Samuel F. Miller

News reached here Wednesday from Long Beach, Calif., of the death of one of our esteemed former neighbors, Samuel F. Miller, which will come as a sad message to the many friends of the Miller family.

Mr. Miller was a veteran in several fraternal societies and also a retired employee of the Southern Pacific railway company, with which corporation he served for many years, with a remarkable record for reliable service.

In fraternal circles, he was a Past Worshipful Master of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., and a Past Grand in Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., being a member of the last named organization for the past 47 years. He was 78 years of age and had always been a trustworthy and useful man.

After his retirement with the railroad company, some six years ago, he went to Long Beach and purchased a home, where he resided until his death. The remains were interred at Long Beach and the services conducted by the Masonic fraternity of that city. He leaves a widow and a few close relatives in the east, the names of whom, we cannot recall at this writing and to all of whom, the sympathy of our community is tendered.

W. S. Armstrong of Coyote was a business visitor in town the latter part of last week.

Much fun is being poked at Senator Huey Long—but he is the only man who has ever had the guts to fight the cotton trust — and he will eventually break up the solid south.

Mrs. Marshall St. John and the children left for Las Cruces last Sunday morning to spend the holiday season with relatives.

About two weeks ago, Sabino Vidaurri, east side merchant, missed his flock of nineteen turkeys from his farm in the highlands and had given them up for lost, when one day this week, he got a telephone call from a neighbor that a flock of turkeys had strayed into his place and he had just found out that they belonged to him. Sabino paid his neighbor for the upkeep of the gobblers and had them driven back to their home. Some turkeys were lucky this Thanksgiving.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor were in Roswell last week and spent Thanksgiving with their son, who is attending the Roswell Military Institute.

There was a gathering in the form of a family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley on Thanksgiving Day, when they had as their guests, their daughter Ruth, who is attending the Vocational School at El Paso, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Davis, Mrs. Davis being teacher of vocational printing at the school, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hendren and Frank Thompson. Messrs. Davis and Thompson are Mrs. Kelley's nephews and Mrs. Hendren is her niece. After Thanksgiving, the Hendren and Davis folks left for their homes and Miss Ruth remained over for the week-end, returning to El Paso Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jenkins were here the latter part of last week, after coming from the race tracks at different places in Texas, where their horses carried away all of the big prizes that were awarded. They will take the horses to California where they will run on the principal race courses and we predict the same measure of success as they had in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton were here Monday from their ranch and farm near Oscura. The Thorntons raised some nice fruit on their place last summer for which they had a ready sale.

Mrs. Ernest Dingwall of Tucumcari came up last Saturday, spent Sunday with her aunt, Mrs. Georgia Davis and other relatives and friends, returning home Monday.

Mrs. Bert Pfingsten was here from Hondo Monday, attending a meeting of the County Board of Education of which she is a member.

Huey Long makes the announcement that he will be a candidate for the presidency in 1936. Why not? Talk about the early bird catching the worm — well; Huey had a 'brilliant' idea at 3 in the morning, and woke up his secretary to put the idea into action.

Mrs. Luella Counts was here from Hondo Tuesday, visiting her sister, Mrs. Lucille Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Garrard received word the first of the week from Abilene, Texas, to the effect that Mrs. Garrard's brother, Jim Wall, was accidentally killed in a hotel at that place last Friday night. The message bore no particulars and inside information will follow. Mrs. Garrard will have the sympathy of our community in her bereavement.

Saturnino Chavez of Ziegler Brothers Store was confined to his home for several days this week on account of illness.

Dear Santa:

Will you please bring me a tricycle, a doll and a pair of bedroom slippers? Also bring lots of candy and nuts for myself and my brothers. Please don't fail to bring them.

Affectionately yours,

Pattern 1752
For the little girl who wears cotton frocks all year round, this design will be charming in a sturdy bright gingham, but the little ruffle will set beautifully in wool as well. Challis is a nice material for a little girl's dress, since it has a slight additional warmth and it washes beautifully. The ruffle at the edge of the yoke is not indispensable, as the back view shows. Any child who wears this frock will look at least an inch taller than she is, because of the long unbroken front panel—and little girls, like their mothers, have a yen for that, these days. Wheat Smuggling New Border Worry

WHY GO TO COLLEGE?

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Patrol Overworked on North Dakota Boundary.

Fargo, N. D.—A new form of an ancient and often romantic criminal activity—smuggling, recently uncovered in a little North Dakota town near the Canadian border, is engaging the concentrated attention of an overworked border patrol. A secret investigation disclosed to government agents that within a few months 100,000 bushels of wheat had been smuggled into this country from Canada. The reason for the illegal operation was a chance to profit on high prices for wheat resulting from the processing tax. One man, operator of a grain elevator, has been arrested and is accused as a ringleader of the plot. Fourteen others, farmers and laborers, have pleaded guilty to the charge made against them, smuggling the grain.

farmers and laborers who pleaded guilty was deferred. The men admitted either taking part in the actual grain smuggling operations or having a part in the conspiracy. All of the smuggling transactions took place in Tower county, North Dakota, near the Canadian border. Most of the smuggled wheat was marketed in the towns of Hansboro and Ellsberry. Mr. Lanier said that the government's investigation of the wheat smuggling conspiracy would result in 25 criminal prosecutions and in added vigilance on the part of the customs patrol. This service already is responsible for stopping many other forms of smuggling—an activity which officials admit never has been completely checked.

With the return of autumn many young people have resumed their studies in our colleges and universities. In spite of the "hard times" the number enrolling for the freshmen classes is surprisingly large. We frequently hear the question, asked in all seriousness, how is it possible for so large a number of graduates to "land a job?" The question implies that the ultimate purpose of an education is obtaining a job. Is this a correct assumption? What is the purpose of an education? Why go to college?

A hasty survey of the facts reveal that a very large number of persons holding responsible positions in the business world never saw the inside of a college building. It is also true that many persons holding college degrees are absolute failures in the economic world. Two partners in an important industry experimented with their pet

Fourteen Plead Guilty.
United States District Attorney P. W. Lanier, in charge of the prosecution, said the government plans also to proceed against all elevators shown to have purchased smuggled wheat. Punishment for conviction of violating the tariff act is a sentence up to two years in prison and a fine up to $5,000.

Smuggling Centuries Old.
At every port of entry and along every international boundary line smugglers have piled their trade for centuries. Because it is the first on record, the North Dakota wheat smuggling case is of extraordinary interest, but otherwise it is merely another instance of an ancient illicit trade. The United States and every other commercially important nation have been faced with a startling increase in smuggling since the World War. During the prohibition era the problem was made a thousandfold more complex for the authorities of this country, but illegal liquor was only one of the items brought secretly across our borders. In 1920 and for several years thereafter one of the gravest problems of our border patrols was in stamping out the smuggling of aliens. At one time it was estimated that for every foreigner who entered this country legally, one and sometimes two were smuggled in illegally. Stories of this form of smuggling were sensational in the extreme. The smugglers who dealt in human beings were, and are, for the most part ruthless cutthroats, whose only concern is the money they get from their "clients"; what happens to the latter is of little interest to the smugglers.

Tables Turn, Older Men Now Get Jobs!

Cleveland, Ohio.—The old complaint of older men that "young fellows always get the preference" when jobs are given out has given way to the exact opposite. That was the conclusion reached here by Y. M. C. A. officials after an employment survey of the city. Those making the survey reported that the older men are now being given first choice. Reasons given by employers for the change in the trend were listed as follows: The fear that young men may be radical; the desire for older and experienced men, and the difficulty of training youths who never have had steady jobs.

theories. The one employed a college trained man, the other, one who had only a high school course. Both were given the same task to perform. The one with the limited preparation won over the college man four to one. The college-trained man developed an ego complex in his college days which placed him at a great disadvantage in the daily marts of trade. The high school trained man had developed confidence and assurance, due no doubt to the fact, he was compelled to work his way through his limited course of study.

Why go to college? Not for the purpose of a degree and certainly not for a job, but rather in order to obtain that discipline of mind and body which enables a man to hold a job when he gets it. Without this discipline education may become more of a curse than a blessing. With night schools offering professional courses and with the advantage afforded by correspondence courses, no young person need be deprived the privilege of an education, even though he may not have the time or money to go to college. If he be enrolled as a student in a college let him see to it: that he learns not only the facts of his chosen field, but also, how to use these facts in contacts with other people after he leaves college. "With all thy wisdom get understanding," said the wise man of old.

The Household
By Lydia La Baron Walker

It Is Easy to Note the Beauty of Curved Lines in This Fine Old Stairway.

FRONT stairs have always been one of the decorative architectural features of a house. Winding stairs are the most graceful because a curve is the line of beauty. In early American mansions curved or circular stairways were in high favor. Sometimes there would be two such staircases one above the other mounting up from the first to second story, and then from second to third with a break in the ascent on the second floor for the stretch of hall. This led to a position just above where the first stairway began and here the second staircase started.

back stairs or those which serve for both back and front stairs from second to third floors. These box stairways have no decorative merit whatsoever. They are purely practical. This is their redeeming feature. In some old farmhouses, such stairs were built in order to conserve heat on the lower floor. It will be noted, however, that even in those old dwellings in which there is any attempt at architectural beauty, there are open front stairs leading from tiny front halls, which halls are scarcely more than vestibules. There are doors at right and left of the stairs. These lead into living rooms.

Stairway and Air Currents.
In many houses one flight of stairs comes above another in the main hallway. However this arrangement has its drawbacks as houses built on such a plan have difficulties to contend with in heating. Warm air rises, and the heat is partial to the top floor, to the detriment of the warmth of lower ones. This was one of the chief reasons for many home builders not having the circular open staircases as described, and having stairs to the third floor either enclosed or positioned elsewhere in the house. Speaking of enclosed staircases, they are not put in fine houses except for

Staircases With Landings.
Stairways with landings are favored. These break the climb without interfering with the ornamental appearance. In fact this is accented decidedly when a broad landing has a window from which there is a good view, or which lets in sunlight. Sometimes where such a landing is broad, a chair or settee is on it where one can rest, or sit and enjoy the view. Such landings are favorite places for grandfather's clocks. Sometimes where there is enough space, stairways branch to right and left about halfway up, and enter the second floor from both sides of a hall.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The smoke of battle has cleared away sufficiently since the election to permit of an analysis and already there is a general conclusion discernible as to two things:

Election Analysis

(1) The Republican party must undergo a complete reorganization, a complete elimination of the old line leaders and the assumption of power by virulent forward looking men and women of the newer generations.

(2) President Roosevelt, accorded the greatest vote of confidence ever given a Chief Executive, is confronted with the greatest responsibility ever laid on the lap of one individual in the history of this nation.

Thus, there can be no doubt, according to astute judges, that Mr. Roosevelt and his administration are in real danger because he has too many blind followers. It seems to be generally agreed among political leaders and observers—that is, all political leaders excepting those who refuse to believe a change has come—that the Republican party went into the recent campaign and finished that campaign without any kind of a program. Some critics are saying that Henry P. Fletcher, the Republican national chairman, is to blame. I do not find that criticism supported generally. But in politics some one always must be the goat and apparently Mr. Fletcher is to be made the goat by those Republicans who have been unable or unwilling "to take it."

Mr. Fletcher and his co-workers, Senator Hastings of Delaware, and Representative Bolton of Ohio, are known to have pulled back in their criticisms of the administration. The consensus seems to be, however, that this alone was not sufficient to have resulted in the overwhelming defeat which the party suffered. It was, rather, an entire lack of definite proposals from the Republican leadership, and throughout the country, according to well authenticated information, the younger crowd of Republicans was apathetic. They had nothing to encourage them and nothing to offer in argument in the place of the things the New Deal was preaching.

In some quarters it is emphatically insisted that the New Dealers, theories and all, amounted to a light in the dismal darkness of the economic depression. This school of thought argues that it does not matter whether success has crowned the President's recovery efforts. He at least has maintained a forward-appearing movement and in the absence of anything constructive from the other side, a people down-trodden and with resources exhausted look to him with a hope which they could not pin to any other flag staff.

But, as said above, Mr. Roosevelt has his problems. They are more dangerous than when he took office.

President's Problems

With more than a two-thirds majority in each house of congress, the President, it is held generally, must guard himself against too many friends. The two-thirds majority always has been regarded as a fine asset for an administration in forcing through legislation where it is necessary to apply a gag rule. This is particularly true in the house of representatives which has a tendency to become a maelstrom on too many occasions. Many new members, embued with the idea of a New Deal mandate, will swallow the President's legislative proposals without question. History shows this to be a most dangerous condition for the Chief Executive. He has no opposition to call attention to mistakes, weaknesses, or vulnerable spots in the programs which he offers.

One official, and a rather high official at that, suggested the other day that he was in favor of "organizing" an opposition bloc in the house and senate. It was his conviction that if there were critics among the Democrats, they would constitute something of a leadership for the Republican minority and that, by these two groups, valuable criticism of administration policies would be available. All through the last session of congress numerous conservative Democrats, mainly from the South, were working under cover to hold the brain trust programs within bounds. Many of the senators, and representatives as well, went about their work quietly but none the less effectively and, I think it is conceded by most persons in a position to know, that these men kept the New Deal from going too far to the left.

Ultra-Radical in Threat

One other phase of the Roosevelt problem deserves consideration. The campaign showed a number of men seeking election on the Democratic ticket to have ideas far beyond the New Deal program. In fact some of them are ultra-radical. Observers here contend that Mr. Roosevelt is faced with a genuine threat from these personages. In other words, it appears to be within the realm of possibility that he will have to swerve somewhat to the right to insure victory for the policies in which he believes. Legislation always is by compromise. If the President does not desire to go so far to the radical side he may be forced to support certain more conservative propositions in order that when the radical group makes demands, he can make concessions to them and accomplish the ends sought.

This conjecture, of course, is predicated upon the frequently heard condition that the radical bloc will be larger in congress than heretofore and that they will assert themselves. The President's ability to meet this condition obviously will be tested, but there are many observers who say that the President is the best-tight-rope walker the country ever has seen.

Looking into the future, it seems perfectly safe to say that the realignment of parties has taken greater strides than most observers thought possible when Mr. Roosevelt was proposing the New Deal in the 1932 campaign. It was perfectly patent then and became more apparent as he took office, as I reported to you at that time, that Mr. Roosevelt was building a party of his own.

Sees Break-Up of 'Solid South'

I heard a Washington political writer, a man of forty years' experience, say the other day that it was not impossible for a break-up of the "solid South" to occur within the next six years. He envisioned withdrawal of the conservative South from any party that tied closely into the liberal or radical groups that dominate the Middle West and the Rocky Mountain areas. He presented a picture rather new in the political scene in that it seemed to suggest the possibility of an alignment of the East against the Middle West and the far western sections of the country.

The thought was expressed with two factors in mind. It was pointed out that the bulk of the territory east of the Mississippi river is based in manufacturing industries. In that territory are many large and medium sized cities. Their interests are different than those west of the Mississippi. The condition resolves the question into one of economics.

The second factor to be considered is the fact that the so-called solid South is inherently conservative. That links with the great manufacturing sections of the country. If Mr. Roosevelt has succeeded or does succeed in creating his own party, under whatever name it may eventually be known, this Washington observer told me he foresees gradual "defection" of southern Democrats and their alignment with manufacturing interests in a conservative party.

History shows that such developments as are pictured in the above prediction are very slow. Notwithstanding the rapid changes that have come since Mr. Roosevelt became President it is unreasonable to suppose that accomplishment of an entire political party revolution can be accomplished in time to affect the result of the 1936 Presidential election. Some students of politics maintain, however, that the development will have been sufficient by 1936 to wield some influence.

From all of the discussion I hear at this time the result in 1936 will be dependent upon whether there has been complete recovery and whether federal money holds out that long. There are few with whom I have talked who disagree with the premise that withdrawal of federal aid, for relief or otherwise, can be accomplished without important political reactions.

This is the story of a man whose name many of you have seen engraved in stone on many post offices throughout the United States. It is the story of a man who grew up in government service and who is now retiring to the rest and recreation which 40 years of government service certainly entitles him.

At the end of this month, James A. Wetmore will close his desk at the treasury where he has served since 1915 as acting supervising architect and from which office he has directed the greatest public building program ever undertaken by any government. Mr. Wetmore is seventy-one years old and he says that he is going to enjoy the rest of his life at play but he always hastens to explain that he has enjoyed nearly every day of the work he has been doing.

It was almost half a century ago that Mr. Wetmore accepted a job as a stenographer in the treasury. From the day in 1885 when he began work there, his rise has been steady and his ability constantly recognized. Thus it came about that when Oscar Wenderoth resigned in 1915 Mr. Wetmore was asked "to fill in for awhile." That "awhile" stretched over a period of 19 years during which Mr. Wetmore persisted in his refusal of the office of supervising architect. You will note wherever his name appears graven on the corner stone of a post office that there is the word "acting" before the rest of the title. The reason is simple. Mr. Wetmore is not an architect and never has been.

Thus a career officially ends, a career about which few of his countrymen knew. While his name appears on hundreds of corner stones, he participated in the ceremonies of the laying of only one. That was at Bath, N. Y., his birthplace. And that is the one corner stone of which he is proud.

Must Use Care in Storing Potatoes

Unsound Condition of Tubers May Lead to Loss and Disappointment.

By Prof. Ora Smith, New York State College of Agriculture—WNU Service.

A poor storage place may completely ruin a crop of first class potatoes, but the best storage will not make unsound potatoes into marketable ones. To store wet or muddy, unripe, badly-bruised, cut, skinned, diseased, frosted, or otherwise unsound tubers, leads to loss and disappointment. Both moisture and temperature can be controlled by ventilation in a properly constructed storage.

Growers of potatoes in New York state suffer greater losses from high temperatures than from freezing. A storage temperature between 86 and 40 degrees Fahrenheit is recommended as the best for potatoes. Below 38 degrees the tubers develop a sweet taste which is undesirable in market stock but does not injure the seed stock. Potatoes will not freeze at temperatures above 2 degrees. They sprout at about 40 degrees.

When first placed in storage, potatoes should have all possible ventilation as long as there is no danger of freezing. This ventilation lowers the temperature and helps to remove the moisture brought in from the field and also that given off by the tubers in curing. If this moisture is not removed, the pile sweats, and rots often develop. Enough ventilation should be provided during the winter to keep the potatoes dry.

Silage Prized as Winter Feed for the Lamb Flock

Shrewd feeders, and especially those who have plenty of silage available, will be the ones most likely to cash in on the favorable outlook for lambs during the coming winter, according to W. G. Kammlade, assistant chief in sheep husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. Feed costs will be high and profits will be eaten up unless the lambs are fed to gain fast, he pointed out. Rapid gains generally are cheap gains, as they mean good use of feed and a quick improvement in the condition of the lambs.

"Feed costs will be a much more important item in the expense and returns of lamb feeding this season than was the case a year ago. Roughages, especially hays, will cost much more, and all grains have so advanced that it will not be so easy to get a margin over feed costs."

"Silage is a relatively cheap feed and may be used as the only roughage for fattening lambs." If it is properly supplemented to make up for the lack of protein and minerals. When legumes hay is not fed in addition to the silage, it is essential that a protein-concentrate such as soy bean oil meal, egg-tanned meal or linseed meal be included in the ration. Likewise, some simple mineral supplement should be spread over the silage. About one-fourth pound of the protein supplement daily for each lamb is usually enough."

Pretty, but Evil

The wild morning glory may add a bit of pleasing color to the fields, particularly along boundary fences, but its innocent appearance cloaks its real damage. The plant is of the same general family as the sweet potato and thus serves to harbor the weevil, which attacks the sweet potato and does great damage if left uncontrolled. In order to eliminate the weevil it is necessary to clean fields thoroughly after the harvest and also rout out the morning glories in order to deprive the weevil of a host between growing seasons of the vegetable.

May Try Desert Grass

If grasslands can survive for thousands of years on the edge of the Gobi desert in central Asia, despite severe droughts, heavy pasturing and wide variations in temperature, why should not grasses of the same species be helpful in rebuilding the depleted range lands of western United States? With this thought in view the United States Department of Agriculture is planning an Asiatic expedition to study conditions in the Gobi region and obtain specimens of grasses with which to experiment in western drought-besieged territories.

Agricultural Notes

Crops in Sweden this year are reported as "generally excellent."

Nearly 300,000 tons of cotton were grown in Brazil this year.

Unchilled meats must be rushed into the cooler and cans right after killing.

Good silage may be made as late as midwinter if approximately an equal weight of water and stover are put in the silo.

Corn stover silage is worth ton for ton about two-thirds as much as normal corn silage.

Cleaning out dirt in stores of potatoes before they are stored for the winter helps prevent sprouting and rotting.

Agronomists point out that early spring pasture growth may be encouraged by allowing 8 to 5 inches of growth during the fall and fertilizing with a nitrogenous fertilizer early next spring.

School in the Sky
The headmaster of a Dutch school has conceived the brilliant idea of using an air liner to teach geography. Instead of trooping dolefully into their classroom, the children now eagerly take their seats in the airplane, each with a map beside him and a pair of earphones. While the flight is in progress, the geography master, sitting before a microphone in the fore part of the cabin, points out and explains the features of the countryside below, and the pupils check his remarks on their maps. A prearranged section of the Netherlands is taken with each flight. The children, it is found, absorb their lessons with 20 times the enthusiasm shown on the ground.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Take a Look Abroad

Critics of the American form of government, who have grown more numerous and vocal than usual during the past five years, might find it easier to convince the American people that revolutionary changes are necessary if it were not for the examples of Europe.

There, since the war, almost every conceivable 'ism' has been tried. With the exception of a few countries, democracy has been thrown overboard as being worthless and outdone. And here are some of the results:

Italy is under the rule of an iron-handed dictator who has abrogated the freedom of action and freedom of the press. Under his direction, it is true, great material progress has been made—at the expense of almost all the individual and corporate liberties for which the great Italian liberators fought.

Germany exists under a similar, but much more ruthless dictatorship. Party government has disappeared. When election time comes, the German people have the 'privilege' of voting either yes or no on the proposition of whether they like the present Reich leader or not. Those who vote no, are very likely to find themselves dispossessed residents of concentration camps before the week rolls around. Newspapers can publish nothing without government permission; the slightest criticism of the existing regime is sufficient to cause the suspension of a publication and imprisonment of its editors.

In Russia, a different 'ism' obtains, but conditions are almost precisely like those in Germany. A ruthless secret police has innumerable spies at work in the country and anyone who expresses disapproval of the Stalin government may soon start as a prisoner on a long trek to Siberia. One wonders what those who scoff at fundamental Americanism would like to give in exchange for the liberties we now enjoy?—Industrial News Review.

Gay Colors Are Doffed by Armies of Big Powers

France Last Nation to Discard Bright Uniforms.

Washington.—War sheds its last domino. French officials have recently decided that members of the French artillery were proud figures but easy targets in sky-blue uniforms.

Khaki Fav to Color.

British, Belgian, Polish, and Japanese soldiers in khaki uniforms which blend with the American soldiers wear a drab. Germany's uniforms are field gray, tan, and gray; those of Switzerland, Italy and the Netherlands, gray green to blend with fields and woods.

"Uniforms are worn for many reasons beside that of avoiding detection. One of their chief uses is the apparent concealment of being a means of identification.

"In the Revolution, before the New England troops acquired uniforms, there was much confusion because officers couldn't be distinguished from privates. Orders from headquarters made differentiation possible by making field officers wear red or pink cockades in their hats.

"That uniforms provide one of the easiest means of picking certain people out of masses is demonstrated by the ubiquitous use of them for waitresses.

shop clerks, ushers, messenger boys, and many other workers.

Badge of Authority.

"Uniforms, as every one knows, have a strong psychological effect on holders. Football coaches have demoralized the opposing team's morale by merely sending on the field a hundred reserves in uniform, suggesting unlimited strength, or a player in a light track suit, suggesting speed and fearlessness.

"Shakos, busbys and other formidable tall caps were probably invented to add height to soldiers and make them more impressive.

"Prior to the Revolution, frontiersmen gained quite a reputation for marksmanship. In the war, Washington advocated that all Continental troops wear hunting costumes with fringed tunics, leggings, and large powderhorns, so that the British would judge members of each encountered detachment frontiersmen, and consequently good shots.

"The uniforms of surgeons, nurses, mariners, chauffeurs, and policemen inspire the public to place added confidence in their skill or authority. Policemen have been distinguished by uniforms from early days. One of the first uniformed groups of policemen in England were known as 'Robin Redbreasts,' from their red waistcoats.

"England is a great country for uniforms. She provides them for everyone from the gentleman usher of the black rod to his majesty's swan keeper; from judges in wigs and black velvet suits to her famous Horse Guards at Whitehall, in their dazzling metal cuirasses and helmets with flowing horsehair crests.

Ohio Airman Puts in Really Busy Day

Monroe, Ohio.—Alonso Mescham "went places" in one day recently. At 10 a. m. he took off from an air field at Conneaut, near here, took another pilot to Erie, Pa., nearly thirty miles east, then took a passenger to New Orleans via St. Louis.

He returned to Toledo to Ahtabula, Ohio, 15 miles west of here, whence he was brought to Conneaut by another pilot. He was back here at 10 p. m. the same day, and appeared that night on the grange program. Mescham is a member of the United States naval reserve air service.

Lesson for December 2

THE CHRISTIAN AS A WITNESS

LESSON TEXT—I Thessalonians 1:1-10. GOLDEN TEXT—But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing our Stories of Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Sharing the Good News of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Good News We Have to Tell. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Witnessing for Christ.

I. Paul's Greeting (v. 1). In this salutation Paul associates with himself Silas and Timothy. Silas was with him at the founding of the church, and Timothy was the special messenger sent unto them, upon whose report this letter is based (3:1, 2).

In this epistle he sets forth the peculiar position of the safety of the church. It is "in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ." Knowledge of the absolute security of the believer in Christ makes him courageous to meet trials and opposition. Two features characterize this greeting. "Grace be unto you and peace." "Grace" expresses God's attitude toward them; "peace," the resultant experience in their lives.

II. Paul's Thanksgiving (vv. 2, 3).

This "thanksgiving" issues from the remembrance of three outstanding facts, concerning the Thessalonians, which constitute the foundation facts of normal Christian experience.

1. "Work of Faith." This relates to their belief of the gospel which brought them into living relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ, and also to their Christian activity growing out of their faith. Jesus Christ said in answer to the question "What must we do that we may work the works of God?" "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent" (John 6:28, 29).

2. "Labor of Love." This means the spirit by which they performed their Christian duties. It was the expression of the new law of life issuing from the enthronement of Jesus Christ in their hearts.

3. "Patience of Hope." This refers to the strength of their endurance growing out of their expectation of the speedy return of the Lord. The transcendent theme of Paul's preaching at Thessalonica was the second coming of Christ (Acts 17:7).

III. The Reasons for Paul's Thanksgiving (vv. 4-7).

1. Their election of God (vv. 4, 5). Their reception of the gospel was the unmistakable evidence of their divine selection. The gospel came in power and in the Holy Spirit. They did not receive the gospel in mere theory, but in the power of the Holy Ghost. Where it is received, the consequent life will manifest itself.

2. They received Paul as a messenger of God (v. 6). The reception of the gospel is largely determined by the kind of preacher. Its reality will be detected in the life of the messenger.

3. The changed life of the Thessalonians (v. 7). They "became followers"—that is, their lives were changed by the power of the gospel. The order in Christian experience is the reception of the gospel, the changed life, and then the example. The Thessalonians became examples to all in Macedonia.

IV. The Missionary Activity of the Thessalonians (v. 8).

Their experience of the life of Jesus Christ was so real to them that they at once became missionaries. The word of the Lord was so widely and effectively sounded forth that when the apostles returned they needed "not to speak anything." This is as it should be when the gospel is received in the power of the Holy Ghost. The gospel is good news. Good news cannot be kept to oneself; it must be given out.

V. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 9, 10).

1. They turned from idols (v. 9). Thessalonica was a city largely given up to idolatry. Statues were to be seen almost everywhere. The fruits of Paul's preaching were the changed lives of the people. They turned away from idols and gathered together around Jesus Christ in the church. The idol temples were deserted and the churches filled.

2. Awaiting the coming of Jesus Christ (v. 10). Their faith was so real that they looked for the personal return of the Lord Jesus Christ to the earth. The second coming of Christ was a real tenet of faith of the early church. It is so now wherever the gospel is really preached. "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." (1 John 3:3).

Go Forward

"We trust we have a good conscience in all things" (Heb. 13, 18). Pass smoothly over the perverseness of those you have to do with, and go straight forward. It is abundantly sufficient that you have the testimony of a good conscience toward God.—John Wesley.

Comfort

God does not comfort us to make us comfortable, but to make us comfortable.—Doctor Jowett.

Recommendation was made to the Miami convention that a department convention be called for early next fall "if by May 1, 1935, there is an increased Legion interest and loyalty in the department of New Mexico, reflected in posts and memberships," Mr. Davis said.

Establishment of approximately 200 families from Taos county on land in the Lower Middle Rio Grande valley below Albuquerque, N. M., appears probable. Representatives of the Taos county families have inspected tracts of land south of the city and returned to report their findings. The plan for establishment of families from submarginal lands to other localities is part of President Roosevelt's recovery program and is handled by the land policy section of the AAA. Each family would receive between 40 and 60 acres of the large tracts inspected.

Carnivores' Fast Day

All carnivorous animals kept in captivity, such as lions and tigers, must fast one day out of seven if they are to remain in good health.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child.

Which Are You?

A peculiarity of the American vocabulary is that the stuffs only come in two grades: Poor and lucky.—Detroit News.

The Great Teacher Our minds gather ideas from experience.

If you tire easily

Why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition? Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently the blood cells are low, and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Eat to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve.

S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-globin building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few medical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to S.S.S. as long as you have a right to your own guarantee of satisfaction.

S.S.S. the world's great blood medicine

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

Hetch Hetchy Project in Operation

At Crystal Springs lake, in San Mateo county, California, the people of San Francisco and neighboring communities celebrated the other day the first delivery of water from the Hetch Hetchy project. Secretary of the Interior takes making the address. The project, costing more than $100,000,000, has required 35 years of planning and 22 years of actual construction. This photograph shows the O'Shaughnessy dam and partly filled Hetch Hetchy reservoir.

Accomplishes His 15th Circling of the Globe

Marco Polo Had Nothing on This Globe-Trotter.

Washington.—Magellan and Marco Polo, former coholders of numerous globe trotting championships, had nothing on Julius Brittlebank, who has just returned from his fifteenth trip around the world.

Brittlebank, who believes amusement is the chief of life, is still hale and hearty after 75 years of living and more than 2,000,000 miles of wandering.

He came back from his latest jaunt with nothing particular to relate except his delight in noting economic improvements in every country he visited. The ship he took across the Pacific was about 60 per cent full, he said, while a few years ago stewards from the first class deck used to go below and talk to the cattle to keep from getting lonely.

Brittlebank has witnessed numerous political and economic uprisings all over the globe. He was in San Francisco during the recent strike, an impressive sight, he said, even for a man who was on hand for the Russo-Japanese war, the Chinese revolution of

Picks Breakfast "Eggs" From Tree in His Garden

Hamilton, Bermuda.—When George Grant of Somerset parish is short of eggs to accompany his morning bacon, he goes into his garden and plucks one from a tree.

The tree bears a fruit, the size and color of a pomegranate. The fruit bursts open when ripe and "lays" a nut about the size of a hen's egg yolk.

Mr. Grant cooks this for five minutes, when it turns a beautiful golden yellow. Garnished with white sauce it looks exactly like a hard-boiled egg.

Mr. Grant is the only man in the colony with such a tree. It was brought here years ago by his father. It is a native of Africa, where it called the Akoo.

Iowa County Digs Cave to Store Food for Needy

Spencer, Iowa.—Caves for storage of winter food are common equipment of corn belt farms. Clay county will have one on the courthouse square to hold its accumulated supply of canned fruits, vegetables and meats for the poor this winter.

An appropriation has been made from the poor fund for material and labor will be furnished by the B.F.R.A. The cave will be 24 feet long, 30 feet wide and 7 feet deep. The county already has 3,500 quarts of vegetables to put in storage and the canning season is still continuing.

Pastor Also Shepherd to a Colony of Bees

Washington Court House, Ohio.—Urged to devote his spare time in raising bees, Rev. W. H. Wilson has successfully taken the advice of a friend. In addition to being a good shepherd to his church flock, he is also a good tender of bees.

He now has 32 stands and reports that he has more than 3,000 pounds of honey, most of which will be purchased by his parishioners.

Nine Chinese Girls Kill Selves Over Marriage

Shanghai.—Nine Chinese girls chained themselves together and leaped to their death in the sea near Amoy, Fukien province. The suicide pact resulted from unhappy married life in the case of all but the youngest of the victims. Seven of the girls were first cousins, while two others were related.

Famous Clock Reproduced

Philadelphia.—A reproduction of the famous astronomical clock in the cathedral at Strasbourg, Alsace-Lorraine, has been added to the exhibits at Franklin museum. The replica of the historic timepiece, built in 1442, was loaned to the museum by John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia.

See Find Honey Car

Springfield, Mo.—Charles Smith, railroad freight manager here, asks all shippers of honey to keep containers sealed tight. A slightly damaged carload of honey arrived here and within a few minutes a swarm of more than 1,000 bees made work impossible.

INDIAN IN ROME

ROBBERS' ROOST

by ZANE GREY

"My spirit wouldn't faint at that," she replied. "I saw you kill the wretch—and I could help you bury him."

"I won't need you," replied Jim, constrainedly, and wheeled away. Madly he rushed to and fro, while he searched the dead robbers, to fling their money and valuables in a pile. Then he dragged them to the brink of the wash and toppled them over.

Action had begun to steady Jim; if not compose him. He shoved all the money into his saddlebag. Next he packed every one of his shells. He might be attacked again in that hiding place. Then he selected supplies for two packs and filled them, not forgetting a few tin snails.

His next move was to strap blankets and saddles on the two gentlest horses. Those he led back to the cave, where he packed them. After that he had only to saddle Bay and the gray horse Helen had ridden there.

Suddenly he thought of Smoky. If he had been alone, or with another man, even a helpless one, he would have taken time to find that strange and faithful robber and have given him a decent burial. But he would not leave the girl.

While he stood there, trying to think what else to do, he remembered a sack of grain that Hays had packed from Star ranch. He found it half full and tied it on the lighter pack.

He hurried back to the girl, calling: "Are you ready?"

"Pre-heck waiting," she said, and came swiftly out. The rider's costume brought out the rounded grace of her form. She had braided her hair. The sombrero he remembered shaded her face.

"Where are your veil and long coat?" asked Jim, seeing her as on that unforgettable day.

"He burned them," she answered in a stifled voice.

"Get into this." And he held his slicker for her. It enveloped her, dragged on the ground.

"We're in for storm. Rainy season due. You must keep dry."

Turning to the gray horse, she mounted.

"Ride close beside me where there's room. Just ahead where there's not," he directed her.

Jim tied the halters of the two pack animals to their packs, and started them off. Then he vaulted upon Bay—the first time for many weeks. The horse pranced, but steadied down under an iron hand and heel.

Helen looked back as one fascinated, but Jim bent stern gaze ahead.

"I would destroy this canyon if that were in my power. Come," he said.

They rode up out of the oval, driving the pack horses ahead. The rain was now falling heavily. On the gravel ridge to the west Jim saw a dead man lying prone.

Soon they entered the wide, shallow wash, in the sand of which Jim espied footprints filling with water. They rode out of the tail of the storm and into a widening of the wash, where it reached proportions of a small valley. Scrub cedar and brush and cactus began to show, and patches of sunflowers on low, sandy knolls. They passed the cove where the riders' horses had been left. Broad and deep was the trail to the south.

"Are you all right?" Jim queried.

"Oh, I did not know I could feel rapture again. Yes, I am."

"You're dizzy, just the same. You sway in the saddle. Ride closer to me, while you can. . . . Give me your hand. Don't talk. But look—look! You might see what I do not see."

They rode at length to a canyon head, down which the hoof tracks turned.

"We came this way by night, but I remember," she said. "Do you dare to follow them?"

"We must not."

"But that is the way to Star ranch!"

"Yes, on the trail of desperate men, and across that Dirty Devil river. These summer rains. It will be in flood. I would not be able to get you through."

"You know best. But just to be free . . . to see my brother, Bernie! It is unbelievable."

Jim Wall looked away across the brakes. Presently he said, "I will try to find a way out of this hole. The country is strange. It'll be lost soon. But somewhere up out of here—we'll find a lovely canyon where there is grass and water. I must not run into cattlemen; robbers are not my only enemies. I don't want to be hanged for saving you."

"Hanged! Oh, you frighten me!"

"I didn't want to tell you. It is no sure thing that I can safely elude the rest of Heeseman's outfit, if I try to get out through the brakes. It'd be far safer to hide you a while—south of here, out of the way of riders."

"Take me where you think best," she said tremulously.

"When you get out, you must go home to England."

"I have no home in England. Bernie is my only kin, except very distant relatives who hate the name of Herrick."

"Then go to a country as different from this naked, stony wilderness as day from night. Where it snows in winter, and in spring there are flowers, birds, apple blossoms. . . ."

"No, I shall not leave," she replied bravely.

A flash of joy leaped up in Jim at her words, but he had no answer for her. He led on, away from that broad, fresh trail, into an unknown region. And it seemed that this point of severance had an inscrutable parallel in the tumult within his heart.

The sun set in an overcast sky and storm threatened all around the horizon. Far north the thunder rolled, and to the south faint mutterings arose. Jim could not hold to a straight course. He wandered where the lay of the land permitted. Rising white and red ground, with the mounds of rock falling, and green swales between, appeared endless and forlorn. He began to look for a place to camp.

At last, as twilight darkened the distant washes and appeared creeping up out of them, Jim came to another little valley where scant grass grew and dead cedars stood up, spectral ghosts of drought, and on the west side a low caverned ridge offered shelter. He led over to this and, dismounting, said they would camp there. Her reply was a stifled gasp, and essaying to get out of her saddle she fell into his arms.

CHAPTER XII

To Jim Wall it seemed a miracle that he did not snatch Helen to his breast. Like a wind-driven prairie fire his blood raced. He set her upright on the ground.

"Can you stand?" he inquired.

She essayed to, and, letting go of him, plainly betrayed her spent condition.

Her Reply Was a Stifled Gasp.

Jim helped her into the shallow hollow under the rock.

In the quarter-hour before dusk he had unpacked, hobbled and fed the horses, built a fire and put water on to boil.

He carried his bed under the shelf and unrolled it, changed and doubled the blankets and folded the tarpaulin so that it could be pulled up in case rain beat in.

The fire sent a ruddy light into the cavern, and all at once Jim discovered that the girl was watching him.

"Are you safe here?" she asked.

"God only knows! I think so—I hope so. It's a lonely desert. Our enemies have gone the other way. They know they nearly wiped out Hays, and they'll try again with reinforcements. They know Hays had a fortune in cash—and you."

To his concern and discomfort, she ate very little. She tried, only to fail. But she did drink her coffee.

"You'll pick up," he said hopefully.

"Sleep, though, is more necessary than food."

"Jim, I can't pull off my boots," she said later. "Please help me."

She was sitting on the bed when Jim took hold of the boot she elevated.

"Look to see if you have any blisters," he said. "I'll bathe your feet in a little cold water and salt."

Bringing a pan of water, he knelt before her.

"Don't stand on ceremony, Helen. Stick out your foot. . . ."

She put out her small feet. Jim lost no time in dressing them down into the cold salt water. Then he rubbed her feet until they were red.

"Put your stockings back on and sleep in your clothes," he said. "Before you crawl in, I'll bring a hot stone."

"Ooooo!" She stretched out with a slow, final movement and pulled the blankets up under her chin.

Almost instantly she fell asleep with the flickering firelight upon her face. Jim walked out, to find the horses close to camp and making out fairly well on the grass. He patrolled his beat between the flickering fire and the sleeping girl, heedless of the rain, sleepless for hours, on guard. And after that when he slept it was with one eye open.

Toward dawn he got up and rolled his bed. The air was raw and cold, blowing a fine rain in his face.

By the time breakfast was cooking daylight had broken. Finding a thin, flat rock Jim placed Helen's breakfast upon it and carried it to her bedside. Then he called her.

"I've brought some food and strong coffee," he said.

Jim repaired to his own breakfast, after which he wrapped up biscuits and meat to take on the day's ride. She pulled on her boots, and crawling out and straightening up with slow, painful effort she asked for a little hot water. Jim fetched it.

Free then to pack, Jim applied himself with swift, methodical hands. She mounted unassisted. Jim helped her into the long slicker.

"It'll be a tough day," he went on. "But we're starting dry. Hang on as long as you can. We absolutely must get out of these brakes."

With that he lifted up the pack animals, and they were off.

Jim traveled as best he could, keeping to no single direction, though the trend was northerly—and following ground that appeared passable. The pack horses led. He followed them, and Helen brought up the rear.

The rain fell all morning and let up at intervals. Then black clouds gathered, and a storm, with thunder and lightning, burst upon them. Water ran in sheets off the rocks.

At length the fugitives came to a veritable river at which the lead horse balked. Bay, however, did not show any qualms. So he put Bay to the task. The big horse made it easily, with water coming up to his flanks.

Whereupon Jim rode him back, after which the pack horses, intelligent and sensible, essayed the ford.

Then Jim returned for Helen.

"I'll carry you while you hang on to your bridle," said Jim, riding close to the gray. He had to lift her sheer off her horse and around in front of him, where he upheld her with his left arm.

"They made it," with the splendid horse staggering out under his double burden just in the nick of time.

"You are doing fine. We have come eighteen or twenty miles. But I don't like the look ahead."

When once more they were on the way Jim gave her a biscuit and a strip of meat. "Eat. The rain will be on us soon."

Late in the afternoon there was a momentary brightening of massed clouds in the west.

They rode down out of these low gravel hills that had limited their sight, into a long, green, winding valley. A red river, surely the Dirty Devil, ran, ridged and frothy, under a steep wall of earth.

"I can't hang on—longer," faltered Helen, faintly.

"I'll carry you. Why didn't you tell me sooner?" reproved Jim. He knotted her reins and dropped the loop over the pommel of her saddle. Then he lifted her off her horse onto his.

So Jim rode on, aware that her collapse and the terrible nature of the desert and another storm at hand were wearing away even his indomitable spirit.

Ragged, red bluff stood up all along his right, with acres of loose rock ready to slide.

They swung in behind the bluff, and then out again to the higher and narrower bank upon which the old trail passed around the corner.

"Whoa, Bay," called Jim hauling up to wait for the gray. "I don't like this place. Don't look, Helen."

As she made no reply Jim leaped back to get a glimpse of her face. Alas!

"Come on, Gray," he called to the horse behind, and to Bay: "Steady, old fellow. If that narrows round there you want to stop sure."

It did narrow. Eight feet, six feet—less! Bits of the steep bank were crumbling away. But the pack horses had gone round. It would not be safe to try to turn now.

Suddenly Jim encountered a still narrower point, scarcely five feet wide. The edge had freshly crumbled. It was crumbling now.

Bay stepped carefully, confidently. He knew horses with wide packs had safely passed there. He went on. Jim felt him sink. One hind foot had crushed out a section of earth, letting him down. But with a snort he plunged ahead to wider trail.

Jim's heart had leaped to his throat. He heard thud of hoofs behind, a heavy, sildery rumble. Looking back he saw the gray horse leap from a section of wall, beginning to gap outwards to solid ground ahead. Next instant six feet of the trail, close up to the bluff, slid down in an avalanche.

"Close shave for us all!" cried Jim, huskily.

Right at his feet a red torrent rushed with a wrestling, clashing sound from out a deep-walled gorge of splintered, rocking walls.

This was a tributary, a vicious child of the hideous Dirty Devil. It barred Jim's progress. Thirty paces to the fore, on the widest part of the bank, stood the pack horses. Jim forced his startled gaze to the rear. No rider would ever come or go that way again.

Jim dismounted carefully with Helen and, stooping as he moved under the leaning rock, he set her down on dry dust.

"Is it the end for us?"

He did not answer. Folding the slicker into a pillow he laid her head back upon it. Scrambling up, he removed the saddle from Bay and dropped it under the shelter. Then, leading the horse, he stepped forward to where the gray and the pack animals had halted.

The government of Palestine planted about 87,000 mulberry trees for the encouragement of silk worms since 1928.

"MAKER OF GOLD," BROKEN BY JAIL, LOSES HIS VILLA

Zbiniero Dunikowski Is Still Dreaming of Making Fortunes From Sand.

Paris.—"Mon Caprice!" The world has forgotten Zbiniero Dunikowski, his possessions and caprices.

Recently the little municipality of Cap Martin, on the Riviera, had occasion to think of the one-time internationally notorious "maker of gold."

His villa, "Mon Caprice," at Carnoles, on the cape, was sold at auction to satisfy creditors, or to be more exact, those of his wife, Caroline Wegeman. It had cost 10,000 francs in the days when Dunikowski astounded the world with his repeated assertions that he could produce gold from common, or garden sand.

No ordinary fakir, Dunikowski appealed to all who met him—and this includes judges of the Paris criminal courts—as being motivated by an internal light which shone even brighter than the gold which he actually did extract from his mysterious catalizer.

Broken but Still Dreaming. He lives now at San Remo, a broken man after some thirteen months in Paris jails, but still dreaming of making gold and still surrounded by a few disciples who do not regard him as a crook.

Dunikowski, like many another, believes he was tormented by "the interests." His invention, he claimed, was of such colossal import that the world of finance would not allow it to become a success for the fear of the effect it would have on the gold markets of the world.

The story, like many another of its kind, is simple enough. About four years ago the Polish "wizard" began negotiations with a group of capitalists for the exploitation of his gold-making catalizer.

Sand Held Gold, He Asserted. He worked on the principle that most sand contains gold. The metal, however, takes millions of years to precipitate into minable layers, according to Dunikowski, who claimed his machine could do the work of time and produce gold at will from sand.

Experiments with a small catalizer apparently were successful, but, according to his backers, when he built a large machine for commercial purposes, the results were all. Accordingly, they sued for their money.

Dunikowski steadfastly claimed "the interests" had caused his machine to be sabotaged. The charge of swindling never was actually proved, and although Dunikowski languished more than a year in jail between appearances in court, he finally was allowed to leave the country.

Sews Up Gash in Heart Trying to Save Patient Springfield, Mo.—Knifed during a brawl, Cecil Dawes was taken to a hospital here in a dying condition. All hope was abandoned for his recovery until a surgeon decided to risk the delicate task of sewing up the gash in the patient's heart, covering made by the knife.

"It was a long shot, but I tried it," the physician said. "I reached down in the wound, swabbing the blood from the hemorrhage, and with two fingers felt the heart beating. Then I made two sutures."

Dawes rallied and was believed to have an even chance of recovering. The operation was performed with a local anesthetic.

"Perfect Butler" Jailed for Fraud in England London.—England's "perfect butler," Harry Turner, forty-three, has been sentenced to twelve months at hard labor on charges of fraud. One time butler for King Manu and Queen Amelle, of Portugal, Turner has recently been conducting "butling" schools in London to which prospective butlers, footmen and valets came to be trained. The fraud charges arose from the misapplication of approximately $700 entrusted to Turner by his "pupils."

Youth 10, Hits Sawdust Brownsville, Texas.—Manuel King, ten, believed to be the youngest lion tamer in the world, has left with his lions, bound for the sawdust trail.

The youthful lion tamer will appear at the Iowa state fair, and then will travel extensively before he comes back to Texas to appear at the Texas state fair at Dallas this fall.

Manuel was accompanied by his father, W. A. (Snake) King, internationally known wild-animal dealer. The troupe of lions numbers ten.

Vanity Brings Arrest of Alleged Coat Thief Boston.—John H. McDonald might have escaped arrest if he had been less vain. Police captured him when he was found in front of a broken show window of a clothing store. He allegedly was trying on a coat to be sure it fitted properly.

Gopher Snake Chokes Dog Sonora, Calif.—A large watch dog encountered more than he could handle when he snapped at a three-foot gopher snake. The reptile wound itself around the dog's neck, choking the animal unconscious. It was some time before the dog could be revived.

Must Find Methods of Ending Erosion of Land

We have in the past expressed our opinion in this matter of the destruction of rich agricultural and grazing lands through the agency of wind and water erosion and how it has been brought about not only in the area affected by the great spring dust storms this year but in many other parts of the country and over a long term of years. Now comes Hugh Hammond Bennett, director of the federal soil erosion service, in an article in the New York Times, to add to the testimony of damage done, to enlarge our fears of the development of great areas of waste lands in the subhumid regions of the Great Plains and, best of all, to tell what must be done to save what he has left.

He writes not of the Great Plains districts alone, but of the entire country where wind and water, encouraged by careless farming and grazing operations and deforestation, have wrought or are now working damage. Obviously, Director Bennett writes, much of the subhumid Great Plains region, originally a splendid grazing country, must eventually go back to grass, just as countless steeply sloping areas of the more humid regions must be taken out of cultivation and stabilized with perennial growths of trees, grass or other thick-growing crops that will hold the soil in place. To achieve this it is plain, as Mr. Bennett says, that "some redistribution of the population may be necessary in some instances," as well as supplemental artificial devices of erosion prevention.

It is reasonable to believe that much of this land that is blowing and washing away will have sympathetic attention in President Roosevelt's social legislation that has been outlined to congress for 1935 and that some of the land whose usefulness is so near an end will be rated along with the submarginal land that will be scheduled for purchase and retirement to trees and grass and future importance in our lists of natural resources. If it is not, some future generation will awaken to the realization that it has become desert in fact, and with the desert's tendency to extend its frontiers.

As Mr. Bennett views the matter, all of this trouble has descended on American farm land, east and west, north and south, because of the removal of nature's stabilizers of trees, grasses and shrubs, and that the evil must be controlled if our basic asset—our crop and grazing lands—is to be preserved. Nor have our mining methods of farming helped in conservation. We have thinned our farm lands of humus and the winds and waters have been whisking away 3,000,000,000 tons of soil material every year. The land remains but the soil does not. Our Valley rivers are muddy for good cause.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
