FORT STANTON NEWS

Miss Wilma Beauchamp and her dancing class from Alamogordo entertained a large audience here on the night of Jan. 8, with song and dance. Great talent was displayed by all of Miss Beauchamp's pupils, and the performance, without exception, met with whole-hearted approval from the crowd. The artists featured on the program were: Miss Beauchamp, Kathryn Breese, Peggy West, Sally Nell, Sonny Carr and Armand Beauchamp. Besides the presentation of these talents, a number of vocal solos were sung by Roy Osborn, which also went over big with the assembly. For this nice and enjoyable entertainment we are again indebted to the Trowel Club, to the members of which we wish to extend our sincerest thanks and appreciations.

R. Gilligan, who is on a short vacation, is kicking up the gravel on surrounding highways with a brand new '34 Plymouth Sedan, which he purchased in Roswell.

Wm. H. Gould, in charge of the ambulatory section here, and whom we mentioned a short time ago as an all-around athlete and pursuer of noble and manly sports, has entered the business of promoting, with a couple of very promising welterweight amateurs, whom he has recently discovered. These pugilistically talented boys, now in training under Mr. Gould's expert instructions and guidance, are Messrs. Trolls Dickey and James Northrup. Reluctant to demonstrate their ability to the public, because of their apparent modesty, their manager was compelled to induce them, by a cunning scheme of bet-making, to enter a test match which was staged in Capitan. During a short but snappy pugnacious exhibit, the boys proved to be in great shape and were both amply able to swing a hefty set of knuckles. James, who packs a mean left and whose uppercuts, solar plexuses and what-nots were dished out in big heaps, was awarded the match on decision.

Honors for Grand Matron

Mrs. Merle Davis, Grand Matron of the Order of Eastern Star, who was here for the purpose of installing the new officers of the local Chapter, left for her home in Tucumcari after being entertained at the homes of different members of the fraternity. Mrs. Davis was the house guest of Mrs. C. A. McCammon, and Mrs. Albert Ziegler entertained at her home in honor of the distinguished visitor, the additional guests being residents of White Oaks, with whom the honor guest was associated when a resident of that place in the early days when the birthplace of the story, "Heart's Desire," was a booming mining town. In fact, it might well have been called a re-union. Other members of the chapter entertained at their homes in order to make her stay as pleasant as possible.

CWA Offices And Management

The courthouse is the scene of unusual activity just now. The CWA management is composed of G. T. McQuillen, chairman, and his chief clerk is Robert Ponge, with his office on the upper floor in the jury room.

On the lower floor next to the assessor's office, Eugene Dow supervises the registration of all applicants for work. When they are hired, their names and the amount of time each worker puts in, goes to the clerk, who in turn makes out his report and files bills for work tickets. The names and amounts due each man is then sent to Santa Fe, verified and the men receive their money.

Eugene Dow in the registration room has for his clerks, Dorothy Dozier and Roy Copeland, while Robert Ponge has Misses Edith Crawford, Alice Jarvis, Miss Lala Joyce, Hazen Davis and Ansel Swearingen. At present there are 158 on the payroll, according to Mayor McQuillen, the chairman.

Wild Man of the Malpais

About ten days ago, James Greer, Angora goat raiser west of town, missed one of his herds and being assured that they were somewhere in the lava beds, set out on foot to try and locate the lost goats. He traveled over the rough places for several hours and dropping into an open place, he saw the goats running at full speed and followed by a queer looking creature which at first sight, Jim took for a coyote, from the fact that a part of the time, it would run on all-fours.

Not knowing just what it was, Jim raised his rifle and took a shot at the object, which uttered a scream and vanished among the recesses of the lava rocks. Running over to where the creature had disappeared, Jim found one of the queerest looking hats we have ever seen, which he left behind in his flight. It was made out of the skin of a coyote and resembles the old type of hat used by Kit Carson and Daniel Boone. To all appearances, the skin was drawn over a stump or rock, the hair shaved entirely off with the exception of the tail, which hung in a streamer behind. In that condition it was dried.

Jim brought the hat to the Outlook office and told us the story as related above. He said that evidently the same creature had been seen in the San Andres mountains and also in the Sacramentos, where he has been caught in the attempt to steal sheep and goats. The freak hat is now at this office as an evidence of Jim's find, and anyone doubting this story may see it.

WANTS TO KNOW HOW THE CURVES "GET THAT WAY"

From the top of her night club piano Helen Morgan looks about her and sees curves and still more curves and finds them all delightful.

But it is not necessary to climb to the top of a piano to observe the anatomical phenomena which Miss Morgan discusses. There are curves on every hand, sometimes emerging where they had been least suspected. Everywhere the boyish figures of yesterday are blossoming seductively.

How the transformation has been effected is a source of continual amazement to the uninitiated. Miss Morgan gives a hint: "The women took a tuck in their waistlines, pulled them up a bit and lo! The curves were there."

That's a break for the beef and potato industry. One wonders, however, how long the mode will last and shudders at the painfulness of the deflation when the curves go out as suddenly as they came in.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fallacies About Hair

The medicals are accumulating evidence against three of the most persistent and widespread popular beliefs about hair. One is that shaving of superfluous hair—or any other kind of hair—promotes growth; another, that exposure to sunlight will bring to your girl's arms and legs, and to as much other bodily area as the liberality of your state's bathing suit laws will permit, an abundant harvest of hair; the third, that application of certain creams to shining domes will bring back the locks of yesterday.

Tormented for Five Years with Dandruff

Healed by Cuticura

"For nearly five years I was tormented with dandruff. My scalp itched and burned and became very sore and red from scratching. My hair became thin and dry and fell out in handfuls, and the dandruff scaled off and could be seen on my clothing."

"I had lost all hope of ever being healed. A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for a free sample. The first application stopped the itching so I bought more, and I used only one cake of Cuticura Soap with two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed."

Six "perfect" babies were abandoned in Tucson by their co-ed mothers Christmas Day, victims of a slim budget. The University of Arizona's baby home, where co-eds experimented with live subjects in studying a eugenics course, was closed because the expense of milk, nursing bottles, clothing and other laboratory necessities was too much for the budget.

An ordinance placing high taxes and rigid restrictions on sale of spirituous liquors within the city limits, and intended to prohibit the open bar, was adopted recently by the Phoenix city commission. White, president of the Raton Chamber of Commerce, regarding the Red River postal route, in the form of a letter from the second assistant postmaster-general to Senator Cutting. The letter was forwarded to Mr. White by Senator Cutting's office. SYNOPSIS

A girl finds herself in a taxicab in New York with a strange man who speaks of "an awful shock." He leaves her for a moment, and she drives on, for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. She has a wedding ring. At the hotel a young woman wishes to attend the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him. Visiting a store, a saleswoman insists she hide from observation. Rocky returns. He demands to know who she is and why his wife sent her to his home. She cannot tell him. They agree, for the sake of his parents, to pretend they are husband and wife. Rocky takes Doris to his New York apartment to confront his wife. He finds the flat empty. Doris sees the real wife's photograph and recognizes her as the girl who stole her $500. Doris finally tells Rocky she has lost her memory.

She looked up at him smiling. "Perhaps they know me!"

"No—they didn't act like that. More as if they were pointing out a celebrity."

"Where are they?"

"They wait a minute, here's our cab, young lady," he scolded. "Hop in and don't jump away like that again. I'm a nervous fellow."

"Hop in." He lifted her gently off her feet and set her in the cab. A minute later he was beside her, having told the driver to go to a certain speakeasy.

"But Rocky—if those people were pointing me out it must have been for some reason."

Rocky settled himself beside her and drew out a cigarette. "Well candidly, Baby, I didn't like their looks. If they were friends of yours, you're better off without them, and while I don't want to be melodramatic—"

In the gayety of the evening she had forgotten her old conviction that something terrible lay in her past from which memory had mercifully shut her out.

Rocky laid his hand over hers. "Forgive me," he said, "I was foolish not to go up to those people, but I had a hunch—just a feeling—not to do it."

The cab had stopped at a red light. A small boy was darting between the lined-up cars holding out papers.

"Oh, Rocky, we forgot about the tabloids. Let's look in."

"O. K.," said Rocky, feeling in his pockets. "I've been away so long I don't know what the latest scandals are myself." The urchin jumped on the running board and sold his papers. Doris' eyes dropped to the headlines:

KILLER BRIDE'S GUN FOUND
Diane Merrill's Father Identifies Gun Discovered on Ferry Boat.

The papers slid to the floor. For a moment she remembered. She knew everything, then she collapsed. She crumpled into a heap on the taxicab floor, moaning and clutching Rocky's knees.

When she came to her senses she was lying across the bed in Rocky's apartment while he leaned over her with anxious, fear-stricken eyes.

"You fainted."

"Yes—it was. It was something—" she could not go on. She could not remember what it was.

She closed her eyes, sighed. "How did I get here?"

He flushed. "I carried you. You were unconscious."

"You were kind." She was too exhausted to say more. Nor could she bring herself to mention the papers. Just as she had forgotten the words over the radio, she had again forgotten the headlines in the paper. Her mind seemed to refuse to go back toward them. She knew that something too horrible for contemplation had been revealed to her. She didn't have the strength to think about it.

Then she saw that he was very excited. He walked around the room picking up things, throwing them down. He seemed beside himself with some new strange emotion.

"What's wrong?"

He sat down in a chair, biting his lips. He hardly noticed her question. She repeated: "What's the matter?"

"What ought you to do?"

He turned on her grimly. "Well, something I'm not going to do."

She could stand no more. "Rocky, have you found out who I am?"

"Supposing I have found out?"

She was silent. "It must be something pretty awful," she said after a pause.

"I don't know what to do."

She pulled a cushion from behind her shoulders wearily. "You'd better tell me."

Still he walked up and down. "You've got to trust me."

He had reached that far in his reasoning; that he could not tell her what he knew, and that she would have to do what he thought was best for her. She sighed. It had been such a long hard day, taxing mentally and physically. She could not rouse herself to greater effort. She dozed, slept a little and woke to find him standing with all her luggage in the middle of the floor, a paint brush in his hand.

She watched him take a knife and begin to whittle her bag, on which were the initials D. V.

She spoke sharply. "What are you doing?"

He kept on working at it. "Better go back to sleep, Baby. You're going to need all the rest you can get."

"Rocky, what are you doing?"

"Wantonly wrecking your property."

"I see that. But why?"

"I'm going to paint everything black. Now look here, Baby, there are a lot of things you don't understand. And this is one of them. Turn over, close your pretty eyes and go back to sleep."

Doris swung her feet over the side of the bed. "You're crazy if you think I'm going to let you spoil my bags like that."

"You spoke just too late, lady."

He began to apply black enamel over the outside. "Baby!"

"What?"

"If you're rested you'd better go in the next room and look over the clothes that Doris left here. Pack up in my brown suit case. You'll find it lying on the bed."

"This is the queerest thing that's happened to me yet. I must be dreaming." She put her finger out and touched the wet black paint. "What are you doing this for?"

"Just a precaution. I ought to destroy it, but I'm not ingenious enough to think of a way at the moment. I want to get started in about an hour. Get well out of New York before dawn. I forgot to mention that I'm taking you on a motor trip to Canada. So pack up what you need from Doris' things. You're not to be allowed anything of your own."

She looked at him speechlessly. He put down his brush. "You are going to let me take care of you?"

He shook his head again. "Not now. We ought to be going."

Doris looked at him ruefully. "Why won't you let me see a paper?"

"Doris, snap out of it. You are going. I've made all arrangements. It's the only way out. You'll see what I mean, later. Come on, get your things!" He stood up with a bright forced smile.

Doris too rose. She looked up at him, a steady glow in her eyes. "Rocky, you haven't given me any reason why I should go. You won't even answer my question about a paper. Is there something that I ought not to see?"

He didn't answer.

"Because if you think there's something there that will shock me, that's just what I need. If I can be shocked hard enough, I'll remember everything. Don't you understand?" She saw that he didn't, and put her hot palms lightly to her temples. "Please Rocky, get me a paper."

He looked down at her with a conviction that was beyond stubbornness. "It's no use for you to keep repeating that request," he said. "It's utterly impossible." He took out his watch. "You have five minutes in which to dress for the street. And oh yes, I nearly forgot," he held out a pair of dark horn-rimmed spectacles. "I found these for you."

Doris stared at them. "What for?" she asked.

"For you to wear—if you like," he said.

"But I don't like." Doris was definite.

Rocky smiled pleasantly. "Take them anyway. We might be doing some fast driving—they'll protect you from the wind."

Doris tossed them onto a chair. She was perfectly sure that Rocky would pick them up again, and force her to take them, even wear them, if he chose. He was getting his way about a lot of things.

CHAPTER VII

As they got into the street Doris noticed that Rocky's manner was very strange. He pushed her into the doorway, and looked cautiously up and down the dark street.

"Come on," he whispered.

"What is this?" said Doris pettishly. "Hurry up."

Rocky had adjusted the top on his roadster. Doris climbed into what was now a glass-enclosed coupe.

"Aren't we going to be rather hot?"

"Can't have the top down. Not until we get away from New York anyway."

The engine was purring. Once more Doris fancied that Rocky looked about fearfully. "You're acting like the girl in Tange's. What is all the excitement?"

"What did you say about a girl in Tange's?"

Doris told the story of the odd, frightened girl who pushed her into a closet.

"She recognized you."

"Do you think she did?"

FIND CAUSE OF WRONG ACTIONS

Impairment of Brain Tissue Largely to Blame.

The faculty which permits man to associate symbols, such as the combination between written characters and ideas, is the phenomenon which sets man apart from animals. This higher faculty is made possible by the presence in the human brain of a thin external layer, known as the cortex, which developed only recently, as compared with the great passing of time, during which brains of a similar structure functioned without it.

Yet this thin tissue holds the fabric of civilization, since medical science finds that when it is impaired the individual is reduced to relying on instinct and unconscious habits.

In his valuable studies at the Neurological Institute of New York, Dr. Frederick Tilney has found that a distinct relation exists between an impaired cortex, with consequent malfunction of the brain, and criminal youths. Mild attacks of inflammation of the brain resulting from various diseases frequently leave the cortex definitely shrunken, if not completely atrophied. When this occurs in adults their behavior patterns are already so well formed, as a rule, that their conduct is not seriously altered, but when the cortex in children has been damaged they lack the ability to follow reasoning and make deductions which result in intelligent action, and, therefore, their behavior is different from that of the normal child.

Any impairment of the mental faculties must inevitably result in social mal-adjustment. It does not necessarily mean that a youth commits a crime purely because his brain does not function perfectly, but rather that his handicap substantially subtracts from his ability to carry his burden of life. Physical and mental deficiencies will reduce his feeling of equality and he will not be deterred from evil acts by considerations which would restrain one with normal mental faculties.

Much has been contributed to knowledge of the brain structure and functioning, but Doctor Tilney intimates that greater research will be necessary before generalizations can be demonstrated as facts.—Washington Post.

Seeks Alexander's Tomb

Enthusiastic over his proposed expedition to find the body of Alexander the Great, Howard Carter, discoverer of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Ameh has arrived in Alexandria, Egypt, to raise the necessary $240,000 for the venture. Should Alexander's tomb be discovered, he said, it would be the most important archeological find ever made in Egypt, even more important than the Tut-Ankh-Ameh discovery. The contents of Alexander the Great's tomb, he believes, would consist chiefly of metal, whose intrinsic value would not be as great as the Tut-Ankh-Ameh relics. There is the possibility, he added, that Alexander's tomb has been covered by the sea. The system he would use in searching for the tomb he described as "sounding" or sinking of pipes.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Japanese Dynamite

A few pertinent facts will suffice to explain the desperate need which makes the Japan of today a nation charged with dynamite.

In the next ten years Japan must find work for nearly ten million more people than she employs and feeds today. She has the highest birth rate and the lowest death rate among nations. Her population is increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 a year.

There is no room for these rapidly multiplying workers on the farms. No country in the world is so crowded as Japan, with 959 inhabitants to the square kilometer of cultivated land.

Up to the beginning of the present decade Japan has faced the consequences of a rapidly rising population without the safety valve which emigration or an expanding frontier can provide. Having found the empty spaces of the world already in the possession of the white races when her doors were opened in 1855, Japan plunged into the industrial revolution. The industry of manufacturing increased at a rapid rate, absorbing surplus workers from farms as the population began to increase due to the inspiration of modern contacts. Cheap goods sought and found markets abroad.

Japanese industry in recent years has been proving so formidable that tariffs and obstructions are being raised against it throughout the world. As a result her factories are finding it increasingly difficult to absorb the yearly increase in workers, and an explosion which will either destroy Japan's social order or force expansion abroad seems inescapable.

We are even now witnessing political blowups and territorial expansion behind which is the driving power of economic needs. —Albuquerque Journal.

Lesson for January 14

THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 3:13-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren...

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Was Baptized. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Meets the Test.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Faces His Life Work. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Victorious Son.

The baptism and temptation of Jesus should not be thought of as part of his preparation for his great work, as is represented by many writers...

1. The Baptism of Jesus, the King (8:18-17).

1. His coming to John (v. 18). While the forerunner was discharging his office, the king emerged from his seclusion at Nazareth and demanded baptism at John's hands.

2. John's hesitancy (v. 14). The incongruity of this demand with the purpose of baptism brought from John a protest...

3. The significance of his baptism (v. 15). Its significance is found in harmony with the central purpose of his coming into the world...

4. Approval from the opened heavens (vv. 10, 17). Immediately following his consecration to his work the heavens were opened...

5. The Temptation of Jesus, the King (4:1-11). This temptation was the opening battle of the dreadful conflict between Christ and Satan...

1. The combatants (v. 1). a. Jesus Christ—He went immediately from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God...

b. The devil—The one with whom Christ struggled here was a real, personal being, filled with cunning and malice...

2. The battleground (v. 1). It was the wilderness of Judea. The first man was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings...

3. The method of attack (vv. 3-9). Since, as the Redeemer, Christ sustains to mankind a three-fold relationship—Son of man, Son of God, and Messiah—each relationship was made a ground of attack...

a. As the Son of Man (vv. 3, 4).—The appeal was made to the instinct of hunger. Having been forty days and nights without food as a normal man, Jesus had a craving appetite...

b. As the Son of God (vv. 5-7).—It was to test whether this personality which had taken upon itself humanity, was divine. The devil quoted from a messianic Psalm to induce Jesus to presume upon God's care...

c. As the Messiah (vv. 8, 9).—Christ's mission as the Messiah was to recover this world from the devil. The devil offered to surrender to him on the simple condition that Jesus bow to the devil...

4. The defense (vv. 4, 7, 10). The instrument of defense was the word of God. Christ met the enemy each time, and repulsed him with "It is written..."

5. The issue (v. 11). The enemy was completely routed. The strong man was bound, making the spilling of his house possible.

Pearl of Price Happiness is that pearl of price which all adventure for, though few find it. It is not gold or silver that the earthlings of this world seek after...

Making a Friend Force is of no use to make or preserve a friend, who is an animal never caught except by kindness and pleasure. Oblige with all your soul that friend who has made you a present of his own.—Socrates.

LOVE AFFAIRS OF CUBAN COUNT STIR NEW YORK SOCIETY

Involved in Suits for Divorce, Alienation, Desertion and Bigamy.

New York—Cuba's glamorous answer to an American maiden's prayer, Count Augustin Miguel Jose Maria, Abalo Bartlett Betancourt y Zaldivar, who, it is said, faintly resembles Ronald Colman, is no longer the beau brummel of Park avenue...

This swashbuckling descendant of Spanish royalty, in three brief years of exile from his Spanish estates, captured two New York society beauties, engineered a Cuban revolution, swallowed poison after being thrown into jail for deserting one woman at the moment he was about to sail on a honeymoon with another and, finally, sailed for his homeland, where he has hopes of becoming Cuba's secretary of state.

Prize of Social Season.

Count De Zaldivar landed here in 1930 after his properties in Cuba had been seized by the Machado regime. Titled, wealthy, and handsome, he was the prize of that social season. He was soon seen frequenting night clubs with daughters of society clinging to his arms...

"He constantly dangled before my eyes the title of countess of Zaldivar," said Mrs. Bartlett in her complaint. "He painted rosy pictures of a future in Cuba surrounded by wealth, comfort, luxury, and honor when his estates were restored..."

Then, Mrs. Bartlett said, she discovered that her husband had transferred his affections to Doris Smadbeck, socially prominent daughter of Dr. Warren Smadbeck, millionaire real estate operator.

"On September 2 my husband and this woman entered into a bigamous marriage at Rye, N. Y.," she said. Later she engineered a raid on the newly married couple in the Manhattan Towers hotel, and subsequently caused the arrest of her husband as he was about to sail to Cuba with his bride...

Meanwhile Mrs. Bartlett filed another suit, charging alienation of affections, against Doris Smadbeck Bartlett, who flitted a West Point cadet in order to marry the count. Doris has filed a suit for annulment of her marriage.

Transfers Affections. Then, Mrs. Bartlett said, she discovered that her husband had transferred his affections to Doris Smadbeck, socially prominent daughter of Dr. Warren Smadbeck, millionaire real estate operator.

"On September 2 my husband and this woman entered into a bigamous marriage at Rye, N. Y.," she said. Later she engineered a raid on the newly married couple in the Manhattan Towers hotel, and subsequently caused the arrest of her husband as he was about to sail to Cuba with his bride...

Meanwhile Mrs. Bartlett filed another suit, charging alienation of affections, against Doris Smadbeck Bartlett, who flitted a West Point cadet in order to marry the count. Doris has filed a suit for annulment of her marriage.

Sheriff "Pretty Nice"; Prisoner Spurns Pardon

Cleveland.—C. Russell McIlwain of Port Huron, Mich., in jail here for allegedly passing a worthless check, rejected a chance to go free because he liked the comforts of the Cuyahoga county jail.

Judge S. H. Silbert told him that because of his good record he could go free, but McIlwain said, "Sheriff John Sulzmann has been pretty nice to me. He put me to work cleaning out his office and I'd like to finish the job if it's all the same to you."

It was all the same to his honor and McIlwain stayed at the jail.

Gives Only Life Belt in Canoe to Their Dog

Portland, Ore.—When a dog saves a child its news, but when a child saves a dog its just another one of "those things." Recently a canoe with two boys and dog upset on the Willamette river near here. One of the boys grabbed a life preserver, the only one in the boat, tied it around the dog and let it drift until the harbor patrol picked it up. In the meantime the lads set out on the overturned canoe, which was finally picked up by a passing motor launch.

Falls Into Barrel of Molasses While Drunk

Allwaukee.—When police arrested Theodore Tieman, twenty-three, in a bakery warehouse, they had to scrape him before they took him to headquarters. He had fallen into a barrel of molasses, tipped it over, and then rolled into the contents of a barrel of flour and a barrel of sugar. When finally captured, he was sitting in a tub of sugar water. Tieman, whom exasperated police dubbed "the human lollipop," was fined $5 on charges of drunkenness.

Jailer Jailed

Cushing, Okla.—The tables turned on Howard Baldwin, former Payne county jailer. Baldwin is serving a 90-day sentence in the jail he recently managed. He was convicted of killing a deer out of season.

Milk Wagons Quieted

Boston.—While clinging to old-fashioned horse-drawn wagons, a local dairy has them equipped with pneumatic automobile tires to avoid noise during early-morning deliveries.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Congress Under Way

Washington.—Congress convenes on a January date, for the first time in our modern history. It meets at that time pursuant to the provisions of a constitutional amendment that was added to our Constitution chiefly through the efforts of Senator George Norris of Nebraska...

Which may or may not be the correct theory. At any rate it has happened, and a new congress is under way. Where it is headed as a part of the current phase of the new deal, time alone can tell. There are certain things, however, that are perfectly plain. One of them is that President Roosevelt is following a course designed to forestall as much controversy in congress as he is able to do. In other words, the President appears to have planned a program that will prevent any snowballs from getting started down hill.

As the session gets going, one hears plenty of rumbling. Reasons for dissatisfaction are numerous and varied. But they can be concentrated suddenly. At least that is the record of disgruntled congresses of other years. Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers and his leaders in congress know it and, hence, everything has been done and is being done to keep the firing scattered. If there should be an issue developed or arise on which the bulk of senators and representatives agree in opposition to the Chief Executive, there will be plenty of trouble for the administration. Republicans, you know, are not going to pour oil on troubled waters. They play politics, too.

Looking over some of the possibilities of trouble, one observes such questions as taxes, permanent liquor control laws, extension of the life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, banking legislation or revision of laws we now have, reconsideration of the law which requires that every corporation that sells its shares of stock shall register them and comply with laws about its financial status, relief and recovery legislation in its various phases and others of no less consequence. Washington observers are saying that each one of these contains elements that may lead to a break between congress and the President. But they also are saying that Mr. Roosevelt holds the whip hand and that there are not many members of the senate or house who will take the bit in their teeth.

Silver Buying

I said a moment ago that Mr. Roosevelt's course was aimed to prevent the molding of a snowball, for it is a physical fact that once a snowball starts, it gains both in momentum and size. This largely explains the action of the President in proclaiming the London conference treaty on silver buying in effect just when he did. The plan for the American government to consume all of the silver produced in this country will stop some of the inflationists, perhaps fifty of them, right in their tracks. Their states and districts will get the benefit of the silver purchased by the government. It means a profit for them that they have not had in half a dozen years. It is quite obvious that they won't become rabid supporters of a program for inflating the currency, now.

None of the observers here seem to be in a position to say that the silver purchasing and coinage order is outside of the President's recovery program. They are agreed, however, that it constitutes a smart brand of politics and that it will go a long way toward sustaining the Presidential program in congress. And, if it need be said, there was no assurance heretofore that the present session of congress would not enact straight-out inflation legislation on its own responsibility.

Pathetic Incident

An incident at the treasury a day or two before Christmas distressed me greatly. An elderly lady—I believe she said she was eighty-four—called at the window of the treasury cashier to get a $20 gold piece. She offered a $20 bill in exchange for it. The paying teller was courteous, but positive. He could not deliver gold; it was against the executive order issued last March by President Roosevelt. The little old lady could not seem to understand why it had to be that way, but the refusal was definite.

"I do not see why I cannot have that $20 gold piece," she said, as she walked wearily away from the window. "It is the first time since my boy was twenty-one years old that I have not given him a $20 gold piece for Christmas. I know he will think I am getting childish if I fail this time."

She was almost in tears at her failure. I thought there was a lesson in that situation, and still believe it is quite unnecessary for any government to break hearts in the interest of commerce and industry. Where has our vaunted civilization led us?

standing a year ago and less when "public works" were being promoted that the construction should not be undertaken by the government should not be of the sort that would compete with, or hamper the operation of, private business. No one suggested that, for the sake of relief, there should be paralleling of railroad tracks, one of them government owned. While that was not done—it is an exaggerated illustration—the government has promoted construction that has taken traffic away from the railroads by expanding every known artery of highways. At the rate the Tennessee Valley authority is moving, private enterprises of various kinds will be driven out of existence by a government agency.

Then, the Public Works administration turned down a loan that was sought the other day by the city of Fort Worth, Texas, with which to build a municipal power plant. What has happened since, I do not know, but the reason for the first refusal was that the Fort Worth folks had not made rate schedules lower for their projected plant than were charged by private interests.

There are numerous examples available, and the import of each is the same. And they all give rise to the question: ought the government of the United States subsidize, directly or indirectly, such developments, drive out private business and then make up the difference from the general taxpayers of the country? From this vantage point, it looks to be decidedly questionable as a form of public works even in the guise of relief. Politicians who support that sort of thing, I believe, will wish sometime they had not done so.

History does repeat itself!

In the days before you and I were young, Maggie, the system of barter was the only means of selling or buying the things the folks of those days needed or desired. I do not suppose, however, that they ever thought the American government would adopt a system of barter by which a commodity would be traded for a human being. Yet, that is just what has happened in this day of so-called high civilization.

It seems that Samuel Insull, the Chicagoan, who had built up quite a big business in city light and power plants and other utilities, is still in Greece. Some of the folks in Chicago would like to talk to Mr. Insull. Or, rather, they would like to put him on a witness stand before a judge and jury and then ask him questions. So it was natural that they should seek the aid of the government at Washington in their efforts to persuade the government of Greece to help Mr. Insull over the boundary line of their country. Greece did not join so readily with that plan, because Mr. Insull was regarded by the Greeks as a nice man. Now, here is where history repeats.

There came a day when prohibition was repealed. At the same time, there was a shortage in the United States of certain kinds of wine which Greece could supply. But Greece was not welcomed as source of the shipments which could be made under our rules of the game only under a quota fixed by our government. There was some direct word spoken here in Washington to the minister of Greece. It appears that an understanding was reached. Greece was placed on the quota list for 25,000 gallons of wine, and Mr. Insull hereafter may not find Greece such a pleasant haven.

Of course, I do not profess to know what went on in the private conversations that preceded the action by the federal alcohol control administration in placing Greece on the quota list. But I do know the conversations were not all about the wine quota. And I have heard subsequently that the American government expects eventually to have Mr. Insull return to the United States so that his ideas about the fallen utility empire can be heard.
