Kelvinator's Attractive Terms

Strong evidence of improved business conditions in the United States was contained in a report received here today by the New Mexico Mechanical Equip't Co., local Kelvinator sales representatives.

"Not only does this company charge an exceptionally low rate for carrying time payment contracts and offer attractive terms, but handles its collections in such a way that customers are unanimous in their approval of its methods."

Democrats Repudiated the Sales Tax

The Grant County Democrats repudiated the sales tax for this reason: In Grant county, the tax rate on property tax is $4.43 per thousand under the 20-mill limitation.

This conclusively shows that the small taxpayer is worse off under the sales tax, while the big corporations which fixed the sales tax, passes their share of the burden on to the consumer.

The "nigger in the woodpile" is, where the state administration shows the small taxpayer where his property tax is lessened, but it turns the tables on him and makes him pay out twice and sometimes three times as much in sales tax.

Walter Burnett has leased the Garrard Hotel and opened the same last Sunday.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who admits being a robber, and tells Wall he is working for an Englishman, Herrick, who has located a big ranch in the mountains. Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. Wall saves Hank's life by bluffing a gambler out of shooting. With Hays and two other rustlers, Wappy Jack and Lincoln, Jim Wall goes to Herrick's ranch. Herrick announces that his sister, Helen, is coming to the ranch. Hays unfolds his plan for getting possession of Herrick's 15,000 head of live stock. He and his lieutenant ride away to drive off the first bunch of cattle. Haysman, Hays' rival among the cattle rustlers, tells Wall that Hays was once his (Haysman's) partner and double-crossed him. Herrick delegates Jim to go to Grand Junction to meet Miss Herrick. Jim gets Barnes, a young cowboy, to tell her that he (Jim) is a desperado of the worst type. Barnes does so, but the girl treats the information lightly.

"Are we ready to go?" she asked, gayly. "Yes, if you have seen the Fargo people," replied Jim. "I have it in my satchel," she returned, indicating the half-hidden receptacle under her linen coat. Jim tried to interest himself in that satchel, because he was in league with robbers, but it did not work. Suddenly he had a murderous desire to kill Hays. This girl—for she appeared a girl in vivid freshness of youth—seemed not in the least frightened, absolutely free from revelation. Indeed she was regarding him with undisguised interest and delight. "Mr. Jim Wall, you're not in the least what my brother's letters have led me to believe," she said. "Letters!—Why Herrick has not had time to write about me," exclaimed Jim, incredulously. "It takes long for a stage letter to go. . . . I've been at Star ranch only a few days." "Oh, he did not write about you, individually," she laughed. "But from his letters about bandits and desperados I had evolved a rather frightful conception." "Thank you, Miss Herrick," he replied gravely. "Don't trust appearances on our western border. . . . Will you get up? We must be going." And he attempted to assist her inside the back seat of the buckboard. "If you are going to drive I want to sit in front," she said, frankly. With a how he helped her up the high step, curving inwardly at Hank Hays and Herrick and the inscrutable fate that had brought this about. For some way or other he was lost. He almost forgot to wait for Barnes, who was saying good-by to a red-checked, wide-eyed girl in the crowd. Barnes came running to leap into the buckboard and then Jim got in. Owing to the way he had packed the baggage there was not a great deal of room in the front seat. His heavy gun and sheath bumped against Miss Herrick. "Rather tight quarters, with that gun there," he remarked, and swung the sheath round in his lap. "Do you sleep in it?" she asked, quizzically. "Yes, and never am dressed in the daytime till it's buckled on." "What startling folks, you western Americans!" "Some of us are indeed startling. I hope you won't find us unpleasantly so," he replied, and loosening the reins let the spirited team go. In a few moments the noise, dust, heat and the starting populace of Grand Junction had been left far behind and the red and black ranges lifted above the meadows and sage. "Oh, glorious!" she cried, and gazed rapidly ahead as the curving road brought late into view a wonderful sweep of Utah. Jim was hard put to it to keep the blacks from breaking out of a brisk trot. He thought grimly that he would have liked to let the team run off and kill them both. Far better that than what might be! Miss Herrick's photograph on her brother's desk fell instantly short of doing her justice. It failed to give any hint of her color, of the vivid lips, of the glory and gleam of her hair, of the dancing, laughing violet eyes, of her peaking vitality. Jim Wall felt the abundant life of this girl. It flowed out of her. It got into his veins. It heated his blood. "The wind makes me cry," she said, merrily. "Or maybe it's because I'm so happy. You say we'll get to Star ranch before dark?" "Surely." "Oh, it's been such a long, slow, dusty, cramped journey," she exclaimed. "But now I want to see, to smell, to feel, to savor." "Miss Herrick, this is his country. But name compared to that all about the Haysman. You will see them when we top the next hill. I've seen most of the West. And the canyon desert below Star ranch is the wildest and most sublime of all the West, probably of the whole world. "Indeed, you speak strongly, not to say surprisingly. It never occurred to me that a gunman—that is what you are, is it not?—could have any appreciation of the wonder and beauty of nature." "A common mistake, Miss Herrick," rejoined Jim. "Nature develops the men who spend their lonely, hard, bloody lives with her. Mostly she makes them into beasts, with self-preservation the only instinct, but it is conceivable that one now and then might develop the opposite way." "You interest me," she replied, simply. "Tell me of this canyon desert and such men." Jim talked for a full hour, inspired by her unflagging interest. He described the magnificent reaches and escarpments ending in Wild Horse mesa, and the unknown canyoned abyss between it and Navajo mountains, and lastly, the weird, ghastly brakes of the Dirty Devil. "Ugh, how you make me shiver!" she ejaculated. "But it's wonderful. I'm sick of people, of fog, rain, dirt; cold, noise. I'd like to get lost down in those red canyons!"

CHAPTER V

They came to a long, level valley, where the white road was like a floor, and the horses went like the wind. What was going to be the effect of this extraordinary woman upon the fierce men of this lonely region? Upon that swarthy Hank Hays? At last the horses had to be held in at the base of the longest ascent on the journey. Miss Herrick tucked her disheveled hair with the ends of the veil underneath the edges of her bonnet. "What a run! I'm used to horses—but not tearing along—with a vehicle like this," she said, breathlessly. "Wait till one of these old drivers gets a chance at you. I'm really no teamster." "Are you a cowboy?" "Didn't young Barnes tell you who and what I am?" queried Jim, turning to her. "I grasped that you were a stranger to Utah—that you were from Wyoming, where you had killed many bad men, and that your mere reputation was enough to get here to keep rustlers and desperados away from Star ranch. Mr. Wall, you certainly are a hero in his eyes." It did not take great perspicuity to grasp that Jim was not far from that in her eyes. He groaned in spirit. "I see that you will not tell me about yourself," she went on. "Pardon my inquisitiveness. But I must inform you that I expect to go into the ranching business with my brother. You will be working for me, then, as well." "I hope you don't, Miss Herrick," he burst out, impulsively. "Somebody must tell you, it oughtn't come from a—rider like me. But this is no place for such a girl as you." "What do you mean, Mr. Wall? That hardly seems a compliment to me. I can work, and I want to." "Miss Herrick, you didn't get my meaning," replied Jim, hastily, with strong feeling. "It is not you who couldn't sit in. You've convinced me you could. And that is the biggest compliment I could pay you. . . . I meant that you will not be able to live, and work too, the way you want to. You dare not ride around—or even leave the house. Even that—" "For mercy's sake, why not?" she demanded, in astonishment. "Because, young woman, you are too new, too strange, too lovely to risk yourself in sight of those men at the ranch. . . . Not all of them. But some of them." "You cannot be serious." "I swear it, Miss Herrick." "But what of the vaunted chivalry of westerners? I've read of Fremont, Kit Carson, Creek, and many others. And of the thousands who are unnamed." "That is true," he replied, his voice husky. "Thank God, I can say so. But you won't find that at Star ranch." "You say I am too new, strange, too—too lovely to risk—I understand you, of course. I must doubt it, despite your evident strong feeling. You may be playing a western joke on me." "I wish I was." "My brother will know, if there is anything in what you say."

"No! No!" burst out Jim. "Herrick doesn't know. He never will know. He can't see through a millstone with a hole in it. Oh, don't misunderstand me. Herrick is a fine chap, but this is no place for an English gentleman and sportsman, any more than it is a fit place for his sister." "That is for us to decide," she returned, coldly. "I shall ride, anywhere and everywhere. I've always ridden. I'd go mad not to get on a horse in this glorious country." "I've done my best. I've told you," he said, curtly, as if he were also addressing his conscience. "I thank you, Mr. Wall," she said, quick to catch the change in him. "No doubt, you western folks regard Bernie as eccentric. And I'm bound to admit his ranching idea—ripping as it is to us—must appear new and strange to you. So I'll compromise. If it's really dangerous for me to ride about alone, I will take you with me. Not, however, that I'd be afraid to go alone. Then I would be perfectly safe, would I not?" Wall flicked the reins. "Look, Miss Herrick. We're on top at last. There's your country. The black snow-capped mountains are the Henrys. We go through that gap—a pass—to Star ranch. That purple space to the left—with the lines and streaks—that's the desert." "Ah-h-h!" she had cried out, breathlessly. Jim halted the horses and gazed, himself trying to see with this stranger's eyes. He had more—a feeling that it would not be long until the open wasteland claimed him again. For him the bursting of one of the Henry peaks into volcanic eruption would be no more startling than what would accrue from the advent of this white-faced, golden-haired woman. Jim drove down the hill, and again put the blacks to a keen gait on a level road, this time a straight, white line across a longer valley. Jim calculated that he would beat the time he had declared, and reach Star ranch before sundown. When he drove past Heeseeman's camp all that worthy's outfit were at supper. The road passed within fifty feet of their chuck wagon. "What a ruffianly crew!" murmured Miss Herrick. "Who, pray, are these men?" "Part of the outfit your brother hired to protect his cattle from rustlers," replied Jim. "Funny thing about that is they are rustlers themselves." "Deliciously funny, though hardly so for Bernie. Does he know it?" "Not to my knowledge. Heeseeman—the leader of that gang—came on his own recommendation and got the job." "I'll have the fun of telling Bernie. . . . Oh, what's that. . . . What an enormous barn! All yellow. And a new one going up. Logs and logs. . . . Look at the horses! I want to stop." "No, Miss Herrick," he replied grimly. "I'll drive you home safely or die in the attempt. . . . Don't look at this tall man we're coming to." "Which?" she asked, laughing. "The one standing farthest out," replied Jim. "He's got on a black sombrero. . . . Don't look at him. That's Hank Hays. . . . Miss Herrick, drop your veil." She obeyed, unobtrusively, though her silvery laugh pealed out. "You are teasing, of course. But I must reward your effort to entertain me." Jim drove by Hays, who stood apart from a group of cowboys. If he noticed Jim at all, it was totally oblivious to Jim. But Wall's glance, never so strained, pierced the shadow under Hays' dark sombrero rim to the strange eyes below. They were not pale now. Jim's hand clenched tight on the reins. He became preoccupied with the nucleus of the first deadly thought toward Hays. "Hank Hays. Who is he?" Miss Herrick was saying. "Another of your brother's vigilantes." "Ugh! How he stared! But it wasn't that which struck me most. In India I've seen cobras rise and poised, ready to strike. And your Mr. Hays looked for all the world like a giant cobra with a black sombrero on its head. Wasn't that silly of me?" "Not silly. An instinct. Self-preservation," returned Jim, sternly. She passed that by, but only perhaps because she caught sight of the ranch-house up the slope. Here her enthusiasm was unbounded. Herrick stood on the porch steps with his dogs. He wore high boots and a red coat. He waved. Presently Jim reined in the sweating horses before the steps. He was most curious to see the meeting between brother and sister. "Bernie, old top, here I am," she said, gayly. "Yes, here you are, Helen," he replied, and stepped out to help her alight. "Did you have a nice trip?" "Ripping—from Grand Junction on." They did not embrace or even shake hands. Jim, coming to himself, leaped out and began removing the bags. Barnes, whom he had totally forgotten, jumped out on the other side. "Barnes, carry the bags in. Jim, hurry the blacks down. They're hot. You must have pushed them." "Yes, sir. Stage was late, but we made up for it." "Helen's where's that Walle-Fargo package?" queried Herrick. "Here in my satchel. Oh, Bernie, it's good to get home—if this can be home." "Come in and take off that veil," he said, and with his arm in hers led her up on the porch. TO BE CONTINUED.

Built First Irrigation Canals. Extensive systems of irrigation now abandoned, were built in Arizona by ancient Indians.

Southwestern Briefs

The Arizona state tax commission announced recently that the Six Companies, builders of Boulder dam, will pay an Arizona income tax of somewhere between $10,000 and $50,000. Cash Austin of Farmington was elected the first department commander of the newly organized department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the conclusion of a recent two-day encampment in Albuquerque. First of a series of irrigation projects which will make use of all available waters from the San Juan river is under way on northern Navajo reservation to provide water for 5,100 acres and support for 1275 Indians. P. H. Ross, director of the University of Arizona agricultural extension service, said he had received word from the agricultural adjustment administration that Arizona wheat growers will be asked to reduce their acreage only 10 per cent for next year. Colorado stockmen driving their sheep and cows into New Mexico are destroying what range, grass and foliage the New Mexico livestock interests are dependent upon, according to J. D. Lamb, state corporation commissioner, in a recent letter to Gov. A. W. Hockenhull. Contract for construction of the Parker dam across the Colorado river near Parker, Ariz., has been signed by the United States reclamation bureau in Denver and Six Companies, Inc., which is building the Hoover dam and which was low bidder on the Parker project. Navajo county, Arizona, was given first rank by the department of education in spelling contests held last April. Out of approximately 20,000 grammar school students who took spelling examinations, 33 per cent of the 1,189 Navajo students involved received grades of 100 per cent. Capt. L. C. Way of Tucson, Ariz., supervised the construction of two monuments, erected on the site where Gen. Wesley Merritt, in command of the Fifth United States cavalry, conquered 800 Cheyenne Indians on July 17, 1876. The monuments, at Montrose, Neb., were dedicated recently. Dr. C. M. Harrison, national research fellow, has been assigned to the laboratory of Dr. William G. McGinnies, head of the department of range ecology of the University of Arizona. He has just returned from a trip to England and Wales, where he has been visiting grass experiment stations during the past two months. A $20,000 piñon crop was harvested in Eastern Navajo reservation in New Mexico, Supt. E. F. Stacher announced. A checkup of traders figures for supplies and cash gives Indians was made to determine the piñon purchases. The piñons were harvested from three or four townships in the area near Mariano and Smith lakes. While employees were working in another portion of the building, a few yards away, thieves carted away a safe containing $350 in cash from a service station near downtown Phoenix recently. It was several hours before the safe was missed. Sheriff's deputies said at least two men would be required to carry the safe from the building. Age was no bar to triumph in the beauty contest at the thirteenth annual intertribal Indian ceremonial near Gallup, N. M. Cloni Bittai Nital, 60, from Ganado, was declared winner of the annual Navajo beauty show. She received from the hands of Oliver La Farge, author, the annual cash purse for the best Navajo costume at the ceremonial. Simultaneously with the approval by the federal government of the $1,500,000 public works administration loan to the city of Phoenix, the city commission again put in motion the preliminary work on the projects which was halted Aug. 15 after the commission had received information from Washington that certain technicalities were holding up acceptance of the bonds. A world's record as the youngest squaw dancer has been claimed by Mrs. A. C. Roberts of Gallup, N. M., for their 8-month-old daughter, Abi Roberts. When tom-toms beat, the youngster holds on to her father's hand and keeps time to the rhythm with her feet. She cannot walk alone. Baby Abi, of course, is wearing a squaw skirt and Navajo jewelry which probably constitutes some sort of a record also for having the tiniest squaw dress. John Collier, U. S. Indian commissioner, told 400 southwestern Indian bureau executives meeting in conference at Fort Wingate Navajo vocational school they had a cultural mission to help the Indians preserve the best of their traditions as descendants of the Asiatic race. Mentioning the anthropological backgrounds of the 45,000 Navajos as being Mongolian, the Indian commissioner urged that they have a stable culture and related to "the erosion of the white culture" and its instability. Thirty years ago five Indian children attended a little mission school five miles east of Gallup, N. M. Today Rebeccah Mission carries the same message to 130 Indian youngsters in its school and its forty-bed hospital is always at capacity. The boarding school has as its principal Miss Rebeccah Stob, as teacher and principal. The training is of a rigid character and fully the equal of that in equivalent grades in Gallup schools. There are full-time teachers and three part-time instructors give training in industrial subjects.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The political situation grows warmer. It is seldom in our history where the records disclose so much heat in the campaign fights as has already been developed. It may die down some, but the wisecracks in politics are predicting red hot battles over the issues and mud slinging and muck raking among individuals. There is the speech by Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury, an attempt to show that the New Deal has not been so costly as critics of the administration claim; there is the victory of the Socialist, Upton Sinclair, who captured the Democratic nomination for governor of California, and there is a growing list of social reform proposals among administration advisers which provide meat and drink for the politicians on the opposing team. There is the accomplished fact in this connection of the pension legislation which the railroads claim is going to cost them almost one hundred million dollars a year. One can mention also the row among cabinet and emergency officials over the future course of NRA and the test that is being made in the District of Columbia courts to determine whether a business firm can be made to comply with a code which it has definitely and continuously refused to sign. There is the speakership fight among the Democrats of the house of representatives, and the bitter attacks that are being leveled at the treasury by some of the senators and representatives from agricultural areas on account of administration management of processing taxes. Efforts of the American Liberty league for protection of constitutional rights are being expanded. All the while New Deal planners are engaged in development of new schemes such as a program designed to result in federal ownership of the railroads. To say that the situation is confusing is to use the mildest sort of language. Observers in Washington who have watched political maneuvers for a quarter of a century and more insist that at no time in their recollection have they seen anything similar to present conditions. Take the Upton Sinclair victory itself, as an example. I am told that few times in modern politics has it occurred that a man so long affiliated with another partisan group has bored his way in and seized titular control of a major political party. The observers insist that the result of the California primaries has placed the Roosevelt administration on a decidedly hot spot unless, as it has been charged, President Roosevelt is willing to commit the Democratic party which he heads to the Socialist doctrines publicized for a quarter of a century by Mr. Sinclair. Some political leaders here are whispering that the Sinclair victory will strengthen the hand of the American Liberty league and enable the sponsors—Al Smith, Jonett Shouse, John W. Davis, former Senator Wadsworth and others—to go about the country and obtain recruits for their defense of constitutional rights. Active efforts of this kind, of course, are likely to catalog the league as definitely anti-administration, but league leaders apparently do not entertain such a fear at this time. The processing tax question is another that political observers insist is due to cause trouble for the President. They point out that heretofore such criticisms as have come of the processing taxes have centered on Secretary Wallace and the Agricultural Adjustment administration. Now, however, the attacks are being leveled at the bureau of internal revenue, which is a part of the treasury and, therefore, the fire has swerved from one department to the other. It is to be remembered that both Secretary Morgenthau and Commissioner Helvering of the bureau of internal revenue are personal appointments of the President. Republican campaigners are using this as a vehicle to carry their assault on the President himself. Whatever the political implications may be, it remains a fact that such New Deal supporters as Senator James P. Pope of Idaho have taken Mr. Helvering to task for his administration of the processing taxes. Senator Pope has written to Mr. Helvering with particular respect to the processing tax on hogs, which he charged was being collected from farmers who slaughtered and sold pork produced on their own farms. The Idaho senator forced a bill through congress in the closing days of the last session which he believed would free the farmer of this tax and provide a refund of tax which he claimed was illegally collected. At this writing, Senator Pope reports, the bureau of internal revenue has not even drafted the forms upon which farmers may make application for refund of taxes already paid, and it amounts to approximately two and one-half cents per pound. It takes no stretch of the imagination to figure how much tax has been taken from farmers in this way. There are other complaints about the processing taxes as well. These include a complaint that has become country wide among users of products as well as the producers of products that compete with coconut oil. It will be recalled that there was something of a battle in congress when an import tax was laid on coconut oil. The industry felt it had gained a great victory. Developments since have shown just how wrong individuals can be. Republican wheel-horses claim they now have ammunition in the shape of Mr. Morgenthau's speech on the cost of the New Deal, for which they long have awaited. The treasury secretary spoke over the radio. His purpose obviously was to get as wide distribution as possible, for his conclusions that the New Deal thus far has cost only $505,000,000, despite the fact that the treasury daily statements show an addition of approximately eight billion to the national debt. The secretary was able to show, to his way of thinking, that while the public debt has been increased by the amount stated, nearly all of these funds eventually will come back into the government's money chest. He admitted, however, that there may be losses sustained by some of the emergency agencies and that these losses naturally will affect the total as he had calculated it. I talked with a Democratic senator concerning Mr. Morgenthau's speech and he told me of his intention later to make a similar speech on the subject. He was somewhat disturbed, however, as to how he could explain the receipt by the treasury of $2,800,000,000, which is the amount of profit gained by the government as a result of devaluation of the dollar to the point where it is worth only 53c in gold. He appeared to be afraid that opposing campaigners were going to say that the federal government had no way of obtaining revenue or money of any kind other than by taxation and borrowing. He suggested that the profit of devaluation could hardly be described as money borrowed, nor could it properly be called receipts from taxation. The Republicans are using Mr. Morgenthau's own figures in an argument that the assets of wholly government owned agencies such as the Reconstruction Finance corporation are so far only bookkeeping items. It appears to be irrefutable that no one can foretell what the value of these assets are going to be one, two or three years hence. Therefore, without discussing the merits of the argument on either side, it can be said definitely that the Republicans will be doing a lot of figuring just as Mr. Morgenthau did figuring to reach the conclusions he wanted to reach and disseminate among the voters. In some quarters I hear expressions of commendation for the pronouncements by Mr. Morgenthau. Strangely, these commendations do not relate to the total which he contended the New Deal had cost thus far, but to the fact that the administration was going to remain faithful to its pledge that the deficit would not exceed eight billion dollars in the period covered. Washington has received numerous reactions from business interests regarding this particular phase of the Morgenthau speech, and business seems to regard that much of it as reassuring. As regards the controversy that is raging in the administration itself, observers believe there is every reason to expect an eventual explosion. General Johnson, the NRA administrator, on the one hand, and Miss Perkins, the secretary of labor, and Donald Richberg, secretary of the President's executive council, on the other, are all individuals of the temperamental makeup required as requisite to a real battle. Their differences grow out of the plans as to the future of the NRA, which, the President has said, is to continue as a permanent part of the New Deal structure. Washington has not quite made up its mind concerning the demilitarization laid down by the two factions, but it is apparent even now that Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg contend for expansion of the NRA control beyond the limits to which the bombastic General Johnson is willing to go. Also, it is made to appear that Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg prefer to see NRA under the domination of an individual whose mental slants are in line with their own, which is to say, in the opinion of most observers, that they favor a radical tendency beyond General Johnson's program. The general, having been a business executive, seems to realize that it is better to proceed cautiously in expanding NRA supervision, and is holding out for that course. The differences between these individuals are the first to reach proportions requiring White House intervention. Whether Mr. Roosevelt has satisfied the feelings of each is not completely established, although it seems now that General Johnson will continue to manage NRA and that Miss Perkins will, in effect, be sent back to her Department of Labor to give her attention to that job. Nevertheless, there is a growing belief here that this controversy is not dead but sleeping.

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 31:1-9; 37:36, 37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee.—Isaiah 38:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A King's Prayer and God's Answer.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Directs Nations.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God the Ruler of Nations.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Recognizing God in National Affairs.

I. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz.
1. Prophecy concerning Immanuel (Isa. 7). The occasion of this prophecy was the alliance that was formed between Israel and Assyria. Their threatened invasion of Judah greatly alarmed Ahaz. Isaiah assured him that God's purpose concerning the nation would not fail. As an object lesson, he was instructed to take with him his son, whose name meant "The remnant shall return." He compared the confederate kings to two smoking firebrands which would soon be extinguished. He urged upon Ahaz the exercise of faith in God, offering to confirm his faith by working any miracle desired.

2. A promise of Divine protection (Isa. 31). Ahaz foolishly called for the help of Assyria against Israel and Syria. Isaiah rebuked him for this, showing him that his help was in God.
II. Judah Invaded by the Assyrians (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh meets a deputation from Judah (vv. 1-21). He represented Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. His plan was to minimize Egypt's anticipated assistance. His method to accomplish this was:
a. Intimidation (vv. 4-9). He tried to bully them into submission. He taunted them with their weakness, and told them that Egypt was a broken reed.
b. Misrepresentation (v. 10). He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God, even declaring that the Lord had sent him to destroy Egypt.
c. He endeavored to create a panic among the people (vv. 15-21). Fearing such a panic, the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language.

d. He promised them plenty in another land (vv. 10, 17). He urged them to make an agreement with him, and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty similar to their own land. Knowing that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted, the people were loyal to Hezekiah.
2. The deputation's report to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments in fear and dismay, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

III. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37).
1. He resorted to the house of the Lord (v. 1). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that whoever in time of distress resorted to his house would be heard by him (2 Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. He sent unto Isaiah (vv. 2-7). The natural and logical thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. Isaiah sent back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.
3. Hezekiah's prayer (vv. 14-20). He spread the letter of Sennacherib before the Lord and prayed. His prayer was direct and simple.
a. He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea.
b. He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19).
c. He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord, showing to the surrounding nations that he was the only Lord God.

4. Isaiah's message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).
a. That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).
b. That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hands (vv. 24-25).
c. That judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35). Deliverance would soon come, and that through the energy of the Lord of Hosts.

IV. The Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).
The angel of the Lord went forth and slew in the camp of the Assyrians 187,000 men. Therefore Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem, and after his defeat he went back to Nineveh to live, and there while worshipping in the house of his god, he was assassinated.

Christ in the Evening
We always need Christ with us, but when evening draws on we need his presence in a special way. It is growing dark, and in the shadows we need his protection. Night makes for us a sense of loneliness, and we need his companionship.

Meditation
Only as we spiritualize our meditation, making it a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, will our lives be hid with Christ in God. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Above All Riches of Earth

Writer's Fine Tribute to "Pal" Recalls Shakespeare's Admonition, "Grapple Thy Friend to Thy Soul With Hooks of Steel."

A great writer has said that after the word "mother" the most endearing is that of "friend." A contributor to our columns, of high position in the newspaper world, evidently is of that opinion. Employing the more affectionate word "pal" she says:
"My Pal!
"They are the simple, most primitive words in the Anglo-Saxon lexicon, yet—
"How pregnant they are with meaning! How they play upon the heart-strings! How they stir up the bottommost depths of tender sentiment and emotion, engulfing us in up-welling waves till the heart fills, the throat catches and words fail us."
"Purists will sniff and quizz. Why

"pal? Why not 'friend'? Why not 'companion' and the like?"
"Exactly so."
"For I have many friends, and I have a few companions. But I am favored beyond the wildest dreams of Croesus, fortunate outside the compass of Midas and Monte Cristo, happier than the lark that sings wings its way through stellar ether."
"For I have what is more precious than all the world's gold—a pal!"
"My pal—unfortunately one can have but one pal—is mostly what I am not."
"As for me, I am a cross sort of person, terribly fault-finding, temperously temperamental."
"And my pal is a contrast to me, a roll, if you please, eternally good-natured, forever understanding, smilingly indulgent; so that she becomes a reproach to me, albeit an unintended reproach, time and again. And when I fume, and rage, and toss and stamp—my pal calmly awaits the lull of the cyclone—and says with a laugh—"All right, just as you say!"

"And then my arms fly around and about her! And I cry out what a beast I am! And I promise I will never offend again! And I do not. No! Not until the next time!"
"But I wanted to tell you about my pal, not about myself."
"My pal is unselfish."
"She is like a little flower giving out sweet fragrance in a shady nook."
"She is like the music of tinkling bells, like the music of myth and legend that melted the rock, soothing and restful as a song at twilight."
"She is like the cool, grateful pillow, ever ready to receive the hot, tired head."
"She is always on the verge of a laugh that is never at my expense; always anxious to share my cares and irritations, to smooth away grief and trouble with her genial cheer; to help with my burdens when they press too heavily upon me; to join me in frolic if such be my mood."

"And perhaps this is the wonderful part of her—the God-given part of her—that she is always ready to enter my moods—and to understand—and perhaps that is why my pal is incomparable."
"I have just looked up the origin of 'pal.'"
"My tattered Webster tells me its beginnings are shrouded in obscurity, have become uncertain in the dim passages of the centuries—and in its various ramifications it has taken on the senses of match, equal, love."
"Now I see! Now I know the secret that makes her the most wonderful pal that ever was—it is this: 'My pal is capable of a great love—she 'seeketh not herself, exalteth not herself,' and—"
"Let me ask you—"
"Are you somebody's pal?"

Red Cross Membership Unhurt by Depression

The membership enrollment in the American National Red Cross for the year ending June 30, 1934, was 3,802,384 for the United States and its insular possessions—an increase of 100,518 members over the roll-call for the previous year.
During the five years of the depression the Red Cross membership showed a decrease of only 7.3 per cent for the entire period and during the past year the roll-call showed an increase of 2.72 per cent over the previous year.
Commenting on the figures, Chairman John Barton Payne said: "They not only show that the Red Cross did not suffer a serious loss at any time during the period of stress, but that such small decline in membership as was inevitable is now being erased, and the response to our roll-call is now on the up-grade."
The figures are reassuring in the light of the still decidedly ominous situation in Europe.—Literary Digest.

Buy Firestone SAFEST TIRES IN THE WORLD! PRICES REMARKABLY LOW! Here's PROOF OF SAFETY

TWO BREATH-TAKING ENDURANCE RUNS ON SAME TRACK—A DRAMATIC COMPARISON OF SAFETY! READ BOTH LETTERS BELOW!

THE proof of leadership is performance! Many claim it, but Firestone proves it. Never before have tires withstood such severe, continuous, grinding torture, breaking 77 records for 3,000 consecutive miles at 127.2 miles an hour. Not a Gum-Dipped cord loosened, not a tread separated, not one blowout.

Hour after hour, on through the scorching heat of the day and inky blackness of the night, with temperatures as high as 120 degrees—breaking record after record for speed, strength, safety and blowout protection—all in a stupendous demonstration of safety performance for the car owners of America.

This remarkable achievement was made possible by Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which saturates and coats every fiber within the cords with liquid rubber—counteracting friction and heat and preventing the tire from heating up and blowing out.

Have the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store equip your car with Firestone Tires, Spark Plugs, Battery and Aquapuf Brake Lining. Protect your life and the lives of your family with the safest tires in the world. Buy them this week before prices go higher.

Ab Jenkins praises Firestone tires in toughest endurance run he ever made.

Lake Bohneville, Utah
Aug. 18th, 1934

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Chairman,
Firestone Tire & Rubber Company,
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

Under A.A.A. supervision I have just completed a 3,000 mile endurance run on the hot salt desert at Lake Bohneville, Utah. My car, weighing over 6,000 pounds, traveled the 3,000 miles at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, breaking 77 World, International and American Speed Records—all without tire trouble of any kind. Firestone Tires gave an almost unbelievable performance in this run, particularly when you realize that the temperatures were as high as 120 degrees and that the holes in the course had been filled with crumpled rock that was hard as flint and had knife sharp edges.

This endurance run was the severest test to which I have ever subjected any automobile and especially tires. Last year I made a similar run with a car of less power and less speed using tires of another make whose national advertising featured blowout protection. Yet, I had a blowout and made a number of tire changes.

This year I also used Firestone Spark Plugs and a Firestone Extra Power Battery made with your new All-Rubber Separator. Not a Spark Plug failed and the Battery required no service of any kind.

If every car owner knew what my Firestone Tires went through they would appreciate what Gum-Dipping means in strength and heat protection that make Firestone Tires safe from blowouts.

This is the toughest run I have ever made in my twenty-three years of breaking speed records and after a short stay here I am coming East. Hoping to have the pleasure of seeing you then, and with best regards, I remain

Sincerely yours,
Ab Jenkins

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Chairman,
Firestone Tire & Rubber Company,
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

I have just finished a 2,000 mile test run on the salt beds at Lake Bohneville, Utah, driving a car equipped with a nationally known brand of tires which a large development in tire construction and against testing and performance claims.

With these tires on this run I had eleven tire failures and made two precautionary tire changes. And I was unable to get it under control for a quarter of a mile, leaving a trail of rubber and fabric on the hot salt beds.

After an experience of this kind, I appreciate tires have played a vital part in my success during the fourteen years I have used them on my racing and personal cars. Without them I know that I could never have made the many speed records that I have established.

I understand that you expect to be in California soon and if convenient, I would like to see you.

Very truly yours,
Wilbur Shaw

Shall Liberty of the Ballot Perish Through Fear?

While the above heading is bold, it is only a question which must be put to the American people as a whole. There should be nothing alarming about it—the cold fact in the case stares us in the face and must be met with a combined action, lest our liberty of the ballot is a thing of the past.

In the recent elections in Maine and Oregon, the people were led to believe that enormous sums of money that had been appropriated for public work by the Relief Department would be held up unless the people voted to uphold administration policies and they made it work. In that undertaking, the Democrats scared the voters into doing something which destroyed the liberty of the ballot and established a precedent for serfdom and slavery to the Democratic party.

Following in the wake of that despot policy, comes the charge that Clyde Tingley, mayor of Albuquerque, who, as a candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, is quoted as saying to the young Democrats at Clovis, that only by returning a solid Democratic front at the next election, can the state hope to receive its share of the appropriation from the administration. Here is an attempt to "ape" the states of Maine and Oregon in which through fear of being deprived of public appropriations, the people voted, in most cases, against their will and thus did liberty, died of fear.

It is claimed that the President is very much opposed to this method of procedure, but if such be the case, why does he not interfere in behalf of the people? The president is responsible for every act of his subordinates. From that he cannot escape and from the fact that he is silent on all acts of that nature going on in the states makes him stand convicted of the crime that would rob helpless people of their liberty and through coercion and fear, rob them of their right of freedom. Must freedom bow before the golden calf and die? Are we ready to exchange the liberty of the ballot for a paltry piece-meal of a day's work from our lords and masters? Must the people sell their votes for the crumbs that fall from the tables of bureaucracy, give up their independence of the ballot and die of fear?

Maine and Oregon died from fear—shall New Mexico do the same?

That is one of the methods employed by Hitler in Germany to force the people to do his will. How much is our freedom compared to fear?

Crimean Coast Is Soviet Playground

Former Watering Place of Imperial Russia.

Washington.—The Crimean coast, playground of royalty, has become the most popular vacation land in Soviet Russia. It is the Soviet Riviera. Along the southeast coast high mountains slope steeply to the shores of the Black sea. Rough peaks of the Yalldagh protect these shores from northern winds that sweep over the inland steppes. Sea breezes are warm and gentle, spring follows autumn, and flowers bloom perpetually.

"Many of the Crimean palaces of princes and grand dukes have been turned into sanatoriums and rest houses for Soviet workers," says the National Geographic society. "They are supported by social insurance and public health funds, and are administered by the government.

"Livadia, favorite estate of Tsar Alexander III, has become a vast convalescent home. The magnificent white palace and its adjacent buildings accommodate 1,200 patients at a time. Workers from every part of the Union are sent for rest cures and special care. The shaded park, gardens, and terraces of the estate are on a hillside above Yalta, best known of Crimean resorts.

Hothouse of Moscow.

"Yalta with its broad promenade, wide bathing beach, and gay cafes was the most fashionable watering place of imperial Russia. The sea baths, sun baths, and mud baths that attracted Petrograd nobility now are in even greater demand through the energetic Soviet campaign for public health. High mountains surround the resort on three sides, making it a favorite center for climbing—a Cannes and Chamoni combined.

"Leaving the cypress, magnolia, and mimosa of the coast, one climbs through luxuriant acres of fruit trees and vineyards. For centuries the Crimea has served Moscow as hot-house and wine cellar. Figs, olives, pomegranates, cherries, apples, and pears are shipped to northern markets. Crimean wine is unexcelled. Two of the largest wine cellars are at Massandra, a few miles from Yalta; one stores 375,000 gallons and the other 2,000,000 bottles.

"The higher mountain slopes are forested with pine and birch and fir. Here, 1,000 feet above Yalta, is Dolosny—Soviet tuberculosis sanatorium.

"An excellent motor road connects Yalta with neighboring resorts along the coast. To the east are Artek, where there is a large camp for Young Pioneers (the Boy Scouts of Russia), and Sudak, famous Genoese citadel of the Thirteenth century.

Endless Warfare.

"Still farther east are the ancient cities of Kerch and Theodosia, stern fortresses of Greece and Rome. Since the dawn of history a succession of conquering peoples have occupied the little peninsula no larger than Vermont. Wealth of natural resources, safe harbors, and a strategic position on the great trade route between Europe and the Orient have doomed Crimea to endless warfare.

"Scythian hordes conquered the ancient Chimerians. Greek colonists dotted the shores with their cities, and Mithridates made Kerch the capital of his Bosporan kingdom until Julius Caesar declared it a Roman province. Following destructive raids by Huns and Goths, Venice and Genoa fought for possession of the important harbor cities, and finally came the Tatars to stay.

"Seventy-five years after Russia won the Crimea from Turkey she was forced to defend it against the allied forces of England, France, and Turkey in one of the most futile wars in history—the Crimean war (1853 to 1856). Sevastopol remembers other bloody battles of more recent years. In the revolution of 1905 Sevastopol harbor was the scene of the mutiny of the Black sea fleet, and in the revolution of 1917 it witnessed bitter struggles between the reds and the whites.

Virginia Town to Fine Drunken Buggy Drivers

Falls Church, Va.—From now on it's the water wagon for thirsty buggy drivers in this little town—all because the town council has become a stickler for sobriety and cracked down on drunken charioters of horse-drawn vehicles. Under a new ordinance, driving a buggy while drunk will cost $100 to $1,000, or from one to six months in jail.

SELF RESPECT
By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

Human nature is a strange mixture. It is difficult to understand. Gratitude for favors granted is sometimes appropriately expressed. Many times, however, the granting of assistance creates the opposite effect. Instead of gratitude, the attitude seems to be that the recipient bestowed a favor upon the donor in giving him an opportunity to render help. The popular saying that, the more you get the more you want, has proven true in our study of the attitudes of many who were the recipients of relief during the depression.

A man was asked why he abandoned his vegetable garden. He replied, "Why do the work when the relief board furnishes all I need?" A woman at a certain grocery, having

Healthiest of All

Here are the healthiest boy and girl in the United States, a title which went to them in a contest between city and farm health champions at the World's Fair in Chicago. They are Cilata Millspaugh, seventeen, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, who keeps fit milking 16 cows a day on her father's dairy farm; and Mortimer Foxman, sixteen, of Chicago.

exhausted her boying privileges granted by the relief board, found the purchases too large to conveniently carry home, so she ordered a taxi for that purpose. A boy was given a dollar by one who was prompted to make the gift because of the statement that this was his sister's right to eat supper, and as there was not sufficient for both, he continued to play on the sidewalk. The donor later learned that the mother to whom the lad gave the dollar decided that, as supper was all over, they would use the money in enjoying a movie. The writer handed a young man sufficient to buy a sandwich and a cup of coffee. The coin was thrown back with the remark, "How do you expect me to eat on that?" and later upon parking his car was asked by a passerby for a half dollar to get his lunch. Just set Doubtless every person has encountered similar experiences.

We speak of these happenings in a joking way. They are, however, indicative of a very dangerous undercurrent in the minds of a large number of our unemployed. The breaking down of self respect is a serious mental attitude. Its boasted claim is that this country owes every person a living and they will see that they get it. Such attitudes have been forerunners of revolutions. Unless something more important than food and shelter is given those seeking relief we are in danger of facing a serious national calamity. The breaking down of the morale is the most dangerous menace in an army. Just so with our citizenship.

The Household
By Lydia Le Baron Walker

OLD things can renew their value when put to good use. The articles may have outgrown their first usefulness, but they may have a secondary place to fill successfully. While the second use may be a far cry from the original one, there should be nothing incongruous about it. Sometimes, in a desire to make the most of things, articles are put to amusing and absurd uses. To properly make the most of things there must be nothing inconsistent in the transfer. There are, of course, many things which are not convertible; but, even then, they may have some trifling value sold as junk. It is not these latter, however, that interest us just now, but the convertible things.

There is one fine charity I know of, which is supported entirely by the income from discarded articles. Friends of the work send in all sorts of things, from old shoes to handsome clocks, and beautiful things which they have ceased to care for, yet which they know will bring money to support the activity. They send these things in lieu of money, thereby relieving their homes of what they wish to discard, yet realizing they are good. Perhaps there is some such charitable work in your community. Many insignificant articles go to this little shop called the salvage shop, and it is surprising how they fill the needs of those who buy them.

Hemstitching

In the home there should be a sort of house salvage work going on all the time. Have you a velvet frock which you have worn until you are tired of it, or perhaps it has worn out in places. How about transforming it into sofa cushion covers, if you need them. Or you may need a runner for a living-room table. Use the good length of the velvet for the runner and sew a border of fancy silk, embroidery, brocade, or tapestry, on each end, edging it with metal gimp. Line the runner. You will have a handsome table runner with the small outlay only for the border strips. This will be little, as the amount of material required will be small. Or, you may have

Man Claims $6,000 After Three Years

Fort Worth, Texas.—A $6,000 account in a local bank was unclaimed here for three years—even after the bank began liquidation. But a few days ago H. D. Beacham, forty, a Jackson (Miss.) barber, walked into the bank and claimed the money after he had read in Mississippi of the liquidation program. Beacham opened the account almost ten years ago. He made regular deposits and few withdrawals up until the time he moved to Mississippi three years ago. The bank made numerous unsuccessful attempts to locate him.

something that will be just the thing for the borders. Silk or satin can be used for these runners, if you have either material.

Beautiful bags can be the secondary use for good parts of frocks. The good parts of old linen sheets or dresses make material which is excellent for luncheon sets, napkins, tray cloths, etc. Picture frames make good rims for glass trays. Be sure to have them securely backed with wood to make them strong. Dishes are heavy and a tray must be substantial.

Expedition in Arctic Reunites Lost Brothers

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—Two brothers, separated during the vicissitudes of Soviet Russia's revolution and civil war, have been reunited as a result of the national publicity given the rescue of the Cheluskhin expedition in the Arctic.

Fedor Reshetnikov, a former street walf, was one of the members of the expedition. After being rescued, his name and picture appeared in many soviet newspapers. Ivan Reshetnikov, long separated from his brother, saw one of the pictures. Letters were exchanged and they were reunited after sixteen years.

Quince Jelly.

Quinces have too little acid and too much pectin to make a desirable jelly when the juice alone is used. An equal amount of twice as much tart apple improves the flavor. Equal parts of cranberry, quince and apple juice give a jelly of rich, red color and delicious flavor.

Cut the quinces into small pieces, do not pare, but remove core and seeds, as they prevent the jelly from forming correctly. Add sufficient water to cover and cook until tender. Quinces require long cooking to become tender and to bring out their flavor and deep, rich color. Drain off juice. Use about two-thirds as much sugar as fruit juice. Follow general directions for making jelly. The pulp may be used for making conserve or butter.

"Medics" Called On to Check Toll of Suicide

Very little is known about suicide, in spite of the fact that the impulse of self-destruction claims about 25,000 lives in the United States each year. The customary attitude is to attribute deaths from this cause to the complexity of modern life and assume that nothing can be done about them.

Popular belief in a relationship between economic conditions and the number of suicides is to some extent upheld by the findings of Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician. The drop in the suicide rate for 100 cities from 21.3 per 100,000 persons in 1932 to 10.1 in 1933, he says, reflects improved circumstances "which has a direct bearing on a measurable proportion of the suicides due to the unemployment, business failures, general discouragement, etc."

Many other factors would have to be considered, however, to obtain a full understanding of the problem. In the heyday of prosperity the suicide rate was only slightly lower than it was last year. Excessive rates in 1908, 1914-15, 1931-32 indicate a direct relationship between self-destruction and cataclysmic events that tend to destroy social stability. The prevalence of suicides in post-war Austria and Germany confirms this point. But when it is accepted much that is mysterious remains.

The highest ratios of suicide to population are not found in the large cities, where the strains of modern life are supposed to be most severe. Davenport, Iowa, in the heart of our greatest agricultural area, has a suicide rate nearly ten times that of Troy, N. Y., an industrial center. Washington residents indulge in twice as much self-murder (relatively, of course) as the people of Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia. Carrying the anomaly a step further, Switzerland has a suicide rate of 25 per 100,000 persons, while the Irish Free State maintains a rate of about 3.4.

Perhaps ennui is as much a cause of self-obliteration as is economic failure. On a basis of ratio, suicide may indeed be more prevalent in the palaces of millionaires than in the hovels of the unemployed. It seems to result from a state of mind that may afflict individuals in all strata of society. Heredity and disposition are doubtless important factors. Suicide is often a result of mental disease.

Medical science cannot be expected to bring forth a remedy for a cause of death that is so complicated. But the suicide toll could be greatly reduced by proper psychological analysis and treatment. It offers a formidable challenge that has not yet been fully accepted by the medical profession.—Washington Post.

Kindergarten's Value

"From my experience I have observed that the socializing values of the kindergarten are such as to commend themselves to every right-thinking parent and educator. I believe that it would be a pity if the present tendency towards economy should deprive our younger children of the splendid opportunities afforded them in the kindergarten."—Emil Leffler, President, Battle Creek college, Michigan.

FUTURE 'PLANES TO BE MARVELS OF RAPID FLIGHT

Whirling through the stratosphere at well over a thousand miles an hour in the hermetically sealed cabin of a giant air liner, guided entirely by wireless control stations on earth—can you imagine the possibility? Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, hero of the recent record-smashing flight to Australia, believes this not only possible, but likely. In an astonishing vision of aerial development within the next fifty years he foresees air travel brought to such a pitch that ships and railways will become obsolete, their sole use being as carriers of heavy freight.

"There will be no human pilot, but gyroscopic control," said Sir Charles. "The huge flying liners which will move through the stratosphere at a uniform speed of 1,200 miles an hour, carrying 100 passengers in their luxurious cabins, will be fitted with super-efficiency, super-charged engines and variable pitch propellers. "Risk will be negligible. Each plane will have ten, twelve or fifteen engines. In the event of one cutting off, the officer in charge will simply detach that engine from the propeller while the mechanics repair it en route. Crude oil will probably be used as fuel."

Actually, to accomplish the amazing speed of which Sir Charles speaks we do not require more powerful engines than some already built. The atmospheric density 60,000 feet above the earth is about a quarter of what it is here, so that an engine, which under normal conditions today attains the high speed of 350 miles an hour, would hurtle through the rarefied atmosphere at 1,400 miles an hour.—Montreal Herald.

Illiteracy is high in Madrid, according to official figures. It has been reduced, however, from 15 per cent in 1921, to 11 per cent. There are 117,802 people in Madrid who can neither read nor write. Many of the rest have merely the most elemental education.

Tree Definition Stirs Dispute Among Experts

What is a tree? Don't be too sure of your answer, because even the foresters and botanists are not agreed on it. Everyone may be agreed that a mature elm is a tree, but how about a sumac? Is that a shrub? Some authorities place the dividing line at 10 feet—but does that make a foot-high maple any less a tree?

B. E. Fernow, pioneer American forestry teacher, places the emphasis on seeds and branches. He says: "Trees are woody plants, the seed of which has inherent capacity of producing naturally within their limits one main erect axis, continuing to grow for a number of years more vigorously than the lateral axes, the lower branches dying off entirely." Other authorities state that shrubs have branches clear to the ground and trees do not. Usually trees in the forest lose their lateral branches, except for the crown, but many trees like the blue spruce growing in open spaces will have branches clear to the ground.

The New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse university says: "A tree is a woody plant which at maturity reaches a height of at least 20 feet and normally possesses a single stem with a more or less definite crown." Have you a better definition of a tree?
