The attendance of visitors at the Carlsbad Caverns last week passed the 2,000 mark as compared to 1,200 during the same period of last year. Assuming the ratio of double 1933, which has held since Jan. 1, holds to January 1, over 100,000 people will have passed through the grottoes in the 12 months.

Last Sunday evening, little Miss Joyce Sloan entertained a number of her friends at a Slumber Party on her tenth birthday. A delicious dinner was served and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

Keep in mind the big Singing Convention to be held in Carrizozo on Sunday, November 25. Different towns will be represented in the singing and all should boost this undertaking and make it a success.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE NEWS

By WILL ROBINSON

One needs to see the Carlsbad Caverns to see what wonders God hath wrought beneath the surface of desert New Mexico.

One does not realize the immensity of Nature's chemistry until seeing the awesome expanse of the Great White Sands.

One is really not a citizen of New Mexico until the first stop in the lee of Gran Quivira, the great ruined Christian church in the Western Hemisphere, and the great prehistoric city in our state, which was peopled by people with arts when Babylon was in its prime.

In the valley below Gran Quivira ancient people tilled the soil on a stretch thirty by fifty miles while Greece was in its prime.

Successing civilizations are now covered by sand and mesquite and the vagrant dust of high-traveling "storms." There in 1630 Padre Francisco de Acevedo, the great priest-builder of Abo Pass, constructed the first little chapel for the Piro Indians. Twenty years later he began the immense mission, built entirely of stone and so lasting far longer than those whose adobes were used. In 1874 the Apaches became so bad that the Piro emigrated to the Rio Grande Valley and eventual extinction. The priests were eliminated by the uprising of 1690. For more than 200 years silence brooded over the huge church of the padres and the ancient town extending along the bluff.

The United States government made it all into a "National Monument" in 1909, and Gran Quivira had its first step toward restoration. Ten years later it was enlarged to a little more than a square mile. For years it was looked after by Dr. Irvin E. Smith as caretaker at a dollar a year. Last year the alphabeticals built a passable road north to Willard, twenty-five miles away. There are country paths from Corona, thirty-two miles east, and from Mountainair twenty-one miles northwest toward the parent Abo.

The walls of the great structure have been strengthened where it was imperative a home built for the sustenance, a parking ground for cars, a few paths have been opened up. It would take a vast sum to fully restore the church. If it were desired. It would take as much more and years of painstaking work to excavate the ancient city, so vast is its extent, and the larger of the more than twenty other cities within a few miles of the "City of Mystery."

So far the passing wheels of the tourists on the great highway twenty-five miles north have seldom turned south from Willard. Thousands pass over the Corona artery without a thought of taking the half day necessary to see the greatest ruins of the pagan and the Christian cultures in all America. A few come that way, maybe camp for a few days, and go over the panorama, an education in itself.

No one knows how the ruins got the name of "Gran Quivira," though some attribute it to a reflection of Coronado's search for the fabled golden "Quivira." The true name of the ancient shelf city was "Tabira." We have gained that from the fragmentary records of the padres, Acevedo and others, and the research of Hewitt, Hallenbeck, Paul A. F. Walter and others. From the church records we know that the rock houses were occupied in 1600 when the Spaniards came. How many centuries, or ages before, no one knows. No attempt has been made by the fanciful tree-ring process to estimate the time of its first building, along about the time when the settlers on the Gallo and elsewhere took out their homestead papers.

The Piro, the now vanished Indians who lived there when the priests came, are properly estimated to have occupied the stronghold and the valley for 2,000 years. Before that it is all guess work. Ancient pottery and skeletal remains have been found forty feet beneath the present floor of the valley, reminders of the distant time when there must have been more rainfall to mature the corn, the beans, and the squash, that formed the major food of these dawn men. They knew not iron or bronze, they had no domestic animals, except the dog. They fashioned with tools of stone. They left no written language, or even pictographs. The great plate of the earth has been wiped clean, so far as they are concerned. There is no literature of them or the padres who brought the crows and then were overwhelmed by the savage hordes.

We know that they were a small people physically, that judging by their skulls they must have had considerable intelligence, that there were thousands upon thousands of them at times; that cultures succeeded cultures; that they fashioned clay with some considerable skill, and built of stone. Other than these things, we know nothing. We do know that Gran Quivira is one of the great legacies of New Mexico, that a paternal government is slowly, pitifully slowly, starting toward research, and that is all.

Over $100,000 worth of loans on life insurance policies were paid off during September in Chavez, DeBaca and Roosevelt Counties.

A Santa Fe customer writes the columnist about a recent item herein regarding the "meat type" road between Vaughn and Roswell, 100 miles, and declares that it cannot be safely driven by the average driver in less than four hours, owing to the rough stretches of "primary rock." Having passed over that stretch Sunday in just about that time, the writer accepts the figure as correct. You might do it in less, but you won't have any teeth, liver or lights left in you if you do. Ditto the stretch from the bottom of Picocho hill to Honda that from the Cap Rock to Carlsbad, potash mines, and the "rough five" on the road from Roswell to Tatum. Possibly there are others that might be included in the list.

One cafe in Hobbs served more than 600 people in one day last week.

More than 5,000 tourists passed through Alamogordo in September. The average of these tourists spent more than $5.00 each while in the town.

Lincoln county will have a full nine months of school this year. The first sales tax remittance brought over $19,000 to the treasury. The teachers will be paid if the county officers are not, for the latter have no sales tax to help them out. More than $100,000 worth of automobiles and trucks, new and used, were sold in Curry county in the month of September.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mendenhall, sons Bill, John and Frank will leave tomorrow for Pueblo, Colo., where they will spend the winter. The Mendenhalls have been residents here for several years, during which time they have made many lasting friends all of whom will regret to hear of their departure. Most of the time during their stay, Bill has been the mechanic at the Carrizozo Auto Co., and a certain period, conducted business for himself. Let us hope they will return in the spring.

LINCOLN COURTHOUSE A NATIONAL MONUMENT?

The President has made a W P A allotment of $8567 for the restoration and repair of the old Lincoln County Court House in Lincoln, N. M. This was the historic structure from which Billy the Kid escaped after killing Deputies Bell and Ollinger shortly before his own demise at the hands of Sheriff Pat Garratt.

Of late years the building has been used as a school. Not only should it be restored as nearly as possible as it was in the late 70's, but the Court House, the Murphy-Dolan store, the McSween store which enabled it to be transformed into a fortress, and the Ellis House should be given State Park, National Monument, or some other official status to insure their maintenance.

The Court House could be used for the display of weapons and other relics of Billy the Kid — other members of the rival factions and of related historical material in general. — El Paso Times.

Under Pressure

By George Agnew Chamberlain

SYNOPSIS

Joyce Ferrall, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, is almost entirely dependent on her devoted stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before. Her father's death she recalls as Irma calls in Helen Barranca, an admirer, to help her persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirpatrick. When, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Helen, she demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Reading her father's papers, Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter enclosing a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder, at La Barranca. Her contact with Mr. Barranca, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's, she decides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico. Her arrangements are all made for her, she departs by plane under the name of Margarita Ferrall, secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, gives Joyce a chilly reception and she leaves her husband, General Onelia, who takes her to General Onelia, right-hand man to the Mexican minister of war.

"What's it got to do with me?" "Exercise your memory, General," said Margarita. "Who conspired La Barranca? Who holds it now?"

"Dorado!" he cried. "Exactly."

"What do you suggest?" "General Dorado says he merely seized abandoned property. His title is based on salvage. My suggestion is that you arrange to have him abandon the hacienda in his turn."

"Nothing easier. I'll have him shot the next time he shows his face in town. I've been wanting to do it for years."

"I'm afraid I've come at your fiesta hour. Naturally General Dorado must not be killed before the abandoned hacienda is definitely in possession of the rightful owner."

"Ah!" exclaimed Onelia. "If General Dorado, who now holds La Barranca, should be killed—even if he should die a natural death—his heirs would inherit. They would have as good a case as he has now and our work would be all to do over again."

"Who wants the place? Not I." Margarita looked at him steadfastly. "I wonder if you can see a picture of I hold it up before your eyes?" she inquired.

"Try me," said Onelia testily. "Here's the picture, General, and that you're not to appear in it at all—no one without saying. Suppose some of your trustiest men attend to the eviction of Dorado without killing him—simply drive him and his following out and chase them into the hills. Simultaneously your men plant the girl and leave her. The incident gets in the papers, here and across the border. The girl is young, beautiful, has perfect title as titles go and the courage of a bobcat to back it with. Do you begin to see anything?"

"Of course I see her getting herself killed, and so do you."

"Probably; but that's a mere incident—perhaps a necessary incident. It doesn't occur to you you might also see the ambassador from a country we both heartily detest up to his neck in boiling water and one or two of our own cabinet officers hanging to their toppling perches with nails and teeth? I used to think you had the brains of a great minister of war, but I'm beginning to doubt it."

"During her long speech Onelia had been advancing toward her with a catlike tread. Now he placed a blunt finger under her chin, tipped back her head and stood looking down into her unflinching eyes."

"You've started something," he rumbled, "and we two are going to finish it. If I betray you, you can always get me shot at the market price, but if you betray me I'll have you dragged by a frightened horse." He stepped back, shrugged his shoulders and sat down. "Call in the girl."

"When Joyce entered nothing could have exceeded Margarita's complacent air of accomplishment unless it was the General's urbanity."

"All you ask is to be put in possession of La Barranca. Is that correct?"

"Yes, General. I was happy there. I've never been happy since I left. The years of my childhood—"

"Og years, amorita. Our plan contemplates presenting you with the hacienda and nothing more. It is a dangerous plan—extremely dangerous to you, I mean. I don't exaggerate when I say the chances are ten to one you'll meet your mother's fate. The scheme is to filter a sufficient number of men within the walls of La Barranca, pick a quarrel at a given signal and then drive out General Dorado who now holds the property. It is essential that you be on the spot to take immediate possession on the spot, mind you. Do you agree?"

"I do," said Joyce. "But this General Dorado—be won't be killed, will he?"

"No, child, certainly not; I'm glad to reassure you on that point," said Onelia urbanely. "The question now arises as to who shall be your personal escort."

He touched a bell and the door opened almost instantly. "Send Sergeant Buenaventura."

The soldier who presently entered the room immediately inspired Joyce with confidence. Loyalty was written in every line of his face.

"Sit down, Pancho," said Onelia; "this is a social gathering. Besides, you are now commencing a month's furlough on full pay, accompanied by a detail of eighteen men. Never by any chance are you to report to me what happens during your absence. It won't be necessary since I am about to tell you what you will do with every minute of your time."

"We proceeded to give instructions so broad yet so complete to the last detail that Joyce was moved to admiration. "Understand, Pancho," he concluded, "the shot that kills General Dorado will surely kill you. Maim him if you like, but don't kill him."

"It is understood, mi General. When do we start?"

"Today, if you like," said Joyce. "If that's impossible, then tomorrow."

"It will take three days at least to place my men," he stated. "They must be sent singly and in advance."

"Attend to it at once," ordered Onelia. "As for you, hold yourself in readiness and see you have the sort of car which will attract

The orchestra was placed in the stem of the fan which put the master of ceremonies, the highly popular Adan Arnaldo, at a distinct advantage since he could watch the entire assemblage without having to worry about anything behind his back. The tables were in two banks, one at the level of the floor, the other raised and hugging the slant of the walls. The wide outer fringe of the fan was given over to stage entrance, hallway, cloak room, cooking and service departments.

General Onelia met Joyce and Margarita in the foyer. He was dressed in muff and when Margarita, divesting herself of an ulster-like overcoat, displayed a dark tailored suit, Joyce felt a qualm as to her own lovely semi-evening dress. But immediately her attention was seized by something else; at a murmured request from the check-room girl two men were descending to park their guns with their hats. Margarita cast a hurried and curious glance at Joyce's face but found she need not worry—

Joyce was given a seat with her back to the wall. Sensing the concentrated stare upon her she was troubled and looked around anxiously. It must be her clothes. But to her relief she saw a few people on the dance floor in evening dress and then discovered a party of men against the opposite wall, all of whom were togged out in the full regalia of tails and white ties. She wondered about them, perceiving at once they were onlookers rather than participants. Evidently they had come to watch the fun, perhaps in an effort to forget the boredom of some diplomatic function. At the thought she examined them more carefully and suddenly found herself gazing at long range into the eyes of Dirk Van Suttart. She looked away at once, making no sign of recognition, but not before she had caught the rapid change of expression in his face. In an instant it had passed from surprise to wonder and from wonder to dismay tinged with aversion. He was profoundly shocked.

A flush of anger stained her cheeks but at that moment Adan Arnaldo came to Onelia's table to do homage to authority. He was a handsome young man and lacked the sleek look which usually distinguishes the master of ceremonies of such a bout as El Tenebroso. His manner, as he greeted Margarita whom he knew, declared him a substantial partner as well. Acknowledging an introduction to Joyce, he took her hand but without removing his eyes from the general's face.

"Well, Adan," said the general, "I don't have to ask you how things are going. Jam-packed as usual."

"Not so bad," admitted Arnaldo. "The genius of this place," remarked Margarita, "consists in its diversity. There's one clientele at midnight, another at two and a third at four in the morning."

"Yes," said Arnaldo, "and if we could close at one o'clock I'd be poorer but a lot happier." He glanced at Onelia. "It's a long time since you've honored me."

"Quite true, but I'm a busy man and I've taken to going to bed. I suppose the old habits are still on the job? I haven't seen Castellito, Diego Borda, Vasconcellos, General Dorado or Pancho Iroyagon since I came here last. That about covers the list, doesn't it?"

"General," said Arnaldo laughingly, "I compliment you on your memory."

"So? How could I forget any of that flock of flamingos?"

"Oh, please let me go too," begged Joyce.

It was told the way their heads turned toward her as though moved by identical springs and equally strange that both ladies should go through the same changes of expression. Their Latin eyes were seeing her at El Tenebroso. No girl of breeding could crush that door and keep her social standing, and whether anything happened to her or not had nothing to do with it. Of course Joyce was unaware of any such deadline, which only made it more amusing.

"It might not be a bad idea," remarked Margarita at last.

"Not at all a bad idea," agreed Onelia. "As a matter of fact, unless accompanied by both of you, I wouldn't consider for a moment going myself. I'll send my car to pick you up. Shall we say at midnight?"

"Too early by at least an hour," said Margarita. "Make it one o'clock."

"No, no, not that," corrected Arnaldo. "You remembered not to mention a single one of the dead!" Margarita laughed. "You're worried, Adan. Who's on the rampage nowadays? Are you expecting Dorado or is it only Castellito?" Arnaldo did not answer. "Tell me," she persisted. "Who is the cause tonight of that little crease of worry on your brow?"

"General Onelia," said Arnaldo as he rose to resume his duties.

Onelia scowled at the ambiguous distinction. Compliment, insult, threat or warning—he could take his choice. He sat in a moody silence, paying no attention to his guests. Smoldering inside him was dull rage at Arnaldo. What had he meant? He knew of the long-standing Onelia-Dorado feud—everybody did. Had he guessed at once that he and Margarita were after information as to Dorado's whereabouts and plans? In spite of her host's neglect Joyce was not bored. She sipped her wine sparingly and let her eyes wander.

Abruptly she sensed Onelia had gone tense in every muscle and following the direction of his gaze she saw an individual in uniform, accompanied by two bodyguards, erupt from a slight commotion in the entrance hall on her left. Never before had she seen a visage so striking, so individual, so different from the ordinary conception of a human face. Jet-black hair, close-cropped, came down in a sharp peak to within an inch of heavy eyebrows and where cheekbones should have protruded there were indentations, causing the massive blue-black jaw, divided midway by the gash of full red lips, to appear to slant outward. Feeling her eyes upon him the man stopped, stared, smiled and saluted gaily. He was drunk and as he staggered toward the table hurriedly being placed for him at the edge of the dance floor, Arnaldo darted forward, apparently to greet him. But he took up his stand in a direct line between Onelia and the new arrival.

Joyce leaned toward Margarita. "Who is that man," she whispered, "the officer who just came in?"

"General Dorado," murmured Margarita almost inaudibly.

Arnaldo, chatting cheerfully with Dorado, took out a cigarette and tapped it on his wrist. At the third tap the orchestra began to pack up its instruments and one of the four tiers of lights went out. Adan did his best to hold the attention of the recent arrival but when a second bank of lights was extinguished Dorado awoke to realization of what was intended. An odd hush fell on the room, accompanied by an electric air of expectancy. It was real, something even the uninitiated could feel, and Joyce's knees began to tremble from excitement. Her evening bag slipped from her lap. She leaned over quickly to pick it up and to her consternation caught the glint of a service revolver clapped against Onelia's thigh. Her first impression was that it was quite still but as she rose she realized its muzzle had been moving slowly upward.

Then she heard Margarita whisper to him hoarsely: "Don't be a fool or you'll spoil everything. Leave it to Adan and nothing will happen—nothing!"

At that instant Dorado raised his own gun aloft, but end down, and crashed it on the table so violently that plates, knives and forks went flying. "Musical!" he roared. He pointed uncertainly at Joyce with a wagging forefinger, then waved it to include every woman in the room. "Musical!"

Domestication of Horse Is Traced Back Additional Thousand Years to 3000 B. C.

The history of the domestication of the horse has recently been traced back an additional thousand years, says Field Museum News, Chicago. Previously it had been thought that the horse was introduced into Babylonia by the Kassites during the early portion of the second millennium B. C. However, the Early Dynastic I (circa 3000-2800 B. C.) tombs at Kish, excavated by the Field Museum-Oxford university joint expedition to Mesopotamia, yielded animal bones some of which have now been identified by Prof. Wolfgang Amshelner, of the College of Agriculture, Vienna, as those of the domesticated horse (equus caballus). These horses were larger than the Arabian horse of today, standing 15 hands 3 inches at the withers.

These skeletal remains of horses were found hitched to chariots as the animals had fallen, after being slaughtered in the tombs of their masters to provide transportation in the afterworld. The bronze harness trappings and portions of the chariots were well preserved, and it is possible to reconstruct the pictures from scenes on seals and plaques found at Kish and other sites.

Thus far, no Sumerian word for horse is recognizable, and it was thought that only the donkey was referred to in texts of this period. Now, with the realization that the horse was used at that time, it may be possible to identify some descriptive form of ass with the word for horse, as was done in Old Babylonia where the horse is known as the "ass from the mountains." The earliest Egyptian records show that the Hyksos (circa 1700 B. C.)—the "Shepherd Kings"—brought the horse into the Nile valley.

Founded Benedictine Order The Benedictine order was founded by St. Benedict about 529. It was at first intended to be only a philosophy of life, but within its first century the order was formed. The Benedictines, famous for their manufacture of a liqueur, were the savors of Christian art in western Europe. At St. Ottilien, says the Digest, their vows of industry have taken them from crude handwork to highly mechanized production.

Body Needs Plenty of Water

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

GENERALLY speaking most of us should drink four to six glasses of water daily, in addition to the water in foods and in beverages such as tea and coffee.

Some idea of the great need of water in the body can be gathered if we remember that every cell is really like a tiny fish and must have water to nourish it, and to receive and carry away its wastes.

Fortunately Nature had this in mind because every foodstuff, no matter how dry in appearance or taste, contains some water—peanuts as low as 8 per cent and lettuce as high as 90 per cent. Thus even if one drank no water whatever he could get sufficient in foods such as tomatoes, string beans, cabbage, carrots, apples, oranges and other fruits. Lean beef contains almost 80 per cent of water.

Why It Is Necessary.

"Water is necessary to life for two main reasons—(1) because the chemical changes required to sustain life can take place only when the reacting substances are dissolved in water; and (2) because water is needed for flushing away the waste products formed from the various processes going on in the body." Thus the cells from a chick which Dr. Alexis Carrel has kept alive for nearly 20 years are enabled to grow and multiply only because they are kept in a tank of water containing a little salt which nourishes the tissues and allows the waste products to escape into it. The water is of course changed periodically.

Water also regulates the body temperature, retaining heat in cold weather and carrying the heat out of the body in the form of perspiration during hot weather.

There is no hard and fast rule as to how much water or liquid an individual should drink daily. If there is a tendency to cold, a rise in temperature, an attack of diarrhoea or vomiting, severe bleeding or other condition causing a loss of water from the body, more water should be taken to replace it. Water is also very helpful at the beginning and during an illness in carrying wastes from the body more rapidly. A little salt added to the water enables the tissues to hold more water.

Overweight individuals do not need as much water as those of average weight as fat tissue holds more water within it than do other tissues.

Leave the Marginal Fat.

One of the leading heavyweight wrestlers has a beautiful physique and is a fast, strong, intelligent, good-looking fellow. Although his weight is announced as 202 to 203, it is likely that his real weight is 10 to 15 pounds less. His muscles stand out on all parts of the body—the abdomen like a "washboard," the upper back like a rectangle, and the arms and legs like whiplard. And he knows how to wrestle.

However as his wrestling engagements take him to all parts of the country, with a great amount of fast traveling—motor, train, and airplane—it is just a question how long his "nerves" will stand up under the strain.

Why? Simply because he may not have enough fat on and in his body.

If he were a boxer, getting ready for an important bout, to be down as "fine" as he is at present would be wise because the boxer has to make a certain weight at a definite time. Also a boxer allows himself to accumulate a little fat between bouts.

Practically all the heavyweight wrestlers keep themselves comfortably overweight—a little layer of fat covering their muscles. They lose 5 to 10 pounds during a 30 to 60 minute bout, but have that 5 to 10 pounds back on the body for their bout the following night. Of course much of this 5 to 10 pounds that comes and goes is made up of liquids as wrestlers drink a great deal of water and sometimes beer; very few if any indulge in hard liquor. But to enable them to get rid of this weight, perspire properly during the bout, and have the weight back the next evening, there must be a comfortable layer of fat under the skin and throughout the body to hold this water. Every pound of fat can hold three pounds of water.

Another benefit to the athlete of a little fat on and in the body and also the use of a little fat daily in the diet, is that fat "spares" to some extent the muscle tissue which is burned up during the exercise. That is, fat or oil in the body supplies the heat and energy during work or exercise and thus preserves the muscle tissue—the strength giving or strength part of the body. Of course when all the fat is used up and work continues then the muscles of the body have to supply the fuel for energy.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

For Winter Meals. SCALLOPED dishes are favorites for cold weather because it is a pleasure to use the oven, and because the blended flavor of foods makes such delicious finished products. The tartness of tomatoes complements most any meat that is being served, and while there are almost unlimited ways of making the dish, you may enjoy trying the following recipe:

Scalloped Tomatoes.
1 No. 2 1/2 can tomatoes 2 cups bread crumbs
1 lb. minced onion 4 tbsp. butter
1 tsp. salt
Combine the tomatoes with the onion and arrange a layer in a baking dish. Mix the salt and sugar with the bread crumbs and blend with melted butter. Place a layer of crumbs over the tomatoes, add another layer of tomatoes, crumbs, and so on until the dish is filled and ingredients used. Leave crumbs on top. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Don't Neglect Your Child's Cold

Don't let chest colds or croupy coughs go untreated. Rub Children's Mucosol on child's throat and chest at once. This milder form of regular Mucosol penetrates, warms, and stimulates local circulation. Floods the bronchial tubes with its soothing, relieving vapors. Mucosol brings relief naturally because it's a "resonant herb." NOT just a salve. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Three strengths: Regular, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

CONSTIPATION

Unrelenting Enemy of Health
"HOW are your bowels?" The doctor asks this important question because a primary need of good health is for the bowels to regularly pass off the waste of metabolism. Every doctor knows you cannot be well, feel well or look well if you allow constipation to hinder daily evacuation and thus prevent body cleanliness. You should know! Then why let a bad condition continue? Try Doan's Regulets. They are mild and effective, act as a digestive and hepatic stimulant, increase the flow of bile, and relieve tension and congestion of the intestines. Be regular with Regulets. National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—It always has been interesting to me to see how politicians frequently overlook real issues in national affairs. Many times they stimulate the hound that overruns the rabbits. That is the reason why so often a new man in public life suddenly rises to leadership. He has taken hold of a bad situation that is right under our feet, offered a constructive solution and has dealt with an imminent condition rather than schemed for re-election through political fence building.

These facts lead directly into a bit of current history. It will be recalled how Bruce Barton campaigned through congested sections of New York's Manhattan island for an unexpired term in the house of representatives last fall. About all that Mr. Barton said of consequence in his campaign speeches was that there are too many laws. I think that is obvious. When he was campaigning on that line, he was speaking for great masses of inarticulate citizens.

But Mr. Barton went further. He announced his intention to seek repeal of one federal law a week until there is some semblance of reason in the structure of federal laws.

Now, of course, Mr. Barton is very new in politics. He had been keeping his nose to the grindstone of business. He knows only what other persons outside of politics know, namely, that high pressure minorities, sour pussies and nit wits were getting one law after another through congress, and that, in the end, those laws would be ruinous to the country as a whole. Whether Mr. Barton thought he would succeed or whether he recognized the fact that he was only making a start, it does not matter. Bruce Barton has taken hold of an obvious issue in national affairs and it is not outside of the realm of probabilities that he will "go places" with his program. Thus far, it must be said that Mr. Barton has succeeded only in getting a dozen repeal bills into the house committees through introduction in the house. None has been acted on. Few probably will be acted on—if the house runs true to form. That is to say, Mr. Barton is a Republican and the house is controlled by Democrats and New Dealers. Naturally, they will give no opportunity for the opposition to gain credit for anything, no concessions at all.

The significance of the Barton program goes much deeper, however, and it is of that significance that I want to write. Through more than twenty years as an observer of national affairs here in Washington, obviously I have witnessed many issues develop, or be created, or be discovered. It seems to me that the really important national issues are those that develop, as the Barton program is developing. That means the issue is fundamental; it means, further, that there is no necessity for building the issue, and it means as well that it involves vital questions of policy.

As I said above, there are too many laws, too many don'ts and very few do's. Restriction and regulation always breed more restriction and regulation. The Roosevelt administration has been constantly saying "don't" in the shape of laws and the tremendous majority in congress has been giving President Roosevelt almost unlimited power to do as he wants to do beyond the "don't" legislation. So the Barton program would restore a great deal of freedom to the people themselves and would restore to congress much of the power that it has given to the President. To carry that thought further, then, the Barton program actually seems to me to propose saving only those laws that the progress of civilization shows to be sound and workable.

We might consider some of the statutes which Mr. Barton wants to repeal. There is, for example the so-called Thomas amendment—one of the most assinine and dangerous pieces of legislation ever to get on the statute books. The legislation, forced through by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma in May of 1933, gave the President the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in paper currency. I do not see how anybody can regard it as anything but authority to issue printing press money. Of course, it never has been used by President Roosevelt and probably never will be, but the authority to go into printing press inflation exists and that is the danger. How, for instance, can you or I or anyone else feel sure that the money we have in our pocket or the few dollars in the bank is going to be worth anything tomorrow when the President of the United States, by one stroke of the pen, could turn loose a flood of worthless money.

Mr. Barton also seeks liquidation of a host of government agencies. Some of them are 30 years old or of even greater age—built as wartime emergency units, but still in existence for no reason at all. Besides the War Finance corporation and some others of that wartime era, it is proposed to get rid of some things of more recent date. The Commodity Credit corporation and the two export-import banks, to mention only three. Now, there is no reason available for retention of the skeletons of the World War, and there appears to have been no reason for creation of such things as the export-import banks. I mean there was no sound reason. Those radicals who forced the diplomatic recognition of Soviet Russia thought there was reason for the export-import banks because they held such banks would enable trade with Russia. But Russian trade has amounted to about the same as the sale of mules to my home county of Missouri.

Two other pieces of legislation which Mr. Barton seeks to repeal are strictly New Deal. One is that law which gave the President the right to change the value of the dollar at will, within certain limitations. I suppose there are some who still believe that devaluation of the dollar has done or can do good in aiding recovery. It seems to me, however, that existence of that power in the hands of one man is just another basis for uncertainty among all of the people. In any event, the failure of that panacea has been amply demonstrated.

The piece of far-reaching New Deal legislation concerning the so-called Guffey coal law. That thing is a price fixing measure. It gave authority to a coal commission to prescribe prices throughout the country, and producers would be violating a law if they sold below those figures; they would be subject to fines and prison terms. Only recently, the price fixing features were enjoined by a circuit court of appeals and so at the moment they are not operative. Yet the threat exists. And attention should be called to the fact also that the three judges who granted an injunction were appointed by President Roosevelt and supposed, therefore, to be very liberal in their views. Mr. Barton called the Guffey coal act a piece of "grand larceny against the consumers," because, he explained, the consumers are made to pay the higher prices fixed by the commission and they have no word to say about it.

Among other laws which Mr. Barton wants to repeal is the ill-starred silver purchase act. That law was another one which the inflationists in congress forced through in 1934 when all of the brain-trust camp followers were in their heyday. The only result that I can discover flowing from the silver purchase act is a grand outpouring of cash for the owners of silver mines. They obtained two or three times what their silver was really worth.

Analysis of the limited number of laws, I believe, shows the trend of the Barton program. It may be that he will never get to first base with any of them. My conviction, however, is quite to the contrary. I firmly expect to see a growth in the strength that such a program will muster.

About the time you are reading this column, there will be an incident taking place in Tientsin, China, that is a milestone in the history of the United States army. Late in February orders become operative for the departure of the Fifteenth United States Infantry from Chinese soil. That, of itself, of course, does not provoke particular interest. But the famous Fifteenth has been on foreign duty for 28 years and that is the longest any unit of the United States army ever has been away from our shores.

It ought to be explained that very few of the soldiers making up the Fifteenth Infantry were with the outfit when it first was assigned overseas. But the regiment has been stationed abroad and the recruits to its ranks have been dispatched continuously to it as retirements and expiration of enlistments have occurred. It is now coming back to American soil and will be stationed at Fort Lewis.

The Fifteenth has a most honorable record, beginning with its organization in 1861. It won honors at Shiloh and in the campaigns of 1862 in Alabama and Kentucky. It fought at Murfreesboro, at Chickamauga, Chattanooga, and at Atlanta. In 1880, it was at the front in the campaigns against Hles, and again in the China Relief expedition of 1900, and these were followed by action in the Philippine insurrection. There was a brief spell when the regiment was on home soil, but then it went to work in Cuba. Subsequently, it was moved around here and there until the Manchurian dynasty was overthrown and China became a republic. It called for Tientsin in November, 1919, and there it has remained.

POULTRY HYBRIDS MAY BE VALUABLE

U. S. Investigators Report Two Kinds for Farms.

Supplied by the United States Department of Agriculture—WNU Service.

In testing the hybrids produced from thirteen crosses of standard breeds of chickens in various parts of the country, poultry investigators in the United States Department of Agriculture have found that at least two of the hybrids may be valuable on many farms. One hybrid came from a cross of Rhode Island Red males with White Wyandotte females. The other, Barred Plymouth Rock males with Rhode Island Red females, is the one commonly used now for broiler production.

Knox and Olsen, of the department, say that if a poultry breeder wants to get high quality hybrid chickens, he must cross high quality parent stock in the first place. The investigators find that whenever the parents come from the flocks of good poultry breeders, the hybrids are better than those from flocks where no particular breeding work is under way. Compared with those from poor breeding flocks, hybrid progeny from the stock of the better poultry breeders lay an average of from twenty-five to fifty-five more eggs in a year, the eggs weigh more, and the layers show less broodiness.

Both hybrids are superior to Rhode Island Reds for broiler production. At the broiler age of ten weeks, the Rhode Island Red and White Wyandotte hybrids average about a third of a pound more, and the Barred Plymouth Rock and Rhode Island Red hybrids about two-fifths of a pound more than the pure Reds.

For the poultryman who likes to sex his chicks at hatching time, the Red-Wyandotte hybrid offers an opportunity for a good job of sexing, simply on the basis of color. The females are predominantly red and the males predominantly white.

Mastitis Hits Two Rear Quarters of Dairy Cows

Which of the udder quarters in milk cows are most frequently involved in mastitis or udder infection?

On the basis of observations made at the Wisconsin experiment station, and reported in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association, F. B. Hadley, station veterinarian, has concluded that the two rear quarters are more often affected than the two front quarters, but that there is no significant difference in occurrence of the disease between the right and left halves of the udder. Furthermore, when the two front quarters were compared with each other, and the two rear quarters were similarly compared, little difference also was noticed.

It is Doctor Hadley's opinion that the rear quarters are more subject to contamination on account of being in closer proximity to the filth of the barn gutter and usually more pendulous, thus likely to become injured when the cow steps over high door sills or passes over rough ground. The location of the rear quarters between the thighs subjects them to greater pressure when the cow walks or lies down, which results in more disturbance to the circulation of the blood. Moreover, they produce 60 per cent of the milk, so are more active functionally, thus rendering them more susceptible to infection.

Depleted by Overgrazing

Of the 728,000,000 acres of range land in the United States, supporting about 56,000,000 head of cattle, sheep, and other live stock, large areas have been depleted by overgrazing, and must be restored by better methods of range management. W. R. Chapline, chief of the division of range research, United States forest service, told the International Grasslands conference at Aberystwyth, Wales. "Programs of restoration of depleted ranges will require years of determined co-operative effort," Chapline said.

Where to Keep Eggs

On the average farm it is difficult to have a satisfactory place in which to hold eggs, since they should be held at a temperature of about 55 degrees. Such a temperature will prevent germ development and retain, to a great extent, the interior quality of eggs; yet it is not cool enough to make the eggs freeze when they are removed from these quarters. A well ventilated, basement stability affords the most desirable place to hold eggs.

Flushing Sows

Beginning about ten days or more before breeding, advises a writer in Wallace's Farmer, keep the sows in a rapidly rising state of nutrition by a liberal use of corn or similar feed, supplemented with tankage, skim milk, buttermilk, or a combination of these feeds. A flushing mixture may be made of 50 pounds of tankage, 25 pounds of linseed oil meal and 25 pounds of alfalfa meal. Feed liberally up to as much as three-fourths of a pound daily.

Plenty to See in WASHINGTON

Night View in Washington.

Visitors to the National Capital Find an Infinite Variety of Sights

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHATEVER the visitor's particular curiosity may be, the nation's capital seems to offer something to satisfy it.

Residents of Washington are amazed by the variety of sights their visitors wish to see. More news and photographs originate here than in any other city and pilgrims to the capital usually have their own ideas of where they would like to be taken. Showing the home folks the infinite variety of sights, scenes, and dignitaries is a major form of entertaining out-of-town guests.

Long proximity has made Washington residents accustomed to the presence of the famous and near-famous. If a man prominent in public affairs grows weary of the adulation of hero-worshippers, he has only to retreat to Washington to enjoy virtual anonymity.

A rather shy-appearing elderly gentleman used to walk four times each day, to and from work. Among other pedestrians he passed unnoticed, though in most cities he would have attracted a queue. He was Andrew Mellon, then secretary of the treasury, the man who quietly presented to the United States one of the finest collections of paintings and other works of art ever assembled, and added to the gift a $10,000,000 gallery in which to display them!

People everywhere are familiar with the government departments through the extension services that reach all parts of the country. For information on almost any topic within reason, one has only to call the proper office.

Great Place for Students.

Thousands of students come here not only because of excellent universities and colleges but also because government agencies and private institutions afford unparalleled opportunity for research. If it is necessary to ascertain the names, nature, or classification of rare species of flowers, for example, they carry the question to the Department of Agriculture or to the United States national herbarium, where an expert quickly supplies authoritative data.

If a question arises concerning trade practices in a foreign land, accurate information is available in the Department of Commerce. For human-interest material and statistics on other countries, there are the embassies and legations of those nations. The Library of Congress and the archives of the United States furnish a wealth of material on history. The national bureau of standards is a mine of scientific information. There is not a government department that does not stand ready to help the serious inquirer.

Almost everyone is amazed to discover how much really unspoiled natural country remains in the nation's capital. There still are many tracts of perhaps a hundred acres of woodland and meadow where wild blackberries and strawberries grow, where coveys of quail scuttles to cover at anybody's approach, where youngsters build concealed huts and defend them against all rivals.

District Is a Bird Haven.

The District of Columbia welcomes more than 300 species of birds each year, perhaps 150 of them casual or rare visitors, but many of them year-round residents. Since the passage of a protective law in 1933, the District has been a veritable wild-bird haven. The bald eagle, the turkey vulture, the wood duck, the passenger black-crowned night heron, the quail, the starling, several kinds of owls and hawks, and about 25 other birds are permanent residents. Within the city it is not unusual to hear the song of a wood thrush or sight the bright flame of a cardinal. Theodore Roosevelt listed more than 90 kinds of birds seen in the White House grounds or near by, and 17 of them nested there. Wrens, chickadees, finches, orioles, swallows and sparrows are perhaps the most numerous; but bluebirds, cedar waxwings, juncos, golden-crowned kinglets, and even cuckoos are not uncommon.

There are five kinds of wild squirrels here, the gray fox squirrel and the red fox squirrel; also cottontail rabbits, woodchucks, muskrats, and chipmunks. Beavers and pine martens, which used to inhabit forested districts, are virtually gone, but occasionally a red or gray fox, a

Strange Facts

Sounds Can Be Photographed

SURPRISING as it seems, it is possible to take pictures of sound. A flame can be made to vibrate in unison with a sound wave and the vibration of the flame then be photographed with the aid of a revolving mirror. Such photographs are useful because they help to identify the overtones of musical instruments. Closely allied to the subject of sound is the science of acoustics, that branch of physics which has to do with making sound easily, and distinctly heard in large rooms, halls, or out-of-door meeting places. In the construction of theaters, churches, or concert halls the matter of acoustics is of great importance. A room is said to have poor acoustics when sounds from the front cannot be heard clearly in every part of the room or when troublesome echoes are produced. Echoes are caused by the reflection of sound waves from large, smooth surfaces—in a room, from walls, floor, or ceiling. If the room is so constructed that there are no large surfaces of wall, the echo is broken up into small waves, none of which is heard by the listener. Smooth surfaces can also be broken up by curtains or by rearrangement of furniture, thus improving the acoustic properties of a structure with reasonable accuracy from the architect's plans. Notice how strange your voice sounds in a large empty room without furniture, curtains, pictures and carpets. In the same room, completely furnished, your voice sounds more "natural." That is a simple experiment in the science of acoustics.

The Words of Washington

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sons of the Republic

Again, as for many years, American people amid his various preoccupations to observe with reverent honor the Birthday of George Washington.

Now can a nation best honor the memory of the man it acknowledges as Founder and Father?

Obviously, by heeding his words of guidance and inspiration. And in the case of his great National Hero, America is fortunate in having a clear and written record of those words preserved in the famous Farewell Address.

Here are some extracts from that address, particularly applicable at a period when the principle of balanced constitutional powers, on which our government was founded, is under frequent threat.

They read:
"It is important . . . that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with its administration to confine themselves within their respective Constitutional spheres; avoiding, in the exercise of the powers of one department, to encroach upon another.

"The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and then to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism.

"The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the Guardian of the Public Weal against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them.

"If in the opinion of the People, the distribution or modification of the Constitutional powers be in any way wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates.

"But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed."

These are the words of Washington, addressed to the nation and the people he loved. They remain a clear admonition to statesmen and the public today. They are the final official counsel of the patriot, soldier and statesman of whom it was written:

"Arms won battles when he spoke, and out of chaos sprang the state."

If the great state George Washington created is to continue its progress and its benefits to all the people, those words must be remembered.

In this way can America pay the highest tribute to our First National Hero.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Death Spits Five Times"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Here, boys and girls, is the doggondest story you ever read in your life—the story of a lad who was called "yellow" and didn't like it. The story of a lad who, to show that he wasn't yellow, sat unmoved while they put up a wreath of flowers in his lap—a lily in his hand—while death darted at him five times across a theater stage.

His name is Phillip Luongo—this lad who faced his maker rather than be called a coward—and he lives in New York city. And if you have ever got a job to do that calls for real courage, just get Phil to do it. After what he went through six years ago, in that crowded theater up in the Bronx, there isn't anything in the world that is going to scare him.

Phil Didn't Like to Be Called "Yellow."

It was a dare that started Phil Luongo off on his big adventure. A famous French sharpshooter was appearing at a vaudeville theater on Tremont avenue, and every night he called for volunteers to be his human mark—to wear a headgear with five small glass balls on it while the Frenchman shot them off one by one. Other lads who had seen the show dared Phil to go up there and be shot at. And when Phil said he didn't like the idea they called him "yellow."

Phil didn't want to be shot at any more than you or I do. But they couldn't let him yellow and get away with it. With his friends he went to the theater, ready to make them eat those sneering words of theirs. They took seats in the first row of the orchestra and waited for the Frenchman's act to come on.

The fourth act had just ended and the Frenchman was due next. He came out suave and smiling—made a short talk about his war record and showed a short moving picture of himself trying a place to act on on the Western Front. Then he went into his shooting act, performing with every kind of gun imaginable, and never missing a shot.

Volunteered to Be Human Target.

As his act drew to a close, he warmed up to his big stunt of the evening. He stepped to the front of the platform, asked for a volunteer to put on the headgear. But at the same time, he warned the audience that anyone who did put on the headgear would be doing it at his own risk.

It was Phil's moment to speak up, and earned it Phil wanted to do it. He kept thinking of what would happen if the Frenchman should miss. But suddenly out of a haze, he found himself holding up his hand—crying to the man on the stage that he would volunteer to be his human target.

The Frenchman seemed to look surprised—then he smiled. Phil was ushered to the stage by the Frenchman's assistant seated in a chair over by one of the wings. He was seized to death, but he tried not to look it. Only his heavy breathing betrayed the fact that the inside of him had gone ice-cold and that his heart was pounding so hard that he felt sure it must break through his chest.

Nobody tried to make it any easier for Phil. In fact, it seemed as though they were deliberately trying to scare him out of it. They put a wreath of flowers in his lap—a lily in his hand. The orchestra began playing the Funeral March. The audience laughed. Apparently they were getting a great kick out of it. But Phil wasn't. He hung onto the sides of his chair, fighting off the desire to get out of it. To run off the stage and back to his seat in the orchestra. But always when he thought of quitting, there came before his eyes the picture of those pals of his, sneering and calling him yellow.

Suddenly the orchestra stopped playing. The Frenchman pushed a trunk to the middle of the stage, lay down on his back and began fighting at Phil's head along the barrel of his rifle. A new fear gripped at Phil's heart. He hadn't known the Frenchman was going to shoot at him from any such crazy position.

Found Himself a Hero.

The Frenchman's smile disappeared. His jaw knit, and little veins stood out like ropes in his forehead. There came a sharp crack, and the first little glass ball on Phil's headgear fell to pieces. Another crack—and another. Thus, Phil's courage came back to him. He sat calm and unafraid while the Frenchman shot off the other two balls and came toward him smiling, with outstretched hand.

The theater roared in thunderous applause. Phil suddenly found the spotlight focused on him. He tried to go back to his seat, but again and again he was brought back to take bows. It might have been the big moment of Phil's life, but it wasn't. The real thrill came when the Frenchman stepped forward to make a little speech.

He congratulated Phil on his courage in facing his gun—said it was the bravest thing he had ever seen. And then he made a confession that surprised Phil himself. In all his years on the stage, the Frenchman said, this was the first time anyone had had courage enough to take such a chance. Usually he admitted, nobody volunteered, and he had to use his assistant for his final feat.

And what a look Phil gave his friends down in the front row when the Frenchman said those words!

Soil Contributes to Value of Food

Needed Elements Supplied Through Refertilization

By EDITH M. BARBER

"As the soil is, so are the people," declared Dr. David Lilienthal, at the recent convention of the American Dietetic association. He went on to say that the significance of this fact is just dawning upon the people of this country. Nature has been so generous to us that we have taken for granted that we could take our supply of food without making any return. Of course, in many parts of the country where scientific farming is carried on, the refertilization of the soil is the first thought. One of the most important materials which all living things need can only be supplied through the soil. This is the mineral phosphorus, without an adequate amount of which, our life will deteriorate.

When the soil is deficient in phosphorus, living animals are in bad physical condition and milk yield is low. The United States has within its borders one-third of the world's supply of phosphate rock and when this is available at low cost for the rehabilitation of the land it will be of particular importance to the people of those states where agriculture has suffered because of soil depletion. The milk and egg consumption in the southeastern states has been found to be particularly inadequate. The absence of food essentially in the diet has produced a low condition of health in these regions. "As the soil is, so are the people."

Three Frocks—a Wardrobe

If YOU want to be all set for a full and gay Spring, have these three dresses in your wardrobe. Something for morning something for street and a lovely frock for afternoon parties. All three are easy to make.

Shirtwaist Style.

Tun and tailored, this is the favorite silhouette for Spring. The shirt with kick pleat back and front is fun to wear very comfortable for walking and going about your daily work. Note the yoke top and inverted pleat in back of bodice to permit perfect freedom. It is a grand spectator sports dress and will make up beautifully in silk crepe, rayon print or cotton fabrics.

Fitted Lines for Morning.

You'll feel sweet as sixteen in this pretty square-necked princess dress with fitted lines. The silhouette is molded and slim. Note the pretty sleeves, puffed high, to make the waistline look even smaller. Choose a pretty cotton print or one of the new rayons to make a dress as charming as the one shown.

Fitted Lines for Afternoon.

Look lovely and picturesque in this frock on moded lines with uplift at the waist and soft shirring in front of bodice. The roll collar and low V neckline is very slenderizing. You'll enjoy the good lines, the flattery of this dress and its grand wearability. Whether it is a luncheon for six or a dinner at eight, you'll be correctly dressed in this frock.

The Patterns
1076 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50.

On the Highway

Probably the worst fault in driving a car is believing you haven't any fault.

The dullest drivers usually have the brightest headlights. Many a woman thinks she can drive as well as a man, and, too often, it's the sad, sad truth.

It isn't so funny to be a crazy driver as it is crazy to be a funny driver.

Less automobile horn blowing—and more responsibility. Kisses may shorten life, says a physician. Especially when you snatch them while driving a car.

TIPS to Gardeners

Know Your Soil

A GARDENER who knows the quality and texture of his soil can get maximum returns from his garden.

Clayey soils require careful handling, but are productive. Sandy soils are early. Sandy loams are just about ideal for most home garden crops.

Peas, lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, beets, radish and onion like moderately cool, moist conditions during development. Plant them early so they will develop before the extreme heat of summer arrives.

Plant them again later, timing the planting so they will mature during the cool, moist fall months.

Sweet corn, beans, tomato, pepper, egg plant, cucumber, melons, squash and pumpkin are not as hardy as those listed above and prefer plenty of heat, sunlight and ample moisture for best development.

They should be planted later than peas, lettuce and carrots, so as to come into maturity during the warmest weeks of summer.

ARE YOU ONLY A 3/4 WIFE?

Most men never understand a three-quarter wife. A wife who is loyal for three months of the month but a half-out the fourth. His mother how you best know an mother how bestly your nerves scream—can't take it just on your husband. For three generations our women have told another how to go "mending through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus keeping the dependent from the financial center which women must own. Make a note NOW to get a bottle of Pinkham's today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist. Be sure that a medicine woman has written in letters reporting benefit. Why not LYDIA E. Poets' Corner Memorial

The Poets' corner in Westminster abbey became a memorial to men of letters because its first tomb was that of Chaucer. He was buried there not because he was a poet but because he was clerk of the Works at Westminster. His tomb stands beneath a stained-glass window of scenes from the "Canterbury Tales." A small Genius holds the medallion honoring the poet John Gay, and on it is the following inscription by Gay himself: "Life is a jest; and all things show it; I thought so once, but now I know it."

Where Iguana Lives

The large iguana lives chiefly in the tops of trees overhanging streams in Central and South America and the West Indies. When frightened it jumps into the water, where it remains for some time before venturing out.

The Name "Leroy"

The name "Leroy," or "LeRoy," of old French origin, is translated "the king" and may also mean "royal." It is comparatively new, not long in use as a given name.

Barnum's Will

In his will Barnum disposed of an estate of four million dollars and made a careful provision for the perpetuation of his name. Since he had no sons, he provided that his grandson, C. H. Sealey, should receive $25,000 besides his share in the estate, if he would change his name to C. Barnum Sealey, "so that the name of Barnum shall always be known as his name." Provision had already been made for the continuation of the name of "Barnum & Bailey" as circus proprietors for fifty years from October 28, 1887.

"No Man's Land" in Switzerland

Until quite recently there was a "no man's land" in Switzerland. A small triangular acreage was set aside more than 100 years ago as a refuge for "wayfarers" without a country.

Early Irish Prayer Custom

The custom of praying with the arms extended like a cross was particularly well known to the early Irish, both as an ordinary private devotion and as imposed as a penance.

Bees' Ancient Rookies Face 2nd Year Jinx

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY
CAN Jim Turner and Lou Fette, the Boston Bees' "graybeard rookies," escape the second year jinx that baffles so many baseball sophomores after a sensational first year performance?

Jim Turner is a Milkman During Winter Months.

Jim the same as they upset the tradition that minor league veterans can't make good in the big leagues. Getting their first big-league trial after more than a decade in the minors, these astonishing veterans each won 20 games for Boston in 1937, or more than Fireball Van Lente Mingo has ever won in a single season.

Baseball Fatalists

Neither pitcher expects to duplicate his 1937 performance, for they are baseball realists and know that bad breaks, poor support, injuries and any one of a number of things can turn the tide against them. But they don't expect to have a poor season. They think they have a better chance of getting by the jinx than lots of young fellows because of their experience, maturity, attention to keeping in condition and their complete lack of overconfidence.

Age Creeps On

After they passed the age of twenty-five, they began to be resigned, but kept plugging along anyway. Scouts who might happen to see them pitch would say: "They're good bushers, but not big time caliber. Too old. Not enough zip."

Here and There

IRVING BUMP HADLEY, former White Sox pitcher, who was with the Yankees last year, appears to be the American League's official photographer. Syracuse University has added bowling to its list of varsity sports.

Undergraduates bowled a total of 50,000 games at the university last year. Bill Monehan, former University of California graduate manager, is in charge of concessions and exhibits for the 1938 Golden Gate exposition in California.

Max Schmeling's weight of 192 1/2 pounds for his recent match with Ben Foord in Hamburg was his lightest since he was knocked out by Joe Louis in Yankee stadium nearly two years ago. He was at 182 that night.

Home to Big Ten

Returning to the Big Ten conference for the third time, Herbert O. "Fritz" Crisler takes the job of football coach and assistant director of athletics at the University of Michigan, left vacant when Harry Kipke was fired, a while back.

Crisler came first to the conference as a gangling, round-shouldered kid at the University of Chicago about the close of the World war. He hadn't played football in high school but he soon showed he could do it in college. He became a star end and will be remembered for his play in the epic Princeton-Chicago games of the early twenties.

Next he was an assistant coach at Chicago under A. A. Stagg. Then he became head coach at Minnesota, winning conference titles, six years ago Princeton signed him. The Tiger football fortunes were in the doldrums.

Under his six-year tutelage Princeton won 35 games, lost nine and tied five. Two of his Princeton teams went undefeated, in 1933 and again in 1935, each eleven winning nine straight games.

Crisler will be assistant director of athletics at Michigan. The supposition is that he will succeed Fielding H. Yost, when that veteran of sixty-seven retires three years hence at the age of seventy.

Incidentally, the Big Ten to which Crisler is returning, recently celebrated its forty-second birthday. In 1896 the appointed faculty representatives of seven large midwestern universities met for the first time as the organization which today stands as a leader of 73 similar college alliances scattered throughout the United States.

Institute of Golf

Robert T. "Bobby" Jones, Jr., lawyer and golfer supreme, has added another title to his distinguished list. He is director of the recently launched American Golf Institute.

The Institute, as Bobby explains it, will serve as a "clearing house for all kinds of information relating to the game of golf." And the "grand slam" king emphasized the words "all kinds."

APPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 27 MEASURING A MAN'S WORTH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:1-17. GOLDEN TEXT—How much man is a man of more value than a sheep?—Matthew 12:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Wants to Be a Man. JUNIOR TOPIC—What Is a Man Worth? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Are I Worth? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Fellow People Before Profit.

Awful is the scene that meets us as we go with our Lord across the sea of Galilee and draw up to the shore of the country of the Gadarenes. Distressing beyond words is the plight of the man who is under the power of a legion of the demons of Satan; inspiring is the assurance that Christ is victor over the devil and his hosts; soul-searching is the disappointing picture of the men as they evaluate their brother's spiritual need over against personal gain.

The same mighty conflict between the two great spiritual kingdoms, of good and evil, God and Satan, goes on in our day. Jesus Christ is still "greater" than he that is in the world" (I John 4:4). Equally true is it that we must each one of us choose what is to be our attitude toward the conflict, and especially toward the Christ.

I. The Power of Satan (vv. 1-5). Foolish men sometimes speak boldly about Satan as though he were only a weakling, or perchance but a creature of legend.

The devil, who is but one being, operates through many evil spirits, or demons. They are everywhere active, and it appears from Scripture that they seek a physical body through which they may function. Demon-possession, which was so common in our Lord's day, still exists, especially on the mission field. There are some who believe that the almost unbelievable cunning and brazen wickedness of modern gangsters is an expression of demoniacal control.

The text graphically portrays what becomes of a poor soul who has gotten into the clutches of Satan. It is a dark and terrifying picture known to us even in this year of 1938. But, thank God, there is a way of deliverance.

II. The Victory of Christ (vv. 6-13).

The command of Jesus (v. 8) evidently preceded the cry of the demons (v. 7). Notice that the demons who hated our Lord had no doubts about His being the Son of God. They knew Him. How strange it is that many voices that deny His deity come from the pulpit, the professor's chair, or over the radio, in the name of Christianity!

The demons knew His power, also, for though they adjured Him not to torment them, they realized that they must obey His command to "come out of the man." They asked permission to enter the swine.

III. The Perversity of Man (vv. 14-17).

The keepers of the swine fled to tell the owners. They and others came to see what had happened. They saw the demoniac seated, clothed and in his right mind, "and they greatly rejoiced and magnified the name of the Lord." Did they? No, indeed! "They were afraid" (v. 15), "and they began to pray him to depart" (v. 17).

Why were they afraid? Two reasons are suggested. In the first place they wanted no spiritual activity that would interfere with their business. Swine were of more value in their sight than the liberation of demon-possessed men: They have their successors in our day. Such are the men who rent their buildings for taverns and dance halls because they want money. Akin to them are those who counsel against the expenditure of money to keep the church open, the Sunday school operating, and for the sending of missionaries into fields white unto harvest.

A tract entitled "Suppose" asks the pertinent and searching question, "Suppose I were offered $10,000 for every soul I led to Christ; would that impel me to do more than I now do because of the constraining love of Christ?"

Another reason for their fear was that they did not want to be disturbed in their state of spiritual somnolence. Someone has said that the reason the church of our day does not have a revival is because it doesn't want it. If revival fires began to burn crooked things would have to be made straight, worldliness would have to be put away, the pursuit of money would have to be set aside while men sought souls.

Careful Planning

Just the difference in the way the two men use their heads makes the difference in the way they conduct their business. Misdirected, systemless work will make any business management ineffective, while careful planning, simple, effective system, will aid even moderate ability to accomplish vast results.

Repentance

To grieve over sin is one thing, to repent is another.—Robertson.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

If You Are Making a Crazy Patch Quilt.

MAKING an old fashioned silk crazy patch quilt is a simply fascinating thing to do. From the moment you start collecting bits of silk and satin and velvet until the second you invent your last combination of embroidery stitches it holds your interest.

This type of quilt is not quilted after piecing, but tied like a comforter. No padding is needed if soft warm material is used for the foundation. The pieces are always in irregular shapes—often very tiny and the largest is seldom more than four or five inches long. They are pinned or basted to a foundation of soft muslin, flannel or an old wool blanket is good to use.

The embroidery is really used to give balance and unity to the whole design. If a patch seems too light make it darker by embroidering it in dark thread. If it seems too plain you can trace the little forget-me-not design shown here onto it and embroider it in natural colors or use some of the more simple designs shown here as fillers.

Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are in a new leaflet which is now included with the book offered herewith. This book also tells you how the draperies in today's sketch are interlined.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room;

MEXICAN RADIO STATIONS

Well, what are you gonna do about it, as Jim Farley says. We don't listen to the broadcasts from there at all, but we can't help but notice the interference from these super-powered radio stations when we try to get a fine National or Columbia program. These high-powered stations have no set wave length or definite place to get them on the dial, and cause much annoyance.

A MEDICINE SHOW

That's what these Mex. radio programs remind me of, quoting a well-known Hondo subscriber. The doctor reminds me that 'there isn't any hope'— why just listening to him will convince the majority of men that their ailment they have (or ought to have) is attributed to a malady peculiar to mankind.
