PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. John Gutknecht were week-end visitors at Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Taos. While absent, they visited the principal places of interest in the northern part of the state.

Delegates to the Convention at Albuquerque were Mrs. Fred L. Boughner and Mrs. George A. Titworth of Capitan. Alternates—Mrs. J. B. French and Mrs. Paul Mayer.

The fifth anniversary of Bessie Sue Sloan was celebrated last Friday when her mother Mrs. Brack Sloan entertained for her. Halloween colors were used in decorations and favors. Over thirty guests presented their charming little hostess with many lovely gifts in honor of the occasion.

Hon. J. V. Taylor and L. A. Whitaker were business visitors in town Monday.

Mmes. J. B. French and E. H. Sweet drove up to Eagle Creek Sunday.

Paul Mayer has finished having his office on Alamogordo avenue, next door to the Petty 'Economy' Grocery & Market remodeled. Said remodeling is done with the popular Douglas Fir panelling, which will present a nice appearance when shellacked, so as to bring out the natural grain of the wood.

Miss Dorothy Nickels entertained last Saturday evening with three tables of Bridge. Refreshments were served to the guests who brought gifts for their hostess whose 14th birthday fell on that date.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Ferguson of Capitan announce the birth of an 8½ pound son, Oct. 6, whom they have named William Henry Ferguson.

Mrs. J. M. Beck entertained the Carrizozo Bridge Club at her home last Saturday afternoon.

Reynolds & Taylor sold eight cars of sheep this week to Holloway & Hampton of Los Angeles. S. King Sandford making the purchase.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer of Hollywood, N. M., were guests of Paul's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Mayer Monday of this week. Both Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer returned recently from Chicago, where they witnessed the World's Fair.

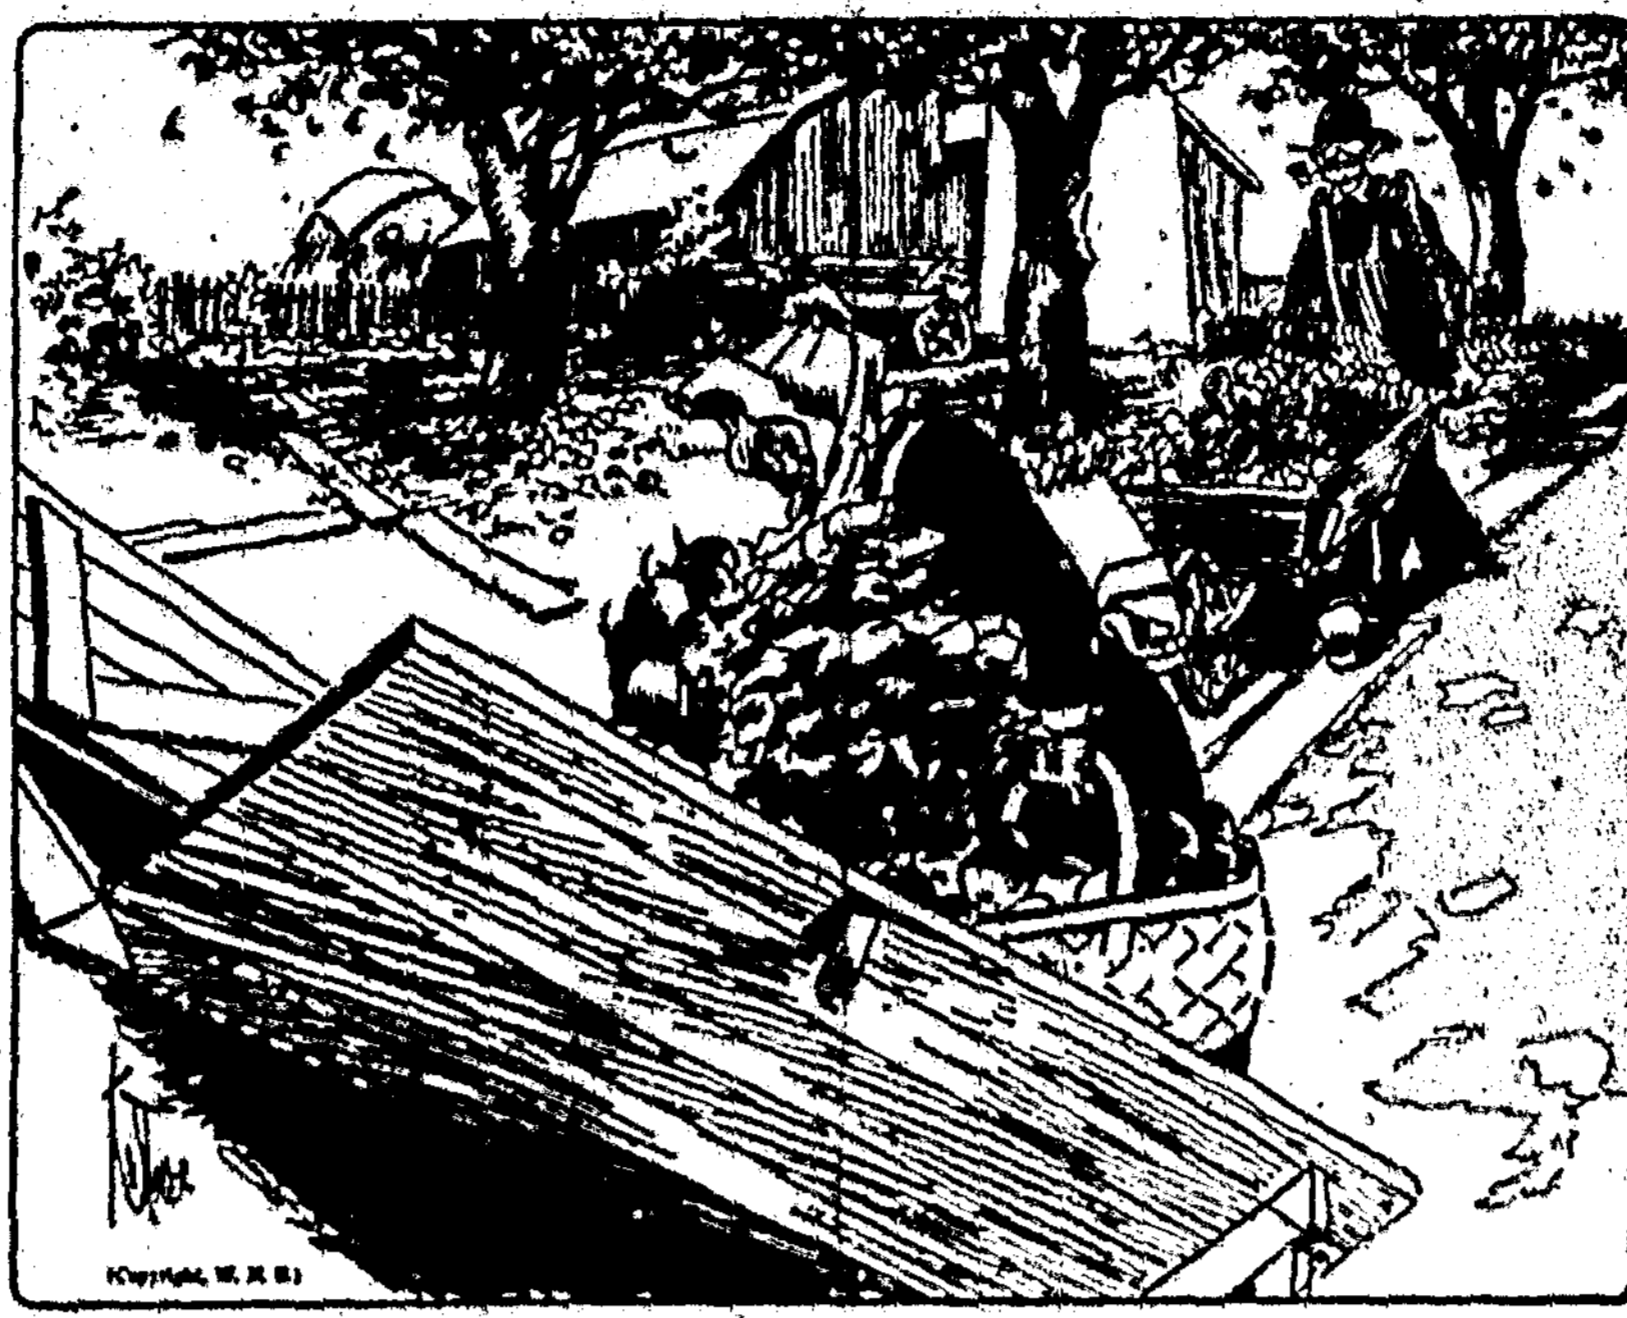

Mrs. Albert Ziegler will entertain the Carrizozo Bridge Club at her home tomorrow afternoon.

This office is in receipt of a message from Mayor G. T. McQuillen, who at the time of writing, was enjoying the World's Fair. At that time, he had but nine days to remain, but he thought it should have at least ninety instead of nine, in order to see it all.

Mrs. Elsa Charles entertained the Wednesday Bridge Club in the dining rooms of the Carrizozo Eating House this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance P. Smith, Miss Dorothy Arnold and R. E. Kent were here from Oscura Wednesday, the men folks attending to business matters while the ladies attended the meeting of the Missionary Society.

Masons Dedicate Lower Lodge Room

Before the lower hall of the Masonic Temple could be used Saturday night for a regular communication, the Hall was properly dedicated for Masonic use, pending the completion of the upper floor which is now being remodeled. G. S. Hoover, Deputy Grand Master, conducted the services, assisted by the Past Masters of the local lodge. After the dedication exercises, the regular communication of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41 was held with a good attendance. Messrs. Lott and Swanberg of Fort Stanton, were visitors.

Mrs. Harry Comrey of Capitan was a Carrizozo visitor on Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. Lillian Lane and small daughter of White Oaks were Carrizozo visitors this Thursday.

Miss Adelina Marquez has been assisting with the office work of the New Mexico Light & Power Company this week.

Miss Ruth Kelley has a nice rack to the right of the entrance in her father's new Hardware & Sport Shop and has it full of the latest sheet music and popular song hits. Her piano sits at the left of the music rack. Pick out your favorite and Ruth will play it for you—then you may buy it, if you don't mind. Step in and give her a hand, anyhow.

Mrs. Clifford Davis was here Wednesday from Oscura, doing some shopping. While in town she was the guest of Mrs. Morgan Lovelace. Mr. Davis is opening up a coal mine a short distance from Oscura, and specimens lately obtained show the quality of the coal to be exceptionally good. He will solicit orders here in Carrizozo in the near future.

A certain White Oaks lady has a remarkable hen. She is two years old. Last year she was a black Minorca—this year she is half grey and half white which gives a promise of being a Plymouth Rock next year. Her name is "Cuba" because she changes so often.

Miss Rhea Boughner is expected home from Chicago tomorrow where she has been attending the World's Fair.

Al Hunter was here from Alamogordo Wednesday attending to business connected with the stock industry. Al is one of the kind of Democrats who's not afraid to talk with a Republican friend on the street.

ANCHO ITEMS

will hold its regular meeting at the home of Miss Ella Brickley Thursday evening, Oct. 19. All members are urged to come prepared to give individual numbers.

Woman's Club

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo will hold its next meeting at Capitan Saturday, Oct. 21, with Mrs. George Titworth as Hostess.

The Club visits to Capitan are always enjoyable affairs, so let's all be there—not only for our own pleasure but to honor our out-of-town members. And don't forget to come prepared to give the name of a favorite American Hero, and if you will, an incident in his life.

Slightly Injured

Shirley Phipps met with an accident Sunday, which, while not serious, is keeping him from work this week. In company with Wm. J. Langston, he was doing some repairs in the office of Paul Mayer. Being employed in a piece of work on the ceiling, he misjudged his step and fell from a large fire-proof safe on which he was standing to the floor. As he fell, one of his feet caught on the handle of the safe door and gave it a violent wrench. The sprain has caused him considerable pain, but he will soon be at work again.

A delightful social hour was enjoyed to fullest extent due to the cleverness of the social leader, Miss Lucille Drake. In contents, Mmes. Cooper, Hightower and Wilson were the prize winners. Misses Drake gave several vocal selections which were exceptionally good. The following menu was served: Meat loaf, bread and butter sandwiches, pumpkin pie with whipped cream, coffee and cocoa.

Special guests were Mmes. Jim Cooper, Sr., and Harvey Fambrough.

GOLD—PRECIOUS GOLD!

Here are some figures about this fascinating yellow metal, compiled by professors at Columbia university. Since Columbus discovered America there have been produced in the world 1,100,000,000 troy ounces of pure gold, worth in United States dollars approximately $23,000,000,000. In all the world there is about $12,000,000,000 in gold coins or bullion. Of this sum the United States has about $4,015,000,000. About $3,000,000,000 in gold, it is estimated, is hoarded in the Orient. Probably all the gold set in teeth, made into jewelry, etc., represents $3,000,000,000. The balance, about $4,000,000,000, probably has been lost.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! And the habitual use of irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. CHAPTER XIII—Continued

He was big and she little, yet she dragged his bed close to his side and got her arms about him and lifted him enough to get him upon the blankets. She ran to her fire and piled and piled wood on it until the flames roared noisily and brightened everything about. She ran back to him and knelt again and slipped her hand inside his shirt, seeking his heart. The deep chest was barely warmer than death, the heart stirred only faintly. But it did beat. She sought the wound Brall's bullet had made and found it in his side. There was blood on her hands but she did not notice it now. She found where the bullet had entered and where it had torn its way out through his flesh. She did not know if any vital organ lay in that narrow span or if any major artery had been severed or if the rib-cage had merely glanced along the ribs and been deflected by them; she only knew that he had lost much blood, that it must have gushed freely while he strove with Swen Brodie, and that now it must be stopped utterly. And then it was that Gloria's hands achieved the first really important work they had ever done in her life. She tore bits away from her own undergarments and made soft pads over each wound; with their butcher knife she cut a long strip from a blanket. This she wound about his limp body, making a long, tight bandage.

She got the boots off and felt his feet; she stooped over them until for an instant she laid her cheek against a bare foot. It was like ice. She recalled how he had ministered to her. She heated a blanket and wrapped it about his feet and ankles. She heated other blankets and put them about him. The canvas at the cave's mouth had been torn down; she got it back into place to make it warmer for him. She put fresh wood on the fire. She hastened the coffee boiling all that she could by placing bits of dry wood close all about the pot.

She knelt at King's side; she got an arm under his shoulders and managed to lift him a little; she rolled up a blanket and put it under his head. Then she brought the cup of black coffee. She spilled more than went into his mouth but she was rewarded by seeing the throat muscles contract as involuntarily he swallowed. Thus, patient and determined and very, very gentle with him, she got several spoonfuls of coffee down him. Thereafter she let him lie back again while she sought to plan coolly and thoughtfully just how she must care for him, just what she could do for him.

There were scraps of food left. She began taking careful stock; she found a scrap of bread that had been knotted to the floor and kicked aside; she picked it up and, carrying a torch with her, began seeking any other fallen morsels. In this search she came once to the hole in the floor through which Brodie and the others had gone down into Gas Ingle's treasure-chamber. And at its side she found something which at this moment was a thousand times more precious in her staring eyes than if it had been so much solid gold. It was a great bunk of fresh meat. Instantly she knew how it had come here. King had killed his bear! That was why he had returned tonight. He had brought it here; had missed her; had dropped it here. And then? She understood now, too, how he had come so unexpectedly into the lowest cave. He had gone down through this hole and had known a passageway which led to down. She caught up the bear meat, carrying it in both arms, and hurried back to her fire.

For herself, since her own strength must be kept up, she cooked a strip of the meat on the coals. As the night wore on, since she was determined that King should not be chilled, her fire consumed a great part of the wood. More wood must be brought; tonight or in the morning. She went to the cave's entrance and looked out. The everlasting whisper of the pines, that ancient bushy voice which through the countless centuries has never been still save when briefly silenced by the snow; which had borne its message to Gloria when on that first day she went with Mark King into the mountains, set chords vibrating softly in her bosom. Instantly it bore a message to her, such a message as from now on she would hear in the quiet voices of her little campfire. It was the eternal call of the mother earth that one like Gloria must hear and harken to and understand before she could set firm feet upon the ashes of a vanquished self to rise to the true things of womanhood.

down into the lowest cave. She, like him, was of pioneer stock. Three times that night she made the trip up and down the cliffs, bringing wood. At the end, though near exhaustion, she snuck down by the fire for but a few minutes. The bear meat was boiling and bubbling; she poured off a little of the broth, cooled it, and then, as she had given King the coffee, she forced some of the strong soup between his teeth. She touched his cheek and dared hope that it was not so icy cold; she chafed his feet and wrapped them again in her hot blanket. And then, with all of her covers given to him, she drew a coat about her shoulders and sat down at his side, on the edge of his blankets. And here, throughout the night, she sat, dozing and waking, rising again and again to keep the fire burning.

She started up to find it full day; she had been asleep, her head against his knee. The fire was dying down; she jumped up and replenished it, settling the broth back among the coals. King lay as he had lain last night; his continued coma was like a profound quiet sleep.

All day long she ministered to him, going back and forth tirelessly, since love and hope inspired every step she made. None of Brodie's men had come; she felt a strange confidence that they would not come. They were afraid of King as Jackals are afraid of a lion; further, they did not know that he was wounded. She thought little of them, having much else to think of.

At a little before noon Gloria, stooping over the fire started erect and whirled about. King's eyes were open! She ran to him, dropping on her knees beside him, catching up his hand, whispering: "Mark! Oh, Mark—thank God!" He looked at her strangely. There was a puzzled, bewildered expression in his eyes. He strove to move and again looked at her with that strange bewilderment. She saw his lips move—he wanted to say something, to ask something and, deserted now by all of that magnificent strength on which he had always leaned, was as weak as a baby.

She gave his hand a last squeeze and hurried back to the fire; his eyes, still shadow-filled, followed her curiously. She came back to him with cup and spoon. This he could understand; he opened his lips for the spoon, he accepted what she gave him and when she had finished lay looking up at her wonderfully.

"Mark," she whispered, "we are safe here because—because you are so wonderful! You were like a god—the bravest, noblest, best man in all the world! You came in time; you saved me, Mark; they had not put hand upon me. And I am well and strong now; I am going to take care of you; you must just lie still and get well—Oh, Mark—"

His eyes closed again; he seemed very faint, very weary. Hushed, she sat tense, her eyes never moving from his face. After a long time he opened his eyes again; he tried again to speak; when the words did not come he managed a strange, shadowy smile with his bloodless lips and in another moment had sunk again into that heavy sleep that was so like death.

When next, two hours later, she again brought his broth, he stirred at her touch and awoke. This time his eyes cleared swiftly; he remembered the other awakening and her words. He looked at her long and searchingly and she understood what lay back of that look; he was wondering how she managed, how she endured to care for them both, how without his advice and she withstood hardship. And this time she smiled at him.

"I have been dining sumptuously on bear steaks," she told him lightly. "And I have slept and kept warm. There has been no one near. And the days are fine again. It was clear last night; the sun has been shining all day. Now, when you've had your own lunch, I'll tell you anything you want to know. Only you must not try to talk yet, Mark; not until tomorrow. I want you strong and well again, you know; it's lonely—without you."

She gave him, for the first time, a whole cup of broth, glistening in the certainty that already he was stronger. But even yet his weakness was so great that, before she had spoken a dozen sentences, he was asleep again. Tears, even to Gloria, if but a little more blood had ebbed out of the wounded side, he would never have awakened; clearly to Gloria, triumphant, it had been she who had held him back from death. She, Gloria King, alone, had fought the great grim battle; hers was the victory.

King was awake. Awakening, he tried to move. His utter weakness, like a great weight bearing down upon him, held him powerless. But his mind, slowly freeing itself from the shadow of sleep, was suddenly very clear. He could turn his head a little. It was late afternoon; outside the sun was still shining, for a patch of light lay at the side of the canvas flap. At first he did not see Gloria; but his eyes quivered until at last they found her. She lay by the fire, her head upon her arms, sleeping. The little huddled body looked weary beyond expression. For a long time his haggard eyes remained with her. She lay on the rocks, without a blanket. His hand moved weakly; there were blankets under him, blankets covering him; his feet were wrapped in a blanket. He looked again at Gloria, at the fire; he saw wood piled near by. For many minutes he puzzled the matter; in the end it was obvious, even to a man as sick as King, that she must have gone for wood. Perhaps more than once. He closed his eyes and lay very still. He knew now that he had been desperately hurt; that, wounded, his fight with Brodie had brought him very near a weakness from blood loss that was pale twin to death. And yet he was alive and warm; he had had broth and blankets and the fire had been kept blazing. He managed to slip a hand inside his shirt, before his fingers found it he knew that the bandage was there. Gloria had done all this . . . Gloria, whom he had struck . . .

Ever since that blow, the one act of his life which he would have given so much to have undone, he had been ashamed. He had rejoiced in his battle with the men who had threatened Gloria with worse than death, rejoiced that in some way he might make reparation. But now, beginning to understand all that Gloria had done for him, how great were the sacrifices she had made for him, lying unconscious of all she did, it seemed to him that the thing that he had done was a very small thing set in the scales against her own acts. He wanted to get up and go to her; to put his blankets about her; to play the man's part and protect and shelter. But he could not so much as raise his voice to call her to him. . . . Ever since that blow, upbraiding himself, he had said: "She was only a little, terrified girl and you were a brute to her." And now he thought wonderingly: "After that, she has worked for you, has nursed you, has saved the worthless life in you when she should have let you die." Again his eyes flew open; now they clung to her with a strange look in them, born of many emotions.

Gloria, as though she felt his eyes upon her, stirred, rose, pushed the hair back from her eyes and came quickly to him. And as she came, she smiled. She went down on her knees beside him and took his hand in her two and held it tight.

"Everything is all right, Mark. And you are better every time you wake." His lips strove to frame words. She bent close to them and heard his wondering whisper: "Every—thing—all right?"

"Yes, thank God," she whispered back to him. "Everything in all the wide, wide world!"

No, he could not understand that. She saw perplexity in his eyes now. But she did not mean to let him talk yet and it was time for broth again. But again he was whispering: "Blankets—yours—"

"Yes, Mark. After you have had your nourishment. When I need them."

But when he had taken his cup of hot broth he slipped off to sleep again and Gloria, smiling a tender smile, sat by her fire watching him as a mother watches a sick baby who, the doctor has just told her, will live.

CHAPTER XIV

That night Gloria, listening now to King's breathing, now to the crackling of her fire, grew restless. In her heart was still that new-born gladness; in her bosom there was still something singing like the liquid voice of a bird. It had sung for the first time when first she had ministered to King, when she had understood what love's service was, when she had gone down the cliffs for firewood, when, because of her tireless nursing, she had been rewarded by his opening eyes; as the hours wore on it had grown into a chant triumphant. She, Gloria, had been unafraid and unswerving; she had saved a man's life. And that life was Mark King's! She had made amends; she had set her feet unflinchingly in a new trail; throughout her being she was aglow with the consciousness of one who had gladly done love's labor.

Now she waited only for the hour when again King must have his broth. She gave it to him, smiled at him, commanded him to go back to sleep, promising to talk with him in the morning. And then, when again he breathed with the quiet regularity of one sleeping, she went eagerly about her task. They must have more meat; tomorrow or the next day, at latest, for the steaks which she had eaten and the strong broths to maintain and rebuild strength in King had cut deeply into their supply. And she knew Mark King well enough to be very certain that, the moment he could summon strength enough to command his tottering body to stand on two legs, he would go. It was for her to be before him. Fortunately it had not snowed since King made his kill; she could follow in the trail he had made and it would lead her unerringly to the spot where he had left the rest of the meat. She had everything ready, rifle, small packet of food, knife, even matches and strips torn from the sack for her fire.

Down in the gorge, clutching her rifle, she stood looking, listening. But there was no man in sight, and, in the intense determination possessing her, she throttled down all fear thoughts. For a long time his haggard eyes

STARTED TROUBLE

"So you and those neighbors are not on speaking terms any longer?" "No. All diplomatic relations have been suspended." "How did that come about?" "He sent me a box of axle grease and told me to use some of it on my lawn-mower when I started it at six in the morning." "Well? What then?" "Then I sent it back and told him to use some of it on his daughter's voice when she sings at 11 o'clock at night."

Those "Little Pitchers". "You must be pretty strong," said Willie, aged six, to the pretty young widow who had come to call on his mother.

"Strong? What makes you think so?" "Daddy said you can wrap any man in town around your little finger."—Buffalo News.

OVERDID IT

"What caused the demise of Mr. Firefly?" "He burst a blood vessel trying to raise half a candle power."

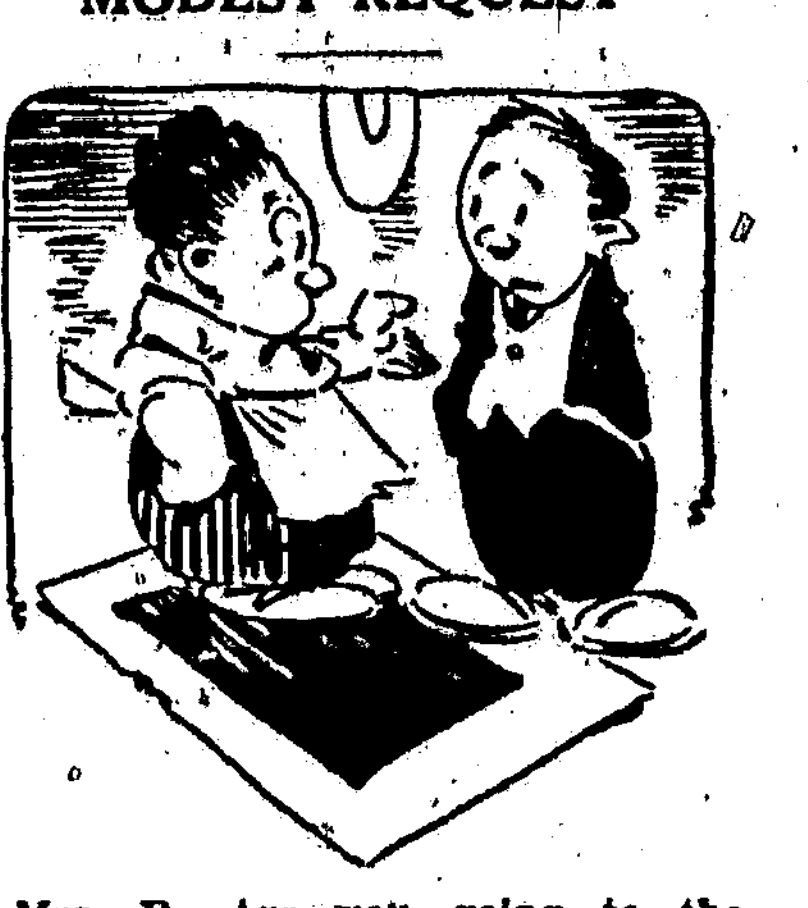

Papa's Standing Young Man—Because if you do I object to my marriage with your daughter.

Father—Why so? Young Man—Because if you do I think she will be bound to have me.

THE INFANT PRODIGY

Fond Mother (showing off young son)—Now, Cuthbert, show everybody how nicely you can recite. "Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the—" Cuthbert—"house." Mother—"Not a creature was stirring, not even a—" Cuthbert—"mouse." Mother—"The stockings were hung by the chimney with—" Cuthbert—"care." Mother—"In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be—" Cuthbert—"there." Mother—"Splendid, darling! Now, recite another one."

MODEST REQUEST

Mrs. B.—Are you going to the game today? Mr. B.—Yes. Mrs. B.—I don't mind your going, but when they are going to play one of those fifteen inning games I wish you would telephone me before you start so I shall not have to keep supper waiting.

Would Be Needed

The park orator was warming to his task. "What," he cried, "what does this nation need? What does she need if she steps proudly over scorching waters—if she strides boldly over the mighty ocean in her march for freedom? What, friends, is it she needs?" "A pair of rubber boots?" suggested a heckler at the back of the crowd.

Did His Best

Doctor—Did you open both the windows in your bedroom last night as I ordered? Patient—Well, doctor, I just have one window in my room, so I opened it twice.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

According to a recent Associated Press dispatch under a Kansas City date line, a large part of the pigs slaughtered at St. Joseph, Mo., and East St. Louis, Ill., under the government's pork reduction program, has been thrown into the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, while those purchased at Kansas City are being converted into edible pork and fertilizer.

It was estimated also by Frank Hunter, representative of the American Institute of Meat Packers, that about $382,000 of the $510,000 paid by the government at East St. Louis, in the premium hog market, was expended on meat which was thrown away. A major part of the pigs killed at St. Joe, it was said, have been thrown into the Missouri river.

Now the catfish in the Missouri and Mississippi rivers are famed in song and story for their delicacy and racy flavor. Just how they will grow and wax fatter on a diet of Secretary Wallace's premium pork remains to be seen, but the prospects ought to be favorable, and we expect to hear even more eloquent stories than usual this season about the size and eating qualities of the catfish caught along the banks of the two historic rivers.

But this isn't all. According to a United Press dispatch from Chicago, "when breezes blow west or south, residents of three Chicago suburbs have pungent reminders of Uncle Sam's plan for slaughtering thousands of pigs to increase hog prices. Complaints on file here told of 'indescribably revolting' odors wafted by winds which blow over carcasses of animals dumped in the Markham yards of the Illinois Central Railroad."

No one knew what would be done with the millions of pounds of pigs already dumped. All this is going on while hungry men and women continue to knock on your door for food.

Horse Races

The race program for the Lincoln County Fair, Oct. 18 - 14, morning and afternoon, should prove very interesting. The Fair Association has put up $85 in purses.

To this will be added all entrance fees, and the entrance fees and the money put up by the Fair Association will be divided 60 and 40 per cent to the winning horse and the horse running second.

On the morning program will be a cow pony contest. This contest will consist of 1 - 1/4 mile walk race, 2 - 1/4 mile trot race, 3 - Weaving through 8 poles set 24 feet apart, 4 - Circling 4 poles set 24 ft. apart, 5 - 220-yard dash.

Every horse will be scored in each event and the horse with the highest number of points will be the winner. The entrance fee for this contest will be $5. The purse will be $25, and all entrance fees. Winner to get 60 percent and second horse 40 percent.

There will be four quarter mile races and two 3/8th mile races on the day's program. Horses are expected from Corona, Capitan, Three Rivers, Tularosa, Fort Stanton, other nearby towns and from the ranches. Membership to Home, School and Community.

Following this, the Capitan Hi School Girls Sextette sang "Now the Day is Ended."

A short play, "Who Says Can't," presented by the High School pupils, closed the program.

During the social hour, sandwiches and coffee were served to about 120 people.

Public Health Column

Conducted by Dr. Earp, Director, New Mexico Bureau of Public Health:

Public opinion is well defined and strongly expressed and the law is enforced: if a careless driver disregards the warning of "School Zone — 15 miles per hour." A child is hit, the child dies. Everyone says immediately why of course the law should be enforced and the penalty is severe.

Contrast this with the opinion of the public in a family where three members within the last three months have died from an intestinal infection due to the spread of germs from flies which have swarmed vaults that are in a disgraceful condition. These flies are spreading the infection around town.

Do the people in town get disturbed? No. Yet this is what happened this last month in a small village about 50 miles from Santa Fe. Public opinion can be developed. The village which I write about is in a County with no Public Health Nurse although it is among the wealthiest in the state. The Public Health Nurse through classes would be able to teach the members of this community the need of better sanitation as well as the way of how to care for the children that are sick. — Who is responsible?

PRODUCTION OF FINE COFFEES
NATIONAL PRIDE OF COLOMBIA

Seedling Plantation (above); Trans-planting Coffee Shrub (right).

CHICAGO.—Fine coffee growing in the Republic of Colombia what thoroughbred horse raising is to England—a national pride.

There are now more than 400,000, 000 coffee trees, which bear close to a half billion pounds of the product annually, in that republic, which is the largest producer of the world's finest grades, known as "milds."

The seeds for new growths are selected with scrupulous care and the most modern cultivation methods are used by the coffee planters in Colombia. Coffee experimental farms have been established throughout the republic by the National Federation of Coffee Growers to benefit the planters in solving cultivation problems.

The coffee is first planted in a seed bed, later transplanted in a nur-ery, and finally when about 1 1/2 feet high the growths are placed in prepared groves at a distance of 8 to 10 feet apart. Colombian coffee groves are located in altitudes ranging between 2,500 and 6,500 feet above sea level. Permanent shading of the groves—a highly important factor—is provided by the use of "guano" and socio trees, which absorb very little moisture from the soil and permit the penetration of sufficient sunlight so essential to coffee growths.

The coffee trees, which grow to a height of 14 to 30 feet, are kept pruned to 6 to 8 feet. They begin to bear when five years old. In Colombia, only the ripest (deep red) cherries of the coffee trees are harvested. The cherries are hand-picked, not stripped from the branches. They are then cleaned and prepared for market by washing.

Practically all the better blends and brands of coffee depend upon their Colombian content for flavor and aroma. The United States imports approximately 300,000,000 pounds of Colombian coffee annually.

SAUL IN ANTIOCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:19-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek, Romans 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Friends Sharing With Others.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Earning a Name.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sharing the Gospel With Other Races.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Racial Problems and Their Solution.

When God was about to launch the missionary enterprise among the Gentiles, he arranged for a new religious center. Antioch was admirably adapted for such a center. It was a great commercial center with communication between the east and west. The population was a mixed one. The upper classes were mainly Greeks and used the Greek language. The government officials were Romans and used the Latin tongue, while the masses were Syrians. Sprinkled among them were Jews who had come for commercial purposes. Travelers from all parts of the world were in evidence.

1. A Religious Awakening at Antioch (vv. 19-21).

1. The occasion (v. 19). The persecution at Jerusalem scattered the disciples abroad. This, God permitted in order to separate them from the home people at Jerusalem.

2. The preachers (v. 19). They were not officially appointed missionaries, but ordinary men and women. They were filled with the yearning desire for lost souls, and witnessed of the Lord Jesus in the power of the Holy Ghost. Wherever the disciples of the Lord really yearn after lost souls and witness of him in utter dependence upon the Holy Spirit, there will be conversions.

3. To whom they preached (vv. 20, 21).

a. Some went among Jews only with the gospel message. These had not yet come to see that the gospel purpose was wider than to include only Jews.

b. Some preached to the Greeks also. These were from Africa and Cyprus. They were of a more liberal spirit perhaps because they were removed from a Jewish center. The success of their preaching was so great that news of it reached the mother church at Jerusalem.

4. Barnabas Sent to Inspect the Work at Antioch (vv. 22-24).

1. The work done by Barnabas (v. 23). He gladly endorsed the work and earnestly exhorted them to continue steadfastly in the faith, clinging unto the Lord.

2. The character of Barnabas (v. 24). He was a good man. It is highly important in sending a man to follow up a spiritual work, that his character be good. He must not only be of unblemished character, but of broad sympathy—capable of entering into the full appreciation of things about him. He was also full of the Holy Spirit. Only a spirit-filled man can appreciate the workings of God.

3. Barnabas Brings Saul (vv. 25, 26).

The work grew to such an extent that help was needed. Barnabas had the good judgment to seek Saul for this important work. Saul was a more important man than Barnabas. It is the duty of Christian leaders to seek out men who are qualified for the Lord's work and bring them from their obscurity to the strategic places in the Lord's vineyard. There are many men in obscurity whose bringing forth requires a Barnabas.

4. The Disciples First Called Christians at Antioch (v. 26).

They were not called Christians in derision as is so often asserted. It was in consequence of the teaching ministry of Saul and Barnabas that they were called Christians. In all Saul's teaching he showed the unique relation which the Christian sustains to Christ.

5. The Church at Antioch Sends Relief to Jerusalem (vv. 27-30).

The Holy Spirit through Agabus revealed that a great dearth should prevail throughout the world. This came to pass in the days of Claudius Caesar. Every man, according to his ability, determined to send relief to the brethren which dwelt in Judea. They made up money for the saints in Jerusalem and sent it by the hands of Barnabas and Saul. This act not only proved the genuineness of the work at Antioch, but it manifested the fact that the Jews and Gentiles are one in Christ and that therefore there should be no division among them. It was a case of Gentile Christians ministering to the Jews.

God Is Able

Jehovah, the loving God, distinctly promises to answer the prayers of his children. He that gave parents a love for their children, will be not listen to the cries of his own sons and daughters? He has wonders in store for them.

A Sunny Face

Wear a sunny face. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor and all who come under its benign influence.

Southwestern Briefs

Seventy-four cases of communicable diseases were reported to the Arizona state board of health during the week ended Sept. 15.

Pascual Barola, 19, son of August Barola of Tonoco, N. M., was drowned in the Rio Grande near Tonoco while swimming with his brother.

Governor Meaur announced appointment of Mrs. Kathryn C. Hutchinson of Bisbee, and Miss Christina Ballman, of Phoenix, to fill unexpired terms on the state board of nurse examiners.

The New Mexico state highway department has approved plans for including roads to three Indian agencies near Gallup in the state's appropriation for roads under the public works programs.

Governor Meaur asked cities and towns in Arizona, which do not now have planning commissions, to outline programs which will accomplish the most good for the greatest number of people in the community.

Twenty young attorneys were admitted to practice when they took their oaths at the Supreme Court in Arizona. They were the successful candidates who passed the state bar examinations in June.

Walter Londagin, 30, of Yado, N. M., was instantly killed when the steering apparatus on his automobile broke and permitted his car to plunge into the Rio Grande River as he was crossing the bridge at Berlin.

University of Arizona enrollment for the first semester has passed the 1400 mark. Registration had been completed by 1363 students. This number exceeds by 200 the corresponding day's registration figure of last year.

Fulton F. Caldwell, 45-year-old ex-service man, charged with murder of his wife, Bessie May Caldwell, 35, sought to plead guilty before Superior Court Judge Richard Lamson in Prescott and asked that he be sentenced to die.

Miss Bess Householder, executive secretary of the Dona Ana County, New Mexico, Welfare Association for the past two years, left Las Cruces for Santa Fe, where she will succeed Mrs. Ladd Haystead in the state child welfare bureau.

Drilling of a new well in wildcat territory northeast of Artesia, N. M., has given indications that a new oil field may be developed. Van C. Welch of Artesia has spudded in a well at 1,000 feet to get a high grade oil running fifty barrels a day.

The Lee Moor Construction Company of El Paso, Texas, submitted to the state highway department a low bid of $98,553.46 for construction of a bridge over the Salt River, forty-three miles northeast of Globe on United States Highway No. 60.

Justin S. Wardell, of San Francisco, regional adviser of the federal public works administration, conferred with the Arizona public works board. The discussion was devoted chiefly to administrative problems as related to speeding up re-employment.

Over 200 cotton pickers from Anthony, Dona Ana and Las Cruces, N. M., paraded the streets of Las Cruces carrying banners protesting against the pickers' wage scale of 50 cents a hundred pounds. The pickers want 75 cents a hundred on nine cent cotton.

Less than half an hour after he had urged fellow members of the New Mexico Bankers' Association to justify their existence by "giving the utmost of service to our customers and the nation," Governor Arthur Seligman of New Mexico died in Albuquerque, the result of a sudden heart attack.

C. E. Kennemer of Dallas, Texas, general manager of the Western Ice and Utilities Company, announced that construction of a $200,000 brewery plant to employ 100 persons would get under way at Albuquerque within the next thirty days. The brewery will have a capacity of 10,000 gallons per day.

The recent repeal vote apparently opened the way to legal sale of medicinal liquor on doctor's prescriptions in New Mexico. Under the federal law, physicians are allowed to prescribe as much whisky or other liquor as they believe their patients need, in states which do not have laws in conflict with this federal statute.

The Arizona corporation commission directed the Southern Pacific Company and the Magma Arizona Railroad Company, respectively, to continue operations on the Phoenix-Winkelman branch and the Magma Company's line from Magma to Superior. Both companies had sought permission to abandon service.

New motor cars being hauled over the New Mexico state highways in caravans will have to be licensed, C. R. Sebastian, chief assistant state comptroller, asserted. The leading car in each caravan will have to have a regular annual license, according to the new rule. A flat rate of $5 will be charged for every other car in the caravan.

The state tax commission, in a statement, said sales tax revenue for July and August indicated the August retail sales volume in Arizona was about $500,000 greater than in July.

George (Machine Gun) Kelly, who has been staging a one-man crime wave in connection with the trial in Oklahoma City of seven defendants charged with kidnaping Charles F. Urschel, millionaire oil man, is alleged by prison records to have begun his criminal career in New Mexico and to have served his first time in the state penitentiary at Santa Fe.

Covered Bridge Era Passing

Requirements of Modern Transportation Doom Picturesque Old Structures So Long Landmarks in Vermont; Many Date From Revolution.

Well in the foreground of the rugged scenic beauty of Vermont are the covered bridges, which lead many roadways over turbulent streams and link the Green mountain pass with modern transportation. Thousands of motorists who have passed through the state will remember the rumble from floor planks which echoed into the roofed spans as they passed from sunshine into gloom, then out again into the sunlight. These quaint structures often served as landmarks, some dating back to days of the Revolutionary war.

Previous to 1927 there were between 500 and 600 bridges of the covered type in Vermont. The flood of that year, however, destroyed more than half of them. Today there are only 240 remaining. Approximately fifty have been replaced with modern structures during the last six years.

The Vermont department of highways, being aware not only of the picturesque appeal of these ancient structures, but of the sentiment attached to them, has shaped a policy to retain as many as practical from an engineering standpoint. However increasing volumes of travel and mounting traffic speed have necessitated the removal of some of these spans, especially those on main-line highways.

Almost all of the covered bridges have exceptionally strong trusses, but the floor systems are usually too weak for heavy motor traffic. It has been reported in state-wide surveys. Often times new floor systems may be installed without great expenditure. It has been found, but the chief locations of serious disintegration are at the ends of the structures, where wood supports have been in contact with earth. In a number of cases, it has been discovered, that disintegration has progressed to such an extent that the bridges must be rebuilt. These structures are, of course, very old and as time goes on more and more of them will become unsound.

The principal reason stressed for the replacing with modern, open structures is the guarding of traffic safety. The old bridges were built during times when traffic was light and slow. In almost every instance they were constructed at right angles to the streams which they crossed, with the result that dangerous, sharp-angle turns existed at each end of the structures. This, together with the fact they were narrow and often low-arched, made many unfit to meet the requirements of modern travel.

Pride in these covered bridges has become deep rooted in the state, however, and when safety requirements are fulfilled the spans are not replaced unless the expense connected with necessary repairs or maintenance becomes prohibitive or, location or design cause traffic hazards which cannot be remedied.

An important move toward the preservation of the bridges was made by the Vermont legislative assembly this year, when a law was enacted which specified that the state might pay two-thirds the cost of maintenance on state aid roads.

Although there is distinctive attractiveness to the covered bridges, traffic experts now declare that their days are numbered. According to unofficial figures motor travel in Vermont this year has established a new peak, and an increasing interest has been evinced by motor vacationists throughout the nation to tour the Green mountain territory. With these facts in mind, road builders have asserted that in order to meet ever-mounting traffic conditions, main-line covered bridges will have to be replaced in the future. Yet there will be a great many on secondary and town roads which will continue to support traffic and which will be preserved as long as possible. However, as no covered wooden bridges are now being built, there will come a day when these types of structures will become extinct, as far as Vermont is concerned.

Skyscraper Found to Have Its Disadvantages

The aimless way in which skyscrapers have been crowded together, not only in New York, but in other cities, is causing much congestion. For that reason, in the opinion of Flavel Shurtleff, secretary of the national conference on city planning, the skyscraper is having the fight of its life to justify the enormous cost with which it has burdened the taxpayers for traffic facilities.

"Skyscrapers have been generally accepted on this side of the Atlantic as both necessary and desirable," writes Mr. Shurtleff in Progress Magazine. "Theoretically, the height of buildings is immaterial, except that height is depreciated when it creates excessive bulk in relation to the traffic capacity of the area."

"Even in Texas, where land is so abundant and cheap that ten acres are allotted to one steer for pasture, at least four cities boast homemade sky lines, which are assumed to be the hallmark of metropolitan distinction. Houston's skyline includes five buildings of more than twenty stories in height, housing thousands of tenants on less ground than would suffice to nourish one steer elsewhere in the state."

Inspiration to All in Really Spiritual Life

Something was said in my meditations a few weeks ago of the art of living, of which so many people know so little, a writer in the Indianapolis News comments. It is one of the most difficult. Strong, clean, pure, beautiful and self-denying living is a supreme work of art and, as such, an inspiration to all who come and especially those who live within the sphere of its influence. Delight as we may, and should, in a superb literary style, it is after all, the superb life—and it may be superb, no matter how humble—that exerts the greater influence. Is this also "the gift of God"? Very obviously not. Such a life is the expression of character, and character is the fruit of self-culture, self-renunciation and self-discipline. Its cost of production, measured in pain, sacrifice, suffering and hard work, is enormous and yet so great is the result—character—as to be worth all it costs. Perhaps there are few of us who have not known people who lived nobly, seriously and yet joyously, unaware of their own goodness. We have also known people who were selfish, flighty, without dignity, devoid of any sense of responsibility for the outcome of their own life or for the lives of others. The first class is made up of serious artists in the difficult art of living. In the second class are the botchers—and there are many of them. The most hopeless folk are those who would and do divorce beauty and morality and hold that they are natural enemies. Such misguided and misguided souls know little or nothing of "the beauty of holiness."

High School Notes
(By Helen Strauss)

During the past few weeks we have had so many good talks on the Century of Progress Exposition that we are beginning to feel almost as if we had been there. Last week Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Blaney talked to us about their visits there. We all found these talks very interesting.

On the first Tuesday of each month we ask some representative of the churches to address the assembly. This month our speaker was Mrs. Queen of White Oaks. The students seemed well pleased with her talk and we hope to hear from her again.

Tuesday, Ruth Kelley, assisted by Jane Kimbrell, Leslye Cooper and Thelma Shaver, presented a musical program.

The Freshman program on Thursday took the form of an amusing initiation.

It seems to be our bad luck that examinations should come in the week preceding the Fair. Everyone is busy with studies and preparations for the Fair.
