"Can't see very well without my glasses." He fumbled. "Here they are. Now let's take this out where it's lighter and let me read it over once."

Doris walked briskly to the door. She was aware of a car coming up the road, but she did not think of it. The old man was reading aloud her message, getting it very slowly, it seemed to her, his ancient head bent over the familiar yellow slip of paper.

The car stopped. A man got out and came swiftly toward them. Doris looked up, stepped back in sudden fright, looked again. He stared at her.

There could be no doubt who it was. Doris felt all her old unreasoning terror sweeping over her. It was the man in the cab.

He snatched the bit of yellow paper from the old man's hand.

"For G-d's sake, don't send—" He glanced at the message and crumpled it up in his pocket. "Thank G-d I've found you."

The old man looked at the stranger calmly.

"Know this young lady, do you?" The young man did not answer. He looked at Doris. His eyes were dark with excitement and his face was drawn.

"Giri's been trying to tell me she's Diane Merrell," said the constable. "Course I knew she wasn't."

The young man turned his gaze on the old man. "Of course she's not," he said sharply. "That's ridiculous."

CHAPTER XI

She was not Diane Merrell. Doris almost smiled. Relief loosened her nerves.

She saw the young man's dark eyes meet the constable's in a knowing glance. Slowly the old man made the motion of grinding near his own grizzly temples. He winked. He thought she was crazy.

The young man winked back. Perhaps she was crazy. Perhaps she was an escaped lunatic. A subtle panic emanating from that dark nightmare face tore at her heart. This was the man in the cab. Why did she hate him? Why did he terrify her?

"Come, dear, let me take you home." He put a protecting arm out to touch her shoulder.

She jerked away. Dear! There it was again. As she stepped back he came closer, whispered, "For G-d's sake come away from this old fool."

Doris turned and began to run. She ran through the tree tunnel to the place where she had hidden Beatrice's car.

The man in the cab had said she was not Diane Merrell. And the man in the cab knew. Why was she running away from him then? Because she hated him, because she feared him, because it was her instinct to run and she was behaving like a fool. Her footsteps slowed. She had lost herself once in a hopeless whirl by leaving the man in the cab. Now she must face him.

She stopped and turned around. The young man was not pursuing. He had left the constable who had settled down for another nap under the tree.

There was a soft whirr as the young man started up his motor. She watched him back his car. He was turning around. Why was she afraid of him? If he were her husband, Rocky had said she could divorce him.

She would talk with him now. At least he could tell her who she was. She drew a long breath and waited for him to come up to her.

Her heart gave a little leap of pleasure. She was not Diane Merrell. And when she told this young man she could never belong to him no matter what their relation had been, she would be free. Then she would go back to the St. Gardens. She would go back to Rocky. The thought gave her so much courage that she smiled as the car drew up beside her.

"Get in." She shook her head. "No. You get out."

"No. We must get away from here."

"I want to talk to you." "We can talk better in the car."

"No. I won't do that. You'll have to get out."

He hesitated, opened the door, hesitated again and got out. "We might walk for a bit. It's risky, though."

"Why is it risky?" "Might get caught. I guess not, though. I've been searching for you everywhere."

"How did you find me?" "Through the papers. I came to the St. Gardens, saw you leaving just as I came from the train. I followed you up the road."

"I thought someone was following me."

"Yes. But I lost the trail up the road. What did you do with your car? Finally I saw you standing in front of the drug store. His manner changed. He caught her by the shoulders. "Oh my sweet, can you ever forgive me? You must have been through hell."

Doris clasped her hands. She straightened her shoulders and shook out her arms. The "Oh my sweet" was too much. She might as well come to the point quickly. "Look here," she said abruptly, "who are you anyway?" He looked at her in astonishment. "What do you mean?"

"I mean what I say. What's your name?" "Are you kidding me?" "Absolutely not. I've lost my memory. I don't remember anything."

He stopped. His brows drew together. "But—but oh my G—d! Do you mean that? Do you mean you don't remember what happened?" "I don't remember what happened."

He came close again. His dark, unhappy eyes pleaded with her. "But you remember George? You can't have forgotten—"

"George?" "Don't you remember?" "I don't remember. Are you George?"

"Darling! Darling! You've forgotten me?" Doris drew a long angry breath. "Yes I have—but tell me about George."

"I'm George, George Mortimer." He took off his hat and smoothed the dark wiry hair back from his brow nervously. They had walked away from the tiny village and were standing near a brook that rumbled over gray stones.

George Mortimer. The name brought back—nothing at all.

She was afraid of her next question: Who am I? He would surely answer. Mrs. George Mortimer. She looked up at him, gathered her nerve, spoke calmly: "Who am I?"

He seized her in his arms. "Oh my darling, you belong to me now—"

"I don't—"

"You're all I have. We'll stick together—"

"I won't."

She struggled. "I want to get you on a boat—"

"Let me go."

"We can be in Canada by nightfall. It's a miracle—that I've found you, Darling, sweet. You're going to be all right now."

She pushed him with all her strength, shoved at his shoulders until she faced him. "Tell me who I am."

He crushed her close. "I wouldn't tell you for anything in the world. It's unbelievable that you don't know."

"There's a car coming. If you don't let go of me I'll scream murder at the top of my lungs."

He listened. The steady buzz of an approaching motor could be heard over the murmur of the brook. A car was coming up the road in a cloud of dust. Rocky's car.

"For G-d's sake, come on. We've got to get going."

"I won't go with you I tell you. Let go of me."

"You're crazy. You don't know what you're saying. You've got to come with me."

She screamed: "Rocky! Rocky!" Rocky's car stopped. He swung himself out. The man's hold on Doris relaxed. "You fool—"

Rocky neared them. The man began to run toward his own car.

"Rocky! Don't let him go. It's the man in the cab!"

Rocky looked at her over his shoulder. His jaw was set grimly. He ran after the other man, George Mortimer.

The car was a couple of yards down the road. Doris watched with clenched hands. The man in the cab was running desperately. Rocky stumbled after him.

Rocky was gaining. But George Mortimer would get to his car. He would get away. He had not told her who she was. He would disappear. She would never find out.

George Mortimer reached his car. She could see his long legs disappearing. Then his head showed dimly through the glass, bending forward. He was turning on the switch. She heard the motor.

Rocky came up to the car. He tugged at the door, could not open it. Mortimer was slipping the car into gear. Rocky put his hand through the open window and seized the man at the wheel by the collar.

The car tottered slowly forward with Rocky on the running board. George Mortimer was helplessly clutching at the wheel. He could not quite reach it. Rocky was pulling at him, trying to drag him through the window.

Doris was paralyzed. The car running slowly in first speed was wavering straight for a deep ditch. Rocky's hands were tugging at Mortimer, pulling his shoulders through the window. Mortimer's feet were away from the brakes.

Nothing could stop the car. If Rocky would only get away. The car would fall over.

The car plunged, came to an awful standstill but stood upright. Rocky braced himself against the side.

Doris ran toward them. She saw Rocky straighten himself. He was all right, then. Mortimer's head had struck against the window frame. He was limp now in Rocky's grasp.

Rocky let go of him and opened the car door. Mortimer lay with closed eyes, a streak of blood running down his forehead.

"Rocky—is he dead?" "I don't know."

"Rocky, I'm out of one murder. And now I've got you in another."

Rocky looked at her blankly. "What do you mean?"

"I'm not Diane Merrell."

Rocky hardly seemed to hear. He was looking at the man with whom he had been struggling. "I've got to get him to the doctor." He leaned over and beat his head over George Mortimer's head. "He's still alive. I think he's only stunned. I'll move my car up here and put him in it." He ran back to his car. Doris examined the wound on Mortimer's head. It came from a small cut. Oh, surely he would be all right. He would come to his senses and tell them everything. The blood was already drying up. If only he weren't so pale. If only he would open his eyes.

Rocky's car came up. In a minute Rocky had hoisted him into the rumble. Rocky turned to Doris. His face was stern.

"Now, Doris. You are to do exactly as I say. You disobeyed me this morning by running off, and I don't want that to happen again."

Doris' heart throbbed happily. It was nice being with Rocky again, and nothing much mattered now. George Mortimer was going to live, and she was not Diane Merrell. "I'll do anything you say, Rocky."

"All right. Where is Beatrice's car?" "It's parked up a lane—very near."

"Go and get in it, and drive back toward the St. Gardens place."

"But I'd rather come with you. I want to find out if this man is all right. And I want to know—"

"It's not safe."

"But I told you I'm not a fugitive from justice or anything. He's the man in the cab. He says I'm not Diane Merrell. And he knows."

"Doris, please don't argue with me. I've got something to tell you, and as soon as I get this man in a hospital, I'll come right away and join you. Now pay attention. Turn to your right on a dirt road near a yellow barn. Have you got it?"

Doris looked at him pitifully. She was not Diane Merrell, only Rocky wouldn't listen. Rocky continued: "Go up this road for about a mile. It skirts the St. Gardens place. You'll find a shed. Leave the car there, and go on into a little path. It crosses a bridge, and leads to a little yew arbor. I'll meet you there."

He had stepped into his car, and was already turning on his ignition as he finished. George Mortimer lay calm and still.

"But Rocky—please don't let him get away."

"Don't worry. Meet me in the yew arbor."

He was off without a smile. Doris watched him go. Then she walked briskly back along the road and got into Beatrice's car once more.

She drove steadily, at a slower pace than the one she had come. Even if she were Diane Merrell, Mortimer would not have given her away to an officer of the law, not if he loved her as he seemed to do. What a fool she was! Why, if she was not Diane Merrell, had he been afraid to stop on the road? Why had he whispered in her ear, "For G-d's sake come away from this old fool?"

But if she were Diane Merrell, what had George Mortimer to do with her? Why would she be riding in a cab with another man on her wedding day?

Could it be that it was only eleven o'clock? She looked at the watch on her wrist. It was five minutes of the hour. So many things had happened that morning. It seemed as if a day must have passed. She wondered what had happened to Molly. And how had Rocky found her?

This must be the shed up ahead.

The path Rocky had described was not hard to find. It led through a wood of beeches and towering pines. On either side ferns grew to a height of three feet. Rocky had said he wanted to talk to her. His face had not looked very happy. What had he found out? She left the car.

Music came tentatively from the other end of the long delphinium alley. A harp, a cello, violins were getting a readiness. Doris remembered. The wedding rehearsal. She heard the soft laugh of a girl nearby.

There was a bench in the yew arbor. She and Rocky could sit there and be unseen by the wedding party as they talked.

She crossed the greenward and sat down on the hard bench to wait for Rocky.

She heard someone coming over the rustic bridge. A minute later she saw Rocky. How tall he was, and she liked the way he moved, with long swifft strides. But his face looked worried. Everything was not all right. Her heart became heavy as she looked at his drawn features. There was more trouble.

CHAPTER XII

He sat down beside her and took her hands in his. His eyes were full of an anguish that swept her instantly.

"Rocky," she said, trying to rally against the waves of depression that came from him. "Didn't you hear what I said about not being Diane Merrell?"

"There's not a doubt that you're Diane Merrell."

The reaction to all her hopes was too much. The man in the cab had said she wasn't. But she could not bring the words out. She stared despairingly back at Rocky. His jaw was set, his eyes grim. Then her body began to shake uncontrollably.

"Doris, Darling Doris. Don't feel so."

"But—"

Rocky took her left hand. He slipped the wedding ring from her finger. He looked at the inscription on the inside. H. L. V. to D. M.

Howard L. Valley to Diane Merrell! "I forget about that," she said faintly.

"There's the luggage, too. It was rather unusual luggage, you know."

"Yes. Diane Merrell's luggage." (TO BE CONTINUED)

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY Lesson

Lesson for February 25

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1. GOLDEN TEXT—Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9:37, 38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Win Others to Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Win Others to Christ?

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (9:35-38).

As he went on his rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, he saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd, and his sympathy for them was aroused. This moved him

1. To declare that the harvest was plenteous but the laborers were few (9:37).—He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

2. To ask them to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the harvest (v. 38). Those whom he would send forth as laborers into his harvest field he desired to be imbued with the spirit of sympathy which would move them to pray for the trusting forth of laborers.

1. The Laborers Chosen (10:1-4). These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry forth the work of the propagation of the kingdom.

11. The Sending Forth of the Twelve (10:5-42).

The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of missionary endeavor in the present age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 5-15). Observe

a. The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were to go only to the Jews. They had no message for Gentiles or even Samaritans. No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today.

b. Their message (v. 7). "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." By this is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand—Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up his kingdom. The Jews rejected and crucified him. In this time of his rejection the church is being selected from all the nations.

c. The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles.

d. Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way.

e. The responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them or hear their message they were to turn away and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning the testimony from the day of Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23). After Pentecost testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. How appalling this has been fulfilled! Christ's witnesses have been scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, Christ's witnesses have brought divisions of the fiercest kind among many families. In their defense the missionaries were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally experienced in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem no one has been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming is so speedy that their testimony is cut short.

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42). The disciple has the position of oneness with the Master. He is, therefore, courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though their testimony results in bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with his disciples that he accepts treatment of them as treatment of himself.

Jesus the Master

When we read the New Testament, in the actual words of our Master, are we never startled to discover how exacting a Master he is? Never has there been a religious teacher who has made so great a demand upon human character as Christ.

Love

Love is heaven, and heaven is love. Whoever or whatever leads a man into that unselfish life, leads him to step forward in religion.

ANCIENT "HOARDERS"

All sorts of ancient beads cut to resemble an eye, found on the sites of old cities of Mesopotamia, are treasured by modern natives of the district as charms against every sickness and evil spell. It is difficult to obtain these charms, even at considerable price, says a returned traveler. Banded, semi-precious stones, such as agate and sardonyx, are prized as the most powerful. Natives of this region have been antique hoarders since ancient times.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned—that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

Army Flies Air Mail

(Albuquerque Journal)

The army takes over the air mail lines today. Already, the lives of three fliers have been sacrificed and equipment worth more than $100,000 lost. That probably is only the beginning of the disasters.

The Army cannot operate the air-mail lines as efficiently as the commercial companies. Their equipment is not as good and their pilots have not had the training in such work and are not familiar with it. Eventually, of course, they could become as efficient.

But in the meantime, the cost to the government will be more than through the system of private contracts.

Albuquerque, the entire state and the southwest is off the air mail map, the service being reduced nearly one-half. There was a way out of the alleged fraud and collusion unearthed by the senate investigating committee without wrecking the airmail service and the air lines.

The whole controversy boils down to the point of whether the postmaster general and the president had the conclusive evidence of fraud and collusion. Statements issued thus far are not convincing as to this.

Companies were not given a chance to defend themselves. The government has acted as accuser, prosecutor, judge and jury. Those that could prove their innocence should have been given the opportunity.

New legislation is being framed, fixing new regulations for letting of contracts on straight rate contracts. Companies that have expended millions in developing their lines and against which no fraud can be proven should be given a chance at the business.

People are not going to be satisfied with the curtailed service and destruction of business caused by the drastic cancellation order. The government should, and it is now indicated that it may, rectify its error of procedure.

In the meantime, Albuquerque and other towns in the southwest that have been deprived of air mail service should continue to press their demands for recognition through their representatives in Congress, and by direct appeals to the postmaster general and the president.

No Trick Gadgets
On Ford V-8 Car

No matter what the possibilities for sensational publicity Ford has never resorted to stunt features to sell his cars. Freakish body designs on an automobile are just as speculative as freakish designs on houses.

Millions of dollars were spent to sell American Motorists on free wheeling. Ford declined to put it on his cars.

The Ford purchaser gets a proven car both in style and operation. There are no trick gadgets to catch the fancy and later on prove to be mistakes.

The Ford policy of continuous improvement is well shown in this year's car. It is the best car the Ford Motor Company has ever built.

FORD TO BUILD HUGE EXPOSITION AT THE 1934 CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR

A GREAT Ford Exposition, portraying the tremendous part the arts, sciences and virtually every other industry plays in the manufacture of today's motor cars, is planned by the Ford Motor Company for the 1934 World's Fair. The Ford Exposition will be housed in a giant building 560 feet long to be built in the heart of the fair grounds on an 11-acre plot bordering Lake Michigan and flanking the main fair boulevard. Construction of the building will start Mar. 1. In the dominant central building will be housed Henry Ford's "Drama of Transportation," depicting the development of wheeled vehicles from the chariots of ancient Egypt to modern motor cars. Every model of Ford car made since 1903 will be included. In the smaller building to the left will be housed some of the priceless historic exhibits from the Edison Institute at Dearborn, Mich., including the one-story brick workshop, complete with the original tools, where Mr. Ford in 1893 built with his own hands his first motor car. This first car will be displayed inside the shop. The main exposition building will display an imposing array of exhibits, most of them in action, show how steel, aluminum, and other metals, soy beans, corn, wool, cotton and other farm products and the products of myriad industries are converted into car parts. The building also will house displays of cars and a big movie theater. Along the east side will be an open-air balcony equipped with chairs and lounges where hundreds may relax. Across the drive fronting the lake will be a big Ford Park, beautifully landscaped and also fitted with seats and other comforts for fair crowds.

Henry Ford and Edsel B. Ford show to Rufus C. Dawes (center), president of the World's Fair, the scale model of the giant Ford Exposition building to be built at the 1934 Fair. (Lower) The Ford building as it will be seen from Lake Michigan drive. Opposite the building will be a huge park bordering Lake Michigan.

NO CORPSE IN TOMB OF CZAR

Old Tale Regarding Russian Ruler Revived.

An empty coffin—Czar Alexander I's—was the sensation of Leningrad, where, searching for jewels, Soviet officials broke into the imperial tombs at the citadel of Sts. Peter and Paul, recently, and found plenty of dead potentates, but no Alexander I.

Is it possible that Alexander, whose official death at Taganrog in the Crimea in 1825 was attended with curious circumstances, merely absconded? Stories, now suddenly revived, say that he did. Having murdered his father, Alexander, nursed a bad conscience, and was reported to have talked of abdication. Eleven years after Alexander's official death, according to M. Octave Aubry, a handsome old man riding a superb horse appeared in Krasno-Umhinsk in the Perm region. He said he was Fedor Kousmitch, but would tell nothing more about himself, so he went to jail as a vagrant and caught a flogging.

Then came the Grand Duke Michael, making a great row. Fedor asked only to be sent to Siberia. The request was granted, and he at first worked in a state distillery near Tomsk. "There," said M. Aubry in Le Figaro, "he was looked upon as a saint."

Five years later, this Fedor appeared in a Cossack village, where he taught little children, instructed the farmers, prayed with the sick. People thought him a nobleman who had taken a vow of asceticism. The archbishop of Irkutsk came to visit him. One day, a soldier came. "That is the czar!" he cried. "That is our father, Alexander Pavlovitch!" A pupil of Fedor's went to Russia, saw portraits of Alexander I, and, on her return, exclaimed, "Little father, you look just like the Emperor Alexander!" A woman, Madame Balakhine, told of having seen among Fedor's papers the marriage certificate of Alexander and the Empress Elizabeth. Prince Bariatsky asserts in "The Mystery of Alexander" that Fedor received a visit from the empress shortly before his death, which occurred in 1834.

Was Fedor Kousmitch Alexander I? "We must not forget that some pretty stiff yarns came out of Russia," said M. Aubry, "and yet several members of the imperial family were so nearly convinced that Nicholas II ordered the coffin opened, countermanding the order only when the Grand Duke Vladimir insisted."—Literary Digest.

THE TWINS SPRING A SURPRISE ON WASHDAY

NOW, GIRLS, PUT THE CLOTHES TO SOAK. I'LL BE BACK IN A COUPLE OF HOURS... JUST IN TIME TO DO THE RUBBING AND THE BOILING.

"IMAGINE! TALKING ABOUT SOAKING CLOTHES FOR 2 HOURS... AND RUBBING... AND BOILING! HASN'T MOTHER EVER HEARD OF OXYDOL?"

OH, YES, BUT SHE WILL STICK TO THAT OUT-OF-DATE SOAP OF HERS. I'LL BET SHE NEVER SAW SUDS LIKE THESE!

THERE! 15 MINUTES SOAKING, AND EVERYTHING'S CLEANER THAN SHE EVER GOT THE CLOTHES WITH ALL THAT BACK-BREAKING SCRUBBING SHE DOES!

AND WAIT TILL SHE FINDS THAT THE COLORED THINGS AREN'T THE LEAST BIT FADED OR STREAKED! SHE'LL FAINT!

SHE SIMPLY WON'T BELIEVE WE DIDN'T USE THE BOILER!

SHE'LL HAVE TO WHEN SHE SEES THE LIME IS OUT SO SOON!

HEAVENS ABOVE! GIRLS! HOW ON EARTH DID YOU GET THROUGH SO EARLY? AND SUCH A WHITE WASH, TOO... LOTS WHITER AND SWEETER THAN I'VE EVER HAD!

OXYDOL, MOTHER, YOU WOULDN'T TRY IT... SO WE THOUGHT WE'D SHOW YOU!

NOW, DARLING, MAYBE YOU'LL GIVE UP ALL THAT UNNECESSARY SCRUBBING AND BOILING!

INDEED I WILL. I WOULDN'T HAVE BELIEVED OXYDOL COULD MAKE SO MUCH DIFFERENCE IF I HADN'T SEEN IT WITH MY OWN EYES!

THANK GOODNESS! OUR CLOTHES WON'T LOOK SO BOILED-OUT NOW!

(AN ACTUAL EXPERIENCE FROM REAL LIFE)

No More Spotted, Streaked Clothes
—since they started using Oxydol!

NOW WHAT DO YOU THINK OF YOUR GIRLS? THEY DID THE WHOLE WASH ALL ALONE TODAY!

NO WE DIDN'T, DADDY! OXYDOL DID!

JUST FOR THAT, I'LL TAKE YOU ALL TO THE MOVIES!

READ MRS. WILEY'S LETTER

"When my daughter said she thought she would give the new Oxydol a try, I prophesied a line full of spotted and streaked clothes. The directions for using it sounded too good to be true. But I had to change my mind! The work was so light and the clothes so white that we decided Oxydol was our soap for good!"

Mrs. Helen Wiley, Camden, N. C.

THE amazing new discovery of the world's most famous soap experts, the makers of Ivory—this new and improved Oxydol does these things no other soap can do or has ever done:

(1) Soaks clothes clean in 15 minutes. Without boiling, without back-breaking rubbing. Hence—cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, saving hours of labor.

(2) Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, by scientific Tintometer test, than other soaps. Whiter in one washing than ANY other soap can get them in TWO to FOUR washings!

(3) Yet, due to the special mild protective elements it contains, it neither fades nor injures color or fabric. Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. And—it's so kind to hands that you're amazed at its power to clean clothes!

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water

Oxydol is especially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold. The Oxydol you get here already contains just the right amount of water-softener to fit the water you use. You can see the results in the suds. Oxydol multiplies 500 TIMES in suds! Makes rich 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft! And Oxydol is economical. By actual test; a regular 25c package will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap or 2 to 3 times as much flakes!

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

The Corn Brothers, L. B. and Wade, were here from Roswell Monday, attending to some business matters. L. B. had the misfortune to be thrown from his horse but a short time ago from which he sustained a badly injured arm and he still carries it in a sling. The boys found time to drop in at this office and have a friendly chat before returning to their extensive ranch interests near Roswell.

Judge Homer McDaniel of Nogal, was a business visitor here Tuesday morning.

The Woman's Club

The Woman's Club held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. C.W. Young—Mesdames Kelley, Richard, Luckey, and the Misses Tressie Davis, Haldane Stover, and Grace Jones, assistant hostesses. The meeting was held on Friday, Feb. 16.

The meeting was called to order by the president, the Club singing "America, the Beautiful." Very few responded to roll call with the name of her favorite author, possibly because each one felt too many authors were loved to jingle out just one. The Club Litany was then read, Mrs. Lemon leading.

At the close of the meeting, Miss Hazel Melas, in charge of the program, presented the following:

Piano solo—Fantasia Impromptu in C Minor, Chopin—Mrs. W. C. Hendren

Book Review—Giants in the Earth—Miss Nellie Shaver (This Review and Biography were both interestingly given, the Biography claiming equal attention, showing as it did, the unfoldment of the author's character after his arrival in America)

Vocal solo—Smilin' Through—Mrs. R. R. Gillette
We enjoyed another of Mrs. Gillette's pleasing songs
Trends of Modern Poetry—Miss McGee

In this number we were shown that in some of the trends, poetry of the earlier days had cast aside her glamorous garments of inspiration and refinement and had taken a plunge into realism. A few modern examples were given for illustration: one "Chicago," by Carl Sandburg, a coarse and almost brutal delineation of the characterization of our great mid-western city; another—"At the Drapers," a touching little poem by Harding.

Following the program, delicious refreshments were served, cherry pie a-la-mode with a tiny U.S. flag flaunting its folds over the ice cream, recalled the birth month of our Washington.

At our next meeting, let us come prepared to give an Irish joke at Roll Call. There should be "Lots of Fun in It!"

Gomez—Chavez

Last Saturday morning, at the Santa Rita Catholic Church, with Father James Brady officiating, Frank Gomez and Miss Grace Chavez, both of San Patricio, were united in marriage. The bride is well-known here, having visited on many occasions at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Sanchez.

John Solomon

Son of R. E. and Artie Solomon, was born in Childress, Texas, July 19, 1911; died Feb. 19, '34, in Carrizozo, N. M. He was married May 19, '33, to Miss Beesie Leslie. To this union one daughter, Barbara June, was born. Besides his wife and baby he leaves to mourn his passing, his parents, three brothers, I.G., Merlin and Wyatt, three sisters, Mary, Oleta and Mrs. Ellen Faubion. After funeral services conducted in the White Oaks church by Rev. Lawson, Wednesday afternoon, the remains were laid to rest in the White Oaks cemetery.

Methodist Church

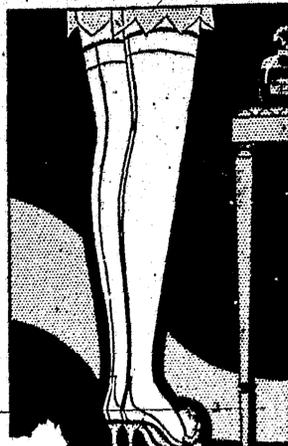

Regular services next Sunday morning and evening. David said, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the House of the Lord." And Jesus "Went into the Synagogue, as His custom was, on the Sabbath Day." You are welcome to any and all of our services.
