

ANCHO NOTES

Hilarity was keynote at Woman's Club party which was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower Saturday evening, May 13, when husbands were entertained. In progressive games which were the main diversion, S. J. Pruett won first prize and Mrs. Belknap second, with the consolation going to Miss Ruth Brown. On arrival each guest was presented with a purse containing 50c in nickels, and were told that each time the words 'yes' or 'no' were uttered a fine of 5c would be imposed. This created a great deal of merriment. At the end of the evening, Miss Maudie Warden possessed most money, so she was awarded a prize. Another amusing feature was a drawing contest in which Mmes. Wilson and Kile were the prize winners. Refreshments consisted of sandwiches, cake and coffee.

One of the latest type oil-burning refrigerators was installed in the Straley store this week.

Jess Vandervort and W. J. Balow motored to White Oaks Tuesday.

Homer Andrews was a weekend guest of Pete Frame in Carrizozo.

The G. F. Pruett family moved to Carrizozo this week. Ancho gave them up with much reluctance.

Mmes. J. D. Martin, L. L. Peters, John Straley and Allen Kile were guests of Mrs. John Dale and daughter Effie at a delicious chicken dinner Tuesday.

Mrs. C. C. Belknap was in Capitan last week as a guest of Mrs. George Titsworth.

Mrs. H. M. Brown and daughter Ruth visited the G. F. Pruett family prior to their departure.

Mrs. J. O. Carter, accompanied by her two sons, Albert and Johnny, was here this week visiting her sister, Mrs. J. C. Johnson and father, Mr. Frank Thompson. While here, the boys visited with their boyhood friends, Geo. and Cap Straley.

Deserving Appointment

News reached here yesterday from Washington to the effect that our esteemed citizen, Herman Kelt, Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee had been appointed postmaster at Carrizozo. Like in all times past, there has been quite a rivalry for that position in political circles, but the fact appeared that aside from politics Mr. Kelt was the choice of the people, especially those who are the heaviest patrons of that local institution, where the public, regardless of color, creed, politics or religion are to be served. As patrons of the postoffice, we offer congratulations to Mr. Kelt and commend the department on the wisdom of its selection.

F. R. Zumwalt is home from Artesia, where he has been superintending the school at Cottonwood for the past term. F. R. will remain at home until the new term opens, after which he will take up his duties at Artesia. F. R. always makes good, wherever he goes.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Roselle were here Monday from the Jicarilla mining regions. On their return, they were to begin work on their mining property.

Mothers' Day Observance

Last Sunday night at the High School Auditorium, a musical program was given in honor of Mothers' Day. There was a good attendance and singing was composed of a male chorus, a mixed chorus, a selection from a ladies' quartet and a solo by Raymond Lackland. Rev. Lawson preached a short sermon. The committee wishes to thank all those who assisted in making the observance of Mothers' Day a success.

S. P. Announces Another Dollar Day Excursion

Marking the arrival of another vacation season, cent-a-mile Dollar Day roundtrip excursions will be featured by the Southern Pacific over the Memorial Day week-end, May 26 to 30, inclusive, it was announced today.

The transportation bargains, effective between all points on the railroad's lines in six western states, will be available for fight fans planning to attend the Corbett-McLarnin championship bout in Los Angeles, May 29, it was pointed out.

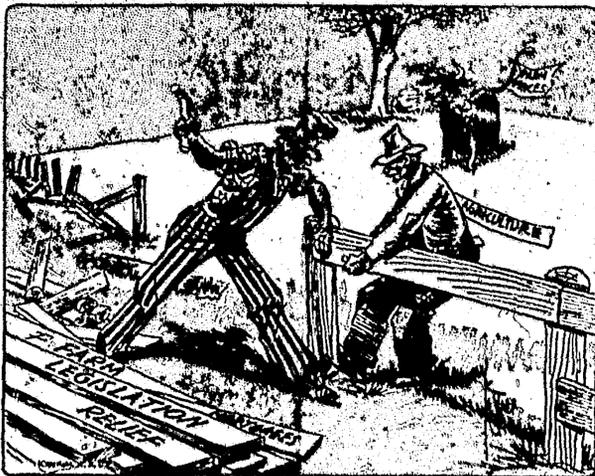

With a return limit of June 6, the excursions will permit travel between stations throughout western territory, company officials declared.

Mrs. J. M. Frame left Thursday evening for San Francisco to visit friends; also to have a check-up concerning an ailment. Mrs. Frame plans to be absent about three weeks.

I. N. Wingfield, merchant from Ruidoso, was a business visitor in town Monday; while here, he paid this office an appreciated call. Come again, Amigo Mio.

Mrs. T. C. Key and daughter Hilda of Capitan were Carrizozo visitors Tuesday, calling at the home of County Clerk and Mrs. Ernest Key.

Freak Lamb Is Displayed

A lamb with eight legs, two bodies, four ears, but only one head was displayed in Mountainair Tuesday. The freak came from the Rubi place north of town. The lamb was alive when born, but died shortly after.

The hind legs and rear portion of the two bodies were fully developed, but where the bodies ran together at the shoulder, two of the front legs grew out of position. Two of the ears were in normal position, while the other two grew out together at the top of the head.

In addition to its other peculiarities, the animal had several teeth in its lower jaw instead of the customary two, and also one large fully developed tooth.

Rubi gave the freak to Judge G. O. Caldwell, who plans to send it to Albuquerque to have it mounted.—Mountainair Independent.

Carrizozo Hits Winning Stride

The Carrizozo Baseball Team annexed their second victory of the season last Sunday by beating Tularosa in a wild and hectic game by a score of 19 to 18. Tularosa hit the ball to all corners of the lot in the first inning and when our boys finally managed to put the stop sign on their crew, they had crossed the plate with nine markers.

But oh, boy! Carrizozo came back determined in their time at bat and sent their starting pitcher with head bowed to the showers with a rain of base blows that netted them an equal amount of runs, thus entering into the second frame with the score tied at 9-all. Both teams played loose ball from then on and had not the Tularosa umpire succeeded with a few unfair decisions, our boys would have won by at least three or four scores.

"Red" pitched the entire game for Carrizozo and deserves much credit for pulling out of several bad holes throughout the game. The team, as a whole, fielded and batted in great fashion.

Hubert Reynolds donned the harness behind the catcher and we can only say that this boy "saves his onions."

Come out next Sunday and watch us trounce Mountainair.

Our old friend, fireman Bert Holland was here from Tucumcari for a short spell the first of the week. Bert looked well and wore the same old smile.

Edgar Zwick of El Paso is visiting his uncle, A. V. Swearingen and family this week.

FORT STANTON NEWS

The Stanton ball team has been re-organized and will include the following players: Jim Cavanaugh, Capt.; Jim Cavanaugh, Jr., Percy Parker, Stanley Bannash, Joe Evans, Louis Lumpkin, Shipman, Price, Margarito Chavez, Bill Ferguson, Lester Haley, Bill Hobbs, Gerald Tully and Felix Ramey. During recent practice games the boys showed up to be in excellent shape. The Stanton stars have in the past drawn crowds from unbelievable distances and we are looking forward to many thrilling games this season. On Sunday they open up with the Tinnie team.

Plans are being made for the usual 4th of July celebration by the following committee, appointed by Dr. Allen: Miss Ethel Garnett, Messrs. Boyd, Hendren, Kusanovich and Elmgren. This big event will feature free barbecue, fireworks display, horse racing, wild cow milking, bronco busting, calf roping, cowboy comedians, etc., and a good baseball game. There will be concessions and side shows. A good time is absolutely guaranteed.

While driving the car belonging to Mr. Linasar, from Capitan to the Fort, 'Baron' Alexander Geldish swerved the machine a little too much to the left of the road with the result that it overturned. The occupants escaped with but minor injuries while the car was badly damaged.

When attempting to get acquainted with a bovine debutante which had just made its appearance in this world, William Peterson came close to being assassinated by its rather inimical 'madre' who distinctly frowned upon Peterson's act of imposing on her privacy. These feelings, according to our friend's vivid narrative, she displayed by a frenzied 'Hula-hula' dance executed with the rear end while the front legs were vigorously employed to transform terra firma into clouds of dust—much in the fashion of a hysterical golf enthusiast attempting to club the object of his wrath. Our hero's excellent footwork drew the curtain on the melodrama.

Affairs Are So Mixed

These days are so full of contrast! The United States will pour millions of dollars into Muscle Shoals to manufacture Nitrates so that the farmer can spread 'em on his land and raise bigger crops.

And, likewise, the United States says instead of raising bigger crops he must raise smaller crops. And the brewers say that beer lends zest to the appetite and cheer to the heart and awakens the better nature in man.

But the Nazis fill themselves full of beer and then go out and kick the pants of the Jews and Socialists.

Oh, well, things are just naturally hard to savvy right now.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—In all of the haste and bustle of getting things done in this crisis, it seems to me that one of the greatest transformations of all time has taken place. I refer to the reversal of powers that are exercised by congress and the Chief Executive. Actually, in the period of a little over two months, or since Franklin D. Roosevelt became President, congress has abdicated much power in favor of the President and the President, in turn, has given to congress a veto power which it never has had before.

It will be recalled that the Constitution prescribes the limits of authority of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of our government. Congress was supposed to be the check on the executive powers just as the President, through the exercise of a veto on legislation, was to be the check on acts of the national legislature. The courts, or the Supreme court of the United States, were given a whip hand over both.

The circumstances of it all are so important and the procedure so unique that a review of the period probably is necessary to set out the picture. Further, there is no doubt in the minds of many authorities and many students of government that the things which have happened are going to affect the future of this nation vitally and in ways of which we do not dream. From the perspective of the present, it is made to appear that they could not have happened except for the crisis through which the nation, and the world, has passed. Yet it remains as fact that congress has turned over to President Roosevelt authority which it may recall to itself only with the greatest difficulty.

Chronologically, events have transpired something in this order:

The President took office as the banking structure of the nation was crumbling. He acted without delay, and then asked congress to support his hand with the legislation that was necessary. Congress had no choice. It voted the emergency banking bill through in record time. That legislation would have taken years otherwise, to have been enacted. But congress was scared!

Next came the authority for reorganization of the government. It was put through quickly because everybody in congress wanted to save money and balance the budget. Also, most members of congress saw a nice sidekick which they could travel and avoid meeting face to face with the question of reducing the payment to veterans. They did not fancy cutting government salaries, either. So they thought it was fine to "let Franklin do it." He acted promptly and with neatness, saving probably more than four hundred millions a year in what he believed to be unwarranted payments to veterans and one-fourth as much more in other ways.

It was in this legislation as well as in the banking act that congress began to give away its control. The statement can fairly be made that the bulk of house and senate members had no comprehension of what was done by the banking act, but the same cannot be said of the reorganization act. That was simple legislation. It said in plain language that the President could make about any changes to the structure of the government which he deemed advisable. He was to do it by executive order and if congress had not acted affirmatively in a prescribed time, the executive order stood as law.

To those unacquainted with the procedure, the reversal of practice may not be so apparent. But after congress had delegated that authority to the President, it can stop his action only by a two-thirds vote. That is difficult to obtain except in an emergency.

Assume, for an illustration, that congress is dissatisfied with some move made by the President in connection with reorganization and it passes a resolution setting aside that particular executive order. Mere passage of the resolution does not make it the law of the land, for there is yet the signature of the President to be obtained. If the President chose to veto the resolution, the congress then to make its will effective must repass that resolution by a majority of two-thirds. It thus exercises veto power, something hitherto unknown.

Now, as to the banking act: the President was given broad discretionary power to reconstruct the banking system. True, it was an emergency, a crisis. But that legislation went so far as to permit the Chief Executive to take over and operate the federal reserve banks. By that means, it is not beyond a stretch of imagination that he actually can control the commercial banks of the country. The tie-up between the federal reserve banks and the privately owned commercial banks is so close that control of the one opens hundreds of avenues by which the other may be reached. Congress can withdraw that power by repealing the legislation. It is supreme in that field. Yet, in order to repeal the law, the repealer must be signed by the President.

Along came the farm bill to which was added the inflation amendment presented by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma. No more dictatorial power ever was accorded the head of any government, except the absolute monarchy, than is given to the President of our country. In the farm bill itself there is power to control crop production, a power to restrict acreage, if the Chief Executive wants to go that far.

In the Thomas Inflation amendment, the authority is given the Chief Executive to change the value of your money and mine, at whatever time he sees fit. He can make the gold dollar worth half what it was heretofore; he can use silver to an extent he deems necessary, and he appears to have been given power to arrange treaties on monetary standards without even consulting again with the congress. It had always been supposed that the Constitution required the advice and consent of the senate on treaties, but the authority now, apparently rests in the hands of the Chief Executive alone.

Between the banking legislation and the farm bill, with its inflation section, congress voted the President the right to organize a new "army" of upwards of 250,000 men. The reforestation bill that became law called for the mobilization of a "citizen's conservation corps," a legitimate peacetime organization for the purpose of re-establishing a source of timber supply. Mr. Roosevelt was given wide discretion as to how that corps would be recruited, trained and used. It is a matter clear out of the hands of congress.

Others are yet to come. Among them is the railroad legislation that is now shaping up. The President can become monarch of the rail systems through the federal co-ordinator for which the legislation provides.

Powers in Better Hands

One hears a good deal of discussion in Washington respecting the powers which the President has been given. Generally speaking, the conclusion is that they are in better hands than if they remained with congress under the present circumstance. The President has demonstrated that he knows what he wants, and most members of congress are afraid to deny requests which he makes.

Take the inflation amendment for example. Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly saw a tidal wave of inflation sentiment in congress. It was there. So in order to maintain control, he placed himself at the head of the inflation parade. It is unthinkable that he will ever use all of the various powers given him in the inflation amendment, for he knows that the remedy would be worse than the disease they seek to cure in most instances. But by the simple expedient of inviting the inflationists to dump all of their remedies into one basket and to give him discretionary power to use them as he desires, he continued to command the forces. I have heard it suggested frequently that many of the inflationists do not realize yet how they let the thing get away from them.

And it did get away. Having made the means available once, there are not so many senators and representatives who will vote to make it mandatory now. If they did, the President could veto the bills and there seems little chance of enough votes to pass that sort of thing over the veto of the Chief Executive.

Keeps Them Afloat

Observers here used to think that Calvin Coolidge kept the politicians in congress "up in the manner" in which he out-guessed them. The judgment now is that Roosevelt has improved on the Coolidge plan to the point where his plans take on elements of mystery. The action in the case of the inflation ghost is typical. It was wholly unexpected. He keeps things to himself until his mind is made up. Then, without further ado a brief message goes to congress and the thing is done. The method has proved immensely practical as well as effective. Whether the results are right or wrong is not within the realm of my discussion.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, continues to have his troubles in keeping Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, on the party reservation. Senator Long, the self-styled kingfish, just won't stand hitched. Consequently, clashes between Robinson and the kingfish are frequent since the Democratic leader is equipped with a vicious tongue and more than the average amount of courage.

The kingfish does more talking than any other senator. It irks Robinson to see his plans upset as the kingfish frequently speaks them by his long, rambling speeches into which he sprinkles numerous quotations from the Bible.

DEPRESSION BRINGS IDEA

The idea that the world depression might be cured by making Chinamen's shirts an inch longer has been brought out in a new phase by a politician of Nanking, China. He proposes to introduce laws which will compel women's "limbs" to be "properly covered." This will mean long skirts and sleeves in all gowns, thus requiring more cloth made by local textile mills. The politician advocates men's suits modeled "more or less" on European styles, except that they would be buttoned up to the neck. Women's clubs may be expected to rise in protest against the long-skirt idea.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Socialist United States

From the Roswell Record

It has been said that the United States has turned from Democracy to Socialism within the last two months and the statement is more or less true. Government through the states has been substituted by government from Washington.

The Socialist platform demanded repeal of the 18th amendment with government control of liquor and the protection of dry states. That is in process of being done, for the 18th amendment has been virtually overthrown whether it has been wiped from the statute books or not.

The Socialist platform calls for five billions for public work and five billions for relief. That is being done under different bills, but with the same practical result in the end. Other Socialist planks called for federal control of the banking system of the nation, industry and commerce. That has been done or is in the process of being completed.

State lines have been virtually wiped out and the federal government is taking control of both commerce and industry, as it has taken control of the banking system of the nation. Utilities were to be controlled and regulated by the Socialist platform. That is about to be done by the federal government.

Disarmament, recognition of Soviet Russia, entrance into the World Court, the League of Nations and practically, the cancellation of the war debts, although it will not be called that, are all in the making and bid fair to be consummated before the end of the year. Disarmament of our own military forces is being effected under the name of economy. Governmental aid for farmers and home-owners was demanded by the Socialists; that is in process of being brought about and so on it goes down the entire line.

The Socialist platform is in process of being placed into effect in this country. We have had a revolution, a peaceful revolution, but none the less a revolution and few have perceived that it has come about. We are a Socialist state; not a Republic.

American vs. European and Asiatic Workers

Arthur Brisbane says in substance:

Tearing down tariff walls to oblige foreign workmen and manufacturers that need our markets, and at the same time 'revising our war debts' to oblige nations that borrowed from us, would be pleasant for foreigners, less pleasant for Americans.

He cannot have that if he must compete with Asiatics or the Europeans getting 25 cents to one dollar a day. Americans should buy from American workers, spend their money in the United States where they get it.

He who advocates bringing down the tariff, to put American

Those Tax Sales

Gov. Seligman and Tax Commissioner Beall are doing everything in their power to force tax sales June 12th.

They have defended this iniquitous law repeatedly, and yesterday climaxing their offense by declaring the sales would be held.

While governors in other states, taxing authorities and state officials are showing signs of humanity by doing all they can to delay tax sales, by moratoriums or otherwise, there is no such sign of humanity in New Mexico among the state officials.

We are wondering whether men like Seligman and Beall are unaware that they have signed their warrants of political death, for neither of them could ever again be elected to any office in New Mexico. - Roswell Record.

May 9, 1933

A great thing has occurred amongst us. We have made a complete turn-around, and at last America's face is toward the future.
Three years—1929 to 1932—we Americans looked backward. All our old financial and political machinery was geared to pull us out of the depression by the same door through which we entered. We thought it simply a case of going back the way we came. It failed.
We now realize that the way out is forward—through it.

Thanks for that belongs to President Roosevelt. Inauguration Day he turned the Ship of State around. Having observed the failure of sincere efforts to haul us back the way we came, he designed a new method—new political and financial machinery—to pull us out the way we are going—forward. He is clearing international obstacles out of the way; he does not stand in awe of tariffs. The people begin to feel that he does not take advice from the "interests"; that he has courage and loyalty to work for one supreme interest only—the welfare of the American people. That is a big achievement for two months in office.

And now we all look to what is coming; we grow less and less concerned with what is behind. We are looking for a hand-hold on the haul rope. Every man wants to do what he can, and all he can.
The best thing I can do for the Country is to create industry by building good motor cars. If I knew anything better to do, I would do it. Industry must be my contribution. Motor cars must face ahead to the future, like everything else. They are so much a part of the Nation's daily life that if they lag behind they hold the Country back.

CHAPTER I

It was springtime in the California Sierra. Never were skies bluer, never did the golden sun-flood steep the endless forest lands in richer life-giving glory. It was early June, and thus far only had the springtime advanced in its vernal progress upward through the timbered solitudes. Down in a hollow at the base of the sunny slope was a round alpine lake of the same deep, perfect blue as the sky, whose color it seemed not to reflect but to absorb. While sitting with his back against a tawny cedar, the man had been drawn into the entity of the wilderness to which, obviously, he belonged. The well-worn, tall, laced boots were of brown leather, much scuffed, one in color with the soil dusting them. The khaki trousers gathered into the boot-tops, the soft flannel shirt, were the brown of the tree trunks; skin of hands and face and muscular throat were the bronze of ripe pine-cones and burnished pine-needles. And, in a landscape spotted with light and shadow, the head of black hair might have passed for a bit of such pitch-black shadow as a tuft of thick foliage casts upon the light-smitten ground.

overjoyed; there was a sullen note in his voice.

King came on, breaking his way through the brush.

"Hello," he said, a little taken back. "It's you, is it? I thought it would be—" But he did not say who. He came on and stood over the man on the ground, stooping for an instant to peer close into his face. "Hurt much?" he asked.

The answer was a long time coming. The face was bloodlessly gray. A tongue ran back and forth between the colorless lips.

"It's my leg," he said. "I don't know if it's broke. And I'm sort of bugged up." He looked up sharply. "Oh, I'll be all right," he grunted, "and don't you fool yourself."

"Did Brodie—"

The man began to tremble. "Yes, rot his soul." He began to curse, at first softly, then with a strained voice rising into a storm of windy incoherence. Suddenly he broke off, eyeing King with suspicion upon the surface of his shallow eyes. "What are you after?"

"I came to see if I could lend you a hand."

"You know I don't mean that. What are you after, here in the mountains?" King grew angry and burst out bluntly:

"The devil take you, Andy Parker. I wanted to help you. If you don't take my interference kindly, I'll be on my way."

He turned to be off. If the fellow was able to shift for himself, it suited King well enough. But Parker called to him, and in an altered voice, a whine running through the words.

"Hold on, King. I'm hung up here for the night, anyhow. And I ain't got a bite of grub, and already I'm burning up with thirst. Get me a drink, will you?"

King found where a trickle of clear cold water ran in a narrow rivulet, and presently returned to the injured man with a brimming cup. Parker drank thirstily, and sank back with a long sigh.

"The things unlucky, you know, King," he said querulously.

"Is it?" said King coolly. It was like him not to pretend that he did not know to what Andy Parker's thoughts had flown.

Parker jerked his head up and muttered:

"There's been the devil's luck on it for more'n sixty years and maybe a thousand years before that! Oh, you know!" He paused and then spat out venomously: "Oh, I'll get you, too, Mark King. You'll see."

"Another drink before I go?" demanded King.

"I got a terrible headache," Parker said. "Aching and aching and sort of dizzy."

King went for more water, this time filling his one cork pot. When he returned Parker was trying to stand. He swayed and fell. King, standing over him, thought at first he was dead, so white and still was he. But Parker had only fainted. And, despite all that Mark King could do, the sunset glow had gone and the first star was shining before Andy Parker stirred.

His first call was for water. Thereafter he was never coherent again, though for the most part he babbled like a noisy brook. He spoke of Swen Brodie and old Loony Honeycutt and Gus Ingle all in one breath, and King knew that Gus Ingle was sixty years dead; he dwelt hectorically on the "luck of the unlucky Seven." And when, far on in the night, he at length grew silent and King went to peer into his face by the light of his camp-fire, Andy Parker was dead.

Mark King made the grave in the dawn. He put his own blanket down, laid the quiet figure gently upon it, bringing the ends over to cover him. He marked the spot with a pile of rocks; he blazed the two trees. It was all that he could do; far more than Andy Parker would have done for him or for any other man.

The sun was rising when he made his way to the top of the ridge and came to stand where he had seen Parker and Swen Brodie side by side. Just where had Brodie gone? He wondered. The answer came before the question could have been put into words. He saw the flare of a camp-fire shining bright through the dark of a low-lying flat two miles or more from his vantage point. Brodie would be cooking his breakfast now.

After that King moved along the ridge steadily and swiftly like a man with a definite objective who did not care to be spied on. In twenty minutes he came to the disintegrating ruin of a cabin. The walls had disappeared long ago, save for two or three rotting logs, but a small rectangle of slightly raised ground indicated how they had extended.

Here he made his breakfast from what was ready cooked in his pack, dispensing with the fire, which would inevitably tell Brodie of his presence.

King's first interest was centered on the ground under foot. He went back and forth and about the ruin of the cabin several times seeking any sign that would tell him if Brodie and Andy Parker had been here before him. But there were no tracks in the softer soil, no trodden down grass. It was very likely that no foot had come here since King's own last October. A look of satisfaction shone for an instant in his eyes.

He made sure that he had left no sign of his visit here, not so much as a fallen crust of bread, caught up his pack and found the familiar way down the cliffs, striking off toward the higher mountains and the high pass through which he would travel tonight.

To have followed the pace which King set that day would have broken the heart of any but a seasoned mountaineer. At six o'clock he made a fire in a bleak windy pass, surrounded by a glimmering ghostly waste. He rested by his fire with his canvas drawn up about his shoulders, smoked his pipe, remade his pack, and went on.

By the time he got down to the timber line the moon was up. He left the country of Five Lakes well to his left, heading tenaciously toward the tiny lakelet which, so far as he knew, had been nameless until his old friend Ben Gaynor had built a summer home there two years ago and had christened the pond among the trees. Lake Gloria! Though he had never so much as set his eyes on either Gloria or her mother, King had his own opinion of both of them. Nor did he in the least realize that that opinion was based rather less on actual knowledge than molded by his own peculiar form of jealousy, that jealousy which one time-loved friend feels when the other allows love of women to occupy a higher place than friendship.

And at nine o'clock next morning he stood on the bench of a timbered slope whence he got his first glimpse of Lake Gloria and of the rambling log house which Ben Gaynor had been prevailed on to build here in the wild, a dozen miles from the Lake Tahoe road.

An hour later he came to the grove of sugar pines back of the house. He saw a number of persons coming out of the house, a dozen or more, pouring out brightly, as gay as butterflies, men and women. He wanted to see Gaynor, not a lot of Gaynor's San Francisco guests. No, not Gaynor's; rather the friends of Gaynor's womenfolk. It was King's hope that they were going down toward the lake; thus he would avoid meeting them.

He stood very still where he was, unseen as he leaned against a light-and-shadow-dappled pine. A girl broke away from the knot of summer-clad figures, ran a few steps down the path toward the lake, poised gracefully, executed a stazy little pose with head back and arms outflung as though in an ecstasy of delight that the world was so fair. Then, as in sheer youth, she yielded her young body up to an extravagant dance, whirling away as light as thistle-down across the meadow. The guests went trooping gaily after her. King seized his chance and went swiftly toward the house.

Ben Gaynor had seen him through a window and met him at the door. Their hands met in the way of old friendship, gripping hard.

"My wife has been saying for years that you're a myth," said Gaynor, the gleam in his eyes as youthful as it had ever been; "that you are so more flesh and blood than the unicorn or the Code bird. Today I'll show her."

"In the meantime we can talk," said King. "I've got something to tell you, Ben."

Gaynor led the way through a room where were piano and victrola and from the floor of which the rugs were still rolled; through a dining room and into what was at once a small library and Gaynor's study. A chair pulled forward, a box of cigars offered, and the two friends took stock in each other's eyes of what the last year had done for each.

"You look more fit than ever, Mark—and younger."

King wanted to say the same thing of his friend but the words did not come. They had been friends together since King could remember, since Ben had big-brothered him, carried him on his back, taught him to swim and shoot. Then one year while King was off at school his friend took unto himself a wife. King did not so much as know of the event until Gaynor, after a month of honeymooning, remembered to drop him a brief note. King was hurt and grew angry and resentful with all of the unreason of a boy. He went off to Alaska without a word to Gaynor.

With the passage of time the friends had again grown intimate, had been partners in more than one deal, and the youthful relationship had been cemented by the years. But it had happened, seemingly purely through chance although King knew better, that he had never met Gaynor's wife or daughter.

What King said in answer to his friend's approval was by way of a bantering:

"Miracles do happen! Here's Ben Gaynor playing he's a bird of paradise, or emulating Beau Brummel. Which is it, Ben? And whence the fine idea?" (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Old New Orleans Has Charm That Is All Its Own

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

The celebration of Mardi Gras with feasting and masking was introduced in America in 1702 by French soldiers stationed near the present site of Mobile, Ala.

In 1837 a group of former residents of Mobile organized the first Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans. Ever since, Rex, king of the day, glittering with jewels, and attended by a sumptuous court, has held brief but glorious sway in that Old-world city of the South.

The New Orleans of today is a captivating city of contrasts, revealing each change in the kaleidoscope of her history. The charm of old France still lingers in the Vieux Carre, chosen by Louis de Bienville in 1718 as the site for La Nouvelle Orleans. Overhanging the narrow streets are balconies edged with delicate iron tracery; and through shadowy archways one glimpses paved courts and vine-covered stairways.

On Chartres street stands the Ursuline convent, probably the oldest building in the Mississippi valley. Nearby is the Spanish Cabildo, built after Louis XV ceded New Orleans and western Louisiana to his cousin, Charles III of Spain. In 1803 this old town hall witnessed the amazing transfer of the Louisiana territory, when within a space of three weeks, New Orleans was the possession, first of Spain, then France, and finally of the United States. Later Lafayette used the Cabildo as a residence, and today it houses the Louisiana State museum.

Despite thirty years of Spanish domination, the citizens remained essentially French; and after Napoleon's exile on St. Helena, they formed an elaborate plot for his rescue. Under the direction of Bois-siere, a retired sea captain, the clipper ship Seraphin was built and equipped for the venture; but three days before she planned to sail, the news of Napoleon's death put a sudden end to the adventure.

Important as it is in history, the Vieux Carre, Latin quarter of the New world, occupies only a few blocks in the city, which now covers more than 200 square miles. A few steps can carry one from the Eighteenth to the Twentieth century; from walled court yards to a modern metropolis, with wide, straight boulevards, and impressive office buildings. For New Orleans has a practical as well as romantic side. It ranks as the second port in the United States in volume of combined exports and imports.

Situated on the old Spanish trail between St. Augustine and San Diego, New Orleans has always held a strategic position. Today the Jefferson highway from Winnipeg, and the Colonial highway from New York, both lead to its gates. When the invention of the steamboat opened up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, the city became the seaport for 13,000 miles of navigable waters, the longest inland waterway in the world.

Sugar cane has played a leading role in the development of New Orleans since the early Jesuit settlers produced the first successful crop. It was on this plantation above the city, that Etienne de Bore, the father of the sugar industry, succeeded in granulating sugar in 1705. Today the city wharves are crowded with shipments of sugar, cotton, rice, and furs; while incoming freighters unload cargoes of bananas, coffee, and mahogany.

Like many a Netherlands town, New Orleans has literally had a struggle to keep its head above water. Except for its levees, the entire city is below high water mark, and much of it is below Lake Pontchartrain. To fight the continually heavy rains, an elaborate drainage system has been perfected, equipped with pumps capable of lifting 7,000,000,000 gallons a day. In the emergency of the 1927 flood, the city was saved from inundation only by blasting the levee 15 miles downstream, thereby sacrificing land in the adjacent parishes at a cost to the city of approximately $5,000,000.

HARBINGER OF SPRING

The spring peeper, of small body but great voice, is the smallest member of the tree frog family and the one batrachian that tells us when spring is here. Its voice then resounds from the damp meadows, marshes and ditches. The spring peeper averages about one inch in length and is the first of the singing frogs to be heard in spring.

ACID STOMACH EASY NOW TO CORRECT

Just Do One Thing—That's All

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods. It usually makes itself felt in sour stomach, indigestion, headaches, nausea, "gas," "bilioousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person. TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

Roswell Mattress Company Installs Large Sterilizer

In keeping with the policy of the company to give the people of New Mexico better mattresses and bedding work, they have installed a large Sterilizer, for the protection of health. Every mattress is renovated and made over is sterilized, thus giving you a completely renovated job at the only factory in Eastern New Mexico that can renovate your mattresses and make them germ proof.

If you have had sickness in your home, you can get your mattresses, pillows, quilts and blankets, curtains or anything in this line sterilized, in this Electric Sterilizer without having them made over or laundered.

It is a good policy to have your bedding and clothes sterilized, germ and moth-proofed before putting them away for the summer. Don't give your mattress to every solicitor that comes along when you can get this extra work at no added cost.

Be sure you are sending them to the Roswell Mattress Company at 402 South Main Street. Look for the name, Roswell Mattress Company on the side of the truck and give them to none other.

We sell all kinds and sizes of mattresses. Renovate and make over cotton, felt, wool, hair and innerspring mattresses. Clean, sterilize, moth and germ-proof all kinds of rugs and give you one-day service and guarantee complete satisfaction. Right now, this part of the state is overrun with so-called mattress factories, which are here today and gone tomorrow and have no way of renovating or killing the germs in mattresses. You are endangering the health of your family by giving your mattress to one who does not have a sanitary factory. They do nothing but blow your cotton, dirt and all, back into a new tick, finish it up and bring it back to you, consequently, you are no better off than when you gave it to them.

It will pay you and also give you a big surprise to visit one of these so-called factories, and see for yourself how they handle your mattresses; you are sure to find them in some old barn or around some camp ground, or on the edge of the city, where their guarantee is worth nothing, and they can leave in a few moment's notice, and you are the loser; who buys and trades for old second-hand bedding, makes them over and sells them to you for new ones. Investigate before you give your mattress to any one. The Roswell Mattress Company invites you at all times to visit the factory. We are sure that you will be pleased.—Adv.

L. T. Bacot is in Silver City this week, to attend the graduation of his oldest daughter, Louise from High School.

Albert Scharf has installed a Frigidair in his pool hall and will sell cold drinks during the summer months.

T. G. Grafton and W. F. Cooley were here from the Angus country Tuesday, attending to some matters of a business nature and returning home in the afternoon.

Mrs. Maggie Pfingsten of the Nogal-Mesa was a visitor in town the first of the week, and while here, made this office a pleasant call.

BORN—Monday, May 14, to Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Smith of the Nogal-Mesa, a boy, and his name is Phillip Ray. Mother and son are doing nicely.

Taking Hoover's Name From the Dam

El Paso Times (Democratic)
Removing former President Hoover's name from the Hoover Dam and renaming it Boulder Dam is a poor beginning for Secretary of the Interior Ickes. It has the appearance of petty political spite unworthy of a crossroads constable.

Evidently anticipating caustic comment, Sec. Ickes has now issued a supplementary announcement by way of explanation. He says the name Boulder Dam seemed more appropriate, and Mr. Hoover never cared to have his name associated with it, anyway.

Pardon us if we remain incredulous of this latter statement. An engineer not care to have his name given to the greatest dam in all the world, one started in his administration as president? Ridiculous! We wonder if Sec. Ickes' next achievement will be the finding of new names for Roosevelt Dam and Coolidge Dam. Those presidents were Republicans, too.

When you get a Registered Letter from the County Treasurer informing you that your property will be sold for taxes soon unless you pay up—oh, then is the time for a bold refrain! (Did you get a registered letter?)
