

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

We have organized a chapter of the National Honor Society. It is quite an honor to the school to be eligible for organization. Only Juniors, Seniors and Post-Graduates are eligible to our chapter. The members are to be elected by the faculty. From the Junior class, Vera Louise Snow was elected; Seniors, Edith Dudley, Ernie Prehm, John Jackson and Lala Joyce; Post-Graduates, Adelina Marquez.

Last Friday, Mrs. Ramsdale, one of our former teachers, visited the school. We are glad to hear from her again.

On the same day, our County Nurse, Mrs. Reiter, came to our assembly on her final call. We are sorry to see her go, but hope that she will be happy in her new home.

Wednesday the Home Ec. Club presented an educational play entitled "Mother's Day Out."

The close of school is rapidly approaching and commencement activities are well under way.

The pictures which were taken last week are posted on the bulletin board in the study hall. Most of them are fine. They are only a sample of what we are to receive in the annual.

School Board Meeting

At a meeting of the Carrizozo Municipal School Board, Mar. 8, it was decided that all teachers be offered their positions for the coming school year. In keeping with the Governor's demands that all budgets be reduced at least ten percent, reductions in salaries for the coming year were made. Carrizozo teachers have been very loyal in that they have maintained their standard of efficiency and the morale of the school, although receiving in return two successive reductions in compensation.

The Board was re-organized, the newly elected officers being: John E. Hall, President; Roy Shafer, Vice-President; R. E. Lenon, Clerk.

Cabaret and Entertainment

Given by the Woman's Club of Carrizozo last Saturday night was a decided success both from a social and financial standpoint.

The Revelers furnished the music for the dancing between numbers, and the opening chorus, directed by Miss Dia Herrings, with her bevy of pretty high school girls, was a pleasant forecast of what was to come.

This was followed by dancing, after which a humorous play-lette was given by members of the Woman's Club. Miss Louise Sweet gave as a violin solo, "Barcarolle" from "Jocelyn" by Godard. She responded to an encore, playing that beautiful melody of which we never tire, "Traumerel" by Schumann. All present were delighted with Louise's professional renditions. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Helen Frances Huppertz.

A luncheon was served by the ladies at different times throughout the evening. In response to a request from the Woman's Club, four members of the Jericho Club took charge of the door, and for the receipts from that source, we refer you to the report by E. M. Brickley which appears elsewhere in this paper.

Mrs. D. X. LaVallee was hostess to the Wednesday Bridge Club at her home this week.

The Inaugural Address

is a term much heard today, especially in connection with automobiles. To the average motorist, the term may have a mysterious, technical sound, yet it is not at all difficult for an expert to explain.

"Perhaps the simplest way to explain the term is by illustration," says Capt. H. Ledyard Towle, artist, designer and writer. "A fine example of functional beauty is the 1933 streamlined Oldsmobile. The suave body lines, with their long, easy curves; the sloping windshield and radiator grill, are beautiful to the eye, like a bird in flight. The valanced fenders give a finishing touch to the whole design.

"The very features that give the car this eye appeal are the ones that provide the most important functional elements. They are things of practical value to the motorist. The slow-slung construction and sloping lines, including the new rear-end treatment, lessen wind resistance, which, in turn, gives better economy of operation as one of its advantages. The fender valances not only hide details of the underbody formerly exposed to view, but keep the car much cleaner, especially in wet and muddy weather.

"The Oldsmobile design is especially well adapted to the modern trend in coloring. It permits the color to be carried all the way forward on the radiator shell, so that the picture presented by the entire car is one of satisfying completeness. The new styling is well adapted to one-color themes, which is another thing that helps to bring out the lines of the car and to give it a clear-cut, smart appearance.

"After all, simplicity, as exemplified by Oldsmobile styling, is the nearest approach to excellence."

Rebekahs Entertain Distinguished Guest

Mrs. Ida Lindahl of Gallup, N. M., State President of the Rebekah Assembly of New Mexico, visited Coalora Rebekah Lodge No. 15 of Carrizozo, at their regular meeting Wednesday evening in I.O.O.F. Hall. Gathering the members present near her station as though talking to her family, she opened a question box on The Ritual, and proved to be well posted and giving those present the benefit of her knowledge.

After instructions on the degree work, and examination on secret work, refreshments of cake and coffee were served.

Mrs. Lindahl said the Odd-Fellows certainly had a beautiful Hall, and was so glad to know that they had purchased the property and made the improvements.

During her stay in Carrizozo, she was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carl, Mrs. Carl being Noble Grand of the local Rebekah Lodge. She left yesterday morning for El Paso, being accompanied as far as Alamogordo by Mr. and Mrs. Carl and it is hoped that she may find it convenient to attend the White Mountain Association meeting in June.

FORT STANTON NEWS

Dr. J. R. Wooley, who recently arrived here from Carville, La., will take up his duties as ward surgeon in the near future.

Wm. H. Gould, alias Bull-Neck, Moose-Face, champion strong man and jiu jitsu expert, has challenged anybody in this vicinity to meet him in the manly art of wrestling. He states that he depends more on his enormous, brute strength than he does on his many tricks.

Messrs. Nichastro, Jordan and Aldersen, gentlemen at large, who like music, but are slightly inclined to be reluctant in facing it, pulled a "Houdini" disappearing act to the tune of "Everybody's doin' it," in which manner they 'took it on the lam' last Saturday. Their destination is doubtful.

Ray Flynn, inside sentinel of the Seamen's Social Club, has so distinguished himself in zealous and unselfish services in guarding the finances of the club, that the members, unitedly, demanded his promotion to treasurer when this position became vacant by the departure of Nichastro. This in view of the fact that his services were extended as far as to recover part of the club's 'dough' that, characteristically of lucre, had grown wings and commenced to migrate for benefits of other than the club's.

We stated in the last issue that an extended program of landscape gardening was to transform the Fort into a garden of Eden. For the populace of this Eden we have a great abundance of Adams. The forbidden fruit is obtainable in juice form from surrounding pueblos. There is always somebody with a special talent for the part of the serpent—but the crying need is for some tempting Evas.

The Waffle House

The above-named Cafe was opened Wednesday morning in the building formerly occupied by the old Lincoln State Bank, and is now one of the business houses of Carrizozo. J. E. Compton is the manager and Mrs. Compton, daughters Marjorie, Louise and son Billy are here. The family has settled down as permanent residents of the town. The Comptons are here from Tucuman and the head of the family is a former railroad trainman. Mrs. Compton is the chief cook which is a guarantee that home-cooked food will always be served. The Waffle House will be open all night in order to accommodate outgoing and incoming railroad men. We extend to the Waffle House and to the Comptons a hearty welcome as additions to our community.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Helms of the Nogal country, were Carrizozo business visitors Wednesday of this week. "It has been a long and cold winter and I am hopeful that we won't have any more cold weather," remarks A. B. Mr. Helms drives the Nogal-Bonito mail car, and rain or shine, regardless of the weather, "the mail must go through" over mountain roads.

The Capitan ladies who made the quilt for the school, announce that Stanley Banash of Fort Stanton was the lucky winner. They wish to thank those who made it possible to purchase the Book of Knowledge, Lands of People by Stevenson and Kipling.

NOGAL NOTES

There are several different parties in the Nogal district, doing some placer mining and prospecting. All seem much interested in the mining game.

The Negro show at the Nogal hall last Saturday night was real good, affording plenty of laughter for all and followed by a good dance.

Mrs. W. F. Peacock, who had been visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jesse May, has returned to her children's home near Oscura.

Mesdames Alice Skinner and T. B. Zumwalt made a pleasant call at the home of Mrs. Viola May on Tuesday morning.

Frank Southworth, who has been making his home here with his daughter, Mrs. Winston Peacock, made a business trip to Roswell Saturday and returned Monday.

Ed Harris and Herman Kelt were here from Carrizozo last Friday, transacting some business matters.

Billy McDonald has returned to Nogal after being away for several days. We hope he will begin to operate his mines soon.

Word was received here from Parsons the early part of this week of the death of Game Warden John McSmith, who had been ill for quite a period.

Too Much Power in Hands of Governor

The purchasing agency bill passed by the Legislature is one step too far in the trend of putting the government of New Mexico in the hands of one man and his political organization.

It concentrates in the governor the power of doing all the official buying for New Mexico.

It gives the governor control over millions of dollars worth of purchases of fuel, gasoline, oil, automobiles, insurance, machinery, parts, printing, stationery and all supplies for all state institutions and departments.

The agency consists of a board of three appointed by the governor, two to be of his political party.

This hands the governor of the state and leader of a political organization the most formidable political weapon ever bestowed on a New Mexico executive.

Control of contracts aggregating huge sums makes possible the collection of campaign contributions on a high, wide and handsome scale, hitherto unprecedented in the state.

Under this bill, for instance, educational institutions can be made the football of political patronage.

Any agency with such sweeping powers should be elective, or at least composed of a group of elective state officials.

Such concentration of power is bad public policy.

This bill is unwise, dangerous legislation full of possibilities for trouble. The New Mexican wishes to go on record as condemning it unreservedly.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

Mayor and Judge L. A. Whitaker of Oscura was in Carrizozo Wednesday of this week. His honor the Judge says business is rather slack in the J. P. court these days; no murders, fist fights, etc. He is still lookin' for those old bachelors that want to be married and says he'll give them a reduced rate on the marriage ceremony.

The Black Box of Silence

SYNOPSIS

Owen Landis, young inventor, has developed an extraordinary "silencer," which is stolen from a safe in his laboratory. Landis tells Wally Markham, his chum, the only person beside himself, knowing the combination of the safe, is Betty Lawson, with whom the inventor is in love. Markham takes a plaster cast of a woman's footprint, found beneath the window of the laboratory, and takes an opportunity to fit it to one of Betty's shoes. They are identical. Betty tells Markham Herbert Canby, a stranger, posing as a "promoter," had driven her home the previous night, and that she had dined in the car. Markham does not tell Landis of his discovery. Vaguely suspicious of Canby's honesty, he searches his hotel room; in his absence, finding two loaded automatic revolvers and a complete set of burglar's tools. Canby brings the revolvers and burglar's kit to the hotel clerk, claiming to have just found them in his room. That night the safe in the hands of crook Landis, with Markham, goes to Perthdale. Three strangers, claiming to be business men of Louisville, are the only possible suspects. Markham and Landis decide to follow them, although advice from Louisville seems to guarantee the standing of the three. At St. Joseph, Markham sees Canby's car. He learns Canby is driving west, with Betty Lawson and her father and his guests in the car. While he and Landis are sleeping, Markham's car is stolen and wrecked. He buys another, and they go on.

"No; but there was a perfectly good roadster wrecked back there in Kansas," Markham put in pointedly.

"Yes, but nothing in the wide world to connect the wrecking with these men we're chasing. Why would a trio of bank burglars, if that's what they are, pass up all the chances in six or seven hundred miles and go straggling off up here in these mountains?"

"Just so," said Markham with a short laugh. "It isn't decent. But there is something else I'd like to know. What has become of Canby and the Lawsons?"

This question was answered late in the afternoon, as they were running down the valley of the Panhikin toward Copah—still gaining upon the Fleetwing, as they learned by inquiry as they had come along. It was at a water tank station on the Pacific Southwestern that they first heard of the Nordyke limousine. It was ahead of them; had apparently been ahead all day. They had stopped at a filling station to get gas, and to ask about the Fleetwing, and the gas man grinned.

"You'll have to step on it some to catch up with them fellers in the Eight," he told them. "They pulled up here couple hours ago and told me they'd made it from Denver since morning." Then, "What's the matter with that bunch? Everbody seems to be askin' about 'em."

"Who else, besides us?" Markham wanted to know.

"Three folks in a Nordyke limousine; right handsome young feller drivin' and doin' the talkin', with a girl pretty enough to wake the dead settin' in with him, and an oldish man in the back."

"About how long ago was that?"

"I disremember; about an hour, I reckon."

Markham was putting the gears in low for the start when Landis halted him to ask another question of the gas man.

"Did the limousine driver ask about anybody else?"

The man scratched his head as if trying to remember. Suddenly he looked up with the wide-mouthed grin again in place. "Why, yes—come to think. Wanted to know if anybody else had been along askin' about the Eight; two fellers, he said, but he couldn't tell me what kind of a car they'd be drivin'."

It was Landis who spoke first when the two were once more on their way.

"Wally, how is Bert Canby mixed up in this thing?" he demanded.

"What's his connection with these fellers? And why is he keeping tab on 'em?"

"Why ask me?" Markham shrilled.

"Because I've had a feeling all along that you know more about this mystery than I do; more than you are willing to tell me."

"If you put it on the ground of knowledge, I don't, Owen; I'm just as much befuddled as you are. I can say that honestly."

"You are trying to shield somebody, Wally. Who is it?"

"Wait," said Markham shortly; then, "As I say, I'm just as much in the dark as you are. But, take the known facts in their order. On the night when you show me what your black box can do, you lose it, and the circumstantial evidence indicates that a man and a woman raised your shop.

Next we hear of a bank wrecking that made no noise; then we get on the trail of these three men from Louisville and run into two more of the noise wreckings. Farther along, we discover that Canby is following us, or the Louisville bunch or both. Next we—"

"You needn't catalogue the twists and turns. If you know anything more than you've told me, you ought to turn it loose, Wally."

"I don't know anything—more's the pity; and that's the stubborn truth. But I'm going to know, before we quit and call it a day."

By this time the road had left the narrow valley of the Panhikin. Knowing from the itinerary in the route book that there were hazards ahead on the descent to the Red desert edge mining town of Copah, and hoping to be able to have daylight for the negotiating of them, Markham did not spare the car on the way up. Nevertheless, it was coming on dusk when they found themselves entering upon the hazardous descent, with the lights of Copah winking in the distance.

It was while they were sliding silently down the steep grades that they passed a large closed car stopped midway on one of the tangents, as if its occupants had halted to view the sunset glories.

"Sightseers," said Markham; and then, suddenly, "Say, Owen; wasn't that the Nordyke—Canby's car?"

"What Landis might have answered was lost in the limbo of things unsaid. As they rounded a "hairpin" curve and shot away down the succeeding tangent they could see the stopped car high above standing behind a row of great stones set up by the road builders to guard the down-mountain side of the highway. All at once one of the huge guard rocks heaved itself from its place, to come tumbling over and down the declivity, timed as if by some calculating agency to reach the lower tangent coincidentally with the racing roadster.

Fortunately, Markham was one of those drivers whose reactions in an emergency are so instantaneous as to seem purely automatic. He did the only thing there was to do—released the brakes and jammed the foot throttle open to its limit.

It was all over in a moment. With only a fraction of a second to spare at the point of intersection, but that fraction on the side of safety, the flying car shot fairly under the hurdling menace and went racing on to the next doubling curve.

It was not until the car shot out upon the valley level that Landis relaxed, drawing a long breath and saying, "I'm handing it to you, Wally. You've a lot better nerve than I have. I should have tried to stop if I'd been at the wheel. How do you suppose it happened?"

"One guess is as good as another. Mine is that whoever was driving that stopped car had cramped his front wheel against the rock for safety. Natural thing to do on such a stiff grade."

Silence for a speeding mile, and then Landis fairly shouted.

"Say, Wally! We've been asleep at the switch—both of us! Think back a minute; didn't you notice that the rock didn't make any noise coming down?"

"What's that?" snapped Markham, braking the car to an abrupt stop. Then, "I knew there was something queer about the thing, but I was too busy just then to figure out what it was. But you've put your finger on it. That tumbling rock ought to have made racket enough to wake the dead—and there wasn't a sound!"

"Well, you know there is only one way to account for that, don't you?"

"You bet your life I do! That stopped car had your internal machine in it—that's what. We're in luck at last." And he began to back the car for a turn.

"Hold on," Landis broke in. "What are you going to do?"

"Go back up the hill and have it out with that bunch, whoever they are!"

"Listen to reason a minute, Wally," Landis said quietly. "If they are the men we've been trying for three days to run down, how much chance would we have in a road scrap with a carload of yeggs most likely armed to the teeth? Besides, we haven't lost 'em. They can't go on to wherever they're going without passing us, and when they come along we can swing in and sit on their tail, can't we?"

"Um! You're too d—d sensible for any use!" Markham granted. "It gets me on the raw. I'm not used to being stood up as a mark for a bunch of murderers to throw stones at. Just before the thing came off I was asking you if the car wasn't a Nordyke. Was it? Or was it the Fleetwing?"

"I couldn't say. All I noticed was that it was a closed car."

"No matter; we'll find out in a few minutes what it was—or is."

They were entering Copah. Markham steered into the shadows and turned off the car lights.

They had not long to wait before the headlights of a following car appeared on the rearward road. "Spot it as it passes!" Markham rapped out; and so they did, both of them. What they saw was a mere thickening of the mysteries. For the passing car, slowing to town speed as it entered the town street, was no other than Canby's limousine, with Canby himself at the wheel.

"If I wasn't reasonably certain that we're both fairly sane and in our right minds—" Markham began. Then, "You saw them, didn't you?"

"I saw Canby, yes."

"But he wasn't alone."

"No; there were two people in the back seat."

"Exactly. Betty and her father, of course."

"I suppose so; though I couldn't make them out very well."

"But, see here; Canby was an hour ahead of us at the last place we inquired, which was only a few miles back. His car couldn't have been the one we saw stopped up there on the mountain grade."

"Of course not. The people who were in that car pushed a rock over on us. Besides, Canby hasn't my black box."

"D—n!" gritted Markham impatiently; and then, "Owen, this thing is getting too many twists and tangles in it—altogether too many. I can't understand how Canby got behind us."

Landis shook his head. "Let's wait a bit and see if another car doesn't turn up," he suggested. "There must be another one, you know."

They waited for half an hour or more and nothing turned up. "It's no use," Markham said at last. "We may as well drive on and get something to eat."

They had eaten dinner in the dining room without seeing anybody they recognized, and were making inquiries at the desk for the Canby-Lawson party.

"Nobody of either name this evening," said the clerk, "but that doesn't necessarily spell anything. If they are merely motoring through, they may have taken dinner tickets at the cashier's window; in which case we'd have no record."

"I see," said Markham. Then he took from his pocketbook the slip upon which, in the St. Joseph hotel, he had copied the names of the three Louisville men, and handed it to the clerk.

"Any of these gentlemen here?"

"Why, yes; all three of them. They came in this afternoon. There they are now—," pointing across the lobby.

"Thanks," said Markham, and the two crossed to the neighborhood of the three, Markham saying, "They don't know us, so we can take a good look at them, for whatever that may amount to," and accordingly they took a couple of chairs a short distance from the three where they could sit and smoke and observe.

For a time the esplanade went for nothing. One of the trio was reading a newspaper, and the others, the tall man and the sandy-haired one—the one who had bought the new Fleetwing in Chillicothe—were smoking. There was nothing suspicious in the appearance or actions of any of them.

"Well?" said Landis, "Where do we go from here?"

"I'm waiting for Canby to show up," was the low-toned reply. "I'd like to find out how he is linked up with these people."

"In that case won't it be better if we don't let him see us first?"

"You're right; we'll take the mexamine. We can look on as well from there."

They had scarcely settled themselves when a surprised voice behind them said, "Well—of all things! You two out here?"

"Betty!" Landis exclaimed, springing to his feet.

Markham laughed and said, "Sure; and why not?"

"But you never said a word to me, either of you, before we left Carthage! How did you come—by train?"

"Part of the way," Markham qualified. "But again I ask, why not? Why shouldn't we take a few days off and—"

"I know; but it's perfectly wonderful that we should meet here this way."

Markham drew up a chair for her. "Sit down and we'll unravel it. Owen was needing a rest and a change of scene, so I took him by the neck and ran off with him. Where is your father? And how do you come to be breaking your journey in Copah?"

"Daddy is around, somewhere; and we're not breaking our journey. We're leaving presently—going on to see the Red desert by moonlight."

"Oh; so you're driving?"

"Yes; with Bert, in his stuffy luxury car. At the last minute after we'd all bought our train tickets—Bert was going along, you know—he said he'd like to drive, if we would. So we took our tickets back and came in the car."

"Had a good trip this far?"

"Glorious."

"When did you reach Copah?"

"Oh, quite a little while ago; about five o'clock, I think it was. Anyhow, daddy and I had time to bathe and change and get to the solarium in time to see the sunset over the Red desert. It was simply gorgeous!"

"But you took a drive after that, didn't you?" Landis put in.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Betty Zane

IN 1770 Capt. Ebenezer Zane, following the westward trail established fifty years before by Governor Spotswood and his Knights of the Golden Horseshoe, settled at the mouth of Wheeling Creek, in Ohio County, Virginia. Here he prepared a home and later brought to it his family and his sister Elizabeth, a pretty girl in her early teens, who had had a year in school at Philadelphia and learned her way about in the society back East. Within a few years other settlers followed him, and but sixty feet from his cabin door rose the stout wooden stockade of Fort Henry.

In 1770, during the border warfare that followed the slaying of the Indian chief Cornstalk, a menacing band of over four hundred Wyandots, headed by that strange white man turned red, Simon Girty, rose out of the surrounding forests and descended upon the little garrison. The settlement took refuge in the stockade and prepared to meet the attack. There were, available exactly 42 fighting men. Thirteen of them were dispatched under Capt. Samuel Mason to do battle with the Indians outside the stockade. They were massacred. Girty demanded surrender. But Captain Zane determined to fight to the finish rather than yield to "that man."

For long days and weary nights the siege continued, each passing hour taking its costly toll of provisions, ammunition, life. There came a time when there were but twelve men left to defend the fort. And then, to destroy what little hope was left, came word that the supply of ammunition was exhausted. The only available supply was a keg of powder stored in the Zane cabin outside the stockade.

It was Betty Zane, sixteen at the time and fair to look upon, who volunteered to get it. Anxious faces pressed to the portholes to watch her, as she slipped out of the gate, into the clearing. The red men, peering out of the protecting forest, stared in astonishment and forgot to fire. In safety Betty reached the cabin and secured the precious keg of powder. But her journey was only half completed: As she started back the enemy, as if suddenly realizing the significance of her errand, opened fire. Stumbling under her burden, saved only by a miracle from the rain of bullets and arrows, Betty again crossed the open space and reached the gate and safety. With its new supply of powder Fort Henry held its own until the next morning, when Colonel McCulloch brought aid from Short Creek.

Rebecca and Abigail Bates

IN AFTER years, when admiring tourists and school children asked the Misses Rebecca and Abigail Bates to write in their albums, they always signed "themselves, with due pride, 'The American army of two, in the War of 1812.'"

One bright August morning, only two months after the formal declaration of war, a British battleship appeared off the coast of Massachusetts, making straight for the little village of Scituate, whose harbor was filled with small, defenseless fishing craft. The only ones to see the ship were Rebecca and Abigail, girls in their teens, who happened to be up in the lighthouse of which their father was keeper, trimming and polishing the big lanterns. Their father was away, bartering for meal in a neighboring village. So the two girls, with wide eyes and flying hair, ran down the spiral stairs, out of the lighthouse and across the short stretch of sandy beach between it and Scituate, where they gave the warning and precipitated a furious bustle of terrified preparation.

Back at the lighthouse Rebecca and Abigail again looked out over the sea, and saw that five small boats, bristling with armed soldiers, had left the ship and were bound for the harbor. Something must be done, and quickly.

Now Rebecca had beguiled many a long hour in their lonesome home learning to beat out a rhythm on an old drum, while Abigail was capable of producing a squeaky but quite distinguishable tune on her father's fife. Armed with drum and fife the two sisters again ran out of the lighthouse, took their stand behind a low dune near the shore, and set up a dismal little tune. At first their music seemed rather a joke. Rebecca and Abigail sat down on the sand, breathless, and giggled at each other, rather frightened at what they were doing. But the British boats steadily approached nearer and nearer the shore. The girls jumped to their feet again. After all, the idea was a good one. Again they started in. Louder and shriller squeaked the fife, deeper and rarer rolled the drum. Back and forth they marched, behind the protecting dune, accompanied by a very torrent of martial music.

Out on the attacking ship the lookout spoke to the commander. "Sounds as if quite an army was gathering out there," he said. "Looks bad for our boats." The men in the small boats heard the music, too, and when the command was received to turn back, they did so in double quick time. And the next morning the British battleship lifted anchor and sailed away, pausing only to run out a cannon and fire a harmless parting shot at the Scituate lighthouse.

No Santa Claus for the Grownup

Is Faith That Looks for Miracles Deficient in Strength?

A prominent minister the other day deplored the sort of faith that believes in a "wonder-working God"—that expects miracles. I believe he meant that it is a cheap sort of faith because it makes things easy for the one who believes. It lifts the responsibility for life right off one's shoulders and places it upon one's faith.

This seems to me a strikingly revealing point, which, aside from the religious reference, is applicable to much in our daily lives.

There is the tremendous faith of some of us in our friends—which is blasted at the first suggestion of disappointment or disillusionment.

And the faith in an idea—in its perfection—until it strikes the first snag in the process of working out.

And the faith of some people in themselves—until they find the first job that is too big, when they lose all self-confidence.

That sort of faith is like a child's faith in Santa Claus. He believes because he wants to believe. To get what he wants he needs only to pin a letter to his stocking the night before Christmas. It's up to Santa to work the miracle.

But for us grownups there is no Santa Claus. And in this day and age there are no miracles—except those we work for ourselves. Our faiths are probably the most important element in our lives. There is something revealing about ourselves in where we place them. And once we do place them there is something revealing in how we maintain them. It merits the gift of something in ourselves. It is not an easy faith or a cheap faith. The idea is not only to have faith, but to KEEP faith.

English Farmers Defy Collectors of Tithes

To defend themselves against seizure of stock following nonpayment of tithes, several hundred farmers in the Kent district of England have organized themselves into an army. They are working along war lines, and when three large trucks were sent recently to collect at ten farms the representatives of the law were routed without any of the 89 lots sought. A body of men is kept on farms where seizures may be attempted, and a small army is stationed in the village square ready to hasten to any farm when the signal, the firing of rockets, is given.—Montreal Herald.

THEY HAVE FOUND A 3-MINUTE WAY TO RELIEVE SORE THROAT

All Pain And Soreness Eased In Few Minutes This Simple Way

Crush and Dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in Half a Glass of Water.

GARGLE Thoroughly—Throw Your Head Way Back, Allowing a Little to Trickle Down Your Throat.

Repeat Gargle and Do Not Rinse Mouth, Allow Gargle to Remain on Membranes of the Throat for Prolonged Effect.

Proves Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way... discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 24 or 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Alleviate inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

Ask your druggist about the recent price reduction on the 100 tablet size Bayer Aspirin.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

Reinforcements for the Republican State Party

After suffering defeat in the last election and especially in the state of New Mexico when we took our medicine like a man, as bitter as it was, with all the gracefulness we could summon—now comes what we might term as a light in the wilderness—a figure that will be welcomed in the person of Mrs. Albert G. Simms. According to advices from Albuquerque, she will soon launch a political movement, especially among the women for a campaign to begin in the near future to regain the state for the Republican party.

In an address to the Republican Women's Club last Saturday, Mrs. Simms claimed that her victory in Illinois in the congressional campaign was due to the perfect working of the Women's Clubs of that state.

She also said that we must prepare ourselves more now than ever before with strong political organizations for the election of 1934, and to this end she will make a tour of the state and address the Republican women and strengthen the organization for the coming battle.

Our principal opposition in the last election were traitors in our ranks, parading as "Progressives" and deserting their party in time of need—and who are now desirous of coming back from living on the husks of the Democratic party and signify a willingness to change their course—but will they? We have heard that before!

Mrs. Simms has never been guilty of deceiving her party; we can depend on her and hail her with gladness, her willingness to help us in the next battle.

Girls' Basketball Tournament

An event of unusual importance in the line of good, clean sport is being arranged which will draw people from all parts of this district. Plans are being laid for a Girls' Basketball Tournament to be held in Carrizozo on March 10-11. Eight teams have been invited to take part in the contest, namely: Alamogordo, Tularosa, Corona, Capitan, Vaughn, Hondo, Lincoln and Socorro, as we understand. This list may be changed before the tournament takes place. There will also be a prize awarded to the high-point girl and the one proving to be the most valuable to her team. The Carrizozo players earnestly solicit the patronage of the home people and also of our surrounding towns who are interested in the game, to assist in making this tournament a success.

Did Gov. Seigman pull one, or didn't he? He issued an order for the closing of all banks in the state, then advertised to the world his own bank in Santa Fe was to remain open.—Tucson News, Note—That's the way things break sometimes.

First Typewriters
Typewriters were invented as a means of enabling blind persons to "write." The first typewriter made its appearance in 1714, but it was not until 1865 that Foucault and Beach introduced machines with printed embossed letters which drew their attention to their possibilities for general use. After years of experiment Mr. Charles Sholes produced a practical machine for general use, which was put on the market in New York, in 1874.

DE E. BRADSHAW, NEWLY ELECTED HEAD OF W. O. W., IS NATIONALLY KNOWN
As General Attorney He Was Active Legally in Nearly Every State
De Emmet E. Bradshaw, who was elected president of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Association at a special meeting of Consult for the states of Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi before being elected to the Board of Directors while J. C. Root was first president of W. O. W.
Mr. Bradshaw came to Omaha in 1916 as General Attorney and with Mr. Fraser reorganized the Association into the strongest fraternal insurance company in the world. He engaged in litigation on behalf of W. O. W. in nearly every state of the Union and in federal courts with a very large degree of success. Members of the Board of Directors regard Mr. Bradshaw as one of the outstanding legal minds in the fraternal insurance field. His profound knowledge of insurance law and his natural leadership are his chief assets.
"No man was ever more fortunate than I in his mother," said Mr. Bradshaw. "Her loving prayers follow me all the days of my life, and I owe all of my success to the early training and care she gave me. I am glad to say that though she is 90 years old, she is still able to get around the house, taking care of her duties, making quilts, knitting lace."
Mr. Bradshaw is a past president of the Fraternal Society Law Association and also of the Legal Section of the National Fraternal Congress. As general attorney, Mr. Bradshaw approved more than $200,000,000 of bonds purchased for the organization, and is largely responsible for the excellent securities it has in its portfolio.
W. O. W. has had a steady consistent growth during the 42 years of its existence. It has approximately 400,000 members throughout the United States. Its net assets on December 1 of this year totaled more than $110,000,000, which is an increase in net assets of $4,500,000 during one year.
Among the features of W. O. W. are Radio Station WOW in Omaha and the World Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, Texas, for members afflicted with tuberculosis.

De E. Bradshaw
the Sovereign Camp in Omaha, Nebraska, on November 30, was formerly general attorney of the organization for 16 years.

Egg Is Two Foods
The egg, from the standpoint of nutrition, really is two foods instead of one. The white provides proteins of high biological value for body-building and maintenance. The yolk supplies concentrated fuel for the body, protein and an unusually rich store of minerals and vitamins necessary for growth and development.

Mirages Seen No More
Certain parts of Kansas were formerly noted for the number of mirages to be encountered there at rather frequent intervals, but in recent years these interesting sky pictures have disappeared and the reason is said to rest in the fact that the state has been largely planted with wheat and the lack of variety in the landscape gives no opportunity for the formation of a mirage.

Prolonged drought caused the Red Cross to go with help to 53,000 families in the northwest. Here in 144 counties in North and South Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, Washington and Iowa the Red Cross spent $1,800,000 from its own treasury to feed and protect people through the winter and spring.
Other grave disasters were feared in southeastern states, where the organization spent $192,000 from its treasury and $66,000 local contributions to help 12,000 persons.
More than 50,000 people were homeless from floods in tributaries of the Mississippi river and again the Red Cross faced a long relief task, aiding these people. The national organization gave $188,000 and local contributions were $10,000.
The Red Cross always maintains a state of readiness to meet these sudden emergencies, and funds and other essentials to this work are supplied, in part, by the annual Red Cross Day, each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day. Every citizen can support this worthy activity through joining as a member in the local Red Cross chapter.

Lesson for March 12

JESUS MINISTERING TO THE MULTITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:30-44. GOLDEN TEXT—Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Matthew 20:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Helping Hungry People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Feeding a Hungry Crowd.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Meeting Everyday Needs With Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Ministering to Human Need.

1. The Apostles Making Report to Jesus (v. 30).

They had just returned from a most strenuous campaign of preaching and healing. Their ministry had occasioned a great stir. This was accentuated by the continued ministry of Jesus. They reported to Jesus what they had taught and what they had wrought.

II. Jesus Alone With the Apostles (vv. 31, 32).

The result of the combined ministries of Jesus and the apostles was such a commotion, with the people coming and going, that there was no opportunity for resting or eating. In this time of stress and strain Jesus invited the disciples to retire from the crowd and rest. Periods of withdrawal from the crowds in fellowship with the Lord are frequently desirable and necessary. The benefits of such retreats are:

1. Physical recuperation. We have this treasure in earthen vessels. It is absolutely imperative that there be periodical retirement for physical recuperation.

2. Spiritual refreshment. Even those who are engaged in witnessing for Christ need constant renewal of their spirits by personal contact with the Lord.

3. To get one's eyes off of self in case of either success or failure and fixed upon Jesus Christ.

III. Jesus Teaching the Ignorant Multitude (vv. 33, 34).

1. Thronged by the people (v. 33).

The wonderful words and works of the Lord and the disciples, brought the multitudes to them. To escape the throng they took departure to a desert place (v. 32). Seeing the Lord and his disciples leaving, the people from the surrounding cities anticipated their landing place so that upon the arrival of the ship they were already there.

2. Jesus moved with compassion (v. 34). Instead of becoming irritated by the intrusion of the crowd, his personal interests were forgotten as the needs of the shepherdless sheep pressed upon his notice. Therefore, he began to teach them many things.

IV. Jesus Feeding the Hungry Multitude (vv. 35-44).

1. Conference with the disciples (vv. 35-39).

a. The disciples requested that the multitude be sent to the surrounding villages to buy bread (v. 38). According to Matthew Jesus made the proposition that the multitude be fed (Matt. 14:16).

b. Jesus commanded them to feed the multitude (v. 37).

c. The disciples' perplexity (v. 37). Their perplexity was due to the fact that they were depending upon their own resources instead of Christ. To come face to face with the humanly impossible has a threefold benefit:

(1) It makes us realize our dependence upon Christ.

(2) It drives us to him for help.

(3) It leads us to give him the glory for the results. Though our ability to teach, preach, or to give be meager, when coupled with the Lord's ability, it is equal to any demand which may be made.

2. Jesus' method in feeding the multitude (vv. 39-44).

a. The Lord's part. This was to give instruction as to the method of procedure and to create the provision. He so increased five loaves and two fishes that the need of the hungry multitude was met.

b. The disciples' part. They were to have the people sit down in companies so as to facilitate distribution. They then took that which the Master had blessed and distributed it. The disciples' responsibility was not for the creation of the provision, but for its distribution to the people.

c. The people's part. Their part was not to create, nor to distribute, but to partake of the provision. Unless people receive Jesus Christ and the salvation which he has provided, they will eternally starve.

Stand Forever

The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever.—Isaiah 40:8.

Wait Upon God

That life is most holy in which there is least of petition and desire, and most of waiting upon God, that in which petition most often passes into thanksgiving. Pray till prayer makes you forget your wish, and leave it or urge it in God's will.—F. W. Robertson.

Furnace of Affliction

The furnace of affliction refines us from earthly drossness and softens us for the impression of God's own stamp.

Scenes and Persons in the Current News

Elephant Makes Fly Brush

The elephant is said to be the only animal that makes a real implement. It is not uncommon for one of these big animals to pick off a branch of a tree, strip it of all of its leaves but a few at the end, and use it as a fan to brush away flies.

Soviet Air Man Caught in the Air

An unusual picture made just as a Soviet airman leaped from his plane during the recent gigantic maneuvers of the Red army on the eve of the fifteenth anniversary of the revolution. As yet he has failed to pull his ripcord and should he forget to do that little thing you may rest assured that you are gazing upon his last jump.

Even News Camera Men Are Suspect

When President-Elect Roosevelt returned north from Miami, where his life was attempted, the news photographers were not allowed to approach him until their carrying bags had been carefully examined by the police and government operatives.

Immense Benefits of Research Work Shown

Research is continually giving us new uses for old products and is placing within the reach of the average American goods whose production cost was once prohibitive, says Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. We are accustomed to the use of aluminum as an inexpensive material, but less than 50 years ago its price was $12 a pound. Twenty-five years before that, aluminum was classed as a "rare" metal and was worth $90 a pound! That amazing reduction in cost which has brought aluminum ware into even the humblest kitchen is pre-eminently an achievement of tireless research. Industrial research is not only a powerful force contributing to business recovery at home, but it is as well a tremendous aid in the selling of American goods abroad.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified crocote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, crocote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to crocote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membrane and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Bronchial Coughs

Pueblo, Colo. — "For several months I was constantly made miserable by a bronchial cough. I would cough to music and was greatly alarmed. I would get chills and night sweats and felt so tired and run-down." said Mrs. L. Wyatt of 222 E. Fountain St. "My mother insisted that I take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and I certainly am glad that I did. It seemed to work on my system so that I picked right up. I got stronger, the cough disappeared and I no longer had chills or night sweats."

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Hull and Woodin Head the Roosevelt Cabinet—Congress Puts Prohibition Repeal Up to the States—Japan Invades Jehol.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SO THAT his administration might get a running start in the negotiations concerning war debts, world economics and other related matters that are worrying the nations, President-Elect Roosevelt made public two of his selections for his cabinet. These were Senator Cordell Hull of Tennessee as secretary of state and William H. Woodin, New York capitalist, as secretary of the treasury. These gentlemen, who, Mr. Roosevelt said, were "drafted" against their will, were at once associated with him in the preliminaries of determining the policies of the incoming administration in its relations with foreign powers. They became members of what Mr. Roosevelt has called his "unofficial" committee to advise him on world economic problems, and met with that group, which includes Bernard Baruch, Prof. Raymond Moley and others.

Mr. Hull, long considered one of the ablest men in the Democratic party, is not an orator or an accomplished debater but is studious, resourceful and has served his country ably for many years in the house and the senate. Before entering congress he was in the Tennessee legislature, and he served in the Spanish-American war as a captain of volunteer infantry. He is devoted to the policy of tariffs for revenue only, and believes that one of the basic causes of the business depression has been national isolation, started by the United States in 1920 with the erection of tariff walls which other nations were quick to copy. Prohibitive tariffs, he holds, have helped stagnate trade by creating a productive capacity in excess of domestic demand.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia was Mr. Roosevelt's first choice for secretary of the treasury but he declined the post solely because he believes he can better serve the country in the senate. So the President-Elect persuaded his close personal friend, William H. Woodin, to accept the portfolio. Mr. Woodin formerly was a Republican, but he joined the Roosevelt camp before last summer's convention and afterward was treasurer of a special finance committee that raised a large fund for the Democratic party. He has an international reputation as a manufacturer of railway equipment and as a banker and is now president of the American Car and Foundry company. His interests are not all in business, for he is an accomplished musician and composer, a numismatist and an art collector. He is sixty-five years old, married and has four children.

UNOFFICIALLY, the other members of the Roosevelt cabinet were announced to be these: War—George H. Dern of Utah. Attorney general—Thomas J. Walsh of Montana. Postmaster general—James A. Farley of New York. Navy—Claude A. Swanson of Virginia. Interior—Harold L. Ickes of Illinois. Agriculture—Henry A. Wallace of Iowa. Commerce—Daniel C. Roper of South Carolina. Labor—Frances Perkins of New York.

GIUSEPPE ZANGARA, the brick-maker immigrant who tried in vain to assassinate the President-Elect in Miami, must spend 80 years in prison at hard labor, if he lives so long. He pleaded guilty to deadly assault on Mr. Roosevelt and on three others whom his bullets reached, and was sentenced by Judge E. C. Collins. Two of the victims of his mad deed, Mayor Cermak of Chicago and Mrs. Joseph H. Gill of Miami, were still lying in the hospital severely wounded, and so there was a chance that Zangara, should the victims of his mad act die, would be put on trial for murder.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote a graceful letter of appreciation to Mrs. W. F. Cross of Miami, who probably saved his life by seizing Zangara's arms as he was shooting; and Representative Green of Florida introduced a resolution to have congress vote a gold medal of honor to the courageous woman. Government agents in Washington were investigating a second, apparent attempt on the life of the President-Elect, following the discovery of a package addressed to him containing a crudely wrapped shotgun shell. It was mailed from Watertown, N. Y., and was found in the Washington post office. Postal inspectors thought it was the work of a crank but said the shell was wired to explode if jarred or struck and might have resulted fatally.

SIR RONALD LINDSAY, British ambassador, immediately after his return from London held conferences with Mr. Roosevelt—Secretary of State, Stimson approving—and reported to Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, that the conversations had been "useful." What was said was not revealed, but Sir John said:

"The conversations are, of course, at present in a wholly preliminary stage and of an entirely general character, but it is not too soon to say that we believe that by a frank and intimate interchange of views between ourselves and the United States over the whole field of current economic problems, the way will be best prepared for the effort which the countries of the world must make together to assist in promoting world recovery."

Mr. Roosevelt also conferred at length with Paul Claudel, the French ambassador, and William Duncan Herdridge, the minister from Canada. In Paris Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour said war debt negotiations between France and the United States would be resumed after the inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt, but did not explain what form the negotiations would take.

REPEAL of the Eighteenth amendment is now up to the states, for the senate's Blaine resolution submitting the action to state conventions was passed by the house by a vote of 289 to 121, or 15 in excess of the required two-thirds of those present and voting. For the repealer were 108 Republicans, 150 Democrats, and 1 Farmer-Laborite. Against it were 80 Republicans and 32 Democrats. The action of the house was a reversal of its attitude of the first day of the session, when a resolution to submit unqualified repeal failed of adoption by 6 votes. It was in a way a personal victory for Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader, who moved the adoption of the repeal resolution and argued warmly and effectively in its behalf.

Though immediate steps toward the calling of conventions were taken in many of the states, the battle for repeal was by no means won when the submission resolution was adopted. Ratification by thirty-six states is necessary, and if this is not obtained within seven years the whole matter lapses and prohibition remains. Of course the wets are confident that repeal will win in the required number of states within at the most four years and possibly in much less time, and it may be they are right. Wet leaders assert that only Kansas, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Nebraska can be counted on as certainly dry, and Alabama, Vermont, Idaho and Maine are doubtful. On the other hand Bishop James Cannon, Jr., asserts that thirty to thirty-three states will refuse to validate the Blaine amendment.

Disagreement as to the method by which states' conventions may be set up may delay the functioning of the machinery of ratification. Some congressmen thought congress should prescribe the procedure, but Senator Walsh of Idaho held that all connection which congress has with prohibition repeal ended with submission of the new amendment to the states. This view also was taken by Representative James Beck of Pennsylvania, who, like Senator Walsh, is an eminent constitutional authority.

FOLLOWING a demand on China to withdraw its troops voluntarily from Jehol, actually by Japan but nominally by the government of the puppet state of Manchukuo, the main body of the Japanese army in Manchukuo crossed the border of the province and advanced rapidly toward Chaoyang, second largest city of Jehol. The opposing Chinese were reported to have fled, but immediately thereafter regular Chinese troops crossed into Manchukuo to join irregulars in an attack on the Japanese positions at Tungliao. The Japanese high command in Manchuria announced that it was determined to "annihilate" the 100,000 regular troops in the army of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, and that it might become necessary to occupy Peiping and Tientsin. As is his custom, the Japanese foreign office declared that Japan regarded the Jehol invasion as purely a local affair.

The Japanese delegation in Geneva maintained its uncompromising attitude as the assembly of the League of Nations began general discussion of the report of the committee of nineteen on Manchuria. This report is in most respects at utter variance with the claims of Japan, and the Tokyo delegates warned the League that a grave situation would arise if it were adopted by the assembly. Such action, they suggested, might upset "friendly relations between nations, upon which peace depends."

RECENT deaths included those of James J. Corbett, former heavy-weight champion, and Maj. Gen. William H. Johnston, an American commander in the World war, who won fame and decorations for his "extraordinary heroism in action."

PRESIDENT HOOVER, rather neglected in the news of late, surprised congress by sending in a special message urging action on eight subjects of legislation which he thought would aid in economic recovery. He asked that the present congress pass the bankruptcy bill, the Glass banking bill, a measure to increase the amount of Reconstruction Finance corporation funds for state relief loans, a federal farm lease bill and the repeal of the publicity clause in the R. F. C. act. The President also advised the ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty, the adoption of the arms embargo resolution and the starting of study looking to the expansion of the home loan banks into a general mortgage discount system. Mr. Hoover advocated the Hyde farm leasing plan as a substitute for the domestic allotment scheme, declaring the latter seemed "wholly unworkable" and calculated to do far greater harm than good to agriculture.

President Hoover

The senate did take up the bankruptcy bill, which had passed the house, and it also passed the Wagner relief bill, which increases the R. F. C. funds for state relief and goes farther than the President contemplated. It was generally agreed that his other recommendations would meet with no response during the short session.

SPEAKER GARNER dropped his plan to make Roosevelt a constitutional dictator for two years, and the house accepted the senate provision of the treasury and post office appropriation bill conferring limited autocratic power on the incoming President to reorganize the administrative branch of the federal government. By its terms he may consolidate or abolish any administrative agencies and their functions, but may not abolish or consolidate entire departments.

The house rejected the senate amendment directing the head of each department and independent establishment to effect a 5 per cent reduction in expenditures from appropriations for the fiscal year 1934.

Without debate the house accepted the "Buy American" amendment sponsored by Senator Johnson of California. It provides that the heads of all government departments must buy for government use only goods made or produced in the United States or substantially composed of domestic material. Every contract for construction, alteration or repair of public buildings or public works must contain a clause requiring the contractor to abide by the "Buy American" policy.

FOR the first time the navy now has a vessel designed and built as an aircraft carrier. It was launched at Newport News, Va., and Mrs. Herbert Hoover christened it Ranger in honor of the ship of the same name that was commanded by John Paul Jones. Our other airplane carriers, the Langley, Saratoga and Lexington, were designed for other uses and were converted. The authorized design intended the Ranger to be of Mrs. Hoover the "flush deck" type, but the navy is now trying to get a bill passed through congress to authorize a change in the plans to construct with an "island deck." In the first type of construction no superstructure is provided except a smokestack which swings out of the way so that the entire deck is available for taking off and landing.

The "island deck" type has a superstructure at the extreme side of the vessel, leaving practically the entire deck free for the use of the airplanes. The change, if authorized by congress, would entail an extra expenditure of $2,000,000.

AUSTRIA was greatly disturbed by a request from France and Great Britain that a shipment of 60,000 rifles and 200 machine guns shipped there from Italy be returned or destroyed, but after some indignant protests Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss announced his government would comply with the demand and the arms returned. Sir John Simon told the house of commons that he hoped the matter might be considered a closed incident. The guns, or at least a part of them, were believed to be destined for Hungary, and the French and English were inclined to hold Mussolini responsible for the seeming violation of the peace treaty. The Italian version was that the arms were sent to Austria by private citizens merely to be repaired and returned.

MORE was for President Machado of Cuba is at hand, for the expected revolt against his rule has broken out in many widely separated parts of the island. Skirmishes between the rebels and government troops were reported at various points and there were some fatalities. Groups of armed men were said to be starting fires in the sugar cane fields and driving away the workers.

RECENT deaths included those of James J. Corbett, former heavy-weight champion, and Maj. Gen. William H. Johnston, an American commander in the World war, who won fame and decorations for his "extraordinary heroism in action."

END TOOTH DECAY BY PROPER FOODS

Physicians Advise Liberal Use of Raw Green Vegetables and Fruit in the Diet.

Until very recently the teeth have been considered as a sort of accessory to the body as far as their nourishment after their appearance in the mouth is concerned. The condition of the teeth has usually been considered a matter of external care only. Many otherwise well-informed persons believed that a "clean tooth never decays." Others consider tooth decay as one of the ills to which man is heir.

In the reaction against these opinions in late years we have even heard doubt from some sources about the need for brushing the teeth at all.

The research work which has been conducted with monkeys shows that like all other tissues of the body teeth require nourishment and that the teeth are furnished through blood vessels and lymph, with the essential food. Any disturbances in nutrition may affect the teeth as it does other organs of the body.

When nutrition of the body is good the teeth are apparently furnished with a buffer substance which enables them to resist the onslaught of lactic acid, which, formed in the mouth, is probably a cause of decay. Lactic acid is formed from carbohydrate—starch and sugar—which remains between the teeth and around the gums after meals. For this reason it is still important to keep teeth, gums and all mouth surfaces clean. This acid is evidently neutralized by the mineral salts furnished by the "dental lymph," which also helps to complete the calcification of young teeth.

Dr. Percy Howe of Boston, who has been conducting research upon the subject of tooth decay for many years, has found that a liberal amount of mineral salts and the vitamins C, A and D, are the essentials in the diet to protect teeth from decay. He finds that the A as well as the D vitamin has a specific effect on the formation of the teeth. He feels that raw green vegetables and fruits, high in vitamin C, are protective. Doctor Howe feels that there is surely something the matter with our modern diet, and that tooth decay is a product of civilization.

Dr. Henry Sherman, professor of nutrition at Columbia university, agrees with Doctor Howe as to the importance of vitamins in the formation and protection of teeth. He made the point of the necessity of the supply of both calcium and phosphorus in relatively large quantities both to the mother before the birth of the child and throughout childhood and adolescence.

As the calcification of the teeth is not complete until about the twelfth year, vitamin D is the "mobilizing" factor in the use of these mineral salts which, however, must be supplied in liberal amounts. Experimental work with children, done under the direction of Doctor Sherman and Doctor Hawley, covers a long period of time and shows that a quart of milk a day is needed by a child for the amount of calcium needed by the growing body.

All the speakers who discussed dental nutrition agreed that tooth decay was a common disease. Of 800 freshmen who entered Columbia last fall, only fourteen were immune. Eighty-six cavities were found in the mouth of one boy.

As is always the case with research workers, each of the speakers reported his work as merely a contribution toward the understanding of a problem of nutrition which is puzzling and concerning us today. As usual with careful scientific workers, no claims of solving the problem were made by any of the speakers, but there is no doubt that they are on the way to an understanding of the cause of tooth decay which will allow us to institute protection and probably curative measures through diet and through mouth hygiene.

The weather is warm again. We like to play outside. Fresh air and sunshine make our cheeks rosy.

We had a party for Mrs. Relter. She is going away. We shall miss her very much. She told us nice stories and sang to us. She taught us a song about Little Cho-cho, the health clown. She told us how to keep well and strong.

The boys and girls are running a race with pony carts. The girls are ahead now. The boys won the last race.

Mrs. Garrison visited us this morning. She said we did our numbers nicely. She is a good lady and likes children. Come again, Mrs. Garrison.

Boys and girls are little helpers. They can help mother, dad and everybody. They can help to keep the town clean. We should not throw paper, peelings or any kind of rubbish on the streets.

We tried again to get the prize at the P. T. A., but we failed. Mrs. Johnson's room got it again. Three cheers for them!

We are sorry to announce that on Tuesday evening of this week, the Lyric Theatre closed its doors and will remain closed for the next month — perhaps longer.

In closing, Mr. Walker gives as the reason, the lack of patronage.

At any future time when he can feel assured of a more liberal patronage, he will open. Until such time, "Adios!"

Our Old Kentucky Burley is no mere like manufactured tobacco than day is like night — guaranteed free from chemicals and all other adulterations that conceal imperfections, detract the sense of taste and undermine the health.

We use the same method our grandfathers used in preparing tobacco for their own use — every trace of harshness leaves it — nothing to "bite" your tongue or parch your taste. Thousands of tobacco lovers the world over swear by its inimitable smoking and chewing qualities.
