THE DREAMER

Yes, he was a dreamer and as we find many of his type in the mountains, this personage attracted our attention.

In conversation with him, but little could be learned from his life prior to his selecting this part of the southwest for his future dwelling place.

From his language and manner, he had seen far better days, but one thing we learned and that was that he had lived in some eastern city in days gone by.

Beasts which roam the forests in the night never bother me and I have no enemies among men of whom I know.

The warm springlike weather of the present week comes with a pleasant reception to our farmers and stockmen. Incoming ranchmen from the northern districts tell about the new, tender blades of grass that is already springing up in the more protected places and before long, sweet spring will be with us. Now is the time for the spring poets to emerge and their lines go to the wastebasket.

The Last Obstacle

Wheels of the Oldsmobile

Something radically new in automobile wheels is found in the 1933 Oldsmobile sixes and straight eights. This wheel, the result of careful test and study, skillfully combines the two modern essentials pertaining to the appearance of today's car—utility and beauty.

Although lighter in weight, the new wheels are unusually strong, safe and durable, due to the fact that they are made of high grade, extra thick steel.

In appearance, they look not unlike wood wheels of new and improved styling. The metallic lacquer finish is unique and beautiful, giving a very pleasing effect when the car is in motion.

Washing and cleaning the outside of the new Oldsmobile is a simple matter, much easier than with a wire or even a good wood wheel, owing to the absence of narrow crevices between the spokes.

So far as the inner side of the wheel is concerned, that is practically self-cleaning. One of the strongest physical forces takes care of that—centrifugal force.

The inner side of the wheel is dished—concave in its general shape. As the car speeds over the road, any dirt or mud that might be gathered up is automatically thrown out. This tendency of the wheel to free itself from such accumulations is important, as it prevents unbalanced weight from interfering with smooth wheel performance.

According to John G. Wood, chief engineer of Oldsmobile, the wheels are stronger than either wood or wire of ordinary construction and are not affected by wet or dry weather or by climatic peculiarities.

They are far better mechanically than wood or iron types. They have improved lateral and radial strength, at the same time being lighter in weight.

The wheels pass through 18 progressive mechanical operations and 5 heat treatments before reaching completion.

Mrs. Nellie Rely came in from the Harris ranch Wednesday and is spending the remainder of the week with her mother, Mrs. Sarah C. Gray, sister, Mrs. Beulah Goksy, daughters, Meedames Allen and Braum. This is Mrs. Rely's first visit from the ranch since Christmas.

Attorney and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton were week-end visitors from El Paso and registered at the Carrizozo Eating House.

The A.R.A. Rail Detector

Our interest became aroused one day last week, when on paying a visit to the local S. P. station, we saw a moving object closely resembling an ambulance in one respect, but differing in another, which we afterwards found to be the observatory, the sides of which were made of glass to afford an ample amount of light to the operators.

On making inquiries, we found Roadmaster J. B. Dinwiddie, who cheerfully answered all questions and our curiosity was quieted. The contrivance is called the A. R. A. Rail Detector, the purpose of which is to locate defective rails along the route, and have the same replaced immediately, where found.

'The car moves very slowly,' said Jim. From the car to the rail, is an electric connection and a stream of juice is kept constantly poured into the rail as the car moves on. The defective part is in the center of the rail and thus escapes the view of the naked eye, but the machine with the stream of electricity locates the flaw. The flaw, said the roadmaster, works like a cankerous growth does on a living thing and gradually eats its way to such an extent, that it weakens the rail and causes accidents which have been in the past, destructive to human life.

If a defective rail is located, it is revealed by a tape which snaps as the defect is located. Then the operators stop the car and make a second test by hand which is a final demonstration. Then and there, a new rail is sent for at the nearest station and the replacing done in as the saying goes, "in less time that it takes to tell it."

The purpose of this article is to show how far the railroads are going in order to insure the safety of the traveling public, so will it be borne in mind, when starting on a trip, that the rails over which you are riding have been inspected for your safety.

As we understand it all of the two million dollars in road debentures voted by the legislature—an administration bill—isn't to be used for the construction of roads, but to pay interest on indebtedness already incurred. Let's see, didn't they campaign on Seligman's economy? - Tucumcari News.

Miss Louise Sweet is a week-end visitor with relatives in El Paso.

The Misses Zenta DuBois and Keitha Melton were here from Corona last Saturday to attend the basketball game.

FORT STANTON NEWS

A few evenings ago, the loud report of an exploding bomb was heard between the Temple of the Seamen's, Social Club and the Community House, followed by a violent cry of the club's mistress signal. When the members assembled in the temple rushed out, they beheld the prostrate form of a brother stretched out on the ground and a masked assassin running away from the scene.

Here it was found that the victim of the assassination had escaped unhurt; and when the prisoner explained that the bomb was aimed at a person whom he thought to be the Fort Stanton correspondent for the Carrizozo Outlook, but who unfortunately escaped, the brethren apologetically ordered his release and wished him better luck next time.

In the Darkness of Hell

Minus her top masts, knocked off by a huge stalagmite, with a big dent in the smokestack, and her decks strewn with the wreckage, the "Suomi" continued her dizzy speed down the underground river. By and by the madly rushing water slackened its velocity; the roar of the rapids gradually diminished and the ship drifted gently out on the mirror-like surface of lake Erie.

Mineral formations, which in grandeur resembled temples of the gods, arose in silent splendor from the crystal clear water, reflecting the rays of the searchlights in a spectre of a million gorgeous colors. Glistening, greenish flying fish skimmed the surface of the lake. Snow-white bats, fluttering quickly in a fantastic dance around the lights, animated the landscape with weird shadows.

Suddenly a horrible hissing noise cut through the air from far behind them, followed by the sound of splashing water. Turning the lights in that direction they saw to their terror a ghastly looking monster about 100 feet long, swimming swiftly towards them; its huge tail whipping the water into cascades of foam in raging fury.

The men stood like nailed to the deck in terror, only Capt. Hermonson's "horse" voice from the bridge sent them hurriedly to follow his orders. "Hard 'tarboard—Full 'peed ahead!" Through the speaking tube he ordered the engineer on watch to have the boilers fired to the bursting point. Then to the crew working on fore-deck he hollered: "Avast ye lubbers, clear the decks for action and man the 4-inch guns!" His orders ended up with a stream of juicy oaths in 15 different languages, together with an equally

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The people of Carrizozo are beginning to realize that we have an honest - to - goodness basketball team this season. We have great hopes of winning the tournament to be held at Corona March 3 and 4th.

The debate last Friday night was both interesting and instructive. The Judges, Mrs. Spencer, Mr. A. L. Burke and Mr. Barber gave decisions in favor of the Negative.

Teachers and students enjoyed the half holiday Wednesday. We wish that we had many a George Washington.

An address of exceptional interest was given last week by Mr. A. L. Burke, Editor of The Carrizozo Outlook. Mr. Burke spoke on the High Lights in the Life of Lincoln. The address had intense dramatic interest, and brought laughter and tears. The students are always delighted, when Mr. Burke gives one of his inspirational addresses.

The Assembly program was given Thursday of this week instead of Wednesday, due to the half holiday. The program sponsored by the English department consisted of 5-minute talks by Margaret Shafer, Maudie Warden, Ardeane McCammon and Mrs. Sullivan. Mary Pickett Warden delighted us with a musical selection.

On March 18 a group of students from the Home Economics Club will go to Corona to attend the District Home Ec. meeting.

Lincoln County War Survivor Dies

Florencio Chavez, 75, one of the three surviving natives who fought in the Lincoln County War, died at his home in Lincoln Tuesday. The other survivors are Higinio Salazar of Lincoln and Francisco Gutierrez of Roswell.

Woman's Club Notes

Regular meeting of the Carrizozo Woman's Club was held at the home of Mrs. Nellie Brannum on Feb 17, with Mrs. Glassmire presiding. "O Fair New Mexico" was sung by the club; Mrs. Brannum gave report on legislation; Mrs. Luckey, chairman of membership committee, reported two new members.

An appropriate and beautiful memorial service for Mrs. Foreman was prepared by Mrs. Glassmire as follows: Vocal duet, "In the Garden," Mmes. Lemon and Clouse. Then representing the various organizations of the town of which she was an active member, the following members deposited white carnations in a vase of evergreen, repeating a fitting verse: Mmes. Lemon, Sunday School and Church; Kelley and Snow, respective Missionary Society; Young, Woman's Club; Lawson, Prayer; Resolutions of sympathy drafted and read by committee, Miss Melas, Mmes. Blaney and Young.

The program prepared by Mrs. F. L. Elliott, chairman of Americanization, was as follows: Paper on American Home, Miss Melas; Piano solo, Mrs. Burns; Vocal solo, Mrs. Beck. At close of meeting refreshments were served by the hostess and her committee.

Economy in Government Gets a Boost—Senate Ousts Sergeant at Arms Barry for Trauding It—Roosevelt Invites Governors to Parley.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ECONOMY was given a real boost by the senate when it passed the treasury-post office bill, for it inserted into the measure provisions giving the incoming President almost dictatorial power in reorganizing the structure of the federal government, coordinating, consolidating or reducing the number of agencies and eliminating overlapping and duplication of duties, "in order to further reduce expenditures and increase efficiency in government." The measure withholds authority to abolish or transfer an executive department in its entirety, though Senator Norris urged that this privilege also be given the Chief Executive. His proposal was rejected because senators feared it might lead to the combining of the army and navy into one department of national defense, as has often been suggested. The bill as approved by the senate grants the new President much greater latitude than was asked by President Hoover for the same purpose. The executive orders will not become effective until sixty days after being submitted to congress unless congress itself provides by law for an earlier effective date.

Besides this grant of power to reorganize the federal establishment the senate moved toward further economies by adopting an amendment offered by Senator Sam G. Bratton of New Mexico, one of the leading Democrats in the matter of savings. It requires all department heads to cut their expenditures for 1934 by 5 per cent, though this must be done without cutting wages—this being insisted upon by Senator Costigan of Colorado. Mr. Bratton estimated that his plan would result in the saving of about $140,000,000 in the cost of operating the government during the next fiscal year. Other economy measures attached to the bill, it was said, would realize some 20 millions of additional savings. One of these includes the enlisted personnel of the army, navy and marine corps in the present 3 1/2 per cent salary cut affecting all other federal employees.

In the house all kinds of attempts to economize were beaten during consideration of supply bills. The representatives even declined, by an overwhelming vote, to reduce their own salaries to $7,500 or $5,000, opponents of the proposal arguing that they could not afford the cut and that lowering the pay would make the house a "rich man's club" and make it impossible for a poor man to enter congress. The proponents of the reduction were denounced as demagogues.

WITH grave formality the senate and house met together in the house chamber and watched their official tellers extract from a mahogany chest the reports of state electors on last fall's election. The reading clerk loudly announced the state totals, and when these had been set down on big tally sheets and added up, the congress was solemnly informed that Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner had been elected President and Vice President of the United States by a vote of 472 against 59 for Hoover and Curtis.

SENATORS, despite their rules, can find ways to say some mighty mean things about one another; but an outsider mustn't cast aspersions on their integrity. David S. Barry, who has been sergeant at arms of the senate for 14 years, has found this out and has lost his job. The seventy-three-year-old official wrote an article for Al Smith's New Outlook, the opening paragraph of which was: "Contrary, perhaps, to the popular belief, there are not many crooks in congress—that is, out and out grafters, or those who are willing to be such; there are not many senators or representatives who sell their votes for money, and it is pretty well known who those few are; but there are many demagogues of the kind that will vote for legislation solely because they think that it will help their political and social fortunes."

Indignant senators were swift to call Barry to account. Sitting as a trial court, they heard him admit he was unable to prove that there were bribe takers and grafters in congress; and they refused to consider his plea that Senator Glass had said about as much concerning the fight against the McFadden banking bill, and that in reality his article was meant to defend the reputation of congress despite its inept wording. By a vote of 54 to 17 the senate deprived Barry of his post on the ground that he had traduced that body and could not prove his charge.

Sen. Bratton

In the words of Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania, the senate "made a holy show of itself." Barry did not lack defenders, the warmest of these being Senator Otis Glenn of Illinois and Senator M. M. Logan of Kentucky. Mr. Glenn, being a lame duck, was not afraid to say what he thought, and he had a lot of hot thoughts on the matter. He pointed out that what Barry had written was but one small voice in a chorus of criticism of the senate, and continued: "I cannot distinguish very materially between attacking a body of this kind, as has been done in the present instance, and the privilege which is exercised nearly every day in committee rooms of the senate of browbeating a witness, accusing him, attacking him as he sits there, called in response to a summons."

"I do not distinguish between the attacks made upon this body and the attacks made in this body day after day by distinguished members of this body, attacking, abusing, condemning, blackening people's names and reputations, knowing that the next morning upon the front pages of the responsible newspapers of this country those charges, unsubstantiated, will be broadcast to the world."

The debate was lively and rather vituperative, and was immensely enjoyed by the occupants of the galleries. One of these was heard to quote: "The lady doth protest too much, methinks."

WHILE the President-Elect was cruising about the Caribbean trying to catch fish the amateur cabinet builders kept right on working. Late gossip was that William H. Woodin of New York would be secretary of commerce; Henry L. Stevens of North Carolina, former commander of the American Legion, secretary of war, and Archibald McNeill of Connecticut or O. Max Gardner of North Carolina secretary of the navy. Jesse I. Straus, New York merchant, also was put in the running for the commerce portfolio. More definite than these rumors was the report that Jesse H. Jones, eminent Democrat and business man of Houston, Texas, would be made head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He would succeed Atlee Pomerene, whose appointment as chairman by President Hoover was blocked, with all other nominations, in the senate. Mr. Roosevelt will rely greatly on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its vast credit in carrying out his plans in the "new deal" and would receive strong and able support from Mr. Jones as its chairman.

PLENTY of expert advice on ways of pulling the nation out of the slough of despond is to be offered soon. First the senate finance committee invited more than half a hundred of the nation's leading men in all lines to present their views on the causes of the economic depression and the needed legislative remedies, and those views presumably are now being formulated. Then President-Elect Roosevelt sent to the governors of the 48 states invitations to meet him in the White House on March 6 to discuss means of solving national problems in which the governments of the states and the nation have a common vital interest.

In his letter Mr. Roosevelt said: "It is my thought that we should discuss for our mutual benefit certain subjects, such as: (a) Conflicting taxation by federal and state governments; (b) Federal aid for unemployment relief; (c) Mortgage foreclosures, especially on farm lands, and (d) Better land use by afforestation, elimination of marginal agricultural land, flood prevention, etc." (e) Reorganization and consolidation of local government to decrease tax costs."

It is believed all or nearly all of the governors will accept Mr. Roosevelt's invitation gladly. All but ten of them are Democrats and might be expected to be in Washington for the inaugural ceremonies.

WITH considerable Democratic support, the government's program for aid to the unemployed was greatly broadened. It provides, among other things, for an additional $300,000,000 direct relief loans to states, and in Washington there was a belief that it had a good chance of passage during the present session. The bill as drafted also would liberalize the law under which the R. F. C. makes loans for self-liquidating construction projects; and it makes provision for loans to private corporations for the development of community farming, and ocean air transportation if such projects are self-liquidating.

Jesse H. Jones

THAT Barry over the activities of William C. Bullitt, who was reported in Europe as being a secret representative of Mr. Roosevelt sent over to deal with the governments of nations that owe war debts to the United States, probably has blown over for good. Bullitt, who was a State department representative under Woodrow Wilson, also was thought by some French officials to be an emissary of Col. Edward M. House. He visited London, Paris and other capitals and conferred with various high personages, and our State department called on Ambassador Edge for information. The ambassador replied that Bullitt was acting on his own responsibility as a writer interested in foreign affairs and was representing no one in the United States.

W. C. Bullitt

Mr. Edge, it is understood, reported that this is only one of many similar incidents. Ever since Mr. Roosevelt's nomination, the embassy has had reports of a long succession of such "emissaries."

VARIOUS plans for the regeneration of the Republican party have been discussed, and one already has been started. This is the organization of the National Republican league, with Vice President Charles Curtis at its head and headquarters in Washington. Three vice chairmen have been named—Senators Felix Hebert of Rhode Island and Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware and former Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut. The make-up of the league appears to be strictly regular Republican.

The new organization announced by John A. Campbell of White Plains, N. Y., who will be its director, is designed to carry on a vigorous campaign for a comeback not only in the 1936 Presidential election but in next year's congressional races also. It is professedly neither for nor against the interests of any one candidate. The senate Republican organization seems determined to continue in good standing in the party caucus the insurgents who supported Roosevelt last fall. Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, the probable new Republican leader of the senate, declared that a proposal to read out of the party Senators George W. Norris of Nebraska, Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, Hiram Johnson of California, and Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, had "not a chance in the world" to succeed.

Suggestions were heard recently that Secretary of the Treasury Mills would be made chairman of the Republican national committee, but he said he would not accept the place. "I've had a lot of politics in the last 25 years and I don't intend to step out of here into the chairmanship of any political committee," Mills said.

GREAT BRITAIN'S cabinet in three sessions gave final approval to the British policy for negotiations with Mr. Roosevelt in the debt conference to be held in Washington. Of course the cabinet's conclusions were not made public, but it was understood Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay would bring back a plan providing for a lump sum payment of between $1,250,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 as settlement for the entire debt of about $11,000,000,000 which the European nations owe the United States. This, the debtor nations think, would be in accord with their own Lausanne agreement on German reparations.

Representative Hainey of Illinois declared: "The United States will not accept any such slash," and opinion in congressional circles upheld this view. Moreover, Mr. Roosevelt's plan of dealing with each nation separately will give the British small opportunity to put forward a proposal for all of them.

GERMANY'S new government under Chancellor Hitler is not to have smooth sailing by any means and may be upset at the coming elections. The Socialists and Communists were trying strenuously to lay aside their differences and join in the fight against the Nazis, and it seemed likely they would succeed in this.

Vice Chancellor Von Papen, armed with a decree signed by President Von Hindenburg, assumed the premiership of Prussia, dissolved the diet of that state and ordered new elections on March 5. Premier Braun and the other old Prussian ministers were summarily ousted. The government also issued a new set of severe laws curtailing the right of assembly and of free speech and gagging the press.

PREMIER DALADIER postponed the downfall of his new French government for a time by temporarily abandoning the attempt to balance the budget. The cabinet rejected a proposal to reduce the pay of employees of the state, and approved measures which would slightly increase the taxes on gasoline and bank checks. All told, it approved measures designed to provide $22,000,000, half of which would be in new taxes and half resulting from economies in civil expenditures. This measure will be operative until another budget project can be drafted.

RECENT deaths of note were those of Dr. Lawrence F. Abbott, former president and publisher of the Outlook and close friend of Theodore Roosevelt; and Count Albert Apponyi of Hungary, the oldest statesman of the League of Nations and a powerful political figure in his country.

Wireless Waves Used as Internal Poultice

The old-fashioned poultice, which is usually composed of bran, or bread, or linseed, with some admixture of mustard, is still a great standby for the family physician. The main trouble is that it can only be applied to the surface, and therefore cannot actually "touch the spot."

The latest report in medical circles is that it may soon be possible to put a poultice in effect at least on the liver, lungs, or any other internal organ of the human body. This prospect has been opened up by the discovery of certain wireless waves which can cook the white of an egg and leave the yolk uncooked, or cook the yolk—a more surprising thing—and leave the white unaffected. Even now, preliminary and experimental treatments are being undertaken with these rays which produce selective internal heating. Thus it looks as though doctors may be able, by adjusting the conditions, to apply this internal poultice literally wherever it is most needed.

Blemishes on Face and Shoulders Almost a Year Cuticura Healed

"For almost a year I was troubled with blemishes that took the form of pimples and blackheads. My face and shoulders were the affected parts. The pimples were large and red and my shoulders became sore from the rubbing of my shoulder straps. The pimples itched and after scratching them they festered and were so sore that I could not sleep.

"People suggested many remedies; I tried all but to no avail. Cuticura Soap and Ointment were suggested and I was completely healed, after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." Boost the Bonds and Close the Schools

In face of the fact that the schools are on the verge of being closed all over the state, now comes the two-million dollar bond issue, which of course, tickles the bonding companies nearly to death on account of the "velvet" they will derive from the enormous interest, while they pat the governor on the back for being so shrewd and "working to the interest of the people."

The two-million will be applied to the highways of the state, more particularly where it will do the most good (to the governor). And as far as going to the good of the laboring classes are concerned, it would look a great deal better, were it not for the fact that instead of the work being divided up, it will all go to the "Loyal Democrats."

It is a well known fact that no man who is identified as a Republican can get even a day's work under the administration.

While the governor and the bonding companies are rejoicing over this great means of breaking our share of the depression, the school children will be the losers.

What difference does it make to the administration and the bonding companies whether we have schools or not, so long as they can satisfy their greed and carry out their ideas of self-gratification.

In this depression when so many men are out of work, they were promised employment on the highways, providing the Democrats won—but now, when they apply, they are asked the question: "Are you a Democrat? If you are, go to work! If you are a Republican, we can't use you." Yet at the same time, the Republican may be more of a taxpayer than the Democrat—but that's politics, you know.

In other words, the Republican and taxpayer is not a citizen of the state and is not entitled to any benefits from what he must help to pay, in order that the Democrats may share in the feast. With the Republican taxpayer, it is pretty much like it was with the young Irishman, who on coming to this country and applying for work, the answer would be: "No Irish need apply," while as a comparison, "no Republicans need apply."

The two-million dollar debenture measure is one thing, but the "joker" is where the state must pay six-million in interest during the next ten years, and while this would look like prosperity, it means destruction on the other hand, for the teachers' salaries and closing of our schools will follow in its wake and the taxpayer, as usual, will be the goat.

Clothes for the Needy

Women volunteers sewing for the needy under direction of the Red Cross produced 234,000 garments last year, and will produce millions of garments in the winter of 1932-33. These will be from the millions of yards of cotton cloth distributed by the national Red Cross from the 400,000 bales of cotton turned over to the organization by Congress. Cloth was sent to all shipping points, and later it was propagated to send some simple ready-made garments, including trousers, overalls, underwear, stockings and socks.

A SUPPER TO SING FOR!

If the sugar-plum tree should come to life!
And honey-dew come from the magic pitcher—wouldn't supper times be jolly for five and seven years olds!
A supper that has all the charm of the sugar-plums and the honey-dew has for dessert a cup of crushed canned pineapple, cool and sweet. Never was anything so good to eat nor so good for growing boys and girls. For nutritional research has recently found canned pineapple to be a valuable source of five minerals, essential to health, as well as a valuable source of vitamins A, B, and C—a discovery that makes the task of mothers much simpler. The delicate flavor and color of pineapple are especially appealing to children. Pineapple is a food which rightly belongs in their own world of magic goodness. When it is served simply—a generous bowlful of crushed pineapple—it is a treat which young Mary and Johnny find suited to their most epicurean tastes.

Two slices a day or a cup of crushed fruit is the amount recommended to aid in the maintenance of health and growth.

"Peruvian Seizure of Leticia Unjustified"

New York.—The Peruvian Government, in complete default on its foreign debt, proposes to start a costly war on the most futile and feeble pretext," states Dr. Max Winkler, President of The American Council of Foreign Bondholders, in a report which reviews the situation arising out of the seizure by Peruvians of the Amazon port of Leticia in Colombian territory.

"In present circumstances of economic stress and popular unrest all over South America, Peru's action must be considered outrageous and unpardonable," states the bondholders' council.
"Peru is one of the arbiters between Bolivia and Paraguay, and deliberately embarks on a venture similar to theirs, but far more dangerous. The administration is reported to be raising $5-6,000,000 to pay for armaments. Millions for war but not one cent for debts owed abroad! Bondholders are apparently content with platitude which are being handed out by those who are responsible for the marketing of the various Peruvian loans in the foreign, especially American, markets."

TOWN NAMED FOR LOVE
NOW STORM CENTER

Love named the town of Leticia in Colombia, S. A.—and now war threatens its serenity on the banks of the peacefully flowing Amazon.

In 1897, a young engineer was sent-down the Amazon river to establish a town on the ancient site of the fort of San Antonio, originally an outpost of the one-time Spanish dominance

Colombian Gunboat "Santa Marta," Moored Near Leticia Ready for Possible Hostilities.

over South America. Loneliness for his English sweetheart, Leticia Smith, whom he had left behind him prompted the romantic engineer to name the village after her in violation of his instructions.

And it is this same town which is today the storm-center of the dispute between Colombia and Peru. Solomn treaties irrevocably established Leticia as Colombian territory. But armed forces of Peruvians seized the town last September and continue to fortify and to occupy it. The Colombians are indignant at what they term an invasion of their own soil. War may result between Peru and Colombia, and other South American countries may be drawn unwillingly into the conflict.
The eyes of the western world are upon this town, romantically named 96 years ago, for the love of a woman.

Farm Teaching in School Is Favored

Authority Says Education Is for Good of Masses.

From New York State College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Dr. R. M. Steward of Cornell university deplored the trend toward book teaching and defended the old principle of "learning to do by doing." In addressing the agricultural section of the American vocational association, "I cannot become enthusiastic about such a school problem as pruning an apple tree without having an apple tree. To make the problem difficult, vague, and indefinite adds no merit to teaching; the boy may learn about pruning without having an apple tree to prune, but only with extra effort. Real situations have more influence and beget a better type of thinking," he says.

He upholds the teaching of vocational agriculture, or special training, although he agrees that education should be designed for the good of the masses and not for individuals to "outstrip" their neighbors. However, until society takes a much different attitude on training lawyers, physicians, dentists, and other individual "out-strippers," agriculture is not yet doing violence to that principle. A high school course in agriculture, properly organized, provides the best means of a general education possible for many rural communities. Agricultural training may be called special, but the group of agricultural vocations touch life at every point and lend themselves better to human and social influences than any similarly related group of vocations.

Vocational education has no quarrel with general education; each has too much to offer the other and the sixteen years' experience of vocational training has contributed much to the general education field, he says.

"If we begin with the general, as we probably do, it remains barren and futile until vitalized by special experiences. If we begin with the special, as we probably do not, we shall soon discover that the principles from which fundamental values of life arise, are the same principles that other types of special education come to recognize. It is then the business of vocational education to check periodically its fundamental purposes, points of views, methods, and results with general education, of which it is an integral part, to find the common bases of mutual help."

Illinois Fruit Growers Thinning Out Orchards

Intent upon reducing wastes and losses and producing more economically, 25 southern Illinois fruit growers thinned 11,600 trees from their orchards the past year, according to reports collected by R. S. Marsh, horticultural extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. These same growers have almost 2,000 more trees labeled for removal during the coming year.

Growers throughout the state are taking up the tree thinning and culling campaign which the extension service of the agricultural college is conducting.

Thinning out crowded trees, even in well cared for orchards, is held to be particularly essential at this time if growers are to wage a successful fight against the growing menace of insects and diseases and thereby reduce wastes and losses and keep down production costs. Even more important is the culling out of more than 900,000 apple trees in neglected orchards.

Best Handling of Manure

If manure is left in the stall or feed yard where it will be kept moist and thoroughly tramped, so as to exclude air, there is no better method of storing. Some of the liquid manure may be lost when earth floors are used and it may be economical to provide concrete floors to prevent this loss. This method of handling manure is advisable mainly where well-bedded stalls are provided for horses, and in cattle sheds or milking bars where the animals run loose and the tramping is very thorough.

It is best to have a system of cropping so that a place to scatter manure will be available during most of the year. This will avoid the necessity for storing any great amount of it about the farm. Thus, in a rotation of corn, oats, wheat, and clover, the manure would usually be applied to the clover sod and plowed under for corn.—Missouri Farmer.

Ohio Ton Litter Club

Nine 4-H club youngsters have become members of the Ohio Ton Litter club. Each litter of pigs raised by six of the nine boys attained a weight of 2,300 pounds within 150 days from the time of farrowing. The best record was made by a young man who fed a litter of 12 Poland Chinas to a weight of 2,815 pounds.

Prospects of big crops at higher prices are brightening business in Argentina.

One thousand farmers of Mitchell county, Georgia, have expressed a willingness to sign an agreement not to sell their products below cost of production.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Cynthia Ann Parker

WHEN her relatives finally found her, and restored her to the birthright which was hers as a white woman of good family, Cynthia Ann Parker looked like an Indian, her skin burned brown under the hot sun of the western plains, her clothing a dirty blanket and worn moccasins, and she acted like one, meeting every advance with the sullen silence characteristic of her adopted people. She was one of the few examples in our history of a white woman gone completely Indian.

Here was a strange story. The Parkers came pioneering into Texas between 1835 and 1840, when Texas had just wrested independence from Mexico, and bands of hostile Indians and marauding Mexicans still roamed the sparsely settled plains. They settled near the present site of Groesbeck. Only a little later, during an attack by the Comanche Indians, Cynthia Ann and her small brother were captured and carried away.

Years passed before the whites learned the fate of the little girl. Then a band of hunters, visiting the camp of the Comanches, now turned friendly, saw her there, grown to young womanhood. They finally persuaded the red men to allow them to talk with her. But it was an unsatisfactory interview. The girl refused to speak, maintaining a stolid silence and an expressionless face.

More years went by. The white girl was married, after the Indian custom, to a brave named Peta Nocona, and bore him a son, destined to become known throughout the nation as Quannah Parker, chief of the Comanches, one of the most noble and famous of the red men.

When Texas achieved statehood, military force was organized to clear her borders of the menacing red men. During an expedition led against the Comanches by Capt. L. S. Ross, Peta Nocona was killed and Cynthia Ann captured, carried away from her son and her red friends and restored to the whites. Still her face was an impenetrable mask. She seemed to have no recollection of her own language or people. Finally Captain Ross resorted to the happy device of relating to her, detail by detail, but as if it had happened to someone else, the story of her own childhood. When he told of the Indian raid and kidnaping, her face at last lit with recognition. Pointing a grimy finger at herself she said, "Mo Cynthia Ann!"

At Austin, Texas, she was placed in the home of a brother. But she was here as restless as if in actual captivity, and only a few years later she died.

Day Dawn

AN IDYLL of the American forests is the story of Thu-Ren-Se-Ra, Day Dawn, a lovely Indian maiden who gave her life to save that of an unworthy and perfidious lover.

During the French and Indian wars the friendship of the American Indians was assiduously courted by both the French and the colonists. Colonel Schuyler with rare tact and judgment had succeeded in forming an alliance for the colonies with the most powerful Eastern tribes. The friendship between the white man and his red confederates had reached such success that the great chief of the Iroquois had accompanied the colonel on a trip to England, and there been highly honored and loaded by the ladies of the court with presents for his daughter, Day Dawn.

To undermine this alliance and secure for themselves the loyalty of the fighting red men, the French bent their efforts. Spies were dispatched in every direction from Quebec; Father LeMoigne, a Jesuit priest, succeeded in winning over the Onandagas. And at length the French laid crafty plans to win also the powerful Iroquois.

Day Dawn was their victim; a dandy of Parisian court, M. DuVallé by name, was their tool. DuVallé contrived a meeting with Day Dawn in the forests, wooed her with gifts of game and wild flowers. And beautiful Day Dawn, slipping away from her tribe for secret meetings with him, lost her heart completely to this elegant Frenchman with the polished, foreign manners.

And then one night, when the moon was turning the Hudson to silver and the shadows along shore to black and silver bowers, a faithful friend came running down from the village to warn the lovers that Day Dawn's absence had been discovered and the braves of the tribe were almost upon them. DuVallé jumped into his canoe, while Day Dawn untied it, and slipped away into the shadows under the river bank. From a covert near the shore the girl watched the pursuing braves arrive, heard them partle and then decide that DuVallé had escaped and might be intercepted if they followed the bank up the river. If they did that, she knew, her lover was lost. Quickly she took up his cloak, still lying in the thicket, put on her head his discarded hat, and stepped out of her concealment, her figure black against the moonlight and a sure target. Her kinsmen let fly their arrows.

Thus Day Dawn unwittingly saved, not so much the life of a worthless lover, but an enemy of the American colonies.

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the infestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING! There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Washington.—The second session of the Seventy-Second congress, now passing into history as the last "lame duck" sessions is crowning itself with a new-found glory. Short sessions of congress, in advance of a change in administration, are never expected to accomplish much, but the current edition is by all odds the winner when the race is run towards the zero.

Indeed, those of us who are required—not privileged—by our duties to sit in the press galleries of the senate and the house day after day have indulged in a little game of attempting to locate some legislation which might have been killed but was allowed to pass. It "just ain't."

And to make the thing more ridiculous, senate and house committees were excitedly holding hearings on this bill or that right up to the finish line, taking testimony (on account of which there is always a tremendous stenographic bill in addition to the printing charges of thousands of dollars) and inviting witnesses from here, there and everywhere. There was not a chance for those bills to be enacted into law and the bulk of the committee members admitted the fact privately. But for the sake of the "record," they joined with others of their particular committee and went right ahead on their grand errand of futility.

The proponents of the hearings justify their course with the statement that they now have the data upon which to fashion legislation later. They argue that the bulk of the legislation had something or other to do with the whole program of lifting the country out of the mire of the depression, and a survey shows this to be true in all respects. It could be said, therefore, that the orgy of hearings in the short session was in preparation for greater things, except that the records reveal new hearings always have been held, regardless of what has transpired before, when the same legislation is introduced in a new session of congress.

Whenever a congress ends, all bills on the house and senate calendars of business die. So the expiration of the second session is also the expiration of the Seventy-Second congress, and every bill that was before either house or in the hands of any committee of either house became null and void.

No one seems to know why there was so much activity among the committees of the senate and house in the session. It was apparent at the start, and became more so as December and January passed and February rolled in, that it would be a do-nothing session. Senators recognized this situation. From the Republican side came threats and jibes and jests that the Democrats were blocking anything and everything. From the Democratic side of the senate chamber came the same tune with just a slight variation in the chorus. It was to the effect that the Republicans had control, which they did if one counted as Republicans those who had deserted the Republican candidate in the 1932 election for the support of Mr. Roosevelt. And so it went.

In the house, there was a clear Democratic majority. But something else was wrong in that body. The plans of the leadership did not always carry, and if they did, the legislation was passed only to run into the log jam in the senate. Some of the house Democrats even went so far as to say their majority would not have held to pass some of the legislation put through except for the knowledge that the bills would get snowbound in the senate.

A Washington correspondent for one of the great London dailies called his newspaper that "the American congress seems to be going in all directions at the same time." I quote him because there has been no more fitting description of the situation come to my attention.

After all, it seems to me the circumstance ought not be so surprising that the short session has done nothing. I have inquired among a very great number of senators and representatives, from leaders down to the newest and latest additions to the membership. Their answers to my question concerning the lack of accomplishment varied so widely that I concluded they must reflect minutely the feeling throughout the country.

Every one, or nearly every one, has had worries through the last three years and these worries have been accentuated in the last year. The owners of these worries, whether they are important worries or just individual worries, looked around for some one to solve their problems. Suddenly, they thought: "Why, there is our congressman," or Senator So-and-So. His mail from home has increased as the troubles have grown. Not that he can do anything about most of the cases, yet he is one point upon which the spotlight focuses.

Consequently, it is made to appear that senators and representatives hear so much about the sad state of affairs, the suffering, the foreclosures, the closed banks, the bankrupt corporations, the low price of wheat, of cotton, of cattle and hogs and dairy products, that they are actually "going in all directions at the same time." I do not know whether that excuses them for their failure to get things done, but assuredly it is one of the factors in the situation which has been overlooked to a considerable extent.

But as President Hoover passes from the picture of national control, it is worth while to look back for a moment. Washington observers of all shades of opinion are coming around to the conclusion that whatever may have been his faults, he has had one of the toughest jobs on his hands that ever was faced by a President. Especially was this true during the last two years of his administration. During that time, he had a congress made up of a Democratic house and a senate in which there never was a majority on either side on any question; I mean, a majority that could be counted in advance, and he was forced, therefore, to do a lot of trading. That Mr. Hoover was able to get his reconstruction program as far under way as he did was due absolutely to the condition of the country and not through any control which he was able to exert.

As a matter of fact, the congress for the last ten years has been an "unbroken colt." The senate during all of that time has been so close as regards the party division that a group of so-called progressives have constantly wielded the balance of power. Being independent, those 10 or 12 men on the Republican side and a few less on the Democratic side skated back and forth as their ideas dictated. The result was a terrific casualty of well-laid plans.

While the senate was in this condition, the house was having its troubles and would have had more except for the extraordinary personality of the late Nicholas Longworth. So it becomes rather obvious that whatever Mr. Hoover may have lacked in political ability or acumen; whatever were his shortcomings in statecraft, or however many mistakes he made by refusing concessions, the fact still remains that he held the job as President in a period when few men would have succeeded. For, coupled with all of these factors, there was and is no measure within the power of the federal government to satisfy all of the diverse elements of these times. The depression has made experience of bygone years as useless as the proverbial fifth wheel of the farm wagon.

In view of these facts, therefore, it ought to be a cheering prospect for Mr. Roosevelt to see not just a FOR ROOSEVELT working majority but a big majority of his own party in the congressional membership when they get together.

The American government always has been a party government. It thus has had to have a satisfactory majority of each house of congress of the same party as the President in order to work well. Mr. Roosevelt's first two years in the White House are assured of such a working control if all who are labelled as Democrats turn out to be Democrats.

On the face of things, it appears that Mr. Roosevelt ought to be able to get whatever he wants from the extra session and the succeeding sessions. It is a situation ideal for action. There will be so few Republicans that observers here fall to see how they can start any trouble, even with the aid of progressives.

There have been suggestions floating around to the effect that quite a number of "trial balloons" have been sent up in the congressional atmosphere by Mr. Roosevelt. While there is no method of confirmation available, there has been one condition existing during the last three months that seems to confirm the opinion that the incoming President was testing out sentiment. The condition is this: Mr. Roosevelt has kept hands off insofar as telling leaders of his party in congress what he wanted to have done in the short session.

He could have made his own pathway easier to travel after becoming President had he confided some of his views to the Democratic leaders of the house and senate.

With reference to the suggestions of "trial balloons," however, it is possible Mr. Roosevelt did tell a few of his friends some of his ideas. It has been observed here, for example, that possibly his suggestions were responsible for the consistently busy committees. By introducing various and sundry pieces of legislation and holding hearings on them in committees, it would be possible obviously to gain a perspective of the public attitude. Indeed, such a period of experimentation would provide the new President with a most definite outline of what he could expect in the way of a reception for his plans when they are formally offered to his own congress.

Found New Worlds From Wheel Chair

How One "Passionate Pilgrim" Filled Her Life.

This is the story of a "Passionate Pilgrim." John Palmer Gayitt tells it without revealing any other name. She was a girl who from earliest childhood longed to travel. Her father promised that on her graduation from college they should take a trip around the world—real travel, off the beaten track and into the hidden corners of the world. The journey was arranged for when she fell in love with a young doctor. "If I were not leaving on this journey to which I have looked forward all my life," said she, "—but as soon as I get back!" He asked, "If anything should prevent your going, will you marry me at once?"

And something did prevent her going. With the boat waiting, and the baggage gone, she caught her heels at the top of the stairs and plunged downward—not quite to her death, but crippled, chained to a wheel chair for life. The girl who loved to travel! The young doctor made her keep her promise, and it was his father, coming upon the traveler chained, who pointed out to her that there are ways and ways of traveling. He spoke of that world under her foot where she sat in the garden, as rich in interest as any she could explore. "There," he told her, "were all the problems of science, history and philosophy, as much interest as the world could hold."

The result was a little chemical laboratory where the chained traveler studied little-known phases of the life under her feet, prospected like any Forty-Niner for minerals, and found them—even gold—in the soil of her farm—explored, under her microscope, jungles of growth and life and the limitless phase of molecules and atoms. And then the telescope, with which she traveled—to the stars. She became an expert on every phase of the history of her section of the state and wrote respected books on her scientific studies.

It has been said that you can't keep a good man down. And if one is really a "passionate pilgrim," it seems you can't keep him or her from traveling!

High Blood Pressure Not Confined to Aged

The chief resistance to the flow of blood occurs in the smallest arteries and capillaries, which act as so many nozzles at the end of the stream. Any abnormal narrowing in the caliber of these vessels demands a higher pressure head in the mains. Thus one finds a persistent elevation of blood pressure commonly associated with arteriosclerosis of the smaller vessels. This process may even occur in young people and run a rapid course to death. More commonly, however, high blood pressure appears later in life and, depending on many circumstances, the individual may live only a short time or he may with care go along, more or less handicapped, for many years. After forty, much depends on the wearing quality of one's arteries. Dr. R. W. Scott explains in Hygeia Magazine, in "Forty Years Old—Or Forty Years Young?"

Since Nature is interested in man only with the idea of propagating the race, the time that man survives after fifty is borrowed time. From then on, man must watch his step in this life on earth. He has no one to watch over his arteries.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

The Child Reader

by MARJORIE BARROWS Editor, Child Life Magazine.

One afternoon many years ago a wharf rat on San Francisco Bay wandered into the Oakland Public Library.

There opening a bound volume of a children's magazine, he stumbled upon a story. It was a story about a boy like himself - a runaway, a gang leader of wharf rats, who had certain semi-piratical adventures, but who, after a hard lesson, learned of better ways of living his life.

Making of Jack London. The dramatic, exciting story awoke in the young reader the uneasy consciousness of his own wrong actions. He walked out of that library resolving to lead just as adventurous a life but one that carried with it a clear conscience. So he joined the Fish Patrol, enlisted about the bay, fought poachers, and before long began to write stories about his adventures.

That boy was Jack London. The experience of this famous writer occurs, in a rather less dramatic fashion, in the life of every boy or girl. Careful investigators have discovered that next to persons, nothing has more influence on children than what they read. If a hero they admire acts under certain circumstances as they themselves would like to act, they'll remember it.

They imitate the hero. And when the time comes, they'll unconsciously be influenced by that hero's action and try to do likewise. The heroine's kindness, ambition, steadfastness, loyalty, the hero's resourcefulness, quick-wittedness, painstaking qualities, courage, magnanimity, modesty—all these examples "sink in" and are emulated both now and later. One story with hidden character-building values in worth a dozen sermons from parents or teachers.

Let us try to see that this sort of a story, full of plenty of adventure for the boy, full of interesting plots and characters for the girl, is convenient for them to pick up. Jack London isn't the only one to be tremendously influenced by the printed word.

Cookies for Ever-Hungry Youngsters

Home-made Cookies Delight Kiddies

SCHOOL days again! And hungry youngsters racing home and asking for "something good" to eat. If the cookie jar is kept well filled, mother will have no difficulty in satisfying the children, because these little cakes are substantial enough to satisfy the between-meal craving and still so light they will not spoil the appetite for regular meals.

While even plain cookies will appeal to nearly all children, try giving them something with a flavor they like. Cut the cookies in interesting shapes, such as stars, diamonds, and little animals! Or decorate the tops of plain cookies with some nuts, raisins, or small colored candies, and listen to the shouts of delight.

Add these to the school lunch, too, and watch the interest of the youngsters in that rather difficult meal.

Chocolate Drop Cookies: 2 cups sifted cake flour, 1/2 teaspoon soda, dash of salt, 1/2 cup butter or other shortening, 1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed, 1 egg, well beaten, 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, 1/2 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/2 cup walnut meats, broken. Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together twice. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well.
