

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

In Oklahoma City last week, a baby, Malcolm Justice, Jr., surprised his parents by whistling different tunes he had heard over the radio. He whistled "Sidewalks of New York," "In Her Hair She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and ended up with "How Dry I Am." The baby is eighteen months old.

Shenandoah, Iowa, has many things to its credit, but this one beats the band. 11,000 roosters were placed in cars for shipment one evening. The next morning at daybreak, one of the roosters began to crow and all of the flock joined in making the din so loud that it awakened the entire town.

R. T. May of Clovis, N. M., owned an old-fashioned wall clock and gave it to one of his daughters. At that time, he went to live with another daughter in a distant part of town. On the night of July 17, R. T. died at the hour of 11:55. At 11:50, the old clock stopped.

At Spearville, Kansas, one night last week, fire broke out in one of the hotels. The firemen entered and in one room they found two men sound asleep. On being awakened, they found that their pants were burned to a crisp. They had to lay in bed the next morning until people could provide them with pants before making their appearance to the public.

It required the assistance of most of the police force in Denver to find Frank M. Taylor, 35, who after being traced to the residence of Mrs. Minnie Flagg, 51, found the couple were happily married. After being located, they giggled like a pair of kids and said they had eloped because they were afraid that their 32 children and 42 grandchildren would object to the marriage.

In a rock quarry near Burlington, Iowa, after blasting a huge rock, workmen found a frog in a pocket in the middle of the solid rock. How it ever got there, or how long it had been there, they will never know. But it had been there so long that it had a path worn deeply around the pocket, where it had done its daily dozen for years unknown. There was no moisture in the pocket, neither was there any food for Senor Frog. When liberated, it hopped off as though nothing had happened.

The out of the ordinary fact that two negro aviators have just completed a trip from an eastern point to Los Angeles, reminds us of the negro, who after being taken for an airplane ride, thanked the airman for the "two rides" in answer to which the aviator said: "What do you mean, two rides?" The darkey, with his eyes as big as saucers, answered, "de fust one, an' de LAST ONE!"

Texas officers from two different counties have been here for several days and after a conference Wednesday, Ed Stanton, alias "Perchmouth" and "Parrot Face," was taken to a preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace Elrdo Chavez, pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder and waived examination. He was taken back to jail where after a consultation with Sheriff McCamant and the Texas officers, he first decided to stand trial here and failing in his attempt to secure an attorney, he waived extradition and agreed to go with the officers to Tulla, Texas. There he will face murder charges for the slaying of the sheriff and a deputy of that county after he and the dead bandit, Hunsucker, had robbed a filling station. The body of Hunsucker, riddled with bullets, was buried here Wednesday afternoon.

LOCAL MENTION

Tom Jones Killed Sunday By Gangsters

It had been pretty well known for the past week that Sheriff McCamant and his deputies had been working in the vicinity of Corona for at least two members of a gang, who have been working mainly in Texas. The hunt had seemed to have lost its interest until Sunday.

Word reached here Sunday afternoon that the sheriff's force consisting of that official, deputies Tom Jones, Hubert Reynolds and Jack Davidson had surprised two men near Ramon, twenty miles east of Corona, and that Tom had been killed in the following manner:

The officers were running at a low rate of speed when they saw a man suddenly spring from a bunch of small undergrowth and hide in another close by. They alighted from the car, Jones going to a low spot nearby while the others remained near the car. Tom crouched close to the ground and called to the man to "stick 'em up," thus giving him a chance for his life. Instead of coming out, one of the two fired, the ball striking Tom over the left eye and killing him instantly.

The other three officials, seeing Tom was shot, began firing into the clump of underbrush. During the fight, one of the men, afterwards identified as "Parrot Mouth" or as he was known in some police circles, "Parrot Face," made his escape. The other bandit, afterwards identified as Glenn Hunsucker, was killed by the officers and both bodies brought to Carrizozo.

The hunt for Parrot Face continued until Monday when the posse surrounded him and he gave himself up without resistance. He was brought here and landed in jail. On receipt of the news a big crowd gathered around the jail. Sympathy for the widow and children of the dead deputy led to many utterances that Parrot Mouth should be lynched; for although there is no positive proof, it is firmly believed that it was he who killed Tom Jones, instead of Hunsucker.

Tuesday morning, officers came from Tulla, Texas, and identified the body of the dead bandit as that of Glenn Hunsucker. Parrot Face needed no identification, for they all knew him. The two bandits have been working together for several years. In robbing a filling station last fall in Tulla, Texas, they killed the sheriff and a deputy. They escaped from the Oklahoma penitentiary since which time, they have been robbing banks and have killed as many as seven in all, according to the officers who were here this week.

They have been hunted from the wilds of our western states to the crowded thoroughfares of the large cities, but had evaded arrest and it was up to little Lincoln County, New Mexico, to run them down. Hunsucker was a young man in his twenties and according to the Texas officers, he was a second Billy the Kid in the making, tallying very closely in every description to the terror of the southwest.

Much credit is due the sheriff and deputies, but the sadness that overspreads our community at the death of Tom Jones will require time alone to heal.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

It's Impossible

Oh, how wonderful! The information now comes to us, that the present national administration is so tender-hearted that it is going to keep most all of the Republican postmasters under the civil service rule. While that statement, made by the noted columnist, Arthur Brisbane, looks well in print, it is as far from the truth as anything can be.

While Mr. Roosevelt has many Republicans to thank for his victory, it does not follow that he owes them anything for their services. This country is Republican in politics. Without Republican votes, no Democrat can be elected to the presidency. That is an established fact. But nevertheless, it was a Democratic victory and the appointments to be made should and will come from the Democratic ranks. To give those appointments to renegade Republicans, would be placing a small premium on the services of those who are identified in Democratic circles. It will not be done.

How does such a statement as the above corresponds with firing of thousands of Republicans in the civil service to make places for Democrats in the near future? We are among those who believe that "to the victors belong the spoils." In other words, postmasters, as they have always been, will be chosen from the Democratic party, else the President is untrue to his party. It belongs to them and they should have the offices. Tender-heartedness is one thing and politics is another.

The delegation to the great economic conference that met in London, spent millions of taxpayers' money and accomplished nothing except a "razzberry," was composed entirely of Democrats with the exception of one, so that all he could say was "Bueno." The only Republicans who will be left in office will be the ones whose terms have not expired. And that will be called keeping Republicans in office, while the President winks the other eye and waits until those terms have expired so that they may be filled with Democrats. As we have said before, "watch the smoke."

Big Rodeo

George Clements, Jr., and Refugio Lucero are staging a big rodeo tomorrow, July 22, on the Refugio Lucero Ranch near Corona. A big dance will be given at night with music from Carrizozo. Come all!

A Dictatorship?
by
LEONARD A. BARRETT

In the judgment of a large number of persons, the representative form of government in our country seems to be breaking down. The unprecedented power which congress has vested in the President makes it appear as though we are now functioning under a dictatorship. Comparing our country with Italy, some persons have loudly and even boastfully proclaimed that there is very little difference between the power vested in Mussolini and in our own President, both being that of a dictator.

The interesting thing about this criticism is that it is not only very obviously true when judged by only a cursory evaluation of the facts, but when dispassionately studied in the light of the real facts, the criticism is found to be very untrue. The power vested by congress in the President is practically the same as was vested in Woodrow Wilson at the time this country entered the World war. By means of this extraordinary power, the President was able to mobilize an army and get things done more speedily; he was able to eliminate all red tape by not having to refer details to congress. So, the power now vested in the President is by no means a new or untried experiment. It has been exercised before with great advantage and to the best interests of our country.

It also should be remembered that there is a very important difference between the status of this delegated power in Italy and the United States. In the case of our President the power can be returned at any time to congress by a two-thirds vote. There is also no question but that if this invested power were directed toward dangerous ends it would be revoked instantly. The condition in Italy is quite different. Only nominally can it be said that Mussolini is responsible to the king. He is the government with no probability of a recall of that dictatorship, except by force, as might be created by a revolution. In our country it is an emergency measure only, and we can be sure will be voluntarily returned to congress when no longer needed. There is not the slightest possibility that the citizens of our country would ever tolerate, even for a moment, any substitute for our representative form of government. Let no person fear that the Constitution of the United States will ever become impaired.

USES CHICKENS TO SAVE SUGAR BEETS

Farmer Allows Cockerels to Feast on Insects.

A Colorado farmer saved his sugar beet crop last year by letting his 300 young cockerels run in the field and feast on insect worms and webworms which infested it.

At the same time neighbors around him lost practically all of their beets to these destructive insect pests. When he first noticed the worms moving in on his young beets, the World War veteran and former Colorado Aggie student pulled both brooders in which the Leghorn cockerels were housed to the edge of the field and turned them loose.

The birds spread out, all over the field and followed along the rows, gobbling up the worms on one plant after another, the farmer told the extension poultryman for the agricultural college. It was much cheaper than spraying to kill the worms, he says. At the same time the young roosters grew rapidly.

Not a single beet was lost to the worms, he says, but a few plants were destroyed by being trampled by the chickens near the brooder houses. This could largely be prevented, it is believed, by placing the brooder houses some distance apart, and perhaps not too close to the beets.

It is suggested that other sugar beet growers might try the plan in controlling insect pests. It is recommended that cockerels used for this purpose be fed a grain ration for two or three weeks to put them into condition for the market. Large flocks of young turkeys have been used to control alfalfa webworms in many instances.

Keep the Cooties Off

Biddy, Out of Henhouse

Any ex-soldier can sympathize most heartily with the plight of a hen or a pullet shut up with a good infestation of lice to make things lively for her.

The A. E. F. boys know how to get rid of their unwelcome visitors but unfortunately Biddy cannot "read her shirt." Neither can she dip her clothes in hot water or use a flat-iron.

It is easy, however, to put her through a delousing process which will leave her clean and free from vermin. Just a little nicotine solution painted along the tops of the roosts will furnish fumes which knock dead the lice that are on the birds. Experiments carried on privately and by experiment station officials, under the most carefully controlled scientific conditions, prove this solution to be almost infallible as a louse destroyer. If mites are present in the house, this treatment with the nicotine solution will destroy numbers of them. However, in addition, the house should be thoroughly cleaned up and sprayed with a solution made up of three tablespoonfuls of nicotine solution to a gallon of water to which a cube of soap one inch each way, has been added.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Summer Feeding Pays

Flock owners sometimes feel that because their hens are not laying so much in the summer it is not necessary to feed them as well as they do earlier in the year. This is a mistake, for neither body condition nor egg production can be maintained under these conditions, says a writer in Successful Farming. Adult birds should be given careful attention as to feeding, since the maintenance of egg production will add considerably to the profits. This means seeing to it that they get a good egg-laying mash all the time and that this mash is supplemented by a grain ration fed at the rate of about ten pounds per 100 birds per day. An additional reason for feeding an egg-laying ration is that it is impossible to cull accurately unless an egg ration is fed. The proper feeding of adults also serves to prevent a molt. The longer a molt can be prevented, the better. As a rule the later that birds molt, the shorter time it takes them to get over it.

Poultry Briefs

A bantam rooster hatched at Leesburg, Ga., is so small its owner keeps it in a bird cage.

Grain is fed primarily for maintaining the body, whereas the mash contains the nutrients necessary for egg production.

The largest Asiatic roosters are the abnormal giants of races in which the males that are best in flesh development weigh about 12 pounds.

Massachusetts Extension Poultryman W. C. Monahan offers as the best substitute for "luck" in growing chickens "clean chicks, clean brooders, clean lands, clean feeding and watering, and clean management"—a worthwhile program.

The tobacco plant contributes still another valuable product to the poultry keeper. It is a new nicotine compound that is effective as a single dose flock treatment for intestinal parasites. Don't confuse this with tobacco dust, which is a repeat proposition.

WHEN NEIGHBORS 'DROP IN'

Handy "Shelf of Welcome" Will Be Found Invaluable to Hostess Called Upon to Provide for Unexpected Guest or Guests.

By EMILY POST
Author of "Etiquette, The Book of Social Usage," "Personality of a House," Etc.

Elaborating on a subject of more than usual interest to all hospitably inclined, but sometimes puzzled, hostesses, the following, written by an accepted authority, is self-explanatory:

"In answer to an article which I wrote a short time ago, about unthinking visitors, I have been literally deluged with letters by air mail and otherwise. Most of them have given further examples of inconsiderate visitors; a very few protested that I made my example hosts and hostesses innately inhospitable. The other letters have sympathized, and many have asked that I devise a means whereby an unexpected visitor or two might be asked to stay."

"First of all then, let me say that I am sorry if I made my hostesses appear unfriendly. It does not seem to me that a hostess is inhospitable because she finds it inconvenient that neighbors, or more especially acquaintances, should choose the hour of mealtime to pay a visit. In fact, one of the letters on my desk at this moment is from a hostess whose situation almost duplicates that of my heroine. Her own particular distress is caused by a clergyman who has been a cherished friend of her family for many years. She and her husband 'think the world of him' and would be only too glad to welcome him for dinner or supper, or even breakfast, as often as he could come, if only he would not make his unannounced appearance within a minute or two of mealtime, and often with a total stranger in tow.

"Heretofore she has contrived to give him a meal of sorts, but last Sunday evening he arrived just as she and her husband and son had seated themselves at table, and with him were two strangers. By unlucky chance their supper, made up of remnants left from dinner, was not over-generous for three, and the larder was literally empty. There was nothing to do but hurry into the living room to receive him and sit there all evening—all six of them probably supperless.

"Just why this particular hostess hesitates to ask the clergyman not to put her in this same situation again, I cannot imagine. It would seem simple enough to write him exactly why she could not invite them for supper. He will no doubt answer that it did not matter what she served or where she served it. To which she will have to reply that to her both mattered very much indeed. At all events, that hungry evening will perhaps linger in his memory and remind him to let her know in time to be prepared before he comes again.

"As a matter of fact, it would be easy enough—if it were not a question of empty purse—to be prepared by always keeping what might be called a Jack Horner Shelf of Welcome. This term is totally unknown to etiquette, and is intended merely as a suggestion—to young housekeepers especially—that hospitality is limited only by the trouble you are willing to take plus a little commonplace forehandness. You could go far beyond preparations for an extra two or three and prepare as easily for an extra dozen.

"Let us say that you and your husband love people, which is exactly why friends are inclined to swarm into your house late in the afternoon, on holidays especially, when markets are shut; let us say your cook is out, or that you have no cook, or anyone. At all events, let us say a lot of people come in for tea, stay and stay until it gets to be dinnertime. John, your husband, shows symptoms, which you know very well are hungry symptoms—and still your friends stay. In your own mind you go over the foods in the ice box. Your perfectly good supper for two might do for three, but at the moment you are ten or eleven. You could not send eleven at your dining table even had you expected them for supper. You cannot ask your visitors to go home; moreover you would not want them to leave if John were not hungry—and you perhaps hungry, too, and from their lingering behavior, dinner is seemingly the last thing your friends are worrying about.

"Therefore, in answer to you whose situation is often this exactly, let us devise, ever-ready preparations. Why not keep in the attic, or any storage space anywhere, enough camp chairs and card tables of the same size, which can be stood about separately or put together as a single long table across the end of the living room, with covers of red cotton damask or of anything, which suggests a picnic rather than the white cloth of a conventional table?

"A Jack Horner Shelf of Welcome means merely that a shelf of provisions is sealed over with paper pasted across it like a Jack Horner pie, so that its contents shall never be depleted. Fill this shelf with your own choice from the unlimited varieties of foods put up in glass or tins ready to eat as they are or as soon as heated. Also, on this shelf in preparation for unusual numbers, keep high stacks of paper cups and plates, and napkins, and even spoons and forks. Then, when the party is over, all you need to do is to take off what you want to keep, and dump cups, plates and napkins into the garbage can! In stocking your Jack Horner Shelf of Welcome, be sure to remember that a man's idea of a meal is something substantial and hot!

"This description, as I said in the beginning, has nothing to do with etiquette further than making it possible to say at any time to any number, 'Do stay! We can have a picnic supper ready in a moment!' and the fact of making it purposely picnic-like in table setting is important because it is dearming to criticism."

Longevity in Knowing Just What Not to Eat

It is found that most of the reported miraculous cases of persons reaching the age of one hundred and twenty-five arise from an inability to keep accurate tab, and they occur in strange lands, where statistics are rarely reliable. In America, most of the examples of extreme old age are authentic; and it is almost unheard of that anyone passes the one hundred and fifth or one hundred and eighth birthday; but we believe the number of instances is rapidly multiplying. Centenarians are more numerous than ever before.

As Americans learn how to live, how to diet and conserve their vitality, they make their old bodies go on functioning for decades after the Biblical three score and ten. That three score and ten has been definitely raised to four score in thousands of examples. You eat your spinach—or whatever it is—and rejoice in your years. We haven't thoroughly found out, yet, just what it is that we ought to eat, but praise be, we now know most of the things we shouldn't. When we con over the weird dishes that medieval man used to consume, we are not surprised that he soon passed out and went to his medieval Paradise.—P. H. Collier, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Muscle and Brain in Close Accord

"Gymnastics" as Important for One as the Other.

"Following the leader" is characteristic of sheep; they would follow their leader over a cliff if he chose to take that route. They apparently do not possess as much as a speck of thinking power, of initiative. Indeed, though the comparison may seem crude, there are altogether too many boys who walk down the road of life jumping when a leader jumps, glad of a chance, it would seem, to allow another to furnish the brains.

The development of mental power, Alfred E. Parker in the second chapter of "Training for Athletics and Health" maintains, is one of the three sides to every life. Physical strength is another essential to health and happiness. No one gives a better example of what physical training can do to keep the body nimble and well developed than does Douglas Fairbanks of film fame. He realized that even in maturity to keep his body well he could not lose the spirit of play.

Character is the third side of every life, and in athletics every youth finds a definite challenge. If he can train to play a game fairly, win or lose, he wins for himself a moral victory. A clear-thinking brain is also manifest in playing the game skillfully. Alfred E. Parker says in Hygeia Magazine:

"Overemphasis, though, on the exercising and enlarging of your muscles will not bring complete health or ideal manhood. The health of the muscles is so closely related to the health of the brain that the two cannot be separated. A clear-thinking brain helps to guide the muscles in their exercise, helps to keep the body from becoming a slave to habits that are enemies of health. Surprising as it may seem, the brain must have exercise just the same as the muscles. Mental gymnastics are as important as physical gymnastics.

"In the early days of American football, coaches sought players who had plenty of 'beef' and knew how to use it. Today a coach is more often on the lookout for brains than he is for brawn. Football has developed into a game of strategy and individual wits requiring as clear thinking as was ever exhibited in a classroom. Football, though, is not the only game in which brains are needed. To play any game expertly requires brains."
