HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Five students recently submitted manuscripts in a state and national essay contest sponsored by the Gorgas Memorial Institute of Washington, D. C. Only those of Junior and Senior rank were eligible to enter the contest. The subject was "The Problem of the Mosquito and Other Insect Life in Relation to Sanitation, Health and Industry." The following participated: Allie Haskins, Mrs. Laura Sullivan, Ernest Prehm, John Jackson and Lawrence Hicks. Judges were Dr. Shaver and Mr. S. H. Njckels. Ernest Prehm was declared the winner in the local contest and his manuscript has been submitted to Washington, D. C. to be entered in the state contest. The state prize award will then be entered in the national contest.

The Science Club held its last meeting on Monday. They presented a special program on sound and electricity for the benefit of the Physics class.

All clubs discontinue meetings after this week. Every student is anxious to make his credits and more studying must be done.

The girls' Physical Education class gave an exhibition in assembly this week. There were exercises, human pyramids, a human pedestal, strange marches and songs. The audience enjoyed this immensely.

Reserve Wednesday evening, Apr. 5, so that you may witness an intensely interesting 3-act comedy featured by a selected cast from the Senior class. You will find mystery, intrigue, robbery and romance delightfully blended. A performance you can't afford to miss!

Friday evening, Mar. 31, at the H. S. Auditorium, a vocal and instrumental recital sponsored by the music teachers of Carrizozo will be given without charge to the public.

Dr. Blaney's Vulcanizer Explodes

Monday afternoon, the vulcanizer in Dr. Blaney's office exploded with the result that three windows were blown out and other damages to the amount of over $100 were sustained by the explosion. Luckily for his own safety, Dr. Blaney had gone into the reception room but a few seconds before the explosion occurred. The cause was due to the failure of the escape valve to work, which increased the pressure in the vulcanizer, and this had escaped the notice of the Doctor.

Petty Thievery on Mrs. Lillian Lane's Car

While Mrs. Lillian Lane was in town Tuesday from White Oaks, a five-gallon can of oil was stolen from her car in the middle of the afternoon. When thieves get that bold, it is the limit.

Mrs. R. T. Lucas left last Sunday evening on No. 4 for her home in Kansas City, after a short visit with the A. L. Burke family.

Miss Ardene McCammon spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Bert Farber at her home in Capitan.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Northrup, Mrs. Cody and Eric Williams were visitors from Fort Stanton Monday, returning to the Fort in the afternoon.

LOCAL MENTION

Rev. L. D. Jordan Saw Meteor

Rev. L. D. Jordan was witness to the great meteor while enroute home from Belen. He says it was a magnificent, awe-inspiring sight; he doubts that he will ever see such a spectacle again.

Sam Miller Sends Us Photos of Long Beach Quake Zone

This office has received some photos of the recent earthquake at Long Beach, Calif. Our friends and former Carrizozo neighbors, Mr. S. F. Miller, and his wife, though they have two other homes in this area that are now in Long Beach, Dr. T. W. Watson and Dr. S. T. Tamm. The horrible destruction left in the wake of the earthquake is terrible. The photos can be seen at this office.

Highway Service Station Improvements

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Harvey of the Highway Service Station are putting on some improvements on their filling station. They have a new concrete floor in front of the office; the tourist cabins are being newly painted in a beautiful shade of blue.

Rhymes With "Bear" Can You Do It?

If you want to write a new stien song there are plenty of words that rhyme with "bear." For example, "cheer," "smear," "queer" and "tear." Now some of you birds figure this out—for we can't. You poets might try:

"Ain't it queer
We don't have bear," etc.

A Special Session of the Legislature?

The late legislature wishes to have a special session and wants to hold it free of cost as far as salaries are concerned. This would mean that they had not finished the game and would like to play some more.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCourt left Wednesday for Hermosa Beach, Calif., after a sojourn of about two months here.

Mrs. F. J. Sager will entertain the Carrizozo Bridge Club at her home tomorrow afternoon.

Virginia Charles will leave the last of this week for Alamogordo where she will reside with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Farley and will finish the school term at that place.

A. D. Brownfield was a business visitor here Monday, after which he paid a visit to the Will Ed Harris ranch to visit the folks before returning to his home in El Paso.

Attorney H. B. Hamilton was a business visitor from El Paso Monday.

Mrs. Nellie Braum and daughter, Mrs. Oscar Clouse, left for El Paso last Saturday where they remained until Monday, during which time they paid a visit to Mrs. Braum's little granddaughter, Lottie Ellen Ayers.

Is It Any Wonder We Have High Taxes?

Any man who looked in upon the closing scenes of the recent adjourned and lamented Legislature could have found the answer to the high taxes which are assessed against New Mexico citizens.

The most important bill to come before that body was the general appropriation bill. That is the one which spends the people's money. Yet it was never introduced into either house until 4 o'clock Sunday morning, hours after the legislature had technically adjourned.

The bill was kept in the governor's office until that time. It was passed by the senate without ever being read although this procedure is in direct violation of the constitution.

What few senators present did not know what the bill contained.

It was simply read by caption or title and then passed because it had the endorsement of the governor.

In the house it was read by the reading clerk but the democratic floor leader, Coe Howard, said that not a member of the house could even guess within $300,000 of what the bill contained.

The house made one minor change in the bill thus making it necessary to go back to the senate for its approval.

Although the constitution provides that a majority of the members of the body must be present before any business may be transacted, only five members of the senate were actually there.

This small minority passed the bill and the senate journal will show that there was a quorum present.

The makers of our laws and the governor who executes them should obey all people obey the laws themselves.

When they set such examples of flagrant disregard for the constitution of our state, how can they expect obedience of law from others?

When our representatives and senators disregard their sworn duty and pass an important legislation as the general appropriation bill without having any idea of what it contains, can it be wondered at that there are inexcusable extravagances in the expenditure of public funds and that taxes on New Mexico property amount almost to confiscation?—Livingston Leader.

Jack Chancey was here from Corona several days this week and tells a short story about how he didn't get a highway job. The story appears elsewhere in this issue.

FORT STANTON NEWS

Cupid's arrow, whizzing thru the air with deadly accuracy, hit its "oeil de boeuf" one beautiful spring day, with the result that Otto Barnovsky of the Fort and Pearl Sipes of Capitan were united in marriage on March 23. An informal nuptial party and shower held at the bride's home was attended by friends of both parties. Gorgeous flowers, flourishing speeches and delicious toasts to the health and happiness of the young couple marked the event. On a short honeymoon trip to Roswell, where the groom is well acquainted, the matrimonial debutantes went shopping for articles essential to housekeeping and furnishing of their new place of abode, which will be located at Ruidoso, where Otto expects to establish himself in 'geschafte' of a modestly lucrative capacity.

Charles White died in the local hospital Wednesday at 4 a. m., after a long illness. His remains were interred at the station cemetery, with Rev. Father O'Hara conducting the funeral services.

Messrs. Laine and Hestnes each had an unfortunate auto accident last week between here and Capitan. Laine ran his Ford off the road and turned it over on a curve about a mile from the Fort. Hestner was forced over to the side of the road by a passing car so far that his Chevrolet ran into the railing of a bridge. Both escaped with but minor injuries while the cars were badly damaged.

Our Rev. E. Smith, who is a great lover of children, has had a small swimming pool constructed on the premises surrounding the community house, where the kiddies can splash around and cool off on hot summer days. The features of the pool will include spring boards for diving, water polo and aqua planing; the latter made possible by having J. Riley running around the edge pulling the aqua plane by a rope. Riley will also act as life guard and swimming instructor.

Mrs. Rentfrow's Father Died at Albuquerque

Last Wednesday night in the city of Albuquerque, John Henrich, father of Mrs. Doyle Rentfrow of this place, passed away at his home on north 12th street. Mr. Henrich had been in ill health for some time and shortly after Christmas Mrs. Henrich died and now at the loss of the father, the burden of grief is intensified. He leaves to mourn his loss, his son Fred and three daughters, Mesdames E. C. Weidenger, Doyle Rentfrow and Ralph Freda Weidenger; also two brothers and one sister.

The Albuquerque Tribune is a bit perturbed because the Democratic state central committee is mailing administration propaganda in envelopes furnished by the taxpayers for the magazine, New Mexico. Bridle your wrath, Senator Shaffer. The magazine and the publicity bureau of the Democratic committee are the fair Siamese twins which dwell upon the same high plane with the governor's herd of sacred cows.—State Record.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson spent last Saturday in El Paso.

Mrs. Erva Claunch entertained the Wednesday Bridge Club at her home this week.

NOGAL NOTES

Signs of Spring — Birds singing; trees blooming, and farmers busy.

Jim Gatwood has remodeled his irrigating project to the extent of increasing his water supply almost double to that of former years. Marvin Peacock has purchased some lots from Jim and is erecting a new residence.

Paul Vandegriff is improving his home by leveling up the yard and setting out some nice shade trees which he secured from Jesse May.

The R. F. Corp. has put on a tractor and grader and is greatly improving the roads.

Miss Carrie Dell Zumwalt arrived here last week from California for a visit with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Zumwalt.

Elmer Latham, who has been staying with the Whittaker family, has left for California.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Martin and daughter Jo Ann arrived here last week from Idaho, where Mr. Martin has been engaged in the fruit business for the past four years, under the training and advice of D. T. Sleep, a graduate and at the head of the agriculture department at Salem, Oregon. Mr. Martin is an expert in orchard work.

There will be a Barter Dance at Nogal on April 8. Tickets will be sold at 40 cents or for anything of that value.

Amateur Theatrical Stunts

Editor Outlook: Why not encourage amateur theatrical entertainments at the local picture house?

I believe this would draw people to the theatre who would not go otherwise. Since it would not cost the management anything, why not put on a few amateur stunts at the Friday night shows?

They could be put on last, and if anyone didn't like them, he could leave the theatre at the end of the regular program.

Carrizozo Honored

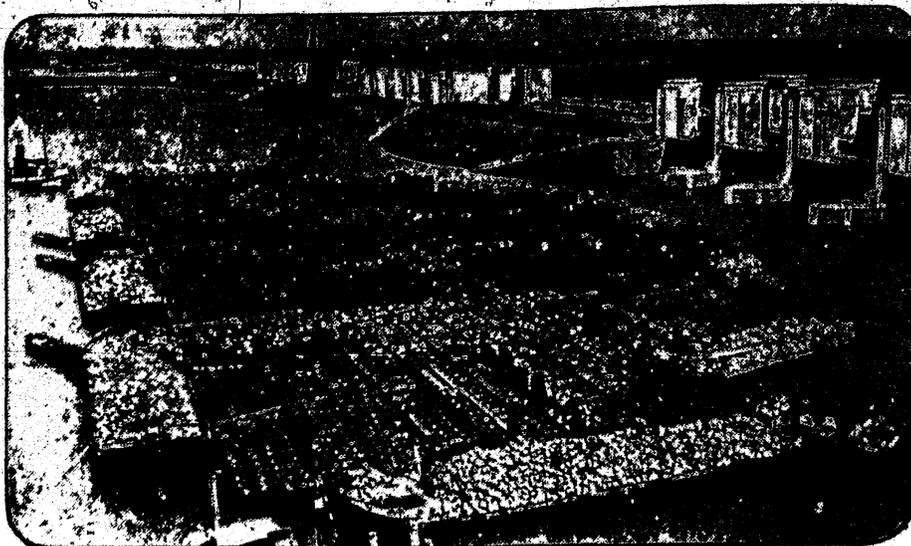

At the Order of Eastern Star Grand Chapter communication held in Roswell last week, E. M. Brickley of the First National Bank, and who served as Grand Sentinel in that body for 1932, was unanimously elected as Associate Grand Patron for 1933. This places him in line for the highest office in the Grand Chapter, that of the Grand Patron, to which he will take his next step in 1934. After his election, Mrs. C. A. McCammon, Worthy Matron of the local chapter, in a complimentary speech presented Mr. Brickley with a handsome gift with the kindest and best wishes of Chapter No. 28.

Great Mats to Protect the Zuider Zee Dike

At a fabulous cost the Dutch government has shut out the North Sea from the Zuider Zee by means of a huge dike 18 1/2 miles long joining north Holland and Friesland. The lake thus created is to be drained and divided into four sections of "polders" for cultivation. Meanwhile, many unforeseen problems are taxing the skill of the engineers. For example, it has been found that the current caused when the sluices are opened has a tendency to eat away the "floor" and so undermine the dike itself. To counteract this huge rafts made of a zinc-framework covered with mats of osier sticks have been weighted with basalt and sunk at the entrances to the sluices. The photograph shows workmen preparing to sink a raft at the Den Oever sluice.

Getting Oil From the Back Yards

Oklahoma has another oil boom, this time a series of backyard oil wells drilled on city lots on the edge of the residential section of Blackwell. Two of the oil "miners" are shown working their well, which is the smallest in the world. The wells come in at an average depth of only 23 feet from an oil sand 18 inches deep. They are being drilled with post augers and pumped by hand with common farm pitcher pumps, and each has a yield of five or six barrels a day.

HELLO! WHITE HOUSE

While the Indians with their hands full of cigars were greatly in the majority, there was also the grinning, dancing dandy, the jaunty young lady of wood, the genial stout gentleman in gaiters and shorts and other examples of the carver's art. The others have passed out of existence entirely, but the fate of the Indian has been almost as deplorable as that of the aborigines themselves. The only piece he can be found nowadays is in a museum.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Congress Quickly Acts on President Roosevelt's Request for New Legislation—Reopening of Banks Spurs Upturn in Business Activities.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S request to congress that he be given authority to make cuts in the salaries of government employees, up to 15 per cent, and to make reductions in the amounts paid to veterans, that authority to include practically an entire revamping of the government policy as it applies to government expenditures, as it applies to veterans of the World War and other wars, met with a quick response on the part of the house of representatives and the senate.

The bill passed the senate by a vote of 62 to 13. Forty-three Democrats and nineteen Republicans voted for the measure; four Democrats and nine Republicans against it.

The vote in the house was 236 for the measure and 138 against it. That result was not achieved without difficulty, and the difficulty came in the ranks of the President's party, and its passage would not have been possible without the aid of Republican members of the house. In a party caucus 92 Democratic members bolted the President's leadership and voted against the measure, their opposition being to that portion of the bill giving the President dictatorial powers in the matter of expenditures for veterans. At the final roll call, 197 Democrats and 69 Republicans voted for the bill, and 92 Democrats, 41 Republicans and five Farmer-Laborites against it. Several members who were opposed to the bill but who did not wish to be recorded as against an economy measure, decided not to vote.

An analysis of the vote shows that 68 per cent of the Democrats voting and 62 per cent of the Republicans stood by it, but leaders said that the Democratic percentage for the measure would have been much lower had not a parliamentary maneuver been invoked to prevent rebellious members of the party caucus from going through with their plans.

Still another factor was credited with part of the favorable vote, and that was the word passed around the house cloakrooms that President Roosevelt planned to denounce the opposition in a nation-wide radio broadcast if the bill had failed of approval.

It is believed the President will make a saving of approximately $355,000,000 in the expenditures for veteran relief by cutting out all men whose disability, on which claims for relief are based, was not the result of war service. The reduction in the salaries of government employees is expected to save approximately another $150,000,000.

In the senate an effort was made to delay the passage of the act by proposing amendments and the senate chamber resounded to the oratory of friends of the veteran and of federal employees, battling, against certain and overwhelming odds, to win some amendment to the bill.

WHILE the President has received Republican aid in securing desired legislation for his banking, economy and beer program, he will probably not be able to depend upon it to the same extent at least for his farm program. That contemplates giving the President dictatorial powers in so manipulating the price of farm products to bring them up to what is termed a "parity" price. The contemplated law would authorize the President, acting through the secretary of agriculture, to fix a parity price of each farm product; that is, a price at which the producer of the product would be placed on a parity with the producer of manufactured articles. For example, the secretary of agriculture might declare $1 a bushel to be the parity price of wheat. The object then would be to manipulate the price of wheat upward until the desired parity price should be reached.

In order to raise the prices of farm products the secretary of agriculture under the terms of the bill would invoke various devices. He might simply the domestic allotment plan to influence the prices of one group of commodities and the government land leasing plan in the case of another group.

Secretary Wallace insists that it would not be a price fixing law for the reason that no price would be fixed by fiat. Instead, a price would be declared to aim at and the measures adopted would be those judged most likely to raise the price to the point desired.

The products covered in the contemplated law are wheat, corn, cotton, cattle, sheep, hogs, milk, dairy products, tobacco and rice.

Along with this the President proposes the scaling down of farm mortgages and a reduction in the interest rates through agricultural credit agencies, all of which are to be consolidated under the direction of Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

BANKS began opening for business on March 19. On that date only banks connected with the Federal Reserve system and located in Federal Reserve bank cities opened their doors under licenses from the Treasury department. Banks in all clearing house cities that had applied for and been issued licenses either by the federal treasury or, in the case of state banks, by state banking departments, began opening on Tuesday, and those in the smaller cities and towns on Wednesday.

There were no restrictions placed on the banks in the way of limiting withdrawals, except where the depositor was attempting to secure sums that would indicate hoarding, when the person making the withdrawal was required to state his purpose and give his name and address.

The banks were also required not to pay out gold or gold certificates, the embargo the President had placed on gold being continued, and vast amounts of the metal were being returned to the banks. Up to March 19 it was estimated the Federal Reserve bank in New York had received more than $100,000,000 of hoarded gold and in Chicago more than $23,000,000 had been returned. The returns throughout the nation indicated a larger amount of gold brought back to the banks than the total withdrawal of the metal since February 1, though the government did not give out any definite statement on the subject.

It was after the President had repeated and emphasized the embargo he had placed on gold payments that Governor Hood of Utah signed a bill passed by the legislature requiring "the treasurer of the state of Utah and of each taxing subdivision within the state to pay all public employees under their jurisdiction in gold coin."

Where will Utah get the gold? The President, in a published statement and also in a national broadcast, detailed in simple language the reasons for the national bank holiday and the plans for opening. He was careful to emphasize the point that the time of opening any bank was not determined by its relative condition, but by the ability of the officials of the Federal Reserve banks and of the Treasury department to make the proper check for the issuing of licenses. He explained that banks that were not sound would not be permitted to open except under government supervision for the purpose of reorganizing them.

The reopened banks were supplied with a liberal allowance of the new currency based on bank assets, but in practically no case was any of this needed as the deposits exceeded the withdrawals, and in many cases the new currency was returned to the Federal Reserve banks.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT took time out from the urging of new legislation to give some consideration to the filling of important diplomatic posts. He has sent to the senate the names of Robert Worth Bingham, publisher of Louisville, Ky., as ambassador to Great Britain; Jesse Isador Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., New York department store, as ambassador to France, and Josephus Daniels, war secretary of the navy, under whom Mr. Roosevelt served as assistant secretary, as ambassador to Mexico.

At least one of these will meet with some opposition in the senate. Senator Arthur Robinson (Rep., Ind.) announced that he would offer evidence that Mr. Bingham had made speeches in England which caused him to be labeled as "apologetic American."

Advisers of the President, however, declared that he was fully satisfied that Mr. Bingham will assert and defend America's position on all issues emphatically and patriotically.

WORLD war veterans, the U. S. Supreme court decided, are without priority over other depositors in the claims against insolvent banks for the money received from the United States. The ruling was handed down in a case involving a deposit of approximately $5,000 which Sam Spicer had in the Hargis Bank and Trust company of Breathitt county, Kentucky, when it became insolvent.

The assets of the bank were not sufficient to pay all depositors, and it was contended that money received from the United States by veterans for insurance and disability allowances was money of the United States while on deposit in banks to the credit of veterans and was therefore entitled to priority. The Supreme court decided otherwise.

A TORNADO swept the Tennessee-Kentucky border from the Mississippi river to the Cumberland mountains, killing 30 persons, injuring more than 200 and did damage estimated at $1,000,000.

WITH a special message of only 72 words—the shortest Presidential message ever written—the President secured legislation amending the Volstead act and making 3.0 per cent beer legal in the United States. The President's 72 words were:

"I recommend to the congress the passage of legislation for the immediate modification of the Volstead act, in order to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution; and to provide through such manufacture and sale, by substantial taxes, a proper and much needed revenue for the government.

"I deem action at this time to be of the highest importance."

The beer bill provides for an alcoholic content of not over 3.05 per cent, for a tax of $5 a barrel, for a license fee of $1,000 for each brewery, and the law to be effective 15 days after it is signed by the President, which means beer will be on sale shortly after the first of April.

The bill was passed by a strictly non-partisan vote. In the house 238 Democrats voted for it, and 53 against; 78 Republicans for and 59 against, and 5 Farmer-Labor for. Twenty members did not vote, and there are two vacancies.

Kansas was the only state whose representatives voted solidly against the bill, while the representatives of 18 states voted all wet.

The senate amended the house bill to include wine, to make the alcoholic content of both 3.65 instead of 3.2 and to prohibit sale to children under sixteen years of age. The vote in the senate was 43 for the bill and 30 against, also along strictly non-partisan lines.

It is estimated the $5 a barrel tax on beer will produce about $125,000,000 additional revenue.

OF SPECIAL interest to Roman Catholics is the allocation delivered by Pope Pius at the secret consistory inaugurating the holy year.

His holiness issued a warning that communism is attempting to exploit the world's political and economic disorders and expressed a fervent wish for disarmament and settlement of war debts. The pontiff bestowed the Roman purple on six new cardinals of the church and announced that two others would be elevated later. The six elevated were: Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, former apostolic delegate at Washington; Archbishop Villeneuve of Quebec, Angelo Dolci, Archbishop Innitzer of Vienna, Archbishop Costa of Florence and Archbishop Fossati of Turin.

Beyond only to the "nefarious propaganda of communists" which, he said, threatens Christian civilization, the pontiff deplored proselytizing activities of Protestant sects in Italy and Rome. He describes these activities as being "impudently pursued" and urged all the faithful to co-operate against "this menace and defend the treasured riches of city and nation."

PLANS for immediate reconstruction and rehabilitation are well under way in Los Angeles and its suburbs, where earth tremors caused 115 deaths and property damage estimated at $75,000,000. An appeal has been made to the federal government and the Reconstruction Finance corporation for the majority of funds needed for rebuilding. Congress passed a bill, introduced by Senator William G. McAdoo of Los Angeles, for an emergency appropriation of $5,000,000 to relieve immediate distress in the stricken area.

The earthquake will probably give to science the first accurate records of just how the earth shakes during such a disaster, information which may be highly valuable in constructing buildings to withstand earthquakes in the future.

THE French cabinet is sounding out the members of the chamber of deputies in an attempt to whip up a majority in favor of paying the $19,281,452 war debt installment to the United States which was defaulted on December 15.

Former Premier Herriot has been lobbying in the government's behalf, seeking pledges to vote favorably in case Premier Daladier should decide to bring the matter to a vote. Herriot has been telling the deputies that it is necessary to act quickly, as the government would like to have the payment coincide with the departure of the new French ambassador to Washington.

THE new administration refuses to allow the United States to be bound by any action that is taken, but agrees to join the League of Nations members in a discussion of what the world should do about Japanese military inroads in northern China.

Hugh R. Wilson, minister to Switzerland, has been named to sit at the council table with the league's special advisory committee on the undeclared war in the Far East, with two important reservations: The United States, a non-member of the league, will not vote. It will not agree in advance to bow to the committee's decision, which may call for an economic boycott or other coercive measures.

...Mechanic Elder Schaffner found the Hidden Quart... Also that Without it, Motors Show 50% to 60% Greater Wear ...So He Switched to Conoco

THAT STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY

MECHANIC SCHAFFNER REPORTS ON DISCOVERY:

"I never did believe what Conoco Germ Processed oil would do; not until an Essex owner, with 25,000 miles on his speedometer, asked me to check his motor and put in new parts where necessary. It surely surprised me; clearance of pistons was only four 1-thousandths; of bearings only three 1-thousandths of an inch.

"This owner said he had used Conoco Germ Processed oil since the car was new. I have overhauled many another Essex at 25,000 miles, which has not used this oil, and found the wear 50% to 60% greater. Now I recommend Conoco Germ Processed Oil to my friends, and have changed to it in my own car."—Elder Schaffner, Highland, Ill.

Stop Cruel Motor Wear... Escape its Painful Cost
Don't Wait Another Day to Drain and Refill
With Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil

To a motor, lack of lubrication is cruelty indeed. You are too "humane" to permit it, if only you knew the truth. But motors suffer in silence till costly damage is done. Then you pay... and pay... and pay.

This is proved. Even with the crankcase empty, due to accident, users of this oil have driven many miles, without damage, on the "hidden quart" alone.

Isn't it smart and thrifty to have a "hidden quart" up in the parts of your motor, where you are sure it cannot fail? It is so simple to be safe so foolhardy to be in doubt. Tend to it today. Go now, drain and refill with the "hidden-quart" oil. Do it for safety's sake.

Let Those Who Have, Spend It

President and Mrs. Roosevelt have a 7½c luncheon at the White House, and the fact is widely publicized. In some quarters it is applauded.

Why? This newspaper says no good is accomplished by setting such an example. One trouble with the country is that those who have money to spend are pinching pennies and squeezing nickels. Let those who have money spend it! The more the better.

When the well-to-do go in for 7½ cent luncheons they reduce the consumption of commodities, maintain the oversupply and keep people out of work.

When John Moneybags throws a lavish party for his debutante daughter, some people gnash their teeth at such a display of extravagance. Not The Times!

If Moneybags spends $25,000 on tons of food, dozens of waiters, a huge orchestra, engraved invitations, expensive costumes for the women of his family and clothes for the men, a carload of flowers, and a dozen or so other items of expense that make business a little better, that's fine!

His $25,000 circulating in the hands of working people and tradesmen who NEED it is a lot better than the same $25,000 lying idle in his bank account. — El Paso Times (Democratic).

Farmers and Beer

Beer as an item of farm relief used to be scoffed at in the remote days when the return of beer was still a subject of debate.

It was said that the amount of barley that went into beer, even if reinforced by brewer's dray horses, would hardly make a dent in the nation's cereal production.

There are other entries on the menu. In addition to the barley in the beer and the oats and hay in the horses there should be reckoned the cereals, meat, vegetables and milk in the large army of men for whom the return of beer will provide employment — these men and their families.

It is quite true that the unemployed have not been allowed, so far as human effort could do it, to starve, or even to undergo serious undernourishment. But beyond question there has been a lowering of standards.

A man without a job is plainly not so good as a customer for the American farmer's products as a man with employment.

Beer, or shoes, or ships, or sealing wax, or whatever it is that helps to put men to work, farm relief.

It All Depends On Who Does It

"I note that Roosevelt and his wife had a luncheon for the small sum of 7½ cents. It all depends on who is doing it. If we were to do likewise, they'd call us stingy," a local man remarked.

Monkey Business
(Albuquerque Journal)

The late, and generally lamented New Mexico legislature seems to have been a trifle careless in its procedure in the matter of completing its legislative acts. An act was passed designed presumably, to establish an 8 hour working day. It contained a double negative which may invalidate it. It is reported that the oil severance tax, one of the few sound measures enacted, may have been invalidated by reason of certification by officers of the two houses on different days. If true, this would eliminate the revenue for at least two years. An income tax was passed supposedly for the purpose of raising revenue. It has emerged with much of the available income sources of the state exempted.

These Legislative incidents are the result of carelessness or there may have been "monkey business" in connection with this allegedly defective Legislation.

Such a thing, of course, has never been known in previous New Mexico Legislatures. Such a thing as "tampering" with a bill is, of course, not to be thought of.

The Governor of Arizona proposes to call the Legislature of his state into special session to correct its errors. Now a kind providence should say such result in New Mexico.

It would be far wiser and safer to endure the results of carelessness, etc. It would probably be cheaper.

The Intriguing Appetizer

By CAROLINE B. KING
Ordinary Expert and Lecturer in Domestic Science

Appetizer—Just a mere bite of something especially pungent and tasty, attractively served and made as inviting as possible, is now served by most hostesses as the first course of the dinner, whether the latter be just a little dinner for friends, or a more formal affair. The appetizer may be of fruit, sea or vegetable, as one desires. Genuine Swiss cheese, because of its aromatic alpine flavor and its peculiar adaptability for harmonizing with other foods, makes a most inviting appetizer.

Swiss Pigs in Blankets
Cut Swiss cheese in strips one-fourth inch square and two inches long. Brush lightly with mustard and wrap each in a water thin slice of bacon. Place on a hot griddle or under the broiler and grill until the bacon is crisp. Serve as strips of freshly made toast, garnishing each strip with a sprig of watercress.

Cheese and Tomato Casserole
Cut hotly sliced bread into rounds, toast one side and butter the uncooked side. Lay a slice of tomato on the buttered side, cover with a slice of Swiss cheese, sprinkle with paprika and salt and place under the broiler or in a hot oven until the cheese is soft and slightly brown. Garnish with minced green pepper and pineapples. Sprinkle with paprika.

pieces and fringe each end one-half inch deep. Place in ice water for an hour, then drain and wipe dry in the cavities of the celery place strips of Swiss cheese which have marinated in French dressing for a few moments. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very cold.

Apple Sandwiches
Slice a tart red apple very thin without peeling it, and cut each slice across; remove seeds; cut thinly sliced Swiss cheese in the same way and put together between the apple slices, sandwich fashion, the pale yellow of the cheese showing between the red skin of the apple. Fasten with toothpicks and serve at once.

Toasted Cheese
Toasted cheese makes a tempting appetizer served before a Dutch lunch. Slice Swiss cheese in square pieces one-quarter inch thick, and toast under the broiler. Seasoning heat saltine in the oven place a square of cheese on each bread lightly with mustard and top with a stick out from sauced potatoes.

Servicio Rice Casserole
On six rounds of buttered graham bread, place a slice of tomato and a slice of Swiss cheese. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, wash well and then add one hard-boiled egg, finely chopped. Season with salt, pepper and paprika and moisture with mayonnaise. Place this pile in a pastry bag and press through the nozzle into, placing a marble case on each round of bread. Cut back with sharp knife.

The Black Box of Silence

By Francis Lynde

SYNOPSIS

Owen Landis, young inventor, has developed an extraordinary "black box" which is stolen from a safe in his laboratory. Landis tells Wally Markham, his cousin, the only person, beside himself, knowing the combination of the safe. Betty Lawson, with whom the inventor is in love, a plaster cast of a woman's footprint, found beneath the window of the laboratory, is one of Betty's shoes. Betty tells Markham Herbert Canby, posing as a promoter, had driven her home the previous night, and that she had dozed in the car. The safe in the bank at Perthville is blown open and looted, the explosion being unheeded. Satisfied that his "black box" is in the hands of crooks, Landis, with Markham, goes to Perthville. At St. Johns, Markham learns Canby is driving west, with Betty Lawson and her father as guests in the car. Markham's car is stolen and wrecked. He buys another, and they go on. At Copah they meet Betty who explains the reason for her and her father's journey. A conversation between Canby and the three Louisville men convinces Markham and Landis they are on the right track. The conspiracy of the Crookville mine is robbed and two men killed. Again there was no sound. At Brewster they learn of the arrival of Canby and his party. Betty, Starbuck, mine owner, tells them of Canby's crookedness.

CHAPTER VIII

A Lost Trail

"Some man—that" said Landis gratefully, after Starbuck had gone. "What do you think of the glimpse he gave us of Canby's record?" "What I think will be embodied in a wire tip to dad. Don't you want to wire your folks—just to let them know you are still on earth?" "I will, now that we seem to have landed somewhere."

After they had sent their respective messages, they set out on a tour of inquiry, hoping to get some trace of the Fleetwing Eight and its passengers, taking the entire afternoon for it. It was an afternoon wasted. The three men, seen last as they were leaving Copah, had vanished as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed them. And not only the men, but the car, as well.

In the round of inquiry only one circumstance developed which might have some bearing upon the mystery. This was in the public garage where Canby was keeping his Nordyke. When they questioned the proprietor about the Fleetwing, he said he had put up only one car that had come from the east that morning, namely, Canby's limousine. Landis asked if he could fix the time of the limousine's arrival.

"Why, yes," was the reply. "It was just about five o'clock." "More mystery," said Landis, as they left the place. "You remember what the hotel clerk said this morning when we got in—which was a little after five o'clock?" "Don't know as I do. I was pretty tired and sleepy."

"You asked him if he had anybody else from the east and he said, 'Yes,' a party of three came in a couple of hours ago. Then he told us who the three people were."

"I see now what you are getting at. They leave two hours unaccounted for between the time Canby reached Brewster and the time he put his car up in the garage. Question: can we find out what he did in those two hours?"

"That's it. If we can, I have a notion that we shall find out what has become of the Fleetwing bunch."

Returning to the hotel, they were fully agreed that the only remaining chance of tracing the missing three was through Canby, since his connection with them had been conclusively proved. Markham went up to shave, while Landis went to the desk to have his card sent up to the Lawson.

"The professor and his daughter checked out this forenoon," was the information given him. "They have friends here the Stillings—and Mr. Stillings came after them."

"Did Mr. Canby go with them?" "Oh, no, he's still with us."

heard the firing or the explosion that wrecked the safe and the building. Is that so?"

"It is what Mr. Broughton told us." "I can't see that," was Starbuck's comment. "I know the mine layout; been there any number of times. The commissary site isn't much over a hundred yards from Broughton's bungalow. Don't seem believable that nobody heard the racket."

Landis was surprised into saying, "It would have been not only unbelievable, but impossible, a few weeks ago, Mr. Starbuck."

"Why—what do you mean by that?" Landis realized that he had said either too much or too little, and for the moment he saw no way out but by a relation of the black-box facts. And it was only the incredulity of the facts, as they must appear if given to a comparative stranger, that made him say, "Within a short time Wally and I have known of three other bank robberies which have been pulled off in exactly the same way; by dynamiting that nobody hears. The general belief seems to be that some new and absolutely noiseless explosive has been discovered."

"Pretty hard to make an old mining man swallow anything like that, Starbuck smiled. "Where were these bank robberies?"

"One in Indiana, one in Illinois, and the third in Missouri."

"Lately." "Within the past week." "Any clue to the robbers?"

Before Landis could reply, Markham stepped out of a descending elevator, much to the inventor's relief. Keen as was his admiration for Starbuck, he was not quite ready to tell him—or anybody—that he himself, and Wally Markham, held the only clue that might lead to the identification of the robbers.

"I was hoping we might eat with you, Cousin William," said Markham. Then, "Been digging into Owen a bit to find out what he is made of?"

"We've been talking about this ruction over at Stan Broughton's mine. Mr. Landis tells me you just missed being in the thick of it."

"We did. Shall we go in to dinner?" "As was most natural, the table talk centered upon the crime of the night before, and the mystery which seemed to be the chief feature of it. But there was no mention made of the three men who had so unaccountably disappeared somewhere on the eastward road."

It was after coffee had been served that Landis saw a man rise from his seat at a table on the other side of the room and come across in their direction, though he did not recognize the man as Canby until the promoter was beside them, and saying, "Well, well! See who's here! Betty was telling me last night that you two were in Copah, but she didn't say anything about your coming on to Brewster." Then, "How do, Mr. Starbuck?"

The three who were finishing their dinner reacted to the intrusion, each after his kind. Landis said nothing; Starbuck nodded, said, "How!" and went on sipping his coffee. Markham bridged the gap, chatting easily for a moment or two with the intruder, accounting for himself and Landis as vacation runaways from the home town, with no particular object in view, and expressing, in his turn, surprise that Canby could tear himself away from the Carthage promotion scheme, even for the pleasure of a motor trip in such good company as the professor and his pretty daughter.

At this last, the good-looking young promoter laughed and said, "Good company is right. But it so happened that I could combine business with pleasure. As you will testify, Mr. Starbuck, I still have a stake in the Timanyon, in the Quavapal."

"Um," said the elderly mine owner. "Thought I'd take a few days off and run out to see how we are getting along." Canby went on glibly; then, to the two Carthaginians, "We'll have to get together and do a bit of sight-seeing. I assure you the Timanyon is worth it."

As Canby returned to his table, Starbuck closed one eye slowly and said, "Did you two young fellows follow that crook out here?" Markham answered truthfully, "No; we are both inclined to think it was the other way round—that he followed us. Anyhow, he was behind us for a good part of the way. And his surprise just now at seeing us here was a fake. He knew, three days ago, that we were headed this way."

Silence for a minute, and then Starbuck spoke again. "Tell me, Walter, have you got anything on Canby?"

"No; but now he is here, and we're here, we'll try to keep cases on him, if only for the sake of enlightening some of our good friends in the home town. As I told you, he is trying to put over a deal something like the one he engineered here last summer, with—so my father thinks—just about as much profit to the investors in it."

"In that case—just a word to the wise, Walter. Slip a gun in your jeans if you're going to keep tabs on that rooster. There were some queer doings here in connection with the bauxite mine deal that never did get out into daylight."

That night, as they were returning to the hotel after an evening spent with Starbuck in the all-but-deserted mansion in the mesa suburb, Landis said, "Your cousin gives Canby a worse name than the one we've been giving him back home." Then, "It hurts me savagely when I think of the hold he's got upon Betty."

"Oh, I don't know," Markham was beginning; but before he could enlarge upon whatever doubt he had in mind, there were other things to think of. They had turned a corner, when three dark figures darted across the street in their rear. Before they could face about, Landis was staggering from a blow on the head, and Markham was doing his best as a skillful amateur boxer to keep from sharing his companion's fate.

Fortunately the beat was fairly good. A jab to the solar plexus sent one of the assailants groaning, in the gutter, and a hook to the jaw discouraged another. But the third man hit Markham's guarding arm a paralyzing blow with some heavy weapon and was swinging for a second when help came in the shape of a night patrolman turning the corner. "Hey—officer!" Markham shouted. As the policeman came on the run, the two who were still stout darted away, and the third man scrambled to his feet and bolted before the officer could come up.

"Now then—what's all this?" demanded the majesty of the law. "Was them fellows tryin' to hold ye up? Which way did they go?" "Down that alley," and as the patrolman gave chase, Markham turned to Landis, who was holding his head in his hands.

"Bad hurt, Owen?" "Sandbagged—knocked the senses out of me for a minute. What did they do to you?"

"Nothing much. 'Can you navigate?' 'I can walk all right. Sudden, wasn't it? What are they? Stick-up men?'"

"I'm wondering. There was no 'hands-up!' about it. They acted more like hired killers. The first one I hit had his knife out. There it is now, in the gutter," and he stooped and picked up a vicious weapon with an eight-inch blade and a bone handle. "Well, keep this for a souvenir."

In their rooms at the hotel they took account of their casualties. They were not serious. Then they examined the knife Wally had picked up. It was plainly of foreign manufacture, and on the smooth bone handle was carved a Spanish word which neither of them could translate. "Mexicans," said Markham; "I thought they were. It'd so they kill first and rob afterward, do they? And we had two perfectly good guns which we were careful to leave locked up safely here in the room! Never again, Owen, my boy. We go heeled after this. Let's turn in and forget it."

CHAPTER IX

In the Gulch

Going down to breakfast the next morning they found Starbuck waiting for them, and Markham told the mine owner what had befallen them after leaving his house.

"You say those fellows were Mexicans?" "That's only a guess. I couldn't see them very well. I'm hanging the guess upon the butcher knife one of them dropped. It has a Spanish word carved on the handle," and he spelled out the word, "S-a-n-g-r-e."

"Huh! Goes well with what he meant to use it for; means 'to bleed.' Have you notified the police?"

"No; the policeman who chased them doubtless reported it. It's all over now, and isn't likely to happen again."

"Maybe not; we'll hope not." Then, out of a clear sky, "But just one word. Are you both sure the man we were talking about yesterday wouldn't be sorry to see you two laid out on an undertaker's cooling board?"

This appeared to be the proper time to make a full statement of the facts precedent to a man who would unquestionably prove a friendly and powerful ally; but a well-filled dining room was hardly the place for confidences.

"That would be rather far-fetched, wouldn't it? The man you refer to is barely on speaking terms with Owen; and the only grudge he can hold against me is my refusal to buy stock in his promotion scheme."

This ended the holiday talk and the conversation drifted to other things. Later, when Starbuck asked what they were going to do with their day, Markham said they were intending to drive about and have a look at Brewster and its surroundings. This brought forth an invitation from the mine owner

JESUS MINISTERING TO JEWS AND GENTILES (World Friendship Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-37. GOLDEN TEXT—And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. John 10:16. PRIMARY TOPIC—Little Neighbors. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Foreign Woman Meeting Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Attitude to Other Races. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Ministry of Jesus to All Races.

1. Jesus Dealing With the Pharisees and Scribes (vv. 1-23). The Pharisees and scribes zealously sought to preserve Judaism from the encroachments of heathenism. In this effort they built up a wall of traditions which in turn obscured the very law of God. As they gathered together unto Christ, he taught them:

1. The Christ of formal worship (vv. 1-8). The teaching of the human heart is to depart from the life and rest in the form which was calculated to express the life. Christ declared that worship which centered in forms was as empty and meaningless as lip service while the heart is away from God. "This kind of service he calls 'hypocrisy,' and it is common today."

2. It made the Word of God of more effect (vv. 9-13). A case in point was the consecration of earthly goods to escape the responsibilities of caring for one's parents. This made it possible for a man to be living in luxury while his parents were in the poorhouse.

3. The real source of defilement (vv. 14-23). Sin is moral and spiritual. A man is defiled by that which springs out of his soul and not that which enters his mouth. The deliberate choice of the will is the source of defilement (v. 20).

11. Jesus Healing the Daughter of the Syrophenician Woman (vv. 24-30). In sharp contrast with the apostasy of Israel and their rejection of the Savior, we see in the Syrophenician woman the foregleam of the offer of the Savior to the Gentiles.

1. The mother's awful distress. Her daughter was grievously vexed with the devil. The daughter was the one afflicted, but the mother carried the burden. Doubtless, this Gentile woman had heard of the fame of Jesus, his power to heal, and many times begged for him to come that way that her daughter might be healed. She now came straightway to him.

2. Her fervent appeal for help (vv. 25, 26). She humbly fell at Jesus' feet and besought him to cast the devil out.

3. Her faith rewarded (vv. 27-30). a. Jesus' apparent refusal (v. 27). According to Matthew he answered her not a word. The reason for his silence was that she appealed to him on the wrong basis, addressing him as the Son of David (Matt. 15:22). An Israelite only had a right to seek his blessing as the Son of David. He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Jesus said, "Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it unto the dogs."

b. The woman's quick response (v. 28). As soon as she perceived the real difficulty she addressed him as Lord and cried for help (Matt. 15:25-27). Only an Israelite could approach him as the Son of David, but all could come to him and own him as Lord. She willingly took her place as a Gentile, showing her willingness to receive but the crumbs from the children's table.

c. The glorious issue of her faith (vv. 28, 30). Jesus said, "Go thy way, the devil is gone out of thy daughter."

111. Jesus Healing a Deaf-mute (vv. 31-37). 1. The place (v. 31). This is the region where he had healed the Gadarene demoniac and where the people had requested his withdrawal from this country (Mark 5:20), because of the loss of their swine.

2. The method (vv. 33, 34). a. "He took him aside from the multitude" (v. 33). He did this to avoid publicity.

b. "Put his fingers in his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue" (v. 33). This was a sign language designed to objectify to the man what Jesus was going to do for him.

c. "He looked up to heaven" (v. 34), to show to the man that his help was from God.

d. A command issued (v. 34). The cure was immediate and complete (v. 35).

3. The effect (vv. 36, 37). Though he charged them to "tell no man," so much the more they a great deal published it.

Larger Comprehension If the message is to come to men with most effect, there is need for larger comprehension on the part of those who proclaim it, as well as of those who lay plans for its release.—John R. Mott.

The Master Light In our world of the inner life we gratefully acknowledge Christ as the Master light of all our seeing, in whose radiant presence our problems are solved and our faith made plain.

J. Ney Miles, Miami mortician, was elected chairman of the Arizona industrial commission, member members named recently by Governor Moeur held their organization meeting.

The state senate has confirmed Governor Moeur's appointments to the Arizona industrial commission. They are J. Ney Miles, Miami; Howard Keener, Tucson, and Carl Holmes, Phoenix.

Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, and his friend, Ralph Hitchcock, are en route to Tucson, Ariz., where they will be guests of Mrs. John Greenway, ranch owner. The young men said they plan to find work in Arizona.

Twenty years of efforts by Kean St. Charles, aged senator from Mohave County, to enact legislation providing old age pension, materialized when Gov. B. H. Moeur signed the venerable senator's bill providing pensions for pioneer Arizonans.

Fear that the Arizona Children's Home might be forced to close its doors if funds for its operation are not obtained immediately was expressed by the executive committee of the board of directors at a meeting in Tucson.

During the month of February assistance totalling $26,676 was given 10,333 persons in Gila County, Arizona, by the Gila County RFC committee, according to a report made public by T. H. O'Brien, both state and county chairman. This was at a rate of approximately $2.60 per person.

Gov. B. H. Moeur offered medical aid and nurses of Arizona to the Southern California earthquake area. In a telegram to Mayor John C. Porter, Los Angeles, the chief executive extended to the citizens of that city and surrounding territory Arizona's sympathy in "this hour of dire need."

A campaign to eradicate coyotes in Dona Ana County has been opened in Las Cruces following the recent discovery of rabies on the Mossman ranch near Mesquite. Cattlemen have expressed the fear the disease if given a chance to spread will result in serious loss of livestock and possible danger to human beings.

Freight trains operated as local freight, regardless of number of cars or class of equipment, and trains of more than forty cars must be manned by six-man crews after March 10, 1933, the Arizona corporation commission has ordered. The order was handed down in an investigation of train operating conditions in the state begun by the commission on its own initiative.

The New Mexico state legislature has passed an emergency banking act, Senate Bill 245, granting Governor Arthur S. Sweeney the same authority over state banks that is held by President Roosevelt over national banks. The measure was introduced by special message from the governor. The bill was not read in either house and was passed under suspension of rules.

Chandler M. Wood, director of the Depositors' Protective Association of the defunct Arizona Bank, has announced that negotiations for the sale of the institution, with the resultant payment of 93 per cent to depositors, will be completed shortly. Passage of the mortgage moratorium bill by the cloventh legislature with an amendment excepting loans of defunct banks, made the transaction possible.

Apache County, Arizona, schools will be kept open throughout the remainder of the year under plans reached by the county commissioners at St. Johns, this week, according to word reaching Winslow. Expenses of the Apache schools will be drastically cut next year, it was said. Full details of the program are not yet completed. All schools where Indian pupils attend will be aided by government funds, it was said.

Pison nuts grown in the Gallup area are more suitable for commercial trade because they store better, according to K. P. Pritchner, manager of the Pison Nut Co. of Albuquerque, who is making a detailed survey of the supply in the southwest. In the survey he is being aided by the U. S. forest service. Nuts are found in New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and California, the survey has disclosed, but those in New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona are best suited to commercial use.

An Arizona wilderness has yielded what archaeologists believe was the birthplace of the Apache Indians, the last tribe of red men in the United States to be conquered. The ruins of an ancient city, larger than Pueblo Bonito, N. M., which up to now has been classified as the most populated prehistoric center, has been discovered by Dr. Byron Cummings, dean of archaeology at the University of Arizona.

Fearing an invasion of treasure hunters and souvenir seekers, Dr. Cummings is concealing the exact location. The city is on the great Apache reservation.

Two parties made inspection trips to the mine of the Arizona Coal Mine, Inc., recently, to gain first hand information regarding the only commercial coal mine in the state. It was reported by the owners of the mine, Evans Brothers, and Brock Hallberg.

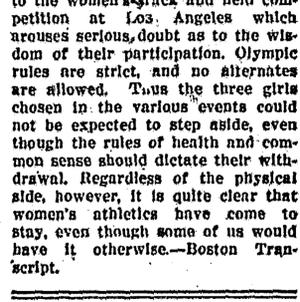

Completion of twenty-two miles of oil surrondage of the new grade completed last fall will provide a paved highway between Flagstaff and Holbrook, Ariz. Work on the oiling project and on new construction through Traction canyon near Peach Springs, has been let.

WOMEN "STARS" ON FIELD AND TRACK

No doubt about it, the feminine side of the Olympic track and field competition added a touch to this great international spectacle that was lacking until the bars were let down at Amsterdam four years ago. Seventeen countries sent women athletes to compete in track and field, swimming, fencing and gymnastics at Los Angeles, and thousands wondered before the games were finished why these modern Amazons have been classified as the weaker sex.

China, Turkey and India still cloister their womenfolk, but there was a sprinkling of entrants from European countries, and Japan marshaled a formidable array for the feminine activities. The United States has lagged in its development of women's sports, aside from swimming, but the rise of such a superstar as Mildred Didrikson, of Dallas, Texas, promises to make up for lost time. Miss Didrikson, who prefers to be called "Babe," qualified to compete in three track and field events—the 80-meter hurdles, javelin and discus throws.

And yet there is a physical side to the women's track and field competition at Los Angeles which arouses serious doubt as to the wisdom of their participation. Olympic rules are strict, and no alternates are allowed. Thus the three girls chosen in the various events could not be expected to step aside, even though the rules of health and common sense should dictate their withdrawal. Regardless of the physical side, however, it is quite clear that women's athletics have come to stay, even though some of us would have it otherwise.—Boston Transcript.

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

Rachel Jackson

WHEN Andrew Jackson took office as seventh President of the United States, he wore on his arm a band of black crepe. It was the symbol that in spirit at least his beloved wife Rachel, who died between his election and inauguration, martyred, many believe, by his political enemies, accompanied him into his new position of honor.

For Rachel was "Old Hickory's" one great love. When Jackson was but a callow young lawyer come out from North Carolina to establish law and order in the wilderness settlement of Nashville, he roomed at the home of Rachel's mother, the Widow Donelson. Rachel was then a dark-eyed, vivacious young woman, wife of Lewis Robards, whom she had met during a visit in Kentucky. Robards, it seems, was seldom home, but chose to be insanely jealous of his wife when he was there. Finally Robards loudly announced his intention of getting a divorce and set off for Virginia, which still controlled such matters in Tennessee territory, to arrange for it. News that his request had been granted filtered back to Nashville, and in the summer of 1791 believing herself free, Rachel married Andrew Jackson.

Three years later Robards actually did secure the divorce, on the ugly grounds of adultery, but, though the couple was straightway remarried and their friends were quite willing to forget the matter, Jackson's political enemies were quick to seize upon it and use it. As a result Jackson fought at least one duel of melodramatic aspect.

In 1823, when her husband was making his second attempt for the Presidency, Rachel was sixty, and old as women of the frontier are old at sixty. Once again the old scandal was revived, circulated throughout the country. Back in the Hermitage, busy tending the plantation while the general was away, entertaining his friends, among them the famous Sam Houston, and General Lafayette, Rachel was kept ignorant of her unwelcome part in the campaign. After the election, however, waiting in the back room of a hotel in Nashville where she had been buying clothes to wear when she accompanied her husband to Washington, Rachel overheard people laughing and talking about her. They were talking about her! She returned to the Hermitage a broken, sick woman, and when Andrew Jackson went up to Washington the next March, he went alone!

Tobey Riddle

AS IT was an Indian woman who aided the white man to gain his first foothold in this country, so another Indian woman, appropriately called the "Pocahontas of the Lava Beds," befriended him against her own people over two and a half centuries later.

Winema, daughter of the Modocs, had married Frank Riddle, a white man, adopted his customs, learned his language, and taken the name of Tobey Riddle. Now the Modocs were a small and peace-loving tribe of the Pacific Northwest, whose doom was sealed by the increasing inroads of white settlers in Oregon and California. In 1772 fifty Modoc braves, with three times as many women and children, were entrenched in the lava beds near the border, where, familiar with the crevices and passages among the rocks, they succeeded not only in defending themselves but in inflicting severe losses on the American army besieging them. In vain Gen. E. B. S. Canby attempted to treat with the enemy. He was under orders not to yield; they would not. At length, discouraged of gaining their ends, certain of the Modocs planned to murder the whites at their next parley. When their leader, Captain Jack, objected to such treachery, they threw a woman's hat and shawl on him, shaming him into consent.

Now Tobey Riddle and her husband were frequently called upon to act as interpreters between her people and his. Learning of the Modoc's plot, she straightway warned General Canby, pleading with him to call off the conference. But Canby had given his word to the red men. Five whites, unarmed, were to meet with the Modoc leaders under a flag of truce. True to his word, Canby went out unarmed to meet the Indians. With him were three other whites, two of whom bore hidden weapons, Tobey and her husband.

It was a tense conference. The Modocs again made their demands. Canby again refused. Then, at a given signal, the Modocs opened fire. Captain Jack's second shot felled the gallant Canby. Soon two more men were down, and Riddle and the fourth had taken to their heels. One of the fallen men was A. B. Meacham, former Indian agent and a friend of Tobey's. Seeing he was only wounded, she sprang to his defense. She was thrust aside by the butt of a rifle. Quick as thought she cried, "Soldiers are coming," and the Modocs fled.

Meacham was nursed back to health, the Modocs were eventually hunted down and their leaders hung, and Tobey, after many years as teacher and missionary to her own race, died in 1920, at the Klamath reservation in Oregon.

Nothing to Chance

By J. W. TAFF

By McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

CHARLES RANKIN, vice president of the First National bank of Colton, had just murdered Robert Knowles, president of the First National bank of Colton. Rankin looked down at the crumpled body and silently he gloated. He'd removed the last obstacle to his success. Tomorrow when the death of Knowles would be learned, he, Charles Rankin, would be elected to take the place of the dead president. And no one would ever guess that his rise from cashier to president in but a few years had not been the workings of a lucky fate. Only he knew that everything had been accomplished by cold, deliberate planning.

When George Curtis, former vice president of the bank, had been discovered in a hotel room in a compromising situation which had resulted in his disgrace and finally in his forced resignation, it had not been an accident. Not at all. He, Rankin, then cashier, had seen to that. "And when I'm elected president, tomorrow," he envisioned, "no one will ever learn that everything didn't happen through the mere whimsy of chance." And now with success in his grasp he was not going to slip.

He glanced at the clock on the mantel. Knowles' servant would be back in thirty minutes. He must work quickly. He knelt beside the dead body and rifled the pockets. Money and papers were taken from the dead man's pockets and dropped in the fire flickering in the fireplace. Then he dropped the iron cudge into the flames. Blackened and charred it would tell nothing. Finally, satisfied that his plan for making robbery seem the motive of the crime was completed, he left the fire.

He began to walk to each piece of furniture in the room. Anything which he might have touched by accident was scrutinized carefully and closely. The most perfect crimes have been spotted by fingerprints and he was taking no chances. He walked to the table in the center of the room at which Knowles had been sitting when he came in. He peered at it closely. Not a mark was on it. At last, satisfied that no nothing in the room had left any evidence which might implicate him, Rankin began to search himself. Too many murderers have been caught by the accidental dropping of some memento at the scene of their crime and he was playing it safe. He searched himself carefully. When his fingers went into the right side pocket of his overcoat and pulled out but one glove, he felt a chill start over him. He steadied himself and turned the pocket inside out. No glove. A premonition of danger, a momentary loss of confidence swept over him.

As he stood there, a sound stabbed him. Like a statue of stone, set and cold, he stood, listening intently. Then he remembered and looked at the clock. It had struck the quarter hour. He started. Only fifteen minutes left. His breath was coming in quick, short gasps. "The glove," he muttered, "the glove." He must find it. Or he'd be ruined. He retraced his steps, very thoroughly. It was useless. He could not find the glove. His eyes turned on the clock. Twelve minutes left. It throbbed in his mind. "Twelve minutes . . . twelve minutes . . ." For a moment a wild terror swept him. He shook it off. He must keep cool. He must. The glove was in the room. He was certain of it. He'd find it. Of course he'd find it. He must find it. He threw a straining, searching glance around the room. He saw the body on the floor. It was the only place he had not looked. In desperation he went to the dead body and turned it over. The glove was lying there. He grabbed it. Shivering from the contact with the murdered man, he stood up. A long sigh of a body relieved came from him. He was beginning to feel better. His confidence in himself was returning. Hurdledly he turned the glove over in his hand. Good. No blood on it. He shoved it in his pocket. From the relaxed tension a nervous sweat dripped from him.

How dry his mouth was. How weak his body felt. He snatched the wine glass from the table and in one quick gulp, he drained it. Ah, that was better. He buried the glass into the fireplace and heard the tinkle as it broke. No glass with finger prints on it was going to be found.

He looked at the clock. Eight minutes left. One final moment he let his glance rove and loiter on everything in the room, and then sure of his safety he started to leave.

Suddenly a great vice-like pain seemed to be cracking his heart. His feet buckled under him. He staggered. He tottered to the table and braced himself. In his struggle for breath, he shook the table and the book on it fell off. He saw there a sheet of paper and it had writing on it. It seemed to be mocking him. With a great effort he straightened up and regained a bit of control over himself. He picked up the paper. With fast dimming eyes he read:

To the First National Bank of Colton, Gentlemen:
This is my resignation. For the last year I have been gambling in the stock market and losing. I have lost not only my money but also the bank's. In a few days the auditors will find it out. Rather than bear the disgrace, I am drinking poison in my wine tonight. I would suggest as president of the bank the election of Mr. Charles Rankin. He is a fine man, has much ability, and is too shrewd to take chances.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington. — The banking crisis through which the nation is passing illustrates better than

Real Danger Not Realized language of the delicacy of balance that exists in normal times in the country's financial structure and the money that we use in daily life. An object lesson has been furnished also in the methods developed by the federal government to deal with the problem, for those methods show clearly how a misstep or a slip would wreck all that has been accomplished, including restoration of public confidence.

It has been, and continues to be, an ordeal by fire or whatever methods they used of old as a test, for President Roosevelt and his secretary of the treasury, William G. Woodin. Thus far, Mr. Woodin has retained his sense of humor. And it appears due to that fact alone that he has been able to last under the strain of the perilous period.

As time passes since the memorable night of March 5, when the President, by proclamation, closed the country's banks, and when he called the congress into extraordinary session, it became more evident that the country could not know the real danger of the situation at its worst. That accounts for much of the secrecy experienced during the several days succeeding March 5, when the treasury was unable to tell fully what was happening. There had to be a period in which to survey the situation and consider as quietly as frightened men could, what the best course was.

In other words, to save the banking structure from wreckage and hold the currency of the nation up in the faith of the people, drastic action was required.

It became evident immediately after the decision had been reached to close the banks until legislative remedies could be enacted, that the most difficult job lay ahead. The banks could be closed with ease, but they could not be opened with the same celerity. So a group of earnest men, government officials, bankers and economists, set to work to find out the way.

Those men recognized that public confidence was shaken. It had been disturbed by isolated cases such as had occurred in Michigan and in Maryland. These had resulted in hundreds of thousands of people rushing to the banks to withdraw their money. That was natural. Whether it was right or wrong to be a hoarder does not figure here. The condition happened, and in order to reopen the banks, there had to be a measure of confidence re-established.

Here is where the emergency banking legislation enters the picture. It proposed to make sufficient funds available so that the banks could have all of the cash they needed to pay out when their depositors called for it. Unless the banks could do that, there was no use to reopen them; if they could do that, nearly all of us were made to feel that there was no necessity for taking our money out of the bank, except, of course, the money that we had to spend for food and clothes and ordinary expenses.

Secretary Woodin several times has expressed his amazement at the calm demeanor of the People Calm in Crisis American people in the crisis. He said he believed that no other people in the world would have accepted the situation with the same philosophical calmness and understanding that marked their attitude in the circumstance of a Presidential order that closed all banks at one stroke of the pen. It made solution of the problem much easier. Of that there can be no doubt.

It may be several months before banking, as we have known it in normal times, will be operating again. But that should not be discouraging. The banking operations that are not going to go forward as they used to will be of the type that does not interfere with the bulk of the folks. Ordinary transactions can even now be carried out through the banks without the slightest hitch. The story it tells is one of accomplishing what many observers here feared were insurmountable difficulties when they first arose.

There was much that was not written for the metropolitan press in the stress of the perilous week of March 5. Things happened so fast and the dangers were so grave that many trained newspaper correspondents found themselves at a loss to present the picture. They were handicapped, of course, by the secrecy that the officials found necessary and consequently there was confusion. Hence, it appears likely that some months must elapse before there can be an analysis of the circumstances. At least, there must be more time before we can learn from the experience of those events what the lessons were and what can be done to prevent a recurrence of the dangers and the unwise moves, if there were such in the decisions of the administration.

Sound money advocates have expressed much fear over the emergency banking legislation that was enacted by congress with a speed that has been equaled only in war time. It is true that the law is nothing but wide open invitation. None denies it, anywhere.

The sound money group, however, are not so fearful of the law as they would be if it were enacted as a permanent policy. Their only concern now is, and they seem justified in it, over the question whether the emergency provisions will be withdrawn at the proper time. The law provides that its emergency sections may be withdrawn by Presidential proclamation, which would be an action restoring the former currency basis. If the currency issued under its provisions is taken out of circulation slowly, there ought not to be any bad effects, according to the experts on money questions.

President Roosevelt is going forward in carrying out his promises to reorganize the government as though His Promises he intended to accomplish something.

Heads are falling everywhere; new faces are appearing with a suddenness that is quite unusual even after a change in administration, and plans are being formulated that are announced as definitely in the direction of money saving in the cost of government.

It must be stated, however, that the appointments thus far, for the most part, have been generally recognized as "plums." They are the higher-ups. Some animosity is being aroused, and it is possible that it will spread to congress where politicians want, and are counting upon, their share of the pie. At any rate, the President has moved boldly on his appointments, thus far, just as he moved with boldness in dealing with the banking crisis.

Attention should be called, in passing, however, that in the banking crisis, Secretary Woodin relied to an amazing extent upon the advice and co-operation of the men who had preceded him in charge of the treasury. Ogden L. Mills, former secretary, has participated in all of the many conferences; Arthur A. Ballantine, former under secretary, has been at Mr. Woodin's elbow throughout the crisis, and John Douglas, the fiscal assistant secretary, has been on the job night and day.

Respecting this sharing of the labor, there is gossip around Washington that Mr. Mills and his associates had worked out the program for closing the banks and for their reopening on a new basis, just as has been done, but that President Roosevelt, while still President-elect, declined to sanction the plan. None knows, of course, whether this is true. It can be dismissed, therefore, as being among the things that are most interesting, if true.

The new administration, apparently, is going to have nothing to do with crop price stabilization.

No Crop Price. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who is the new chairman of the Federal Farm board, is dead set against it. He wants to get the government out of the field as quickly as he can. And with the power he is understood to have from the hands of the President, there remains little chance that Mr. Morgenthau contemplates indulging in any operations such as the previous Farm board employed to keep prices up.

It might be said in connection with Mr. Morgenthau's appointment, that eventually he will blossom out as the agricultural spokesman for the President. He may even overshadow the secretary of agriculture, Henry A. Wallace. That, of course, is a guess, but President Roosevelt wants to amalgamate all of the various agencies having to do with farm credit and make them function as one unit. Supervision of this work is slated to be placed in Mr. Morgenthau's hands, and it takes no stretch of the imagination to foresee the trend of events.

There ought to be some benefits obtainable by the merger which President Roosevelt has planned. One good result is readily discernible: under the plan, the farmer having dealings with the government over a federal farm loan, a loan to a co-operative, seed or feed loans or any of the other numerous types of business concerning credit, would be able to go to one regional office and take care of one proposition or several, if need be. It would have the effect of concentrating that phase of the farmer's relationship with the government.

Of course, one of the reasons why the rearrangement was planned, it was stated, is to effect savings of government money. The President thinks such an organization will not be so expensive to operate. But it remains to be seen whether this will be true. The experienced observers in Washington take the position that it is easy to see where savings can be made in eliminating useless or surplus agencies of the government. Yet, it is not so easy to attain those savings. Payrolls in government offices, once established, nearly always have a tendency to grow and the politicians proceed to fill places as fast as they can and to create new jobs where possible. The result is, and it applies to the proposed unification of farm credit agencies as well as others, those now on the payroll are more than likely to stay. How they will be squeezed off is something that none here have been able to answer to my satisfaction.

MONEY MERELY ONE FORM OF EXCHANGE

When a schoolboy swaps his galuses and an apple for some choice marbles or butts of a cigarette he is engaging in a trade practice which goes back pretty far in history. Reuben D. Cahn says, writing in the Chicago Tribune. Direct exchange of commodities known as barter was the means by which the earliest exchanges were effected.

But barter makes difficult the division of labor; that is, that scheme of having some folks do some things and other folks do other things. The bartering shoemaker who is in need of some feed for his horse must not only find the farmer who has feed, but one who also wants a pair of shoes. But it isn't that simple. The farmer with a stock of feed, while in need of footwear, may have a still greater need or desire for some article other than shoes which he expects to procure in trade for his horse feed. And there is also the question of the relationship of feed to shoes: how much oats equals a pair of kicks?

Barter is a waste of time in that it introduces the necessity not only of finding an individual who has what you want and wants what you have, but one that you can strike a bargain with.

Man wasn't long out of the tree before ways were found for surmounting these difficulties. In every tribe some commodities came to be generally prized and acceptable to nearly all persons. These came to be used as the means for expressing the value of other things and for effecting trades. Those who had articles to dispose of would accept the commonly prized articles, and those who would buy knew that they could do so by offering in trade a certain amount of the article of generally recognized value. The shoemaker could sell shoes to the weaver for some of the medium of exchange and at his own convenience he could use his receipts to buy from the farmer and from others. Such was the origin of money.

A great variety of articles have served as money. When white men came to America they found the Indians using strings of wampum as a medium of exchange. These strings of beads had value and were acceptable to every Indian, because every Indian desired to be decorated. Among other hunting tribes, skins of animals were the medium of exchange.

Among pastoral peoples, cattle and sheep were generally recognized as valuable, and were used in making exchanges. In Africa, cubes of salt have been used. Tea has been employed for the purpose in parts of Asia. In Virginia, tobacco long served as the standard of value. Other commodities which have constituted money, include rice, dates, coconuts, cowry shells and many metals.

The most common misconception of money arises from a failure to recognize that money did not originate with the government. It was an article of such generally recognized worth that it would be effectively used for a medium of exchange. Its use as such developed from the customs of individuals.

Money was and is a commodity which circulates by weight, as do other commodities. It has value because of its intrinsic worth, not because of what a government may call it. The very name of coins can be traced back to units of measurement, in the case of metals, units of weight. The shekel of the Hebrews was a weight. The as of the Romans was originally an ingot of copper, supposed to weigh an as. The livre of the French, the Spanish peso, the English pound, the German mark, were all originally names of weights.

It in their later years the monetary units did not weigh as much as origin of their names suggests, the fault lies with the kings who debased the coins below their original weights.

The Reason Jack Didn't Get the Highway Job

On Monday, March 27, I talked to Herman Kelt, Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee, about a job on the highway work and he referred me to the precinct committeeman at Corona, who informed me that they had friends who needed the work, and what was more, I worked for Tom DuBois in the last school election. This explains the reason I did not get the job.

Signed, O. M. (Jack) Chancey.

P. T. A. Dance

The P. T. A. will give a dance at Community Hall Saturday night, April 1. Few Stand Hitched

There are pitiful few newspapers in the state that have kept their mouths shut while others have given publicity to the rotten mess of the "deceased" Legislature. And they are the ones who bow themselves double and wait for the crumbs that fall from the "Master's Table."

They sat idly by and saw campaign pledges violated; the people's interests and money disregarded in a shameful manner—but no word of commendation has appeared in their columns.

State papers, both Democratic and Republican, have devoted a portion of their space to the "regusted" hippodrome pulled off at Santa Fe—besides the lonely few and these are the ones to whom the Master's commands are meat and drink.

Silence is sometimes golden, but not in the doings of the recent Legislature.

Mmes. E. L. Madson and Bill Lumpkins were here from Capitan Wednesday, doing some shopping, and before leaving for home, made this office a friendly call.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Burks of Capitan were in town last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lemons of Tulla, Texas, were here Tuesday, Mr. Lemons being the manager of the Tulla Flour Mills which puts out a quality of flour second to none in the southwest. Tulla's Best Flour as advertised in this issue of this paper, may be obtained at the Roy Skinner Grocery. Try it and be convinced of its merits.

Methodist Church

105 in Sunday School last Sunday; 69 at Angus. Mr. T. J. Grafton, our Sunday School Superintendent at Angus, is enjoying better health and was able to be in Sunday School last Sunday. A large and appreciative congregation attended the Young People's service at the Methodist Church last Sunday evening.

Next Sunday our Presiding Elder, the Rev. S. E. Allison, will be with us. He will preach at Capitan in the morning; at Angus in the afternoon; and in Carrizozo in the evening. The second quarterly conference will be held after the evening service in Carrizozo.

Our Easter service will be held on the Malpais at sunrise on Easter Sunday morning, April 16. The Sunday School and Eworth League as well as the Church, will participate. That will be the only service for Carrizozo for the day. Plan now to attend and reserve that sunrise hour. Infants as well as adults will receive the rite of Baptism at that service. Remember the time and place—Sunrise on Easter Sunday morning on a little rocky hill on the "island" as you enter the Malpais. A good road; you can drive to the hill in your car. A large chorus of singers will be there. Come and swell the chorus and let us commemorate the Resurrection of our Lord together.
