

GROCE---BOUGHNER

On Sunday, May 7, at 8 p. m., the marriage of Miss Beatrix Boughner and J. Verl Groce took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Boughner. Preceding the wedding ceremony, Raymond Lackland sang two numbers, "I Love You Truly" and "Oh! Promise Me," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Burns. Immediately after the vocal numbers Mrs. Burns played the beautiful "Lohengrin" and then to the soft melody of "Mendelssohn" the bridal party entered the living room and crossed to the canopy of white wedding bells where the Rev. Lawson awaited them. D. U. Groce, acting as best man, escorted his brother, the groom. The men wore suits of dark blue and boutonniers of white carnation.

Miss Jean Hall, charming in white silk organdy, ornamented with shoulder streamers of pink and blue carried the ring on its pillow of white satin. Miss Wanda Groce similarly attired and most pleasing with her basket of flowers, scattered the rose petals for the bridal path. First came Miss Rhea Boughner, the maid of honor, appropriately costumed in softest pink silk organdy with two-toned ribbon sash of moire in pink and blue accentuating the delicate color of the gown. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations intermingled with blue sweet peas. Then followed the lovely bride, exquisitely robed in blue silk organdy, with the two-toned ribbon sash of moire in pink and blue enhancing the beautiful simplicity of the gown, carrying the bridal bouquet of rosebuds and lily of the valley. She also carried a handkerchief which her mother had carried on her wedding day and which was made by the bride's great grandmother. The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage.

Immediately following the ceremony a two-course luncheon was served by the bride's mother. The dining table was lovely with a three-tiered wedding cake, white sweet peas and tall white candles.

Beatrix came to Carrizozo with her parents eight years ago. She is a graduate of our High School and attended Business College in Abilene, Tex. Since her graduation from that institution she has been employed in the office of Attorney Hall. She is an accomplished musician and has a most pleasing personality which wins for her many friends wherever she goes.

Mr. Groce is the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Groce. He came to New Mexico from Missouri two years ago. He taught one year at Corona and for the past year has been a member of the Carrizozo High School faculty, where he has made an excellent record and will hold the same position again next year.

The young couple left immediately for an extended journey which will include Dallas, Galveston and many other southern and eastern cities of interest. They were speeded on their honeymoon with a shower of rice, a distinguished guest, Mrs. W. C. McDonald, wife of New Mexico's first governor, casting the first handful over the pair. They will return late in August to make Carrizozo their home. The best wishes of their friends go with them.—Contributed by M. L. and F. S.

LOCAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. P. Warden were here from their ranch north of Ancho Monday, interesting themselves in the misfortune of Little Morgan Maxwell, who was bitten by a rattlesnake at his father's ranch Sunday.

Supt. D. U. Groce, Mrs. Groce and the children left Monday morning for Forest Green, Mo., where they will spend the greater portion of the vacation period at the home of the parents of Mrs. Groce.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Skinner of Nogal, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cox and infant daughter Mary Ann of Fort Stanton made a pleasure trip to Hot Springs and the Elephant Butte Dam the latter part of last week, returning Monday. At the big dam, they tried their luck at fishin'; Floy caught a nice string of trout and buffalo, which bears a strong resemblance to German carp.

The Benj. I. Berry Post of the American Legion will hold a special meeting at the courthouse Saturday, May 20; 8 p. m. The new veterans' laws will be fully explained by competent authorities from Department headquarters. All ex-service men are cordially invited to attend. C. E. Freeman, Post Commander

Bitten by Rattlesnake

Little Morgan Maxwell, aged 6, who was bitten by a rattlesnake last Sunday afternoon, is gaining ground nicely at this writing. The boys were playing the game of hide-and-go-seek on the ranch and Morgan sought out a remote place where he felt sure that the hunter could not find him and squatted in a clump of weeds directly over a coiled rattler. He jumped up instantly and thinking he had evaded the reptile, hurried in his excitement to the other boys to tell the story.

His brother Frank asked, "Did he bite you, Morgan?" "No, but he nearly did," answered Morgan. In a few minutes they noticed a spot over one of his eyes and swelling of the eye followed. Mr. Maxwell was away from home and Mrs. Maxwell knew that no time should be lost, so she started with the child for town, and fortunately, they met Mr. Maxwell about two miles from the ranch house and he accompanied them to Johnson's Hospital, where the little fellow was given treatment. His face is still badly swollen, but as stated above, he is getting along as well as could be expected after the trying ordeal.

Coe—Cowan

In the town of Las Cruces on Easter Sunday, Harold Coe of Tularosa and Miss Hazel Cowan of Douglas, Arizona, were united in marriage. Mr. Coe is the son of Mrs. Cherrille Coe of Tularosa and a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wells of White Oaks. He is also a grandson of George Coe of Glencoe, an associate of Billy the Kid in the Lincoln County War.

The young couple attended the Tularosa High School, Harold being a graduate in the 1932 class. They will make their home in Douglas. Congratulations from their friends in their respective towns have been extended.

Mother's Day

Last Sad Rites for First Elected Worthy Matron of Eastern Star

The remains of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm arrived from El Paso last Friday night and the funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Saturday afternoon with Comet Chapter O. E. S. conducting the same, assisted by Rev. Jno. Lawson, who preached a short sermon, after which the O. E. S. took charge with Mrs. C. A. McCammon, Worthy Matron, supervising the beautiful ritualistic ceremonies.

The Worthy Matron was ably assisted by eleven Past Matrons, namely: Mesdames Maude E. Blaney, Elena M. Sale, Vena Elliott, Minnie Prehm, Meda C. Haley, Clara A. Huppertz, Mae English, Jeanette Lemon, Zoe A. Glassmire, Anna Stimmel and Miss Ella Brickley. The above named ladies, all of whom "had gone before" in the work of the order, also acted as guards of honor and escort to the remains of their beloved sister. It was an impressive scene as the Past Matrons, attired in pure white, stood at attention with the present Worthy Matron, while on either side of the casket stood other officers of the Chapter and performed their parts in the solemn rites for the dead.

A mixed chorus sang several well selected numbers after which, the remains were taken to the cemetery at White Oaks and there interred by the side of her husband, who passed to the great beyond about 14 years ago. The ceremony at the grave was brief, yet, like that which preceded it at the church, bore the same resemblance in beauty and impressiveness.

Mrs. Gumm was the first elected Worthy Matron of Comet Chapter No. 29, the first being temporary Matron serving under appointment by the Grand Chapter of the state to fill out the term. Therefore, Mrs. Gumm was, in an elective and official sense, the Chapter's first Matron.

So much has been said concerning the early life of the deceased that a review here would be but a repetition of the life activities of that estimable lady, so we pause at the sunset of a noble life and draw the curtain on a well spent existence. She leaves to mourn her loss, her only son, Dean; two sisters, Mmes. Laws and Stevens of El Paso and a brother in Illinois, who found it impossible to attend the funeral on account of the distance. To these, the sympathy of the community is tendered.

Carrizozo Wins 15 to 9

The Carrizozo Ball Team boys came out of their batting slump last Sunday and produced so many well-timed hits that the same spelled disaster for the Cloudercrofters. The team fielded at a good average behind the stellar pitching of the team's main cog, Pat Dolan. The features of the game was a freak running catch by LaFleur. Walt toppled over but came up with the ball in his glove. The next one was the spectacular slide of Chavez into the home plate. Manny was safe in the play, but the umpire saw it the reverse.

If you miss the Carrizozo-Tularosa game next Sunday at the local ball park, you will miss the best game of the season. Admission, 10-25c.

The New Mexico State Nurses' Association will hold their annual meeting at Albuquerque May 14-16.

Picnic for Music Students

Mrs. Kelley had planned an all day picnic at Eagle Creek for her music students, their parents and friends, on May 3. Due to inclement weather, it was deemed inadvisable to attempt the trip, so Mrs. Shafer kindly opened her home for the occasion. A chicken dinner with all the trimmings was thoroughly enjoyed by the young musicians and their friends. In the afternoon a very impromptu program furnished much merriment. The affair happily concluded a year spent in profitable study of music and we feel sure that Mrs. Kelley's pupils will later resume their work with renewed interest.

The Misses Viola and Annie Kimbrell, brothers Albert and Richard and Perfecto Sandoval, Jr., were here from Piecho last Saturday to attend the Golf club dance at Lutz Hall.

ANCHO NOTES

The Woman's Club met May 6 with Mrs. Barney Wilson. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Wilson. Roll call was, "Discuss one great man." There was no meeting on April 20 due to bad weather. The program for both meetings was carried out. Roll call was, "Birds of New Mexico." These were very interesting. The study hour was conducted by Mrs. Henderson, the subject being "El Moro," national monument located near Gallup. Plans of living room in the ideal house were brought in, Mrs. John Straley winning the prize. The social hour was spent with pencil contests, Mrs. Henderson winning first prize and a tie between Mmes. Neatherlee and Belknap, but a draw gave the prize to Mrs. Belknap. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. Favors were cunning little nut cups. Honor guest was Mrs. Neatherlee. Next meeting will be with Mrs. Belknap.

Mr. and Mrs. Frame were visitors in Corona Monday.

Allen Kile spent Sunday with the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Silvers were the guests of the Straleys Tuesday.

A large crowd attended the dance Saturday night. Cake and coffee were served.

Lackland—Herringa

At the Elizabeth Rooms Wednesday evening, May 10, with Rev. Lawson performing the ceremony, Miss Dia Herringa of Clayton and Raymond Lackland of El Paso were united in marriage. The attendants were Mesdames Elizabeth Gallacher and C. O. Garrison.

The bride has been a teacher in our schools for the past two terms and has been identified in most of our local entertainments. In school matters of an entertainment nature, she has always had prominent parts, some of which she sponsored and directed.

The groom is a former Carrizozo boy. About two years ago he moved with his parents to El Paso, where he has been connected with the XEAM broadcasting station, acting as an announcer. The newlyweds left yesterday morning for El Paso, accompanied by Mrs. Gallacher. They will make their home in the border city, we understand, and the best wishes of their friends go with them.

Carl Jones, accompanied by his sisters, Miss Grace and Mrs. R. R. Sale, Mrs. Elizabeth Gallacher and Dorothy Jones motored to Albuquerque by way of Hot Springs, where Dorothy remained for a short visit with her grandparents. Mr. Jones reported for duty to the Santa Fe in the interests of the Valve Pilot Corporation of New York. The ladies returned in time for the funeral of Mrs. Gumm.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Banks, Nonie Littell, and Miss Ida Cleg-horn were here from White Oaks Sunday to witness the baseball game in which we were winners from Cloudercroft.

Mrs. Kathryn Bilbo and mother Mrs. Spence were visitors here from Jicarilla last Sunday.

PERSONALS

Miss Thelma McKinney of El Paso, who had been the guest of Miss Frances Skinner for several days while on her vacation, left Saturday for her home after a pleasant visit. The two young ladies were chums in the border city when they were both employed on the El Paso Telephone Exchange.

Our old friend R. C. Sowder was here for a short time last week, during which period he felt free to tell us that he sold 400 head of cows to a Texas stockman and leased his ranch near Ancho to the party who bought the cows. R. C. made a good sale and also leased to a good man. Mr. Sowder will return to his ranch in Fort Sumner shortly.

Mrs. Tom Pittman, son Hugh, daughter Mrs. Felix Hunter and infant daughter Myrtle, and Mrs. Walter Bass were here from Cloudercroft Sunday to see the ball game. The Pittmans formerly managed the Lyric theatre here. Hugh was the first baseman last Sunday for the Cloudercroft team, making a hit every time he came to the bat.

Mrs. J. B. French and Mrs. C. T. French came over from Albuquerque to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm. Mrs. C. T. French is a cousin to J. B. French.

Mrs. Dudley Cornell, or as she is better known in the political arena as Mary Lee Cornell, stopped over here last Friday evening, registering at the Carrizozo Eating House. Mrs. Cornell is one of the best posted women in the state on the political situation. She is always identified in the clubs and societies of the women of our state, and more especially in the State Republican Woman's Club. Mrs. Cornell left Saturday morning on a tour of the eastern part of the state.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Garrison arrived home from Dallas, Tex., yesterday morning, where they had been to attend the funeral of Mr. Garrison's father, W. O. Garrison, referred to in our last issue. The mother, Mrs. W. O. Garrison will remain in Dallas for a week more, after which she will return to Carrizozo.

Miller French, who has been at Denver for the past six months with the Federal Bureau of Roads, with which government bureau he has been connected for several years, has been assigned to service in North Dakota; he will leave Denver in a short time. During his period of absence, his wife will reside at Albuquerque with Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, until he is changed to some nearer point.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brubaker and little granddaughter were here Tuesday, attending to some business matters and returning to their home in Capitan late in the afternoon.

The Misses Charlotte Rice, Black and Mrs. Moorman were here from Fort Stanton Monday. Miss Rice paying a visit to Dr. and Mrs. Laws, Mrs. Stevens and son Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Gumm, who attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm.

Washington.—The structure which we know as our currency has been undergoing an epochal change in the last few weeks that is epochal, and it seems entirely likely that history will so record it. America's departure from the "gold standard" that was ordered by President Roosevelt on April 21, undoubtedly will stand as one of the milestones of this age, and it is a thing constituting a new experience to all excepting a few of the nation's millions. They, and they alone, can tell of their own knowledge what happened in the "greenback days" after the Civil war.

In addition to the action of the President in ordering the country's currency off of its basis of gold, other and equally important phases of the currency changes have been accomplished in the time which we may later recall as the crisis of 1933. We have seen the most extraordinary power ever accorded to a President of the United States delegated by congress to Mr. Roosevelt so that he can exercise the unlimited powers of a dictator-over our currency within a specified range. He said: he considered those powers essential, and congress gave them to him without question.

Thus in the space of a few short weeks, our nation has seen its currency structure lifted bodily from the foundation upon which it has rested more than half a century and rebuilt into a fabric of flexibility equaled only by the possible changes in the coat of the chameleon. Within the range of the limits fixed, the President has been empowered, actually to prescribe the value of the money that you and I use.

But let us recount the events and understand what has happened, and see what they portend, if that be possible, through a knowledge of the factors embraced. Since the banking holiday of March, the money structure of the country has been imperilled; the situation has been watched by all nations, many of whom have been nervous, and frequent signs have appeared that the enormous gold stock in the United States was not regarded throughout the world as able to meet the demands should all foreigners having money in this country decide to withdraw it. The President, the treasury and the Federal Reserve board read those signs as dangerous. They saw, too, the tendency of American commodity and security values to slide further and further down. A choice had to be made. The President made it.

By one simple order, the President laid an embargo on exports of gold. In effect, he said the United States government will no longer permit anybody to pay their bills abroad in gold, because that is what happens when no gold exports are allowed. That simple order had a broader effect. The result of it was that the dollar in American money, measured as it must be alongside of foreign currencies, was worth less than when those abroad entitled to receive funds were able to get the gold if they wanted it. One may consider that the effect is psychological or however you may describe it, yet the end is the same. The law of supply and demand encompasses the currency like it does every other material thing.

So the President decided to allow the dollar to shift for itself in the foreign exchange field. In reaching that conclusion, he elected to provide protection against further declines, temporarily at least, in the prices of farm products, of commodities such as iron and the natural mineral resources, and of corporation stocks and bonds. Those prices automatically increased as the value of the dollar, measured in exchange of other currencies, declined.

To state it in another fashion, when the President took the currency off the gold standard, immediately there was the possibility of a limitless amount of currency being issued. If the currency were on the gold standard, each paper dollar was supported by a reserve of 40 per cent in gold and the amount of currency that could be issued, therefore, never could be more than two and a half times the amount of gold held in the Treasury and Federal Reserve banks. That amount is in excess of $3,000,000,000.

But the fact that there is a topmost limit beyond which currency could not be issued, because there is not gold to support it, is held by the sound money advocates to establish a unit of value of currency which is not susceptible of fluctuation. That is the reason they urge retention of the gold standard. Departure from the gold standard then was a matter of grave concern to them, for they believe the dollars they own will be worth less, measured in the commodities the dollars will buy and by the value at which they will be taken in trading with foreign countries.

school of thought that the dollar has fluctuated and that the commodities constitute the thing of fixed units of value. Consequently, when Mr. Roosevelt's action caused an increase in commodity prices, this group argued the dollar was and had been too "dear" and ought to be made cheaper. Similarly, they asserted there had been a shortage of currency throughout the depression and that there could never be sufficient currency if the gold basis were continued. This was so, they claimed, because there was not enough gold in the world to permit retention of a gold backing for each dollar of currency.

The strength of those favoring a greater amount of currency was increasing numerically through the last several years. Consequently, there were more of them in congress. This is attested by a vote which the senate took on an amendment to permit free and unlimited coinage of silver. The amendment was defeated, it is true, but the vote showed 33 senators in favor of it compared with 47 nays. That is the largest vote polled on the question in more than 30 years.

In the meantime, the President was getting ready for conferences with the heads of eleven foreign governments on economic and financial questions. Most of those nations were using exactly the same basis of currency as ours became after support for the dollar was withdrawn. He entered those conferences then on even terms, insofar as currency was concerned.

But the departure from the gold standard caused a need for new legislation. Hence, the President analyzed what was needed and asked congress to give him the authority to employ whatever was needed. He appealed the demands of the inflationists by telling them to put into the legislation authority for him to use any or all of their several schemes in his discretion. There is nothing mandatory about them. He can use the powers or not as he chooses, or as the pressure of public opinion makes a given course of action seem advisable.

Under the terms of the legislation, negotiations are permitted between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve board and the Federal Reserve banks whereby the Reserve banks would buy $3,000,000,000 worth of government bonds from private owners. The holders would be given cash by the reserve institutions in place of their securities. Thus, banks holding government bonds would be given cash instead of interest-bearing bonds, and the theory is that since the cash would not bring them a return, they would seek to make loans that would provide interest. If it works that way, it means that the banks would seek to encourage use of money in business enterprises. A condition known as an "easy money market" would obtain.

It is to be remembered, however, that the Federal Reserve Banks are quasi-private banks. It is possible for them to refuse to buy the government bonds in the manner suggested, so the law provides that the Treasury may buy $3,000,000,000 in government bonds and pay for them in "United States notes," just as were issued in the days of the greenbacks after the Civil war. This would pour just $3,000,000,000 of new money into circulation. It will have either gold or silver back of it, but it remains to be determined which and in what amount, so it is an inflationary provision.

In the case of purchase by the Federal Reserve banks of the bonds in question, the law provides that the Federal Reserve banks will hold them for a stated period, but if the new money was issued by the Treasury to pay the bonds, a sinking fund is set up to retire the notes. It is provided that at least 4 per cent of the outstanding United States notes would be retired each year through an appropriation of funds by congress for that purpose.

Another provision of the law allows the President to change the value of the gold dollar. Under the previous law, it was required that a gold dollar should contain 23.3 grains of fine gold, or pure gold as we know it. The new law, however, gives the President power to reduce that gold content by as much as 50 per cent.

The third major section of the law allows the President to accept silver from foreign governments in payment of their war debts to the United States. He is limited in this respect, however, and may not accept more than $100,000,000 in any one year, or about one-third of the annual payments in interest and principal. He cannot receive it if the price is above 50 cents an ounce. Present quotations are less than that. The silver accepted in payment of war debts is to be the basis for the issuing of silver certificates, but there is no payment due on these debts until mid-June and so if any of the foreign nations are granted the privilege by the President, there can be no currency issued against the funds until after June 15.

Placidity Only Desire of East Indian Mystic

Old India, says a traveler, has never known anything except the height of insolent magnificence and the depths of poverty. India lives today much as it lived a thousand years ago, or two thousand, despite its mountain peaks of thought and the nagging of the British Raj. Here is the source of that teaching which forms the basis of oriental philosophy, that it is not worth while for a man to gain the whole world if he loses his own soul.

The Hindus phrase it differently but that is the idea. It accounts, perhaps, for the placid, slightly pitying look which the Indian mystic gives the "smart European who comes to look down upon his civilization. You get that look from men who have nothing in the world to call their own, not even a rag to cover them; who sit in the dirt and smear their bodies with ashes and take what food the people give them. They regard the visiting westerner with detachment, despite the money that jingles in his pocket. A sheltered cave or corner of quiet is all they ask of this world.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Let Him Set the Example
El Paso Times:

President Roosevelt, in his address at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, called upon the nation's business leaders to increase wages.

Doesn't this seem a bit inconsistent in one who is now engaged in cutting the pay of federal employees, drastically reducing the compensation of ex-service men, and not only slashing the pay of the army, navy and marine corps but even throwing thousands of them either into retirement or on indefinite furlough at half pay?

If the United States cannot afford to pay its civil authorities and military forces the exceedingly modest sums they have been receiving, why does he think that business and industry are differently situated?

If the government must CUT wages, how does Mr. Roosevelt think others can RAISE wages?

When Uncle Sam starts giving industry and business his advice, he'd better practice what he preaches.

The Appointive Power

That a vacancy in the United States Senate will occur, due to the climbing of Senator Bratton to a step higher in official circles, it becomes the duty of the governor (and his pleasure also) to appoint a successor to that office. And as we all know, the governor would just be tickled to death to be United States Senator, we may look for the following kind of notice in the near future:

Executive Mansion, Office of the Governor of the State of New Mexico:

In view of the fact that a vacancy exists in the United States Senate, caused by the resignation of Senator Sam Bratton, and realizing that it becomes the duty of the Governor of the State of New Mexico to fill said vacancy, I, Arthur J. Seligman, Governor of the State of New Mexico, by the power in me vested, do hereby appoint to the office of United States Senator, a man who has been tried and trusted by the people of this state in many and various ways and has never been found wanting. This honorable gentleman, whom I'm about to mention, is the Honorable Arthur J. Seligman, Governor of the State of New Mexico.

Done at the office of the Governor of the State of New Mexico, this _____ day of _____, 1933.

Former Foes Meet in Common Cause

President Enrique Olaya Herrera of Colombia, S. A., (left) greets Gen. Vasquez Cobo, Commander of the Colombian Expeditionary Forces on the Amazon upon the latter's return by airplane from the front for a war conference with the chief executive. The two men were opponents for the Colombian presidency in 1930. Political differences were forgotten after election and Gen. Cobo was appointed Colombian Ambassador to France. When Peru seized the Colombian town of Leticia, President Herrera recalled his former political foe and appointed him army chief. With land, water and air forces, Cobo will continue his fight to retake Leticia from Peru. The Colombian forces are fortified by favorable international sentiment and a recent proclamation of the League of Nations condemning Peru.

LAST WORD IN AMBULANCES

FOR WAR USE—"If we must fight to defend our sovereignty, we're going to be as modern and as humanitarian as possible," is the attitude of Colombia, S. A., in regard to what appears to be inevitable war with Peru. Here is the first of the new Studebaker "Ambulances" ambulance, the last word in vehicles of this type. It was purchased by the Colombian government and shipped to the South American coffee-growing republic.

ORCHIDS.
From Colombia, S. A.

Vietcan orchid collector and largest grower in the Middle West is Andrew Benson, Des Plaines, Ill. Here you see him in Colombia, South America, where from 1919 to 1926 Benson collected orchid-growing specimens, seeking new varieties of the "Queen of Flowers." Such specimens and collecting were packed with painstaking care for shipment to the U. S. A.
Approximately 25 per cent of all orchids worn by American women are "queen orchids" of the original plants which come out of the Colombian jungle. While orchids are commonplace today, many of the most beautiful original plants come from Colombia, transported and cultivated, sold, planted and the finest orchids.

Iced Coffee Becoming Popular Summer Drink

Because of its refreshing and invigorating qualities, iced coffee is becoming more popular every summer. If properly made, it is a delightful beverage.

Freshly made, steaming hot coffee should be poured into glasses filled with cracked ice, and either served clear or with cream and sugar. To compensate for the dilution caused by the melting ice, the coffee should be made a little stronger than usual, about 1 1/2 tablespoons per cup suiting
the average taste.

Coffee, because of its general appeal, also is being used in countless recipes for the making of mousses, cakes, gelatine, salads and desserts.

Doubtless due to these varied new uses, as well as its increasing popularity as an all-year-round beverage in America, coffee consumption in the United States last year was 14.2 pounds per capita, the highest figure in history. Practically all of the coffee consumed in this country is grown in South America. More than one-fourth of the coffee imported for domestic consumption is grown in Colombia, which is the world's largest quantity producer of grades known as "milds," and ranks second in point of total production.

The finest coffees are grown on mountain sides at altitudes ranging between 2,500 and 6,500 feet above sea level. The topography of Colombia is ideal for coffee raising, because the country is crossed by three ranges of the Andean mountain system, on the slopes of which thousands of small planters produce the world's finest grades.

WOMEN ACTIVE IN WORLD OF TRADE

Woman's place may be in the home, but the annual reports just issued by numerous leading corporations in the United States disclose that she is also making a place for herself in the financial world through the medium of stock ownership.

A few years ago the names of women were seldom found on the rolls of stockholders, but if figures are to be believed feminine investors are encroaching steadily on a field hitherto dominated by men.

Furthermore, the women are not content merely to own a few or many shares of stock and sit idly by and let the men run affairs. Many women today are members of the boards of large corporations—and they are not mere figureheads. They are active members and the men have come to respect their judgment.

Stock records indicate that the women like railroad shares. One great railroad has 250,500 shareholders as of last January 1, and of this number 108,210 are women, or 43.19 per cent of the total.

Brokers who have handled their purchases say that the women are uncommonly wise in their selections, most of them excelling male investors in this respect. Moreover, when they lose they prove themselves to be good sports and accept their losses with good grace.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

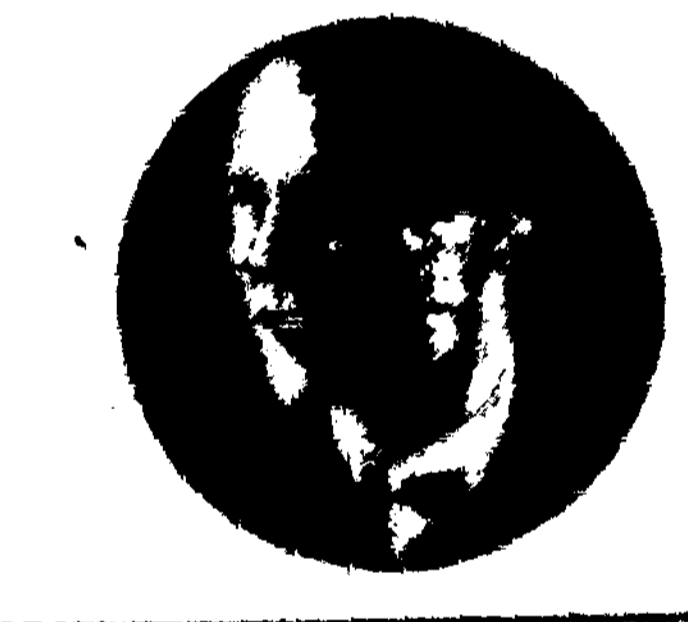

STOPS a Headache

There seems to be no safer way to end a headache—and there certainly is no safer way than two tablets of Bayer Aspirin.

You've heard doctors say Bayer Aspirin is safe. If you've tried it, you know it's effective. You could take these tablets every day in the year without any ill effects.

Stick to Bayer Aspirin. It's safe. It gets results. Quick relief from headaches, colds, or other sudden discomfort.

Just So It's a Smile It's good to remember that even a sickly smile is more cheering than a face that is longer than an afternoon shadow.—Toledo Blade.

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

SHE could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints—his wily she saw in his frequent colds, his lagged out, "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whipped. Coughs! The very morning after taking Mrs. O'Sullivan's to her remedy, she advised, he felt like himself again.

Indigestion, thin Blood

Colorado Springs, Colo.—"I was anemic and had indigestion. My food seemed to sour and there was a bitter taste in my mouth," said Mrs. N. O. Johnson of 2222 Vermont St. "I had been told that Dr. Cassell's Golden Medical Discovery and I raised weight, was stronger, and nearly as nervous, and the 'Discovery' entirely rid me of the stomach complaint. Since I used it headache is a total stranger to me." All druggists.

The Black Box of Silence

Past this, Landis' recollections were dim and confused. He remembered seeing the pistol upwung for a blow that descended once or a dozen times, he couldn't tell how many; that he had finally got a hand free to clutch at the merciless club that was beating his head to a pulp, and that when he did, there was a crash as if the roof of the tunnel had caved in.

Landis struggled from under an inert and heavy body. In the struggle for the possession of the clubbed pistol the weapon had been discharged and the bullet had plowed a furrow through the hair of the clubber. With a grim determination not to give up until he had made a finished job of it, Landis rubbed the blood out of his eyes, rolled the wounded man over, and made shift to tie his hands behind him with his own pistol belt.

That done, he did the same for the other man, who had not yet recovered from the smashing blow given him at the beginning of the mad battle. There was one thing more to be done, and he did it. Taking the black box down from its shelf, he laid it upon one of the cross-ties, and with a fragment of ore for a hammer, bent and battered at it until it was reduced to a shapeless ruin.

Ten minutes later, dragging the ruin after him by one of its internal wires, he staggered into the mouth of the old working where he had left Betty, and heard dimly her cry of dismay or relief, or both, as she caught him in her arms. After which the waves of a deep sea of unconsciousness rolled over him and he knew no more.

CHAPTER XIII

A Confession and a Temperature

When Landis began to come to a realization of things as they are, he found himself in bed.

At his stirring, somebody tiptoed across the room to the bedside and he saw Wally bending over him and heard him say, "Thank God, Owen, old boy! We were beginning to think you were never going to come back to us! How are you feeling?"

"Like the morning after. What's the matter with my head?" "Oh, nothing much; just looked as if it had been run through a sausage mill when we brought you out of the mine. You must have had the time of your young life with those two assholes."

"I did," said the Berserker, to whom recollection was slowly returning. Then, "Fill it out for me, Wally. What happened, and why did it happen? And is Betty all right?"

"She is. In the mine we found you and Betty, and, a little farther on, your victims. You must have put up a whale of a scrap with those two fellows—both of them with guns and you with only your bare hands."

"Not bare—quite; I had a shovel to begin with. But never mind the scrap. Tell me what Canby and his gunmen were doing, or trying to do, and why they had my black box."

Beginning at the Hillcrest visit Markham ran rapidly over the events of the kidnaping evening, the holdups on the way to town, his leaving Betty at the Stillings house and his return to the hotel in time to witness the arrival of the real Fleming, Cantrell and Marlin from Louisville.

"The clerk had just told me that you'd been called over to Starbuck's office, and knowing, or thinking I knew, that Starbuck wasn't in town, I went over to see for myself," and then he briefed the story of the bogus bookkeeper, and the resultant wild-goose chase into the northern hills.

"But still you haven't told me the why," Landis complained. "I'm coming to that. As I said, I was thrashing it out with Stillings in the lobby of the hotel, and just as Stillings said, 'Lord, I wish Starbuck were here,' Cousin Billy walked in on us. Then I did what we should have done at first; gave him the whole layout, beginning with the theft of the black box. 'Canby's the man,' he said; and in less than no time he had the sheriff on the wire and a posse sworn in and we were on the way to the Quavapal.

"As we were about to pass the Little Alice, a man came running out to say that somebody was digging into the Alice vein from the south; that the men in the Alice had just heard the air drills as if they were only a few feet away. That settled it, and within the next half hour everybody connected with the Quavapal was under arrest, and one of Canby's accomplices had weakened and told us that you and Betty were shut up in the old workings. At this, the posse split; half of it going into the old mine to look for you two, and the other half taking possession of the new workings."

"You found out the 'why' then?" "Yes, we found out what Canby had done. There was no mineral in the Quavapal; there hadn't been from the beginning. But Canby was stuck, himself, and he framed it to stick somebody else. What he did was to drive a tunnel all the way through the mountain to tap the real stuff in the Alice. When the robber tunnel got so near there was danger of the drilling and blasting being heard in the Alice; he was stumped until he happened to hear of your invention through one of his gang members who had spied upon you in your lab.

"We have found out that he is the secret head—and brains—of a criminal organization that is almost nationwide. He got the three Louisville magnates on the string and they agreed to buy the Quavapal if it proved to be as he represented it. The tunneling through the mountain had cost a lot of money, and Canby had put everything he had into it. If he could make the turf and sell the mine, he stood to clean up with a couple of millions, or more. But more money was needed, so he turned the black box over to his three yeggmans and told them to pick what they could in the way of ready cash on their way out here. And it was one of his little refinements of audacity to have them pose as the three Louisville magnates on the western trip."

"It worked," said Landis. "Yes, until we butted in. When the three found out we were on their trail, they yelled for help, and Canby jumped in to try and balk us until the black box had enabled the miners to get well into the Alice vein and the sale to the Louisville people had been made. After that, Canby could snap his fingers at all of us."

Landis made no comment for a minute or so. But after a little pause he said, "I'm mighty sorry for Betty. It's a horrible ending to her little romance." Then, "It was Canby who stole my box, of course. But who was the woman who helped him? Has she been traced?"

"I don't think the woman will ever be found. But we can afford to let her go. I'll quit you now and send the nurse in. You've had enough excitement for one day."

Landis heard her when she came in and crossed the room, and was inclined to be rebellious when he felt her sit down on the edge of the bed. That was an odd thing for a nurse to do, he thought. When she continued to sit there, he opened his eye a sixteenth of an inch to see what she looked like. Before he could determine, a low voice said, "Don't be so bashful, Owen, dear; it's nobody but me."

"Betty!" he gasped, coming wide-eyed. "Did—did Wally mean you when he said 'nurse'?" She nodded. "I've been waiting. The doctor said you might be yourself again some time today. Is your poor head hurting awfully?"

"It feels as if I'd lost it and got a cracked dinner pot in its place. What day is it? I forgot to ask Wally."

"It's Wednesday—the day after, you know. It was yesterday you had that dreadful fight in the mine."

He looked away from her when he asked the question: "What became of Canby?" "He is in jail."

"Poor girl!" "Why am I poor?" "I shouldn't think you'd need to ask. Weren't you going to marry him?" "No; not if he were the last man on earth."

"But, Betty—" "I know. Wally has told you his story, and now I've got to tell you mine. I'm going to tell you just what happened, and then you'll hate me. You know now why Bert Canby wanted to get all three of us out of the way, don't you?"

"I know why he wanted to obliterate Wally and me. But you—" "He was just as much afraid of me as he was of you and Wally."

"But you came out here with him in his car." "Yes; with daddy along. And we hadn't come very far before I was glad daddy had accepted his invitation. In just a little while I knew there was something terribly wrong going on, and that you and Wally were mixed up in it some way. After that, I tried and tried to find out what it was; why you and Wally seemed to be trying to catch up with three men ahead of us, with Bert trying to get to them first."

"Well, you know now, don't you? It was that black box of mine. Wally has told you about the box—my noise-killer—hasn't he?"

When she nodded assent, he went on. "There were three banks and a mine commissary blown up, wrecked and looted, on the way out here, and not in any of the places did anybody hear a sound."

"You think those three men stole your invention? Where did you keep it?" "In the safe in my workshop."

"When was it stolen?" "On the night when you acted so well as leading lady. Do you remember—in the first interlude, how the orchestra made a queer break, right in the middle of a passage?" "We all noticed it."

"I had the box with me, and I had it switched on for a few seconds to show Wally what it would do. After the play, Wally went with me to my lab, and we talked about it. Just before he left, I put the box in the safe, and locked it up. In the morning the safe was open and the box gone. I phoned for Wally and he came right over. We found the tracks of an auto in the alley, and footprints between the line fence and my shop."

"What kind of footprints?" "There was only one that was plain; it was the print of a woman's shoe in the soft earth under the lab window. Wally made a plaster cast of it, but I don't know what he did with it."

"I know." "You do? Did he tell you?" "No; but just the same, I know. He went straight to our house and went up to my bedroom and compared the cast with one of my shoes."

"What? Good heavens—you must have dreamed that!" "No, I didn't dream it. There was nobody but Olga, the maid, in the house when Wally got there. Olga told Wally I'd be home in a few minutes and showed him into the living room. When she got back to the kitchen she thought she heard somebody upstairs. She slipped up the back way and saw Wally. He was in my room and had one of my shoes in one hand, and in the other a white thing that looked like part of a shoe. She told me after he'd gone, and then I knew."

"You'll have to make it plainer. My old head isn't functioning very well, just now. What did you know?" "It all came to me like a dim recollection of a bad dream. I seemed to see myself kneeling before your safe and opening it and taking something from it. Don't you remember how you once showed me how to work the combination?"

"But, Betty! That's simply impossible. You couldn't have remembered the combination." "No; I'd forgotten it almost as soon as you showed me, and I don't remember it now. But don't the psychologists tell us that 'the subconscious mind never forgets anything'?"

"You're getting in too deep for me now. But it's all perfectly ridiculous, anyway. You wouldn't do such a thing as that!" "Of course I wouldn't—not willingly. But can't you imagine me doing it unwillingly?"

"No!" "Then I'll have to tell you something I thought I'd never tell anyone. You know Bert Canby drove me to the theater that night, don't you?" "Yes."

"After the play, he took me to Pozzon's for supper. I was awfully tired, and before the supper was over I began to get so sleepy that I could hardly hold my eyes open. When we left the restaurant I can just remember Bert's helping me into his car; and after that I can't remember anything until I seemed to come awake as he was helping me out at our front door."

"D—n him!" grunted Landis out of a full heart. "If they ever let him out of jail I'm going to kill him! Did—did he hypnotize you?"

"I haven't wanted to believe it; it's too horrible. But I'm afraid it's true, Owen. At first, I thought I'd just dropped off for a few minutes while he was driving me home. Then what Olga told me about Wally and my shoes scared me, though I didn't know then that your safe had been burglarized, or that anything had gone wrong. But when I went to my room that night and looked at the clock, I knew we hadn't come straight home from Pozzon's. It made me furious to think that anybody had the power to turn me into a puppet—a plaything! That is why I didn't object when Bert invited us to drive out here with him. I meant to make him tell me what he'd done to me—or what he'd made me do."

"But he didn't tell you, did he?" "You'd know he wouldn't. Every time I asked him about that drive home, he'd laugh and say that I went to sleep, and that he just drove around town for a while to let me have my nap out. Since we've been in Brewster I've felt that he was trying it again—trying to get the control, I mean. I could feel his will pushing hard against mine, and now I know why. He was afraid I might remember."

Landis was silent for a little time after she stopped. Then he said, "I'm pretty badly up in the air, Betty. You see, I've been thinking, all along—with everybody else—that you were in love with Canby. I was sure of it. Now you've left me sort of gaping. But I—I'm awfully glad, you know—for Wally's sake."

"For Wally's sake?" she said, with the quaint little grimace that had always made him want to kiss her. Then she laughed. "I wonder if there ever was another man so madly, madly, so exasperatingly—oh, I can't find words for it! Have I got to tell you right out plain that there has never been anybody but you, just you, always, you dear, dense, absent-minded, self-forgetting dreamer? Haven't you known that?"

"My G—d!" he breathed. "Have I been that stupid and blind, Betty? But you know, don't you, that I've always loved you, and that I haven't told you so only because I wanted to be able—I mean, I was waiting until I could offer you something more than my love and a bare living. And I haven't any more than these to offer you now, for there'll be no more experiments with things like the black box. And when Canby butted in I thought I'd lost you."

"Foolish boy," she said softly. "Don't you know you couldn't lose me if you should try ever so hard?" Then, "Listen—here comes the doctor making his rounds! If he finds me here instead of the nurse that I bribed to let me in, he'll murder me. Kiss me quick, dear, and let me run. And don't you dare have a temperature when he comes in!"

But after she had fled, and the house physician, bearded, fierce-eyed and savagely professional, had come and had applied his thermometer—to read it with a frown and a growl—Landis grinned and said, "Never mind a bit of temperature, Doctor. If you'd been through what I have, you'd have a hundred and live and still be calling it normal. I'm all right. You couldn't kill me now with a baseball bat. I've got too much to live for!"

Business Men's Club

At the 6 o'clock dinner held at the Carrizozo Eating House by the Carrizozo Business Men's Club, there were three visitors, Attorney Richard Kranawitter of Encino, Charles Madrid of Las Cruces and County Treasurer Louis Adams. Messrs. Kranawitter and Madrid were representatives of the Taxpayers' Federation, now conducting a campaign against the obnoxious sales tax law passed at the last session of the Legislature, known as Tax Sale Law SB-144, which has caused more unrest and disturbance than anything that has been hung on a tax-ridden people since statehood.

These gentlemen made splendid talks in which they explained that they were canvassing the state in the interest of the referendum which if signed by a sufficient amount of voters, will render the law inoperative or the remedy may be made at a special session of the legislature. The club was well pleased with the talks and so expressed their pleasure by endorsing the movement. Mr. Adams also made a splendid talk to the club.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Capitan will give an entertainment at the Gym, Thursday, May 18, at 2 p. m. A good time guaranteed to all. Plenty of good things to eat. Adults 25c; children 10c. Come!
