

FORT STANTON NEWS

Thomas J. Clark, a resident of Stanton for the past 9 years, died Tuesday morning. "Jake," as he was affectionately called by his friends, was one of the best known and most highly esteemed characters on the post. Interment was in the Fort cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. All of us mourn the passing of a fine person.

Dr. and Mrs. Thos. McKneely left Monday for Washington, D. C., where the doctor will take up his duties in the central office of the U. S. Public Health.

Dr. and Mrs. R.E. Porter, Mrs. R.S. Fagan and Miss C. Rice attended a meeting of the Women's Club at the home of Mrs. Titworth in Capitan. Dr. Porter gave an interesting talk on the work of the U. S. Public Health Service. Music was furnished by the Stanton string ensemble.

A large audience enjoyed the musical program given in the Amusement Hall last Sunday evening. The string ensemble composed of Messrs. Guerin, Regis and Maure played a number of selections. Miss Virginia Fagan entertained with piano and vocal solos. The men's quartet sang old southern ballads and Messrs. Connolly and McCarie sang vocal solos. The latter also acted as master of ceremonies. The accompanists were Mrs. Wright and Miss Dixon. The program was arranged by Fr. O'Hara, who on account of illness, was unable to attend.

Mrs. R. E. Porter was hostess at a bridge dinner last Saturday evening.

Several of the local nimrods have returned from the chase. Some of them laden with deer and others laden with alibis. All of the deer are thin, but the alibis are well nourished.

Congratulations are in order: Last week Miss Daisy Kinyon and Joe Johansen slipped away to Roswell and were quietly married. Mr. and Mrs. Johansen will be at home to friends in Capitan. Best wishes and good luck to the newlyweds in their embarkation on the seas of conjugal felicity.

A Hallowe'en party with all the trimmings and decorations of the season was held Wednesday evening in the Community House. A large number attended and had a most enjoyable evening. Some were in mask while others deemed their own face a sufficient caricature upon what nature intended. Before the party the ladies served cider and doughnuts at the Seamen's Social Club with compliments of the Trowel Club.

Miss Morris left Wednesday night for Savannah, Ga., to which post she has been transferred for duty.

An article in our county contemporary, the Lincoln County News, stated that Fort Stanton was "saved" for Lincoln County by Dennis Chavez and Sen. Hatch, who were brought to the Fort by Mr. Perry Sears at the time the move was expected. Those who know say that Chavez has never visited Fort Stanton and that the other two gentlemen treat us to the pleasure of their presence only just be-

Mrs. Ola C. Jones

The following has been contributed by friends of Mrs. Ola C. Jones, candidate for re-election to the office of Superintendent of the Schools of Lincoln County, at no cost to her and unsolicited by her, as a testimonial of the high regard in which she is held by all the people of the county and that the voters may know more of the work and worth of one of the most outstanding School Supervisors of the state of New Mexico.

In the administration of the affairs of this difficult office she has been unfailingly courteous and kind to all, and has seen to it that the detail work of the office has been promptly taken care of.

Among her many activities are the following:

a—Building up a circulating library stressing needs of Primary Grades, also advocating the use of trained Primary Teachers, the continuation of nursing service. During her two years in office, 8 San Jose scholarships have been awarded Lincoln County.

b—She has served free of charge as secretary of the Red Cross and R. F. C., thus being able to assist children to obtain suitable clothing so that they might remain in school. Through use of a central purchasing agency, great saving has been effected in the purchase of supplies and teachers have been given quality and much variety with which to work.

c—By taking advantage of government work she and her board have been able to carry out a repair program that has greatly improved and beautified school buildings and locations. Through careful cooperation with local directors the census has been raised and the school income of the county has been stepped up approximately $7,000.00. At the beginning of the present fiscal year the maintenance fund of the schools had about $21,000.00 to its credit. Mrs. Jones has been energetic in the organization of Parent-Teachers' Associations that materially assist to promote a better understanding between teachers and parents. As a prominent Spanish-American taxpayer of Carrizozo (not a Democrat and in no way connected with her office) has said: "Mrs. Jones is a good woman; a good school superintendent; a treat everybody alike and she is the kind we want in that office."

We ask your consideration of Ola C. Jones on election day. —Political Advertisement.

Due to the congested condition of the papers on account of publication of election matters, the complete report of the Fair and Track Meet will not be published until next week. In addition the receipts are not yet all in and not all the bills have been paid.—Management.

Adolph Freeman and Miguel Peralta of Capitan were business visitors in town on Tuesday.

fore elections. No politician or office holder from New Mexico has of late years inspected Fort Stanton or taken the trouble to find out anything of the place. We got very little assistance or attention in our campaign for a betterment of local conditions a year ago and none whatsoever from county politicians. If Fort Stanton is an asset to the county, why treat it as a liability?

Turkey Decides to Raze Istanbul Grand Bazaar

Where the East Meets, Buys and Gossips.

Washington.—Turkey, in its steady march toward modernization, is considering plans to raze the Grand Bazaar of Istanbul, according to news dispatches from the former Turkish capital.

"The East without bazaars would be as difficult to imagine as America without filling stations, county fairs, and corner drug stores," says the National Geographic society. "In fact, these things, and others that give America its atmosphere, have sprung up in recent centuries; whereas bazaars are the essence of the East, distilled through long ages. To the city-bred Oriental, these dim, noisy hives of trade are the westerner's factories, department stores, theaters, and daily newspapers, rolled into one.

"Unlike fairs, which are held annually, and markets, of the kind that are held in open spaces, bazaars occupy permanent structures throughout the year. The labyrinth of bazaar streets in any large city of the East covers many acres. In some places, such as Fez, Marrakech, and Kashgar, these streets are protected against the broiling noonday sun by latticed roofs of red or blue. Other bazaar streets, such as those of Cairo, Istanbul, Tehran, and Jerusalem, are roofed over with domes of brick or mud.

Great Rabbit Warren

"Of this latter type is the Grand Bazaar at Istanbul, built by Sultan Bayezid II which covers a square mile of ground. Its exterior resembles a fortress. Its interior, a rabbit warren with 1,200 narrow streets under one arched roof. In more than 4,000 shops Turks sell leather, brass and copper ware, Persian shawls, embroideries, soft oriental rugs, sparkling jewels, heavy perfume, fur, sewing machines and egg beaters.

"The narrow bazaar alleys of Manquat, Arabia, are more like tunnels than streets. Jerusalem's bazaar is a maze of long dark thoroughfares, vaulted with ancient masonry. Tehran's bazaar has more than 25 miles of low dark winding passageways that open occasionally into large caravanserais or courtyards, where camel caravans are unloaded and reloaded from goods stored in surrounding warehouses.

"The streets of some eastern bazaars are so narrow that a camel stalks through them, laden with bundles almost grazing the walls on both sides. The Persians cluttered streets in the bazaars of Suifu, China, were originally built 3 feet wide, but even this width has been reduced as one merchant after another has built his shop farther and farther out into passage ways.

"The mud or cobble streets of most bazaars are far from clean. Although a few have been modernized, the majority still have gutters running down the center. Passing pedestrians, camels and panniered donkeys trample on raw animal hides spread out on the rough paving stones of the street to be tanned, and over fine oriental carpets submitted to the same treatment to give them a prized antique appearance.

"Although many oriental bazaars now have electric lights, most of them close at sundown. The doors of the shops are shut and fastened with wooden bars. Deserted by man and pack animal, the alleys are black and silent.

"Artisans and vendors of one type of goods usually display their merchandise in adjacent shops. These tiny cell-like shops are factories as well as stores, where articles are finished while the customer waits.

"Characteristic of the country are the goods sold in its bazaars. Dillals (auctioneers) in Marrakech auction off pomegranate-red, morocco bookbindings, and saddles. In Cairo, squatting turbaned men and boys sew vari-colored cloth into patchwork decorations for inner walls of tents. Signs lettered in Chinese characters flapping outside of Szechow and Peking bazaars advertise pottery, pet birds in cages, jointed bamboo dragons. Candy and dates are the chief articles of sale in Masqat, Arabia.

"In Persia, women shrouded in black chadars (robes) purchase tiny silver

No Human Sees Fall of Giant Sequoia

Yosemite.—The third large Sequoia to fall in the Mariposa grove, Yosemite National park, since its discovery in 1857, the Stable tree recently crashed to earth, untraced by human eyes. Twenty-nine and a half feet in diameter at its base, 260 feet high and estimated to be 1,500 years old, the tree fell in a dead calm and measured its length on the ground without striking a single obstacle as it fell.

Close at Sundown

"Long famous are the bazaars of Baghdad; and of more recent fame, the bazaars of Beyoglu (Pera), Turkey, where Russian exiles sold the last of their jewels for food.

"Bazaars are important not only as places of commerce but as places for social intercourse. Customer and merchant take recesses from shopping to enjoy tea or coffee on the carpet in front of a shop. Gossip is exchanged among the wayfarers pressing around the water-carrier with his distended goatskin bag.

Modern Trend in Toys Leans to Realism

Advance Information From Santa's Workshop.

Philadelphia.—Streamlined stater, with a spare roller and a tall light that is what Santa Claus is going to bring many good kiddies this Christmas.

Toys, according to a preview the United Press had at Santa's workshop at the North pole, will be more durable.

Toy automobiles will have streamlined effects, "point" over the wheels and really be a miniature model of the real thing.

Little sister's dolls will not be so large, but will have real human hair, firing eyes and smooth, flesh colored skin. Some will eat and drink. Her stove will be electric and there will be a separate switch for the coils in the oven.

Bicycles, scooters, wagons and tricycles, too, are following the trend to streamlines. In addition to all these improvements the new wagons, scooters and other toy vehicles will have pneumatic tires.

The toy makers have done big things for the kindergarten youngsters. Toys this year will have more educational features than ever. Small dumb-bells have just enough weight to give the youngster good muscle building as he swings them.

Several new adult games are being brought out. One of the most popular is expected to be "Monopoly," in which four to fourteen may play. "Sorry," an English game; "Igo," from Japan; and "Hortem" are other games on the market. Backgammon is due for a complete

Singing French Songs Is Called Language Aid

Springfield, Mo.—Singing French songs is an excellent method of learning the language, Lambert Orton, professor of modern languages in Drury college here, believes. He has obtained permission to introduce this innovation to his classes this fall.

Simple French folk songs will be sung by beginning students and advanced students will have some French operas, Professor Orton says.

The plan has been tried out during the last two years and has been found to be an aid in learning correct pronunciation, according to the instructor. Moreover it helps students learn French spelling, and, best of all, it is a lot of fun, the undergraduates say.

Professor Orton recently returned from Paris, where he spent the summer studying linguistics and music in the Sorbonne.

Man Weighs 638 Pounds, Has to Ride by Freight

Buenos Aires.—Argentina claims the world's fattest man. He is Pedro Cardozo, a butcher, weighing 638 pounds.

He arrived here from Rosario after traveling in a baggage car because he could not enter the coaches. He is thirty years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, with a waist line of 7 feet 10 inches, a forearm of 1 foot 10 inches and a thigh of 3 feet 9 inches.

When he was nineteen he weighed only 155 pounds, but he had to quit working at twenty-five because he had reached his present weight and could not stand on his feet more than a few minutes at a time.

Radio Burglar Alarm to Frighten Intruders

London.—A woman has just paid $250 for a radiophone—to play one record only.

When it is played, a dog's bark is heard, followed by a man's cry of "Who's there?"

The purchaser is a widow, living with an elderly maid in a district which has had epidemics of burglaries.

With her new radiophone loudspeakers will be installed in every room, the radiophone will be connected with "invisible light" alarm across each window, and any would-be thief will get the shock of his life if he tries to enter.

Conserve Hay Crop, Warning to Farmer

Do Not Plow Up; Save All to Make Good for Short- age During Season.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

"Don't plow up timothy, alfalfa or any other crop which will produce hay in 1935."

This is the admonition of Dr. A. J. Pieters, of the United States Department of Agriculture, who, for a quarter of a century has kept tab on forage crops of the United States. He says, "Farmers would normally plow up a certain part of their timothy and alfalfa acreage. But in view of present conditions, it would seem wise to leave these fields, even though they do not produce a full crop."

His conclusion, that a shortage of hay is certain next year no matter how fast farm conditions might improve from now on, is substantiated by these facts:

Our greatest production of hay each year is from clover and timothy, an average of about 30,000,000 tons for the last ten years. Most of the 1935 crops would normally be produced from clover and timothy seeded in 1934. But this year's seeding is almost a total loss. Clover and timothy tonnage in 1935 is bound to be light.

Alfalfa comes next in annual production—around 25,000,000 tons. The acreage of this legume in 1935, if changed, will be less than this year. Thousands of acres seeded to alfalfa in the fall of 1933 and the spring of 1934 have failed for want of moisture. Many old alfalfa fields have been killed by the extreme drought. The shortage of this year's crop cannot possibly be made up in 1935.

Seed for the annual hays such as millet, Sudan grass and soy beans, may not be very abundant next year. In any event we are likely to need all the seed we can get. There is no way of immediately increasing the acreage of wild hays, which produce less than 15,000,000 tons annually.

"The present and future shortage of hay can be partially solved," says Doctor Pieters, "by saving every available acre of grasses and legumes for future use, even if such hay will not be needed by the farmer who cuts it or by farmers in that part of the country. There will be a market for the better grades of hay in the drought areas. Hay of poorer quality can be fed profitably at home. Besides the profit, it is the patriotic duty of every farmer to conserve every available pound of feed and forage. Our live stock and dairy industry depend upon it."

Lice on Young Animals Check Normal Growth

Farm animals are sometimes infested with lice which may cause general unthriftiness, especially in young animals. Each species of farm animal has its own kind or kinds of lice which pass their entire life cycle on the animal, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Calves or colts badly infested with lice do not grow normally and may become permanently stunted. For this reason treatment should begin when parasites are first observed.

Animals affected with lice may be dusted with insect powder at any time, although the best method of eradication is by means of dipping or spraying animals, in the fall, in arsenical, coal-tar creosote, or nicotine solutions.

Cow Requires Much Water or Milk Flow Is Reduced

About 50 per cent of milk is water, and if the cow is unable to get an ample supply of water, she is likely to reduce her milk flow. Cows producing large quantities of milk naturally need more water than dry cows or those producing only a small amount of milk.

According to the state college man, studies indicate that the average cow needs about 12 gallons of water a day, but some high producing cows have been found to drink as much as 25 gallons a day, especially during hot weather.

Cows produce more milk when they have water available at all times during the day, either in drinking fountains in the barn or at a stream, well, or some other outside source.

Agricultural Squibs

The washing-away of soil from farm lands has resulted in the destruction of 35,000,000 acres for agricultural purposes.

Three hundred community canneries for the benefit of farmers have been established in Georgia within the last few years.

Dropping fruit into pickling containers, and carelessness in emptying containers cause needless stem punctures and bruises.

Crotalaria has come into wide favor as a soil-improvement crop among farmers of North Carolina.

A short collar chokes a horse when pulling, while, when it is too long, the shoulder points will be bruised.

Two major units of the United States Department of Agriculture, the bureau of entomology and the bureau of plant quarantine, have been merged into one. The new unit will be known as the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine.

He had obtained No. 152 in a trade with Fire Driver Martinelli of the local department, giving a frying pan in return. He collected the insignia in 153 different cities he has visited on a walking trip.

A long record of forest improvements in New Mexico during the last year and a half has been credited to the civilian conservation corps workers in that state by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work. Fechner said the forest fire protection facilities in the National forests of the state were substantially strengthened by the labors of some 4,000 CCC men. Other work done included improvement of forests and parks and completion of erosion and flood control projects. The New Mexico quota of CCC men is now 2,000.

CONSERVATIVE JAPS

Priests of the Omiyama temple in Japan are strongly opposing a government project for a national park in the Yoshino Mountain district, in which the sacred mountain of Sanjogadake stands. For more than a thousand years no woman has been allowed to climb it and if it is included in a state park, that will mean the advent of women, who will walk upon the mountain. More than 500,000 devotees who would consider it a sacrilege for a woman to tread the mountain, are against the project.

THIS CHANGE gives Children a Chance

Perhaps you have tried nearly every sort of way to keep a child's bowels in proper condition, and failed.

Yet, almost any child who has been convalescing in a hospital, will usually come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you risk no more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. You'll have a safer, more satisfactory result, too. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear and the child is soon normal again. Try it!

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

Just the Thing

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it acts in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their normal function, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important. By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

New Cloth Coats of Distinction

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THAT which intrigues most about the new coats is that the styling given them is so refreshingly versatile and unusual, so entirely departing from the rank-and-file. For the tall, the short, the slender and the stout, there is a coat suited to every silhouette. Loose hanging-from-the-shoulder lines are as favored as are the sleek form-fitting effects.

As to sports coats, generally speaking, they are divided into two types, the swaggar sort, many belted across the front with loose flowing back, and the ulster. In regard to the swaggar coat the newer versions are often seven-eighths long, whereas last season the three-quarter length prevailed. As to the new ulsters (mostly of strikingly handsome tweed or herring bone woolens) a distinguishing note is the big director's revers which carry a most convincing style message. It is as smart for your cloth ulster to be unfurled as furred and vice versa. Big fur revers are very good style, as also are the new fur bib effects. Then, too, the separate fur capelet which is such a popular idea looks well with the cloth ulster. The newest separate fur peckplecs can be worn as a scarf or the ends brought around to the back and fastened, thus affording, to all appearance, an elaborate trim to the coat.

Big news in regard to fur-trimmed coats is "the coat with a muff." All the leading coat departments are making a feature of this very practical and attractive idea.

To strike the new note in coats, your fur collar must bend or flare well away from the throat. Which is a very practical comfortable thing for it to do, especially when one happens to be in a warm room. Another outstanding trend is the fur collar which ripples about the neckline. Summing up the situation fur collars are inclined to be rather fanciful and ornate on the new coats.

A leading fashion is the gilet front which is fashioned of fur. You see the idea illustrated in the coat to the left in the picture. It is possible to buy these detachable fur gilets or vests separately. However, in this instance, the fur front is made part of the coat. The model pictured is especially noteworthy in that the astrakhan which forms the gilet and the cuffs is dyed green to match the cloth it trims. Dyed fur is a favorite theme among those who are seeking, as most of us are, for new thrills.

Quilted effects are also creating quite a little excitement, the idea being played up in all sorts of interesting ways. Looking at the coat centered in the group, one visions refreshingly new happenings in the way of cloth treatments. This handsome model is a French import, a Bruyere creation. Here the designer gives us a detachable shoulder cape made of the same gray cloth as the coat. The handsome wool coating has been quilted in a most decorative manner.

In the model to the right of heavy black woolen we see something new for afternoon coats as launched by Schiaparelli. This noted French designer calls this triple-tier arrangement the parachute cape. It flares out very much in the back. The coachman-cape idea similar to this is frequently exploited on the new coat program.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who tells him he is working for an Englishman, Herrick, who has located a big ranch. Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. With Hays and two other rustlers, Jim Wall goes to Herrick's ranch. Hays and his lieutenants ride away to drive off the first bunch of cattle. Heeseman is Hays' rival among the cattle rustlers. Jim is sent to meet Miss Herrick. Hays betrays unusual interest in the girl's coming. The rustlers begin driving cattle from the ranch. Wall finds himself falling in love with Helen, and he fears Hays has designs on the girl. Jim coaches her in riding western style, and finally kisses her. She is angry and dismisses him, but relents and asks him not to leave the ranch. Hays' men return from the drive, having sold the cattle and brought back the money. A quick getaway is imperative. Hays tells his men to go on ahead, that he will join them at a certain canyon. He comes with Helen Herrick—his captive. Hays explains that he stole Helen for ransom. Realizing that Helen will be worse off if she falls into Heeseman's clutches, Jim Wall does nothing. Heeseman's riders are discovered in pursuit. Hays leads the gang into a canyon retreat—The Robbers' Roost. Jim seeks out Smoky Slocum, and secures his promise to aid in case Helen is threatened with harm by Hays.

"Sparrow, you don't look flighty," replied Jim, gravely. "But your talk is. Else you're a reason to think it." "Shore, I have," rejoined Latimer, lowering his voice to a whisper. "Hays beat an' robbed Herrick! . . . That's part I wanted to tell you, if I was goin' to croak. But I gotta tell it anyhow. An' I ask you both, as parids to keep what I tell you secret till I'm dead."

"I swear, Sparrow," said Smoky, huskily.

"You can trust me, too," added Jim. "Wal, thet's why I feel Hank must have done for the girl, too."

"Robbed Herrick!" exclaimed Slocum, incredulously. "Was there a fight?"

"Yes, but Hank might have avoided it. He drove the man crazy. Fellers, Hays'd steal coppers off a dead man's eyes—shore. But what he said he wanted was the girl for ransom. Yet he picked a fight with Herrick an' beat him with a gun."

"Sparrow, how come you didn't tell us before?" asked Smoky, sternly.

"I'm beholden to Hank. But I will say that if I'd knowed his garce I'd never have gone with him. After it was too late—wal, I stuck. An' I'd kept it secret. But I feel in my bones I'm done fer. So I'm squawkin', an' I'm doin' it because Hays double-crossed you all."

"Reckon I'd have done the same, if Hank had a hold on me," conceded Smoky, generously. "Suppose you take a nip o' whisky and tell us what happened."

"I'm hot enough without liquor. But I'll tell you. . . . Gimme some more water."

After a moment Latimer drew a long breath and resumed: "Hank giked me because he had a hold on me. . . . After you fellers led that night Hank went out an' got another horse. He had a saddle hid somewhere. We took them horses up the bench back of the house an' tied them. Then we went down toward the house."

"Abuh, he'd had this deal in mind all the time," said Smoky, nodding his head.

"Yes. Before we got to the house he told me he meant to hold Herrick up fer what money he had on hand—then steal the girl fer ransom. I opened my trap to kick again' the girl part of it, anyway, but he cussed me something fierce. I seen then he was blood set on it, so I let up. . . . Herrick was in the livin' room. We walked round the house, an' Hank showed me the girl's window, which was open. . . . Wal, we went back, an' up on the porch, an' into the livin' room."

"When Herrick looked up Hank threw a gun on him. 'Keep quiet an' shell out your money,' Hank ordered. Thet didn't faze the Englishman. He jumped up, thunderin' mad. Hank bit him over the head, cuttin' a gash. Thet didn't knock Herrick out, but it made him fight till Hank got him good an' hard. Then he opened his desk an' threw out some packages of greenbacks. After that he said to the floor, 'Next Hank ordered me to go out an' round to the girl's window. It was bright moonlight, but I didn't locate the winder quick. An' at thet I was guided to it by the girl's voice. . . . Gimme another drink.'"

Latimer quenched his inordinate thirst again, while Jim and Smoky exchanged thoughtful glances over him.

"Wal, where was I? . . . When I straddled thet winder all I seen the girl sittin' up in bed, white as the sheets about her. Hank had a gun pointed at her head, an' he was sayin' if she yelled, he'd shoot. Then he told me to look around fer money an' jewels. I started that, keepin' an eye on them. The room was as moonlight as outdoors. Hank told her to get up an' dress for ridin'. She refused, an' he yanked her clean out of bed. 'Gurl,' he said, 'yore brother is hawg-tied down in the livin' room, an' if you don't do as I tell you, I'll kill him. . . . I'm taking you away fer ransom, an' when he pays up you can come home. So long's you're quiet we won't hurt you.' . . . At thet she got up an' ran into a closet. I heard her sobbin'. She made her put on ridin' clothes an' pack what else she wanted. Meanwhile I found a heap of gold things an' diamonds, an' a package of money, still with the Wells-Fargo paper on it. These I stuffed in my pockets, an' I shore was a walkin' gold mine."

"How much was there?" asked Smoky, curiously, when Latimer paused to catch his breath.

"I'll come to thet. . . . We went out the winder, an' Hank hustled her into the woods, with me follerin'. Soon we come to the hosses, an' Hank put the gurl up on the gray. He blind-folded her an' told me to see she didn't git away. The gurl talked a blue streak, but she wasn't so scared, except when we heard a shot, then someone runnin' on hard ground. Hank come back pronto, pantin' like a lassoed bull. He said he'd run plump into Progar an' another of Heeseman's outfit."

"Miss Herrick," he says, 'them fellers was bent on robbin' your brother—mebbe killin' him. I shot Progar, but the other got away.' . . . He tied the bundle on his hoss, an' leadin' the gurl's hoss he rode up the mountain. We rode the rest of the night, stoppin' to rest at daylight. Hays I turned the money an' trinkets over to Hank. He counted the money Herrick had turned over—somethin' more'n sixteen thousand—but he never opened the Wells-Fargo package I'd found in the gurl's trunk. . . . Thet's all, fellers. We rode till noon, meetin' you as agreed in the cedars."

"What was in that Wells-Fargo package?" asked Smoky, after a long pause.

"Money. Hundred-dollar bills. I

At once a restless, baffled, harried condition of mind seemed to leave Jim. To face those men, hour after hour, day after day, hiding his thoughts, had engendered irritation. When the split came and the shooting began Jim wanted to be around. He would help it along considerably.

One day, when he was returning to camp, somewhat before sunset, he heard a shot. He listened for others. None came.

The moment he entered the oval, to see Hays striding for the cabin, his hair standing up, and his men grouped outside of the camp shelter, Jim knew that there had been trouble.

"What now, Smoky?"

"Hank did fer Brad."

"How? Why? . . . You don't mean Hays beat Lincoln to a gun?"

"He did, Jim," ejaculated Slocum. "He bored Brad. I was the only feller who seen it. The rest was duckin'."

"What was it about, Smoky?"

"Wal, Brad has been gittin' sorer every day, an' today we cleaned him. Brad opened up on Hank, no doubt meant to call him fer fair, but Brad didn't git goin' good before Hank went fer his eye."

"Smoky, he had his mind made up," declared Jim, tensely.

"Shore. Thet's the queer part of it. Hank was not goin' to let Brad spit out much. . . . An' friend Jim, thet's a hunch fer us."

"Hays can't beat me to a gun," rejoined Jim, with a cold ring in his voice.

"Nor me either. Thet's a safe bet. They reached the camp, Lincoln lay face down over the table, his right arm hanging low, his gun lying near his hand.

"Lend a hand, some of you," ordered Slocum, peremptorily.

They carried Lincoln, face down, across the oval to the lower side of the cottonwood grove, and in half an hour he had been consigned to earth, and his possessions divided among the men who had buried him.

"Grave number two!" speculated Smoky. "Fellers, it runs in my mind thet the Robbers' Roost to these next twenty years will be sprinkled all over with graves."

"How so, when nobody has any idee where it is?"

"Heeseman will find it, an' Morley, an' after them many more," concluded Slocum, propheticly.

"Let's rustle out of the hole," suggested Bridges.

Wrong Impression of "Doctoring" in China

The belief that in China the people do not pay their doctors when they are sick but only while they keep them well, has been shown to be false by writers on China. In a recent article in the New Outlook a writer gives an account of their system of medicine, which he says he has always thought one of the best. Each doctor is a specialist, with a single prescription supposed to cure everything. When a member of a family gets sick, the family calls in as many doctors as they can afford to pay. He adds that this incidentally bursts forever the untruth that Chinese doctors are paid to keep the patient fit. The correspondent says that when several of these doctors are called in, each with their different prescriptions, a necromancer is summoned to choose which of these prescriptions shall be employed. If successful, the doctor and necromancer share the praise; if unsuccessful, the blame is shifted from the doctor to the necromancer and from him to the "will of heaven."

Just Bluff Beauty is but skin deep. So, too, very often, is an air of wisdom.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels while nature is restoring their regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry, but there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently; you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. At all druggists, ready for use, in big bottles.

COLD CREAMULSION

Suffered Very Much with Tetter Healed by Cuticura

"I suffered with tetter on my head which would itch and burn. My scalp became rough and red and I scratched for two weeks. I suffered very much. I could not sleep and could barely lay my head on a soft pillow. My hair came out. I tried several remedies but got no relief. Then I wrote for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought more and after using three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, with the Cuticura Soap, the tetter was gone. I was healed." (Signed) Miss Ada Tatum, R. 2, Box 110, La-Rue, Texas.

GARFIELD TEA

FORMAL NIGHTGOWNS MADE WITH TRAINS

For several months Paris has been cabling news about the new formal nightgowns, but no one seems to have taken them seriously in America until very recently. Now it's gotten to the point where young things announce that their splendid new evening dresses are really nightgowns and were bought as such.

There are some of these, however, which are unmistakably nightgowns and can't possibly be worn to the theater, but are still so formally lovely they will take your breath away. Many of them come with trains and still more with jackets or long coats of their own. Lace is being used on them in profusion.

Knitted Evening Mittens Will Keep Hands Warm

Mittens for evening wear with formal gowns are predicted for this winter, especially if the thermometer drops zero. The mittens are designed to go over fine suede or glass gloves and may be either hand-knitted or of simulated hand-knitted wool. They may be richly colored like Czech peasant gloves or cream or yellow mercerized string. Knitted silk or cotton velvet in bright colors may be used for these mittens.

Double Fox

A new and novel way to wear your double fox is to have it snapped onto your plain coat. Adjust it close around the throat and let the rest snap on the edge of the coat and extend to the hem. It is thus removable and can be worn as a scarf as well.

Aquarium Bracelets

Aquarium bracelets are being worn by fashionable London women. They are made of thick glass with what appear to be tiny fish "swimming" in them.

A JACKET-BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The newest thing in the way of a blouse is a jacket-blouse. Every sort of material fashions the jacket blouse from silver and gold metal cloth to gingham. The jacket-blouse of bright velveteen is especially smart. So also are those fashioned of plaid woolen or taffeta. A new note in a plaid taffeta blouse and beret ensemble is struck in the model pictured. The vogue for metal-shot fabrics is emphasized in the gold and green printed taffeta which fashions this smartly up-to-date blouse and beret two-piece. The wide attached scarf and gannet effect at the wrist are quite new. A parting word—be sure your blouse is of the modish jacket sort, whatever the material which fashions it may be—that point is up to you.

The County Ticket

On page 1 of this paper you will find both the state and county Republican tickets for the consideration of the voters. Both tickets were carefully selected and are in every manner worthy of your support. On the county ticket the candidate for clerk, Ernest Key, has served one term and is again before the people for re election. His record for honesty, integrity and painstaking efficiency is an open book to all. He should be returned.

The candidate for sheriff, John E Brady, has already served two terms and is again up for election. Being so well acquainted with the duties of the office, a word concerning that experience is not necessary. His long service made him a student of the workings of the criminal classes. He solicits your support.

The candidate for county treasurer, Nels Bunnell, is an old resident of the county and his qualifications for the office are unquestioned. He is courteous, obliging and has a vast amount of clerical knowledge. He asks your support.

The candidate for assessor, Henry Lutz, needs no introduction to the people of the county. He came here in the early days, grew up with the people, shared in their misfortunes and rejoiced with them in periods of prosperity and happiness. He has served the county in various capacities and now asks your support for the above named office.

The candidate for county school superintendent, A B Moss, comes before the people for the first time in the political arena. He has taught in the school at Lincoln for the past five years and his educational qualifications have been published in this paper before. Mr. Moss solicits your support.

For county surveyor, A. H. Harvey, who served the county for a number of terms in that office and also as county clerk and justice of the peace, is again the party's nominee for surveyor. He thoroughly understands the duties involved and it goes without saying that he would give the county the same good service in the future that he has in the past.

For county commissioners, Messrs. Roy Shafer, George Simpson and John Mackey, are all business men of the first grade. Having been successful in their own undertakings, is safe evidence, they would be the proper parties to conduct the business affairs of the county. It takes business men to be commissioners and these three gentlemen would fill the bill.

For probate judge, Granville Richardson is the candidate. This is Granville's first appear-

Few Discover Gold

A man living in Corentry, England, has a garden that is part of a new estate and boasts a fine old oak. As his fowls were scratching about near by the dog dug up a hoard of gold and silver. The lucky man found that the coins belonged to the reign of George the Third and that there were 18 pieces of gold and five of silver. The treasure had been buried exactly 100 yards from the foot of the oak tree and in a direct line with the cathedral spire.

nevertheless, he possesses the proper qualifications which would make him well fitted for the office. A vote for Granville Richardson would be well placed.

For Representative, we have Bert Pfingsten. Bert has many redeeming characteristics. He has excellent qualifications and these coupled with his natural good disposition, will make him an ideal representative for Lincoln County in that important office.

FOR THE SLENDER OR LARGE FIGURE

PATTERN 2005

This is such a beautifully fitting slip that the sizes in it have been run up to fifty. But don't think you have to be a large woman to like it. It is lovely on a slender figure. It is simplicity itself to make and the seams follow such pretty lines they actually become a decoration. In your fall wardrobe don't forget to include some new slips. Summer always works havoc in one's lingerie and no self-respecting frock is going to look as it should worn over an old misshapen foundation. Pattern 2005 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50.

Nobility Shrouds New York Valley

Once Home of Refugee Who Feared Napoleon.

Syracuse, N. Y.—More than a century and a quarter ago in a valley in central New York, known till this day as Brander's Hollow, a refugee member of France's nobility, who stood in line as a future king of that country, is said to have sought escape from Napoleon, who was making quick work of his opponents by way of the guillotine.

Here in the forest recesses of hills in a fortress-like mansion known from sturdy cherry trees, this Frenchman founded a settlement which after a brief, colorful existence crumbled back into forest wilds to become one of the forgotten villages of this section of New York, according to the Syracuse Post Standard.

Built imposing chateau. The story had its beginnings in 1508, when a Frenchman who called himself plain Louis Anathe Muller, and who never ventured forth without an armed bodyguard, purchased 2,700 acres of land in this isolated region near Slab City, now Georgetown, and employed 150 men, whom he paid in gold and silver, to construct a palatial, bullet-proof chateau on the summit of the highest hill on his estate.

Beside a stream a mile southeast of his homestead, in the valley of Brander's Hollow, named after John Fanson Brander, one of the men who had accompanied him to this country, the Frenchman who called himself Muller established a village which contained two stores, a mill and a storehouse, as well as numerous dwellings. During the half dozen years that he lived in this forest mansion, Muller's reticence and eccentric conduct greatly stirred the curiosity of his neighbors and gave rise to many a wild rumor as to his identity. But never by an idle word did he betray his real story, and when after hearing of the collapse of Napoleon's fortunes he departed jubilantly for France, he left in his wake a mystery which never has been explained to the full satisfaction of his central New York acquaintances or their descendants.

Homes Destroyed by Fire. The modern visitor to the site of the old Muller house, which was leveled by fire in 1907, must stretch his imagination to believe that this once was the estate of a French nobleman, says the writer. If he drives along the narrow country road that winds across the hills toward Brander's Hollow he will pass densely wooded stretches that look as if they never had known the plowman's ax.

A few bleak, gray farmhouses with decoloration staring through their paneled windows, decrepit barns with doors that creak on rusty hinges and the shapeless frames of occasional abandoned automobiles along the way are the only evidence that man ever conquered or cultivated this isolated territory.

When Muller departed for France after the downfall of Napoleon he left his central New York property in the hands of an agent who proved untrustworthy, and two years later, in 1810, he returned to find his house stripped of its rich furniture, his garden covered with weeds and his village forsaken.

After viewing the wreck, he sold the land to Abijah Weston, a New York city merchant, for the sum of $10,500, and then went back to France, where no doubt he reclaimed a prouder name than plain Louis Anathe Muller, and calmly wiped the American chapter off the slate of his life with never a qualm for the throes of curiosity which were bound to torture posterity when it encountered the mystery of Muller III.

Police to Investigate Purse Snatching Ducks

Fresno, Calif.—Fresno police planned to peer down the gullets and cross-examine members of the famous flocks of ducks at Reeding park, city playground.

The ducks, it became known, were charged with purse snatching. Mrs. A. Van Fleet of New York, who was spending the summer in California, made the charge before Yosemite national park rangers.

Mrs. Van Fleet embarrassedly explained at a park entrance that she could not pay the entrance fee because the ducks snatched her purse, containing $50, as she rested in Reeding park en route to Yosemite.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lane Bode

Economic Security

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Two principles are essential to economic security. The first and perhaps most important is thrift.

Extravagance leads to ruin but thrift assures financial stability. The thrifty man saves something, however small, out of his weekly pay roll. These savings are permitted to accumulate and are never used except from grave necessity and that only as the last resort.

Many homes have been built on weekly and monthly savings. Small fortunes have been built upon the principle; always spend a little less than you earn. It would be an interesting study to determine the profits derived by the use of by-products. In the meat industry the blood of the animals was formerly thrown away, now it is profitably utilized in many ways.

A dentist, known to the writer, sent his office rug to the refiners and received a check for a neat sum for the gold found in the rug. A well managed business sees that there is no waste in its process of manufacturing or salesmanship. Extravagance is always waste.

We are facing a serious menace in the industrial situation by having to provide large sums of money to take care of those on relief rolls. If all the waste in foodstuffs in all the leading hotels in our cities could be gathered together it would be sufficient to feed a very large percentage of this dependent class.

Another essential principle is, to avoid debts. This was the principle

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE word party has a flexible significance. It may be a political group, or a social assembly, or any one of many things, but as a home word it means a company invited to come at a certain time on a specified day with entertainment as the object. There is an interesting question which arises in connection with such an assemblage, although the above is appreciated as explanation.

What do you expect of a party? This is the question. Little children expect games as a minor feature, with food as the major one. The question of the child who was belated in arriving has become classic. "Is the party over?" he asked, and was delighted when he found the refreshments had not been served. Almost every child would agree that the real "party" was the refreshments.

There are adult parties which proclaim that food is the main feature such as a dinner party, luncheon, supper party, tea party, theater supper, etc. And although there is no mention of a meal in an after the theater party it is as well recognized as one for refreshments, as if it were called a theater supper, the latter, however, suggesting more of a meal than the former.

Entertainment Essential. While food is one element expected of a party, it does not in itself provide the gaiety needed. A group of persons eating food, however excellent and elaborately served and prepared for the guests, fails of its function as a party unless the persons are entertained. Brilliant and witty conversation is pleasing diversion in itself, and when accompanied by a "dish of tea" or more elaborate dishes, it provides the required merriment and good cheer. It devolves upon the hostess to invite congenial spirits for such an occasion. Nothing is more depressing than a dinner or supper party without laughter and gaiety. No amount of edible delicacies can make up for such a lack. On the other hand simple food with a happy group has the necessary elements of a party. There is entertainment.

This matter of entertainment is more important than food. Ask any bridge expert whether it is the food or the games of contract which he looks for at a card party. All persons who go to a party, whatever its kind, unless actually hungry or over-food of eating, hope to have a good time apart from the taste of the viands. Laughter, gaiety, companionship, absorbing entertainment, these are wanted, something which takes them out of themselves, which makes them forget their usual engrossing work, their perplexities or possibly physical pain, and which makes life even more worth living. A hostess who can instill any or all of these pleasant elements into her parties has successful ones, whatever the refreshments. Parties need not cost much, since merriment, happiness, gaiety, good cheer are apart from monetary values. This is a period when parties are heartening. Happy events lend cheer to perplexed spirits.

Decorative Doors. Decorative outside doors are the style, the accent naturally being on front doors. This idea of making the doors distinctive sprang into favor first in tea houses, but the popularity has spread until there is almost a craze for dressy doors.

The decoration may consist of bright paint. This may be featured also in blinds, and possibly in trim of the house. The vogue of extending the color scheme to front doors, and then, necessarily, to all of the outside doors pushes the fashion to its furthest limit on the house itself. Occasionally a low fence is painted to match, or a trellis against the house. But it is the doors that are the bizarre feature. Hitherto these have been conservative architectural elements, as far as color was concerned. There is something refreshingly cheerful about having an entrance door gay.

The hardware of a door can lend distinction. There are many types of hinges which make these necessities artistic. Some are reproductions of old-fashioned models, some are decidedly new in construction. It is essential when making selections, to suit the model of hardware to the period of the door.

Voliva Still Insists World Is Flat

upon which our fathers built their modest fortunes. They never bought anything until they had the money to pay for it. A mortgage was a nightmare. Pay as you go and do not borrow if you can possibly avoid it was the prevailing spirit of the past generation.

The present generation presents a distressing picture in contrast. Not only are we urged to spend all we earn but a little more by buying on the installment plan. If we are in debt we are urged to be in no hurry to pay it. Later it may be paid in greatly depreciated dollars. Let taxes ride. The man who owes money seems to be in a better position than the man to whom the money is due.

Measures which violate the fundamental principles of our forefathers cannot be depended upon as stabilizing forces, upon which to build the return of prosperity. Let us return to the spirit of our fathers—Save and avoid debts.

Estimate Texas Rangers

Austin, Texas.—Texas rangers have killed 10,000 men, Dr. W. F. Webb, professor of history at the University of Texas, has concluded after years of research in preparation for a history of the celebrated policing force.

Doctor Webb puts that estimate on 100 years of ranger activities. "Arranged in a row, head to foot," he said, "the dead would make a line 11 miles long."

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:42-52; II Peter 1:5-7. GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Amen.—II Peter 1:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Was a Boy. JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Was a Junior. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Christian Grows. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Progress in Christian Living.

1. Jesus Christ Growing (Luke 2:42-52).

While Christ was indeed divine, his deity did not interfere with his development as a normal human being.

1. Jesus tarrying behind at Jerusalem (vv. 42-43).

At the age of twelve a Jewish child took his place in the temple as a worshiper. He was considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, when Joseph and his mother were returning from attendance at the Passover, he tarried behind to enter the temple and inquire into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. He had an alert and eager mind which inquired after the truth.

2. Jesus found in the temple (vv. 44-50).

When Joseph and Jesus' mother had gone some distance on their return journey they discovered that Jesus was missing, and therefore sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. Not finding him, they turned back to Jerusalem, where they found him in the temple.

a. He was "sitting" (v. 40), was perfectly at home in his Father's house.

b. He was "hearing" the teachers of God's word (v. 47), was eager to learn God's will.

c. He asked questions (v. 40). The growing mind is inquisitive. It more than merely receives that which is taught; it goes out toward, it inquires after.

d. He answered questions (v. 40).

His answers showed great wisdom, such as to astonish those who heard him. It was not an exhibition of his divine wisdom, but an expression of the workings of a perfect human mind nurtured by the Holy Spirit.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 49-50).

She remonstrated with him for his behavior. While he replied with dignity and tenderness, he made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary—that God was his Father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51).

Though he was conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience.

5. Jesus' development (v. 52).

a. Mental—"increased in wisdom." b. Physical—"in stature." c. Spiritual—"in favor with God and man."

II. Growing in Grace (II Pet. 1:5-8).

This is not growth into grace, but growth in grace. We get into grace by the new birth. This new nature which has its source in God must be developed in order that our lives may be fruitful for God (v. 8), that they bear testimony to the cleansing power of Christ's blood (v. 9), and that we may have assurance of salvation (v. 10). The following lines of growth are indicated:

1. Virtue (v. 5) here means energy and courage. This is not "added," as in the Authorized Version, but "supplied," as in the Revised Version—"in your faith supply virtue." It means increase by growth, not by external junction. The graces named develop out of each other from the root of faith. Manly courage is the first virtue which must be supplied in order to grow stronger.

2. Knowledge (v. 5) means a right understanding. It means, therefore, a practical knowledge.

3. Temperance (v. 6) means self-control. Practical knowledge will supply to itself the government of all appetites.

4. Patience (v. 6) means endurance, having control of self within. Endurance of that without will follow.

5. Godliness (v. 6) means piety, reverence for God, the submission of the human will to the will of God. This is a part of that practical knowledge which must be supplied.

6. Brotherly kindness (v. 7). Love of the brethren must be developed in godliness. The proof that one is godly is that he loves the brethren (I John 5:1).

7. Charity (v. 7) means love. Peter's climax is reached in love. Out of faith, which is the root, springs this seven-fold fruit. In order to prevent apostasy, Peter calls all to be diligent in the development of these graces.

Humility of Heart

Wait on the Lord in humility of heart, that thou mayest daily feel the change which is wrought in the heart and conscience by the holy, eternal, eye-living Power; and so thou mayest witness, "that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit."

An Abundant Thing

What an abundant thing it is to pass over all the valuable parts of a man, and fix our attention on his infirmities.—Addison

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

No Runaway Price Boost

Washington.—President Roosevelt believes that commodity prices should go somewhat higher, but he has advised administration leaders to be on guard against a runaway movement. In making known his view, the President likewise for the first time tossed overboard the plans of many theorists for stabilization of prices on the basis of the 1926 price range and adopted instead something approximating the average of quotations existing in the period between 1909 and 1914.

Although Mr. Roosevelt never has publicly espoused the 1926 price level as such, his discussions have given rise to a general belief that the parity existing around that time constituted a relationship between farm products and industrial products which was satisfactory to him. Therefore, when he said the other day that he preferred the 1900-14 level, he turned his face from the position occupied by numerous groups, such as the committee for the nation and several farm organizations that have contended the 1926 relationship between farm and industrial prices should be the goal.

Most Washington observers agree that the administration is alert to the dangers of runaway prices, resulting not so much from the unbalanced condition of the budget and paper inflation as from uncontrolled and unregulated credit expansion. In other words, it is believed the President recognizes threats of a dangerous boom which, if it occurred, and was followed by the inevitable collapse, would leave our country in the throes of another depression.

In a conference with the President a few days ago, Mr. Roosevelt gave newspaper correspondents every indication of a conviction that price questions involve many factors that are at the particular moment quite impossible of ascertainment. He showed, too, in the opinion of many of the writers, that he is not following advice of the theorists without giving some practical consideration to the doctrines they advance. For example, the President's position clearly shows a desire to find ways and means of preventing wide fluctuations in commodity prices such as those that have characterized quotations in periods like 1920 to 1930. How far he will get in working out such a system is, of course, entirely problematical, but his comprehension of the problem has been accepted by the conservative element with more enthusiasm than they have given heretofore to his pronouncements.

Nation Is Solvent

Mr. Roosevelt believes that the nation is solvent. He contends that the column of assets has risen, through increases in general prices, to the point where it exceeds the column of liabilities or debts by a small margin. Arrival of this condition, therefore, has prompted him to give thought to the question of putting on brakes for rising prices. It is his understanding that the brakes are not to be applied yet. He intends, however, to keep them ready for use in case the runaway boom appears.

None of the administration spokesmen are willing at this time to disclose statistics which will represent the price level that is satisfactory to them. It is said, nevertheless, to be a percentage somewhat higher than now obtains.

The commodity price index of the bureau of labor statistics shows farm products now at 72.3, which research discloses is not far below the period from 1909 to 1914. The low point of this index figure for 1934 was 57.4 and the low point of the depression in March, 1933, was 42.8. Of course, index figures do not breathe life, but when two sets of them are arranged alongside each other, they become at least a basis of comparison, and after all, comparison is the best basis for judgment.

In some quarters of Washington I hear expressions to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt's latest move regarding prices indicates a conviction that restoration of the country's solvency is more important in the general recovery program than a good many of the theoretical and untried remedies brought into use in the last fifteen months. His price proposals obviously have not ended conjecture as to possible new moves. The program being in generalities did not cause fears to subside concerning future tampering with the monetary structure nor did it alleviate conditions born of the pressure on commerce and industry resulting from NRA and its hundreds of codes.

Taken as a whole, the Washington picture at present is viewed by many astute observers as an indication that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to get together with those who would release credit if given reasonable assurances as to future plans of the administration. It must be said that Mr. Roosevelt has not been coaxing business leaders into the White House. It can be said with equal force, however, that he is being kept informed fully as to what these business leaders think. That being true, it seems to be a proper prediction that the administrator is searching quietly for ways of compromise and is hoping at least that there can

NRA Faces Bitter Fight

The guiding hands of NRA have run into a tough adversary right here in the National Capital in a firm by the name of W. F. Roberts company, incorporated. The Roberts company declined to sign the graphic arts code, the code that applies to printing and allied industries. Having refused to sign the code the Roberts company paid no attention to the code provisions governing wages and hours of labor, so NRA turned the case over to its lawyers for prosecution, and that was the beginning of a fight that promises to be as bitter as any yet arising from New Deal legislation.

The NRA lawyers, armed with affidavits of eight Roberts' employees to the effect that they were not receiving minimum code wages and were working more than the maximum hours, sought in an injunction in the District of Columbia courts to prevent the corporation from violating the code further. Their contention was that the code applied to the Roberts company despite its refusal to sign because it was drafted with the assent of a majority of the printing industry. But the court declined to grant the injunction, deciding that the case should be tried on its merits. The Roberts company felt it had gained something of a victory in the court's ruling, but it did not stop there. It has laid out a much broader campaign and it is that campaign which is proving so embarrassing to the NRA.

B. H. Roberts, head of the corporation, told me in the course of a discussion of the case that he was determined to awaken the country to the excessive costs of code maintenance. He objects strenuously to some of the code provisions and maintains that the bulk of his pay roll is well above the minimum prescribed by the code, but that his main complaint is against the arbitrary actions of the code authorities set up by NRA for enforcement of the code provisions.

The Roberts company further contends that the code authorities are impractical, that they lack an understanding of the businesses over which they preside and that their whole course of action tends to put legitimate industries in a strait-jacket which, according to Mr. Roberts, can have only one result, namely, loss of profits and eventual dismissal of some if not many employees.

The reports in Washington are to the effect that since the Roberts company case reached the trial court, something like 1,500 print shops throughout the country have declined to pay further assessments to the code authority for their industry. There is no means at present available for ascertaining this figure accurately, but the gossip around NRA is to the effect that not only have scores of print shops refused to pay assessments, but in a vast number of cases they have surrendered their blue eagle to NRA headquarters. This means virtually an open revolt in that part of the printing industry, and it is a circumstance that is causing considerable worry among NRA administrators.

Nearing Open Break

This weekly resume of Washington affairs is not intended to be of a gossip character, but there is a report going around in Washington, quite uncorroborated as yet, that holds much significance. For that reason I shall include it that you may know all things are not serene.

The story concerns a rift in the Department of Agriculture and its adopted child, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. In no governmental agency are there as many brain trusters and theorists as are to be found in the AAA. They have come to be known as the Tugwellians, named for Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture. Professor Tugwell, long regarded as the outstanding brain truster, has been consistent in promotion of his theories and his sub-brain trusters have followed his lead through all the storm and strife between the theoretical and the practical men within the administration.

Now, according to the report, the rift between the brain trusters and the practical men in the AAA and the department as well is approaching an open break. It has gone so far, according to well authenticated reports, that the practical groups have prepared their resignations and have left them in the hands of one individual to present when and if he believes that course becomes necessary. I am not informed whether the Tugwellian group is prepared to take the same action in event of an explosion, but past performances would indicate that they will stick on the job and fight. It is difficult to predict at this time what the outcome may be, but one thing is certain. There are going to be changes in the AAA and in the Department of Agriculture, and when those changes come it necessarily will be prelude to revisions of policies.

Hard to Set Down Just What Is "Sex Appeal"

An old subject, but always of vital interest, is the matter which a famous woman writer deals with in the following article:

"With an apology for the request, one of our readers asks, 'Would you write in the column your definition of what is sex appeal?'"

"The question will make some of my readers smile. To define sex appeal—to name the unnamable, to describe the indescribable—even though it is known to every adult, and is in fact so obvious as to need no definition! That will be the first reaction of many people to the question 'What is sex appeal?'"

"But I am not so sure sex appeal is something understood and obvious to all. The term conjures up, of course, visions of a stinky siren, voluptuous, blazing eyed, full red lips—the personification of sex, to whose allure all men are slaves. And yet there are men to whom this 'ramp' type of woman is no more dangerous than is the sheik or gigolo type of man to many women. So there is no formula, even for the strictly physical element in sex appeal."

"The strictly physical element, you may say—speaking of sex appeal, isn't the physical element all?—And that brings us to my point. We are speaking, not of love, of which sex is the consummation, but of sex appeal itself. And my thought is that even sex appeal is not all physical. The young wife who is advised, if she would keep her husband's love, to keep her looks, does well, of course, to follow that advice. But if preoccupation with keeping young and pretty for him makes her vain, selfish, neglectful of his interests, it must affect not only his love for her, but her appeal for him. In a recent popular play a husband after cruel inconsiderateness and neglect expects to wipe out his wife's resentment with a passionate kiss and he is surprised and disappointed to find her quite unresponsive. 'You forget,' she says, 'that I stopped liking you.' 'It is not a question without sense, that 'What is sex appeal?' It may help to make marriages more successful if young people will realize that among average normal people, even the basic physical appeal between a man and a woman is usually not entirely apart from a pleasing of personalities, liking each other."

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Harry Ryberg, stockman of the Corona country, was a business visitor here last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Roselle of Jicarilla were here the latter part of last week and while in town, made this office a friendly call.
