MISS JACKIE DOWNS

Titian-haired beauty from Pampa, Texas, who won the title of 'Queen of the West' last season in the annual beauty revue staged at Roswell.

The stage show will start each night at 9, and a complete change of picture program will be offered before and after the revue.

Mrs. Carl E. Freeman entertained with a dance in honor of the Rainbow Girls, Friday evening, June 30.

The grand march was hilarious fun from the first step until the partners became lost from each other in its maze.

The rooms were decorated in red, white and blue, and flags. Mrs. C. P. Huppertz presented a cake decorated with the flag.

Assisting Mrs. Freeman were Meses. C. P. Huppertz, E. O. Prehm, C. A. McCammon, S. H. Nickels, and Clara Snyder.

Dance music by Otto Prehm, Rhoda Freeman, Helen Frances Huppertz, Ardeene McCammon and Ruth Brickley.—Contributed

Last Thursday afternoon a group of young girls were out on a hike in the Malpais and in jumping across a big crevice, Beatrice Romero slipped and fell several feet below.

NOGAL NOTES

By LeNora Cochran Mrs. C. B. Wells of El Paso is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Duggar.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Helms were in Carrizozo Saturday.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Bankers in Des Moines, Iowa, are looking for $5 bills bearing the likeness of Abraham Lincoln winking his right eye.

There was a big family reunion at Hopkins, Mo., last week. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bird entertained the following relatives.

Battered heads, bloody noses, soiled whiskers and black eyes resulted from a free-for-all fight by 20 members of the Hungarian Reformed Church last week in their church at Pittsburgh, Pa.

It takes an Indian to live where a like ordeal would kill a white man. Charley Sam is on the road to recovery from being stabbed in the heart at a dance near Port Alberni, B.C.

A preacher on looking up from his sermon, which he was reading, was horrified to see his young son in the gallery, pelting the congregation below with horse-chestnuts.

Mrs. Louise Coe was here from her home on the Ruidoso, visiting friends and attending to business matters, says the Roswell Dispatch.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Blaney of Upland, Calif., visited at the Dr. R. E. Blaney home for several days last week, while on a return pleasure trip from eastern points of interest.

LOCAL MENTION

Carrizozo Wins Two Crucial Ball Games

The Carrizozo Ball Team lived up to its good name from the standpoint of fine sportsmanship, when they, behind the good pitching of "Red," turned the tables on the strong and much feared "Black Aces" from Alamo.

This game served as a tonic for the boys and they were well tuned up to go to Fort Stanton on the 4th and hand Pop Cavanaugh's Terrors a good and very good setback.

The Carrizozo rooters made a good job of razzing Jim, and had him very much rattled. Jim caught a good game for Carrizozo about fifteen years ago when the star catcher of Lincoln County, Billy Norman, could not be present for a very crucial game.

Now as to "Baby Rosin" from the forest service in Baca Canyon, we will say that in the absence of rosin, he could not pitch to a bunch of sandlot kids.

The score should have been 7 to 8 instead of 7 to 6, but the umpire behind the plate also played a little ball for Jim.

Our pitcher is a newcomer and although we have not had the opportunity of making his acquaintance, we heard his name called as Clyde, and that boy deserves much credit for the assistance he gave us in this victory.

Hubert Reynolds was on the bases and called mighty good decisions. Next Sunday, we will have Vaughn here and they say they are hot, so come out.

Mrs. Maude Cody Scoggins, who resided here and at Capitan from 1912 to 1916, passed away on June 25, at her home in El Dorado, Kansas.

The Methodist Missionary Society will have a business meeting at the home of Mrs. C. A. Branum on July 12, at 2:30.

FORT STANTON NEWS

The rodeo on the 4th was taken in by a record-breaking multitude of over two thousand people, coming from all over the state.

An incident of great interest and humor took place during the wild cow milking contest, after one of the most ill tempered bovines named "Mot" had entered the arena. Refusing to yield any milk to cowboy Hammit, she was turned loose. Greatly resentful over Hammit's indignifying treatment she determined to seek revenge.

Last Sunday morning, Frank Masse, trapper of the Fort, was taken to the hospital with several broken ribs and other injuries, sustained when his horse became frightened and threw him violently to the ground.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thornton of Oscura were Carrizozo business visitors Thursday of this week.

The genial Jack Hollomon, of Hollomon Bros., lumber and building material dealers of Alamo, was a business visitor in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Pfingsten and small daughter Betty were here for several days this week, Mrs. Pfingsten attending a meeting of the County Board of Education, of which she is a member.

Messrs. Geo. A. Titworth, T. E. Kelley, J. E. Hall and Dr. F. H. Johnson spent several days this week in Santa Fe, in interest of the Capitan-Hondo Highway.

Prize-Winning Baby

Bathing Beauty of Clovis. This young lady won over a revue of juvenile beauties by popular applause in a recent revue staged there under the direction of David Dallas, who will have charge of the Kiddies Revue at the Lyric Theatre Saturday night.

PERSONALS

Miss Cora Crews of Oscura was a Carrizozo visitor yesterday. Miss Cora, as we have said before, has one of the nicest flower gardens in this locality.

Dr. R. D. Haire, now located at Ruidoso, is running a series of articles in the Roswell Dispatch, headed, "Re-Guarding Your Health," which are intensely interesting. Dr. Haire was at one time on the official staff at Fort Stanton and has practised in Roswell and in Boston, Mass. The Doctor's address is Log Cabin Pharmacy.

Last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Titsworth of Capitan, a shower was given in honor of Mrs. Frank Titsworth. Mrs. George Titsworth was assisted by Meses. Lee Beall and Champ Ferguson. Refreshments were served to about fifty guests. Mrs. Frank Titsworth is the former Miss Mora Ferguson of the Nogal-Mesa.

Ansel Swearingen is now employed at the Carrizozo Auto Company.

Elgiva Terrell is the guest of her cousin, Madeline Howard, for a week on the Howard ranch near Capitan.

Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Smith and baby daughter were visitors in Carrizozo from Oscura the latter part of last week.

Dr. R. T. Lucas and Ed Long drove to the Chama district for trout fishing last week. After catching the limit they returned early Monday morning.

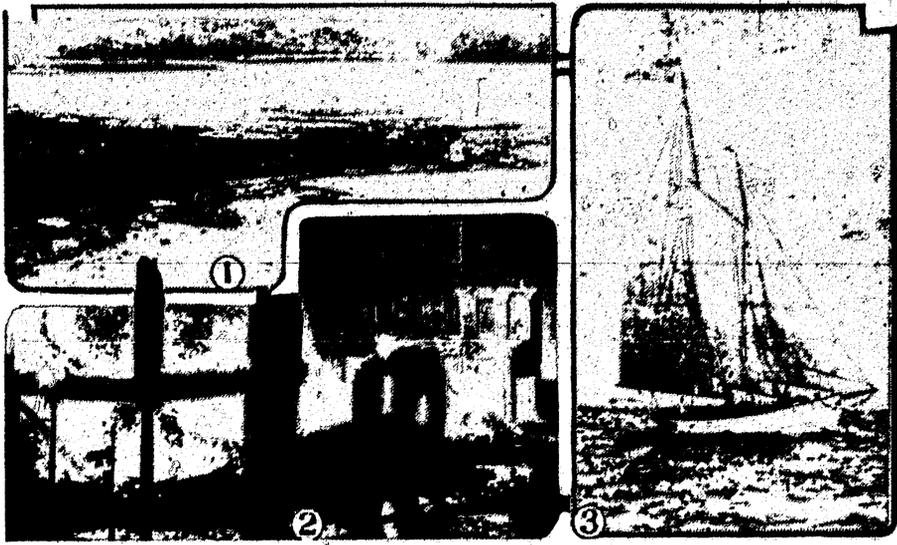

Probate Judge Manuel Corona was here this week from San Patricio on official duty.

Nick Vega has been awarded the mail route between the local postoffice and the S. P. station, we understand.

Mrs. Paul C. Reaves, who has been a patient at the Johnson Hospital, is now improving nicely.

Miss Cecilia Vidaurri left last week for Tucumcari, where she will spend two or three weeks visiting with relatives.

Mrs. Pinchot Marches With Sweat Shop Strikers

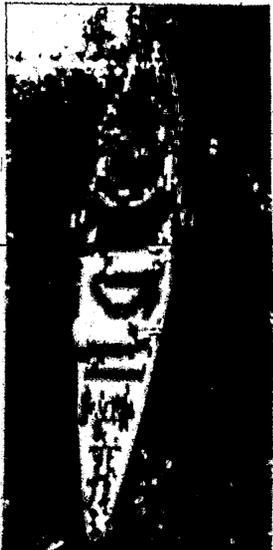

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot (wearing hat), wife of the governor of Pennsylvania, marching at the head of a group of sweat shop strikers in Mahanoy City, whom she exhorted to "fight for a decent wage." Mrs. Pinchot is a member of an investigating committee, authorized by the Pennsylvania assembly and named by her husband, which is examining sweat shop conditions throughout the state.

ANOTHER JOE MOWRY

The name "Joe Mowry" is not going to disappear from major league baseball if this brilliant young performer has anything to say about it. He is Joe Mowry, Jr., son of the famous player of the same name who played in the Texas league and in 1911 was a member of the Philadelphia National league club until a broken leg cut short his diamond career. Young Joe was recently purchased by the Boston Braves from the Minneapolis team with which he had been performing brilliantly at third base.

Planning Public Works Program

Col. George Spaulding of the army engineers has been selected by Gen. Hugh H. Johnson to be federal public works administrator and is here shown with his assistant, Colonel Henry T. Watts (right), as they started to work on the distribution of the $2,500,000,000 public works fund authorized in the industrial recovery bill.

Washington Digest
National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The information that we receive here in Washington indicates that the country at large is rather sitting on the edge of its chair waiting to see how President Roosevelt is going to play the hand he has received in his "new deal" which he asked. Equipped as he is with the greatest powers ever accorded a President of the United States, the situation surely is up to the President. Upon his administration, his playing of the cards, depends the result, the success or the failure of the program.

It is quite apparent since the smoke of battle cleared and congress closed up shop that the President suffered considerably from the riotous outbreak in the senate and the house over the veterans' compensation question. I mean that personally the President lost some of his prestige and his program, so well planned, was somewhat disrupted. It must be explained, however, that the general principles which Mr. Roosevelt laid down as the "new deal" have come through unscathed. Hence, I repeat that the Chief Executive is confronted now only with the problem of making things move in accordance with the promises pledged in his campaign and to which he tried to adhere with all of the solemnity of an oath.

The President is wholly mindful of the responsibility he assumed in asking congress, in effect, to make him general manager of about everything in the nation. He showed that quite unmistakably when he affixed his signature to the last great bill ground out by a none-too-willing congress. In a statement at that time, Mr. Roosevelt described the national recovery-public construction bill as "the most important and far-reaching legislation ever enacted by an American congress," but he added that if it were to succeed "it demands the whole-hearted co-operation of industry, labor and every citizen of the nation." The President counseled patience as well as asked co-operation, and how better could he show that a superhuman job lay ahead?

In two pieces of legislation particularly has the President been given powers as wide as any ever accorded in wartime. He has been made master of our agricultural destiny in one and under the terms of the other he has assumed the job, as he described it, of putting the government in partnership with industry. Instead of the necessities of the situation in wartime, however, we find the work to be done is that of encouraging consumption of foods and other commodities instead of rationing of foods and clothing and materials that might be needed for the forces at the front. Instead of speeded-up production, we find the President with almost dictatorial powers to reduce production of agriculture. The depression seems to have made things run backward.

As the several agencies to administer the new powers are set up under the President's guidance, it appears more and more as though he is going to meet with difficulty of a serious character. The President cannot keep his hand on the steering wheel of everyone of the various machines. That is beyond human comprehension. He must delegate the work to others. There are going to be many, many mistakes. These always occur. It cannot be avoided. But the President is going to have to shoulder the blame for all of it.

What I have been trying to present is a picture of a situation in which the President is the pivotal point.

Let us pursue one or two of the possibilities. The congress at the request of the President voted some $500,000,000 in federal money as outright gifts to the states for relief. When the President had the relief representatives of the states here recently he told them that the federal government would not countenance "the building of a lot of useless projects under the guise of relief." Mr. Roosevelt was emphatic in his declaration. But the question one heard around here was "how many of the state office holders and politicians will see that such a policy is enforced?"

Another salient: the industrial recovery section of the bill putting government into partnership with industry entails organized co-operation of each of the numerous industries. Leaders in the individual lines of commercial endeavor have been coming in here for conferences on codes of practice. Outwardly, every one of them is sincere, and, he it said to their credit, most of them are inwardly sincere in their effort to find some means to accomplish economic recovery. But among those who are visiting Washington for these conferences are some entirely willing to take advantage of circumstances or situations that will give their own firm or plant or factory an edge over their competitors. It would seem difficult for that end to be attained where the conferences are above board and there is a free discussion, but the trouble is that the reason some firms are larger than others is that they have knowledge of a competitor's weakness. And don't believe for one moment that these same men will not watch for such opportunities in framing the codes of practice—codes of ethics, really, for the conduct of business—that are to be employed in this new partnership arrangement!

As a third example, permit me to cite possibilities in the new farm mortgage arrangement that the President worked out to help debt-ridden farmers, and congress enacted into law. It provides that holders of farm mortgages may, under certain conditions, exchange them for bonds of the federal land banks, and allows farmers, under prescribed conditions, to borrow for refinancing their debts aside from the mortgage. No one doubts the sincerity of this program, nor does anyone question but that it is needed and that it will be of immense help to farmers. Yet attention was called during the debate in congress to loopholes through which a team and wagon can be driven. According to these arguments, if the federal land banks do not accumulate some mortgages having a face value of hundreds of thousands of dollars, but actually little more than your cats and dogs, it will be a miracle.

As I said earlier, observers here are convinced that Mr. Roosevelt can check malfeasance in any of the numerous directions if he acts in time and with firmness. His loyal supporters insist he can and will sense any tendencies of that kind as they develop, but his opponents, or rather opponents of his programs, claim he will be unable to discover them until the infection has become a festering sore. I do not propose to set down a conclusion respecting these arguments, nor the probability or possibility that any of the conditions may eventuate. My purpose solely is to suggest what can happen and where we would be headed should the dangers become real rather than theoretical.

I called attention above to the fact that congress had somewhat disrupted the President's program but that, all in all, it had given the President the widest powers ever accorded in peace time. The reason there was a breaking of party lines in congress was because some senators and representatives awakened toward the end of the extra-session to the fact that they had voted away almost all of the powers they were supposed to exercise. They grew fearful of what would happen.

The feelings of the doubtful ones were not becalmed either by the prodding they were receiving from lobbies of powerful groups such as the veterans.

Mr. Roosevelt was not entirely victorious in this battle. He succeeded for beyond expectations of many Washington analysts, but sore spots were created that are going to be hard to heal. So it probably is just as well that there will not be any meeting of congress again until January, 1934. The President can proceed to carry out the program he has in mind under authority which congress gave him, upon his own responsibility.

The Roosevelt administration, being now about four months old, has disclosed strong proclivities in the direction of publicity for itself. It seems to have adopted the title of a well-known show "Of Thee I Sing," and the pep-pul are going to be told in considerable detail of what is being done. Nearly all of the important branches of the government have taken capable newspaper men into their organizations that the proper supply of information may be made available to those writers who continue at their regular means of livelihood. It has helped the unemployment situation among the writers, anyway, for where the government has hired men, their places have been filled from among others whose salary checks have been small or have been missing altogether as a result of slack business for the newspapers.

Administration leaders justify the policy on the ground that correspondents cannot be familiar with every phase of government and particularly now that we have so many new laws and new activities resulting from the new deal. The public is entitled to have the facts, the leaders explain, and the use of high-class newspaper men-in-publicity-jobs-in-the-government, therefore, constitutes a service to the public.

This attitude, of course, has a basis in fact and there is merit in the argument. But there is another side to the proposition. It has been the record of other administrations that employed an array of writing talent that a considerable amount of plain, unadulterated propaganda somehow managed to creep into official statements and information released through these channels. It is the average writer's function to report the news. He or she cannot openly question the truth or the accuracy of an official statement. Consequently, if the statement be of the propaganda sort, there is little the writer can do about it. The decision has to be left to the editor of the paper.

Much of Benefit in Relaxed Mind

Homemaker Will Find It Profitable to Escape From Tension.

The unreckoned element in plans is one which often causes a day of routine duties or especially arranged, work to turn out differently from what was expected. Sometimes the change is fortunate, sometimes not. If the homemaker could only look into the day and realize what was coming, she could suit her tasks to the otherwise unexpected element. There are times when such an insight into events can be attained, whereby the mind is attuned to events. The psychology is simple. It is worth trying out.

Before or after making plans for a day, sit down quietly and relax as absolutely as you can. When the mind is released from tension it responds to sub-conscious suggestions, to put it scientifically, or to the spirit, if one prefers. During these few moments of relaxation, with a mind freed from planning, it frequently happens that something important to do will present itself. It may be something totally unexpected, or it may be something which at a previous time had impressed itself upon your thoughts. If it appears of immediate importance, it is wise to attend to it without delay. To plan the day without including this thing may be upsetting to tasks. Why this should be the case, it would be hard to say, but a more fruitful day results from heeding the suggestion.

Another method is to follow your intuition. There still remain persons who refuse to believe in intuition, but as these same persons "follow their hunches," they are merely shifting terms and making distinctions without differences. A hunch should be followed, so should an intuition.

An interesting case comes to mind which was told to me recently. A young woman was very busy. She had made her plans carefully for the day and then for some reason or another she gave a relaxed consideration of her day's work. Suddenly it appeared to her that a family she knew of was in sore need of funds, and that she could do something about it. She wrote a few letters acquainting others of the need, without revealing so much that it would prove embarrassing to the needy woman. The time taken for the writing was not long. The responses were generous, and enough money came in to relieve the distress of the family to whom it was sent. The young woman told me, her work was the direct result of her trying to receive suggestions during a short period of relaxation as described.

Typhoid on Way Out

Figures published by the Journal of the American Medical Association show that 1932 was the best typhoid year in the history of America. In 78 cities with a population of 35,691,815, there were 442 deaths from typhoid fever, a rate of only 1.24 per 100,000. The average for the three preceding years had been 1.60, and it had looked as if the rate had been stabilized at that point. Last year's drop gave an encouraging sign that progress can still be made.

Says Her Husband Lost 16 Pounds In 4 Weeks

"I have never found a medicine that 'peps' you up like Kruschen Salts and better still, leaves you 'pepped up.' I take it two or three times a week—not to reduce but merely to feel good and clean. My husband took it to reduce, he lost 16 pounds in 4 weeks." Mrs. E. A. Ferris, Washington, D. C. (December 29, 1932).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Senator Cutting Takes Side of the People

Regardless of past political differences, people of all parties should give credit to Senator Bronson Cutting for his stand in favor of the right thing at the right time. While he gave his support to the Democrats in the last election, it did not mean that he would follow the lead horse no matter which way he turned. When the attack was made on the disabled and defenseless veterans—when others remained silent, or jumped at the crack of the party whip, he made haste to denounce that source of false economy and bitterly assailed the reductions in compensation and cutting thousands who are unable to leave their beds or invalid chairs.

He has not stopped at that—in other matters where the administration has made grandstand plays in the name of economy, he has never failed to raise his voice against such actions and branded the same as "false economy."

There has been nothing selfish about his actions and expressions, but on the contrary, they have been decidedly unselfish, as he seeks no self-gratification, but seems to prefer being a servant of the people in the open than to be a tool of a dictator in quiet submission to his will and orders.

SYNOPSIS

In the California sierra Mark King, prospector, sees Andy Parker killed by Sven Brodie. Parker's outlaw companion, King is on his way to the home of his friend, Ben Gaynor. King and Gaynor share with Brodie knowledge of a vast store of hidden gold. King meets Mrs. Gaynor and is impressed by her daughter, Gloria, a youthful beauty. He dislikes a house visitor named Gratton. With Gloria, King goes to Coloma, intending to "sound" Honeycutt. He and Brodie with the old prospector, and animosity here. Their companionship for a day, draws King closer to Gloria. Gloria and her mother return to San Francisco. King attends her birthday party there and is, he feels, coldly received. In a spirit of adventure Gloria accompanies Gratton on a "business" trip. At Coloma she finds her father badly hurt.

"Then," he said, "go turn the key in the lock. And hurry. Before anyone comes." She locked the door and returned to him.

"Feel under my pillow. Got it?" She found a small parcel and drew it out. It was a flatish affair and rectangular, the size and shape of an octavo volume—a flat box, if not a book. It was draped in a bit of soiled cloth.

"Quick," he commanded nervously. "Out of sight with it. Stick it into your blouse, if you can."

Catching something of his suppressed excitement, she obeyed.

"I managed a little note to Mark," he said when she had buttoned the loose shirt again and he sunk back, white and exhausted, among his pillows. "I stuck it inside the cloth. Lord, if I was only on my feet! But you'll do for me, my girl! With never a hint to anyone?"

"I promised, papa," she said assuringly.

"Unlock the door again, then. There's somebody coming. Sit down over there, across the room. And leave as soon as you can."

Gloria sat in her chair across the room, looking innocently the part of a daughter in a sick room, when the door opened and the Placerville doctor came in. A moment later she slipped out.

Down the road she saw Gratton. He came quickly to meet her. She saw that he was eying her keenly, and her thought was that he was wondering if by chance she had seen the hotel register.

"I don't know just what to do," said Gratton. "My business is going to hold me here longer than I had thought. I—I promised to go back with you this afternoon. Would it be all right if I got a man to drive you back? I am terribly sorry, Gloria, but—"

"Business is business!" She laughed a trifle nervously. Then her inspiration: "I know! I can go to our mountain home; I'll phone mamma, and she will come up. We'll spend a few days, and—"

For an instant his eyes fairly blazed; they were bright with triumph. "Just the thing! I'll go for the horses. I'll ride over with you and get right back here."

"But—"

But already, exclaiming himself hurriedly, Gratton was off for the horses. It was mid-afternoon when Gloria and Gratton came to the log house in the woods. Jim Spalding, coming to take their horses away to the stable, was plainly curious.

"We rode on ahead, Jim," Gloria told him, and Jim detected no false note in her gait. "Mamma is coming."

Spalding gave them a key and they went to the house. It was Gloria who unlocked the door; Gratton, his white face looking more than ever bloodless, saw her hand tremble. She hurried in, excused herself, and ran upstairs. She knew that the time had come when she would have to listen to what Gratton was going to say; she knew what the burden of his plea would be—she knew everything, she thought wildly, except what her answer would be.

On this floor was an extension telephone, installed for the convenience of Gloria and her mother. Gloria went tiptoeing to it rather than go down where Gratton was. She rang the necessary bell for the operator in Truckee and put in her long-distance call. Then she sat with the instrument in her hand, waiting.

She wondered when Mark King would come! This afternoon—tonight—tomorrow? Spalding had said nothing; she had not mentioned King to Spalding, since she had not mentioned him to Gratton during the long ride—

Her telephone bell rang. "Gloria! Gloria! Is that you?" Her mother's voice sounded strange in Gloria's ears—shaken with emotion. "What has happened, child? Tell me, quick! I am nearly dead with worry. Are you all right?"

"Of course, mamma. I—"

"But where are you? Where were you all night? Are you sure everything is all right?"

"I have told you I am all right. I am up in the mountains, at our log house. Didn't Mr. Gratton tell you—"

"Mr. Gratton?" Mrs. Gaynor was mystified. "He has told me nothing; I haven't seen him. I tried to phone him—oh, I have phoned everybody we know!—and he is out of town, and—"

But Gloria, panic-stricken by something her mother had said, cried: "You've phoned everybody! Oh, mamma! What—what do you mean?"

"When you didn't come in last night—I have been crazy with worry! I thought you might be spending the night with one of your friends. I rang up Georgia Stark and Mildred Carter and the Farrillees—and even the emergency hospital. I thought—"

"The rest was only a meaningless buzzing in Gloria's ears; she sat, bereft of all reason for a dull moment, then harboring quick, clear thoughts, as swift, as vivid as lightning, and in the end as blinding by their very quality of blazing light. The newspapers!

Still, dominated subconsciously by the thought which had brought her to the telephone, Gloria managed before the connection was broken to beg her mother to come immediately to her at the log house; to tell every one that Gloria was with her father. Her mother promised; began asking questions, and Gloria said a bleak "good-by" and hung up.

The newspapers. Gloria, her face white and white, looked into emptiness and saw headlines that towered as high as immense black cliffs. Her mother had telephoned Mildred Carter; had confessed that Gloria had gone out with Mr. Gratton; was gone all night, no one knew where; Mildred Carter who was as good as married to Bob Dwight of the Chronicle! And the emergency hospital—Gloria, with never a tear coming in her hour of greatest distress sat rocking back and forth on her chair, crying: "Oh, I wish I were dead!"

As one hears noises through a dream, long powerless to connect them logically with familiar happenings, so now did Gloria absent heartily to Gratton calling from the foot of the stairs. She jumped up only when she heard him start to mount them. Then, galvanized, she sprang to her feet, second to him. "I'll be down in just a second," and ran to her room. She stood again looking at herself in her glass.

"Gloria Gaynor," she heard her own pale lips say, "you have gotten yourself into a nasty, nasty mess." The lips began to tremble; then, with a great, struggle for will-power, they steadied. "And," said Gloria in a cold, harsh little voice, "it's up to you, and no one else, to get out the best you can this time."

She bathed her face and hands; she rubbed her cheeks with a towel, determined to bring some vestige of color back; she took down her hair. She brought from her closet half a dozen dresses; chose a certain pink one without analyzing the reasons of her selection, found silk stockings and pumps, and dressed from top to toe. She would have to have it out with Gratton, one way or the other—she began to know which way it would be. But always a girl should be at her best. Gloria was getting a grip on herself again. When after Gratton had waited and fumed for upward of an hour, she went down stairs she looked cool and pretty, and quite unembarrassed. He flashed a look at her that was eloquent of nervous excitement.

"I want to explain everything to you, Gloria—"

"It will take a good deal of explaining, won't it, Mr. Gratton?"

They went into the living room and Gloria sat in a big chair while he stood before her, his fingers tapping and tapping at his cigarette case.

"I am afraid," he began, talking swiftly, "that I have been instrumental in placing you in a false position. Last night I told you I had telephoned to your mother. I did try; they reported the line out of order. What could I do? I didn't want to alarm you. It was only a lark; I meant innocently, you know that, don't you, Gloria?"

"Did you?" she said, and managed to keep her lips smiling.

"It is only since coming here that I have realized how things will look; what people will think—and say, curse them. Our being out so long together; my buying clothing for you—"

"Our being registered as Mr. and Mrs. Gratton—"

"Forgive me, Gloria! It was the mad impulse of a moment. I thought as we went in that it would look strange—a young, unmarried couple; that if I put down man and wife no one would think anything at all. And we'd be gone in a few hours and no one would know who you were."

"I see," Gloria's tone gave no clew to her racing thoughts. "You did that for my sake?"

"Yes," he said eagerly. "As I would do anything on earth for your sake. You know that, Gloria; you know, and have known for a long time—always—that I love you. And you will marry me, won't you?"

"Yes," But Gloria did not say it aloud; not yet. She merely made it perfectly clear to Miss Gloria Gaynor that she was going to marry Gratton, and that there was to be no further question of it. And, at this fateful moment, how she hated him! How she loathed and detested him! While a week ago—yesterday—she had wondered, dreamily, if she was in love with him! But that was when he was in the city, at home in his own wilderness. But now! She was in a trap. There was no way out, save through the gate of matrimony. And—in her heart she laughed at him—through that other wider gate beyond, the gate of divorce. She would accept his name; the name of Gratton stood high in San Francisco. Then she would tell him how she loathed him; she would laugh at him, for physically she had no fear of him. And he would never have her for his own, despite all of his money and his position and his hideous trickery.

Strange that the man had never revolted her as he did now! She wanted to get up and run from him. Meantime she was telling herself almost calmly: "Yes, you'll marry him. The little beast!" She did get to her feet; he followed her into the hall.

"Let me alone for a little while," she said quietly. She went to the stairway. "I am going upstairs; wait here for me—"

"You will come to me! You will marry me?"

"I—think—so—Don't!" she cried sharply as he moved to come to her. "Wait—"

He swallowed nervously. "I—I hoped you would. And I saw how terribly the events of the last few hours might be misconstrued. So, Gloria, darling to hope, I sent word for a justice of the peace. He will be here this afternoon or this evening—"

"Justice of the peace!" Gloria's nerves jangled loose in her irrepressible laughter.

"We'll have a priest later, of course," he ran on hurriedly. "But I couldn't arrange for one so soon."

Gloria went slowly upstairs, walking backward, looking down on him with unfathomable eyes.

"Tell me, Gloria, I'll promise not to come near you until you say I may. Is it yes?"

"Yes," said Gloria, and was gone in a flash, turning, running up and out of sight.

He stood looking after her, tapping and tapping at his cigarette case.

CHAPTER V

To Gloria the sluggish moments were fraught with despondency or pulsating with terror. All arrangements were made; she was powerless, in a trap; a justice was coming; she was going to marry Gratton. She lay on her bed with the door bolted and wept bitterly, moaning over and over: "Oh, I wish I were dead!"

But great as was the emotional tension, lusty, and now wearied youth must be served. She dropped to sleep. It was so very silent all about her; the shadows were creeping, creeping among the pines.

She awoke with a start. Someone was standing above her, looking down at her. She could see only the vague outline—

"Gloria—"

A little cry of fear broke from her. "Gloria," pleaded Gratton. "Don't you know I wouldn't—"

"I'll be down in a minute," she told him. "Go away, please. Wait for me."

"The justice is down stairs," he said. His voice agitated despite his effort for mastery. "Are you ready?"

"Yes, yes! In a minute I'll be down. Go. Please go."

He hesitated; began withdrawing. "When you are ready. And—he has a long ride back, Gloria. We should not keep him waiting."

She watched until he had gone. Then she crouched, staring with wide, unseeing eyes into the outside dark. The man would go right away; she would not have even him to mitigate the horrible condition of loneliness with Gratton.

"I won't marry him!" she cried out. "I won't. I hate him. He is a beast, and—I won't!"

There was, after all, nothing to force her. Nothing—save that she had been away all this time with Gratton, that he had bought clothing for her, that he had registered himself and wife. And the newspapers! She heard a door slam and sprang up; if the justice went away now without marrying them! She would marry him; why, if he had been of a notion to demur she would have made him marry her!

Two hours ago Mark King had arrived. The caretaker, old Jim Spalding was smoking his pipe on his bench. King paused, saying: "Hello, Jim. Has Ben showed up yet?"

"No, he ain't showed, Mark. Expect'n' him?"

"Yes. Who's in the house, then?"

"Why, some of 'em come on ahead. Ben's girl, for one, and that city guy, Gratton, for another."

Gloria and Gratton here? King frowned. He had had ample time during the long weeks since the twelfth of August to decide that he had nothing to say to Gloria Gaynor. And now she was here—with Gratton. He had no desire—or at least so he told himself very emphatically—to see either one of them.

"I've hit the trail hard today, Jim," he said as Jim followed him and King closed the door. "And I'm dead-tired and as hungry as a bear. Needn't tell anybody I'm here. But keep your eye peeled for Ben, will you? The minute he comes I want to see him."

And after lying ten minutes staring up at the ceiling above him—King went to sleep.

"Must of been goin' some today," meditated Spalding. "King looks tuckered."

An hour or so later he heard horses. "That would be Ben, now," was his first thought. He saw two men dismount and tie their horses; he saw the door open and Gratton come out. The horsemen went up to the porch. One was a little gray man whom Jim had never seen before; the other man, it happened, he knew, a good-for-nothin' galawa, as Jim called him, name of Steve Jarrold.

If He Is Genuine

A genuine orator can go on long after he is through, and is welcome to.

Will of Wheels

Freddie was giving his lady friend a long discourse on his family history. "My Grandfather," he said, "was just a poor, hard-working London clockmaker. When he died, a few years ago, he left all his estate, which consisted of 200 clocks, to my father." The girl smiled. "How interesting!" she said. "It must have been real fun winding up his estate."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Her Complaint

"I'm going straight down to the post office to make a complaint," said Freda perily. "Oh, darling," said her young man, "I'll do it for you. What is it you want?" "I want to find out why they haven't delivered that box of chocolates you promised you were going to send me," she replied.—Answers Magazine.

THE BOOB

The Stout One—Yes, I spent the entire evening telling him that he had a terrible reputation for kissing girls against their will. The Thin One—And what did he do? The Stout One—He sat there like a boob and denied it.

Big Things Doing

Maid—The furniture man is here, ma'am. Mistress—I'll see him in a minute. Tell him to take a chair. Maid—I did, but he started with the piano.—Montreal Gazette.

Allhi

"Why is there never any cream on top of your milk?" "Well, we fill the bottles so full there ain't any room for cream."—Passing Show (London).

Explained

Antique Dealer—A rare piece. A revolver dating from Roman times. "The Romans had no revolvers." "That is why it is so rare."—Stockholm-Vart Item.

Comeback

Owner of New Lawn-Mower (firmly)—I wouldn't lend it to my own father. Would-be Borrower—You're wise, I know the old coper.—Humorist Magazine.

WEAK LINK, TOO

"Jack has pretty big ears. "Yes, they are so big that his head seems merely a connecting link between them."

Faces Red?

"Avo you eaten the sandwiches, mum?" "Yes." "Then I'll 'ave to clean the shoes with cream cheese."—Everybody's.

A Wise Move

"I thought you always frequented good clubs? How is it I find you in this doubtful place?" "My wife said that if I went to such places I could go alone."

Defending Him

"Why did you have to tell your mother I kissed you?" "She's always saying you haven't the nerve."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Control Curiosity

Those who don't mind being rapped over the fingers, ask many questions.

Better Gift

"Bobby, I gave your teddy bear to a poor little boy who had no father." "Why didn't you give him father?"

"Muchas Gracias"

Carrizozo people who attended the Fourth of July celebration at Fort Stanton, wish to thank the committee on arrangements for the royal reception tendered them on that occasion and appreciate to the fullest extent, the courtesies extended and this expression goes for our people in general. The success of that important undertaking, both socially and financially, was due to their untiring efforts to see that nothing was overlooked for the pleasure and entertainment of their guests.

Miss Maxine Cavanagh of Colorado, niece of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Harvey, is here for a visit with her relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Treat, daughter Dorothy, sons Ralph Vernon, Dean and Miss Margaret Wood of El Paso, have been here this week for a visit with the E. V. Abeyta family of Capitan and Harry Aguayo family of Carrizozo. Ralph will be remembered as County Clerk quite some time ago; Ralph has been Deputy U. S. Marshal at El Paso for a number of years. While in town, he paid this office a pleasant call.

J. D. Lamb, Chairman of the State Corporation Commission, Roy Shedd, Chief Clerk of the Motor Transportation Department and Bert Holland, Fieldman for the above department, were here this week on official business. While in this locality, Bert made this office a friendly call.

Mrs. Chas. Armstrong and niece, Mary Elizabeth Armstrong of El Paso, were visitors at the R. O. Crenshaw home for the past week and also attended the celebration at Fort Stanton on the 4th. They returned Wednesday accompanied by Lucille Crenshaw, who will visit with her sister for a few weeks.

LYRIC THEATRE

R. A. Walker, Owner

The theatre which has been closed for the summer months, will re-open on the dates of July 7-8, for the Community Beauty Pageant, in which all local girls who choose to enter, may contest for the prize of a free trip to the World's Fair, with those from other places over the state, at Roswell on August 10-11.

One of the features of the show will be styles of the gay nineties which will be depicted with costumes such as the colonial gown, an old-fashioned bicycle suit, an 1864 bathing suit and a 1927 sport suit. Girls who compete for the title of Miss Lincoln County, will wear evening gowns, sport clothes and 1933 beach fashions.

Miss Katherine Kelt, who won the contest last year, won sixth place in the contest at Roswell. Miss Kelt will be introduced from the stage, but will not compete for the prize. Mr. and Mrs. Dallas, the promoters of the show, will arrive here today from Clovis to arrange for the coming event.

Notice of Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to decree of the District Court of Lincoln County, New Mexico, entered on the 18th day of May, A. D. 1933, in Cause No. 4022, Civil, in which B. Prior is the plaintiff and H. A. Miller and Willie Mable Miller are the defendants, I will, on Wednesday, the 2nd day of August, A. D. 1933, offer for sale and sell at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the county courthouse at Carrizozo, Lincoln County, New Mexico, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, the following described real and personal property, to-wit:

All the following described lots, tracts, and parcels of land and real estate, situate, lying, and being in Carrizozo, in the County of Lincoln and State of New Mexico, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit: An undivided one-half interest in and to Lots No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 of Block No. 8, McDonald Addition to Carrizozo, New Mexico, together with an undivided one-half interest in and to all improvements upon said lots; also an undivided one-half interest in and to all the chattels, furnishings and fixtures in and upon the premises and campground situate upon said above described lots, more particularly described as chairs, beds, bedding, stoves, etc. An inventory of all personal property will be available for examination by prospective purchasers and interested parties. The purchaser is required to pay cash at the time the property is struck off to him.

John E. Hall, Special Master.

Methodist Church

The Sunday School attendance continues to show an increase over that of a year ago. The Degner children have charge of the devotional next Sunday morning. This is a beautiful and sacred service. In addition there is an educational development for the participants. Regular church service at 11 in the morning, with the evening League and church service at 7 and 8 o'clock respectively.

Rev. Fr. James Brady of the Santa Rita Church arrived home last night after being absent for several weeks, during which time he visited the larger cities of the east, where he delivered an illustrated lecture of "The Seven Cities of Cibola." Welcome to Carrizozo, Father.

Alex Adams, former resident of this place, but now located in Arizona, visited this week at the home of his brother, J. R. Adams, while enroute to Oklahoma.

Max Baca is here this week from Magdalena visiting with the Gregoria Pina and Ben Gallegos families.

Mrs. Chas. Fisher and S. E. Greisen were here yesterday from Capitan, returning home in the afternoon.

An Early Taxi-Meter
The old familiar sound of the taxi-meter isn't anything new. On the crudest kind of a public conveyance, hand drawn, used in China three centuries ago, there was a mechanical register in the form of a drum which was automatically struck by a hammer at the end of each mile.

MEN'S NEW SPRING SUITS

WITH Commodity prices advancing almost daily, it is important for you to know our policy with regard to these advances. Not only have all commodities gone up considerably because of natural causes, but proposed legislation and the uncertainty due to new taxes and new laws have made it extremely difficult to estimate the present replacement value of nearly all lines.

For this reason, if you are in need of a NEW SUIT, it will pay you to take advantage of this opportunity, as these Suits were purchased at the Lowest Market Price.
