful settlement, and collective cables were sent to Paraguay and Bolivia informing them they were violating the arbitration treaty adopted at the Pan-American conference in 1923. Bolivia already had notified the neutrals she would settle the Gran Chaco dispute "even by the force of arms." A similar reply was sent by her to the League of Nations. Paraguay agreed to arbitration.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay claim the whole of the Chaco as between the Paraguay and Pilcomayo rivers. Actually the territory is about equally divided now, as far as physical occupation goes.

ROBERT P. LAMONT of Chicago resigned as secretary of commerce in order to return to private business. His retirement from the cabinet had been expected for some time. To succeed him President Hoover selected Roy D. Chapin of Detroit, who has been chairman of the board of the Hudson Motor company since 1923. Mr. Chapin, who was born in Michigan in 1850, has been a close friend of Mr. Hoover for many years and is a lifelong Republican. He is married and lives at Grosse Pointe farms, Michigan.

REAL warfare broke out at the Dixie Bee coal mine, ten miles from Terre Haute, Ind., where trouble had been brewing for months. Five thousand union miners armed with rifles attacked the nonunion workers and in the battle one of the former was killed and a number on both sides were wounded. The defenders, numbering less than a hundred, took refuge in a small building and were there besieged for 48 hours. Governor Leslie was asked to send state troops, and more than 800 National Guardsmen were ordered to the scene under command of Col. Paul Sieberling. Before moving against the line of union pickets the colonel and his aids scouted the region in airplanes.

The troops then advanced, early in the morning, and the union forces vanished swiftly without firing a shot at the soldiers. The beleaguered miners were rescued, four of them being wounded. Among them was one woman. Colonel Sieberling established military patrols around the mine.

REVERBERATIONS of the ousting of the bonus expeditionary force from Washington continued to roll over the country, and it was evident the political foes of President Hoover would take full advantage of his action, notwithstanding the fact that it seemed to have general approval. Weary and bedraggled, some nine thousand members of the B. E. F. made their way to Johnstown, Pa., at the invitation of Mayor McCloskey, but Gov.

Gifford Pinchot said they would not be permitted to camp there until congress meets, as they wished. At the same time Pinchot bitterly attacked the President for the way the men had been treated in Washington. Then a Maryland woman offered a big plot of ground in that state for a camp, but Governor Ritchie put a quietus on that plan, chiefly for reasons of sanitation.

Walter W. Waters, leader of the "army," issued orders for its disbandment, but later produced a new scheme—separate camps in each state—and said various governors had made "favorable" replies to his communications. To the men in the Johnstown camp Waters said he did not intend to make another march to Washington; that the bonus seekers would fight their battle at the polls. A coroner's jury in Washington exonerated two policemen who killed two of the bonus marchers during the rioting that preceded their ousting.

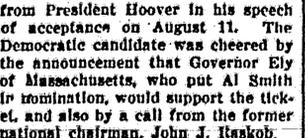

FRED C. CROXTON, who was appointed assistant to the directors of the Reconstruction Finance corporation to pass on loans to states, called on all governors of states seeking federal relief funds to send with their applications statements showing estimated relief needs for each of the remaining months of 1932 or lists of the municipalities and other political subdivisions for which funds are required.

Governor Pinchot made application to the R. F. C. board for an immediate loan of $10,000,000 for relief in Pennsylvania, and said the state's minimum requirements up to April 1 next would be $40,000,000. "We have 1,250,000 persons totally unemployed," Governor Pinchot told the board. "In addition we have 800,000 working on half time. This represents more than half the working population of the state."

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT opened his speaking campaign with an address over the radio in the course of which he attacked all Republican administrations since Wilson for extravagance. In Washington it was predicted that this would evoke a sharp response from Calvin Coolidge, one of whose proud boasts is that his administration reduced the public debt about $1,000,000,000. Others of Roosevelt's accusations and assertions were due for notice from President Hoover in his speech of acceptance on August 11. The Democratic candidate was cheered by the announcement that Governor Ely of Massachusetts, who put Al Smith in nomination, would support the ticket, and also by a call from the former national chairman, John J. Hanakob.

Chairman James A. Farley announced the appointment of Frank C. Walker as treasurer of the Democratic national committee. The post had been vacant since the resignation of James W. Gerard last spring. Mr. Walker is a New York lawyer of considerable note.

Republican National Chairman Everett Sanders made a call on Calvin Coolidge recently and afterwards confirmed the report, mentioned above, that the Sage of Northampton would take part in the campaign in behalf of President Hoover, probably making several speeches in October.

METHODS of spreading employment, especially the plan of shortening the working hours of those now employed, were the subject of discussion in several conferences in Washington between a group of New Englanders and the administration. At the beginning of the week President Hoover was represented in the talks by Secretaries Doak and Lamont, who have studied the problem carefully under direction of Mr. Hoover. Returning from the Rapidan camp, the Chief Executive joined in the conferences "to review the situation and see what further co-ordinated steps can be taken." The New Englanders were members of a recent joint conference on re-employment and sought national co-operation in "achieving job security by job sharing."

UNCLE SAM is willing to participate in the world economic conference sponsored by the League of Nations, the invitation having been accepted by the State department. But it is stipulated that war debts and reparations are not to be subjects of discussion at the meeting, and specific tariff rates also are barred by the United States as topics. The invitation, indeed, made these exceptions.

Neither the date H. H. Bundy nor the place where the conference is to be held has been settled. It has been generally assumed that the conference would be held in London although reports have been circulated that it might be held in the United States. Indications are, however, that the conference will be held in a nation signatory to the League of Nations covenant. The date for the conference may not be set until after the conclusion of the imperial conference at Ottawa.

Two of the announced major objects sought at the coming conference are a revival of international trade and the restoration of currencies to a healthy basis. The silver question in its various phases will be on the conference agenda. Other subjects to be discussed include prohibitions placed on imports and exports, trade quotas, and other barriers to trade, monetary, and credit policies, the level of prices, the movement of capital from one nation to another, tariff policy, and producers' agreements.

That the subject of war debts is still alive in Washington as well as in Europe is indicated by the recent report that Harvey H. Bundy, assistant of state, is in Paris with secret instructions from the Department of State relating to an adjustment of the French debt to America in proportion to the extent to which France is willing to disarm. More will be heard of this later. Our senators who oppose cancellation or reduction of the war debts are keeping close watch of developments, and believe it will be impossible to exclude that issue from the coming economic conference.

COL. BENNETT C. CLARK, son of the late Speaker Champ Clark, won the Democratic nomination for United States senator from Missouri, defeating Charles M. Howell, former Democratic state chairman, and other aspirants. Clark is thoroughly well. Henry W. Kiel, according to incomplete returns, was nominated for senator by the Republicans.

In the Kansas primaries Senator George McGill and Gov. Harry H. Woodring won re-nominations; and the Republicans apparently had chosen Ben S. Paulen for senator and Alfred M. Landon for governor. McGill, Paulen and Landon are listed as drys.

WONDERFUL exhibitions of speed and skill characterize the Olympic games at Los Angeles. Athletes from many lands are competing and records mean little to them, for they set new ones daily. The American teams were doing very well in the scoring of points. Notable among the performances were the winning of the 100-meter dash by Eddie Tolan, Michigan negro, who tied the world record of 10 3/10 seconds; the victory of Kosciuski of Poland in the 10,000-meter run; capture of the 800-meter run by Tom Hampson of England, who set a new record of 1:49 8/10; and the javelin throwing and other performances of Babe Didrikson, the remarkable woman athlete from Texas, who does superlatively almost everything except tennis.

THOSE who are interested in baseball—and what American isn't?—were not wholly surprised when President William Veeck of the Chicago National league club announced that Rogers Hornsby had been deposed as manager of the Cubs and the place given to Charles Grimm, first baseman, who has been the team's captain. Hornsby was let out of the club entirely, but his salary will be paid to the end of the year. Rogers, it is known, didn't think the team was as good as Veeck rated it, and he was severely critical of the players' shortcomings. Phillip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, said in Chicago that while he knew Veeck was dissatisfied with the way things were going, the change in managers was made without his knowledge.

CAPT. WOLFGANG VON GRONAU of Germany and three companions completed their flight from their native land to Chicago in the aerial boat Greenland Wal. by way of Iceland, Greenland, Labrador, Ottawa, and Detroit.

Fossils Proof of Antiquity of Man?

The most ancient being known which can be called man was discovered in Java. It was imbedded in a stratum containing fossil plants and animals of at least a half million years ago. This being, called Pithecanthropus erectus, had a small head, with huge ridges over the eyes. Its teeth were much like those of today, and it walked erect.

Next in age are the remains of 11 individuals discovered deeply buried in a cave near Peking, China. These people were much like the Java man, but were somewhat more advanced. The associated animal bones, indicate a period only a little later.

Near Heidelberg, in Germany, a human jaw was found during commercial excavations. The stratum in which it lay was deposited in the second interglacial epoch, probably 250,000 years ago. The jaw is huge. It has no chin, but the teeth are human.

Another find of about the same age was made near Piltdown, Sussex, England, and consists of a very simple skull, combined with a jaw which resembles that of a chimpanzee.

Fifty thousand years ago a people called Neanderthal were living in the caves of Europe. They were distinctly human, but in many ways resembled the anthropoid apes. They had long, low heads, projecting faces, and walked in a semi-erect position.

About 25,000 years ago they were displaced by newcomers, the Cro-Magnon, a people much like modern Europeans.

Lightning Freak

A perfect picture of a tree, showing branches and leaves, was imprinted on the chest of Jack Walsh, one of two men killed by a lightning bolt near Philadelphia. Walsh was standing under a tree when it was hit by the bolt and the electricity was discharged in equal density from all parts of the tree to the spot on Walsh's chest, so that a small image of the tree was thus burned on the body.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Hoover Will Win

We believe President Hoover will be re-elected next November. We base that belief on the conviction that the American people cannot be stampeded in times of stress.

If this depression were local only, if it were confined to our own country, the voters would no doubt hold the administration responsible.

That is the usual way. But the depression is world-wide and the intelligence of this nation is coming to realize that President Hoover had no more to do with it than the man in the moon.

It is the logical sequel to the greatest and most terrible war in the world's history.

The intelligence of this country is coming to realize more than this fact. It is realizing that President Hoover, by reason of his great abilities and through courageous leadership, has done more to meet conditions and to ease his country, as much as possible, over the rough places that have beset its pathway in the past two years, than has any other man in the world today. He has labored night and day, and faithfully and effectively to keep this country in a course that will lead to ultimate recovery. Indeed, he has mapped out and has followed the only course that could be followed with safety and with any assurance of success.

The voters of the United States will give President Hoover a chance. They will be fair to him. They will not throw overboard at this critical time, the safest and sanest leader that these trying times have produced. They will permit him to lead it back to better times.
— Socorro Chieftain.

Garner Sheds Tears O'er Texas; Apologizes

On Aug. 15 at a luncheon in Democratic Headquarters in New York, the candidate for the vice-presidency, with his eyes full of tears, stated that he had supported Al Smith in 1928, and that he had never split a Democratic ticket.

Garner said he had been a victim of religious bigotry, and wished to apologize for the great state of Texas for its conduct in the last campaign — also said that if anyone had told him the state of Texas would go Republican, he'd have thought him crazy.

He wished it understood that he had always been against the 18th Amendment, and between tears and smiles he denied all charges that he was against

Announcement

Attention is called to the audit of the receipts and disbursements of the Community Hall completed to August 6, 1932, published in the Outlook last week and in the News this week. It has been the custom to keep the expense of the hall paid by leases, entertainments and High School athletic activities. For reason that the High School Athletic Department found it necessary to buy football equipment, they were unable to assist this year and in fact the hall contributed $50.55 to the Science and Athletic Departments.

Aside from the bonded debt there is an indebtedness of $275.00. This we hope to retire without using any of the net receipts of the 6th Fair which will probably be held Oct. 14-15, '32. Certain of our civic organizations will be asked to sponsor at least one entertainment and donate the proceeds to the Hall, as it is planned to make every effort to get the bonded and current indebtedness paid as rapidly as possible.

Among those who will be asked to sponsor entertainments are: The Carrizozo Woman's Club, Women's Missionary Society and Epworth League, Jericho Club, Business Men's Club, Both Town Orchestras, The American Legion.

The hall belongs to the people of Carrizozo—the debt should be retired promptly—all should push and not ride.

INFORMATION

The main items of yearly expense in the upkeep of the hall, are as follows:

Lights	$113.54
Ints. on Bonds	126.00
Janitor	60.00
Insurance	50.40
Water	17.87
Fuel	24.70
Sewer tax	3.00

Smith in 1928, but side-stepped the charge that he had been a party to the violation of the "gentlemen's agreement" between Mr. Smith, McAdoo and himself, thereby throwing his (the Texas) delegation to Roosevelt in opposition to the agreement.

Those who voted for Hoover in the last election will take 'great comfort' in Garner's apology and will appreciate the briny tears which fell so far away from home in order to smear a little political salve on the New Yorkers—more especially Al Smith, who still refuses to see any comedy in the way Garner and McAdoo handed him the package that lost him the nomination.

Man Thought Dead Gums Up Suit for Insurance.

San Francisco.—The curtains in a mystery drama parted for a fleeting moment here to let the leading character step forth for a brief bow, then closed again with the mystery unsolved and the character lost again to his former world.

There are only two men in San Francisco who might reveal the secret, Attorney David Livingston and his assistant, Arthur W. Hill, Jr., and they have pledged their word not to tell.

They found Milton Goldsmith, who disappeared from his home in San Francisco on St. Patrick's day in 1924, and persuaded him to appear in court a few days ago to prevent his former wife from collecting a $5,000 life insurance policy.

The wife, who has assumed her maiden name of Flossie Arche, believed her husband dead. She got a divorce on the ground of desertion in 1925, and recently filed suit against the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company to collect on a policy her husband held.

Her claim was based on that provision of California law in which a person may be regarded as dead after an absence of seven years. The insurance company began a search for Goldsmith and hired two detective agencies which failed to find him. They overlooked one small clue which Attorney Livingston found and pursued to a successful finish. Goldsmith agreed to appear in court if he could extract a promise that his past and present movements would not be revealed.

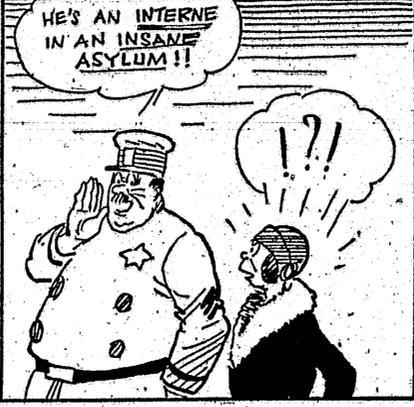

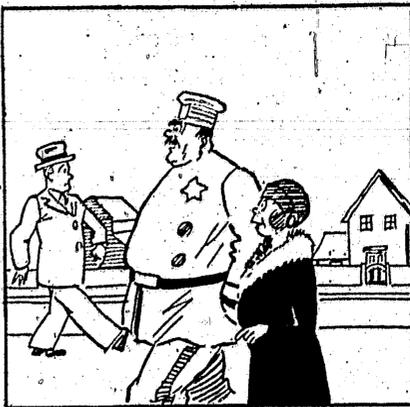

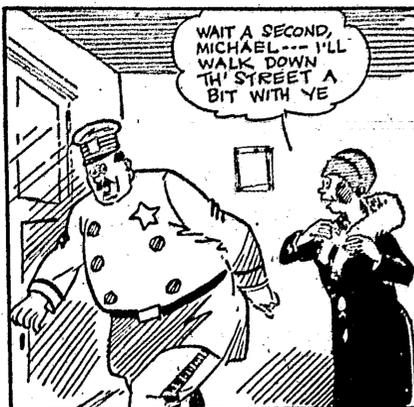

This was given and a few days ago in the courtroom of Federal Judge Kerrigan he confronted his former wife and her attorney, Sterling Carr.

"Why—" gasped Miss Arche. It's my husband. How he has changed—so much older, I'm astounded."
That was all and Goldsmith disappeared again behind the veil he has drawn over his former life. Where he is lying, what name he is using, who his friends are, why he disappeared and most of all how he "got by" remain a mystery.

POTOMAC RIVER IN HISTORY

Canoing on the Potomac River.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

W HILE Washington has been host to many thousands of visitors during the celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial, the historic Potomac river, gateway to the National Capital from the sea, also has enjoyed the spotlight.

Interest in the Potomac is on the march instantly one realizes that it is the river of Washington; of Washington the man, the greatest figure of our national history, and of Washington the city, the capital of the nation, the focus of our national administration, and the city of our history in the making.

And our interest is accelerated as we realize that the old river presents other great names of celebrities who lived on the plantations along its shores: the Lords Baltimore, who planted the first settlement of Maryland, near the river's mouth; the Calverts, the Lees, the Carters, the Hansons, the Stones, the Fitzhughs, the Masons, the Mercers and the Fairfaxes.

There seem to be several Potomacs. There is fresh-water and there is tidewater Potomac. The former is all that water coming down from the mountains and over the falls above Washington city. That river is soon lost in the brine of tidewater Potomac, which extends from the point of mingling to the mouth of the river, at Chesapeake bay. Here strong tides rise and fall, sometimes three feet above the wharves of Washington. Here, too, the water is briny. It is so impregnated with the salt of the sea that, even at the head of tidewater, steamer captains dare not introduce it into the boilers of their ships. This briny reach is really not a river; it is an arm of the Chesapeake.

Then there is the surface Potomac and a secret river hidden in its depths. The surface waters express themselves in broad reaches between banks of engaging loveliness. They vary in width from one to seven miles. The hidden river is often only a few hundred feet wide, and unseen it serpentine its way back and forth from one shore to the other in a way that teases and often wrecks the inexperienced mariner. It is called "the channel." Up it ocean-going vessels of considerable size come to the docks of Washington city.

How to See the River.

It is in Tidewater Potomac that one finds the river of the greater interest, the Potomac of history, of the landings, of the old plantations, of the celebrities who have made it one of the most distinguished rivers in America.

Curiously, the better way to see this river is not to start where it appears to begin, and so float down on its currents to where it ends in merging with the bay; but rather to start where it ends and be carried up by its tides and by that interesting tide of its history which entered here, at its mouth, three hundred years ago.

The story of this trip up the broad reaches of Tidewater Potomac is actually a composite of many trips, by many kinds of land and water craft, but here, for brevity's sake, reduced to its simplest terms without the inconvenience of delays, whether of boat schedules or motor trails, without the disappointments of weather or of the many futile side trips which anyone must make in order to find out where are the points of genuine interest and how to reach them.

Approaching the mouth of the river, one speculates on such questions as, who was the first white man who ever came into it, where did the river get its name, and where in it is the dividing line between Maryland and Virginia?

The last question troubled the dwellers on both shores for more than 250 years. Then, in 1877, a commission of arbitration finally placed the waters of the river wholly within the boundary of Maryland.

The name Potomac is Indian. The first explorers found a tribe of that name living on the river's shores; but one cannot be quite sure whether the tribe took its name from the river or the river took its name from the tribe. It is now generally accepted that Potomac is the Indian word for Traders; hence the Potomac river means the River of the Traders.

Who First Entered It?

Who was the first white man to enter the river is a question less easily answered. At one time a claim was set up, based on "a runic inscription" said to have been found below the falls, for "an Icelandic widow buried here in 1051." Rather more credence has been given to the claim that Spanish explorers, known to have come into the Chesapeake between 1505 and 1570, called up the Potomac as far as Occoquan. The contention is based largely on the appearance of the place named Axacan in the Spanish chronicles and its assumed identity with Occoquan.

There is better evidence that an English explorer may have been in the river before 1585, for its existence, at least, was known at that date, as revealed by a map published in London in that year, on which Tidewater Potomac, though unnamed, was sketched in with recognizable lines. But how did the map-maker get his sketch—at first hand, on a visit to the river, or at second hand, from description from the Indians?

Sailing into the mouth of the river, one is reminded of the first white man definitely known to have sailed into these waters. On the left, the south lip of the mouth of the Potomac, is Smiths Point, named for the original authenticated white pioneer here, the gallant explorer, Capt. John Smith.

Founding of Maryland.

A few years after Smith, in 1634, there came into the river two other ships, the Ark and the Dove, with Lord Baltimore's colonists to found Maryland, on the north side of the Potomac. Even now one can feel these pioneers' cautious apprehension in an unknown wilderness inhabited by savages. They did not at first trust themselves to the mainland; they sailed up the river for 31 miles, until they came to a small island, now called Blackstone Island, where an attacking enemy might at least be seen.

Here Lord Baltimore's brother, Leonard Calvert, left the Ark, and in the Dove and another boat, procured in Virginia, sailed up into the narrower reaches, where, at Piscataway, just opposite the hilly banks where later rose Mount Vernon, he found the Indian emperor, with whom he wished to discuss a site for his colony's capital.

Calvert found only Indians on the river. Their occasional towns were indicated by the clearings in the forests, where they raised their corn and tobacco. In one such town dwelt those Potomac Indians who gave their name to the river or perhaps took it from the river.

It is not known precisely what that Imperial party said to Calvert, but obviously it was something so poisonous that the newcomer couldn't settle far enough from that Indian. He returned to his ships and called them into the last inlet on the northern side of the river, just ten miles above its mouth.

This beautiful body of water is called St. Marys River, and there he began to build his capital, which he called St. Marys City. Within 55 years St. Marys City was laid out with streets and a square, and in addition to its frame and log structures, it had more than 60 brick buildings, which included the statehouse, the governor's mansion, churches, public offices, private dwellings, and commercial buildings.

St. Marys Has Disappeared.

Today not one of the buildings of old St. Marys survives. The visitor finds grain and tobacco fields, a few green pastures, and a graveyard where the first Maryland lawmakers sat in the midst of the sprightly colonial life of their capital city.

Where the plow has turned over the soil, or where a well or cellar has been dug, a few bricks have come to the surface, the only physical vestige of the brick capital of 300 years ago. Those from Maryland's first statehouse have been used in building Little Trinity church on a part of the site of the vanished city.

Westmoreland county, Virginia, on the Potomac, has the distinction unrivaled by any other in America, for it was the birthplace of three Presidents of the United States—the first, the fourth and the fifth—George Washington, James Madison, and James Monroe.

Here, in their many ramifications and over a period of more than 250 years, lived the great Carter, Lee and Washington families. Here, though few survive, were some of the finest mansions of colonial America. The distinction of social and intellectual life in Westmoreland before the Revolution earned it the title of Athens of Virginia.

Every ship tells its bell as it passes the Mount Vernon mansion with the eight slender columns, surrounded by its village of minor domestic buildings, high on the Virginia bank, for it is the home and last resting place of George Washington, his and our Mount Vernon.

Home Work

By JANE OSBORN

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

STANLEY JONES was thinking of his sister Sally. He likened her to a duck. Water sliding off a duck's back. Sally had been like that—responsibilities, cares, things that other people would be troubled with—water that would soak through the plumage of any bird but a duck—always sliding off Sally, whose feathers were always as smooth and glossy and perfectly dry as those on a duck's back. Nice metaphor that, thought Stanley Jones, as he drove home from his office to what he had once considered his cozy, comfortable bachelor's apartment. It was no longer either cozy or comfortable—not even a bachelor's apartment since Sally, the duck, and her husband, Bill Ames, had sailed away to the south of France for the remainder of the winter, leaving eight-year-old Stan, named after himself, to share the apartment with him.

Having proceeded thus far with his meditation Stanley found himself in front of his apartment house. He found young Stanley joyously playing in the basement with the janitor's children. That was the only arrangement that could be made on afternoons when Stanley could not get home from work early enough to take charge after school hours.

Now it was five, and there would be an hour and a half before they would be out for dinner—and an hour and a half that had once meant peace and tranquillity with pipe and book for Stanley. Now it meant home work with Stanley. Young Stanley had been rather slow with arithmetic, but before Sally left for France she had explained to Stan's teacher that the deficiency could be easily made up when young Stan was staying with his uncle, who was a good mathematician, said Sally, and would have nothing to do but help his nephew.

There was a neatly penned note that first afternoon in Stan's school bag. It was from his teacher. "Dear Mr. Jones," it said. "Stanley still needs help in his tables. He understands the theory apparently, but he has not had enough drilling. And Stanley is careless. Would you please see that he knows his tables better and please drill him in accuracy." It was signed Matilda Hawkins.

"I'd like to see that teacher of yours," said Uncle Stanley, with a fine tone of sarcasm that was lost on his nephew. "How old is she?"

"Oh, she must be very old. I shouldn't wonder if she was forty or maybe sixty."

"Is she good looking—at all?" said Uncle Stanley.

"Well, some of us fellows think so—but you wouldn't. She's got a kind of roundish face with a sort of a funny nose and a bump on her head and a kind of queer mouth."

"She doesn't sound like a beauty," observed Stanley, undoing the buckles of his nephew's school bag. Spelling came first and then some written work in English, and after that, drill with the tables. Stanley found that since the day before his nephew had quite successfully forgotten all he had ever known of the seven times table. It didn't worry Stan very much. "Teacher says you ought to drill me more," he observed.

The next day Stan's bag contained a note from his uncle for the teacher. He regretted his failure as a tutor, and asked if arrangements could be made for her to tutor the boy from five to six every evening.

Stan brought back word that teacher said that it would be against the rules of the school for the teacher to accept fees for tutoring, but teacher had said she would come around at five to help, and would talk things over with Uncle Stanley.

So at a little after five that evening teacher arrived. But when Stanley answered her ring at the door and saw the pretty young woman standing there in the hall he hadn't the faintest idea that she really was his nephew's teacher.

"Is Mr. Stanley Jones at home?" she asked, somewhat perplexed.

"Why, I am Stanley Jones—won't you come in?"

"You are not little Stanley Ames' uncle?" she gasped. "I am little Stanley's teacher. He said you were—"

They stood regarding each other with amazement. "He said you were quite an old man—probably sixty at least—with wrinkles—"

"I've got wrinkles teaching him," laughed Stanley. "I happen to be twenty-nine. No one would guess that you were somewhere around fifty yourself."

"I'm twenty-three," protested the teacher. "The little wretch—"

Together they worked with little Stanley, somewhat bewildered over the mysteries of the multiplication tables. At six Matilda rose to go, but little Stanley, with his arm around his teacher begged her to stay, and big Stanley suggested that they all dine together. Matilda had already said she lived away from home in a boarding house.

After that three times a week Matilda came to help tutor little Stanley, and when at the end of the spring the wandering duck and drake cabled that they had decided to stay on—and tour Europe for the summer months—Stanley cabled back this surprising message:

"Will meet you in Paris in July. Coming on honeymoon. Will leave Stanley with you. Stanley Jones."

IN EARLY HISTORY OF MODERN WORLD

All Continents United, Is Theory.

The Pacific ocean resembles a great pond, while the Atlantic ocean resembles a great river. This is one of the interesting pieces of evidence brought forward to support the Wegener hypothesis—the theory that all the continents were once united into a single continent.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, famous Harvard astronomer, has suggested, sinking a three-mile shaft into the earth as a means of testing the Wegener hypothesis.

The evidence for the theory is summed up by Edwin Tenny Brewster in his interesting book, "This Puzzling Planet."

"Contrast the Atlantic ocean with the Pacific," he writes. "There are marked and curious differences between the two, though these are a good deal obscured by our ordinary maps and are best to be looked for on a globe.

"The Pacific is a round basin, a sort of gigantic pond, but the Atlantic is a sort of gigantic river; that winds from the top of the earth to the bottom, always of about the same width.

"In fact," Brewster continues, "if one went by the shape of the coast on the two sides of the Atlantic one might well say that South America has cracked off from Africa, the eastern extension of Brazil once occupying the gulf of Guinea, the western end of the Sahara belonging to the Caribbean region, Greenland jammed up against the west coast of Norway and Newfoundland one of the British Isles.

"If one could push the two Americas eastward and a little north, so that Greenland lay against Canada on one side and Norway on the other, with Newfoundland and the British Isles pushed into the North sea, the fit would be surprising.

"There really is not a little reason for thinking that the uniform width of the Atlantic and the remarkable fit between its two sides is something more than accident. There is a good deal of evidence to show that during most of geologic time, and up to what for a geologist is rather a recent date, North and South America actually were parts of Europe-Asia-Africa but cracked loose and floated off."

The horse and the elephant are two good examples which support the theory of land bridges or an original united continent, David Dietz comments in the New York World-Telegram. Fossil remains of the horse are found in certain rock layers slightly older in Europe.

The fossil elephant appears first in Africa and later in North America. Brewster believes the evidence is better for the Wegener hypothesis.

"The coal points very much to this theory," he writes. "The coal of Pennsylvania, New England and Nova Scotia is of the same age as that of the British Isles, France, Germany and Spain, and is altogether very like it.

"Moreover, throughout these two coal districts, through the entire length of the Appalachian mountains on our side of the ocean and in Scandinavia on the other, the mountain ridges run northeast and southwest, as if they were all parts of the same system, and in various ways the rocks match surprisingly.

Human Side of Apes

Apes display several human passions. The gorilla will fly into a fearful rage. The orang is wonderfully affectionate to its young. Gibbons have a sense of humor. They delight in mischievous play and, being tallish, will, when they have the chance, pull other monkey's tails as a great joke. Chimpanzees have a gift which dogs have never been known to display—they can see a picture of themselves as a picture. They will recognize their own portraits, or grow excited if shown a study of a bunch of bananas. Among the gifts or powers which man possesses and apes lack it is remarkable that man can weep, but apes cannot.

Cost Her $4.25 To Reduce 65 Pounds

"Worth It," Miss Bates Says

If you're young and fat read what Miss Bates of Beech, Iowa, has to say about Kruschen Salts—if you are middle age or old Kruschen shows you the way to lose fat the SAFE WAY.

"I took one bottle of Kruschen Salts a month for five months. It amounted to $4.25 and I reduced 65 lbs. but it was worth it. Imagine just 22 years old and weighing what I did. I could not enjoy myself as other girls did. I could not get the clothes I wanted. I think it is wonderful the results Kruschen Salts give."

To lose fat the safe, sane way—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—but less fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar that costs but a small sum lasts 4 weeks. Get it at any drugstore in the world—but be sure for your health's sake to ask for and get Kruschen Salts. It's the little daily dose that does it.

When a motion is laid on the table, the expression is figurative. A record is made of this motion in the minutes and simply means that the matter has been laid aside for the present, its consideration to be resumed when a motion is made to that effect or opportunity offers.

Women who patronize Conoco Service Stations are delighted with the courtesy and helpfulness of Conoco salesmen. There is nothing forward or obtrusive about their service, but it has the little touches of respect and thoroughness that make it pleasing.

Conoco men always see that your windshield is polished clean, that your tires are checked accurately and that the radiator is filled . . . without splashing. They are glad to furnish battery water, if you desire.

Women are especially pleased with the spotless, plainly marked Conoco rest-rooms which are available for them.

Women who are traveling by car find Conoco service invaluable. At any Conoco station they can learn the condition of near-by roads, receive accurate mileage and route information, obtain dependable road maps and authentic details about local hotels, camps, sports and sources of supplies. The Conoco man will check packages and arrange to handle mail and telegrams.

All of these services are free, of course; not only free, but rendered with a spirit that leaves no doubt that the Conoco man is eager to be helpful.

Close Call

Last Friday morning, while Gregorio Pino and two of his children were out in the yard at their ranch home doing daily chores, a bolt of lightning struck and rendered both little girls semi-unconscious. Mr. Pino, who had hold of the fence gate at the time, was paralyzed to the wire for several seconds, but aside from being badly shaken they suffered no ill effects from their experience. It will be recalled that in 1925, Pablo Pido and Edward Gallegos were killed by lightning in that same neighborhood.

My Church

Before I was born, my church gave to my parents ideals of life and love that made my home a place of strength and beauty. My church enriched my childhood with the romance and religion and the lessons of life that have been woven into the texture of my soul. Sometimes I seem to have forgotten and then, when else I might surrender to foolish and futile ideals of life, the truths my church taught become radiant, insistent and inescapable. In the stress and storm of adolescence, my church heard the surge of my soul and guided my footsteps by lifting my eyes toward the stars. When first my heart knew the strange awakenings of love, my church taught me to chasten and spiritualize my affections, sanctified my marriage and blessed my home. When my heart was seamed with sorrow and I thought the sun could never shine again, my church drew me to the Friend of all the weary and whispered to me the hope of another morning, eternal and tearless.

When my steps have slipped and I have known the bitterness of sin, my church has believed in me and wondrously called me back to live within the heights of myself. Now have come the children dearer to me than life itself and my church is helping me to train them for all joyous and clean and Christly living. My church calls me to her heart. She asks my service and my loyalty. She has a right to ask it! I will help her to do for others what she has done for me. In this place in which I live, I will help her to keep aflame and aloft the torch of a living faith.—William Henry Boddy.

The Pastor will preach in Carrizozo next Sunday morning and evening and at Oscura at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Methodist Church

Too late for last week
The Missionary Society met in an all-day session in the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer last Wednesday with Mmes. Spencer and Stimmel as assistant hostesses. Following a full morning of quilting, a lovely lunch was served at the noon hour. The regular business session was held in the afternoon with the Vice-President, Mrs. O. J. Snow, in the chair. Following this, Mrs. Lemon, leader of the devotional, presented an unusually fine and spiritual program. Mrs. Dan Elliott is the new member for the month.

A study class composed of Mmes. Allen, M. Barnett, Burnett, Hobbs, Lawson, Lemon, Mosier, D. Groce, Spencer, C.A. and O. J. Snow is in its second week under the leadership of Prof. D. U. Groce. Needless to say much benefit as well as pleasure is being derived from this course of study, which further qualifies teachers and leaders of the church to develop the children of the town into the rich fellowship of Christian characters.

Even with the summer slump, the Sunday School continues to carry on with an average attendance of 65 with an unusually regular attendance on the part of the officers and teachers. The Epworth League service is held every Sunday evening at 7 with Mrs. Spencer as sponsor. The next regular meeting of the Society will be with Mrs. A. C. Snow, Wednesday, Aug. 24. Recent additions to the church membership are: Mr. and Mrs. David Groce, Sr., J. Veri Groce, Mmes. V. P. Smith of Oscura and Chas. Terrall.
