CHAPTER I

Old William B. Latham lay on a wicker chaise longue in the veranda of his country house, Hillcrest, and pretended to be asleep—a subterfuge quite in keeping with a certain salient characteristic of his which, quite early in his career, had earned for him the not inappropriate sobriquet of "Crooked Bill." Not that the oldascal was crooked in the commonly accepted sense of that term as employed in the quaint parlors of our times (indeed he was a most honorable man), but because he was possessed of an uncommon degree of craft, of audacious and generally amusing slyness, in business and out of it—a sort of super-prudence born of uncanny innate ability to read human nature.

Such men are rarely deficient in a sense of humor, and Crooked Bill had found life more abundantly provocative of laughter than of sighs. He was popularly believed to have more money than some folks have hay; he had no wife to bother his life and he paddled his own canoe; also, he enjoyed excellent health.

It pleased William B. Latham this late afternoon to pretend to be asleep in order that he might, from under the drawn-down rim of his hat, watch his late wife's niece engaged in a pastime peculiarly dear to that most attractive young woman, to wit, snoring and breaking the heart of a youth whose manifest demerits appeared, to Crooked Bill, sufficient justification for receiving from the young lady in question what her uncle and guardian described as "a whole lot of letting alone."

With the ordinary run of young gentlemen who laid their veal hearts at the feet of Miss Roberta Antrim, Crooked Bill had little sympathy and less patience. The majority of them were he-firts, amusing themselves with Roberta as outrageously as she amused herself with them, or else frankly attracted to her as a moth is attracted to a candle flame. Up to the present none of Roberta's rejects had committed suicide, although not less than four had vowed so to do. Crooked Bill had more than a suspicion, too, that, in addition to Roberta's undoubted charms, the fact that she was his heir was not a negligible attraction to her continuous and shifting entourage.

In the case of the young gentleman who sat with Roberta on the stone bench under the elm, Crooked Bill could find no extenuating circumstances to adduce as to why Roberta should not be convicted of inflicting cruel and unusual punishment. Glenn Hackett, to begin with, was of good family where brains and money, in evidence for three generations, had always been used wisely. He was rather tall, loose-jointed and angular, with a plain honest face like a kind horse. He was thirty years old, a lawyer and a good one, which is to say that Crooked Bill gladly paid him a large annual retainer. The old man's highest compliment for Glenn Hackett was that he had horse sense, and was the only man he knew who appeared to be as common and comfortable as an old shoe and yet wasn't.

Crooked Bill wished he might have been privileged to hear what Glenn Hackett and Roberta were saying. However, he was a fairly accurate reader of gesture, facial expression and nods, so he was assured that Hackett was proposing marriage to his niece.

"It'll be like her to refuse him," he decided, "and him the only real man I've ever seen on the premises. And for once in his life he's doing all the talking while Roberta does the listening. I know that neck, and regarded bend of her head while she tugs at her handkerchief and tries to appear surprised. She'll have admiration from men or life is a delusion and a snare! And now she's picked on a victim that's bound to back-fire on her, or I'm no judge of men. Hello, he's talking too much! He's getting oppressive. She's finding the going not to her liking—ah, I thought so!"

Crooked Bill drew his hat brim down over his nose, opened his mouth a little and commenced to breathe in long even respirations. He heard the rapid patter of Roberta's little feet as she passed him and entered the house. In about five minutes he heard the firm, lowly tread of Glenn Hackett following, and was aware, presently, that the young man had sat down in a chair beside him. He pretended to sleep for five minutes, then he stirred uneasily, gritted his teeth, sighed, opened his eyes, and yawned pleasantly.

"Well, now that you haven't had your forty winks," Hackett observed quietly, "what's your opinion as to what my next move should be? I've just killed Roberta!"

Crooked Bill sat up with the abruptness of a jack-in-the-box, which, in all fairness, he resembled not a little. "Shoot me for a horse-thief!" he ejaculated. "Plugged that and loose with you, ah, hey?"

"No, just tried to."

"Do you throw the dally over your pommet and gave her the bust, eh? Three cheers for our side." "Cheer to your heart's content. This poor devil isn't dying," Glenn Hackett retorted savagely.

Crooked Bill looked cautiously around to make certain the door from the veranda to the living room was closed, for it was instinct with him never to make a move until all the conditions were propitious. "I hadn't any idea you two were engaged, son."

"We weren't, although I think we could have been if I had been fool enough to insist. Bobby likes me tremendously, I'm sure of that."

"Like is right, I doubt if she'll ever love anybody, but if she should I'm certain he'll be a married man with a large family and unavailable from every point of view. You interested her, son, far more than any of your predecessors, and I've seen them all come and go. I reckon that's because you were a mite harder to land than the others."

"She's been expecting me to propose for a month, and just a little while ago I was fool enough to do it. She looked so infernally propitious today! And while I was doing it I looked at her steadily and noted the triumphant glint in her eyes, and a little self-satisfied smile on her lovely lips. Something told me she was preparing the skirts for me. So, no sooner had I popped the question and no sooner had she commented to assume me that she hadn't remotely suspected this attachment, than I interrupted her and withdrew my proposition. I begged her not to think any more about it."

"It—'s first!" Crooked Bill was steeped in reverential awe. "That got her blazing mad," Hackett continued.

"It would anger a sheep," Crooked Bill agreed. "Roberta's mighty high and handsome in her ideas."

"I told her it had suddenly occurred to me that she could never possibly consider marrying a lawyer who grubbed for a living in the heart of New York's financial quarter. I told her I was quite certain that what she was seeking was a knight-errant and I wasn't it. I told her I had suddenly made up my mind that it was all a hideous mistake and—but that's as far as I got."

"She up and left you then, son? She was crying as she passed me. I didn't see her, but boy, you're a gift from God! Continue to play your cards like that and she's yours without a flicker. That girl requires a whole lot of lickin', but she's only got to be licked once!"

"I'm wondering if I overplayed my hand?"

"What if you did? She didn't have even a dirty little deuce to trump your ace, did she?"

"I suppose I startled her. I'm a little bit afraid, Mr. Latham. She plays fast and loose with a man. She's a confirmed flirt."

"They make awful good wives once you halter-break 'em," Crooked Bill suggested.

"How do you know?"

"I married one—and she was that girl's aunt. Roberta comes by her misfortune honestly. All the Barrows women were romantic. In fact Roberta's mother ran away with an end man in a minstrel show. She adored the jokes that boy used to crack until he cracked one on her by marrying her. She bore him Roberta and from that day until he died Roberta ran him ragged and made the poor devil like it. He was a good end man but a poor judge of investments, and when he and his wife were killed in a train wreck, my wife and I fell heir to Roberta. She was eleven then. My wife died ten years ago and I've been riding herd on Roberta ever since."

"I fear you've made a bad job of it, Mr. Latham."

"Well, you can't bar me for tryin'."

Crooked Bill responded calmly. "The girl's sound at heart, but cursed with a face and figure that'd make Helen of Troy look like a Navajo squaw in comparison. She has brains, she has poise—"

"Not any more," Glenn Hackett interrupted gloomily. "I've just upset her poise!"

Crooked Bill indulged himself in a very mirthful little chuckle. "Well, at any rate, she's a very good dear sweet girl," he defended finally.

"She can't coquet with me. She wants to be pursued. I'm a busy man and I've pursued her for a year, and you know, Mr. Latham, as well as I do, that whenever she has another swain on hand she always devotes herself to him and ignores me."

"Wants to see if you'll get jealous."

unexpected whenever the notion grips you, when she gives you the dead face you grin at her like a Chinese idol and tell her how winsome she looks in that new dress. Continue to advertise yourself, son."

Pausing not an instant in her precipitate flight from the most amazing and impossible male biped she had ever encountered, Roberta Antrim fled to her room, locked the door, lay down on her bed and indulged herself for ten minutes in that delight of her sex customarily known as a good cry. "The wretch!" she soliloquized. "The odious boor! He had the effrontery to talk to me exactly as if I were a refractory client instead of the girl he had but a moment before assured he loved to distraction. Oh, dear, what humiliation! I hate him; I hate him. I'll never speak to him again as long as I live."

When a woman has come to that conclusion, quite usually she finds it time to cease vain repining and weeping, lave her inflamed eyes with some soothing lotion and powder her nose. So presently Roberta did all of those things and while doing them appraised herself very critically in her mirror. She knew she had a medium-sized, well-shaped head covered with the sort of golden-tinted auburn hair which so many women attempt, but which few achieve. She had the sort of rich creamy skin that goes with such hair; her eyebrows and eyelashes were darker than her hair, their luxuriance conveying a hint of Celtic blood.

Her eyes, large, brown and a trifle sleepy, owing to her acquired trick of gazing up at men from under the lids, were ideal for setting the reason of an impressionable male tottering on its throne. Her nose had just escaped being snubby and was tilted at so gentle an angle as to confer upon her a faintly haughty expression when her face was in repose. She had a short, beautifully curved upper lip—which adorable malformation permitted much too easy a display of even, hard white teeth. Her lower lip was full, tender and just a shade willful. Her chin was full and aggressive, her body beautifully formed, lithe as a cat's and suggestive of abounding health and much outdoor exercise.

Despite her almost startling beauty one realized instinctively that Roberta was not (sentimentally speaking) a clinging vine. One felt, too, that she had a healthy temper, despite her perennial good nature and her tolerance for her own sex. As a matter of fact Roberta did possess a temper readily aroused, but she had the saving grace of refusing to admit it except under extraordinary circumstances.

Appraising herself in her mirror, Roberta reflected with a sort of sweet bitterness that she had dressed that afternoon with an eye single to impressing herself upon the cool, quietly impersonal glance of Glenn Hackett. "If I were a girl who wore diamonds to the breakfast table," she told her reflection, "there might have been some excuse for his gauche conduct. One moment he had proposed and the next he was withdrawing the proposal. I wouldn't have accepted him on a bet, nice as he is and comfortable as he is to have around, but he might

Genius as Understood by Old English Writer

My genius I would understand that power, or rather those powers of the mind, which are capable of penetrating into all things within our reach and knowledge, and of distinguishing their essential differences. There are no other than invention and judgment; and they are both called by the collective name of genius, as they are of those gifts of nature which we bring with us into the world; concerning each of which, many seem to have fallen into very great errors; for by invention, I believe, is generally understood a creative faculty, which would indeed prove most romance writers to have the highest pretensions to it; whereas by invention is really meant as more, and so the word signifies, than discovery, or finding out; or, to explain it at large, a quick and sagacious penetration into the true essence of all the objects of our contemplation.—Henry Fielding.

have given me an opportunity to say so! He was terrible! He gave me the impression that, in one revealing moment, he had seen something in me that revolted him—and I'm not revolting, I'm not, I'm not—"

Once more she gave way to tears, but not for long. She dried her eyes and applied the powder rag. And then the real reason for her charm—the reason men adored her and made love to her—presented itself. Roberta was a good sport—none better, and hated a quitter with all the strength of her vital, intelligent soul. She made a little grimace at herself.

"Well, Bobby Antrim, you took a man's-size beating, didn't you? That Hackett imbecile isn't dull, at any rate. And I did start to say something banal—all about never having suspected his attachment! I see it all very clearly now. Right there little Bobby went blab! Yes, that was a sour note—and he has an ear for music. That man-animal has some pride—and I had thought they all had ego!"

She sat down in a low rocker to think it over very carefully. As usual, her resentment and rage were disappearing at the double; she was only sensible now of a feeling of humiliation, not so much because of what Glenn Hackett had said and done as because she had failed so miserably in feminine adroitness to meet an extraordinary situation. In a way of speaking he had demoralized her. Paralyzed her powers of initiative and inventiveness and left her helpless to defend herself ground her to a pulp!

He had proved to her what a monumental failure she had turned out to be in an art where, to quote Crooked Bill, she was supposed to be 150 per cent perfect!

Suddenly Roberta began to laugh. "Thinks he's won a great victory," she decided. "Well, like John Paul Jones, I have not yet begun to fight. I'll bring that unusual man to his knees and when I have him there I'll—well, I'll not do anything so un-ladylike as to put my foot in his face, but I'll laugh at him! I swear I will. I'll laugh out loud!"

There is always a feeling of comfort when one has come to a decision after wrestling with a knotty problem. Roberta had her poise back again; she felt again that she was ready to conquer new worlds and make them like it. She went downstairs and found Glenn Hackett and Crooked Bill in the library enjoying cocktails.

"Have one, honey?" her guardian asked coaxingly. "A tiny one?"

"No, thank you, Uncle Bill. Give my share to Mr. Hackett. He's going to need it to give him courage to face the future."

"Bah!" Mr. Hackett replied rudely. He caught a wildly approving wink from Crooked Bill and decided to leap in over his head. "Sour grapes," he added—a bit viperishly, Roberta thought.

Roberta smiled with exceeding politeness, but there was coolness in the smile. Crooked Bill noticed her chin had gone up about a quarter of an inch. "Let's be good friends, Glenn," she said in her most ingratiating and fascinating manner. "You are so intelligent one can't help being attracted to you, and usually you're very nice. Really, if your bank account should ever be brought to the rear and yellow leaf you should set up as a fortune-teller and mind-reader."

"I thought I had read yours correctly. I see now I did not."

"Indeed, you did. You're marvelous."

"You'll marry me when I get ready to marry you," he charged amiably. "Why, you tell jokes, don't you?"

"Time!" Crooked Bill saw that the issue was far from clarifying. "No more of these lovers' quarrels, Roberta. Glenn is staying for dinner. You'll join us, of course, honey?"

on him, to employ a colloquialism. He was prepared to enter a vigorous protest, but the maid, entering with a telegram, rendered that impossible.

"A telegram for you, Miss Roberta!"

"Thanks, Minna. May I?" With uplifted brows to her uncle and his guest, she commenced to tear the envelop.

"She's very polite, no matter what her other faults may be," Hackett remarked to Crooked Bill. Roberta ignored him and read aloud:

"Los Algodones, Texas, "June 21, 1925.

"Miss Roberta Antrim, Hillcrest, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. "Your uncle Tom had an argument with a cowman yesterday stop There will be a funeral tomorrow stop I got your address by frisking Uncle Hom on whose person I found your letter to him of the second instant stop If you insist I will send him to you charges prepaid stop However if you will take the advice of a well-intentioned stranger you will permit him to await the trump of resurrection in the land his sheep made fallow stop If you have any interest in his estate I suggest you take steps to protect it stop If unable to do this immediately wire me authority and I will take charge of it stop Most usually I am honest stop Reference Federal Trust company El Paso.

"JAIME MIGUEL HIGUENES."

"It—'s first!" Crooked Bill's voice was the first to break the silence when Roberta had finished reading this remarkable communication. "It's true. There is a God that marks the sparrow's fall—and your Uncle Tom was a bird!"

"Well, now that he's dead, Uncle Bill, you might be charitable and speak kindly of him. At least he was my last of kin," Roberta chid the old man.

"All right, honey, I'll not say another word."

Glenn Hackett thought the situation, while a bit clouded, deserved the customary consideration. "I'm very sorry, Bobby," he said.

"That's kind of you, Glenn. Unfortunately I never knew Uncle Tom—had never seen him, that is. It's too bad, of course, but really poor Uncle Tom wasn't a very lovable character, I'm afraid."

"He was a turkey buzzard," Crooked Bill declared with finality. "Roberta's paternal uncle," he went on to explain for the benefit of Hackett. "He took to associating with sheep. I reckon the old bandit must have been worth considerable, and so far as I know, Roberta, you're his next of kin. So it looks as if you're in the sheep business in Texas."

Roberta read the letter again. "Judging by the name of the sender of this telegram, Jaime Miguel Higuenes, it would appear that Texas boasts at least one very intelligent, very thoughtful, very frank and very humorous Mexican. He expresses himself like an educated American. Uncle Bill, you spent a great many years down there. Do you happen to know the Higuenes family?"

Crooked Bill's face had worn his most crafty smile while Roberta was speaking, but now it was blank and expressionless. "It's been twenty-five years since I operated in Texas, Roberta. Higuenes! Higuenes! I can't seem to remember anybody by that name."

"It would appear," Roberta decided presently, "that I have need to engage a lawyer to investigate Uncle Tom's estate." She glanced with frank interest and approval at Hackett.

"Certainly. Of course," Crooked Bill agreed, and thought more kindly of Uncle Tom for having provided an opportunity for these two to forget their recent differences and be friendly again in the name of business. "Hackett is the very man."

"Hackett isn't" that harassed person declared with finality. "Jaime Miguel Higuenes is. That man is honest and fearless. I can tell that much from his telegram. Also he gives bank references. If you desire, Roberta, I shall telegraph the bank he mentions. If the bank's reply would seem to indicate the advisability of requesting Higuenes to take charge of your Uncle Tom's estate for the present, may I send him a telegram, signaling your name, and requesting him to do so?"

Roberta was rereading the telegram. "I think," she declared, "that Jaime Miguel Higuenes must be a perfectly fascinating person. In twenty-three words he gives one the whole dramatic story of a bloody shooting scrape out on the range and gives one the impression—in fact, the conviction—that the result was no surprise to him and that he is not sorry the tragedy occurred! He is resourceful, not squeamish and has initiative, because in the pursuit of information he dared to pick a dead man's pocket. He is kind and friendly and thoughtful and wants to help a person he has never seen, and he is a man of substance and takes a justifiable pride in his personal and financial standing."

"Oh, those Spanish does are as proud as Lucifer," Crooked Bill, assured her.

"Lucile is the Happiest Gal"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Wisconsin Republicans Deal Blow to the La Follette Regime—Farmers' Strike Takes New Turn—Germany Out of Disarmament Parley.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IN ONE of the most hotly contested primaries that Wisconsin ever has had, the conservative Republicans dealt the La Follette dynasty a severe blow. Phillip La Follette, brother of the senator, was a candidate for renomination as governor, but was soundly beaten by Walter J. Kohler, former governor, whom La Follette defeated two years ago. Many of the counties Phillip carried then turned him down this time, and he ran behind in both agricultural and industrial sections of the state.

Emphasizing their change of heart, the Republican electors also voted for the retirement of United States Senator John J. Blaine, one of the staunchest of the "progressives" in the upper house. He was beaten by John B. Chapple, a young editor of Ashland who made a fierce campaign. Incomplete returns indicated the entire conservative state ticket had been carried to victory by Kohler and Chapple.

Kohler, a wealthy manufacturer whose home and large factories are in a village that bears his name, never held public office until he was elected governor in 1923. His supporters this year were known as "hatchet men" for their slogan was "Cut Costs With Kohler," and the high cost of state government and high taxes were the issues emphasized. Kohler called for a $10,000,000 reduction in taxes, and set forth as his doctrine that factories mean jobs, and that to build up private incomes by keeping the taxing system from chasing industries out of the state is more fundamental than to increase income taxes. These arguments proved especially effective with the factory voters in Milwaukee county, Racine and other industrial regions.

This was the first time that a La Follette had been voted down since 1892, when the late Senator Robert M. La Follette was beaten in a congressional race. An interesting feature of this year's campaign was the presence of Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic senator from Montana, who made speeches trying to persuade the Democrats of Wisconsin to go into the Republican primary and vote for Blaine and La Follette. The state Democratic leaders hotly resented Wheeler's action and evidently it had little if any effect.

Kohler's majority was in the neighborhood of 100,000. Chapple had a smaller majority—about 20,000—for the vote for Blaine was heavy in the industrial centers. The Democrats at this writing appear to have nominated Mayor A. G. Schmedeman of Madison for governor over Leo P. Fox and William H. Rubin. For senator F. Ryan Duffy of Fond du Lac was unopposed.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CHAIRMAN Everett Sanders announced that President Hoover's first campaign speech would be made in Des Moines, Iowa, on October 4. He will make no addresses on the journey from Washington and back. In the heart of the agricultural region, where the farmers have been on strike against low prices, Mr. Hoover intends to expatiate on his program for relief of the farmer in reply to the recent address by his rival, Franklin D. Roosevelt. The speech in Des Moines will be broadcast over at nationwide radio hookup.

THOSE farmers of the Middle West have entered on a new phase of their "holiday" strike which promises to be more effective than the movement that aimed to keep all farm produce from the cities and was marred by frequent violent deeds. The plan now evolved by their leaders contemplates the withholding from market of all grain and other non-perishable products, but the farmers are forbidden to picket the highways or block them in any way. Nearly two million farmers were asked to join in this non-selling movement.

Agriculturists in Minnesota, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Nebraska, and Iowa, the "strike" leaders said, had given assurances they would participate. They added that farmers in Ohio, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Kansas and Illinois had "shown interest" in the movement.

SEVERAL important meetings were held in Washington during the week, among them being those of the National Municipal League and the national conference on government. Addressing the former, Silas H. Strawn, former chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared that taxes must be reduced because the nation has reached the end of its financial rope. In the sixteen years from 1913 to 1929, he said, the cost of all government increased by 400 per cent, while at the same time the national income had increased by only 148 per cent. In 1930, he said, income taxes amounted to $2,411,000,000; in 1931 they dropped to $1,880,000,000; and in 1932 they hit a new low of $1,037,000,000.

Commenting on the "soak the rich" policy noted in congress at the last session Mr. Strawn declared it "hopelessly fallacious" and that there are few rich left to "soak" and because those who still retain a part of their fortunes will invest in tax exempt securities thereby defeating the very purpose of tax legislation aimed at the wealthy class.

To the conference on government Gordon L. Hostetter, director of the Chicago Employers' association, said that the racket, originally thought of as a temporary form of graft or extortion, has grown through alliances of business groups, union heads, politicians, and criminals until it annually costs the nation an "incalculable sum." In Chicago alone, said Mr. Hostetter, racketeering costs more than $145,000,000 a year. Add to this the amount spent by the city to deal with racketeering, he said, and the total cost of Chicago's rackets equals the annual cost of the municipal government.

WHEN the disarmament conference resumed its sittings in Geneva the Germans were not in official attendance because their demand for equality of armament had been rejected by France. But they found they were facing also the united opposition of Great Britain and the United States, if not other of the great powers.

The British foreign office memorandum said the German demand was at least untimely, since "attention and energy should be directed to economic rehabilitation of the world," and that anyhow Germany was not entitled to arrogate the part of the treaty of Versailles that limits her armament even if the other nations should fall to disarm or reduce their armaments.

This view of the question apparently was pleasing to the United States government, and Ambassador Walter D. Edge and Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, at a luncheon given by M. Herriot in Paris, told the premier that was the view of the American people. Their government, they said, stands for progressive disarmament and the sanctity of treaties.

M. Herriot laid before the foreign affairs commission of the chamber of deputies a full statement of his policy in this matter and defended it earnestly. He gave the commission certain details which had come into his possession regarding the alleged illicit manufacture of arms in Germany. The German press insisted that their government must not weaken, asserting that Great Britain had deceived Germany and that the British note treated Germany in intolerable fashion. Some papers declared Germany must withdraw from the League of Nations.

MAHATMA GANDHI, after a hearty meal of fruit and milk, began his protest fast, which he said he would keep up until he died of starvation unless the British government altered the terms of its settlement of the communal elections problem. The mahatma was still in Yeravda jail at Poona. The government said he was free to leave the prison, but he refused to go out of his cell unless he were forcibly removed.

So many friends and well wishers called at the jail that the aged leader was made ill from excitement, and thereafter visitors were excluded for the present. He received hundreds of telegrams and letters begging him not to undertake the death fast. To correspondents the mahatma said he counted his life as of no consequence, adding: "Like the prophet of Islam and like Jesus, I, on a humbler scale, have undertaken a fast for justice, as my fast continues my human cry will rise to the heavens of God Almighty. My fast is not for sympathy. After the first few days the desire for food will vanish and I shall begin to brood. All my interest will be withdrawn from externals, and I shall become one with 'the cause.'"

"Be assured, however, that I shall make a superhuman effort to retain my grip on life. I am anxious as anybody to continue to live. There is nothing like water for prolonging life and I shall partake of it whenever I require it, and hope to carry on until the Hindu conscience awakens."

JUST as Bolivia and Paraguay are squabbling over the Gran Chaco, so Colombia and Peru are on the verge of war over the possession of the Amazon river port of Leticia and some surrounding territory ceded by Colombia to Peru in 1922. The Bogota government has refused to accept a Peruvian proposal for settlement of the controversy, and the people of both nations are seemingly eager for war and are raising big funds for the purchase of armaments.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay have been making offers to cease hostilities pending negotiations, but apparently neither feels it can trust the other to act in good faith. Meanwhile the fighting between their border forces, especially at Fort Boqueron, was continued, the Paraguayans claiming the advantage.

SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS of Pennsylvania went on trial in New York on two federal indictments charging conspiracy, the prosecution alleging he was responsible for two lotteries totaling $3,000,000 conducted by the Loyal Order of Moose, of which the senator is the director general. It was charged that Davis personally profited from these lotteries, which were ostensibly for charitable purposes.

Assistant United States Attorney Treadwell told the jury that checks totaling $172,800 from the proceeds of the drives went to pay off a note which was Mr. Davis' personal obligation, to his personal checking account, to a corporation controlled by him, and to an account from which he drew the profits of the organization department of the Moose.

In 1931 the lottery was more discreetly handled, Mr. Treadwell continued, and the drawing took place on the steamship Priscilla, outside the twelve mile limit, after which all records were thrown overboard.

Counsel for the defense contended all the transactions were innocent. Early government witnesses included various officials of the Moose called to prove the domination of Davis in the order and the claim that he was cognizant of everything that was done in connection with its finances.

THREE California citizens have undertaken to block the loan of $40,000,000 by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for the construction of an aqueduct from Boulder Dam to Los Angeles. The loan has been authorized by the corporation, but the suit filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court seeks to enjoin it, attacking the legality of the decision by which the corporation proposes to purchase two $20,000,000 lots of the $220,000,000 worth of water district bonds.

The corporation also heard opposition to the Los Angeles application for a loan of $32,000,000 for the construction of a power line from Boulder Dam to the coast, and to the proposed loan of $10,000,000 for a bridge across Chesapeake bay on the ground that this would mean the use of federal funds to finance a project to compete with going privately owned ferry lines.

AMERICA lost one of its most eminent physicians in the death of Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago at the age of seventy-eight years. His name is linked with the history of medicine in this country and he had headed nearly every prominent organization of his profession. He was responsible for the founding of numerous hospital clinics and research institutes and trained many great doctors, and himself was rated as one of the best diagnosticians and physicians in the world.

Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, was called to his home in Detroit, Texas, by the illness of his aged mother, and a few days later she passed away. Mrs. Garner was eighty-one years old and was born and spent her entire life in northeastern Texas.

SEVERAL thousand feeble old men, remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic, gathered for their sixty-sixth annual encampment in Springfield, Ill., the city in which the organization was born. They had their usual business sessions; but much of their time was spent in visiting the tomb of Lincoln, their adored war commander, and other places connected with the life of the martyred President, and in attending services in the old prison Camp Butler, now a national cemetery.

PROGRESSIVE Miners of America, the new organization that is fighting the wage settlement in Illinois effected with the old union, was not having much success in keeping the workers from returning to the pits. In Taylorville the insurgents were blamed for two bombings, one of which partly wrecked a newspaper plant. Two companies of state troops were sent there and restored order. In some places the mine operators did yield to the demands of the new union for pay higher than the adopted scale.

CHICAGO is jubilant, for the Cubs are now the champion team of the National League. The opening of the world's series with the New York Yankees, who won the American League pennant, was set for September 28 in New York; the games in Chicago will begin the following Saturday.

SEAT OF LEARNING IN OLD POITIERS

One of Europe's Oldest Institutions.

The University of Poitiers, one of Europe's oldest institutions of learning, celebrated its five hundredth anniversary recently, in the little town of western France whose streets have echoed to the tread of more than 20 generations of students.

"The town is all that a university town should be, relatively small (it has 37,000 inhabitants), quiet, untroubled by much industry, picturesque, and rich in mellow old monuments of the past," says the National Geographic society. "It lies midway between the English channel and the Pyrenees and about 75 miles inland from the Bay of Biscay."

"The English are really responsible for the existence of the University of Poitiers. Charles VII created the institution in 1432 because Paris had fallen into the hands of the English, who also controlled the University of Paris. The French parliament had moved to Poitiers shortly before. By the close of the fifteenth century the new university had a student body of approximately 4,000, made up not only of Frenchmen, but also of Italians, Flemings, Scots and Germans."

"The most interesting structure in the city is the temple of St. Jean, which is credited with being the oldest Christian monument in France. It was built as a baptistry, possibly as early as the Fourth century, and was enlarged to serve as a parish church in the Seventh century. The floor of the stone structure is now about ten feet below the level of the bordering street. It is used as a museum of local antiquities."

"Three battles have done more than all else to make Poitiers famous. All were fought at some distance from the town, but all were given its name."

"At the first so-called Battle of Poitiers, in 507, Clovis defeated the Visigoths; at the second, in 732, Charles Martel saved Christendom by overcoming the Mohammedan hosts; and at the third, in 1356, the British 'Black Prince' defeated the French King John."

Place of Beauty Beyond All Words

Almost every one who has seen the Grand Canyon has attempted to describe it, in words or in paint; all have failed and will forever fail; high-falutin' writing should especially be avoided.

The Grand canyon is a national park (since 1910), through and at the bottom of which flows a river, the Colorado. Geologists tell us (and a geologist, like an astronomer, will say anything) that the action of this river in cutting its way through 100 miles of stone for millions of years has created a canyon, a gorge, a valley, so immense in size and so beautiful in color as to be unlike anything else in the world.

I have seen it described as "a mountain chain reversed" that is to say, if this great work of nature were to be used as a mold and a plaster cast made therein, when it was taken out and set up it would be like a chain of mountains 100 miles long, from one to ten miles wide, and, in places, one mile high; then all you would have to do would be to paint it in every color you could conceive of, and you would have the Grand canyon in reverse.—A. Edward Newton in the Atlantic Monthly.

Bear Merely Curious

Driving to Lubec, Maine, at an early hour in the morning, James E. Cook found his right of way disputed by a roud bear which arose from the thick grass bordering the road. Mr. Cook stopped his automobile and, after the bear had leisurely looked it over, it turned and ambled away.

Indistinct Message That Had Daddy 'Sitting Up'?

An Indianapolis man was accustomed to receiving a telephone call from his ten-year-old son each afternoon. The call came as usual on a recent day.

"Hello, son, how is everything at home?" he began.

The reply was indistinct, but sounded as if the boy had said: "Mummy's bad sick."

Startled, the man held the receiver more tightly. "She is? What's the matter with her?"

"I don't know. She only ate half a carrot and now she's eating grass."

This information was more startling than ever. The man had sudden visions of his wife having lost her mind and parading through the yard, gnawing at grass.

"Listen, son, talk louder. Did you say mother, was sick?"

"Naw," came the disgruntled reply, "not mother—hunny."—Indianapolis News.

The State Republican Ticket

The state Republican ticket nominated at Albuquerque recently, was made up carefully and is of the best material from the ranks of the party over the state. It is headed by Richard C. Dillon, who has been honored two different times by being elected to the office for which he is again nominated. No man in the state is better qualified for the office than is Mr. Dillon. His long and varied experience in public affairs of New Mexico, coupled with his genial disposition which has won him so many warm friends in both parties, makes him the very man for the place and will elect him by a handsome majority.

The remainder of the ticket is composed of ladies and gentlemen of like characteristics, and were selected with careful deliberation and are now before the people, uncontrolled by a "one-man-show" and unhampered by evil-devising political methods. Like Mr. Dillon, all candidates on the ticket are well acquainted with the business affairs of the state and will be in positions to serve the people, as a whole, instead of spending the state's money in favored localities.

Under the Dillon administration, the people of Lincoln County were favored; and when the highway equipment came in, our streets were cared for before it went out. In this, we were not the objects of special favors, for he was unselfish in his desires to be of what service he could to the state as a whole and never alighted one place while he favored another, as has been the policy of the state machine for the past two years. A vote for Dillon and the straight Republican ticket will mean an equal distribution of state improvements and a square deal for everybody.

In Praise of Merchants

There are not more useful members in a commonwealth than merchants. They knit mankind together in a mutual intercourse of good offices, distribute the gifts of nature, and work for the poor, add wealth to the rich, and magnificence to the great.—Joseph Addison in the Spectator.

Blessings of the Mind

The blessings of fortune are the lowest; the next are the bodily advantages of strength and health; but the superlative blessings, in due, are those of the mind.

Help a Worthy Cause

Everyone in the Community is familiar by this time with the effects of the general depression on the material well-being of many of our foremost citizens. Many families are obliged to cut down on their food supply and other necessities to a minimum either on account of a reduced or an utterly depleted income. That these unfortunate conditions should merely affect the home-life of our citizens is hardly plausible. As a matter of fact we who are engaged in school work both in the Carrizozo Public School and the Santa Rita Parochial School, know that this economic crisis is threatening the very cause of Education itself. We have discovered that many children are being impeded in their studies and courses because they are unable to buy the required books.

At the suggestion of our Honorable Mayor of Carrizozo, we have decided to ask the people of this community to alleviate this shortage of books either by donating used books or by financial aid for the purchasing of new books.

We cannot imagine any more noble form of charity than assisting our school children in their present distress. Donations either of money or books will be most gratefully received by the members of the undersigned committee at the Carrizozo High or the Santa Rita School or at the Village Office.

Historically Correct Sketches by CALVIN FABER

As the Revolutionary winds began to blow Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, James Monroe and other patriots spent their evenings before a huge fireplace in King's Tavern at Fredericksburg, where they discussed Colonial affairs in privacy. These informal talks as neighbor to neighbor were later to play a great part in the founding of America.

This is called America's first drug store. Here Dr. Hugh Mercer practiced medicine in Fredericksburg. Next to the door at the left Washington kept a private office. As events were moving him toward greater action, he provided the cottage at the right for his mother that she might be relieved from hardships at Ferry Farm.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for October 9

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE FAMILY

Luke 2:45-52: 10:38-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. Psalm 101:2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Happy Family.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Home Life of Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Christian at Home.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making the Home Christian.

Confessedly our subject is a strange one to fit to the texts selected by the Lesson Committee. Jesus is the central person in both texts. It is manifestly improper to think and speak of him as being Christian. He is the eternal Son of God made flesh (John 1:14). A Christian is one regenerated by the Holy Spirit and joined to Jesus Christ by faith on the ground of his redemptive work. Two views of him are presented in these texts:

a. Jesus growing (v. 40). While Jesus Christ was divine, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical and mental growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

a. He grew and waxed strong. It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto their proper sizes, but must become correlated.

b. "Filled with wisdom." His mother doubtless was his teacher in those early years. It is reasonable to assume that she taught him to commit Bible verses to memory, and told him the great narratives of patriots and prophets of the Old Testament.

c. "The grace of God was upon him." God's love, favor and tender care were upon him.

2. Jesus found in the Temple (vv. 41-47). At the age of twelve the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, Jesus, tarried behind in the temple when his mother and Joseph left Jerusalem after the Passover. When they made search for him, he was found in the temple. Observe,

a. He was found sitting (v. 40). He was no passing visitor or sight-seer, but at home in his father's house.

b. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46). He was eager to learn God's will.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with him for his behavior. To this he replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary. God was his father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51). Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of full obedience, teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Christ.

II. Jesus in Martha's Home (Luke 10:38-42).

1. Jesus welcomed into Martha's home (v. 38). Though Jesus had no home of his own, into Martha's home he could come at any time. This home was his special retreat in the last days of his ministry on earth.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). Mary had a peculiar spiritual insight which prompted her to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words.

3. Martha's complaint (v. 40). She desired doubtless to prepare the very best possible meal for Jesus. He prefers the love which concerns itself with himself and his message to any personal ministry. Because of her failure to see this, she was "cumbered with much serving." She not only found fault with Mary, but found fault with Jesus for allowing Mary to sit at his feet while the dinner was undisturbed.

4. Jesus' reply (vv. 41-42).

a. He rebukes Martha, telling her that she is careful and troubled about many things. Those who are primarily concerned with the Master are anxious for nothing (Phil. 4:6).

b. He commended Mary, saying "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

Modern Contract Bridge

By Lella Hattersley

Jump Over-Calls

HANDS stronger in honor-tricks than the 1½ to 2½ shown by simple over-calls should preferably be indicated by take-out doubles or jump over-calls. A jump over-call is a defensive bid higher than necessary to cover the adverse declaration. It indicates more than 3 honor-tricks with a strong two suiter or a powerful single suit.

While a jump over-call is not strictly forcing, because the opponents have opened the bidding, it is a strong plea to the partner to raise, if possible, or to keep the bidding open if he has about one honor-trick.

A jump over-call of three over an opponent's suit shows the same trump strength as an original bid of three. Such bids discount the necessity of trump support from the partner.

Bidding the Opponent's Suit

If you are new to the forcing system, you may receive a shock some time when an opponent opens the bid with one spade and your partner calmly overcalls with two spades. Do not be alarmed at this apparent slip of the tongue.

What your partner is telling is that he has an exceptionally strong hand of freakish distribution with control of at least the first trick in the adverse suit.

This over-call in an opponent's suit is a forcing bid, the only absolute forcing bid which can be made by a player whose side has not opened the bidding. At a low stage of the bidding it is not a slam signal, nor does it necessarily show, as it would at a higher stage, that the bidder holds no losers in the adverse suit. While it might indicate that the bidder was void in the opponent's suit, it could be made by a player holding the adverse ace and one or more small cards. For example, say that South were to deal and bid one heart when West held:

S-A-K-6-5 H-A-S-D-K-Q-J-6-4-3 C-None

A takeout double would not show the great strength of West's hand nor absolutely assure him that his partner will keep the bidding open until a game is reached. But an over-call of two hearts will accomplish this purpose.

Take-Out Doubles

A double of one or two in a take-out or informative double if it is made at the first opportunity to double and before the doubler's partner has made a declaration (a pass is not a declaration).

Minimum requirements for a take-out double are:

Three honor-tricks divided in three suits or

Three honor-tricks divided in two suits with a fair biddable suit.

The forcing system makes no distinction between values for take-out doubles of suit and no trump bids, except to advise that in the latter doubles the 3 honor-tricks required should be slightly reinforced.

A sharp warning is sounded, however, against making a take-out double when vulnerable unless your 3 honor-tricks are backed up either by strong intermediates and plus values or by a quite powerful "escape suit."

Theoretically, a take-out double of an opponent's bid announces a hand of general strength, somewhat on the order of a no trump, with no adequate biddable suit. But take-out doubles are often advisable even though you have a suit, and quite a strong one. Such strategic doubles occur when you are in the defensive position, and hold 2 or more honor-tricks, but have not a sufficiently dominating suit or the two-suiter type, required for a jump over-call.

Responding to a Take-Out Double

While a take-out double is not strictly speaking a forcing bid, when your partner makes such a double you are practically obligated to take him out by bidding your best suit no matter how poor it may be. The only contingency by which you are relieved of this responsibility is an intervening bid from the opponent at your right. If, after a take-out double from your partner, this opponent raises his partner's declaration or makes some other bid, you are no longer obligated to bid. Any declaration which you make in such a case shows strength.

Unless, however, an opponent bids after your partner's take-out double, you should bid no matter how weak your hand. When you are forced to respond to a take-out double with abject weakness, it is usually best to discourage your partner from carrying on by naming a minor suit, preferably the club suit.

Occasionally when your partner makes a take-out double you may have reason to encourage him with a strength response. In view of the fact that your partner's take-out double promises a minimum of 3 honor-tricks with, if vulnerable, some additional value, you should always, if possible, make a strength response when holding as many as 2 honor-tricks.

There is only one type of hand with which it is permissible to leave your partner in a take-out double. This is a hand of sufficient defensive strength to insure setting the opposing bid.

Rule of Jobless

As a Kansas City (Mo.) business man got into his car that had been parked, a roughly dressed man called his attention to a soft front tire and offered to change it for the spare. The offer was declined and the owner drove to a nearby filling station. An examination disclosed that the valve cap had been removed and the core partly unscrewed to let out the air. "One more way of making a job," said the filling station attendant.

Wanted No Funeral Grief

That there be no display of grief at his funeral was asked in the will of Reginald F. Arthur, an attorney, of South Brent, England, who died recently. "Merely carry me when nobody is about to my grave and let me be," the will read. He stipulated that there was to be "no clergymen, no church service, no mourning flowers and no hearse or mourning coaches."

Artificial Heart

A Yletina physician, Doctor Elsonmenger, has perfected a machine or "artificial heart" that pumps the blood when the real heart stops. By use of this new apparatus persons apparently dead have been brought back to life. It keeps the blood circulating for a while although the heart has stopped. The machine is designed to apply alternate pressure and suction to that part of the chest containing the heart, so that blood is alternately sucked into that organ and forced out again, simulating approximately the normal circulation maintained by the heartbeat.

WARNING to PROPERTY OWNERS

TODAY a letter came to my desk that deeply impressed me. It was written by a woman—the mother in a typical American family. Her little home had been saved from foreclosure by a coat of new paint, for which a part of their meager savings had been paid.

Those few gallons of fresh paint had so revived the appearance and enhanced the value of the property that the mortgagee had consented to renew the loan . . . and the little home was saved.

I could not help thinking of the thousands of homes and buildings that are shabby and unattractive today due to several years of neglected painting; of the millions of home owners who, because of reduced incomes and enforced economy, have been obliged to sacrifice painting for taxes, interest, assessments, to say nothing of food, clothing, heat and other essentials of comfort and health.

You have seen these paint-starved houses and buildings, as have I. They are everywhere about you. Perhaps your home is included.

Do you understand what they signify? Do you realize what will happen to wood or metal that is literally naked of paint if these houses and buildings face the attack of another season of rain, snow, ice, and frost?

Never in the history of our country has the situation been paralleled. Property owners face an added burden of expense amounting to millions of dollars for repairs and replacements next spring.

And the crisis, in my opinion, will be reached this coming winter when paint of four, five, and even six years exposure to the weather will be unable to resist the elements—when badly weathered wood and metal will be easy prey for rot, rust and decay:

Today the big question facing thousands of property owners is plain. It is "paint or pay." Either you must invest a little this fall in new paint or you must take the risk of paying many times the cost of paint to repair the damage done by rot, rust and decay this winter.

Even at the sacrifice of other things, have your house or buildings completely repainted now. No investment you can make will pay better dividends. And nothing you can buy will make you and your family feel so uplifted and cheerful.

If you cannot arrange to do a complete repainting job now, at least give the badly weathered places a coat or two of protecting paint.

Look especially, to the window sills, thresholds, outdoor porches and steps; the joints of porch railings and palings; the bases of pillars; the edges of eaves; the roof; the gutters and downspouts. These are the vital spots where water lodges—where ice and frost settle—where rot and rust attack first.

A few dollars' worth of good paint, applied now, will protect these vital spots—will tide you over this crucial winter. And it will probably save you a much greater expense for repairs and replacements next spring and summer.

Under existing conditions, you may be tempted to buy a cheap paint because of its low price. I hope you will not make this costly mistake.

Even on sound lumber, inferior paint is a poor bargain. But on weathered wood, which is very porous, such paint is worse than useless. It gives you a false feeling of security and leaves you without protection.

Prices of well-known, established brands of paint are now the lowest in fifteen years. Enough good, dependable paint can be purchased for a few dollars to protect all the badly weathered surfaces on your building.

Again I repeat, do a complete job this fall if you can. But at least do the vital exposed places before it is "too late."

Sales of Ford Cars

Since June, when volume deliveries of the new Ford V-8 cars began, Ford has led all competitors in sales of passenger cars, commercial vehicles and trucks, according to official figures reported today by Roy E. Shafer of the Carrizozo Auto Company.

Ford took the lead in national sales in August and September. In June, the first month when volume deliveries of the new cars were available, Ford's share of the total passenger car sales in the United States reached 35.9 per cent, as compared with 24.9 for its nearest competitor.

Ford Commercial Cars were 50.5 per cent of all such vehicles sold, as compared with 37.6 per cent for its nearest competitor, while Ford trucks represented 35.7 per cent of all truck sales, as compared with 27.6 per cent for the nearest competitor.

Ford sales in July, as revealed by official registration, mounted over June figures, and Ford's share of the business was increased. Ford passenger car sales reached 38.4 per cent of the total business, as compared with 24.2 per cent for its nearest competitor.

Ford Commercial cars were 54.4 per cent of all cars sold, giving Ford a greater percentage of the total business than all other manufacturers combined. The Ford share of the national truck sales was 34.4 per cent, as compared with 27.1 per cent for its nearest competitor.

Since volume deliveries of the new Fords began in June, Ford has accounted for 46.5 per cent of all passenger car sales in New Mexico, as compared with 31.2 per cent for its nearest competitor. Ford sold 249 of the total of 750 cars of all makes sold in the state in June, July and August. Ford total commercial car and truck business was nearly as twice as great as that of its nearest competitor.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Hurrah for our football team! In fact there should be a flock of them. The school is buzzing with the news that on Friday we defeated Alamogordo 6 to 0. That makes us more cheerful concerning the game with Roswell next Saturday. Let's have a home town crowd present.

Miss Brunk paid us her weekly visit Friday and distributed pamphlets which should be very beneficial to the students.

Wednesday was Freshman initiation day. The following program was presented (the numbers were requested by the upper classmen): Beauty contest for boys, Babies' contest for two boys, Peanut Roll, Boxing match for girls.
