HELP SANTA CLAUS!

This has been a very hard year on Santa Claus and he is in need of help if he is going to get toys for all the good little boys and girls this Christmas.

Now, all you boys and girls who have toys or dolls that are old, soiled or broken, bring them right away to school, so the boys have time to fix them up before Santa Claus calls for them.

Baptist Woman's Missionary Society met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. R. E. Berry. This was the regular Bible Study meeting and a very interesting study session was held.

Odd Fellows Elect

At a regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., officers for the ensuing term of six months were elected as follows:

Noble Grand, Prof. D. U. Groce Vice Grand, Fay Harkey Secretary, W. J. Lang-ton Treasurer, F. L. Boughner Trustee for three year term, J. B. Dinwiddle.

The installation of the above-named officers will take place the first meeting of the New Year, when other officers appointed by the Noble Grand and Vice Grand will complete the list.

Methodist Church

One hundred and two in Sunday School last Sunday. About 50 young people at the Epworth League service in the evening.

And here is a Christmas hint: Old Santa is likely, for obvious reasons, to be somewhat forgetful of a lot of children who are hoping to be remembered this year.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these," is a good text to remember. And there are still many who can remember and are able to act accordingly.

Perry Sears of Capitan was a Carrizozo visitor last Saturday.

ANCHO NOTES

The Woman's Club will meet Dec. 3 at the home of Mrs. R. E. P. Warden.

Mrs. L. L. Peters was in Carrizozo Monday and Tuesday.

Henry Dale and wife spent the day in Carrizozo Monday.

Miss Louise Hall spent Thanksgiving with the home folks.

Mrs. Walter Silvers of Duran was a guest at the Straley home while enroute home from Tombstone, Arizona.

The Misses Josephine and Carrie Heath of Tucumcari spent several days of their Thanksgiving holidays at the R. L. Hale home.

Stock is still moving from this point, there being 40 cars of sheep and 10 of cattle shipped this week.

Among those having the flu, are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lemaster, Mrs. Floyd Ellis, Mrs. John Straley and Jane Pruett.

Mrs. Belknap is working as relief operator at Corona this week.

Mmes. S. J. Pruett of Ancho and M. F. Pruett of Duran were called to El Paso this week on account of the serious illness of Mr. H. W. Grove, their father.

Mrs. L. L. Peters spent the day here Wednesday as guest of Mrs. G. F. Pruett.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Frame entertained the Bridge Club Saturday evening. Thanksgiving motif was used in tallies and table markers, the latter being the handiwork of Mary Catherine Penix, clever little granddaughter of the host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Hightower, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett, Mr. and Mrs. Kile, Mmes. G. Pruett, Ann Henderson, Bert Penix, the Misses Mary Catherine Penix, Miriam Hightower and Master John Allen Hightower.

Friends of John Brickley were saddened to hear of the serious accident which happened to his niece, Miss Ruth Brickley.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nunn entertained with a dinner party on Thanksgiving Day. Their guests being members of the Straley family.

Woman's Club Bazaar

At the Community Hall Saturday, Dec. 17, the Woman's Club of Carrizozo will conduct a bazaar beginning at 2.30 p. m. Baked goods and Christmas novelties will also be sold. Be sure to attend.

Dance at the Cooper Home

About fifty guests enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. James Cooper at a dance at the ranch home north of here Tuesday night. Everybody had a grand and good time.

Mrs. Champ Ferguson of the Nogal-Mesa was a Carrizozo visitor this Thursday, paying the Outlook office a pleasant call while in town.

What, Is He Back on the Air Again?

Mayor McQuillen and the Government Relief Fund

The Lincoln County Associated Charities headed by Mayor G. T. McQuillen, who has charge of the government relief set-up, is making progress. The showing began Monday, when a force of men was put to work in cleaning up the town and burning the vast amount of tumble weeds.

"It must be borne in mind," said the Mayor, "that there is no money given out for the work, but holders of tickets indicating the amount of work performed, will entitle them to groceries and clothes at any of our business houses. The merchants will send these vouchers to headquarters at Santa Fe and checks will be issued according to the face value of such vouchers; and in this manner the benefits will reach the deserving all over the county.

Sport for the Winter Season

Several of our merchant boosters have their heads together with a view of giving a series of sporting events in the near future. These events, in which our neighborhood towns will take part, will consist of running races, jumping, horse racing, boxing, wrestling, etc.

The idea is to offer prizes from time to time from one event to another and these prizes will be made up among the merchants who will participate in the promotion of the sport. A meeting of those interested in the order of events will be held in a few days when a course will be mapped out, after which the schedule of the athletic sports will be published in this paper.

Six O'clock Turkey Dinner

Last Friday evening, Attorney and Mrs. John E. Hall entertained with a six o'clock turkey dinner at their home. Besides host and hostess, those present were: Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Boughner, daughters Rhea and Beatrix and son Leslie, J. Verl Groce and Ralph Hall. Turkey favors made of pine cones and a pumpkin basket laden with various kinds of fruits and nuts formed the center piece.

Miraculous Escape

Last Saturday night, Byrl Lindsey and Miss Ruth Brickley drove out to White Oaks and attended the Post-Thanksgiving dance given by the Revelers. They remained but a short time, leaving for Carrizozo at about 11 o'clock. At this hour a freight train of 72 cars pulled out just ahead of No. 4 with orders to lay on the siding at Robsart to allow No. 4 to pass.

On arriving at the White Oaks crossing, sixty of the 72 cars had passed and according to a statement made by Lindsey after he had regained consciousness, he failed to see the train which was moving at the rate of about 40 miles an hour. The road coming from White Oaks makes an abrupt turn about 50 feet before it reaches the crossing and the car made the turn and crashed into the moving train.

The hood of the car went entirely under the train and was dragged a short distance until it came in contact with a metallic cattle guard and this, according to the trainmen, was what saved their lives, from the fact that the cattle guard's resistance drew the automobile away from the train and although torn from its moorings, it threw the occupants for some distance to the right of the track.

Conductor Milton Tracy was in charge of the train and knew nothing of the accident until he was notified at Vaughn and on looking over his train at Indola, he found the license plate fastened in under the break rigging.

Detective Hodges of the S. P., had been at the White Oaks dance and on returning 30 minutes after the accident, saw a broken fender alongside the road and on investigation, found the unconscious bodies of the couple, lifted them into his car and brot them to Johnson's Hospital, where after working over them through the night, they regained consciousness Sunday morning. Byrl Lindsey was able to be taken to the home of his uncle, L. J. Adams, Monday and Miss Brickley will be able to leave the hospital today. It is fortunate to the extreme, that they escaped with their lives, as what was left of the car, resembled a heap of debris.

See the program for the Capitan P. T. A. Association, held Thursday, Dec. 8, on an inside page. The popular priest, Father Brady of Carrizozo and Pedro Cabalin, the leader of the Fort Stanton String Ensemble, combined with speakers, are to appear. Read their program on an inside page.

LOCAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wells, parents of the former motion picture star Ted Wells, were Carrizozo visitors from their ranch near Yeso, N. M., Monday, remaining over until Tuesday, when they left for home.

Mrs. R. E. P. Warden was here from Ancho Tuesday to see her daughters who are attending the Carrizozo High School. Mrs. Warden and brother, Jim Cooper won the prize for the best waltzing couple at the Colonial Dance given by the Woman's Club on Thanksgiving Eve.

Operator John Kranawitter spent Thanksgiving with relatives in El Paso.

Mrs. W. W. Walker was in El Paso for the week-end and returned, accompanied by her son Buster, who will remain in Carrizozo for an indefinite period.

W. S. Armstrong of Coyote was a Carrizozo business visitor on Thursday of this week.

John Scharf of White Oaks was a visitor in town this Wednesday.

J. A. Brubaker was here from Capitan Wednesday, attending to some business and returning home in the afternoon. Always glad to see you, Amigo; the oftener you come, the better it suits us.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Rockwell of Capitan were visitors here Wednesday.

Our esteemed friend, Ex-Senator J. V. Tully of Glencoe, was here Tuesday and was the guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer. J. V. spent the day in greeting his old Carrizozo friends; also stopped in this office to say hello. Come again, J. V., we are always glad to see you.

On Wednesday afternoon, Joe Vega, Jr., 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vega, found a shot gun shell and breaking it in two, emptied the powder into a tin can lid and then lit a match to the contents, which exploded and burned his little face slightly.

Miss Gertie Ayers was here yesterday from Three Rivers. She will leave in about 10 days for Benson, Arizona, to spend the holiday season with her sister, Mrs. Roy Adams. Her father, W. J. Ayers, will spend the same period with relatives and friends in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Dance Saturday Night

Be sure to attend the dance at Community Hall tomorrow night for the benefit of the Athletic Association of the Carrizozo High School. 'The Revelers' will furnish the music. Nuff Sed.

Two More Fords Sold

The Carrizozo Auto Company has sold this week two Ford cars to the following: John R. Riggins, Capitan, a Ford V-8 Coupe. The driver of the Carrizozo-Roswell stage, a Truck.

Announcements are out for the American Legion dance to be given on Christmas Eve. Tell Santa Claus to stand by until the dance is over. He'll be glad to. You know the Revelers; they'll furnish the music--and bowl!

LYRIC THEATRE

R. A. Walker, Owner

Friday-Saturday-Tom Mix in "My Pal, the King" and "Finger Island"

Sunday-Monday-Tuesday-"Hat Check Girl," with Peggy Shannon, John Boles, El Brendel, News Reel and "Incredible Indian."

P. T. A. Minstrel

If you want the best laugh of the winter don't fail to attend the P. T. A. Minstrel Show at 8 p. m., December 9, at the High School Auditorium. Prices 25c and 15c.

They will all be there. You will have the opportunity of hearing Bones, Tambo, Mandy Sue, Chrysanthemum, Onyx, Liza, Mirandy, Lindy Lou, Henry Claypipe Jefferson, Booker T. Washington and other darbies who rightly belong in the 'Rogues Gallery.'

Plan to spend one evening with Mr. Mirth and chase old man Depression. The deep dark mystery alone is worth the price of admission. Remember the admission is only 15 and 25c and the show is worth a dollar of anybody's money. "Believe it or not."

Local Masons Visit Tularosa

Monday night, seven members of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., made a trip to Tularosa on an invitation from that local and conferred the Third Degree for the sister lodge. After the degree work, a banquet was served. Those attending from here were: F. L. Boughner, Dr. R. E. Blaney, C. E. Huppertz, M. J. Barnett, S. Bostian, A. L. Burke and G. S. Hoover. No. 41 wishes to thank Tularosa for extended courtesies.

Attention, Masons!

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., will hold a Regular Communication Saturday night, Dec. 3, for the purpose of business. At this communication, officers for 1933 will be elected. All Master Masons are cordially invited. F. L. Boughner, W. M. R. E. Lemon, Sec'y.

Commits Suicide

Tuesday morning at the Hines ranch near Corona, Joe Anna Bishop, 19, committed suicide by taking strychnine. Mrs. Bishop had been employed at the Hines ranch for several months and according to the owner of the ranch, she had been brooding over past mistreatment by a former husband from whom she had been separated. Bishop left her at the ranch, during which time she had heard nothing from him. On the morning mentioned above, she told Hines that she had taken the poison which the ranchman had prepared for the coyotes, but he thought she was jesting until the effects of the drug made itself manifest. He hurried with her to Corona, but she died before reaching that place. On being notified, Deputy Sheriff Pete Johnson, Judge Harvey and Dr. Johnson went to Corona, where a coroner's jury rendered a verdict of suicide. The body was sent to Roswell for burial, so we understand.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins were Carrizozo visitors on Thursday of this week.

Too Much Haste

WHEN LOOKING IS BAD

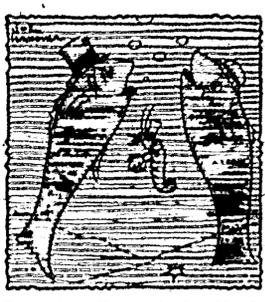

Who—Do you think the charleston is bad for the heart?
He—It sure is. You've got mine racing.

REGULAR SCALE

Musician (considering job)—What does your scale of wages start with?
Leader—You should know the answer to that, my friend—it starts with dough.

AND PINCHES THEM

First Fish—How is it that Mr. Lobster never gets invited to any more dances?
Second Fish—He holds the girls too tight!

BAD ON HIM

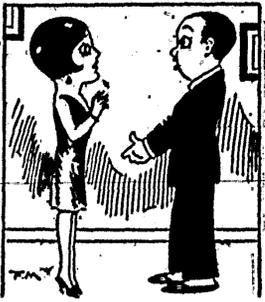

He—So y' say yer dad's coming around by degrees?
She—Yes—and when he does come around you'd better beat it quick.

EXPLANATION, NO DOUBT

Wife—At last a woman has been appointed to the diplomatic service.
Hubby—Yes, the government has decided to abandon secret diplomacy, no doubt.

'T WAS ALWAYS THUS

Veteran of World War—And that's how the terrific battle was won. She (adoringly)—Wonderful, wonderful. And how mean it was for the rest of them not to give any help!

CAUSE AND EFFECT

Discontented Wife—Several of the men whom I refused when I married you are richer than you are now.
Henpecked Husband—That's the answer.

JUNIOR'S FOLLOW-UP

Where did you find your wonderful follow-up system? It would get money out of anybody.
I simply compiled and adapted the letters my son sent me from college.

THEN ESPECIALLY

It is always customary to ask a guest to call again, isn't it?
Of course it is; especially if he is a bill collector.

BEATING THE CRITICS

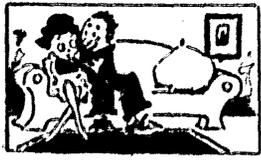

Why do you always attend the opening performance at the theater?
So I can enjoy the show without thinking what the critics have said.

PUTTING DAD RIGHT

What's this, daughter? You let Mr. Brown, whom you barely know, kiss you?
Now, father, let's get this thing right. I didn't let him kiss me, I merely let him try.

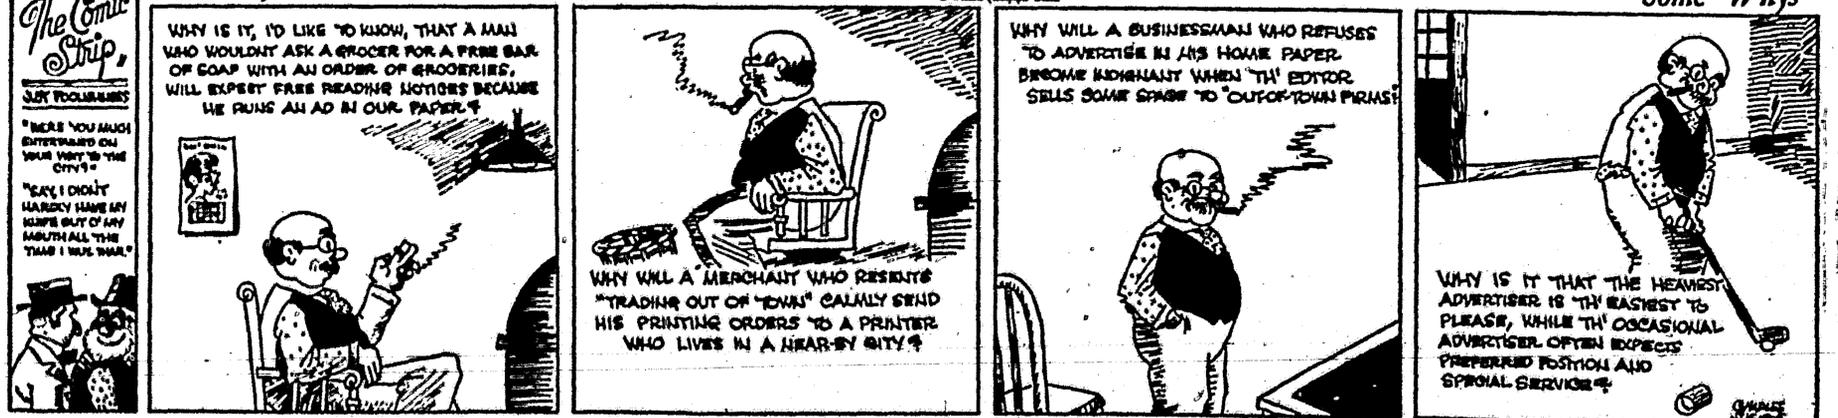

COMPLETING THE PICTURE

She—If I'm as pretty as a picture, don't spoil the effect by handling please.
He (tightening his hold)—But you need framing, my dear.

Europe's Concerted Move for War Debt Cancellation—Hoover and Roosevelt to Confer—Diversion of Colorado River Completed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Sir Ronald Lindsay

SIR RONALD LINDSAY, British ambassador to Washington, handed to Secretary of State Stimson his government's request that the United States agree to a re-consideration and modification of the war debts agreements under which European powers are obligated to pay this country eleven billion dollars in principal and ten billions in interest during the next 58 years. The French ambassador followed with an almost identical request on behalf of France, and two days later Belgium asked the same thing. The three powers asked suspension of all war debt installments, including those due December 15, pending the outcome of the discussions suggested.

Receiving notice of this action while on his way from California to Washington, President Hoover immediately informed President-Elect Roosevelt of the development and invited him to a conference at the White House, suggesting that he bring with him the Democratic leaders of congress and any other advisers he might select. He told Governor Roosevelt he was loath to proceed in the matter with recommendations to congress until he had conferred with him, since any settlement of the debt problem must be the result of protracted negotiations that would reach beyond the remaining days of his administration. The President's plan seemed fair enough, but Mr. Roosevelt accepted it only "in principle," saying he would be glad to meet with Mr. Hoover and go over the situation but asking that the meeting be "wholly informal and personal." He added that the European notes create a responsibility "which rests upon those now vested with executive and legislative authority." Thus it was made evident Governor Roosevelt has no intention of shouldering any responsibility ahead of time.

ONE thing that is fairly certain is that Europe's concerted move for revision of the war debts, and cancellation if possible, will not be successful with the short session of congress that opens in December. Not one of the senators and representatives in Washington is in favor of granting the concessions asked, so the prospect was that the debtor nations would either have to pay the December installments or default. The British installment is $5, the French 20 millions, and the Belgian two millions. It was felt certain that Great Britain would pay if necessary.

Governor Roosevelt, according to Democratic leaders, is opposed to any reduction of the debts; but he thinks payment could be made easier through an economic conference to free trade channels of tariff barriers and exchange restrictions. President Hoover is opposed to downward revision of the tariff, but has suggested that foreign nations be given credit against their obligations for any concessions that would offer a wider market for American farm products and manufactures.

GERMANY'S interest in this debt matter is vital, for the drive of the allied nations for revision is based on the Lausanne pact of last July. This was a "gentleman's agreement" providing that the reparations which Germany must pay the allies should be reduced from $20,000,000,000, as stipulated in the Young plan, to $7,400,000,000. The reduction was not to take effect unless the United States could be prevailed upon to modify the understanding under which the allied powers are obligated to pay this country.

The United States government has consistently refused to link the war debts with reparations. On the other hand the Hoover administration has repeatedly made it clear that its attitude toward full payment of the debts could be modified only by measurable success of the world disarmament movement.

FRANCE, through Premier Herriot, laid before the disarmament conference in Geneva its complete plan designed to bring about general disarmament and world peace. It was well received by the British, and Norman Davis, American representative, praised it as "a great concession," so hopes for the success of the conference were high. But they were dashed when Germany refused to find in it reason for rejoining the parity. M. Herriot declaring the Herriot program was just another plan to assure French hegemony on the continent. The French scheme, combining the ideas of security and disarmament, seemed to offer Germany the equality she demands, under terms yet to be agreed upon. But it provides for "Progressive disarmament" of the powers and excludes rearmament for Germany. The section of most vital interest to the United States reads:

"Any war undertaken in breach of the Paris (Briand-Kellogg) pact is a matter of interest to all the powers and shall be regarded as a breach of the obligations assumed towards each one of them.

"In the event of a breach or threat of a breach of the Paris pact, the said powers shall concert together as promptly as possible with a view to appealing to public opinion and agreeing upon the steps to be taken.

"In application of the pact of Paris outlawing war, any breach of that pact shall involve the prohibition of direct or indirect economic or financial relations with the aggressor country. The powers shall undertake to adopt the necessary measures to make that prohibition immediately effective.

"The said powers shall declare their determination not to recognize any de facto situation brought about in consequence of the violation of an international undertaking."

This in essence means that the United States would abandon its historic claim to neutrality rights.

Great Britain's plan, presented by Sir John Simon, concentrates on a reduction of national armaments, particularly air forces, the latter to be abolished by degrees on condition that Germany in the meantime does not rearm in the air.

FRANCE, Germany and Great Britain have got together in one project—the formation of a tripartite economic consortium designed to rehabilitate Europe and the Near East. It was announced in Paris by Raymond Patenotre, French undersecretary for national economy, who said the first project would be the offering of a loan of 17,000,000,000 francs for the electrification of railways in Poland, Portugal, Rumania and Iraq. France and England are expected to provide 40 per cent of the loan each, and Germany 20 per cent. Premier Herriot will be the titular head of the consortium in France and Chancellor Franz von Papen in Germany. Patenotre, as the vice president for France, will be in actual charge of operations, with headquarters in Paris.

Patenotre said guarantees as to insurance, security and noncompetition in industrial bidding would constitute the underlying principles of the organization.

DIVERSION of the Colorado river, one of the big preliminary pieces of work in the building of the Hoover dam, has been completed and the full flow of the river is now going underground through the two Arizona tunnels.

The still water between two temporary dams at the inlet and outlet of the diversion tunnels has been pumped out and the river bed laid bare for nearly a mile ready for excavation. Bedrock probably will be reached by next July. Some 4,000,000 cubic yards must be removed before pouring of concrete starts, the river bed being excavated to a depth of 130 feet.

Frank T. Crowe, general field superintendent of Six Companies, contractors, said the most difficult part of the project is behind the engineers. Building of the dam itself, he explained, will be comparatively simple work. He said the big job was the pioneering state of shaping the great canyon walls, building the diversion tunnels and spillway bores and getting the river out of its channel. Work on the project is more than a year ahead of schedule and it is expected to be completed by the end of 1937.

WHEN Senator Borah's committee on foreign relations opened the hearings on the St. Lawrence waterway treaty the expected opposition developed immediately and in full force. Witnesses for the railroads, port authorities, cities, and world shipping interests united in asserting that the development of the St. Lawrence river for navigation and power would disrupt the national transportation system, peril vital American industries, injure lake shipping, jeopardize the coal and ore business of the Great Lakes, and magnify the unemployment problem.

Among other attacks on the waterway development as proposed in the Hoover-Bennett treaty, were charges that completion of that seaway between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic, via Montreal, would jeopardize billions of dollars' worth of railway bonds held by the public and insurance companies. It was said further the plan would be likely to bring about government ownership of railroads.

REPRESENTATIVE SHANNON of Missouri resumed his investigation of government competition with private business with hearings in Chicago, and his committee was told that this competition is a "trust" that must be destroyed if private enterprise is to be encouraged and economic recovery furthered.

Representatives of business organizations in Illinois and the Panama Canal Zone as well as executives of steamship companies, told the committee of specific cases where the government competes to the detriment of private companies. On the basis of their testimony, the United States government today is interested in every type of business from mortician to the manufacture of gun powder.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association—representing practically every manufacturing industry in the state, ascribed to the government responsibility for a large part of the unemployment in the state and, through its counsel, David C. Clarke, charged before the committee that the government has been found to be competing, directly, in 27 different manufacturing operations "and numerous others."

Clarke declared that his association had been advised that the federal government, was not strictly concerned with the actual cost involved in its ventures. "Much less," he said, "is there strict regard for any reasonable profit to the government from industrial operations."

OKLAHOMA is twenty-five years old, and the silver anniversary of her admission to the Union was fittingly and excitingly celebrated on November 16 in Oklahoma City. All the people of the state and the governors of other states were invited to the birthday party, and many were present.

Gov. Murray

At the head of the pioneers participating was Gov. William H. Murray, who was president of the constitutional convention and speaker of Oklahoma's first house of representatives. He was one of the speakers, the others being Charles N. Haskell, the first governor, and Federal Judge Robert L. Williams, former governor and first Supreme court justice. Among twenty-six Oklahomans honored at a banquet and whose names were added to those in the state's Hall of Fame were Secretary of War Patrick Hurley, Will Rogers, cowboy humorist; Judge Haskell, once known as an oil company capitalist; Senator T. P. Gore, Senator Elmer Thomas and Former Senator Robert L. Owen.

The marriage of "Miss Indian Territory" to "Mr. Oklahoma" was sanctioned by the couple who participated in the first ceremony at the state capitol in Guthrie November 16, 1907. Following the ceremony carrier pigeons were released to bear news of the birthday to the four corners of the United States.

LIBERALS of Honduras, having lost out in the recent election, have turned to revolution and have been fighting some bloody battles with the government forces. The rebels were reported to have seized the towns of Trujillo, La Celba and La Esperanza, and then they moved on the city of San Pedro, which they captured. The fiercest of the fighting to date was in a counter attack there by the government troops. Many hundreds were said to have been killed.

In the election Gen. Tiburcio Carias Andino, the Nationalist-Conservative candidate, won over Angel Zúñiga Huete, the Liberal nominee. The inauguration has not yet taken place, and President Mejia Collindres remains as the head of the government. The President and the President-Elect are political allies.

SEVERAL weeks ago in this column mention was made of the quarrel between Peru and Colombia over possession of Leticia, and by a slip of the pen it was said the sector in dispute had once been ceded by Colombia to Peru, instead of by Peru to Colombia. An authoritative source now gives the information that the Leticia sector was in fact ceded by neither country to the other, but that it is in territory that has always been claimed by Colombia. In 1822 by the terms of the Salomon-Lozano treaty (between Peru and Colombia) it was definitely decided that Colombia's southern boundary line included Leticia within the limits of Colombia, and the sector was thereafter recognized by Peru as belonging to Colombia.

SOON after the December session of congress opens Senator Benigno Aquino of the Philippine legislature will be in Washington to take part in the efforts to win independence for the archipelago. He sailed from Manila some days ago bearing secret instructions to the Filipino delegation, presumably in the form of a mandate of the legislature opposing both the Hawes and Hare bills, and demanding a new independence grant without reservation by the United States of naval bases and coaling stations.

The mandate also would provide for tariff reciprocity between the United States and the Philippines and that there be no plebiscite on independence by the islanders in the interim of transition of government for a period not exceeding ten years. The limitation on importation of sugar to the United States free of duty would be fixed at not less than 1,500,000 long tons.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Josephine Davis

FOR many years the Davis family of Gettysburg, Pa., preserved and proudly displayed a rusty little iron stove of ancient make. It was over this stove that Josephine Davis did her heroic bit in the famous Battle of Gettysburg.

It was on the first day of this decisive battle of the Civil war, when the Union army lost its stronghold on Seminary ridge and was forced to evacuate the town to General Lee. It is history that during the entire engagement only one citizen of the town was killed, the young woman Jennie Wade, whose little cottage, now a museum, still shows the hole by which the fatal shot entered, but throughout the whole three days' fighting soldiers of both armies, the blue and the gray, streamed through the streets, marching bravely into the fray, retreating, weary, wounded, and disappointed.

Josephine, alone in the Davis home, watched these men go past. Although her own men, folks were fighting with the Southern troops, her heart was torn with sympathy for both sides alike. There was not much an eighteen-year-old girl could do for them. But that little bit Josephine did. With the guns rumbling scarcely a mile away, Josephine built a vigorous fire in the little iron stove, gathered, together all the flour in the house, about half a barrel, and set about baking it into crusty, delicious bread. When the warm loaves were out of the oven, she cut them into generous slices, spread them with molasses, set them out in pans, and placed them before the house for the hungry soldiers passing her door.

The news spread. Weary men, wounded, sometimes dying, stumbled up to her door for bread, and remained to be taken in, bandaged in worn sheets and towels, with such first aid as Josephine could devise. All day she worked, and part of the night, soothing, comforting. She converted into bandages every shred of cloth in the house. Some of the less seriously wounded, once they had been cared for, in turn aided her with the more serious cases.

When the guns were at last silent, and victory secured for the Union troops, seventeen dead were carried out of that little house and twice as many more wounded, well on their way to recovery, were taken away in ambulances to nearby hospitals.

"It was nothing," Josephine afterwards explained. "I always was a good baker!"

"Michigan Bridget"

WOMEN have been led to take up the masculine pursuit of warfare by various reasons, patriotic and sentimental. But it is probable that few of them took up arms, as did Bridget Devens, for the love of fighting. For Bridget, when the Civil was over, chose not to return to the quiet routine of home and children, but with her husband re-enlisted in the regular army, went with her regiment to Texas and was for a time stationed near the Rocky mountains!

Mrs. Devens is known in history as "Michigan Bridget" from the fact that it was with the First Michigan cavalry regiment, in which her husband was a private, that she first went into battle, and many and various are the tales of her valor. A robust Irish woman, she rode horseback day and night, on one particular march it is said wearing out several horses, keeping up with the best of her fellow soldiers during Sheridan's famous marches in the Shenandoah valley, and more than once she took the place left by a wounded man in the firing line.

During one ill-fated engagement the captain of Bridget's regiment was killed and a colonel badly wounded. It was Bridget who accompanied the wounded man to City Point hospital and tended him four days and nights without sleep, until he was well on his way to recovery. Then, indignant that her captain's body had been left on "rebel soil" after a single night's sleep and accompanied only by an orderly, she again took to horse to go after it. It was a hard ride of fifteen miles. Once at the battlefield, however, the tireless woman found the body, strapped it to her horse and continued on her way, riding seven miles to City Point, where she had the body embalmed and saw that it was properly shipped home.

But Bridget was not yet finished. On the field of battle she had seen a number of wounded soldiers left without care. Once more she returned. With prodigious effort she got eight of the wounded men into a wagon, and with her sorry load started once more for City Point. Half way there, she ran into a detachment of Southern scouts. They ordered her to halt, that they might investigate. Lashing her horses, Bridget kept on her way. The Confederate leader shouted after her, then ordered his men to fire. But for the timely intervention of a small body of Northern troops, this escapee might have put an end to Bridget's military career, and to her life as well. As it was, she got her wounded to the hospital, and was able to save the lives of a number of them.

A World's Record

MORE than three thousand births, without a single loss of either mother or child! That is the official Platt County record of Dr. W. B. Caldwell, in fifty years' family practice in Illinois.

No wonder mothers have such entire confidence in giving little ones Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin! If you have a baby, you have constant need of this wonderful preparation of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh herbs. A child who gets this gentle stimulant for the stomach, liver and bowels is always healthier. It keeps children's delicate systems from clogging. It will overcome the most stubborn condition of constipation. It builds them up, and is nothing like the strong cathartics that sap their strength and energy.

A coated tongue or bad breath is the signal for a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Children take it readily, for it is really delicious in flavor. Taste it! Take Syrup Pepsin yourself, when sluggish or bilious, or you are troubled with sick headaches and no appetite. Take some for several days when run-down, and see how it picks you up.

It is a prescription preparation which every drug store has ready; in big bottles, just ask anywhere for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Mexico an Old Country

Mexico is a land that was old when Spain first came there in search of gold in 1521; Mexico had marble palaces while wigwags were still in use in North America; painting was taught in Mexico ninety-nine years before the Pilgrim fathers landed at Plymouth Rock; Mexico had a Christian church in 1525, and the Mexico City of today was rising from Montezuma's ruins ninety-three years before the Dutch bought Manhattan Island. Mexico had books and music printed in presses brought from Spain just a century before the first English printing press was established at Cambridge.

Wired Cathedral

Modern science has entered somber old St. Paul's cathedral, London, and come to the rescue of speakers and congregations. A microphone has been placed in the pulpit just beneath the choir galleries but quite concealed from the sight of the congregation. It is hoped to extend the benefits of better hearing to the nave in time.

Quicker Relief For Headaches

Because of Quick Dissolving Property BAYER ASPIRIN Starts "Taking Hold" 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Due to important, scientific developments in the world-famous Bayer laboratories, almost INSTANT relief from headaches, neuralgia and rheumatic pains is being afforded millions.

Because of a unique process in making and tabletting, Genuine Bayer Aspirin is made to dissolve almost INSTANTLY in the stomach. Hence it starts to work almost instantly. And thus "takes hold" of the average pain or headache in as little as three or four minutes after taking. The fastest, safe relief, it is said, ever known for pain.

Remember, it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which provides this unique, quick-acting property. So be sure you get the Real Article—GENUINE BAYER Aspirin when you buy. Naturally you want the fastest, possible relief—and that's the way to get it.

To identify the genuine, see that any box or bottle of aspirin you buy is clearly marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." And that any tablet you take is stamped clearly with the name "Bayer" in the form of a cross. Remember—Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

EDITORIAL COLUMN

"Debt Problem is Not Our Baby"—Roosevelt

The Albuquerque Tribune which so vigorously supported Franklin D. Roosevelt during his recent campaign, has taken a change of sentiment. Read what it has to say regarding the attitude of President and President-elect about the foreign debt matter:

Two Debt Policies

President Hoover's war debt policy as set forth yesterday represents a high type of statesmanship. It is a call for action while the house is on fire.

President-elect Roosevelt's reply is too clever an attempt at party maneuvering unworthy of the man and of the hope which the electorate reposed in him. Its net effect would be to postpone action while the house is on fire.

Mr. Hoover can and will ask Congress for action. But Mr. Roosevelt can block action because he controls the session of Congress which meets in a few days.

While on casual reading the evasive Mr. Roosevelt's statement might seem to open the way to negotiations and to differ from the President only on what Roosevelt calls "of secondary importance" and method, in fact it would prevent immediate negotiation which is the chief issue.

Mr. Hoover proposes revival by Congress of a commission to hear the debtors' pleas and to consider those pleas in relation to the world economic and disarmament negotiations. Mr. Roosevelt, without committing himself to anything definite, falls back on the subterfuge that contact between debtor and creditor can best be maintained through existing diplomatic channels, which leaves the whole problem in its present state of disastrous deadlock.

The diplomatic intercourse suggested by Mr. Roosevelt has already taken place and has been exhausted, as he well knows. That method has been exhausted because congress in its resolution a year ago slammed the door on any negotiations or change of policy. That method has been exhausted because Mr. Hoover as a defeated candidate, cannot speak with authority for the American people and the debtor governments know he cannot. That method has been exhausted because Mr. Hoover has no control over congress which must pass on any agreement negotiated by him and congress is now controlled by the Democratic party of which Mr. Roosevelt is the leader and theirs is the responsibility. Neither Mr. Roosevelt nor his party can run away from it. Mr. Roosevelt tried to run away in his recent statement but failed.

Mr. Roosevelt's official pronouncement says in ambiguous words what he was reported to have said more in private to his Democratic party leaders: "The debt problem is not our baby." But it will remain on their doorstep just the same. Like the depression, of which it is a part, the debt problem will continue to exist to the detriment of the nation and of the world until they do something about it and that is why we doubt that Mr. Roosevelt, as the party leader, can continue to let the demagogues of his party dictate his policy. Mr. Roosevelt, as the party leader, will have to do something about the debt whether he likes it or not. Whether he will come to this position soon or late, we do not know; but that he will follow the Hoover policy eventually, we are confident.

How Fast Was He Going?
A young man in Orilla was killed by hitting a telegraph pole in the dark. First he hit a horse and killed it, throwing it 30 feet. This put the car into the ditch, where he ran 100 feet, scraping off both sides of the car. Then he hit the pole and broke it, and continued for 22 feet, when the car turned over. Query: How fast was he going when he hit the horse?—Salt (Ontario) Daily Star.

Capitan P. T. A. Program
The Parent-Teachers' Association of Capitan is sponsoring a musical program for the benefit of school activities and everyone is cordially invited to attend this program. The popular young priest of Carrizozo who was formerly a member of a large, well-known choir, will be the soloist on this program, accompanied by Mrs. Snow.
The Fort Stanton String Ensemble, under the direction of the well-known artist, Pedro Cabalin, will also appear on this program. The prices are 10 and 25c.
It is believed that this will be one of the best programs that we've had in Capitan, and we hope that you will take advantage of the opportunity.
Those of you who have heard Father Brady sing, will do us a favor by telling your friends of this occasion.
The program will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday, Dec. 8.

Lots 1, 2, S1NE1, SE1 Sec. 5, Twp. 2
S., R. 19 E., N. M. P. M., and as ground for his contest he alleges that entryman has totally abandoned said entry for more than two years, that he did establish residence on said land and built a shack on it, but sold it and it was moved off in the spring of 1930 and he left about May 1, 1930 and has not returned and homestead is abandoned from May 1st, 1930 until the present time. There is a small tank on the land which was built sometime before May 1, 1930. There are no other improvements.
You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken as confessed, and your said entry will be canceled without further right to be heard, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically responding to these allegations of contest, together with due proof that you have served a copy

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"Why should he? He came off second best, didn't he? He was drunk at the time and my father was intoxicated, otherwise there would have been two funerals. Father was heart-broken when he sobered up, and sent his lawyer to your Uncle Bill to apologize, so your Uncle Bill accepted the apology and sent back one of his own. When I was a very small boy your uncle sold out his ranch to old man Hobart, whose son, Kenneth, is now my general manager. Does Uncle Bill treat you with civility and decency?"

"Of course he does. He's adorable. He's a love."

"Very well, then, I'll not kill him. You must agree, though, that I did you a real service in bumping off old Uncle Tom."

"Uncle Bill says you did," Roberta admitted. "But then he's biased."

"My father always declared that Uncle Bill was all wool and a yard wide. . . . Dinner's ready, thank God. That stout saddle-colored female who appeared in the door just now says we'll better come and get it or she'll throw it out."

"What an extremely old-fashioned young man you are, Don Jaime."

"Please do not call me Don Jaime. The don is really a title of respect, and is used by one's employees or social inferiors rather like having a pullman porter address you as 'Judge' or 'Colonel.' You may call me Mr. Higgins. Mr. Higgins, James, Jimmy or Jaime."

"Very well, Mr. Higgins," the girl murmured in a very small voice. Then: "Hold everything, mine host. I must run to my room for a handkerchief. I forgot to fetch one."

Don Jaime gazed after her. "There was no doubt but that he approved of her mightily. When his gaze shifted it met Mrs. Ganby's."

"How does she impress you?" she queried.

"Miss Antrim is physically beautiful and mentally alert. Yes, she's as smart a young woman as you and I will ever meet. Well raised, well spoiled, haughty, aware of her power over men and just loves to use it. Bound at heart, though, I think."

"Will she be here long, Don Jaime?"

"I do not know. In all probability she will not be here long enough to please me. In fact if I hadn't run that Bill Dingle scawling down the road she wouldn't be here now. She's a new note in life to me, but I'm not going to let her know she is."

CHAPTER VII

Robbie, his pale face glowing from his recent ablutions, arrived with Roberta and the four went in to dinner. The table had been set in the gallery, Don Jaime explaining that during the summer they always ate outside.

Roberta appraised the table with the eye of an expert. It was covered with a white linen cloth; short-stemmed red roses peeped from a jade-green bowl in the center; the service was of sterling silver and very old and beautiful. On closer inspection she saw that it carried a coat of arms.

"My great great grandmother's silver," Don Jaime explained. "Fellow in New York once heard I had it and sent his secretary down to buy it. He offered me an unbelievably high price for the service and didn't seem to believe me when I told him it was not for sale. He just kept tilting 'he ante and couldn't seem to see he was annoying me. Some people are like that. They think money is the beginning and the end of everything."

"Perhaps you would, also, Mr. Higgins, if you had ever been poor," Roberta suggested.

"I've paid 12 per cent for rented money," he retorted. "I've had the ranch mortgaged in bad years and banks carried my father half his lifetime. Only those who are poor in spirit, who lack courage, can be really poor."

"Do you not find life a little lonely here?"

"A busy man is seldom lonely. My father spent his life in bondage to the irrigation system you probably observed en route here, but after his death I completed it and transformed a semiarid valley into alfalfa and cotton fields. I got rid of the scrubby long-horned cattle that were built for speed and substituted Herefords, which are built for beef. All this has been a considerable task and fell to my hands when I was eighteen. That was ten years ago."

"After I was demobilized in the spring of 1919 I really started to put this ranch on a paying basis. I cleaned up on cotton in 1919 and '20. And cattle prices were unbelievably high. I had a feeling, however, that such a wartime prosperity wouldn't last, so I sold all my cattle in the fall of '20, and in 1921 I didn't plant any cotton. Well, the market smashed on both—and lucky Jim didn't have any!"

"Instead I raised alfalfa and stuck it; then I bought cattle for a song when the banks and the governmental loan agencies foreclosed. Cheap cattle and cheap feed, you know. I had my moments of panic; the road was rough and rocky in spots, although that, of course, made it all the more interesting, the victory all the more delightful. I think that when one has had to fight for his land and his people he learns to love both, no matter how unlovely or uninteresting they may appear to those whose lives have been spent in shelter and without effort."

"My life has been spent that way, I must admit," Roberta confessed. "And I like it," she added.

"Why not? You've never tried any other life, have you?"

Roberta noticed that her host was much more at his ease, now that their conversation had veered into new channels. It occurred to the girl too that Don Jaime Miguel Higgins had lived more in five minutes of his colorful life than had the last three generations of Hacketts. And the Hacketts were a long-lived race.

"What gainful occupation, if any, does Mr. Latham practice now?" Don Jaime asked Roberta.

"He plays the stock market."

"With success, I hope."

"He has always been very successful until recently, when he lost practically everything he had—or at least he would have lost it without the aid of some people who love him. We anticipate a reverse in the market which will pull him out, if not with a profit at least without terrific loss."

"My father loved your Uncle Bill, even if he did shoot him in the heel and disagree with him politically. I would be glad to give my father's friend a leg up. You live with your Uncle Bill, I take it."

"I've been his ward and a member of his household since my tenth birthday. I have never known a wish he hasn't hastened to gratify, at whatever cost. So, you see, now that he's old and unable to suffer financial reverses, it is my duty to take care of him, and for that reason my Uncle Tom's estate comes to me somewhat in the nature of a godsend."

"One more reason why I should be dealt with charitably in the matter of your deceased avuncular relative," the young man suggested humorously. "Well, we'll pull you out all right on the sheep."

"I understand the estate is boarding on you, Mr. Higgins."

Don Jaime shrugged. "Es nada," he replied. "That is, the grants they consume doesn't amount to that," and he snapped his fingers. "The knowledge that I am serving a distressed lady is a rich reward."

Two maids removed the empty soup plates and set the roast down in front of Don Jaime. "A wild turkey," he informed Roberta. Then he sharpened his carving knife on the steel and attacked the bird, dissecting it in a very neat and scientific manner.

"Can you cook, Miss Antrim?"

"Heavens, no!"

"I had heard it was a lost art with the rising generation. I'm a rattling good cook, myself, if I do say so. Most Latin males are, you know. I enjoy cooking fish and game."

"How about baking?"

"Great sport. I have three vaqueros who are paid five dollars a month extra to box with me."

"That, I suppose," said Roberta dryly, "appeals to your Irish blood. Are you of a religious turn of mind?"

"Well, I built a church for my pueblo and I support a padre for my people. I play the organ in my church and I've rehearsed the choir until it's really rather good. You must come to mass with me tomorrow and listen to it."

"Why were you armed today? Do you always carry that arsenal?"

"No," he replied soberly. "I do not. But of late I have felt that discretion might be the better part of valor. You see, I have been unfortunate enough to make some new enemies recently. The last time I went abroad unarmed I was carried home on a stretcher."

"I fear," the girl suggested, "that the Antrim sheep are proving to be a source of embarrassment to you."

"Oh, not at all! My enemies never embarrass me, I assure you." He said it so simply, so earnestly, so absolutely without brag or bounce, that Roberta laughed aloud.

"You are a new note in life," she declared. "Mrs. Ganby, do you not find Don Jaime a source of profound amusement?"

"Don Jaime, I must admit, is—different," Mrs. Ganby replied guardedly.

"I'm sure of it, Mrs. Ganby. He isn't a bit religious, but he is very charitable—so charitable, in fact, that I am certain he is obliging me, in the matter of those sheep, at considerable loss and nuisance and inconvenience to himself."

"Not at all," her host protested. "I expect to collect from the Antrim estate a reasonable fee for my services, to reimburse me for my outlay or inconvenience."

Roberta had a feeling of helplessness in this man's presence, for he was a new experience with her. She had never met a man who remotely resembled Jim—so ruthless, forceful and dominating.

Not knowing what to say, she was silent and attacked her meal. When presently, her glance met Don Jaime's again he was smiling at her, whereupon she itched with a desire to pull his undoubtedly Celtic nose. "He has all the audacity and assurance of the Irish and all of the ego of the Latin," she thought. "What an indolent, semi-insolent glance he has! And he isn't bad-looking at all. Still he isn't bad-looking. He's just masculine and knows it. All of his life he has been accustomed to being high and low justice on this ranch; because these people of his kowtow to him he thinks he can get away with murder. He's just a Mexican feudal baron who has established his feudal sway just far enough north of the border to make good with it."

"Is it possible for one to send a telegram from your ranch, Mr. Higgins?" she asked.

"Certainly. After dinner you can telephone your message to the office at Los Algodones and charge it to my account."

"I suppose I should go to Los Algodones in a day or two to consult with my attorney."

"Well, the longer you delay your visit, Miss Antrim, the more agreeable it will be to Prudencio Alviso. Prudy's almost a full-blooded Spaniard. About one thirty-second Aztec or Yagui, but that's enough to make him want to take life easy. Be kind, your visit on a business mission will cause him to beat himself."

Roberta laughed again—softly, suddenly, for again she had a swift vision of Glenn Hackett and compared the activities of his law office with the somnolent status of Don Prudencio's legal mill.

"I feel like Alice in Wonderland," she declared suddenly.

"Speaking of bees and birds and scawling-wax, and cabbages and kings," said Don Jaime, "I am sincerely delighted to have sold Prudy to you. He's so slow, so deliberate; I know he'll just lengthen out your visit to a rich reward."

She watched a humming bird flitting from flower to flower, saw a quail come forth and bear away a crust tossed him by Don Jaime. Then, as the shadows lengthened, the mocking birds, replete with food and happy, perched in a lime tree and paid for their meal in melody. Roberta had never heard a Spanish mocker before and was delighted with the beauty and variety of their extensive repertoire.

"You are fond of music?" Don Jaime queried.

Roberta nodded and he tossed a quick order in Spanish to one of his dusky maids.

From behind the climbing passion vines on the gallery across the patio a guitar was strummed; Roberta heard the mellow notes of a harp as unseen fingers ran the scale. Then a girl's voice—without much volume, but wondrously sweet and sympathetic—commenced to sing "La Golondrina."

"When I am unhappy," Don Jaime explained, "they sing that sad song to me and make me unhappy."

"Why don't you have them sing something joyful?"

"My dear Miss Antrim, no Higgins ever wants to be made happy when he's unhappy. It's like enjoying poor health. We must feed our racial melancholy."

"You incorrigible Celt! Are these professional entertainers brought out from Los Algodones?"

"No, they're part of the ranch assets. That harp has been in our family since the first Higgins emigrated to Madrid. Hello, huh, you getting sleepy? Tired after your long ride today, eh?"

Robbie had left his chair and climbed up into Don Jaime's lap; his thin little arm was around the broad, powerful neck, his head cuddled under the big square chin. Don Jaime held him close with his left arm, and Roberta noticed that with his right hand he gently massaged the atrophied muscles of the boy's left leg.

The purple shadows crept over the patio, the music sobbed and mourned behind the passion vines.

Presently Don Jaime shook Robbie gently. "Come, son," he said softly. "Say your prayers—in Spanish, as I have taught you. Nueatro padre—"

The sleepy voice spoke haltingly the unfamiliar words, the man prompting from time to time. When the prayer was finished he rose and, with the boy in his arms, stooped over Mrs. Ganby that she might kiss her son good night. Then he passed around the table to Roberta's chair. "Innocence and helplessness," Roberta heard him murmur. "Who could not love it!"

He stooped over her and lowered the boy until the childish lips brushed her cheek; then he bore the lad off to bed.

The two women exchanged glances, the mother's eyes were moist. "That is the Latin in him, Miss Antrim. He's not ashamed to demonstrate his affection."

Roberta did not answer. She was thinking of a remark that Crooked Bill had once made in her presence. "When children and dogs love a man a woman is usually safe with him."

She wondered now if Glenn Hackett loved children and dogs and decided presently that he would love his own children, if and when he had them, but that he would not be interested in dogs or human beings beneath him in the social scale.

"He is a strange man, Mrs. Ganby," she said at last. "I have never met his kind before. I do not know what to make of him—whether to like him or dislike him, to fear him or to trust him. He killed my uncle and then, masquerading under the name of Jim Higgins he induced me to accept the hospitality of Jaime Higgins. Where I come from one doesn't do that sort of thing, you know. How long have you known him, Mrs. Ganby?"

"Since three days after he killed your uncle. I am a trained nurse and I came down here to tend his wounds, although he would have recovered without my aid, for he is as healthy as a horse. Later he asked me to be his housekeeper, but since he does not appear to regard me as a servant, I imagine I am a sort of paid hostess. I think he had a hope that you might visit the ranch some day, and of course you would never have been invited unless he had a duenna here. He is very pugnacious in matters of social propriety."

"And Robbie?"

"When he discovered I had a little crippled son he sent his general manager to El Paso to bring the boy here. He knew I'd want him with me, of course."

"Just a Mexican Feudal Baron."

the Rancho Valle Verde until you get to like the country. Just now you think my country's bare and lonely and desolate, but—it will grow on you. To one unaccustomed to wide horizons there is born, in Texas, a feeling that one is lost. But presently one discovers that out of all this loneliness and vastness a surprising number of good-natured and contented people come; they're friendly and they do not talk too much, although they do talk to the point. I'll miss my guess a mile if you find yourself without a serious interest in Texas, Mees—I mean Miss—Antrem—Antrim."

"He's secretly excited and disturbed," Roberta thought. "Pronouncing 'I' as 'e.' I wish dinner were over."

Provisionally, it was not a long course dinner, such as Roberta had expected would be served and which she had looked forward to with dread. A soup, a salad, a roast, two vegetables, a light dessert and black coffee. That was all.

"He runs his household like a general, at any rate," the girl reflected.

BEGINNING THE STORY, FOR NEW READERS

Roberta Antrim, beautiful Eastern society girl, who lives with her uncle, William B. Latham, known as "Crooked Bill" because of his amusing slyness, receives a telegram from Jaime Miguel Higgins, owner of the Rancho Valle Verde, in Texas, informing her that her Uncle Tom Antrim has died a violent death. At the advice of Glenn Hackett, who is in love with her, Roberta plans to go to Texas to protect her interests, since she is her uncle's sole heir to thousands of sheep which Antrim had grazed on land controlled by Don Jaime. Don Jaime, unmarried, half Spanish and half Irish, is attracted to Roberta's picture in a magazine. Antrim is warned to take his sheep off Don Jaime's ranch at once. Antrim ambushes Don Jaime. The young ranch owner is wounded and Tom Antrim killed. On his body are found instructions to notify Miss Roberta Antrim in the event of his death. Another Higgins' telegram tells Roberta her uncle was killed by Jim Higgins (Don Jaime's anglicized name). Latham tells her his fortune is in danger, and she decides to go to Texas to get Antrim's estate, to save it. "Crooked Bill" conceals a scheme he hopes will forward Hackett's courtship. Don Jaime, actuated chiefly by his romantic interest in the pictured Roberta, allows the Antrim sheep to graze on his ranch. At the station of Valle Verde Roberta meets Dingle, Tom Antrim's foreman, who points out Don Jaime as her uncle's slayer, then sees Roberta, watching "Jim Higgins," sees him shoot, she thinks, at Dingle. She berates him soundly, and Jimmy hurries off ostensibly to tell Don Jaime of her arrival. The girl adds Higgins and Higgins were to be one and the same. At Don Jaime's invitation she stays at his ranch.

"I understand, Innocence and helplessness. Of course his heart went out to Robbie."

"Children understand, Miss Antrim. I think Don Jaime is a man who likes a fight—any kind of a fight. He is tremendously interested in that atrophied leg of Robbie's. Lately he has started massaging it, stretching it, studying it. He has been sending for medical treatment on infantile paralysis and talks of sending Robbie East to be treated at the Rockefeller Institute."

Further confidences were interrupted by the return of the host. He called something in Spanish to the singer and she came and handed him her guitar, received the thanks of her audience and departed covered with embarrassment.

"For a Moment I Had Forgotten I Had Killed Your Uncle Tom!" He Murmured.

"Now, then," quoth Don Jaime, "we'll have a little old Anglo-Saxon minstrelsy from the boss himself." He smote the strings with a firm, assured hand and in a perfectly thunderous basso began. "The Yellow Rose of Texas." To his great delight Roberta joined in the song. He cocked one lazy eye at her inquiringly; at a half-rest in the music he demanded:

"How come?"

"Uncle Bill," she replied, and he nodded comprehension. Yes, of course Uncle Bill would know that one. But Don Jaime played now while Roberta sang.

The song ended and Don Jaime looked up, a fleeting gleam of sadness, of resignation in the lazy eyes. "For a moment I had forgotten I had killed your Uncle Tom!" he murmured.

"Oh, please, Mr. Higgins—"

"Oh, please, Jaime," he corrected. "I had forgotten, too, Jaime."

"Now that you have made up your mind not to dislike me or the task of trying to like me, I have a confession to make."

"I'll try to bear up under it."

"A few days after I shot it out with your uncle, his man, Bill Dingle and five others came over here with the intention of doing me great bodily harm—lynching me to one of the cross-poles in that heavy trellis in the grape arbor yonder, as a matter of fact. I captured Dingle and his idiots and confined them in my private battle here for thirty days. Before turning them loose I had my foreman flog them all."

"Oh, Jaime!"

"That's the sort of bad egg I am, senorita. That's why I was wearing two guns today. By the way, can you sing Gounod's 'Ave Maria'?"

"Why, yes!" she answered a little breathlessly.

"Oh, grand, wonderful! Let's go inside and practice it with a piano accompaniment. I want you to sing it at mass tomorrow for my people. You will, of course. I know you will. Poor devils. They'll love it so! But first send your telegrams. The office in Los Algodones will soon be closing."

Call to Domestic Duty

It seems that the wife of a well-known member of the Central Manufacturing District club, whom we shall name fictitiously for obvious reasons, has experienced considerable difficulty in persuading her spouse to assume a share in the family responsibilities. Particularly would she appreciate a helping hand in the morning when there are breakfast to get, children to dress, and a host of other cares to discharge in a minimum of time.

Other means failing, she finally resorted to the formally ironic and, wakening him one morning, thrust before his astonished eyes the following neatly done card:

Mrs. Eston Westwood requests the esteemed company of Mr. Eston Westwood at the robing of their children, Edward, Elson, and Edsel, this morning at seven-fifteen in the main and only bathroom of the Westwood domicile. (Overflow will gather in the south hall)
