Oddfellows' Meeting

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., held a well attended meeting Tuesday night and the attendance was augmented by the arrival of twelve members from Alamogordo lodge.

The First Degree was conferred on three candidates, and on account of the severe dust-storm that night, the Rebekahs served refreshments at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Walker instead of the lodge hall as was first intended.

The Alamogordo members are a good bunch of real sports and showed their staying qualities by braving the storm that night in order to fill their engagement, and No. 30 wishes to thank them for their visit, help and inspiration.

Mrs. W. P. Walker entertained the Bridge Club members and their husbands last Sunday. Mrs. Walker is a sister to Mrs. Robert Leslie of White Oaks.

NOGAL NOTES

(By "TEX")

There has been quite a lot of activity around Nogal lately. This nice spring weather seems to be doing its stuff.

The men of Nogal have organized a club to be known as the W. K. H.—We Keep Honest. The motive of this club is to create closer fellowship and upbuilding of our community.

The ladies were not to be outdone—they also organized a club to be known as the Domestic Art Club. We understand they are to do fancy sewing and quilting.

Mrs. Eva Emerson and children have sold their place above Nogal to Mr. Luckey of Carrizozo. It has not been learned as to where they will locate. We regret to lose the Emersons; but extend a hearty welcome to the Luckeys.

G. L. Hickey is doing nicely with his tanning club. There are 24 members in the club and the boys are really tanning leather. This work is a part of the government vocational training.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Nickels, daughters Marjorie and Dorothy visited at the Jesse May home last Sunday.

Mrs. Edgar Marsin was delightfully surprised one day last week with a shower given at Mrs. Tom Zumwalt's. Many delightful and useful presents were presented. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

It is rumored that work is to start soon on the Nogal canyon road, the same to be done by CWA workers.

We understand they made a rich strike in the Helen Rae one day last week. Who says that ain't gold in them thar hills?

Roy Hust, who was operated on for appendicitis, is well on the road to recovery.

Mrs. A. B. Zumwalt, who was called to Phoenix on account of the illness of her daughter-in-law, will not be able to return soon as the illness was more serious than at first expected.

Seventh Birthday

Mrs. Frank Abel will entertain in honor of the 7th birthday of her little son, Frank, Jr., this afternoon from 3:30 to 5. There will be about 30 little guests whose ages compare favorably with Frank, Jr.'s. The decorations will be green, to overshadow St. Patrick's day and the color will prevail in the refreshments, with green cake, ice cream and other delicacies. Games and means of entertainment will be provided by the hostess to please the childish hearts.

Birthday Party

Mrs. R. R. McPherson was hostess to about 45 guests and friends of the family on the evening of March 9, in honor of the 16th birthday of her daughter Oney. The evening's entertainment consisted of music, cards and dancing, after which refreshments of cake, punch and ice cream were served. Miss Oney received many nice presents from her guest friends, all of whom were royally entertained.

G. T. McQuillen, chairman of the Board of Education and Mrs. O. C. Jones, County School Supt., made a trip to Hondo Wednesday in the interest of school matters and supervising the remodeling of the school building at that place.

COURT MATTERS

There has been no termination to any of the trials in the district court this week. In the Clements case, defendant plead guilty of assault with a deadly weapon and sentence deferred until the expiration of court. In the Hunicutt case, the alleged torturers were arraigned for trial and before proceeding further, O. P. Van Horn arose and pleaded guilty, which caused a wave of excitement over the courtroom. Counsel for the defendants requested that court recess until 1 o'clock, when after opening, the case was postponed until April 2. The Rutherford case will occupy the attention of the court tomorrow morning, we understand. In the Townsend-Hewitt case, Mrs. Townsend was granted $607.00 for care of the patient during his illness.

The Dan Lowden case will come up on March 22.

The Big Storm

Tuesday night, did considerable damage over town. Many metallic roofs were loosened up and some parts torn off. The Santa Rita Sisters' home had the porch and one side of the roof blown off, and the Lyric Theatre, a part of its roofing. Ranchman Wm. Gallacher was out on the range on horseback and the dust was so thick, that he lost his way and got tangled up in a barbed wire fence where he remained until the air purified so that he could see where he was, and found that he had been going in the wrong direction from home.

Messrs. Herting, Decker, Winters, Sundberg and Calloway of Fort Stanton were business visitors here Wednesday and while here, made this office a friendly call. Come again, boys!

ANCHO ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hall of Luna motored to Carrizozo Sunday to visit their infant granddaughter Jane Poage.

Mrs. Allen Kille was an El Paso visitor last week.

Mrs. T. J. Straley returned home Friday night after spending the winter in Douglas and El Paso.

Homer Andrew and Geo. Goodson attended the dance at Carrizozo Saturday night.

Poole Earnest transacted business in El Paso this week.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hightower were host and hostess Saturday evening to the Bridge Club for a delightful evening at their home. Three guests, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Pruett and Frances Pruett of Carrizozo played with the club. Mr. Pruett made high score for guests and Mrs. Hefren for members. The hostess served cream pie and coffee.

The Woman's Club met Saturday afternoon with Mmes. Kille and John Straley. Guests were Mmes. McCammon, Mays, and Miss Frances Pruett. Vice-Pres. Mrs. Hightower presided. Roll call was "An American Hero" and many interesting facts concerning our heroes were brought out. Mrs. Frame lead the Club Litany and the members read the response. Mrs. S. J. Pruett had charge of the study hour. Her subject, "What delays the abandonment of War," was followed by a general discussion of the subject from various ones. During the social hour a very clever St. Patrick's pencil game was played in which Mrs. Mays was awarded the prize. Tables were beautifully decorated with St. Pat's covers and centered with bouquets of sweet peas. Place cards tinted in gold and favored with shamrocks directed the guests to their places where they enjoyed a palatable salad course served with hot tea. "My Wild Irish Rose" was sung by Lucille and Lala Lee Drake. A reading, "Pat's Love Letter," was given by Mrs. Hefren, followed by another Irish song by the Drake sisters. Mrs. G. Pruett was handed the end of a string and asked to follow it to its origin. After crawling under a table and meandering through the rooms, she found all her efforts worthwhile, for at the end of the string there was a large collection of birthday gifts awaiting her. She opened the gifts enthusiastically and thanked each one for remembering her. The meeting closed by singing "God be with you till we meet again." Next meeting will be with Mrs. Wilson on March 24.

1400 tons of steel will be used in the building, which will be 900 feet long and rise to 110 feet at its point in a huge central rotunda. Specifications call for 700,000 square feet of fire-resistant wall board, 1,600,000 feet of lumber, 5,000 yards of concrete, and 160,000 square feet of tile flooring. The entire space reserved for industrial exhibits will be skylighted.

The Ford Building, which will be one of the largest at the 1934 A Century of Progress will be situated on a 11-acre tract with a frontage on Lake Michigan. A 5-acre tract on the lake shore is a part of the general project, though this was not included in today's contract.

CHAPTER I

The wind swept in long, savage blasts, driving its cold through layers of wool, through a man's flesh, straight into his bones.
Snow came, fine snow, stinging blizzard snow; it clung to the man's clothing, to his eyebrows and mantled the burden on his shoulders.

Now and again he lifted his head from the bending which protected his face somewhat from the drive of the storm and spoke.
"All right, Stevie!" he would ask. From the huddle up there, which was a pack-sack with a blanket drawn over the small boy riding in it, would come a whimper.

"Wiggle 'em, Stevie! Wiggle 'em fast!" the man would say and plunge on, with something like desperation in the grit of his snowshoes through the loose covering of old snow, pulling the ends of the blanket which he hid in his hands a bit closer to keep the child's head and shoulders covered.

The man was frightened. It showed in his pace, which was too swift for long journeying, showed in his excited breathing, which the effort of even forced, travel alone would not have produced; showed, also, in the way he turned frequently to look backward, as if fearful of pursuit.

For the first hour it had not been so bad. It was cold, yes, and blowing a bit, still, the conditions were not discouraging to a man with less than forty pounds on his back and with only twenty miles to go; not discouraging when necessity seasoned with desperation occasioned the trek. Even if it had been storming at the start and had the burden been much heavier, the effort would have been as nothing compared to the prospect of jail.

But he had scarcely left behind the yellow squares of windows in Flynn's camp before the first outriders of snow squalls struck, and before he had covered a third of the way the blizzard roared down upon him.

For Drake, a blizzard was nothing new. For Drake alone, that is. But with a four-year-old on his back a storm like this was something else again.

And now the child for the first time volunteered a complaint: "Daddy, my foot's cold!"

"Won't be long, now, Stevie; hang on; we'll get into a nice, warm place pretty quick, now!"

The little boy snuggled closer. The mittened hands which had rested on the man's shoulders under the protecting blanket worked forward, half embracing his father's neck.

Drake's breath caught and he shook his head to clear away the mist which formed in his eyes. Going back was out of the question. The thing which had driven him off would be discovered by now. A stop to attempt to warm the child would have been risky, even had he a belt-ax with which to knock up a shelter and fuel.

But it was a dozen miles yet to the railroad; a dozen miles, with the going getting rapidly worse and the cold increasing and his own strength, taxed by the demands of his physical necessity and the sappings of twin fears, ebbing steadily.

He edged to the left, now, watching the bank of the winter-locked stream, looking for an opening in the timber. Taking it, he would be forced to cross a bald ridge and face an even more intense sweep of the storm, but men said it saved three miles on the trip to town, three miles, an hour's travel.

"Daddy!" The child whimpered a little for the first time.
"All right, Stevie! Won't be long, now. . . . Here we are!" He saw the leaning cedar and the opening of the trail and swung toward it.

The going was more difficult because loose snow had fallen to shin depth and lay unpacked by the wind. The cover yielded a measure of protection from the blizzard and this was welcome but the climb was a fresh demand on Drake's overworked lungs and heart and muscles. Breath began to sob in his throat and he staggered until the little boy clasped his neck in a hold that strangled.

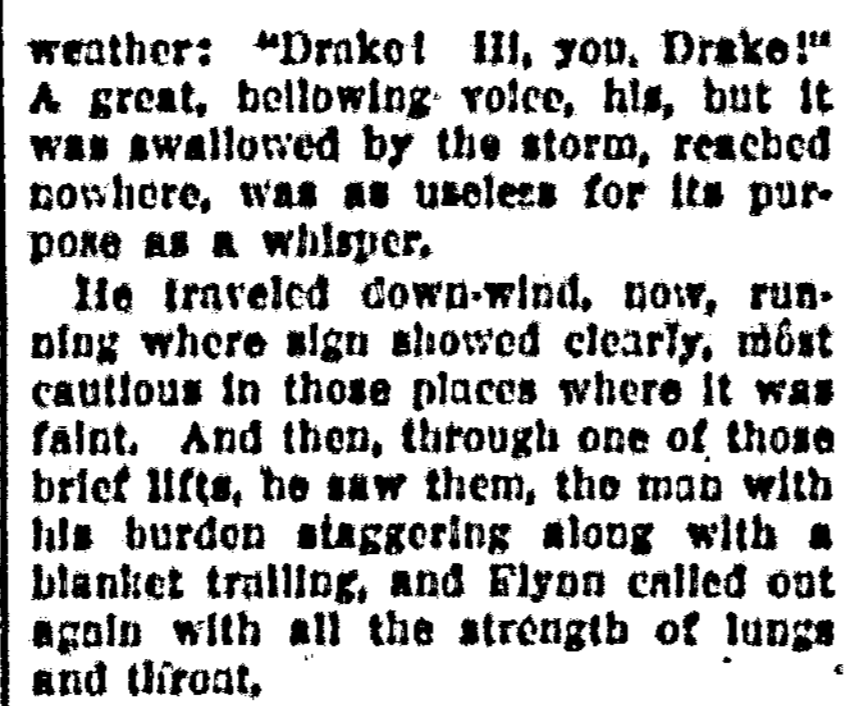

"Don't, Stevie!"—pushing the small hands away. "Can't breathe . . . when you . . . do that. . . ."
The child began to cry softly and the man stopped, panting and away-ling slightly.

because he had broken through the mantled top of a down tree and could find so little purchase among the dry, brittle branches, and because he was trembling with a fresh and greater fear. No trail leads across a down top. He had missed it again!
"Ve're lost!" he cried. "Turned around, Stevie! We got to get back to the river, somehow!"

Drake began circling, panic stricken. The hulking figure that, many minutes behind, followed this aimless and changing and rapidly fading trail was panic stricken, as well. Never in all his experience in Jim Flynn been keyed up as he was now.

He realized that Drake had lost his way before he had been a-top that ridge ten minutes, because Jim knew the country as he knew his own shanty, back yonder at headquarters. He saw where the other had doubled, after first losing the way, saw where he had fallen twice, read in the signs indications of panic.

Then a sort of fear shook Flynn. He read the story in the snow and roared out into the hubbub of mad weather: "Drake! Hi, you, Drake!" A great, hollowing voice, his, but it was swallowed by the storm, reached nowhere, was as useless for its purpose as a whispser.

He traveled down-wind, now, running where sign showed clearly, most cautious in those places where it was faint. And then, through one of those brief lifts, he saw them, the man with his burden staggering along with a blanket trailing, and Flynn called out again with all the strength of lungs and throat.

If Drake heard he did not stop. He kept on and, after him, through the snow which seemed to fly over thicker, went Jim Flynn, a moose of a man.

"Hi, you! Come back from that, Drake! Keep away from that!"

For such a heavy man he made tremendous speed, but it was a tremendous need that drove him, now. He had to keep going, he must stop that other before he reached the rim that lay before him. It broke off like the edge of a table, he knew; it went down a hundred feet of almost sheer drop, with rocks jutting out from the face of the cliff to catch and smash and maim a man.

"Drake! You, Drake!" His bellow carried, then, and he saw Drake turn his face over his shoulder, but he did not halt.

It was not until Flynn's great mittened hand caught him by the shoulder and spun him about and hurled him backward into the snow that Drake's flight was checked. Two more of those crazy strides and man and little boy would have been over and down.

As he reeled backward, Drake cried, "Oh, Jim!" And then, as he covered in the drift: "Oh, Jim! You found it out!"

Stevie was crying, a muffled sound, and old Jim dropped to his knees and lifted the little boy.

"Cryin'!" He said and choked a bit, as in relief. "Cryin', eh? Then it ain't too late!"

He jerked open his thick mackinaw, gathered the child in his arms and holding the small body firmly against his breast folded the heavy jacket over it.

"Put your face ag'in my neck, Stevie. And you, Drake, come on; follow me close!"

"My foot!" whimpered the child. "In here, Drake," said Flynn and shouldered the door open. The other staggered behind him, leaning against the cabin wall, panting through open lips.

"Kick off your snow-shoes, you chump! Here hold th' laddy!" He thrust the boy into his father's arms. The ruin of a sheet iron stove was in one corner, with pipe rusted and askew but still jointed. A rude bunk held a deep thickness of balsam boughs, brown and brittle. Tearing off an armful of these, Flynn thrust them into the stove and struck a match. Soon the twigs ignited and flames roared.

Out came Flynn's belt-ax and crashed into the framework of the bunk. In mere minutes lengths of linder-dry aspen were burning and then Jim stripped off his mackinaw, hung it over the window and shoved Drake away from the doorway.

The drift about the entry was cleared, the door kicked into an approximation of its place and then Jim turned to the other.

"Work up some more wood now. Your cheek's frosted but that don't count. . . . Here, Stevie, come to old Jim!"

"Foot!" the boy wailed. "My foot!"—as his father surrendered him.

"Hurt, do they? That's good; that's fine, Stevie! Hands hurt, too? Ain't that great? Nothin' frozen much about you, likely. . . . Not by a hair!"

Off came the small mittens, exposing reddened hands. Then the rubbers and socks were stripped from his feet. They were blue, with the toes curled up and Jim, holding first one, then the other, in his cupped hands blew on the discolored flesh, alternating this with brisk chaffing.

"You missed freezing by a hair, sonny! Gosh, ain't it a relief that they hurt, though?"

He had seated himself on a worn bench and now swung the lad to his knees so that they faced one another. He fumbled at his shirt, opening the front, then ripped open his heavy undershirt, exposing his great chest.

"In they go, Stevie! Into old Jim's oven, now, where they'll warm up but not so fast as to make 'em hurt awful." He thrust the small feet in beneath his armpits, clamping down on them and holding them tight. "Now, tuck them cold hands down my back, Stevie. That's the lad! That's the little man! Now, we're going to warm up in a hurry!"

He wrapped his ponderous arms about the small body and rocked back and forth, crooning in a deep rumble.

Drake, in the meantime, had knocked more of the bunk into proper lengths, filled the stove and braced the pipe. Already the heat was penetrating their clothing, filling the room. They were sheltered from the wind, they had a fire, and although little Stevie still sobbed with fright and pain, he was out of danger.

Never so long as he lived would Steve Drake forget the deliciousness of that sensation. At first he tugged at his throbbing feet, tried to draw away from the clamp of those heavy arms because the sharp pains of restored circulation shot clear to his hips. But the big man only crooned the louder and held him closer and kept saying that the hurt would soon be over, now, and that it was a good sign. He was right. The throb and burn died out and a tremendously sweet warmth began to seep through the small body.

Feeling so comfortable took all the child's attention. It made him heedless of the things his father and Jim said to each other most of the time but, of course, no boy who is even half awake and not really hurting could be wholly heedless of the things that a boss as important as Jim Flynn said to his father a little later.

Nether can a boy see his father cry and not remember it. Drake did just that. For a long time he cried, as a little boy might cry, as Stevie had never seen any man cry, and Jim did not look at him; just looked other places and hummed some and seemed to be trying to think up something to say.

After a while he appeared to think of things, and what he said was what any boy would remember.

For instance: "You're a fool, Drake." "Yes. . . . What a fool I thought I could get away with it and you might never do anything about it, and a thousand dollars."

"Oh, that!"—as if that didn't matter, and Jim cleared his throat with a great noise. "Wasn't thinkin' about that, Drake. About Stevie, here, I mean. Bad enough for a grown-man to monkey with weather and get froze up, but takin' a fine little duffer like Stevie into it. . . . That's what proves you a fool."

"Sure. But I'm thinking about the money, Jim. . . . And that I'm a thief, now."

"Never mind that, Drake. Nobody, much, knows but us. And a thousand's nothing."

Science of Chemistry The science of chemistry had its origin in remote antiquity. Many of its earlier secrets form the basis of modern knowledge. Early chemistry developed from gradual findings usually relating to the extraction of various metals from ores. Modern chemistry had been largely developed along industrial lines during the Nineteenth century, and since the World war enormous progress has been made.

Fried Cakes of Many Kinds

Appellations Differ in Various Parts of the Country, but All Are Delicious and Healthful if Prepared With Due Care.

Crullers, doughnuts, fried cakes—Which? There is a great difference in opinion. The last time I wrote an article on this subject a New Yorker of an old Knickerbocker family took issue with me upon my tentative definitions. If you have been in various parts of this country you know that no consistent term is used to describe these crisp brown cakes which are alike in at least this one particular—they have all been fried in deep fat. One authoritative cook book says that the word "cruller" comes from a Dutch word meaning that which curls or twists. "Doughnut" is an English word used to describe a nut or a ball. We all know that crullers may be balls, rings or twists, and that doughnuts may be any of these pulled off in long thin strips, fried quickly, sprinkled with sugar and served hot. This used to be the custom in many households when bread was commonly made at home. These doughnuts must, of course, be eaten at once and will not keep fresh long. It is possible to reheat raised doughnuts in a paper bag in the oven. They should be turned out on soft paper so that the extra fat may be absorbed. Remember that all doughnuts should be turned on soft paper as soon as they are taken from the hot fat. Remember also that the fat must be hot, but not too hot, about 375 degrees Fahrenheit. A piece of bread will brown in 60 seconds in fat at this temperature. After frying each "batch" let the fat heat a moment before starting another. If the fat is too cool it will be absorbed during the cooking.

In my own experience the various terms were applied as follows: The doughnuts which were made regularly to fill the crock in the pantry were rings. The crullers, which were made on special occasions from a richer and more expensive mixture, were finger shaped and sometimes they were made occasionally were twists and balls. We all preferred the twists, which we called birds.

A recent letter from a correspondent asks for a recipe for "greaseless doughnuts" such as are turned out by the modern doughnut machines. I am afraid that I cannot guarantee a recipe to produce greaseless doughnuts. The machines in use now are equipped with instruments for carefully regulating temperatures in cooking. The ingredients for the mixture are actually weighed. Even the most careful cook, measuring as accurately as possible, cannot get the consistent quantities which weighing insures. There is one point about which I can advise you, however, and that is, scant your shortening. Do not add just a little extra fat with the idea that your doughnuts will be improved. A doughnut containing too much fat will crack and allow hot grease to be absorbed during the frying.

Raised doughnuts are made from a yeast dough which is quite like Danish pastries.

Crullers. 1/4 cup shortening 1 cup sugar

Raised Doughnuts. 1 1/4 cups milk 1/4 yeast cake 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup shortening 1 cup light brown sugar 2 eggs 1/4 grated nutmeg Flour

Scald and cool milk; when lukewarm, add the yeast cake crumbled, salt and flour enough to make a stiff batter; let rise over night. In the morning add shortening melted, eggs well beaten, nutmeg, and enough flour to make a stiff dough; let rise again to double. Roll three-fourths inch thick. Shape into twists or balls. Place on floured board, let rise for one hour, turn, and let rise again; fry in deep fat (375 degrees Fahrenheit) and drain on soft paper. Cool, and roll in powdered sugar.

Yolks 2 eggs Whites 2 eggs 4 cups flour 2 teaspoons grated nutmeg 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon 1 cup milk 4 teaspoons baking powder. Cream the shortening, add sugar gradually, yolks of eggs well beaten and whites beaten stiff. Mix flour, nutmeg, cinnamon and baking powder; add alternately with milk to first mixture, roll thin and cut in pieces three inches long by two inches wide; make three or four cuts crosswise. Fry in deep fat, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, and drain on brown paper.

Soup Cream Doughnuts. 2 1/4 cups flour 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg 1/4 teaspoon salt 4 egg yolks well beaten 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup sour cream

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg together. Beat eggs until light and thick. Add sugar and beat until fluffy. Add cream, then other ingredients, and beat until smooth. Turn out on floured board. Roll one-fourth inch thick, cut with small doughnut cutter, or form into balls. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees Fahrenheit) until brown, turning frequently. Drain on soft paper. When cool, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Scald and cool milk; when lukewarm, add the yeast cake crumbled, salt and flour enough to make a stiff batter; let rise over night. In the morning add shortening melted, eggs well beaten, nutmeg, and enough flour to make a stiff dough; let rise again to double. Roll three-fourths inch thick. Shape into twists or balls. Place on floured board, let rise for one hour, turn, and let rise again; fry in deep fat (375 degrees Fahrenheit) and drain on soft paper. Cool, and roll in powdered sugar.

Country Had Gone to Hell Before the New Deal—Ickes

We wonder, says the Chicago Tribune, if the members of the League of Women Voters, listening to the recent speech of Sec. Ickes, reported the pleasing picture of the character of American life, prior to the "new deal" which took effect March 4.

In his speech, he went back to early history, when the people of this land, not satisfied with slavery among our own kind of human beings, induced people from other countries to come to our shores under a promise of freedom, life and liberty—and all that stuff—and after getting them here, made slaves of them. He then came down through history, and pictured our people living in hovels, working in underground filthy conditions under slavery to the lords and barons, with but little to keep body and soul together. Ever since the country was founded—and liberty for the people had never been advocated nor had ever anything been done to relieve that deplorable state of affairs until March 1, 1934, when the "new deal" took effect.

Lo, and behold—after all these years of American independence, earned through patriotic endeavor and bought with priceless blood of American manhood—after years and years of honest service on the part of our public men of all parties—after this being acknowledged as the foremost country in the world, comes little secretacy, Ickes, telling intelligent American women, that before the advent of the new deal, this entire land of ours had been going to "Hell" as he so expressed it.

He ended his speech to the good women of the Voter's League by terming everything done prior to March 4 under the shining sun of this country as a "national degradation." Now, this frightful wilderness full of ravaging beasts is soon to be, under the new deal, turned into a veritable garden of Eden, where the people may wander at will, under a perfect form of government, unheard of before.

But, continues this spreader of bull, the ones who built the hell, he described, meaning of course the Republicans, will resist the coming of this millenium with all the force in their power.

These "constructive" critics, says Mr. Ickes, would rather have the patient die, than have their "incantations" fail. We have not been able to hear of a report from the ladies who heard that remarkable parade of 'tore'—possibly to them speak from a standpoint of American intelligence would betray the fact that Mr. Ickes made many future votes for the Republican party.

If such speeches are repeated, we might expect a great landslide at the next election.

We Invite You—

Knowledge is truth. Nothing is more convincing.

Our obligation as Ford dealers in this community is not only to sell and service cars. Just as important is our duty to acquaint the public with up-to-date facts about automobile values. We believe that only in this way can intelligent comparisons be made.

So, this invitation is given to everyone—owners of large or small cars—mechanics—other automobile dealers, come in and inspect the new 1934 Ford V-8. You will find out why a Ford buying wave is going over the country.

If you would like to drive the new Ford that is your privilege. New thrills will delight you. We will not bombard you with requests to buy—the car will do that.

We are looking for you!

No Trick Gadgets On Ford V-8 Car

No matter what the possibilities for sensational publicity Ford has never resorted to stunt features to sell his cars. Freakish body designs on an automobile are just as speculative as freakish designs on houses.

Millions of dollars were spent to sell American Motorists on free wheeling. Ford declined to put it on his cars.

The Ford purchaser gets a proven car both in style and operation. There are no trick gadgets to catch the fancy and later on prove to be mistakes.

The Ford policy of continuous improvement is well shown in this year's car. It is the best car the Ford Motor Company has ever built.

Bows Feature of Purse and Muff

Bows and muffs are both featured this season in unusual models and styles. For example, hand bags have bows for ornaments, purses are combined with muffs, or muffs have bows as trimming. Occasionally, all three features are found in a single accessory, the muff purse or the purse muff, whichever you prefer to call it.

Favorite materials for purses with bows, and muffs, are satin, silk, velvet, soft suede, or its imitation in fabric-suede. It is easy to see why these are chosen, since the materials are so soft and flexible that they lend themselves admirably to gathers and folds of bows. It is of interest to the home worker to know of these materials, since she can fashion her own purse in one of these latest models if she so chooses.

A length of one of these textiles, six inches in width or more can be interlined, and then lined with satin, and have little inside pockets made of gathered or flat satin sewed to lining. The strip is then folded twice. The outside fold is shorter than the other two parts, and forms the flap. The sides of the folded edges beneath are sewed together for the bag portion of the envelope purse. It is advisable to fit the outside flap with snap fasteners for security.

It is the trimming of the bag which supplies the novel feature. On the flap is sewed as smart a bow of the material as the worker can fashion. Or she can match the color of the bag in heavy ribbon and get the sales person at the ribbon counter to make the bow, which the woman can herself, sew to the flap.

A bag that is minus a bow can be made in latest style by sewing a bow on the outside. It is not always that by such a slight addition a last year's bag can be brought up to the latest vogue.

For Hard Coughs or Colds That Worry You

Creomulsion is made to give supreme help for coughs or colds. It combines 7 helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is for quick relief, for safety. But careful people, more and more, use it for every cough that starts. No one knows where a cough may lead. No one can tell which factor will do most. That depends on the type of cold.

Creomulsion costs a little more than Jecser helps. But it means the utmost help. And it costs you nothing if it fails to bring the quick relief you seek. Your druggist guarantees it. Use it for safety's sake. (adv.)

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for March 18 JESUS RESPONDS TO FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 13:54-58:14:15. GOLDEN TEXT—Ask and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you.—Matt. 7:7. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helps a Stranger. JUNIOR TOPIC—When People Trust Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Mother's Love and Faith. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Faith Tested and Triumphant.

I. The Unbelief of Jesus' Own Countrymen. (13:54-58). Jesus shared the common fate of men, unacknowledged in his own country. Even his own brothers did not believe in him until after his resurrection (John 7:3-8; cf. Acts 1:14). Because of this unbelief only a limited work could be done there.

II. Jesus Responding to the Faith of the Multitude (Matt. 14:15, 14). He retired to the desert (v. 13). The news of the cruel death of John the Baptist brought grief to the heart of Jesus and he withdrew to a place of quietness to commune with the heavenly Father. Jesus accepted John's death as typical of his own.

2. Followed by the people (v. 13). The people were so greatly interested in him that they followed him on foot out of the cities.

3. Jesus healing the sick (v. 14). Although the rulers had broken with him, he did not abandon his work. Though desperate and hopeless cases were brought to him, none was found too hard for him.

III. Jesus Responding to the Faith of a Woman of Canaan (Matt. 15:21-31). 1. The mother's awful distress (v. 21, 22). Her daughter was grievously vexed with a devil. This daughter was the one who was afflicted, but it was the mother who carried the burden. No doubt this Gentile woman had heard of the fame of Jesus. His power to heal had come to her notice and doubtless many times she longed for him to come her way that her daughter might be healed. Now that he was in her neighborhood she came straightway to him.

2. The mother's fervent appeal for help (vv. 23-25). She humbly fell at his feet and pleaded for mercy. She besought him to cast the demon out. Her appeal may be considered as a model prayer. a. It was sincere and earnest. From the depths of her heart she cried to the Lord for help. b. It was brief and definite. In a few well chosen words she besought the Lord in behalf of her daughter. c. It was personal and humble. The Lord is pleased when we beseech him in behalf of personal friends as well as ourselves. She came humbly, for according to Mark's account she fell at his feet (Mark 7:25). d. It was believing and persistent. Though she was outside of the covenant people, she believed the Lord would hear a cry of need. All who accept Christ are his covenant people. She persistently begged help of the Lord. She would not accept a refusal. The Lord is pleased with the soul who will not let him go until the blessing is granted (Luke 11:5-10, 13-13).

3. The woman's faith rewarded (vv. 26-28). a. Jesus' apparent refusal (v. 26). He answered her not a word. This seems strange that to her distressing cry he was irresponsible. Scarcely ever did anyone have to ask the second time. Frequently he did not wait to be asked. The reason for his silence was that a real difficulty lay in the way. He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. This woman was a stranger to the covenant people. Her appeal was on the wrong basis. She addressed him as the son of David, which only a child of the kingdom, an Israelite, had a right to do. b. The woman's quick response (vv. 27-27). As soon as she perceived the difficulty she worshipped him as Lord and cried for help. While only the Israelite could approach him as the son of David, all can come to him and own him as Lord. She willingly took her place as a Gentile "dog," recognizing that salvation is of the Jews. The word for dog is a diminutive term used for the pet or household dog which had a right to the crumbs which fell from the table. c. The glorious issue of her faith (v. 28). She received more than she asked. Her daughter was healed at once while the instructions she received were worth much to her. She goes down in history with the Savior's commendation of her faith.

When Age Comes Now they that are younger than I have me in derision, whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock. And now I am their son, yea, I am their byword.—Job 30:1, 9.

Liberty What is your benefit? Christ can turn that bondage into liberty and more. What can be more than liberty? To have the power to liberate others.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture has laid down another barrage of accusations against a group of the large meat packing concerns, but the fight thus started promises to transcend the charge of crookedness on the part of ten corporations cited. From the undercurrent of information around Washington, one can readily believe that questions of policy may become the focal point of the current controversy. While the packers may fold up their tents, admit some of the charges and not fight back any further, the situation is fraught with possibilities of politics that lead directly to an attack on Roosevelt administration New Deal policies. Fundamentally, these questions involve determination of how far the people want their national government to manage business affairs.

It is unfair, of course, to hold that the ten big packers are guilty of combined effort at manipulation of prices or machinations to drive out competition in certain sections of the country, solely because some officials of the Department of Agriculture made the charges. It is likewise unfair to hold the packers have clean records because the charges were made by some of the officials of the department that was described by members of congress as being "full of Communists." It is a fact that the packers have been dragged into court before on similar charges, and it is also admitted that there are some officials in the Department of Agriculture who are so radical as to be desirous of seeing private business destroyed.

With these facts in mind, it is well to recall also that in the last several months there has been smoldering sentiment that the federal government is going too far in directing the affairs of private individuals. A good many observers here believe that the charges now renewed against the meat packers, after fifteen years of comparative quietude in this direction, will precipitate a political fight over the main question of how far the government ought to go. That is to say, some think the packer controversy will bring the larger question to a head.

There was a plain disposition on the part of most persons to withhold criticism of the Department of Agriculture all through the early months of President Roosevelt's administration. Whether one agreed with the New Deal program or was definitely opposed to it, the disposition was to avoid attacks on the Department of Agriculture because of the sad plight of the industry it was supposed to help. But differences have arisen among the farm leaders and among the members of congress from agricultural districts as to the way things have been run at the Department of Agriculture, and these differences are not concealed any longer. Consequently, it appears just possible that Secretary Wallace and the professors on whom he has leaned so heavily may soon find a swirling storm around their heads, which, once started, surely will go beyond just that phase of the President's New Deal program.

For instance, there is a bill pending that proposes to make the federal government supervisor Far-Reaching of the security exchanges, the stock markets. It is far reaching; of that, there can be no doubt. But differences of opinion are sharp, and, generally speaking, they may be traced back to one's basic belief as to the extent the federal government should go in managing your business and mine. It is held by all observers to be a perfectly normal and natural line of cleavage.

This legislation would attempt to control the sales of all shares of stock and bonds whether on the floors of the trading exchanges or across the counters of brokers. The operations would be directed from Washington through the Federal Trade commission. Its scope and the fact that administration of this phase of business, like so many others, would be centered in Washington causes concern among that school of thought which clings to the idea of a policy permitting individuals to conduct their own business without having to bow and scrape before a bureaucrat in Washington. The activities of some of the NRA leaders in dictating business policies and practices is well known, but those opposed to them are none the less opposed because they made less noise in the last few months. They will join in any movement that promises to overturn the program of business dictatorship that has been set up. The same is true respecting the attitude of business men and women on numerous other phases of the New Deal. It is an opposition that thus far has not been allowed to blow off steam.

Thus, in many quarters of Washington and from many business leaders who have to come to Washington these days to iron out even small details with the numerous administrators, commissions, big dictators and small dictators, and other governmental agencies, I hear the expression that the battle with the meat packers may result in an alignment of those forces who find the New Deal to have dealt them a hand with a ten-spot as the high card. In reporting that circumstance, however, it seems to me one should call attention to the possibility that the Department of Agriculture may have "the goods" on the meat packers. If that be the case, it is obvious that opponents of the New Deal will have to look elsewhere for a peg on which to hang their hats.

Further, it is apparent here that if the President succeeds in his plan to get congress out of town before it reaches the stage where it has idle hands, the chances of a frontal attack on his program seem materially less.

When the legislation for control of the security exchanges passes, as, of course, it will pass since it is an administration proposal, the Federal Trade commission will be placed in the position of virtual supervisor of all transactions in the issue and sale of securities, whether they be stocks, or bonds, notes or any other form of corporate indebtedness. The circumstance has directed considerable attention lately to the relationship between that federal agency and business interests, as well as the treatment business may expect from the commission as now made up. Accordingly, I have done some digging around to find out what the feeling is.

Through the period in which I have watched Washington, the commission distinctly has had its ups and downs. I believe that, in most instances, business has looked upon the commission with more or less favor respectively as it has pursued an economic policy of reasonableness or radicalism. In other words, as the commission has tried to work out satisfactory policies by negotiation with business, it has retained the confidence of business. Conversely, when radicals have been predominant in the commission and it has sought to "crack down," as General Johnson says in NRA affairs, business has not failed to throw bombshells at the commission wherever the opportunity presented.

Passage of the law that required registration of all security issues with the commission before they were offered for sale—the so-called truth in securities act—was expected by many to place in the commission's hands a weapon which it would use in carrying out many radical ideas. There was doubt, and still is doubt, as to the efficacy of such legislation. There were claims, and still are claims, that passage of the law cuts down the availability of funds for corporate financing and, consequently, restricts business development. The information available to me seems to indicate there is some truth in those claims, but there is also some truth in the assertion that restrictions were necessary in order to protect investors from unscrupulous individuals who issue and sell fake stocks and bonds. Thus far, however, the commission seems to have given a rather satisfactory administration of the securities law.

Each group probably will be found to be partially wrong after the commission starts on its new job. I hear comment, however, to the effect that the commission must watch its step in selection of personnel in connection with stock exchange supervision. That job will be highly technical, and the danger that has been pointed out is that untrained theorists may be appointed to do much of the work. It is hardly necessary to say that most theorists enjoy trying out their ideas at other people's expense, and surely administration of the country's trading markets is no place to "try it on the dog." The stake is too high.

Through some eight or ten years past, the commission has followed a course of citing a business for alleged violation of fair practice rules and offering no statement except the charges. The result was a stigma on the particular business. Oftentimes, complaints were made by competitors just to gain the advantage of that stigma. Last month, however, that policy was changed and hereafter, the commission will issue their citations and will tell why the action was taken, thus affording full publicity for anyone to examine the case. It is an action that probably will reduce the number of miscellaneous complaints, because competitors won't attempt so freely to gain an advantage by smearing the reputation of another business when their own part in it is disclosed.

My conviction is that adoption of a rule of that kind may have the effect of fending off some of the fire that the commission naturally must expect from the school of thought opposed to the principles upon which the agency was founded. And, it is well from the commission's standpoint for it to watch out! Its present state of recrudescence, after a period when its appropriations were cut to the bone and its life threatened, may not go on as now if it leans too far to the radical side. Business interests are not radical and they are not going to co-operate with any agency, governmental or private, that is radical.

Links That Bind Friend to Friend

"I respectfully suggest that the one subject in the world about which the greatest amount of bunk has been spoken and written is the subject of friendship.

"I have come to the conclusion that there is no such thing as what we have been brought up to believe in as 'real' friendship—that is, a deep affection, feeling which carries with it understanding and sympathy and faith, the loyalty which sticks by one, even at some sacrifice, through thick and thin.

"Instead of that, I find friendship to be a matter of self-interest, convenience and social satisfaction. People are your friends either because they have something to gain by it or because you are amusing or interesting they like your company. But how far does that go?

"The depression has shown people who cannot afford to entertain according to the standards of their circle the depth of many friendships. I know a woman who had to move to an uninteresting suburb, without a country club, who found her best friends equal to just one trip to her new home. And, accordingly, invitations extended to her were no more insistent than they had to be.

"There may be things about your relatives that you don't like, but there is usually a bond that counts in time of trouble, a bond of feeling rather than social etiquette. And I'm glad I found out before I'm any older just how much there is to friendship!"

This pessimistic epistle was addressed to a woman's page editor of high reputation, and here is her answer:

"Familiar words, all of them. Usually they are not very final. Let us hope that this reader, too, will recover from the shock of disillusionment in some friend to take a more philosophic view of friendship.

"There is just one opening she gives us. That is the mention of relatives with whom there is a bond that counts in time of trouble. Admittedly, our relatives are not perfect. And yet we do not 'drop' them for a fault. We accept their faults, we take them as they are, presumably because of that feeling of permanence in the bond of kinship. And we expect our relatives to be no less tolerant with us.

"Would not friendship be a bigger and finer thing with the same assumption of permanence, with the same acceptance of the ever-present human faults? Once we have felt a sufficient bond with some one to give our friendship, should we not give it without demanding perfection, without reservation and without resenting as 'disillusionment' any deviation from the ideal?

"I am impelled to the suggestion that if our reader can take that view of the relationship with her friends she will revise her present conclusion about 'how much there is to friendship.' For so much depends upon our own point of view, so much in friendship is reciprocal. Here, particularly, are philosophy, tolerance, understanding important. Are these qualities not a test of our friendship for those of whom we expect understanding?

"Henry Ward Beecher said: 'Every man should keep a fair-sized cemetery in which to bury the faults of his friends.'"

He also said that the dances being given at the Wingfield Hall with the Rhythm Kings, under the leadership of Jack Walker of Fort Stanton were gaining in favor. They had a big attendance last Saturday night. Everybody had a good time in dancing to the music as only Jack's "Rhythm Kings" can play it. Want jazz? Hear the "Rhythm Kings!" They play it H-O-T or Sweet as you prefer—and how!

Frank Chavarria Killed

Last Saturday morning just before the noon hour, Frank Chavarria and another man whose name we failed to get, were uprooting a big pine tree at the Jicarilla mining camp, and just as they had almost completed their task, a gust of wind came along and the giant of the forest began to fall. In his excitement, Chavarria ran to the wrong direction and according to the other man, he became tangled in some barbed wire and fell to the ground, and before he could regain his feet, the big monster came upon him and crushed out his life. Frank had many friends in this community who mourn his untimely passing. The remains were interred in the White Oaks cemetery.
