The Eighth Grade

Graduation Exercises were held at the Hi School Auditorium on April 27. This class was outstanding in many respects. Ken Willingham has not been absent nor tardy during the 8 grades. When the grades were averaged for the final grade, Jane Norman and Ruth Barnett had exactly the same average for salutorian. What to do? It was then decided that the salutory be given in unison. The girls spoke as one voice and deserve much credit for same. Wilma Snow gave a most interesting valedictory. The following students were neither absent nor tardy during the second semester and were given perfect attendance certificates: Jane Norman, Ruth Barnett, Eliza Hobbie, Edna McBrayer, Evelyn Claunch, Ken Willingham, William Kelt, Proceso Montoya, George Strauss and Esquivel Chavez.

The girls of the class have an unusual attendance record, having missed but 7 days during the entire term. Mr. Shafer gave a most interesting talk and Mrs. Spencer presented the diplomas with impressive remarks. Friday morning Mrs. Blaney presented the girls with silver thimbles and the boys with beautiful pencils, wishing them success in their high school work. Billy Beck and Catherine Smith of the 7th grade received perfect attendance certificates. Mrs. Blaney and Snyder treated the 7th grade to milk nickles. The 6th grade gave Hilda Barnett a handkerchief shower after which Mrs. Snyder treated them to milk nickles and music which was furnished by Celestino Sandoval on the accordion. We appreciate the co-operation of the parents.

Ten Dollars in Gold Awarded

Sunday morning, April 23, at the Methodist Sunday School, Miss Joyce Sloan was presented with a five dollar gold piece as an award for being the pupil in the grade school who best exemplified the cardinal points of character, honesty, kindness and politeness, during the past year. Miss Charlotte Emerson received a like reward for being the high school student who best exemplified these points. As was announced last year, these awards were made by the Methodist Sunday School to high school grade school pupils without regard to church or Sunday School affiliation. Mrs. Clara Snyder made the presentation speech and gave the awards on behalf of the Sunday School in a very impressive way. These were worthwhile awards to two very worthwhile young ladies. They are to be congratulated.

The dance last Saturday night at the Community Hall for the benefit of the misfortune to the building from the late twister, was well attended. "The Revelers" furnished the music, Mrs. Garner the sandwiches and coffee, the Jericho Club had charge of the gate receipts, Haven Glassmire acted as hat checker, a part of which he donated, the particulars of which will be seen in the report given by Mr. Brickley.

LOCAL MENTION

The Music Drama Study Club will meet at the home of Miss Ella Brickley Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 p. m. We will be glad to have all members present.—The Study Club.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Calvin Carl, Wednesday afternoon, May 10, and a good attendance is desired.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Rentfrow of their ranch beyond the Malpais were Carrizozo visitors on this Wednesday. They seem overjoyed at the recent rainfall; "Let 'er rain some more," says Doyle, "and see if we care!"

Miss Cora Crews was here from her home in Oscura Monday, transacting some legal business with Attorney E. M. Barber. Miss Cora returned home in the afternoon. Her flower garden, we understand, is quite a show place, and she is making ready to live up to that reputation.

Representative and Mrs. J. V. Taylor of Oscura were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday, remaining over to attend the benefit dance at the Community Hall that night.

Jack and Allen Davidson were here from Corona Tuesday in the interest of the affair to be given at the Corona Gym Saturday night, May 6. The play, "Madame Majesty," a Comedy, will be staged, after which a big dance will be held. There's lots of fun for those who attend and a good crowd is expected. Carrizozo people are invited, and as they are always royally entertained at Corona, this event will be no exception to the rule.

Miss Jensen, Nurse at the Johnson Hospital, is on her vacation. Miss Gee of El Paso is acting as relief nurse during her absence.

Mrs. Ernest Dingwall was a week-end visitor from Tucumcari, leaving for her home Monday morning.

The Carrizozo Business Men's Club met at their usual 6 o'clock dinner at the popular Carrizozo Eating House Wednesday evening. Various matters of interest to the public were discussed. Visitors were: Attorney George W. Pritchard and J. Veri Groce.

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo gave a pleasant card party at the Elizabeth Rooms Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Greisen were here from Capitan Wednesday, Mr. Greisen attending to some legal matters in the probate court, after which they returned home.

E. O. Prehm made a business trip to the northern part of the state the latter part of last week and returned Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Titworth were here from Capitan Wednesday evening, Mrs. Titworth visiting with Mrs. E. H. Sweet, while Mr. Titworth attended the meeting of the Carrizozo Business Men's Club, of which organization he is a member.

The Good Samaritan

Carrizozo vs. Cloudcroft

The strong Cloudcroft baseball team invades our portals for the first time next Sunday, May 7, for a game with the local team. This team is rated as one of the fastest in Otero county, and our boys have lost no time in getting in fine playing trim to meet this stiff opposition.

Last Sunday our boys played a hard game at Mountainair, which, they lost by the close score of 10 to 8. Although the veteran Pat Dolan was on the hilltop for us, the weather was so contrary and disagreeable, that our boys could not judge the ball and several costly errors were committed. The sandstorm was so terrific that Andres Lueras, playing on the rightfield, swears that he saw a prairie pup digging a hole in the clouds. Bob White and Manuel Ortiz hit homeruns for the locals.

We are not discouraged. . . . Come out and see us beat Cloudcroft next Sunday; Tularosa on the following Sunday and Mountainair on the 21st. Three wins in a row and all on the home grounds!

Attention, Masons!

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., will hold a Regular Communication Saturday night, May 6, for the purpose of business.

All Master Masons are cordially invited.

T. E. Kelley, W. M.
R. E. Lemon, Sec'y.

Announcement

Some children broke into the Community Hall Sunday evening by breaking out a glass and opening a window.

The high wind completely destroyed all the glass in the sash after they had left. The guard rail in front of the basement door was carried off. The City and County officials are investigating. The tracks left indicate this was done by children.

It is hereby ordered that all persons keep away from the City and Community Hall lawns unless they have the permission of the Mayor or Trustees of the Hall. Those causing the damage Sunday will be arrested if they can be located.

G. T. McQuillen,
Mayor
E. M. Brickley,
Trustee.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Reynolds left for El Paso Monday, staying over in the border city and returning home Wednesday.

The Revelers donated their services; the lunch was supplied and served without charge; the hat checker donated half of his receipts, all of which is duly appreciated by the public spirited citizens of Carrizozo.

The American Legion Post will give a Decoration Day dance May 29, and donate the proceeds.

Mrs. Morgan Lovelace has organized a club that will provide a steady monthly income for the hall. The plan will be to pay all expense of repairing the building and then as rapidly as possible retire all the debt after which the expense of keeping up the building will not be large. This can be done just as well now as at any other time, by united action on the part of the Carrizozo people and organizations this will be accomplished without any particular strain on anyone. The coming years no difference if they prove to be more prosperous than the one we are passing through, will bring their problems and it will be just as well to clean up as we go along. Further announcements later.

Enjoyable Picnic

was given by the P. T. A. of the Stetson School at Hollywood on April 25. The immense amount of good things to eat were served cafeteria style from a long board table. There were baked beans, chicken, ham, salads, pickles, sandwiches, pie, cake, coffee, etc. Needless to say, much enthusiasm was shown by the 150 people who attended. There were songs and music for the adults and several groups of children went hiking.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dale and son were here from their ranch near Ancho on business Monday.

NOGAL NOTES

The recent rain and snow in the Nogal district assures plenty of moisture for the early crops and gardens.

Ira Robinson is on the sick list this week.

Web Zumwalt and family are here this week visiting friends and relatives.

Word reached here the first of the week from Ruidoso that Fred Hale had been found dead in his bed with a shot through his head. The verdict of the coroner's jury was suicide and the remains were laid to rest in the Ruidoso cemetery.

Mrs. Eva Emerson suffered a big loss when in going to milk her cow Tuesday morning she found the same dead. The produce of the cow went a long ways toward a living to the family.

J. B. Heiman is back at his old job of gardening at the Stearns ranch and has a nice garden started.

Baby Georgia Dell Whittaker has been quite ill with whooping cough, but with the assistance of proper nursing she seems to be getting along fine.

Elizabeth A. Gumm

The sad news of the death of our highly esteemed postmistress, Mrs. E. A. Gumm, which occurred in El Paso yesterday morning following an operation, threw a cloak of sadness over the entire community. The message, sent to Mrs. Elsa Charles at the postoffice, was accompanied by no further information than that stated above; but last evening, Mrs. Lemon talked over the phone to Mrs. Laws, sister of Mrs. Gumm, who said that Dean Gumm, son of the deceased was expected to arrive on the late night train and also stated that the remains would arrive here on No. 12 this evening and that the funeral services would be held here at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Methodist Church, conducted by the local Chapter of the Eastern Star, the particulars of which, accompanied by a fitting tribute to the estimable lady, will be published next week.

The coming nuptials of Veri Groce and Miss Beatrix Boughner, the substance of which was taken from this paper, had complimentary mention in the Estancia News - Herald of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Johnson are here this week from Weed, where Ed has been working for the state highway department, but like many others, he was laid off for an indefinite period, which means that the lay-off will be permanent. They will go to Missouri where Eddie will enter the farming game and as this is the time to start in that particular industry, he has a good chance at making good and we wish him the best of everything.

Judge Frenger is making it warm for law violators. Out of the grist of the present court doings, there will be as many as six go to the penitentiary for from one to three years.

"Lo, the Forgotten Man is the Veteran," quoting a local man.

Obituary of William Oscar Garrison

William Oscar Garrison was born March 15, 1852, in Rome, Ga. He died in the home of his son in Carrizozo, May 5, 1933. Mr. Garrison was married to Miss Neal Beall Braswell, April 21, 1886, in Dallas. To this union 6 children were born, three of whom survive their father, namely: Verno Alfred, Dallas; Carl Oscar, Carrizozo; Mrs. H. C. Enas, Fort Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrison moved from Texas to Arizona in 1916 and came here in 1932.

Mr. Garrison was a devout member of the Methodist Church having joined in Texas many years ago. He was also a member of the Masonic order. Mr. Garrison was a quiet, unassuming man of culture, refinement and sterling qualities and was deeply interested in the well-being of his fellowman. A devoted husband and father and kindly friend and neighbor has left us. After brief funeral services conducted by Rev. Lawson and under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge, May 6, the remains were taken to Texas for interment.

Editor's Note—To the writer, Mr. Garrison was more than a friend, in whom one could place the utmost of implicit confidence. In his daily walks of life, a gentleman in every sense of the word; a Christian in his acts of kindness and a Mason, who balanced with the principles for which the order stands, will be sadly missed from its communications, in which he always held an honored seat. To his family, the sympathy of our community is tendered.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Lincoln County Associated Charities last Saturday afternoon, G. T. McQuillen and F. J. Sager tendered their resignations as chairman and secretary, respectively, and John E. Hall was elected to succeed Mr. McQuillen and Mrs. Ola C. Jones was elected Secretary, succeeding Mr. Sager.

L. T. Basot, roundhouse foreman, was a week-end visitor at El Paso.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Lo, the Poor Veteran

During the heat of the last presidential campaign, the veterans were the foremost in holding up Franklin D. Roosevelt as the proposed saviour of the country.

Little did they think at that time how things would turn out when it came to advancing the interests of those who fought and suffered for the cause in the world war.

Now, comes their idol who would issue orders making a cut of $400,000,000 from the compensation of those who served this country.

To quote from the message of Senator Cutting, who deplored the condition of things along that line, we take the following: Quote — "The new schedule of ratings is based neither on justice nor sound medical reasons. I am convinced that the so-called economy bill will entail more suffering, discontent and misery among defenseless men, women and children than any law passed by Congress!"

Going at length in his attitude of denunciation of the law, he finishes with the words (quote) — "No government worthy of survival can afford to neglect those who served it."

We know of many veterans and Republicans at that, who went their lengths to assist in the election of the President, flushed with the hope that their interests were safe in his hands and without the asking, they would have everything to their heart's desire. — How must they feel about it now? The young manhood of our country, the flower and pride of our land, who suffered privations, braved shot and shell, disease, pestilence, cold, hunger and death itself, are now the victims of misplaced confidence and the staggering amount cut from their compensation allowances for services overseas and at home, is their reward.

The veterans may now pause and reflect on the outcome of their support to an administration which thinks so little of the nation's defenders as to take from them, that to which they are justly due and to whom the best we have to give, belongs.

With all of the Democratic administration's parade about friendship to the veterans before the election, the bonus never will be paid. That was plainly evident when during the last Congress, a bill was presented and passed to pay the bonus — but just a few days ago, the present Democratic senate rejected the payment of the bonus by a big majority and of course, the House will follow suit.

This is a complete reversal of its former position which was only a grand-stand play to embarrass President Hoover at that time. Then, the question arises: Which party is really the friend of the veteran? Let the veterans answer the question.

Here and There

"When XER, the radio station at Villa Ahuna, Mexico, across from Del Rio, Tex., goes on 500,000 watts power, we'll have Cowboy songs and fiddlers playing by ear in over-abundance. I think that their present power of 75,000 watts is ample. I wish they should improve the class of their programs, instead of seeking more broadcasting power," remarked George Elmgren of Fort Stanton.

Paul Dodge of the Tucumcari Daily News keeps right on with his odd headlines. This week Paul had: "Walter, He Preaches That There Sermon" and "Walter, He Kiddeth the Public." It's all done in fun, nevertheless.

"You're right: 'Conservator' is another word for 'Receiver,' but doesn't sound half as offensive, but a rose by any other name has the same odor," observes Henry Hoffman.

To buy bakery goods made out of town isn't helping the local bakery one bit. Their products are just as good, in many cases superior, to El Paso bakery goods. Why? Because you can get them fresher. Please remember this. When you buy bakery goods made in El Paso, you are contributing to that city's support. Get the idea?

Chief of the state tax commission, Byron O. Beall, has made the statement that taxes are not being paid because people do not wish to pay them. There are a lot of people in Las Cruces who would very much like to have Beall visit that city and make that statement on the streets of Las Cruces. So says Paul Dodge in the Tucumcari News.

"The Chinese Elm tree has proven to be the most satisfactory tree for this climate," observes Mayor Geo. T. McQuillen. "In other words, it seems to thrive on our volcanic, gyp-like soil. There is less replacement of the Chinese elms than any tree planted in the Carrizozo vicinity and none have died that I know of," the Mayor asserts.

Wasn't the rain of Tuesday night something grand?

Oldsmobile, Buick and Pontiac Cars Equipped With an Aerial

All 1933 Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick closed models are now equipped with a screen-type aerial built into the top of each car for the installation of a radio.

This development of supplying aerials in a new car is in keeping with the increasing sales of car radios. A. H. Bartsch, parts and service manager of Buick-Olds - Pontiac Company states that during last year an increasingly large number of radios were installed on motor cars, particularly the new ones. And he states that the sales of radios for cars this year will probably double those of last year.

He attributes the increasing sale of car radios to the lower costs of the radios and installations, to better reception and tonal quality, which in turn have been due to better design of tubes and sets and the simplification of the installation problem.

A certain unfounded prejudice of the public and public officials has likewise been overcome through actual use of the radios on cars.

This prejudice was apparently due to the general belief that the distraction of a radio in a car took the mind of the driver off the operation of the car, with resultant belief that accidents would inevitably follow.

This has proven to be false, explains Mr. Bartsch. One of the distractions in a car is the conversation of the person or persons riding with the driver. The radio automatically shuts this distraction out, he explains. The second distraction is the sub-conscious wanderings of the driver's thoughts. The radio entertainment shuts out those wandering thoughts through concentration of the sub-conscious mind on the entertainment, with the result that most of the conscious faculties are focused on driving. Exhaustive tests have pointed conclusively to the fact that radio in a car slows down speeding.

In addition to building in aerials on all 1933 Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick closed cars, special radios have likewise been developed for these cars through which the same excellent qualities of the home radios have been made available to those who drive.

BEAUTY AND PROGRESSIVENESS OF COLOMBIA IMPRESS VISITORS

Because of its geographical location at the northwest corner of the continent and only a short distance from the Panama Canal, the Republic of Colombia is literally the gateway to South America.

More than ever is this enterprising country becoming the chief center of interest for those who visit the South American continent.

Visitors are impressed by the modern character, and increasing number of public works and transportation facilities in Colombia. Water, rail and air transportation are extensively used. Airplane travel, in fact, is more the accepted mode of covering long distances than almost anywhere else in the world.

Cathedral and Municipal Council at Cartagena.

Beautiful Architecture. Bogota, the capital, with 205,000 inhabitants, and other principal centers including Santa Marta, world's leading banana port and oldest city in South America, are a never ending source of delight to lovers of architecture. Pure Spanish, as well as Gothic and Byzantine characteristics are seen in many of the old cathedrals, monasteries and public buildings. Alongside these, one finds the most modern influences in recently built business structures and dwellings. City planning has been followed and ample provisions made for parks and spacious public squares.

Colombian hospitality comes in for its share of praise by returned travelers. Of special interest to those who touch at Barranquilla, not far from Santa Marta, on the Atlantic coast, is the de luxe Hotel Dal Frado, as unique as it is luxurious in its accommodations. Here one finds hospitality being dispensed in the true Colombian style, which means on a Large scale and of exquisite quality in Cartagena, another Atlantic port city and second only to Santa Marta in age, modernity vies with antiquity to enthral the foreign guest.

Medellin is another city of undoubted charm, with colorful tiled roofs extending for miles after miles like a kaleidoscope of saw puzzle. Its interesting panorama broken only by the green splashes of palm trees which give evidence of Medellin's proximity to the Equator. Medellin is in the heart of the coffee-growing region in Colombia and the streets of the city are teeming with activity. For Colombia is the second largest coffee producer in the world. The superior quality of its crop is chiefly due to the method of culture which takes advantage of the country's high altitudes to produce a flavor and aroma much in demand in the United States.

Goodness! What an Appetite!

If you are an average American citizen, you eat considerably more than your weight each year in wheat flour alone, according to latest available statistics of the U. S. Department of Commerce. By the time you have consumed 122 loaves of bread and several additional pounds of cake, pastries and biscuits, your yearly consumption of flour reaches the impressive total of 100.6 pounds.

The average per capita consumption of cheese is 4.5 pounds, a small part of which is imported from Italy, Switzerland and France, although most of the cheese we eat in America is made. Per capita consumption of butter is 17.92 pounds and, as in the case of cheese, it is almost entirely manufactured in the U. S.

One thing we do not produce for ourselves is coffee, our national beverage. It takes some 50 countries to furnish the world with its coffee, Colombia supplying us with the finest grades which are grown on the high slopes of the Andes Mountains. Altogether a total of approximately 1,800,000,000 pounds of coffee was shipped into U. S. ports last year, providing over 12 pounds per capita.

Mirages Seen No More
Certain parts of Kansas were formerly noted for the number of mirages to be encountered there at rather frequent intervals, but in recent years these interesting sky pictures have disappeared and the reason is said to rest in the fact that the state has been largely planted with wheat and the lack of variety in the landscape gives no opportunity for the formation of a mirage.

COFFEE NOT ALL COLOMBIA PRODUCES

A busy country is our nearest South American neighbor, the Republic of Colombia, which has been but lightly touched by the world-wide depression.

Her leading product is coffee, the production of which this thriving nation ranks second in the world market and first in the exportation of the favorable "high altitude" grades. According to figures recently submitted to the United States Commerce Department's Foodstuffs Division, there are almost 1,900 coffee trees per square mile of territory in Colombia while Brazil ranks second with 810 trees per square mile and Venezuela, the third largest South American coffee producer, raises an average of 308 trees per square mile.

In addition to cultivating a total of some 400,000,000 coffee trees, Colombia's 5 million industrious people manage to produce more gold than any country in South America and more platinum than any country in the world, according to the Bureau of

"It's an abandoned mine; abandoned a long time ago, at that. As to where it belongs on the map, I don't know. You won't be afraid to stay alone for a few minutes, will you? I'm going to climb up and see where this bucket leads to. Just stay where you are until you hear me lift the bucket and drop it. Then climb in and shake the rope when you are ready for me to haul you up. Will you do that?"

"Yes," she agreed; and with that he laid hold of the rope and began to climb up.

When he had wriggled out at the top of the shaft and found, by groping around, that it was capped with a wooden windlass, he was willing to rest for a few seconds and catch his breath before giving Betty the agreed-upon signal.

At once it was answered and he began to wind. In a few minutes he had drawn the bucket and its precious freight out upon the windlass platform.

When the candle was relighted it became apparent that they had ascended to what seemed to be nothing more than an upper layer of the rabbit warren of bewildering passages and drifts.

"Haven't you any idea where we are?" Betty asked.

"Wait a bit," said Landis; and then, "I've got it! Hasn't Bert Canby told you about his mine—the Quavapal?"

"Yes."

"Well, there are two Quavapals; the new one that is being worked now, and a much older one," and he repeated for her Starbuck's account of the ancient workings. "That is about where we are," he concluded; "buried somewhere in those old workings. We'll keep on going while the candle lasts. There must be some connection between these old workings and the new. You're not too tired to tramp, are you?"

"I'm not tired at all, now. And we must get out if we can. We haven't been kidnaped and shut up in here for nothing."

That was the beginning of a long period of fruitless wanderings in a maze that seemed endless.

It was not until their candle had dwindled to a half-inch that the really desperate character of their situation gripped Landis. With the light gone they would be utterly helpless.

"We are nearly at the end of things, Betty," he said soberly. "You see how much there is left of the candle. After it is gone we'll be just buried alive."

"I know; but I'm not afraid, Owen. It—it will be starvation, won't it? I don't want to die, but I'm not afraid. Let's sit here on this pile of rock and face it the best we can."

For a little while they sat in silence. When he spoke it was to say, "I'm to blame for whatever happens to you, Betty. If I hadn't brought you along—the devils, whoever they are, who kidnaped you, wouldn't have left you to starve at the bottom of that shaft."

"Maybe not. But you mustn't think of that now. You did what you thought was best; we both did. Do you think they've got Wally, too?"

"I'm afraid they have."

"If he is gone, there is nobody to miss us, not very soon, anyhow. The Stillings will think I was invited to stay overnight with the Smiths; and the people at the hotel won't miss you, will they?"

"No, I suppose not."

As he spoke, the remaining bit of candle wick fell over, to burn flickeringly for a few seconds before it went out.

After a moment in the Stygian darkness that followed the extinguishing of the candle, Betty said wearily, "I'm awfully tired; aren't you, Owen?"

"No; not very tired. But I know you must be. Put your head on my shoulder and go to sleep, if you can."

She did it, and after a little while he knew from her regular breathing that she had really fallen asleep. Before long he felt that he, too, was succumbing; and after a few efforts to fight off the lethargy of fatigue, his eyes closed in spite of his resolve, and he slept.

When he awoke Betty was still sleeping, with her head on his shoulder, and, sharp as was his desire to move and stretch and get the stiffness out of his muscles, he was unwilling to disturb her.

It was while he was sitting with wide-open eyes staring into the darkness that he saw, or thought he saw, a faint thinning of the darkness at a point directly opposite. He stared again and saw nothing. Then, in a flash, the faint thinning of the blackness came again, and his start at this repetition of the phenomenon awoke Betty.

"What is it?" she asked.

"I don't know. Look straight ahead; do you see anything?"

"Why—why, yes, it's light! Is someone coming for us?"

He rose stiffly and lifted her to her feet. "Well see," he said, but he did not say it hopefully.

What they saw, when they crossed to the mouth of one of the passages leading out of the space where they had slept, was a thing that Landis was not remotely expecting to see. The passage mouth was the entrance to a long, gently inclined tunnel, at the lower extremity of which was a faintly glowing electric light.

"What does that mean?" Betty asked, whispering as if she were afraid the miraculous light might disappear if she spoke above her breath. "It means that my guess was right. We've been lost in the old workings of the Quavapal, and that light is in one of the new workings!"

"Now that we know where we are, we can get out, can't we?"

"We can try mighty hard, anyway. We'll go down and see what's at the bottom of this rathole."

Approaching the lower end of the inclined passage, they could see that the light bulb was suspended from the roof of a much larger drift, through which ran a miniature railroad track. Landis asked Betty to stay behind in concealment while he went on to investigate. She consented, merely urging him to be careful.

"Don't worry about me; I'll hurry back after I find out whereabouts we are, and the way out."

Reaching the larger tunnel he found it empty. Though the working tunnel was lighted, it was driven on a curve which limited the view in either direction.

Since there was nothing to determine a choice, Landis turned to the left. Before he had gone very far he heard the rattle of a car on the rails behind him and hastily crowded himself into a niche in the tunnel wall. When the car came in sight he saw that it was pushed by a single man. A slight upgrade in the drift made the man put his head down and brace to his work, so he saw nothing as he passed Landis' hiding place.

Watching the car, Landis had a curious shock when, just before it disappeared, the squeaky rumbling of the wheels stopped abruptly. The car moved as silently as if the wheels and the rails upon which they were running were shod with velvet.

Convinced instantly that there could be but one reason for the sudden silence, Landis crept forward. The tunnel straightened itself and the scene he was more than half expecting to see was revealed.

In the tunnel heading a number of men were at work; two of them manipulating two big air drills which were vibrantly churning away at the rock face of the heading. But instead of the rucous clamor which this should have raised there was a silence as profound as that of the grave!

Fully aware now of the use to which his stolen invention was being put, Landis made a quick search for the hiding place of the black box. He had little difficulty in discovering it. It was half concealed in a shelf-like niche of the tunnel wall close at hand, the electric current for its operation being taken from the light wires overhead.

Landis saw that his time for action was short. In a few minutes, or perhaps seconds, the car would be coming out. Reaching up quickly, he opened a slide in the black box and did that which was needful to paralyze its delicate and intricate mechanism. Then, as the deafening, ear-splitting clamor of the chattering drills burst out in the heading, he leaped for a branching side drift.

The effect of the suddenly released air upon the men in the heading was astonishing. They had evidently become so well used to the abnormal conditions that the sudden resumption of the natural order of things precipitated a wild panic. While two of the men hastened to shut off the air pressure from the drills, the remainder came stumbling out, some with their fingers in their ears, and so on out of the picture.

A moment later the two who had run to stop the drills came along, but they were not hurrying. When they came under the nearest light bulb Landis recognized them at once as two of the three he and Markham had seen in the lobby at the Copah hotel, two of the trio who had driven westward from Copah to disappear so unaccountably and mysteriously.

"What the h— do you suppose went wrong with the machine?" one was saying as they passed.

"It got me for a second," said the other. "I wasn't looking for it. Think it gave the snap away?"

"If it did, there'll be merry h— to pay. The captain'll want to kill somebody. Today is the day when the big deal is to be pulled off."

This was all that Landis heard; and when he looked out he saw that they had taken the black box from its niche and were trying to make it function. Presently one said, "It's no good; she's gone out blink; burnt herself up inside somehow, I guess." Then Landis saw him open the slide in the side of the box and direct the beam of a pocket flash into the interior; saw him do this and heard his low whistle punctuated by the single word, "H—!"

"What for?" queried his companion.

"Smashed all to the devil," said the investigator, replacing the box on its shelf.

"Say! Didn't the captain give orders that one of us was to keep a strict watch on that box every minute of the day or night it was in here? And that isn't the worst of it. Do you know who smashed it? If you don't, I do, and well! It was the fellow who made it—the fellow we locked up in the old Indian mine last night!"

"You're crazy. That chute is a good two miles from the place where we locked that fellow up; and, allowing that he had a light—which he didn't—he'd get lost a million times before he could find the way over here."

"I don't care. He's the only—"

There were two empty dynamite boxes lying beside the railroad track, and Landis, looking on and listening in his covert, saw one of the men suddenly push the speaker to a seat on one of them, planting himself quickly on the other, and saying as he did so, "Cut out the chin music! Here comes the captain with his goldfishes! We want to let him find us keeping watch on that box!"

Landis craned his neck to enable him to see farther down the tunnel. A group of four men was approaching, the one in the lead carrying a flashlight. As the four passed he saw that the light carrier was Canby; but the three men who were picking their way in Canby's wake were strangers.

As the four came up, Canby stopped and spoke to one of the workmen.

"Air quit on you, did it, Jim? It's all right, I was just about to send in to tell you to knock out a bit until I could bring these gentlemen in and show them what we've got."

Landis reasoned instantly that this was said for the benefit of the three strangers. Canby must have learned from the panic-stricken miners the true cause for the stoppage.

"Of course, you can't tell much about a gold mine by merely looking at it," Landis heard the speaker say to the three as they stood in the heading.

"The assays tell the true story of the values, and, as you know, we have given your examiners a free rein."

"You have done everything you agreed to," said one of the three. "There is only one thing that puzzles us a bit; and that is, why you are willing to let go of so good a thing as this mine seems to be."

Canby laughed easily.

"I can give you the reason in four words, Mr. Fleming; I'm no mining man. A year ago I thought I was, and I let a bunch of scamps stick me for the old Quavapal. I found out pretty soon that I'd been 'done,' but the extent of the old workings was sufficient proof that the mine had once been a producer. So I sent some good money after the bad, developing one of the old veins. Here is the result; but, good as it is, it hasn't made a mining man out of me, my interests now are all in the East, and I can't ride two horses at once."

There was more talk. After a time one of the three said, "Well, I guess we have seen all we need to, and I think we may as well adjourn to Brewster and have our lawyers draw up the papers. What do you say, Fleming, and you, Cantrell?"

There was no dissenting voice, and a moment later the group of four was passing the mouth of the shallow drift on its way out.

For perhaps five minutes after the sound of the footsteps of the retreating quartette had died away in the distant reaches of the tunnel, the two men who were barring the way for Landis made no move, and his impatience to get back to Betty became a maddening obsession. Then one got upon his feet and began where he had left off when the interruption had come.

"I'm telling you that the fellow we locked up—the fellow that made that back-action loud-speaker over there—is the one that turned h— loose on us a little while ago, and I'll make a ten-to-one bet he's hiding in that old chute right now. Let's go back and get him."

Then to Landis came the thought of what they would find in the inclined chute—Betty, waiting bewildered and dismayed. His groping hand reached backward and fell upon a miner's shovel, and with only this for a weapon he leaped up and darted out Berserk-mad, to fall upon the retreating pair.

Fortunately for him the two men had their backs turned when he made his silent charge upon them, and before they heard him he had hit one a smashing blow over the head with his shovel, knocking him across the rails of the mine track. But before he could swing the shovel a second time, the other man had whirled, drawn his Colt and fired. It was merely a lucky chance that the heavy bullet struck the shovel blade and glanced aside to flatten harmlessly against the tunnel wall, but the chance sufficed. Before he could squeeze the trigger again, Landis was upon him, flailing at him with the shovel, mad with the madness that makes the fighting maniac invincible.

Driven back by the furious attack, the man tried to cover his face. A chopping blow of the shovel made him drop his pistol. At this he sought to close with the maniac, but Landis lowered his clumsy weapon from cutting to thrusting and the sharp blade of the digging tool caught the charging enemy just above the belt. He gave a grunt and bent double over the thrusting shovel, but in falling he got his hands upon his lighter antagonist and dragged him down.

Dropping the shovel, Landis tore fiercely at the gripping hands. Like grim death his opponent held on, struggling desperately for the breath the savage stomach thrust had deprived him of. It came at last, and when it did, Landis knew that the fight was lost; the man had him down, while he groped with the other hand for the dropped pistol.

Leading British Churchmen Want to Substitute Masculinity.

Without a word of comment, one of our readers sends me this clipping of a news dispatch, says a woman writer of international reputation: "The bishop of Liverpool, the dean of Canterbury and the moderator of the Church of Scotland are among a group of leading churchmen who have started a movement to reform the pictures of Christ.

"They want to substitute masculinity for what they regard as the excessive meekness that has characterized pictures of the founder of Christianity from the days of the old masters down to modern illustrations of Bibles and religious gift books. In an appeal artists are urged to paint a picture of a man who will appeal to modern youth.

"We want to picture Christ as strong and muscular," the appeal says. "We would not mind if the beard were sacrificed if that would make for a stronger face. People these days are inclined to be irreverent about beards, children particularly so. We want to get rid of sentimentality and substitute virility."

I read this twice, then rubbed my eyes, yet found the same thing. It is out a Bolshevik clan, hoping to build through destroying, but accredited leaders of the Church of England who want to make over Christ. "Substitute masculinity for meekness—make a stronger face—appeal to modern youth!" Preposterous as it seems, it's all there!

I should like to ask the eminent churchmen concerning what there is so important about modern youth to justify making Christ their image! There has been a "modern youth," by turns decried and exalted, in repeated generations ever since Christ envisioned a better human and a better world. All these modern youths have evaporated in the phizz of their own insignificance. But his legend remains, to give solace and strength and aspiration and hope to every succeeding generation.

It has appeared to me that a lack of meekness is not the most laudable characteristic of our modern youth. And yet the suggestion to idealize this in representations of Christ! If modern youth can be brought back to the church only to worship and emulate the spirit of themselves, why bring them back? What would the church have to give them?

Instead of agitating for a stronger face in representations of Christ, it would seem to me more constructive to point out the power of that meekness whose influence survives all the transient explosive virilities that have combated it throughout the ages.

Washington School News
(from last week)

Reporters: Eulogio Maes, Geo. Kimbrell, Vernon McCamant and Arthur Dow.

The wind came to see us last week. He blew the roof off the Community Hall. He is here most every day.

Arthur Dow's baby brother fell off the stairs and hurt his nose. We hope it will soon be well again.

School is near out. We like school. (?) We are going to ask Mr. Groce to let us have school this summer.

Our little banty hen is not hatching yet. We think she has not taken good care of her eggs. Maybe she let them get cold.

Our garden is coming up. The wheat is getting tall. Some day it will be ripe. The beans are coming up, too.

The boys won the race again. They get the ice cream cones. They want the girls to have ice cream too, so we'll have our picnic together.

This is our last newspaper this year. We thank all those who have helped us, and especially Mrs. Smith and Mr. Burke for the space in their big papers. We hope we can have another paper next year. Vacation time is here and we hate to say goodbye to our friends, our books and our teachers.

We Have What Martin Wants

We notice by the El Paso Times, that J. R. Martin of the U. S. Employment Bureau has an application from R. N. Campbell, state director of the same service at Knoxville, Tenn., for a carload of wild burros for the tame environment of Tennessee. Mr. Martin thinks they will be hard to find from the fact that they would be put to the trouble of hunting the asses in the vast recesses of the mountains.

Why go to all that trouble, Mr. Martin, when it would be an easy matter to pick out all you desire from the recent membership of the New Mexico legislature?

FORT STANTON NEWS

The Trowel Club again gave one of their enjoyable entertainments last Wednesday night, for which we extend our thanks and appreciation. This time, with a number of talents from Roswell, under the direction of Miss Harriet Poorbaugh, whose rich soprano voice filled the auditorium with melodious chants. Mrs. Bobby Trout's expert whistling captured the ears of the audience in a big way. Both these artists were accompanied on the piano by the talented Madames Stone and Wilder. Little Miss Ella Haines, dressed in magnificent and smart costumes, snatched a great salvo of applause from the audience by her singing and her dancing. She was accompanied by Miss Moreland on the piano whose solos on this instrument were also enthusiastically approved of.

A Mothers' Day Suggestion

If distance makes it impossible for you to be with her Mothers' Day, telephone your greetings.

It's like being there in person. Your voice is you, and there's a thrill in hearing a familiar voice miles away.

The Long Distance operator will be glad to tell you the rate.
