

ANCHO ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower entertained the Bridge Club last Saturday night, with three tables playing. High score was made by Mrs. Ted Hefren. The four having the highest scores, decided to play a test game, Mmes. Hefren and Jack Pruett playing against Messrs. Hightower and Jack Pruett. The gentlemen won by but 3 points. The ladies asked for another contest which again resulted in a 3-point win—this time in favor of the ladies. The lateness of the hour alone prevented a play-off of the tie. The hostess served refreshments of cake, fruit jello and coffee.

Mrs. J. M. Frame left Sunday night for San Francisco for a conference with her physicians, Drs. Coffee and Humber. She hopes to be able to return in a short time.

Mrs. Allen Kile is expected to return for a week-end visit. She is delighted with Douglas, Arizona, and will probably spend the winter there.

There have been several shipments of cattle and sheep from Ancho this past month. The prices have been far from satisfactory.

A new garage is to be built here immediately. Ancho now has three stores and will have two garages.

The local schools put on a Thanksgiving program Wednesday afternoon. The pupils acquitted themselves with credit to the training of their teachers. The school has an enrollment of 88 and hopes for an increase in the next month or so. The new principal, Mr. Phillip Bright, is progressive and is already planning on playground equipment and a flagpole. The program was as follows:

Welcome, Thelma Storey; Song, 'Thanksgiving Hymn,' School; Books talk, 5 boys; Dialogue, 2 girls; Recitation, Doris Gresham; Play, 4 girls; Recitation, Geraldine Sweet; Play, 'The Day Before'; Puritan Drill, 12 girls; Recitation, 'Pilgrim Fathers,' Vena May; Dialogue, 'The Signs of the Time'; Play, 'Come Back, Mr. Turkey'; Recitation, Beatrice Mendoza; Play, 'Jack Smuggles in a Guest'; Drill, 'Autumn Fairies'; Play, 'Magic Pie'; Recitation, 'Thanksgiving,' John Allen; Play, 8th Grade; Recitation, 'Little Paul's First Thanksgiving'; Song, School; Closing Number, 'Father and Son.'

The winner of the Brands Quilt is Miss Jessie Fuller, she holding the lucky number, ONE.

The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. Bryan Hightower Saturday, Dec. 2, with Mrs. R. E. P. Warden as hostess.

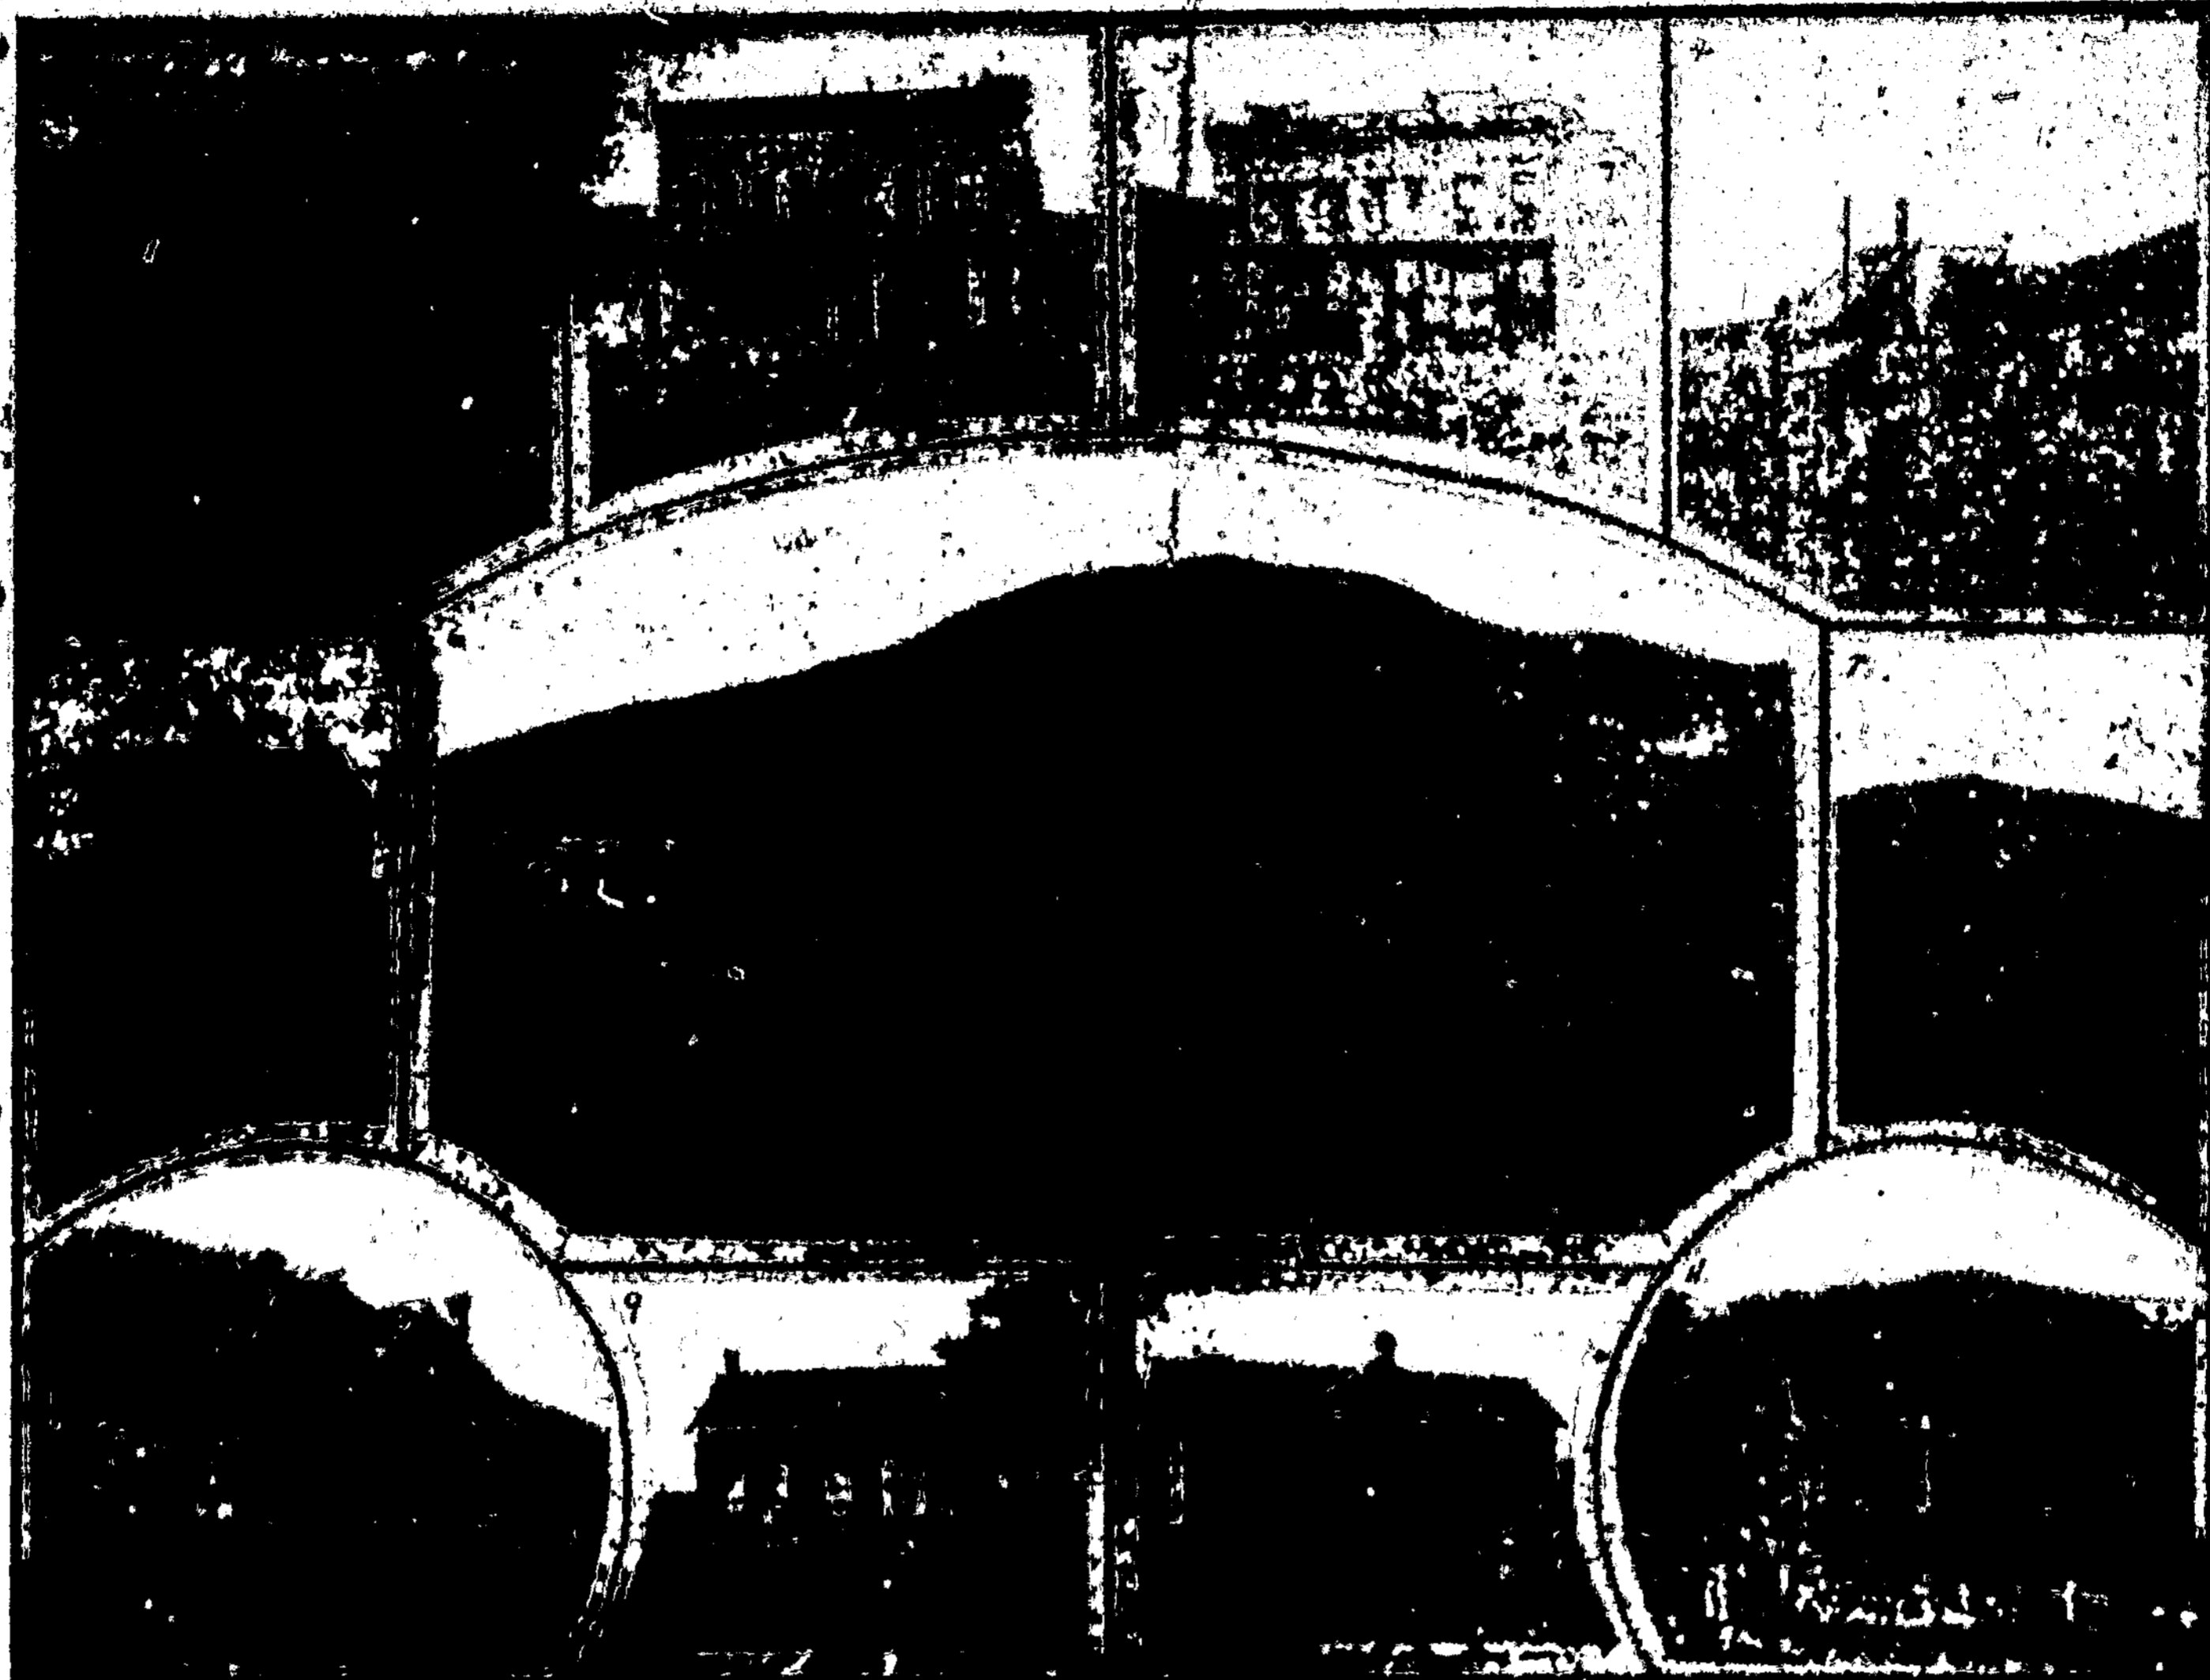

P. T. A.

The regular meeting of the P. T. A., will be held Friday night, Dec. 1, at 8 o'clock at the High School Auditorium. After the business meeting, the program will be given as follows:

Demonstration of Physical Culture by high school girls, directed by Miss Stover; musical number by five little girls, assisted by Mark Sloan. This part of the program is taken from Mrs. Kelley's Recital and will be given by request. Everybody Come.

Pat Murphy of the White & Murphy ranch near White Oaks was a business visitor in town last Saturday.

WHITE OAKS

"Dream City" Welcomes Visitors

Last Friday night the residents of White Oaks, famous in history for its early days of the gold rush, ancient haven of song, story and hospitality, gave visitors one of the most royal welcomes and an entertainment of the most unique nature seen in these parts for many years. The entertainment, sponsored by Mrs. Ed Queen, was for the benefit of the church and was attended by about 55 people.

The event, original in its nature, was "Tour Around the World." The program was carried out so successfully that not a hitch was encountered at any time. Six different homes were included in the list, each representing a different country. The guests assembled at the church and after being provided with tickets by Mrs. J. H. Fulmer, hostess, the tour started.

The first country visited was the United States, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn, where the hostess was assisted by her daughter, Miss Ida Cleghorn and Mrs. Donald Queen. At the old U. S. A., the guests were treated to the best good old American vegetable soup they had ever tasted and which was welcomed by the visitors after the long drive down the canyon and the hillside to Uncle Sam's place, decorated in national colors.

The next country visited was Mexico, host and hostess being Mr. and Mrs. Ed Queen. At the Queen home, the hostess certainly had an ideal Mexico and like the Cleghorn home, beamed with national colors. Two Senoritas, represented by Mrs. L. E. Hunt and Mrs. Florence Ward, assisted the hostess and served chills in their flashing costumes. The atmosphere was not "chilly;" it was decidedly HOT!

The next was Ireland at the home of Mrs. Lillian Lane, where hostess was assisted by Mmes. Sipple, Collier. At the entrance was the 'Blarney Stone' which the guests were invited to kiss before entering the dining room. Here, attired in native Irish costumes, the ladies served a repast which was Irish to the extreme. Much merriment was had at this home, one of the features being that at least one of the guests must tell an Irish story. The task fell to the Outlook man and he got away with it without being scalped.

The next country visited was Italy, tastily represented at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Townsend. The hostess had for her assistants Mmes. A. N. Price, Percy Welch and Dean Curbello. Here, a red sign overhung the doorway which read, 'Italy' and by that, we knew we had reached the land of Mussolini. Here, the ladies in native attire, served spaghetti with trimmings. It was genuine, too, made by an Italian miter at Jicarilla, and was about as long as the ordinary family clothes line. The maker certainly knew his 'spaghetti.'

The fifth country was China, represented at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Jackson, the assistant to the hostess being Mrs. Robert Leslie, Jr. As in other homes, the ladies wore native costumes and served dishes distinctively 'chink.' In their make-ups, they did not forget their

'cues.' China did itself proud. The rice flew in every direction as the inexperienced guests made frantic efforts to act 'chinkish.'

Last but not least, was Sweden, where at the home of Mrs. Cook, hostess was assisted by Mmes. Smith and Ward. Swedish dishes were placed at the disposal of the guests, but we missed the Stock Fish. But we knew it was too early in the season for that delicacy. The ladies were dressed in Swedish costumes, and everything was decidedly "Tala Svenska," as one of the guests remarked.

After the tour, the assemblage returned to the church, where a splendid program of music and recitations was given, under the direction of Mrs. Ed Queen and which was a fitting finale to a well spent evening. The Outlook family wishes to return thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Harkley who acted as our guides to the foreign countries and this goes for White Oaks residents, collectively, for their extended hospitality.

OddFellows Elect Officers

At the regular meeting night, Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., elected officers for the coming term of six months as follows: Noble Grand, G. T. McQuillen; Vice Grand, F. L. Boughner; Secretary, Wm. J. Langston; Treasurer, S. B. Bostian.

At the first regular meeting of the new year, the above list of elective officers, together with others to be appointed by the incoming Noble Grand and Vice Grand, will be installed.

At the meeting held on Tuesday, Nov. 21, a Fish Supper was had at lodge after the business meeting, at which there were 24 present. A committee from the Rebekahs prepared and served the supper for which favor, the OddFellows acknowledge their thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Byron and Ashby Roselle were here from the Jicarilla country this Tuesday, transacting some business and returning in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins were Carrizozo visitors from Capitan Monday. Mr. Lumpkins is Chairman of the re-employment board at Capitan and was here for the purpose of conferring with Mayor McQuillen in regard to the quota of men and other particulars in the work.

Amos 'n' Andy Program & Supper a Huge Success

The Amos 'n' Andy Supper and Program given last Saturday night at the Community Hall was a success from every point of view. The supper was good and the program—excellent.

All characters on the program were well taken, and those who were fortunate to witness it, certainly enjoyed the event.

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo netted a neat sum from the undertaking. Carrizozo certainly has a wide-awake Woman's Club, and remarks were heard on every side that they would like to have an event of a like nature more often.

Rich Hust was here on a business visit from Nogal, Wednesday.

Bryan and Allen Hightower were business visitors in town from the ranch near Ancho Tuesday.

John Townsend

Near the hour of 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, John Townsend, stockman, who had been a resident of this county for the past 20 years, passed away here. Until a few years ago, he conducted a ranch near White Oaks, afterwards disposing of the same, since which time he had been in ill health. His twin brother and other relatives are here, from Lovington, N.M., but the funeral will not be held until tomorrow or Saturday to await the arrival of relatives from Texas. Full particulars will be published next week.

Mrs. John Burton and baby daughter Adeline Jeanette, were able to leave the Johnson Hospital the first of the week. They are now at home and doing nicely.

Fred Pfingsten of Lincoln was in Carrizozo last Saturday.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Sowder were in Roswell yesterday from their ranch home near Ft. Sumner to spend several days here attending to various business matters. Mr. Sowder said that range conditions in the Ft. Sumner section were excellent and predicted that stock go through the winter in fine shape. — Roswell Dispatch.

Mrs. George A. Titworth of Capitan was a Carrizozo visitor Monday of this week.

A. L. Burke, daughter Rosalind and son Lewis made a trip to Alamogordo and the White Sands last Sunday. At Alamogordo, we saw two of our old friends, George A. Dowdle and Dan Elliott, both of whom are doing and looking well in "the city of trees."

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Rolland of Alamogordo are in receipt of news to the effect that on Nov. 21, a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ward Rolland at Los Angeles. — Alamogordo News.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Keesling visited the Carlsbad Cavern last Sunday. On Monday they left for California, accompanied by Messrs. Dawson and Willard, to spend the holiday season at home, but will return to Carrizozo in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jenkins were in Carrizozo Tuesday from their ranch near Corona. Mrs. Jenkins has decided to sell her Shetland ponies, and anyone wishing to make his child a present that will please him or her, would make no mistake in purchasing one of these little beauties. They are as gentle as lambs and have been raised as pets.

Mrs. Lillian Lane and daughters and Mrs. Ray Sipple of White Oaks were in town last Saturday.

Mmes. F. C. Berry and V. B. James of Fort Stanton were business visitors in town last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Young and daughter Avella, were here from Vaughn and spent Thanksgiving day as guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. McIlintock.

SYNOPSIS

A pretty young woman finds herself in a taxi cab in New York with a strange man who addresses her indignantly and speaks of "an awful shock." He leaves her for a moment and she drives on, for she fears him. Her memory is gone. She stops at the Biltmore. From her expensive clothing and wedding ring she concludes she is married to a wealthy man. She meets a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to Reno for a divorce if she can get the money. The woman vanishes with the nameless girl's $900. An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris, bewildered, is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him. Discovering a trademark in her clothing, she visits a store, and is astonished to find a salesman insists she hid from observation.

Doris found herself on the inside of a dark closet with the door firmly closed. What could be the meaning of this? She groped. The hard cylinder of a broom handle was beside her, and this other shapeless thing was probably a vacuum cleaner. Could it be that she was dreaming? The fantasy of a girl coming toward her, almost calling her by name, "Miss, I mean Mrs.—Val"—she surely had said "Val"—then the crazy push into the closet; it was very like a dream.

Or possibly the salesgirl was mad. Or was Doris mad? She remembered that insane people sometimes thought every one in the world was crazy. She felt the hickiness of the closet around her throbbing, throbbing. Why was she shut away in a closet, a "poor child" hidden from some unknown peril? Instead of leaving, her fright was increasing. As always in her moments of depression the vision of the man in the cab came to torment her. Now his face loomed before her, very real, very menacing. Her imagination, unbidden, brought out a dozen suggestions: supposing he were out there? supposing he wanted to kidnap her? supposing he were a criminal, and she was his helpless tool—a criminal herself?

Her hand tightly clutching the broom handle, her reason telling her that this was all nonsense, she still felt wave after wave of terror plunge over her like great billows knocking her common sense over, choking down her efforts to be calm and rational. The salesgirl had recognized her, had called her Val. Outside Mrs. Du Val was waiting for her in the car. Everything was all right. What was she staring about?

Everything was not all right! What was the meaning of the salesgirl's terror? And why was she in this closet? Doris called herself a fool. Fate had taken her kindly into a safe haven where she could rest and be well treated until her memory returned. But she had not been satisfied. She had wanted to return to it is alarming life she had once led. Why hadn't she been content with Mrs. Du Val in the country? She tried to think back to the impulse that had led her to this place where girls looked at her with stricken pitying eyes and pushed her into dark closets. She felt that if she ever got back to the country, she would never make any effort to leave again.

After what seemed a very long time she turned the handle of the door and looked out. The small reception room was empty. Evidently the salesgirl had left it so, that she might get away.

And outside sitting placidly in her room hesitating. Try as she would she could not summon her resolution to go on. Out in the car lay sanity, rest, peace. If she went in again and looked up that salesgirl she did not know what would happen, but she could feel the terror the girl had spread like a contagion.

Doris knew that she was being cowardly but she could not help herself. Then she remembered that the salesgirl had used the word Du Val—or at least she had said it so quickly that Val something was all Doris heard. But it must be Du Val. What else could it be? And after all that was all she had come to find. Some proof that she belonged to the Du Val. And that one word of the salesgirl's should be enough.

She ducked out of the door and raced breathlessly to the curb. She did not wait for Louie to get down and open the door, but got inside quickly and sank down on the soft springy cushions. "I was beginning to worry," said Mrs. Du Val. "I did promise Rocky not to let you get out of my sight." As the car rolled up the avenue Oscar pondered this. Did Rocky know of her danger whatever it was, and had he left these strange injunctions about her for her own safety? Her mind went over and over the incident. "Miss," the girl had started to say, as if she had known Doris best for a long time as Miss Somebody. Then she had remembered, corrected herself and said Mrs.—Mrs. what? Oh it must have been Du Val, but in the excitement of the moment it had been said so quickly that Doris could not be quite as sure as she would have liked.

She was pale and exhausted from the fright. Mrs. Du Val was quick to notice this. "Doris, the trip into town is a mistake. You could not stand the dentist, could you, today?" Doris looked at her thankfully. "Whatever happens I'll always love you and be grateful to you," she said. "Such thoughts!" "I mean it. You have been wonderful to me."

"Whatever happens," she says! You must not worry so. You are going to be all right." Doris looked anxiously at Mrs. Du Val. What did she mean by that? She spoke as if she knew of the strange thing that was hanging over her. Surely she could not have known that a salesgirl would push her into a closet and call her a poor child.

"Doris" head was buzzing. If she could only talk to someone about all this. She found herself falling back on her old hope: tomorrow she would remember. She had had a shock today—that ought to bring memory back. Oscar met them in front of the house as on the night of Doris' arrival. He was delighted at their return. His first words were: "I have good news for you. Tonight there will be a stadium broadcast. It is very good. Do you like to listen to Beethoven, Doris?" Doris said she did. Mrs. Du Val looked pleased.

Doris felt unreasonably happy. Here she was secure and loved. The salesgirl had called her by name, so she could be sure she was all right. It must be that Rocky's coolness sprung from something she had done in her past to alienate his love. But she would win it back. In the future she would be a model wife. These feelings were still in the ascendant when she unsuspectingly sat down in front of the radio after dinner. As Oscar Du Val turned the dial to find the concert there was a preliminary buzzing. A man's voice spoke with startling distinctness. It boomed its message through the room—a frightening monologue that set Doris' arms clenching the sides of her chair: "Diane Merril, the girl wanted for murder in Morristown, New Jersey—"

Doris was staring into space with wide glassy eyes. "—was reported seen in Detroit, Mich., at four-thirty this afternoon. The police are—"

Mrs. Du Val gave a low scream. Oscar switched the radio off. Doris had fallen back in her chair in a half daze. Wave after wave of black emotion was pulling her downward. The radio voice had spoken from her past and dragged her back to the no man's land of threatening circles, and menacing purple rings.

Mrs. Du Val's fat little arms were around her, trying to embrace her. "At such a time you should not be listening to murders!" She fell forward in her chair in a dead faint.

Doris came slowly back to her senses. She opened her eyes; the white canopy met her gaze. She was in bed then, but what was this frightening trouble clutching her? She turned her head. Mrs. Du Val was sitting at the bedside leaning over with anxious eyes. Behind her the soft rays from a pink lamp fell on Rocky's picture, sent out gleams from the silver frame.

Doris felt better. The bad dream was gone. She was back with Rocky. Rocky's mother was patting her head. She managed a smile. "Now, now you are going to be all right," whispered Mrs. Du Val soothingly.

Then Doris remembered. She had been sitting at the radio. Something had been said, something horrible. "What—what was it they were saying over the radio?" "Now, now go to sleep, my Doris. It is all right."

Doris sat up and looked at Mrs. Du Val a little wildly. "But you've got to tell me. It's very important." "Now, now Doris. Remember. At such a time you must not be thinking of murders!"

Murders! Doris fell back against the linen covered pillows. Murders! What had she to do with murders? She knew that her past had paved for one terrible second while the radio announcement was being made. And now her mind had turned away from it again. She was thinking that the reason she had forgotten her past was because it was too agonizing for her mind to dwell on. Her loss of memory was a veil which nature in her great kindness had dropped across her life. Behind that curtain lay something dreadful which she could feel, even if she could not remember it. Now that she had had that one backward glimpse she felt that she could never be happy again.

"Tell me," she said, "what murder was it that was being talked about?" "Mercy, mercy. And how should I know that? You must stop thinking of such things, Doris. It is bad for the baby, you know."

Mrs. Du Val was blushing furiously. "There now, Doris. You must forgive me. I have not been very delicate, have I? But I was so worried. Today has been too much for you. Now, now we won't mention it again. I know that young girls are sensitive about such subjects." Suddenly the meaning of the often repeated phrase, "at such a time," was clear. She looked with startled eyes at Mrs. Du Val. Of course. She might have known that was it. All those little worries about her exercise, her diet, taking care of herself, all those sly little looks she was supposed to be an expectant mother! And of course she was not going to be a mother. Of that she was certain. Now the meaning of Rocky's words unraveled: "No need to worry about Doris." Did Rocky, too, think she was going to have a child?

She opened her mouth. "I'm not—" but the French woman's little ringed hand was already over her lips. "You must not say another word. You are too excited."

Doris' eyes, big and full of anxiety, looked at Mrs. Du Val. What was the use of trying to tell anything now? She would only be thought overwrought. Sooner or later she must straighten this thing out. Tonight there were other things she wanted to find out. "But about this murder—"

"No, no. No more talk." In silence Doris allowed Mrs. Du Val to tuck the covers about her chin. She was thankful when the light was turned out, and she was left alone. She tried to think why it was that she had never before thought of this explanation of Mrs. Du Val's solicitude. But how could she have supposed such a thing about herself?

Now she sat up in bed clutching at throbbing temples. If this were so, then she was not Rocky's wife. Rocky's wife was some other forlorn wail. In her frenzy she pictured this other woman as a sort of Biltmore ghost walking, walking through the big lobby looking for a Mrs. Du Val that never came. The shapes and shadows in the room were assuming grotesque outlines, pointing accusing fingers. "You are not Mrs. Rocky Du Val. You are not Rocky's wife at all. You belong to the man in the cab."

She tossed all night, not quite knowing whether she slept or dreamed waking nightmares. At dawn she rose with a painfully contracted heart and tramped down before the picture of Rocky.

In his pictured eyes she tried to read the truth about her relationship to him. He had grown so familiar to her that she could not believe that she had never seen the real man. Even though her mind conjured up no recollection of him that went beyond that silver frame, she still knew that image, so well that she believed him to be her husband.

"You must be. You must be," she whispered. "Fate could not be so cruel as to give you to me only in make-believe."

The breeze coming in from the open window was sharp. She sneezed, and shivered. In the long mirror she caught a glimpse of her slim figure in its thin lacy nightgown. Her eyes were bright, her cheeks flushing unaccountably. She took hold of the corner of her dressing table to steady herself. "I must have a little fever," she muttered.

She crawled back under the covers and fell asleep. She awoke to find Mrs. Du Val standing beside her bed. Mrs. Du Val looked anxious, and she knew she had something wrong with her. Her head felt hot and unnatural.

"It is nothing," said Mrs. Du Val cheerfully, "you have a little touch of grippe. You must stay in bed. You will be all right."

For the next few days Doris lacked the energy to bring up the subject of her supposedly approaching motherhood. Mrs. Du Val, like many fussy and worrying women, was at her best when there was actual illness to combat. She was a miracle now of optimism, as she nursed Doris.

Doris lay for hours listlessly watching the shadow of the leaves make changing patterns in the sunshine that came in through the long windows. Her hands lay clasped in front of her. Once she took a daisy from the bunch of flowers that had been put near her bed, and pulling the leaves went through the familiar ritual of, "he loves me, he loves me not." The message of the flower was, "he loves me not." She did not like it. Superstitiously she felt that it proved that Rocky was not her husband.

"I suppose I really am slightly crazy," she told herself despondently. She fingered the ring which curled around her finger with tender reassurance. She had never taken it off since the day in the Biltmore. Now it suddenly occurred to her to look at the inscription inside again. She slipped it off.

"H. L. V. to D. M. May 10th, 1932." D. M. That was Doris—? She did not yet know what her maiden name had been. And H. L. V. was—now panic overwhelmed her. Rocky's initials were H. D. V. She was not married to Rocky. She must be married to the man in the cab. She tried to be rational. There must be some way that H. L. V. could be Rocky's initials. Sometimes people's initials were quite different from what you thought they would be, people who went by nicknames. Her brain whirled. She felt determined to prove to herself that she was married to Rocky. H. L. V.—R. D. V. There seemed no escape from those awful initials.

Why hadn't she thought of this before? She had often gone to sleep with her fingers on the small circle, thinking of it always as Rocky's present to her. She had remembered that there was a V and had taken it for granted that they were Rocky's initials. Now she accused herself guiltily. She had wanted to think herself married to Rocky. MOUNDBUILDERS' WORK

The mysterious earthworks at Newark, Ohio, which its prehistoric times covered an area of 12 miles with a pattern of circles, squares, octagons and long avenues, are to be preserved in a state park, Science Service reports. The modern town of Newark has obscured part of the area; but two portions escaped, and these will be preserved. The mounds are believed by archeologists to have been the work of races which antedated the Indians.—Literary Digest

Bruce Barton Says Cut the Ballyhoo Out of N.R.A.

Boston.—Bruce Barton, noted writer and advertising man, in a speech here urged deflation of government ballyhoo, declaring: "The administration has seriously handicapped itself by its own ballyhoo."

"The NRA is a sound and inspiring effort," he said, "but why was it necessary for Gen. Johnson to surround himself with a brigade of publicity men? Why the tumult and shouting? Why the parades?"

"When you say to the American public: 'We are going to try, slowly and earnestly, to restore purchasing power and get the people back to work,' they are willing to tighten their belts and go along with you."

"But when you say: 'March up Fifth avenue, and everything will be all right,' when you promise to get millions back to work immediately and then have to confess that you are far short of your goal—that destroys the very faith you are attempting to build up."

"Also, the farmer is sore at being broke, and properly so. But he is even more sore about being kidded. He has been promised too much over too long a period of time."

"Why shouldn't the government tell the truth, that there has always been a farm problem and always will be; that it exists in every country in the world; that only gradual betterment is within the range of possibility; why does each succeeding administration promise the farmer more than it can possibly deliver?"—Tucumcari News.

To J. V. Tully, Glencoe

In the ready-printed section of this paper last week, an article appeared under the head of "Period of Forty Days Has Point in Holy Writing." The item which dealt with the forty days first put into effect by Moses and followed in the Magna Carta, with 40-day provisions for the widow. The practice was carried out in the case where a Knight was bound to respond to the call from the King who decreed that he must prepare to serve 40 days. The article sets forth other practices wherein the 40-day limit was mentioned.

After reading the article and finding that the Pathfinder had been given credit for the same, former Senator J. V. Tully of Glencoe calls our attention to the fact that Emil Ludwig should have the credit, as it appeared in his book, "The Son of Man." We would say, Senator, that the credit should have read: "From an excerpt from Emil Ludwig's 'Son of Man,' in the Pathfinder, —You are perfectly right, Senator, as you aptly say, 'the devil should be given his due.'"

Gen. Johnson had a lot to say in his Chicago speech about throwing dead cats but he forgot to mention four million dead pigs. Who threw them? — We don't see any reduction in pork prices in this neck of the woods.

Community Christmas Tree

At the last P. T. A. meeting the question about a Christmas Tree was brought up. A few much favorable discussion the question was put to a vote and passed by a large majority. A special committee was appointed by Mrs. C. W. Young, as follows: Mrs. F. L. Boughner, chairman, Mmes. Nellie Branum and A. C. Hines, assistants. This committee held a meeting and the following is its decision: On Friday, Dec. 22, at 7:30 p. m., there will be two Christmas trees; one in Navarro's Hall on the east side, the other in the High School Auditorium. Interesting programs will be given at both places, where Santa will come with his pack of toys and candy.

The committee is asking the citizens of Carrizozo to help in making this Christmas a merry one for every child in this community. When you see the donation boxes in the local business houses, don't forget the worthy cause for which the money will be spent. Drop in your offering or if the box is too small for your generous donation, give it to the merchant, who will gladly hand it to the committee. Old toys will be re-conditioned by the Manual Arts boys and made to look like new. The girls in the Home Economics class will also do their part in that work. Remember that the dolls must be dressed. Anyone having old toys to contribute or small pieces of dress materials, please send to the Home Economics room in the High School building. Santa must have a full PACK!—Help him to make the little ones smile with gladness!

NO ENDORSEMENT OF COMMUNISM

Autocaster

In announcing that he has opened negotiations with the Soviet government of Russia looking toward eventual "recognition" of that nation, President Roosevelt does not, as we understand it, endorse or advocate a Communist form of government. He recognizes the fact that for sixteen years the Russian people have been developing a new form of government, that that government has survived and is apparently strong enough to continue indefinitely, and that it is the Russian people's own business as to what form their government takes.

In its early days the Soviet experiment was accompanied by loud threats of world revolution. We understand that these threats were largely due to the belief that a Capitalistic world would not tolerate a single Communist experiment, and that in order for it to succeed it would be necessary to convert all the rest of the world. The Soviet leaders have learned different by now; they have discovered that the rest of the world doesn't care what they do inside their own nation. Little is heard these days of the danger of the spread of Communism.

It seems to us that it is as reasonable for the United States to recognize the right of Russia to be considered a world nation as it is to regard Italy, under a dictator, or Japan, under an absolute monarch, as having equal rights with ourselves. None of them has our form of government but we would be the last to try to impose our ideas upon them.

Recognition of Russia ought to open up trade channels which are now impeded, and create a much more friendly feeling among all nations. To be sure, there are several other matters to be settled. Will the Soviet government recognize the debts owed by the old Russian government to the United States, and restore the American property which it confiscated? That and other questions need answering before recognition can be generally acceptable.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for December 3 PAUL IN EPHEBUS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 19:8-20. GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven, Matthew 5:10.

1. Paul Preaching in Ephesus (vv. 8-10).

In the Jewish synagogue (v. 8). He was permitted to preach here for three months. His preaching was characterized,

(a) By boldness. He realized that God had sent him and that he was backed by divine authority.

(b) By reasoning. God's message is in accord with the highest reason.

(c) By persuasion. It is not enough to go boldly with a reasonable message, it must be accompanied by persuasion.

(d) By speaking "concerning the kingdom of God." He did not discourse on current events, philosophy, or literature, but upon the message of salvation through Christ.

2. In the school of Tyrannus (vv. 9, 10).

The Jews were only hardened by Paul's earnest preaching. Paul separated the disciples from them and resorted to the school of Tyrannus.

3. God Works Miracles Through Paul (vv. 11, 12).

As Christ's messenger he needed credentials. If Paul's ministry was to be successful here, God must, in an extraordinary way, put his seal upon his work.

4. A Glorious Awakening at Ephesus (vv. 17-41).

1. Fear fell on all (v. 17). News of the coming out of these evil spirits created impressions favorable to Christianity.

2. It brought to the front those who professed faith in Christ while not living right lives (v. 18). They believed on Christ but had not broken from their sins.

3. They gave up the practice of black arts (v. 19). This means forms of jugglery by use of charms and magical words. No one can have fellowship with God while practicing these arts.

4. The uproar of the silversmiths at Ephesus (vv. 23-41).

(a) The occasion (vv. 23, 24). This was the power of the gospel in destroying the infamous business of Demetrius and his fellows. They were not particularly interested in the matter from a religious standpoint, but because it was undermining the principal business of the city.

(b) The method (vv. 25-29). Demetrius, whose business was the mainstay of others of a similar nature, called a meeting and stated that much people had been turned from idolatry and that the market for their wares was materially weakened. He appealed to his fellows on the ground:

(1) Of business (v. 27). The world is willing to tolerate any kind of religion so long as it does not interfere with its business or manner of living.

(2) Of religious prejudice (v. 27). He became quite religious when his business was being interfered with.

(c) The issue (vv. 23-41). The speech of Demetrius gained his end. The crowd was enraged and cried in unison, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" (v. 25). This method of proving a point seems quite modern. The mob was quieted by the fact of the town clerk (v. 35).

First, he rebuked them for yelling for two hours to prove a point which everybody admitted (vv. 35, 36). Second, he showed that Paul and his companions were not guilty of any criminal act (vv. 37-39). Third, the people were in danger of being called to account for this riot should it come to the ears of Caesar (vv. 40, 41).

The Way of Life

It is wholly impossible to live according to divine order, and to make a proper application of heavenly principles, as long as the necessary duties which each day brings seem only like a burden grievous to be borne.

Cultivate Quietness

Cultivate the quietness as a means of abiding in Christ! Expect the ever deepening quietness and calm of heaven in the soul as the fruit of abiding in him!

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Urges Patience

Washington.—With the farm strikers still threatening mischief and with some labor agitators continuing to make disturbing motions, officials of the government, wherever they can contact people, are counseling patience more than they ever have since the gloom of the depression settled over us.

As nearly as I have been able to arrive at the base of the present crop of conflicting interests, I believe much of the current trouble results from a lack of understanding of the basic problems. It seems to be undeniably true, also, that there are certain individuals or groups of individuals who do not want to understand the situation. They want to use the bad conditions to further selfish ends of their own and they are of the type who will deliberately and carefully plan to mislead whosoever they can enlist as followers.

There seems to be scarcely a single official of the government but who holds the view that such leadership will accomplish anything but self-destruction of a majority of the followers of these cure-all doctrines. That sort of thing never has accomplished anything in all history, and there seems to be no ground for believing there will be any other result this time.

Unfortunately as it may be, in our rush to get back to what we call prosperity, some groups have become jealous of other groups and interests. This jealousy has been translated into action in numerous instances. I do not say that jealousy is the cause of all of the troubles, but indeed selfishness of one kind or another together with personal motives of an ulterior character can surely be said to be the general foundation for all of them.

But the natural question is: why should the situation be one permitting existence of such difficulties as the farm strike and labor troubles? The answer seems to me to lie in a law with which none of us had anything to do, namely, the age-old law of supply and demand. Just as none of us had anything to do with framing that law, none of us is going to be able to amend it or change it.

Must Pull Together

I am indebted to Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, for an expression that seems to fit the picture better than any I have heard. He described the condition as one requiring a two-horse team to pull us forward. By that phrase, he meant that producer and laborer must pull together.

Let us analyze the necessity for pulling together which the government so strongly urges upon us. If all of the cobwebs are swept off of the picture, it seems to me to be fairly clear, and surely there is no point in becoming more confused as to what the need is or what may be done about it or why things move slowly.

After some research into the field of figures, I cannot escape the conclusion that there is an absolute and positive relationship existing between the money paid to labor and the money received by the farmers. There is, therefore, a necessity for the farmer and laboring man keeping in step. If one gets a step ahead, the team is not pulling and conditions grow worse.

The government has collected statistics that provide a most interesting proof of the statement I made above that there must be absolute teamwork. For example, those figures show that gross income of agriculture and pay rolls of factories have been rising together or falling together as conditions are good or poor. And in the last ten years, it happens, they have been in just about the same amount. The records reveal that farmers' gross income in 1925 was just above eleven billion dollars. Labor's wage, as shown or measured by factory pay rolls, was slightly under that figure. Both of these totals shriveled a little bit during the succeeding years until

Washington.—With the farm strikers still threatening mischief and with some labor agitators continuing to make disturbing motions, officials of the government, wherever they can contact people, are counseling patience more than they ever have since the gloom of the depression settled over us.

From these statistics, compiled year after year, the government has developed what the statisticians call an index. It is a yardstick, a basis for measurement. From this index I learn that gross farm income is just about half what can properly be called normal (an index figure of 100), while labor is receiving a total only about 53 per cent of that normal amount.

But to get back to those conflicting interests. Everybody who makes anything or grows anything or produces, wants to get as high a price as he can for anything he sells. It applies to those who work with their hands and sell their services. Those who sell want as high a price as they can get and those who buy want as low a price as they can force. Hence, labor is making much noise that its wage is not high enough and that its hours are too long, while in the same breath labor is saying retail prices are too high. Farmers get wrought up at this. They say that retail prices are high as compared with the returns they receive; but the attitude of the farmer also includes a sideswipe at labor for demanding so much.

So it seems to me that there is need for the patience which is now being urged. In the first instance, this thing called recovery admittedly cannot be made an accomplished fact overnight. It is a slow process, and it seems slower than it is. It appears to take such a long time for benefits to reach the man on the street after there has been improvement in basic conditions and among the so-called key industries. But it is to be remembered that when the depression took hold, there was a shrinkage in income of those who had put their money into the great factories or had invested them in stocks and bonds or tangible property quite a while before the shock was felt by the man in the street.

Washington observers are expecting to witness some fireworks to be set off in the next congress by the diminutive Senator Carter Glass (Dem.) of Virginia. The senator is small of stature, a mite of a man, but that does not apply to his mental capacity. He is, moreover, a man who does not get greatly concerned about ordinary pieces of legislation. Whenever there is a bill before the senate dealing with banking policies or money policies, one will see the torzled red head from Virginia very much in evidence on the senate floor.

CCC Doing Useful Work

Sometime in the future when the next generation has grown to maturity, the users of lumber, and that is, of course, all of us, will look about them and observe the growing timber awaiting the ax of the woodman. The picture before them will be the matured result of a program about which President Franklin D. Roosevelt dreamed before he was elevated to the highest office in the land. Whether one agrees with the expenditure of public funds in this manner or not, none can say that his reforestation program will not produce lumber for the future, and none can say that it will not be badly needed by the time the saplings now being planted have developed to the point where they are ready for use.

Mr. Roosevelt started out in execution of his reforestation program as a means of alleviating unemployment. He proposed that congress create the civilian conservation corps so that upwards of three hundred thousand unemployed men might be given work that was of a character of which they would not be ashamed. He believed the money paid to them would reduce suffering among their families and, if not among their families, would take that number of men off of relief rolls or lift them from the almshouses. And such it has proved to be to the extent of some two hundred thousand families and about one hundred thousand individual men.

They are working; they are clothed well and they are fed well. Their morale is high, according to all persons who have visited the conservation camps. The men feel that they are not a burden on society, for the work they are doing is useful. Consequently, it is the view of those with whom I have discussed the corps that these men feel life to be worthwhile.

I was reminded of the scope of the conservation program, the tree planting plan, the other day when one of the numerous boards and commissions around Washington announced approval of purchase of land for use of the conservation corps. The commission approved recommendations for the purchase of 951,632 acres, scattered through twenty states. The lands being acquired will be added to the government holdings in the thirty-six national forests and units set aside for timber growth.

TIME TO FORGET "MY OWN PEOPLE, RIGHT OR WRONG"

"No wonder," writes one of our readers, "that women are the object of all sorts of discrimination. They don't know enough to stand together. There's one organization of women gone down to Washington to fight for something for WOMEN, and another organization of WOMEN fighting against them. I think the women who are fighting other women trying to get something for women should go to jail!"

The distinguished woman writer to whom this outburst was addressed answered it thus: "I do not feel that in this day in this country it is necessary for women to stand by women, right or wrong, because they are women. To my mind that is only justifiable in an uneven fight, at the beginning of a struggle in which everything is stacked against one."

"I think women in this country today are so utterly free, that they enjoy equality and privileges to such an extent that they now have a RESPONSIBILITY to justify their positions. And you can't do that by dividing the world into WOMEN and MEN and backing the women, right or wrong. "The quickest way to bring prejudice and discrimination upon any class of human beings is to segregate them and announce that they are fighting, first of all, for themselves. When women had no voice in government, in education, in churches, even in their private affairs, that attitude was justified. They had no responsibility toward a society that rated them low. But in our country today, we have a responsibility—to maintain the right, the public good, to be fair and just and wise and stable on all questions. We have no responsibility to other women just because they are women. "It seems to me that is the best thing we can do for women as women—to show that we can rise above conceit as women, above the greed for power and influence and personal aggrandizement—and sex distinctions."

To Improve Any child's APPETITE

A sluggish appetite means a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

California syrup of figs is doing wonderful things for ailing, sickly children all over the United States.

If your baby, boy or girl is bilious—pale-faced and dull-eyed from constipation—breath bad mornings, tongue coated all the time—don't give cathartics that weaken twenty feet of bowels! Instead, a little syrup of figs that doesn't disturb either stomach or bowels, but does act on the lower colon—where the trouble lies.

Nature never has made a finer laxative for children; they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. Your child will soon be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days, and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, keep well and avoid colds.

NOTICE: The bottlers of California Syrup of Figs respectfully warn mothers that the promises made here apply only to the genuine product in bottles plainly marked CALIFORNIA.

Alto Nuggets

Dick Hood was seriously hurt last week when two horses tied to a lariat rope dragged him a short distance.

Gladys Storey ran a splinter in her leg and had to be taken to Fort Stanton to have same removed.

Miss Mildred Gilliland, who has been ill, is improving slowly.

We certainly are having some pretty winter weather. It almost makes us think of spring.

Alto gave a pie supper last Friday night which was very successful. The 32 pies brought $28. A one-act play was put on also, the characters being June Hagee, Louise Luck, Nell Hightower and J. C. Harris. We hope they will come again to Alto soon and give another one just as good.

Road Work

A force of men were put to work this week on the streets, under the direction of George Strauss. The appropriation for this work comes from the government for the C. W. A. board of which Mayor McQuillen is the chairman. The following projects have been approved for this county: Tinnie-Arabela-Bethel road; White Oaks-Carrizozo road; Oscura to I-X ranch; Capitan - Pine Lodge-Roswell road; No gal-Ruidoso-Capitan road; Picocho-Elk road; Eagle Creek-Fort Stanton road; gravel surfacing Capitan streets; repair work on Capitan-Silver road; Corona-Joneta road; Carrizozo city streets, surfacing and gravel, six miles. Work on these projects has started and must be finished by Feb. 15. The number of Carrizozo men now at work is 24.

William Barnett was here from Vaughn to spend Thanksgiving Day with old friends.

White Oaks Notes

The ladies of the Bridge Club entertained their husbands and friends Sunday evening at Mrs. Cleghorn's. There were 6 tables of bridge. Coffee and cake were served. Mrs. Barney Ward won first ladies' prize and Mrs. Whitwell the consolation. Mr. Boynton won first men's prize and Barney Ward the consolation.

Mr. and Mrs. D.J. Queen, Miss Ida Cleghorn, Owen Simpson, Mr. Gilbert and others attended the football game at Tularosa last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lemon and Mrs. Ola Jones of Carrizozo were White Oaks visitors Sunday.

Phelps Walker has accepted a position with the Power Co., and has moved his family into the Greshaw house.

Saturday evening a number of guests were invited to Owen Simpson's 'Pent house' in honor of Mrs. Boynton of El Paso, who is visiting her husband. Music and dancing were enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served at midnight. Among those present were the Boyntons, Gilberts, Whitwells, Queens, Lealies, Wards, Mrs. Florence Ward, the Misses Cleghorn, Leslie, Jeffords, Messrs. Braus, Dodd, Kiene, Wilson, Ben and Jim Leslie, Van Schoyck, Simpson and Fitzpatrick.

Boynton and Gilbert are plating in Baxter Gulch.

Mrs. Sam Wells has gone to Los Angeles to spend the winter with her daughters.

Ed Wilson is down from Colorado visiting with the Whitwells and Queens.

R. T. Freehand of Tinnie was a business visitor in town the latter part of last week.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

"There are a lot of comedians on the radio now but none of them are as funny as the birds who recite radio advertising," observes L. A. Whitaker.

Messrs. C. D. Sandoval, R. G. Willard and Ray Dawson were given a treat of the old west at the Vega ranch last Sunday morning, when the Vega boys, Joe, Leandro, Frank and Martin, Florentino Lopez and Joe Chavez took the role of cowboys and did a bit of wild steer riding and bulldogging. Joe Vega was chosen first in bulldogging; Florentino in riding; Leandro and Frank in all-around cowboys and Martin and Joe Chavez in stirring up the dust more often.

R. E. P. Warden, prominent stockman of the Ancho country, visited his daughters here last Saturday. Everybody knows "Peek," and to know him is to like him.

Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Lueras returned the latter part of last week from an extended visit with relatives at San Elizario, Texas.

The annual Christmas Bazaar of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo will be held in the lobby of the El Cibola Hotel Saturday, afternoon, December 9th, beginning at 2 o'clock. Fancy work, baked goods, candy and other articles will be on sale. 2t

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Vega were called to Tularosa last Saturday morning on account of the death of Mrs. Vega's father, Benito Montoya, who passed away that morning after an illness of several years' duration. Mr. Montoya was a pioneer of the Tularosa valley and besides his immediate family, he leaves a host of friends to mourn his departure.

Remember the good old days when the average farmer was too busy in the fall cleaning up his fence rows to go on a strike?

Reid Dudley and Sat Chavez, Jr. were El Paso visitors this week. We imagine the boys went to Juarez on a sight-seeing trip. All he-men do!

Can You?

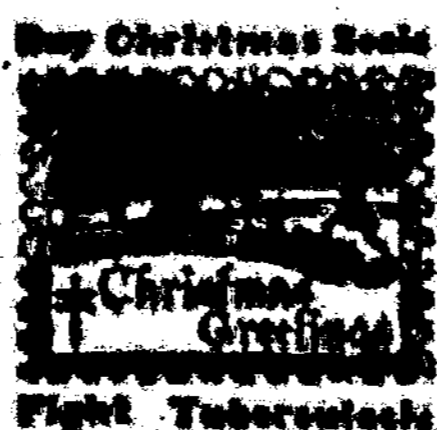

We can't see the consistency of the government's paying a farmer to destroy part of his crops and then giving him free seed and loans for fertilizer in order that he can raise bigger and better crops.

SCHOOL LUNCHEES

State College Extension Service Bulletin

The subject of school lunches is important to mothers, to teachers and to every community, now that the school term is well started for another year, says Miss Veda Strong, of the New Mexico State College.

What the school child eats for lunch has a great influence on his health, his education and his behavior.

If the children can come home for lunch, the problem of serving them the food they need is not so great, and at least one hot dish is usually served. Especially in cold weather this hot dish at noon makes for better health, thus making for better grades, as the children usually do better work in school where such a lunch is provided.

If the child must carry a lunch to school, this does present a problem for mothers, as the things that can be put in a carried lunch are limited as to the number and variety. The lunch should consist of food that will be appetizing and also furnish part of the child's daily food requirements.

Al Roberts, well known former internal revenue expert who rode everybody ragged for their income taxes, was here Saturday on business. Mr. Roberts is now on the other side of the political fence and engaged in public accounting and said that he had more satisfaction out of saving money for taxpayers, than he had in having to ride them out of 'em all the time.

Why Bring That Up?

"Christmas is Just Around the Corner."

We object to the nudist bunch because they are scabbing on clothing merchants. But perhaps we are just sore because we couldn't have a front seat to that wedding a short time ago.
