The most out-of-the-ordinary news we have received this week tells us that the town of Mountair, N. M., is not only out of debt, but having built a new town hall and fire station, she still has $2500 in reserve.

Out on the Kansas plains a short time ago, a traveler on horseback saw a cyclone coming in his direction. He dropped off his horse, flattened himself out and took a firm hold on the tall grass.

In Connecticut, the state law requires that a sandwich be served with each glass of beer. One local keeper used the same sandwich for three weeks, until one customer, failing to see the joker, ate the sandwich.

Julius Wahlberg, Philadelphia butcher, has the ambition to become a great singer some day. As he cuts meat for his customers, he gives them specimens of his ability in which he sways from the tragic to the comic.

A woman in Petoskey, Michigan, sued for a divorce because her husband kept the entire family awake unless the light burned all night and that was too expensive. She said: "He's a good husband and his only fault is his snoring when it's dark, but as long as the light burns we can sleep. Lights are expensive but husbands are cheap."

Dewey Stokes tells this one for the out-of-the-ordinary column: At Midland, Tex., a little old sleepy branch train had never been known to come in on time. One day, much to the surprise of everybody, the little train puffed into the depot right on time.

"Shipwreck Party"

A Shipwreck Party was given Tuesday evening at Community Hall by the Epworth League of the Methodist Church, from 8 to 12. When the ship was wrecked, the passengers made for the life boats in pajamas and negligees. Many were cleverly dressed in fantastic and practical costumes.

Fences Must Come Down Regardless of Protests

Luis G. Glovis, director of the investigations department of the interior has advised Frank Vesley, state land commissioner that secretary Ickes' fence removal order was "merely carrying out the mandate of the law and the department is without legal authority to grant a suspension.

Glovis said: "I cannot concur in your suggestion, that all lands in New Mexico should be withdrawn from all forms of entry. In my opinion such action would be inimical to the best interests of the public," he told the commissioner.

Field agents in New Mexico are checking violations while making other investigations. Office records are also being checked up for information on fences. When the state-wide investigation is completed, probably by September 1, letters will be mailed to all violators, notifying them to remove the fences within 60 days.

White Oaks Wins

The White Oaks "Wild Cats" left their lair last Sunday and invaded our fair city to seek revenge on the Carrizozo East-Siders for their defeat at the Oaks two weeks ago.

It was a hard-fought game from the start to the finish and both teams deserve much credit for the many good plays made on both sides. Lorenzo Garcia is entitled to the medal in this particular line. A fly ball was hit to rightfield and Lorenzo imitated the hawk by giving chase, the ball bouncing off his glove, but he made another stab at his prey and grabbed it in his claws.

A representative from a big circus corporation, which recently fell into the hands of receivers, interviewed officials of this station a few days ago with the object of selling some of the livestock of their menagerie department which he claims can be used with great advantage at this place. Three or four elephants of the large Indian species would efficiently and cheaply do the work of all the horses and tractors here, he said. If the stables here aren't big enough to accommodate them, they could be housed in the spacious craft shop building at night. As the goldfish kept in the water reservoir for purifying purposes are incapable of fulfilling this purpose adequately, it was suggested that they be replaced with two hippopotami and a bunch of African crocodiles because these animals have much more purifying power. A number of Bengal tigers, turned loose to roam in the surrounding hills, would hold the ever-increasing rabbits in check—they are multiplying terribly fast and God knows who taught them arithmetic. Much enthusiasm was shown over the proposition of having about a dozen trained gorillas to do miscellaneous duties, like pulling weeds, mowing lawns, digging ditches, etc. One real intelligent specimen, the representative stated, would even be able to assist the electrician in his work. The gorillas, when not working, would be kept in the big sleeping porch in Building No. 4, and Mr. Merrel, the foreman, would receive full instructions in how to handle them. It was also proposed to get some laughing hyenas to keep the patients in a cheerful mood. Messrs. John Gow, Jim Howard, Red Cavanaugh, manager, treasurer and captain of the ball team, who were also interviewed by the circus man, held a special meeting to decide whether the team should have a rhinoceros for a mascot or not.

Cunning Summer Clothes for Tots

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUCH a spurge as stripes and plaids are making in fashionland this summer, specially in the children's realm where gingham, gators and dimities and linens and other popular materials for little folks' clothes are simply running riot in the matter of striped and plaided effects.

To add sprightliness to the mode the little frocks of plaids and stripes take on all sorts of dainty organdie trills and furrows just like grownup fashions are doing. With these flattering organdie trimmings, sewing mothers need never be at a loss as to "what to do" to achieve prettiness for little daughter's summer dresses.

We think the little ruffled organdie caps on the red and white cross-bar dimity frock which the little girl to the left in the picture is wearing is a detail worth keeping in mind when next the problem presents itself as to "how to trim" this or that frock for Miss Seven or Eight. Each circular ruffle is piped with bright red to harmonize with the plaid. The skirt is somewhat gored and a slash of self-material is tied to a perky bow at the back.

Since these little caplets are so decorative and so easy to make, why wouldn't it be a good idea to make one as a separate item so that it could be worn with any number of dainty frocks. Accessories of this sort count as a real asset when it comes to "dressing up" children to occasion.

Concerning the charming little gimp dress of multi-colored gingham on the girl picking flowers, it is an adorable style for a child of six, or seven or so. The skirt is plaited and the bodice part is banded at the top with a clever yoke effect which provides straps over the shoulders. This little contrivance buttons, as you see, on to the fussy little organdie blouse. The puffed sleeves which give a broad shoulder effect are in keeping with present fashion trends. Piplings of the gingham relate the gimp to the dress. One of the very practical things about an outfit such as this is that it admits of several interchangeable blouses.

Brother-and-sister fashions are given special emphasis in the realm of juvenile apparel these days. Little sister's dress and junior's blouse as shown in the picture feature the effectiveness of bright blue and white striped broadcloth for children's clothes.

An unprecedented vogue for linen goes on record this season both in the adult and the juvenile realm. The curly headed youngster with the wide-brimmed hat is clad in linen even to her chapeau—pale blue handkerchief linen for her simple frock with little strips of navy blue linen stitched on its collar, the same navy linen binding and handling her hat, which is of heavy light blue crash linen.

Handkerchief linen of the sheepest sort and in pastel colorings is proving a favorite for cunning little frocks upon which exquisite handwork is lavished, especially smocking, fagoting and drawwork.

TIE-AROUND NECK

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

At a glance one senses the swagger style of this frock. In the first place the material of which it is made, a broad ribbed chardonise acetate in gleaming white, is a distinctly new weave which carries a message of unmistakable swank. Note the neckline. See the amusing way it is tied around the throat like a drawstring in a laundry bag. The same kind of cord (made of self-chardonise) which is used at the neckline, ties about the waist, knotting casually at the side.

Surprise Color

Red has turned out to be one of the high fashion colors, contrary to usual style procedure. White frocks with red jackets, red bags, gloves and hats are extremely good for mid-summer.

BLACK AND WHITE HOLDS POPULARITY

"Black and white" is the refrain of the latest fashion song.

Midsession showings in fashion houses displayed scores of costumes in the striking combination. White coats and black frocks, white hats, gloves and collars with black dresses and white costumes with black trims are all seen.

The white coat with the black frock is one of the most effective combinations of the season. Leona displays an afternoon frock of black satin printed in white leaves with a three-quarter length coat of white satin, while Brucyere shows a tea-time frock, having a cap sleeved white silk plique bodice and black silk skirt, topped by a long coat of white silk plique.

White accessories with black frocks are seen at smart luncheons and teas.

Paris Milliner Displays

Hat Made of Human Hair

Fashion has found a hat for humans made of human hair. We've worn horsehair hats and thought nothing of it or, rather, not much of it, except for weddings, garden parties, and the like; but now that the human-hair hat has come upon us we almost stagger with its oddness. For instance, a platinum blonde might wear a Titian hat, or a raven brunette would, perhaps, choose a headgear of snow-white tresses—black and white being the important color scheme from the Parisienne point of view.

These hair-hats are made just like any other hat that is knitted, crocheted or woven with soft threads of fabric, but as a final touch they are shelled so that everything, including the trimming curls, stays "put."

Autumn Already!

Just as women get used to the cartwheel hats of straw along comes the news that we are to be wearing large velvet bonnets right soon now. They are very pretty with colored print frocks and do wonders for enhancing the beauty of the eyes.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Reminiscent of the stirring days of 1917, leaders in the nation are calling for patriotic support.

Rallying for New War

speakers are abroad in the land with a call for united effort, posters flap from the walls of public places, all in a new war. But this war being conducted by our government and its people is a war to release the country from the bondage of an economic enemy, a final gigantic drive to restore a people to the plane where happiness can replace destitution, where steady employment can replace idle time and where profits will appear instead of bankruptcy.

The government, through President Roosevelt, is calling upon all and sundry to stand together again just as firmly as they did just about this time of the summer of 1917. Instead of the draft of men, however, the government is asking only that employers of labor, those who manufacture things to sell, those who engage in business of any kind, conform to certain rules. Those who buy the things that are produced by labor are asked to help in the cause by refusing to deal with the individuals who do not co-operate and agree to the rules from which the President expects so much good to come.

And so we have a national code, a national agreement, a set of rules of conduct. While the farm relief legislation is getting under way, and it is well under way, that farm prices may be increased, the government has attacked the other phase of the problem, namely, relief for the millions whose lot it is to live and work in the cities. For them he is promising shorter hours of work, a retention, if not an actual increase, in pay. Of the manufacturers and the wholesalers and the retailers, the government is asking that prices be not raised beyond the necessities resulting from increased cost of raw materials and wages. In other words, the government has asked that there be no profiteering, just as it demanded during the World war that some consideration be given the consumer.

No one can predict with what success this new drive will be attended. It is new in character. It is described by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the national recovery administrator, as an appeal to the conscience and opinion of the people and to their good instincts. I quote the general further:

"After four years of hopeless and seemingly helpless suffering and inaction it would be unforgivable not to open to the country the chance it now has under this law to unite once more and overcome and maybe to defeat the depression. This is a test of patriotism. It is the time to demonstrate the faith of our fathers and our belief in ourselves.

"We are a people disciplined by democracy to a self-control—sufficient to unite our purchasing power—our labor power—our management power to carry out this great national covenant with vigor, with determination, but with the calm composure and fair play which always mark the American way."

And true to the thought, the philosophy, of that last sentence, the government is seeking to obtain the co-operation of all of the people who must make concessions by having them make agreements with the President voluntarily. The President said when he signed the historical document that there would be no coercion. It is the American way.

The National Code

In brief, the government is proposing that actual agreements will be signed by the thousands who are being asked to make concessions. The mail carriers have delivered blanks to all of them. Each blank carries a statement of fourteen points to which the employer of labor, the manufacturer of commodities for trade, the retailer or other dealer, is being asked to subscribe. They constitute the national code. It is to be effective from August 1 to December 31. By that time, it is hoped that individual industries of all kinds will have had an opportunity to work out codes, acceptable to General Johnson, that will serve as rules of principles and practices for that particular industry, whether it be for the makers of glue, molders of pottery or the manufacturer in the heavy industry such as steel. The national code is a stop-gap, a bridge for the recovery machinery to use while a permanent passage way to prosperity is being erected on a firm foundation.

Industry must pledge itself not to circumvent the agreement in any way. Labor must pledge itself to avoid disturbances resulting from its use of the strike as a weapon. State boards are being set up—they have been named in most states—to help out the national administration. Child labor is barred. A week of thirty-five hours of work is prescribed and if the establishment must stay open longer, more people can have jobs, all at the old rate of pay.

While the recovery administrator's explanation of the code said there would be no coercion, it does seem pressure will be used if the basic agreements do not come in, signed, at a rapid rate. It may not be coercion, but certainly there is a tremendous economic force to be used, for the consumers are asked to deal only with those who have signed agreements to conform.

During all of this drive to get things going again—the code calls it the "President's drive for re-employment"—there are apt to be many unfair and unjust acts by the overzealous. There are certain to be recalcitrants who are unwilling to make concessions for the common good. But the most important class of all of those who may not comply will be those who are unable to comply because, to do so, they would be bankrupt.

I have heard it suggested in conversations here that the sudden move to blanket the nation with a voluntary agreement on business conduct might cause many persons in the country to become skeptical that things were not going so well. It was feared that those without complete information as to the plans and purposes of the government might look upon the far-reaching action as meaning that a new crisis was impending. The suggestions were not altogether without supporting reason. In the deluge of visitors who have come here to draft new codes in conference with General Johnson, many have come with doubt in their mind as to the value or the justice of the whole scheme. They were honest in their judgment and simply viewed the program as unworkable and as forcing them into unnecessary hardships. It seems, therefore that an analysis of some of the reasons for the national code should be made after it has been stated with some emphasis that there is no new crisis, nothing more serious than before, to be seen on the horizon of the immediate future.

Answering the Sceptics

It will be remembered that the announced program of the President when he started the recovery plan was to boost commodity prices. He wanted to see the farmers get more for their products as a means of saving agriculture from the inevitable bow-wows and he wanted the other sources of industrial life to profit. As long as prices were so low, there could be no restoration of normal business activity, in the President's view.

Carrying out this line of reasoning, there came the farm aid laws, the inflation authority, the farm and city home refinancing bills and other powers. The President withdrew government support of the dollar in foreign exchange by saying there could be no gold exported. Obviously, prices went up. They moved in a hurry. Speculation crept into the picture in a big way. The net result of this was that the cost of living moved rapidly higher but wages and salaries lagged behind.

The recovery administration thought the problem could be met by the industrial codes, but the codes were slow in getting started and numerous controversies have arisen between units of particular industries and between whole industries and the recovery administration. Delays were serving only to widen the margin between the two basic factors of wages and prices, and so General Johnson and the President put their heads together on the code which we have been discussing.

The recent nose-dive in grain prices occasioned quite a bit of talk in Washington officialdom, especially around the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Wallace, however, was the calmest man of the lot. He did not let the fact disturb him that wheat dropped off 25 cents a bushel in one day for the reason, he said, that Mr. John Q. Public was gambling in the market. Sooner or later, the secretary said, John Q. had to take a licking.

Break in Grain Prices

Mr. Wallace said, however, that public participation in the grain market was not the sole reason for the sudden decline. He thought the rise in price had been too rapid and that a reaction had set in. Another man in the Department of Agriculture likened the price rise to the growth of bean stalks in over-rich soil. It went all to top. But the secretary said the members of the Board of Trade in Chicago saw the break coming and they sought to protect themselves by calling for more collateral or cash from those who were trading on margins. That naturally had the effect of frightening many speculators, according to Mr. Wallace, but he did not blame the Board of Trade members. It was something of a combination of circumstances, then, that broke the grain markets.

Nevertheless, the Department of Agriculture is watching the grain trading through numerous pairs of eyes. One of the things it already has done is to invoke the provisions of the grain futures law which requires the Board of Trade at Chicago to make daily reports of individual trading where the amounts are 500,000 bushels or more. The purpose of that is to keep the department informed as to who the big speculators are, since it is conceived that a speculator can influence the market seriously with lots of about 500,000 bushels.

FIND NEW CLUE TO EARLY RACE

Excavations in Chaldea illuminating.

How the first clue to the real founders of civilization, in the valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers, hung on the finding of a peculiar brick and a bit of painted pottery, was told the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Chicago recently by Prof. E. S. Spenser, of the University of Pennsylvania, as part of the romance of modern archaeological research.

No Sherlock Holmes of fiction ever exercised more potent powers of deduction than the university men and their colleagues of the British museum, long engaged in excavating the site of Ur of the Chaldees, Abraham's home town.

Beneath 18 layers of debris, the dumped refuse of many a vanished people, there were found a number of bricks, flat on three sides, rounded on the fourth, deposited there at least 7,000 years ago by a race once thought to be the Sumerians, builders of the Tower of Babel.

But the novel building material was used long before the arrival of the Sumerians in the country of the "fertile crescent," Professor Spenser declared.

"At no other period was this material in evidence," he said. "We know that this type of brick was not developed on the spot, but was imported from elsewhere. It is much too clumsy and impractical to have replaced the convenient flat-topped shape of the previous age without any pressure from the outside.

"In other words the plano-convex brick was introduced by a group of invaders who, for one reason or another, probably on account of superior numbers or greater power, became the dominant force in the land.

"But we can go even farther than that without fear of contradiction. It is possible to determine the general direction from which the newcomers arrived. The plano-convex shape is obviously imitative of stone models. Builders are notoriously conservative and archaizing in the choice of their material. Having been accustomed to stone and finding themselves of a sudden in a region of this material, they promptly contrived to make artificial stones of clay instead of taking full advantage of the new medium.

"Here we have absolutely clear proof that the newcomers were mountain folk. This means that they could only have come from the north or the northeast. Translated into terms of race and language, and with what knowledge we have on this subject from historic times, it is safe to deduce that our impractical invaders were not Semites like the Sumerians, for these were almost invariably located to the south and to the west, and not Indo-Europeans, who were not to appear on the scene prior to 3000 B. C.

"They must have come from the mountain districts to the northeast or possibly from even more remote mountain areas. From the distinctive painted pottery of the time we can declare that these people occupied a wide area extending from northern Syria all the way to Baluchistan, the center of gravity being clearly in the Zagros mountains and the Iranian plateau.

"The people in question were beyond any reasonable doubt members of the same larger group that is still dominant in that highland zone, a group commonly associated with the Alpine race."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Bowden Victim of Politics

Dr. A. O. Bowden, president of the Silver City Teachers' College for the past ten years, has been dismissed, and Dr. Hoyt C. Graham appointed to succeed him.

It would seem that there is more truth than poetry in the statement of Dr. Bowden, made after being accused as being the chief cause of the College being withdrawn from the credit of the North Central Association. After making the statement that his removal was due to politics, he says that the failure of being Accredited by the Association was not only due to politics, but to lack of co-operation on the part of the Board of Regents.

The Board refused to allow him to sit in at their Conferences and their actions were unknown to him. Dr. Bowden adds that they were anxious to have something to criticize. His statement follows:

"With the Democratic county chairman as business manager of the New Mexico State Teachers' College, who is related to two members of the board of regents and with a wife and brother on the faculty and holding full financial power in the institution independent of the present situation, it is not necessary to explain to any great length to the people of New Mexico the reason for the innuendos, misrepresentations and excuses which the board felt forced to employ in justifying its action in summarily dismissing me without notice."

The damage done to Dr. Bowden cannot be repaired. It will render him incapable of obtaining a like position elsewhere, unless his friends come to his rescue. To say that he is a victim of rotten politics is no surprise to us and we believe him. Dr. Bowden is not the only one who has suffered from the evil effects of this state administration and he will not be the last one. It will be plainly seen by Dr. Bowden's statement, which we are publishing in part, that the board of regents is not only a part of the state democratic machine, but a family affair which reminds us of the old fellow, who in asking blessings at the table, would say: "Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife; us four and no more."

Dr. Bowden is a great favorite in educational circles over the state and to offset his popularity the board of regents resorted to methods which would cause the hardest-boiled ward politicians to hide their heads in shame.

UNTIL WE LEARNED BETTER

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our car bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change.
 We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body —nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays.

A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction.
 Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you.

By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.
 Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.
