Corona American Red Cross Members Play Santa Claus

American Red Cross funds of Corona played Santa Claus to some of the school children in their school district. In fact every member who contributed this year should feel very happy that they had part in this gift to the children. It is something that they may have had a part in latter in saving one of these children's lives against diphtheria. What could have been a nicer present than giving them immunizations against diphtheria? Good work, Corona chapter, and Happy New Year be yours!

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kiel, sons Bobby, Jr., and Donald were here from their home in Tucson, Arizona, and spent the holiday season with the Sherwood Corn family and Mrs. Ada Grey and children, leaving for home after New Year's Day. They all spent the Yuletide at the Corn ranch between here and Socorro.

ANCHO ITEMS

The Ancho Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. A. W. Drake Dec. 30, 1933. The members responded call with New Year's Resolutions. After the business meeting, Mrs. Pruett took charge of the study hour. Her subject was "National Monuments," the one in particular she discussed was the Elephant Butte Dam.

After a short social hour, coffee and a delicious plate of home-made sausages, hot biscuits, pickles, mixed fruit and whipped cream, and chocolate cake were served to the members.

The ladies of the Ancho Bridge Club entertained their husbands with a theatre party at Carrizozo Dec. 30, '33. The feature, Buddy Rogers and Marian Nixon playing in "Best of Enemies" was thoroughly enjoyed by all. After the show, the party attended the dance at the Community Hall and returned to their respective homes at a late hour.

Mrs. Belknap, who is continuing her visit at Capitan, promises friends she will return home after the Eastern Star installation of officers Thursday night.

Mrs. Robert Poage of Carrizozo visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hall of Luna the past week.

The Hefrens were called at an early hour Sunday morning to take the Cooper Hightower baby to the doctor. The baby was suffering with a severe case of croup. She was reported resting very nicely at a later hour.

Mrs. Lowe, a teacher in Rodeo, N. M., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Porter at Luna.

Mr. Bright, principal of the local school, has returned from Santa Fe, where he spent the Christmas holidays.

Ralph Caldwell of Carrizozo spent the Christmas holidays with his sister, Mrs. John Straley.

Miss Aurora Anaya, who spent part of the holiday season here with relatives, returned home Monday evening to resume her studies in the Capitan Union High School.

County Health Nurse, Miss Ruth Ryden and Mrs. Ola Jones, County School Supt., spent New Year's Day in the Glencoe country.

E. M. Brickley of the First National Bank was a business visitor at Fort Stanton Tuesday, returning late in the evening.

Miss Ruth Ryden was in Albuquerque and spent Christmas with friends at the Duke City.

Miss Haldane Stover has returned from Belen, where she spent the holiday season. Her brother came over the day before Christmas, and took Miss Stover home, returning with her so that she could attend to her school duties Tuesday morning.

Truman Spencer has returned to the Roswell Military Institute after spending the holidays at home.

Wm. Nickels, who had been home for the holiday season, has returned to his studies at State College.

Starting a Clean Page

Expected to Meet Gangsters

Tuesday night, on the way from Fort Stanton to Carrizozo, a car bearing five men came thundering over the road with the horn sounding continually and so loud that people along the highway thought it was a car containing gangsters armed with machine guns and prepared to hold up everybody in the county.

The faster the car ran, the louder the horn would blow. When reaching here, it was discovered that there was a short circuit in the horn. As it passed through Capitan, citizens rushed out to see what was going on, but the car whizzed by leaving the people to wonder what was the matter. Between here and Capitan, ranchers aroused from their slumbers, armed themselves and rushed to the road, but the car passed by, bound for Carrizozo. On arriving here, the trouble was remedied and instead of "Pretty Boy Floyd," the car contained five innocent Oddfellows over from the Fort to attend a lodge meeting.

Mrs. Montie Gardenhire and small son of Capitan are spending a few days with Mrs. Gardenhire's mother, Mrs. Dozier and sister Dorothy this week.

Mrs. Clara Snyder entertained the "Goofus Club" at her home Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Tittsworth, and daughter Mrs. Eddie Long of Capitan were here last evening, Mrs. Tittsworth being the newly-installed Worthy Matron of the local Eastern Star Chapter, the particulars of which appear elsewhere in this paper.

Miss Tressie Davis has returned from her home in Republic, Mo., where she was the yuletide guest of her parents, relatives and friends.

ATTENTION, ODDFELLOWS

All members of the order are requested to attend the meeting next Tuesday night, Jan. 9, for the purpose of installation of officers for the new term. All visiting members are cordially invited.

John Fay Harkey, N. G.
Wm. J. Langston, Sec'y.

Attention, Degree Team

Members of the Degree Team of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., will be on hand at 7:30 Monday night, Jan. 8, for the purpose of rehearsal in the first degree for work on the following night, Jan. 9.

A. L. Burke, Degree Master.

Stars Install and Banquet

Thursday evening of this week, Comet Chapter No. 29, Order of the Eastern Star installed their officers for the present year.

The occasion was one of unusual interest due in part to the fact that Mrs. Merle K. Davis, Past Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of the state of New Mexico, and formerly a Lincoln County girl, was present and acted as installing officer. Mrs. Davis has a great command of the English language, and handled the installation in a way that will long be remembered by those present. Sister Clara P. Huppertz acted as Installing Marshal.

An atmosphere of good will and confidence in the future of the Chapter seemed to be present, and the Past Worthy Matron, Mrs. Mary C. McCammon, is to be congratulated on the success of this important event in the activities of the Chapter. The dinner at the Carrizozo Eating House was up to the standard of other events held there. The menu was delicious and well prepared; for place cards small colored fans were used which each diner kept as a souvenir.

The presentation speeches at the Hall, made by Sisters Belknap, McCammon, Nickels, and the singing by Meses Elliott and Lemon were well chosen and touching.

The incoming Worthy Matron, Gussie I. Tittsworth, received a beautiful basket of flowers from her husband. Graceful, dignified and efficient, Sister Tittsworth will preside during the present year. Always effective in whatever he does, Brother Stephen B. Bostian will sit at her left as Worthy Patron. Other officers are as follows:

Bernice Nickels, Asso. Matron
T. E. Kelley, Asso. Patron
Ina Mayer, Conductress
Nora Phipps, A. Conductress
Lillian Collier, Treasurer
Maude L. Blaney, Secretary
Ruby Groce, Chaplain
Margaret Rountree, Marshal
Marbry Burns, Organist
Clara Snyder, Adah
Frances Aguayo, Ruth
Pearl Stearns, Esther
Pearl Bostian, Martha
Elizabeth Sproles, Electa
Ada Edmiston, Warder
Earl B. Rountree, Sentinel

All the incoming officers have taken their stations with a full knowledge of the responsibilities of their office, with hope and faith in the future welfare of the Chapter. Sister McCammon and Brother Huppertz, outgoing presiding officers, are to be congratulated in the work of their

FORT STANTON NEWS

Through the Outlook, we beg to extend our thanks to the Trowel Club for the high class entertainment sponsored last Saturday night, and which assisted in a large way in elevating the spirit of us Stantonians. The program which featured some of the best talent in the city of Roswell, is described as follows: Kid Jack Deason and his trumpet treated the audience with some beautiful solos. The violin duets by him and his little sister Dorothy, were marvelous and drew a tremendous applause. But when Dorothy stepped up to the piano, which appeared like a five-story brick building in comparison with the little girl, and commenced to produce as fine music as was ever heard within the walls of the auditorium, then the crowd burst out in a deafening applause. The beautiful vocal solos by Mrs. Lloyd Johnson went over big with the assemblage. The talented Mrs. Bruce Conner furnished some readings in negro dialect, and also some negro spirituals which held the crowd spellbound. Last, but not least, Miss Phelps, Mrs. Phelps and Mr. Mosley, three colored entertainers, stepped up and snatched as many applauses as laughs from the audience with their monologues, dialogues, songs and dances.

Part of the giant construction program for which vast sums of money has been appropriated, will start here in the immediate future. It is anticipated that sufficient jobs will be available to more than absorb all unemployment in Lincoln County. Preparations for the beginning of this work have been going on here for the last three months. At present station forces are busy tearing down old buildings and levelling off huge areas with tractors, etc. First on the program is the construction of 40 new cottages for ambulant patients, the contract for which is being let at the present time. These cottages will, like the 35 which were constructed a year ago, have all the conveniences that the 20th century calls for, including radio. They will differ slightly from the others in outside appearance, in that they will be stream-lined so as to reduce wind resistance during sandstorms.

Mr. and Mrs. Verl Groce have moved into the Jones Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Comrey of Capitan were visitors in town yesterday. Harry, who is an old-time resident, has been ill of late, but now is as spry as the well-known cricketer.

Mr. and Mrs. Poe Corn and baby daughter have returned to Roswell, after spending Christmas with Mrs. Corn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rolland.

Ed Long is in Santa Fe this week attending to some business matters.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Gillette and children, who spent the holiday season with relatives in Ottawa, Kansas, are home and R. R. is again teaching in our schools.

year and in the effectiveness of the installation. Many out-of-town visitors were present.

PERSONALS

We are in receipt of some lovely Holly from Seattle, Wash. It was among the gifts of Mrs. Burke's sister, Mrs. Frank Manning of that place. The holly certainly gave the Yule Tide spirit, and made us think the loved ones far away were with us.

Mrs. M. U. Finley was hostess to the Wednesday Bridge Club and will also entertain the Carrizozo Bridge Club at her home tomorrow afternoon.

This office is in receipt of a letter from our former resident, Mrs. Violet Dixon at San Francisco, who wishes everyone a happy and prosperous New Year.

Mrs. N. W. Brown, daughter Ruth and granddaughter Mary Rose of Deming visited the G. F. Pruett family during the holiday season.

Miss Lala Joyce is employed at the Court House as stenographer for Robert Poage, Chief Clerk for the C. W. A.

Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Lucas made a hurried trip to this place last Friday, after receiving notice of the illness of Mrs. A. L. Burke, mother of Mrs. Lucas. Dr. Lucas left on No. 4 Monday evening on account of an urgent call from Kansas City, after assuring himself that Mrs. Burke was out of danger. Mrs. Lucas is still here and will remain for another week.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Claud Branum, a girl. Mother and daughter are doing nicely. The baby has been named Veda Lou.

Miss Sally Ann Neil of Alamogordo is the guest of Miss Virginia Charles this week. Miss Neil participated in the dance recital Thursday evening, given by the pupils of Miss Wilma Beauchamp of Alamogordo.

Mrs. Gertrude Stebbins of Salina, Kansas, came in last Friday and is a guest at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. H. Johnson this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lovelace were New Year's guests with relatives in Alamogordo.

Mrs. O. W. Bamberger and son Billy were New Year's guests of Mrs. Whittingham and children at El Paso.

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F. held a big meeting Tuesday night, and after the business session, the Initiatory Degree was conferred. On next Tuesday night, Jan. 9, the First Degree will be conferred and installation of officers for the ensuing term will take place.

Mrs. George Strauss, daughter Helen and son George, Jr., were El Paso visitors on New Year's Day.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney will return Sunday from Cedar Rapids, Ia., where she went about two months ago to minister to the wants of her sister, Mrs. Blanche Rothrock, which she did, until the sister passed away, after which sadness, Mrs. Blaney remained to assist the folks after the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Rentfrow were Christmas visitors at Las Cruces, returning and spending New Year's Day at home.

SYNOPSIS

A girl finds herself in a taxi cab in New York with a strange man who speaks of an awful shock. He leaves her for a moment and she drives on, for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. She has a wedding ring. The nameless girl meets a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to Reno for a divorce. She can get the money. The woman vanishes with the nameless girl's $500. An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris, bewildered, is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him. Visiting a store she is astounded when a saleswoman insists she is Doris. To confirm this, Rocky returns. He demands to know who she is and why his wife sent her to his home. She cannot tell him. They agree, for the sake of his parents, to pretend, for the time being, they are husband and wife. After much quarrelling, Rocky takes Doris to his New York apartment to compare his wife and have the strange mixup straightened out. He finds the flat empty, and not even a note left for him by his wife.

Rocky had let her go as suddenly as he had seized her. "I don't think I care at all about kissing you," he retorted. Bill tingling from the contact of his lips, she started for the door. "Before I go I want you to know that I've never known a more rude, more boorish, more impossible person than you. From the very first you've been awful! As soon as you came home you burst into my room, without even the courtesy of knocking and without a word of apology! You assume that I'm perfectly crazy to have you for a husband." She seized the back of a chair. Her face was white. "In the first place you're the most conceited young man I've ever met! And after that you're just plain ordinary, contemptible, rude!" "I don't know you Doris! I don't believe you even have a wife named Doris!" Rocky stood with an amused smile. "What do you say we have dinner now?" "Dinner?" "Yes—dinner. What do you say we come out of the hysterics and have a little food instead? I apologize for everything. I'm sorry. You're right. I am in a terrible mess, and you were sweet to help me out by not telling my father and mother about it." He hesitated. "Will you forgive me?" Rocky knew how to get around her defence. Feeling this, Doris' anger turned on herself. "You had no right to kiss me like that," she said sulkily. "You're married."

He sighed. "God help me." "Why?" "I was just thinking that when my family does meet the real Doris they won't be nearly so pleased I owe you something for being so nice to my parents. You certainly did the job Doris hired you for well." "You still think Doris hired me?" His lips twisted in amusement. "To be quite frank it seems the alternative to your being a member of the criminal classes, which seems very unlikely." He pulled a heap of cardboard boxes out of an easy chair. "My wife is a very untidy packer. Sit down." But Doris had turned to the desk and was looking at the framed picture of a girl. The face was familiar. She was excited. Was she going to remember something? "Who is that?" "Oh! She knows. That's the girl who stole my money in the Biltmore." She spoke involuntarily. Rocky answered eagerly. "When? What are you talking about? That is Doris." "Doris?" She dropped her hands helplessly. "Oh! I must be mistaken then." She was on her guard but her mind was whirling. Rocky followed her thought. "Nonsense. I wouldn't put it past Doris to steal. When did this happen?" "Please—Doris sat down weakly. "I can't tell you." "But you're got to. You mean Doris took your money, and so you decided to get revenge by taking her place?" "No, no. I can't possibly explain. It's all a mistake probably. I only saw the girl for a few minutes. She was confused. She did not know how to go on. She was trying to remember what the girl in the Biltmore had said, but she couldn't. And Rocky stood over her vigorously. He pelted her with questions. "When was all this?" "The day I met your mother." "Yes, I imagined that. The day I called. Now tell me about it. Where did you meet her?" Doris sank down, her chin rested on her shoulder. She crossed her feet helplessly. "I don't know whether she stole it or not. I shouldn't have said that. I met her in the washroom. I was talking to her and I left the room for a minute. When I came back it was gone, and so was she."

"How much was it?" "About nine hundred dollars—a little more."

Rocky whistled. "That explains many things. Look here, we've got to be frank with each other. I'll lay all my cards on the table." He pushed a soiled pink mule off a chair and sat down. "Don't you agree?" "I don't know. Tell me about Doris."

His voice was low, emotional. "I can't tell you what I've gone through, worrying about Mother and Doris. It was cowardly of me to go abroad and leave them together—at least that is what I tried to do. But until I saw how a different kind of girl might fit in at home, I—his face twisted as he paused to keep his voice on its even level—I hadn't realized—"

"I think I understand," said Doris. "Yes—you would if you met Doris." "She was—very pretty. I can see that a man might find her attractive." Rocky made a gesture of dissent. "It was a ghastly mistake. It's hard to explain, but to me marriage was nothing. I didn't connect it up with Mother and Dad, or think of it as anything but a rather personal incident in my life, until she told me we were going to have a baby. Then I suddenly woke up to the significance of the whole thing—the way it fitted in with Mother and Dad—" he broke off—"I expect you're thinking what an awful ass I made of myself over it."

Doris said, "Well, I should think you would have told your family more about it, as it seems you had been married for some time." Rocky flushed. "You see I got married on impulse. I can't explain it. Then—but when I thought the baby was coming it was different. I wanted Doris to change and be with Mother." He looked at Doris wistfully. "G—d, I got married just the way I'd buy a suit of clothes, or order myself a dinner. Everybody I knew was married, and divorced, and remarried to each other—"

"But I still can't understand why you would go abroad without introducing your mother to your wife—or about the baby or—"

CHAPTER VI

It would be a relief to tell somebody Doris closed her eyes. "You're worn out," said Rocky. "I'm a terribly self-absorbed ape. You ought to eat something." "I'm all right." He pulled his chair closer to her. She drew a long breath, wondering, worrying. Half an hour earlier she would not have thought it possible that she could confide in Rocky. But his friendliness made her former attitude impossible. She looked at him wistfully. "Listen, couldn't you eat something?" She laughed faintly. "You're hungry yourself, you old fraud. I'll go out and have supper, though, if you like."

He grinned. "You read me like a book. But you honestly look fagged. I'm going to have something sent up from Reubens. They'll send anything anywhere any time it seems." He went to the telephone. She watched him as he gave the number. After all, she could not go on this way forever. She would have to tell someone in order to find her home. "Would you like roast chicken? Lobster?" "I'd love chicken. Say, Rocky!" "Yes, Baby!" "All right. I will tell you!" He raised his eyebrows, nodded. "O. K. Spill everything. Just a minute until I finish here." But it was not until the food had come that she did find the courage to tell him. Meantime she had bathed and was feeling much better. Several openings for the confession had gone by but each time panic seized her. Meantime Rocky was hungry, and very friendly. He was trying to make up for his former unkindness, it seemed to Doris. "From the way you talked while I was telephoning for this mess of vittles I thought you had made up your mind to tell me all," he said. "I have."

"Well, why don't you shoot?" "I'm afraid you won't believe me." "Well, have a shot at it." She drew a long breath. "Begin at the beginning," said Rocky (and remember I don't bite and I don't sting. But aside from the fact that I'm probably dying of curiosity, don't tell me if you don't want to).

"You are decent. I've got to tell someone, and you're the first person I've met who wouldn't think I was absolutely crazy if I told the truth." She cupped her chin in her hand and went on casually. "You see I've lost my memory. I lost it quite suddenly, and I don't know where I came from. I don't know who I am, or even what my name is."

Rocky was looking at her with his jaw dropping slightly. "The h— you say!" She nodded, smiling a little at his astonishment. "Then—my—Lord—maybe you didn't know whether you were married to me or not?" Doris smiled ruefully. "I was reasonably certain as soon as I saw you—you didn't leave me in much doubt."

"I guess I was pretty brutal." Then she told him everything, unable to evade his quick questioning. He found out how she had been riding in a cab with a man she hated, how she had left him, gone to the Biltmore, been robbed of her money and met the kind little woman who had said she was her mother-in-law. As she finished she took off her wedding ring, and showed him the inscription on the inside.

"So you're married, too," he said thoughtfully. "To somebody I hate—or at least I think so." Rocky considered. "It ought to be easy enough to find out who you are. You look to me like a girl with a large devoted family. Probably all out looking for you? Didn't you look in the papers to see if there was anything about a missing girl?" "Your family doesn't take any papers."

"H—, that's right. One of the old eccentricities." His eyes were tender. "Say, this is a d—n shame. I'll make inquiries at the police station, and we'll find out who you are in no time. Then if you don't like your husband—you don't have to go back to him, do you?" Doris felt frightened. "I don't know. There was something dreadful—you know once I was listening to the radio, and something was said, in the news of the day I think it was, that brought it all back to me—but only for a second, then I fainted. It seems as if there is something so awful in my past that I just don't dare to remember it."

Rocky reassured her. "Oh that isn't very likely, Doris. You've been badly shocked. Perhaps you were in an accident." "I've thought that if I could see the papers perhaps there would be something in them that would help me to remember."

"That's an idea. Supposing we go out now and buy some papers. It's much cooler now." He walked to the long windows and looked down into the street. "We can ride around or something." He looked at her over his shoulder. "Would you like to go and see some girls waving their legs around in the theater? Please, let's."

She laughed. "Of course, I'd love to." "You're sure? You're positive we oughtn't to sit around and be tragic this evening?" He jumped up. "Then we're off. I won't be two shakes." But it was later than they thought when they emerged finally on the street. They rode over to Broadway in a cab, buying the World-Telegram from a newsboy. In the lobby Doris had a moment to look it over but she found nothing that roused her memory. "I can't get over the way you impressed Father," said Rocky during the intermission. "He was absolutely nuts about you!" He looked down at her happily. "You didn't find anything in the paper?" "Nothing seemed to rouse any echo. But I did see one comforting thing—an advertisement by a Reno divorce lawyer saying you can now get a divorce out there in six weeks!" "Really? Yes, I remember they did pass a law like that last year. Well, that means you can get rid of the man in the cab if he should turn out to be your husband. And speaking of men, there are two men in the back of the theater that can't take their eyes off you."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for January 7 BIRTH AND INFANCY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 2:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS; for he shall save his people from their sins. Matthew 1:18. PRIMARY TOPIC—Gifts for the Little Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—In Search of the Saviour-King. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Honoring the Child-King. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Incarnation.

We are now entering upon a six months' study of the gospel according to Matthew. In order that the lessons may be properly presented the teacher must master the book of Matthew as a whole, and then present each lesson in its relation to the central purpose of the book.

The central theme of Matthew is "Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham, the covenant King" (Matt. 1:1).

1. The Birth of Jesus, the King (Matt. 1:18-25). 1. The Saviour was to be the seed of a woman (Gen. 3:15), the son of a virgin. This was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus. The genealogy (Matt. 1:1-17) shows his legal right to the throne. Only a descendant of David could be recognized.

2. The Saviour was to be divine (Isa. 9:6). He must be more than the son of David in order to be a Saviour. He must be both human and divine. Jesus was begotten by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary, thus becoming Immanuel, which in its fullness means "God with us, God for us, and God in us."

11. The Childhood of Jesus, the King (Matt. 2:1-23). 1. Wise Men from the East seeking Israel's King (vv. 1, 2). Christ's advent was heralded by a star which guided men of a foreign nation to seek and to worship him, even pouring out their gifts to him. These men were Persian or Arabian astrologers, students of the stars. Their attention was attracted by the appearance of an unusual star. Through the influence of the Jews who remained in Chaldea, or the direct influence of Daniel extending to this time, they had become acquainted with the hope of the Jews as to the Messiah. They may have known of Balaam's prophecy. (Num. 24:17).

2. Herod seeking to kill Jesus (vv. 3-8, 10-18). The news brought by the Wise Men struck terror to Herod's heart. He was not alone in this for all Jerusalem was troubled with him. This news ought to have brought joy, but a glimpse at the social customs in and about Jerusalem at that day enables us to understand why Herod and all Jerusalem were troubled. A Saviour who would save them from their sins was not wanted. Herod demanded of the priests and scribes information as to where Christ should be born. The fact that they were able to tell him quickly shows that they had a technical knowledge of the Scriptures, but not a heart for the Saviour set forth therein. This occurred in Jerusalem, the city of the King, the place of all places where he should have been welcome. It frequently occurs that where the greatest privileges are, there the greatest indifference is shown to spiritual matters. When the Wise Men returned to their country by another way, Herod slew all the male children two years and under in and around Bethlehem.

3. The King found by the Wise Men (vv. 9-12). Having obtained the desired information these men started immediately to find Jesus. As they left the city the star which guided them in the east appeared again to direct them to the place where Christ was. When they found him they worshiped him. They did not see any miracles, only a babe; yet they worshiped him as King. "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed" (John 20:29).

4. The King protected (vv. 13-23). (a) Flight to Egypt (vv. 13-15). To escape Herod's wicked aim, God directed Joseph to take Mary and the child Jesus and flee to Egypt. In obedience to the heavenly vision he went and remained there until Herod's death. (b) Return to Nazareth (vv. 19-23). Upon the death of Herod, the angel of the Lord directed Joseph to take Jesus and his mother and return to the land of Israel. Though Herod was dead it was not proper for him to return to Judaea. By divine direction he turned aside into parts of Galilee and dwelt at Nazareth.

Nazareth has held a fair renown through the centuries only because it was the spot where Jesus grew in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

The Bible This book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true and its decisions are immutable.

Helping and Healing Now-a-days, our Saviour uses his followers here to do the work of helping and healing that He used to do Himself, when here on earth.

M. R. Wells, agricultural extension statistician for the government in Phoenix, declared recently that rapid drying of feed and the shortage of surface water has caused Arizona ranges to show a slight decline in condition during November.

Approval has been given by the State Corporation Commission to the New Mexico Baptist Schools, Inc., for incorporation in the state. It is a society to promote Christian education and will operate Montezuma College at Montezuma, N. M.

Gas and electric companies in New Mexico must pay the occupation tax, provided under chapter 73, laws 1938, commonly known as the chain store bill, Comptroller Juan N. Vigil announced, following an opinion from Attorney General E. K. Neumann.

After Jan. 1 the telephone companies of New Mexico will no longer make a charge of 25 cents per month for use of the hand set telephone, after they have been in continuous use for thirty-six months, the corporation commission announced recently.

The board of regents of the New Mexico State Teachers College voted recently to file an application with the public works administration for loans to construct a new administration and library building at a cost of $115,000, and a new gymnasium to cost $45,000.

Roy Wayland, manager of the Arizona branch of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, told members of the 20-30 Club in Phoenix recently, that relief of home owners faced with possible mortgage foreclosures, is being carried forward as rapidly as possible.

Strong and Grant and A. O. Thorne of Springville, Utah, with a figure of $187,400.99, submitted the lowest bid to the Arizona State Highway Department for the contract to reconstruct 23.5 miles of U. S. highway 66, between Kingman and Hatcherberry in Mohave county.

Smashing of a counterfeiting syndicate which spread bogus $5 bills through three states, was completed in Albuquerque recently, when one of ten prisoners taken in the roundup led a U. S. secret service agent and local officers to where $4,700 worth of fake bills had been concealed.

The federal civil works administration has granted $24,180 to the Arizona National Guard for improvements at Fort Alexander M. Tuthill, near Flagstaff. This was in addition to $26,000 made several weeks ago. Approximately $20,000 of the new grant will go for wages to men to be taken from the Coconino county relief rolls.

C. M. Graham recently resigned as president of the board of directors of the New Mexico state insane asylum, but will continue as a member of that board. Hiram Dow of Roswell, recently appointed to the board by Gov. A. W. Hockenbush, will succeed Mr. Graham, who has served as president of the board for five months.

Arizona State Treasurer W. M. Cox received a check for $34,768.83 recently, from the federal government, representing Arizona's share from collections in the state from rentals and leases of forest lands. The money will be apportioned to thirteen of the fourteen counties for use by school and highway departments.

The United States government plans to establish two "subsistence homesteads" in Arizona. Gov. D. B. Meaurio has been advised by M. L. Wilson, director of the project. Tracts of land will be bought by the government and subdivided into acreages, with families being placed on them and given financial aid to start farming.

Two new credit associations, whose combined resources will afford Arizona farmers and livestock men $2,500,000 in immediate new capital, have formally completed their organizations. Both have federal charters, issued through the Production Credit Corporation of Berkeley, Calif., one of the farm credit administration's branches.

S. McN. Johnston, Phoenix city manager, recently signed a contract with the government forest service to lease 3,500 acres in the Horse Thief Basin country for a municipal camp site.

New Mexico's portion of receipts from the forest lands in the national forests totaled $23,753 last year. This amount has been received by Treasurer Clinton P. Anderson. The money is distributed to counties, to be used for roads and schools, on basis of their needs within national forests. McKinley county's share is $336, and Valencia county's $265.

"COMPANY TALK" GOOD RULE FOR ALL OCCASIONS

"I love it when there's company for dinner," said a little girl of a well-to-do, cultured family. "I like it because then we have company dinner, but best of all I like the company talk."

"Company talk!" Well did the adult understand what that meant. For one thing, of course, mother's attention could not be concentrated on daughter's posture and table manners. But particularly it meant that interesting things were talked about; current happenings, books, music. When mother put herself out to be interesting, that was company talk.

We need contrast that with the drab topics of everyday dinner-table conversation. Household routine and troubles, usually, on mother's part. Father doesn't talk about his business troubles; they wish he would, for that would at least be something new. But he is too tired to say anything—or without incentive.

That incentive for father, for the whole family to be at their best, could come from mother. It is she who leads the conversation into agreeable channels when there is company. And how father responds then! Why, mother has to remind him that she's waiting for him to finish his course to ring the bell—that talking instead of eating, he's holding up the whole dinner!

Some time ago I read somewhere that it is more important for a woman to change her mind for dinner than to change her dress. And if we always changed our minds from thoughts of the day's routine to deliberately making the dinner table a pleasant place, then every dinner would be "company dinner."

EDITORIAL COLUMN

The New Year—
What Will It Bring?

We are rounding up our first week of the new year. The old year with its suffering, turmoil, unemployment, unhappiness and disappointment, is past and gone, leaving us with the question: What will 1934 bring? Will it bring us out of the depression or after the slump, which always follows the holidays, cause us to lose more than we have gained? True it is, that through the re-employment bureaus, work has been given to men and by that means, countless homes were made cheerful during the holiday season. Let us hope that this condition improves until every idle man is employed.

What will the new year bring to our lives? To some, it will bring sadness, for cloudy days must come. To others, it will bring joy and gladness, for the sun must shine. May we all experience a new year of peace and happiness. To those who are now bowed down with grief and despair, let those who have been more fortunate, offer words of comfort and aid in making their lives more cheerful.

Some little word of good cheer, some little act of assistance, pouring out the milk of human kindness to those in whom we should be interested, will mean much to them, and add courage to the weak, while at the same time, we will be consoled with the thought that we have done something, at least for humanity.

During the new year, let us not forget the children, the young men and women of tomorrow. The responsibility for bringing up of the little ones does not rest particularly on the parents. The community also has its share in this undertaking. By that interest we might make the poet's lines of non-effect, when he wrote:

"Oh, the children, they are weeping;
They are weeping bitterly.
They are weeping in the playtime

Of their brothers
In the country of the free."
We are on the road of 1934—
WHAT WILL IT BRING?

"The FIRESIDE PHILOSOPHER"

Funny thing about knowledge is: The more you know, the less you know you know.

It's easy to bear other folks troubles with Christian fortitude.

The earth is turning on its axis while it's going around the sun. How can a fellow tell which way he's heading?

They say: "Everything comes to him who waits"—yes, if he lives long enough.

Don't we like to tell other folks what they ought to do with their money!

Chocolate Birthday Cake

Governor Rolph of California helps Mrs Dressler to cut birthday cake

PRESENTATION to Marie Dressler —America's well-loved stage and screen star—of a mammoth chocolate birthday cake is just another indication that the traditional birthday cake is now going in for chocolate in a big way. For rich, luscious chocolate lends any cake an air-of festivity.
Make your birthday cake of chocolate by either of these recipes, decorate it with candles for the birthday table, and your cake will make a memorable contribution to the celebration.

Birthday Treat Cake
(3 eggs)

2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup butter or other shortening
1 1/2 cups brown sugar, firmly packed
3 eggs, well beaten
4 squares unsweetened chocolate,
melted
1/2 cup cold water

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together three times.
Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Add chocolate and beat until smooth. Add flour, alternately with water, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth.
Bake in two deep greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (350° F.) 30 minutes. Spread Seven Minute Frosting between layers and on top and sides
of cake, piling frosting thickly on top.
Melt 2 additional squares unsweetened chocolate with 2 teaspoons butter.
When frosting is set, pour chocolate mixture over cake, letting it run down on sides.

Frise Devil's Food Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 1/2 teaspoons combination baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or other shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
3 eggs, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate,
melted
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla.
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well; then chocolate and beat until smooth. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (350° F.) 35 minutes, or until done. Spread Seven Minute Frosting between layers and on top and sides
of cake.

Seven Minute Frosting

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1 1/2 cups sugar
5 tablespoons water
1 1/2 teaspoons light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
Combine egg whites, sugar, water, and corn syrup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers, or top and sides of 8x8x2-inch cake (generously).

Latest in Skate and Ski Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE than ever it is color of the most vivid sort around which winter sports costume design revolves. When you go skating or skiing no matter how dark and somber your divided skirt or your Norwegian-style trousers (either are in fashion) may be, the top of your costume, to be chic, must intrigue the eye with a riot of color. Jackets and sweaters (twin sweaters are the rage), likewise scarfs and caps and the gloves that go with them make animated color their theme.

As rampant as color is and as delightfully frivolous as current snow togs may seem to all appearance, when it comes to genuine practical sports clothes as now designed are amazingly utilitarian, in that they are provided with all sorts of devices which add to their comfort and their wearableness.

A very clever idea brought out recently is a vividly striped stocking cap, one long end of which is brought down to wind about the throat—a sort of a two-in-one proposition. To this scarf and cap combination is added a pair of matching gloves.

You will be perfectly charmed with the skating costume, shown to the left above, when we tell you it is made of black velveteen, the circular skirt of which is lined with red taffeta. The red appears again in the facing of the tie. The jacket fastens with silver clips and the Tyrolean knitted cap has a red feather. This costume is outstanding because of its effective color scheme.

For sheer practicality, with lots of style added, the model shown to the right scores high. It consists of sturdy Norwegian corduroy trousers topped with a chamouis vest, a turtle-neck white sweater and a fannel jacket, the latter an extra protection when wintry blasts grow fierce. The chamouis vest is bordered with a metal fastener so that it is easily put back to serve as a coat lining. It heightens the color effect when the vest is dyed a bright green or red although many are buying these chamouis sleeveless jackets in natural color.

All along the line one is impressed with the tendency shown to make this season's ski and skate clothes as picturesque as possible even to the point of being spectacular.

DESIGN FUR COATS IN MEDIUM LENGTH

Women have a way of getting what they want. When they demanded fur coats in trotteur length, the designers got busy and turned out some extremely dashing models. These coats that are neither long nor short are especially suited to the youthful, boyish figure.

This season's versions include straight, belted or swagger types. Some have yokes. Collars are standing, Peter Pan or cravat. Sleeves relate the story that has been going the rounds this year: Pleats or shirring at the shoulders, fullness below the elbow.

Short-haired furs, such as lapin, yak and kid are the happiest choices for the fur trotteur that is belted or swagger. Seal and krummer make handsome straightline finger-tip length coats.

Trimings Are Important in Late Paris Fashions

Trimings tell a striking tale in the 1934 winter fashions by Worth.

Feathers in the shape of a fringe for a flower, sparkling brass buttons and diamonds belts trim the rich velvets and satins which build the evening mode. Satin and velvet buttons and bows ornament afternoon frocks; fur sleeves appear on wool ensembles.

One of the most striking frocks in the collection, worn by the blond French actress, Jeanne Aubert, is a dinner gown of pink satin which has a tiny cluster of pink rosebuds perched on each shoulder and is accompanied by a muff of the same pink rosebuds.

A black velvet evening gown has a high front décolleté and a low vee back edged in diamonds braid, a beige velvet dinner gown is designed with a shoulder line edged in glycerinated coque feathers.

Velvet Hems

Tailored velvet hems in light tints add a new touch to the bodices of dark wool frocks. Small pink appears on black, blue-green on brown.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The Roosevelt administration suddenly has taken on renewed interest in development of bases for trade between the United States and other nations and thus, for the first time, it seems to appear that a very definite trend has been set up to take care of our surplus farm crops and our surplus manufactured products. How far it will extend is a question that none can answer at this time, but the situation and the circumstance certainly constitute a factor that should be examined in a larger sense than piecemeal discussion because of the far-reaching effect that conceivably will flow from the course upon which the government seems to be traveling.

International trade has been a subject about which too many high-sounding phrases have been grouped. Individuals in the interior, for example, were too prone to pass it by as having no effect on them, whatever their calling in life may have been. Such is distinctly not the case. It has a direct bearing on the success of a farmer as it has a direct effect on the success of a manufacturer. In each instance, the benefits or the damages flow on through the various lines of commerce and industry and into the lives of all. That is why, in my opinion, the trend that now appears to be developing is a matter of concern to the humblest laborer and of great consequence to the agricultural areas of our country.

In a speech at the recent Pan-American conference at Montevideo, Cordell Hull, secretary of state, observed that "international trade is hopelessly clogged with prohibitions, embargoes, quotas and other arbitrary restrictions." Thereupon, he proposed concerted action to do away with those barriers to trade among nations. Secretary Hull offered several propositions to the statesmen assembled at Montevideo and initiated numerous discussions privately along the lines of elimination of trade barriers. But the secretary talked about "multilateral treaties," agreements between many nations, and appears to be carrying on that policy. Here in Washington, however, we are repeatedly told that multilateral treaties are impossible of consummation. President Roosevelt thinks that there are few possibilities in that direction, and he is talking about treaties between pairs of countries. For example, a commercial agreement between the United States and England, or France, or the Argentine, or some other nation with which the United States engages in heavy international trade.

It is yet too early to tell which way we are headed. Likewise, none can forecast whether the bilateral agreements or the multilateral pacts will work to our best advantage. Nothing can be more certain, however, than that there will be a lot of discussion in congress as it gets under way, and I believe it is equally certain that there will be a lot of debate by members of the house and senate who will be wholly uninformed as to the meaning of their words.

But let us examine the two types of treaties. The multilateral agreement obviously contemplates concessions on the part of every nation that becomes a signatory to it, but in reaching that accord the nations figure out what they can gain before they give up anything. Such a treaty runs smack into the long-time policy of the United States. Our nation has always attempted to protect its wage earners, its agriculture and its other industries against the products of other countries where wages are low, where the standard of living is far below that upon which we insist. So multilateral treaties are regarded by one school of thought in this country as a challenge to our national life.

The bilateral treaty contemplates an arrangement whereby, if the theory is carried to an extreme, each of the two countries paired in the agreement, will seek to balance the trade in commodities. For instance, if the United States and Poland were to agree on certain trade concessions and sign a treaty, purchases by Poland from the United States would be unrestricted so long as the American government allowed all of the Polish products to come into this country on an unrestricted basis. That is the theory. In practice, I am told it will not work out that way.

To use Poland as an example again: It seems to be more than likely that Poland might say to the United States, "we will allow only so much of the American purchases here." If that attitude were assumed by Poland and the United States were to agree, our exports to Poland would have to be reduced. Normally, we ship to Poland almost five times as much as we buy from Poland. The effect is obvious. It would mean strangulation of trade between nations. On the other hand, there is that balanced trade idea on which some authorities rely to force open doors that are now partially closed. If Poland could be persuaded to buy more from the United States than has been the case, of course, the result will be advantageous to our side.

There can be no doubt that high tariff rates hold out some foreign products. That is the purpose. The multilateral treaties, it appears from explanations given me, will cut down some of those rates, while the bilateral treaties may also strike the rates, but are more naturally directed toward removal of other obstructions. Bilateral treaties conceivably can be carried so far that the United States will be trading only with those countries willing to sign such agreements and limit themselves on the sources of supply.

The natural assumption to be drawn from the various aspects of the new trend, it seems to me, is that an attempt is being made to get away from the high tariff policy which has been an issue between the Democratic and Republican political parties so many years. My own conviction is that it cannot be accomplished; that world conditions are such as to make it impossible for the United States to let down any barriers now stopping the potential flood of foreign products, and that adoption of such a course will eliminate some of our own institutions and make further inroads into what is left of agriculture.

If one is willing to concede that our nation, or the majority of its people, favor the protection policy, then I gather that the job to which most attention ought to be paid is that of finding markets in this country for foreign products that do not compete, or do not seriously damage our own economic structure. If attention is given to that end, economists who are not politically minded tell me that outlets will be opened abroad for American-made goods. We will have our coffee, our rubber, our bananas, our cork, and a score of other things, and we will pay for them. So it is with some other peoples. They will have our cotton, our tobacco, our canned fruit, and so on, and they are willing to pay for them. It surely is made to appear, therefore, that the government is not attempting to increase trade in one way that it could be done, namely, help the foreigners increase their markets here for the things we do not produce. If that is done, economists who have studied the problems from all angles insist there will be a parallel growth in our exports.

There has been considerable adverse comment aroused in Washington to the action of the administration in organizing what it calls a "national executive council."

The President, in announcing formation of the council, explained that there were so many governmental agencies of nationwide scope that it seemed advisable to formulate a program by which individuals everywhere could go to a single center in their county and obtain information. He pointed out how wheat farmers or cotton farmers required advice on acreage reduction problems, how the national recovery administration reached into hundreds of cities and towns, how farm owners wanted to know how to proceed with their applications to borrow under the farm credit act, how home owners in small and large towns would always have problems to discuss in connection with home loans, and various other phases of normal and emergency governmental activity. The President thought it was a fine move to concentrate in one place all information respecting these matters. But here in Washington, observations on the plan direct attention to the fact that there are in excess of three thousand counties in the United States. Each county will have one of the central information agencies, and there will have to be two or more persons assigned there. In other words, a minimum of two jobs to dispend. Another suggestion heard frequently is that if there are criticisms of the administration, they can be discovered quickly and means adopted to offset them.

I think there can be no doubt that the information service can be of great help to persons residing far away from the headquarters of things governmental.

The row in the agricultural adjustment administration that preceded the transfer of G. N. Peek, administrator, to new duties in charge of export trade promotion apparently left an unpleasant taste in the mouth of some farm leaders. Reactions have come from various sections of the country. Representatives and senators, returning from their homes for the new session, brought back many blistering remarks about the fuss between Mr. Peek and Secretary Wallace and Assistant Secretary Tagwell, of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Peek always has been interested in agriculture because it was his business to be while he was head of the great Mollis Plow company and other farm implement enterprises. But he apparently was unable to convince Messrs. Wallace and Tagwell that he was on the right track in the way he administered the adjustment act.

Latest in Skate and Ski Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE than ever it is color of the most vivid sort around which winter sports costume design revolves. When you go skating or skiing no matter how dark and somber your divided skirt or your Norwegian-style trousers (either are in fashion) may be, the top of your costume, to be chic, must intrigue the eye with a riot of color. Jackets and sweaters (scarf sweaters are the rage), likewise sweaters and caps and the gloves that go with them make animated color their theme.

As rampant as color is and as delightfully frivolous as current snow togs may seem to all appearance, when it comes to genuine practically sports clothes as now designed are amazingly utilitarian, in that they are provided with all sorts of devices which add to their comfort and their wearableness.

For instance the girl skating in the foreground of the accompanying illustration is wearing a well-styled divided skirt of fine-wale corduroy which has a versatile waistband which can be so regulated by means of an adjustable slide fastener as to fit the waistline to a sixteenth of an inch. Instead of wearing trousers this smartly clad young enthusiast prefers a becoming divided skirt which has the graceful and feminine lines of a sports skirt, but with all the freedom of movement that trousers afford.

As to what is new and what is colorful in winter sports togs here you have it in this bright plaid scarf which has a plaid-cuffed glove to match. This matching glove and scarf sets give skating costumes just that dash and splash of color which they need.

A very clever idea brought out recently is a vividly striped stocking cap, one long end of which is brought down to wind about the throat—a sort of a two-in-one proposition. To this scarf and cap combination is added a pair of matching gloves.

You will be perfectly charmed with the skating costume, shown to the left above, when we tell you it is made of black velvet, the circular skirt of which is lined with red taffeta. The red appears again in the facing of the tie. The jacket fastens with silver clips and the Tyrolean knitted cap has a red feather. This costume is outstanding because of its effective color scheme.

For sheer practicality, with lots of style added, the model shown to the right scores high. It consists of sturdy Norwegian corduroy trousers topped with a chamol's vest, a turtle-neck white sweater and a fannel jacket, the latter an extra protection when wintry blasts grow fierce. The chamol's vest is bordered with a metal fastener so that it is easily put back to serve as a coat lining. It heightens the color effect when the vest is dyed a bright green or red although many are buying these chamol's sleeveless jackets in natural color.

All along the line one is impressed with the tendency shown to make this season's ski and skate clothes as picturesque as possible even to the point of being spectacular.

The multilateral treaties, it appears from explained nations given me, will cut down some of those rates, while the bilateral treaties may also strike the rates, but are more naturally directed toward removal of other obstructions. Bilateral treaties conceivably can be carried so far that the United States will be trading only with those countries willing to sign such agreements and limit themselves on the sources of supply.

The natural assumption to be drawn from the various aspects of the new trend, it seems to me, is that an attempt is being made to get away from the high tariff policy which has been an issue between the Democratic and Republican political parties so many years. My own conviction is that it cannot be accomplished; that world conditions are such as to make it impossible for the United States to let down any barriers now stopping the potential flood of foreign products, and that adoption of such a course will eliminate some of our own institutions and make further inroads into what is left of agriculture.

If one is willing to concede that our nation, or the majority of its people, favor the protection policy, then I gather that the job to which most attention ought to be paid is that of finding markets in this country for foreign products that do not compete, or do not seriously damage our own economic structure. If attention is given to that end, economists who are not politically minded tell me that outlets will be opened abroad for American-made goods. We will have our coffee, our rubber, our bananas, our cork, and a score of other things, and we will pay for them. So it is with some other peoples. They will have our cotton, our tobacco, our canned fruit, and so on, and they are willing to pay for them. It surely is made to appear, therefore, that the government is not attempting to increase trade in one way that it could be done, namely, help the foreigners increase their markets here for the things we do not produce. If that is done, economists who have studied the problems from all angles insist there will be a parallel growth in our exports.

Centralized Information

There has been considerable adverse comment aroused in Washington to the action of the administration in organizing what it calls a "national executive council." The President, in announcing formation of the council, explained that there were so many governmental agencies of nationwide scope that it seemed advisable to formulate a program by which individuals everywhere could go to a single center in their country and obtain information. He pointed out how wheat farmers or cotton farmers required advice on acreage reduction problems, how the national recovery administration reached into hundreds of cities and towns, how farm owners wanted to know how to proceed with their applications to borrow under the farm credit act, how home owners in small and large towns would always have problems to discuss in connection with home loans, and various other phases of normal and emergency governmental activity. The President thought it was a fine move to concentrate in one place all information respecting these matters.

But here in Washington, observations on the plan direct attention to the fact that there are in excess of three thousand counties in the United States. Each county will have one of the central information agencies, and there will have to be two or more persons assigned there. In other words, a minimum of two jobs to dispense. Another suggestion heard frequently is that if there are criticisms of the administration, they can be discovered quickly and means adopted to offset them.

I think there can be no doubt that the information service can be of great help to persons residing far away from the headquarters of things governmental.

The row in the agricultural adjustment administration that preceded the transfer of G. N. Peek, administrator, to new duties in charge of export trade promotion apparently left an unpleasant taste in the mouth of some farm leaders. Reactions have come from various sections of the country. Representatives and senators, returning from their homes for the new session, brought back many blistering remarks about the fuss between Mr. Peek and Secretary Wallace and Assistant Secretary Tugwell, of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Peek always has been interested in agriculture because it was his business to be while he was head of the great Moline Plow company and other farm implement enterprises. But he apparently was unable to convince Messrs. Wallace and Tugwell that he was on the right track in the way he administered the adjustment act.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Mayor Ed Comfrey of Nogal was a business visitor in town on this Wednesday.

Sylvester Baca, Jr., Ed Zamora and Amado Montoya were down from the Sacramentos to spend New Year's Day with the home folks.

Estanislao Bello and Lorenzo Casasa were here from Claunch last Saturday, transacting some business and returning home in the afternoon.

Cattle Buyer Mr. White was here this week purchasing steers from the following stockmen: Claud Branum, S. H. Nickels, Ignacio Sedillo and Dolores Luera of Rabenton.

Carroll Hines and his chum Bud Young from the Roswell Military Institute have returned to their studies after spending the holiday season at the Hines home.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Otero of Corona spent New Year's Day here as guests of Mrs. Otero's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Swan, Sr.

Miss Julia Romero is the new clerk at the Carrizozo Bakery & Supply Company.

Jose Otero, stockman from the Capitan country, was a business visitor in town Tuesday.

Messrs. Elmgren, Lott, Wraight and Leemkul of Fort Stanton were here Tuesday night and attended the meeting of the local I. O. O. F.

Probate Judge Manuel Corona was here this week from San Patricio on official duty.

Miss Charlotte Rice, Mrs. F. R. Berry and Augustus Swanberg of Fort Stanton were here last night at the installation of officers of Comet Chapter O. E. S.

Ansel Van Swearingen, Sr.

was born February 29, 1872, in Abbeyville, South Carolina. He died at his home in Carrizozo, New Mexico, December 28, 1933.

Mr. Swearingen came to Carrizozo in 1907 and has since made his home here. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Paris in Tucumcari, N. M., July 9, 1914. To this union one son, Ansel, was born.

After funeral services conducted by the Rev. J. L. Lawson Sunday afternoon, Dec. 31, 1933, the remains were taken to El Paso for interment in the Evergreen cemetery.

During the services in the home, Meses. R. E. Lemon, F. L. Elliott, T. E. Kelley, L. J. Adams and C. A. Snow sang "Beautiful Isle" and "In the Garden." Mr. Swearingen was a good neighbor, an ideal citizen and his friends were many, by all of whom he will be sadly missed, more especially among his former associates in the railway service with whom he had been identified for so many years. To the sorrowing widow and son, whom he leaves to mourn his loss, the sympathy of our community is extended.

Aguayo-LaMay

H. Paul Aguayo and Miss Ruth LaMay were married, by the Rev. Jno. L. Lawson in the Methodist parsonage Saturday night, Dec. 30, 1933. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. J. L. Lawson and Miss Frances Aguayo.

The contracting parties are members of two of the oldest and most prominent families of Lincoln County and their many friends wish them much happiness in their married life.

Notice of Hearing of Final Report and Account

In The Probate Court of Lincoln County, State of New Mexico.

In the Matter of the Estate of Wallace J. Merchant, Deceased. No. 342.

To Hattie Merchant, Lon D. Merchant, J. Leroy Merchant of Capitan, N. M., and Elsie Blanch Spencer of Artesia, N. M., and to all unknown heirs of the said decedent, and all unknown persons claiming any lien upon, or right, title, or interest, in or to, the estate of the said decedent, and to whom it may concern:

You, and each of you are hereby notified, and notice is hereby given, that Hattie Merchant, Administratrix of the Estate of Wallace Merchant, deceased, has filed in the above entitled Court her final report and account as such Administratrix, and the Court has appointed Monday, the 5th day of March, 1934, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., as the hour and day for hearing of objections, if any there be, to the approval and settlement of said final report and account, and the discharge of the said Hattie Merchant as such Administratrix, and at the hour on the day named, the Probate Court will proceed to determine the heirship of said decedent, the ownership of his said estate and the interest of each respective claimant thereto and therein and the persons entitled to the distribution thereof.

The name and postoffice address of the attorney for the Administratrix is E. M. Barber, Carrizozo, New Mexico. Witness the honorable Manuel Corona, Judge of the said Court, and the seal thereof, this 3rd day of January, 1934.

(Seal) Ernest Key, Clerk.
By Frances R. Aguayo, Deputy.

Methodist Church

Preaching service at Capitan next Sunday morning; at Angus in the afternoon, and in Carrizozo in the evening. Let us start the New Year right. A fine thing to resolve to attend one church service each Sunday of the year. The Missionary Society will meet in the home of Mrs. O. J. Snow Wednesday afternoon, January 10.

Celly Sandoval and His "Rancheros"

Carrizozo's Spanish-American orchestra, will give a big dance at Lutz Hall tomorrow night, January 6. The orchestra is composed of six instruments, with the addition of Tennis Bigelow as drummer. These Ranchmen, as they call themselves, can make hot music minus their spurs and chaps, so you needn't be afraid to be ridden too hard. You will do the riding - ENJOY IT - AND HOW! C'mon folks!

Judge Numa Frenger and Interpreter Bennett are here for a few days of court procedure.

Mrs. Maggie V. Chavez, who has been confined to her home of late on account of illness, is on the way to recovery at this writing.

Leo Sanchez spent the holidays in El Paso with his grandfather, Andres Luera, Sr.

Robert Hinchey and daughter Mrs. Meeks were business visitors in town from the Baca country last Friday.

Many people from neighboring towns attended the New Year's Eve dance at Lutz Hall last Sunday night.

Miss Billie Hurt of Bisbee, Ariz., is a guest of Miss Lala Joyce.

Robert Poage of Ancho is Chief Clerk for the C. W. A., with offices in the courthouse.

Complimentary mention was made of our old friend and former resident R. C. Sowder in the last issue of Western Live Stock, a finely illustrated publication for stockmen. To accompany the personal mention of Mr. Sowder, is a portrait of that gentleman, who is now the vice-president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association.
