

PERSONALS

Mrs. W. W. Ashley of Pueblo, Colo., mother of Mrs. E. L. Mendenhall, is here to visit her daughter's family. Also to see her new grandson, Frank Allen, who bids fair to challenge Primo Carnera right soon. The new baby's Pa-pah, Bill Mendenhall, wears 'the smile that won't come off' — and why shouldn't he? Mrs. Ashley will possibly remain two weeks.

Mrs. Lena Devine and small son, JoBoy, returned home after a short, pleasant visit with relatives and friends in Lawrence, Kansas and Kansas City.

Miss Saul of Fargo, Okla., is visiting Mrs. Mallory of the Nogal vicinity.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mendenhall Friday evening, Apr. 27, a boy. The baby has been christened Frank Allen. Mother and son are doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burke, daughter Rosalind and son Lewis were Roswell visitors last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Caldwell and children of Hot Springs are here visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neighbauer and will remain for another week.

Miss Edith Dudley left Albuquerque yesterday morning and came as far as Socorro, where she was met by her mother, Mrs. B. A. Dudley and sons Reid and Jack, with whom she returned home. Miss Edith had been in the Duke City since February 1.

Mr. and Mrs. M. U. Finley spent Monday at Eagle Creek. After their arrival, they found that the large trout in the nursery which have been such a novelty to visitors, have all been stolen, due to the absence of the caretaker.

Carl Jones will leave the last of this week for New York, where after consulting with officials of the Lake Erie railroad, he will spend about two months in demonstrating the superiority of the use of oil on locomotives to that of coal. The eastern lines, more especially the Lake Erie, has heretofore refused to use anything but coal, and it will be Carl's job to convince the officials that the use of oil is more economical and convenient than that of coal.

Among others of the Tucson officers who caught the notorious Dillinger and his associates, Ben West, former detective for the railroad company at this point, is included in the picture which appears in the June number of True Detective Magazine now on sale at Rolland's Drug Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryberg and little son Carl were here from their ranch near Corona Wednesday. They are like all other incoming ranch folks in our locality, complaining on account of the lack of moisture. Nevertheless, their stock has fared better than they had expected.

Mrs. J. E. Farley of Alamogordo was a guest last week-end of Mrs. Albert Ziegler.

Miss Avella Young of Vaughn is in town visiting friends this week.

New Trustees Richard, Martinez, Phipps, and Clerk Lovelace followed him with short talks.

DIAMOND DUST

The game at White Oaks last Sunday, although very much one-sided, was one of the most agreeable one could wish. The White Oaks boys are a good set of sports and took their defeat with the real metal which goes to make up good sportsmanship. The game terminated in a score of 16 to 3. Clyde Smith was in the box for the first 3 innings, in his first try-out and was followed by Huffmeyer and Lueras, giving our three pitchers a division of the exercise. The Shaw brothers swung with each other on the hilltop for White Oaks and were followed by Donald Queen, Bob Whittis, as usual, donned the gas mask for our team with his customary silence and good judgment. Dodd was behind the bat for White Oaks. Tony Perea, lead-off man for Carrizozo, slammed one over the centerfielder's head for a home-run in his first time at bat.

White Oaks goes to Corona Sunday. Corona lost to Mountalnair last Sunday.

The East-Siders' supper and dance Saturday night were well patronized, and Manager Vidaurri and Captain St. John are doing their utmost to whip their team into a formidable organization. They are endeavoring to get some of the old regulars into playing form and by the middle of May, at the outside, hope to have the kinks straightened out and begin giving battle to teams of neighboring towns. Here's hoping, boys!

Miss Charlotte Rice of Fort Stanton presented the Outlook Art & Gift Shop with a beautiful bouquet of lilacs.

Before his departure, Andy said that he thought he had something coming from the newspaper men. We wonder what he meant — could it happen to be a razzberry?

SYNOPSIS

Stephen Drake, with his four-year-old son, is rescued from a blizzard by Jim Flynn, big timber operator, whom Drake has robbed. Flynn forgives the theft, and Drake, until his debt, impresses on the boy, Steve, the debt they owe to Old Jim.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

With a great bound he was gone, flying after the children as fast as he had rushed on another day.

LaFano gave his deep chuckle again.

"But how in the name of Heaven?" Drake insisted.

"He was as dangerous as I'd guessed. If it had not been for you, we would be bearing a great sorrow now.

LaFano shook his head. "No, I did not strike him often. When I did, of course, it counted."

Steve sat down with a surprised ejaculation and the other smiled grimly.

"It works, with dogs and with men. There are few outlaw dogs, just as there are few outlaw men. Give a man or a dog an idea of his duty, of his job, and see that he knows he must do it—knows clear down to the roots of his heart that he must—and there you are."

Steve, oddly touched, growled that LaFano owed him nothing.

"But men and dogs, LaFano . . . You've not always lived here then?"

"I had that him that day after he rushed my babies it would have been a coward's way out and they would have known it. You gave me the chance to finish what I had planned to do without . . . without h-I coming to my home. That is why I have been waiting to do something, anything, for you."

"Steve, oddly touched, growled that LaFano owed him nothing."

"I'm no breaker, I say. I can handle men, yes. That is an answer to your question. I have done it. I did it in the prison, a doctor and I. Between us we sent many on parole that might have been there yet . . . being broken slowly; what was left of them, you understand."

"Steve locked his hands around one knee and stared out across the lake."

"Do you like to try handling men? Young men? Who are strong enough but who haven't discovered themselves yet?"

"I have not even told myself that you are not Young Jim Flynn."

"Well, how in— When did— Who told you that, LaFano?"

"No. You have said nothing. You have been smart and wise. But the first day I took the mail up to your cabin, I walked in quietly. I thought you were out but you were sitting there at a table and you thought, even though I surprised you, that you put it away in time. But you did not. I saw it in your face as you looked at it."

"No man, you know, would look at his sister's photograph as you were looking at Kate Flynn's."

Steve felt himself flushing. He recalled how he had been reading her letters that first day in his new cabin and of how his heart had speeded up when he looked at her likeness.

"Well, there's nothing much for me to say!" he laughed, abashed.

"And no need of it. Your business is not mine. Why you came as you did, I don't know. I'm not curious, even. I know what you have done, which is to save Old Jim's hide for a time, anyhow. That is all that matters. He, too, is my friend."

"Thanks," said Steve, feeling that any words were inadequate. "I'm glad you found out about me for yourself. I was wondering how to tell it."

"Now, here's my present problem . . . and swiftly he told of how he had blundered on Young Jim, of how he had come to masquerade and of the worry which Franz's news today had given him."

"And if I leave the job and try to persuade Young Jim to stay away or to brace him up, things may all go to the devil before I can return."

"The other agreed."

"Do you suppose you could do two jobs in one? Keep the boy away until we have a chance to see what can be done toward putting this thing really on its feet and, while you're doing it, handle him as . . . as you handled Duke? I can't keep this game up very long. But until Old Jim gets squared away somebody must be in charge who has a clear head and the respect of the men."

"You're asking that?" "I am."

"Where is he?" Steve pondered. "How much red clay is there in this country? Within a day's travel, I mean."

"Only in one place. On a portage between the Good-Bye and the Mad Woman."

"I came that way. And the bottom of Franz's canoe was smeared with it today. It was fresh. He had just come across the carry."

"If Young Jim is still on the Mad Woman and bound to come here, it will be across that trail. If the rest are with him, it may be not too easy."

LaFano shrugged and rose. "I will do what I can do."

Then, without speaking further he walked toward his house. Steve stood on the beach watching him and thinking that, for such a situation, no better man could have been found to accomplish all that might be done.

But after LaFano had departed on his mission another problem arose in Steve's mind.

Mary Wolf had been headed for the Mad Woman. If Franz had been that way, might it not be that he had gone to look for her and cause trouble? But if so, he reasoned as this suspicion arose, she had either rebuffed or eluded the man. Franz had been alone today and he had it from Tim Todd that he had gone on down the lower river, telling some one that he was headed for the Laird's.

CHAPTER V

And that night, up the waters that Steve had descended on his way to Good-Bye went another lone man in a canoe. LaFano's pack was light and he paddled steadily until he was well past the wood camp. Steve had described the camping spot where he had met Flynn but none with a good eye would have needed the directions he gave because smoke was rising from a camp-fire against the afterglow.

LaFano idled along waiting for night to come, then he let his canoe drift into the rushes and sat listening to the sounds that came from the camp. Sounds of revelry, they mostly were; the snatches of a song, loud laughter, a careless oath occasionally.

For a long time LaFano sat listening and watching; then he backed noiselessly away, paddled half a mile, landed, concealed his canoe in the bushes and slept in a single blanket.

He did not sleep long. He was up while many stars were still brilliant, folded his blanket, ate a cold snack and waited for the coming dawn.

When light was strong he began to walk slowly and silently through the timber. He did not stop until he could observe the activity about the camp.

Smoky, the guide, was up. Two of the three young men who comprised the party were washing in the lake. "Ready for cakes now?" Smoky asked.

"Dick and I'll be, Jim, though, he's dead to the world."

The guide grunted and drew the coffee pot from the fire.

"Last day!" said one. "D-n, what a head!"

They embarked shortly, the three in one canoe. LaFano went directly to the tent, jerked the flap aside and looked down at the sleeping figure there.

The face was upturned. It would have been a handsome one under normal conditions, but now it was lined deeply with the ravages of dissipation.

LaFano stooped. "You!" he said gruffly. The sleeper made no response. "Jim!" He shook the lad's shoulder but, except for a long breath, Flynn made no response.

The man went over the packs carefully and finally selected one that contained apparel which would fit the stealer, discarding that which by any chance might belong to the others, and packing those belongings which were obviously Jim's.

This done, he carried the pack to the canoe on the shore and set the craft in the water. The other canoe had disappeared among the islands; no sound of human origin rewarded the straining of his ears.

LaFano returned quickly to the tent, slung the recumbent figure to his shoulder and bore Young Jim, with little apparent effort, down to the shore and laid him gently in the bottom, head on the duffie in the bow.

The boy mumbled in protest and brushed at his face. Once he tried to sit up but abandoned the effort and sank back to his stupor.

Observing this LaFano left him, broke a stick and scratched in the sand on the landing the following message in bold characters:

"On my way. Good luck, J. F." With a grim smile he shoved off and paddled down the lake.

He kept on for an hour, watching the sleeping man with him until he commenced to show signs of restlessness. Then at a point of exposed rock ledge he halted and stepped out of the canoe. He made the craft fast and leaned down to shake the sleeper roughly.

"You!" he said. "Come out of it, now. Get up!" "Lemme lone, fellers . . . Gotta rest . . ."

"Get up before you get hurt!"—sharply.

Young Jim came to life with a bewildered start. His perplexed eyes finally came to rest on LaFano's face.

"Who the devil 're you?" he demanded.

"My name's LaFano. Come along. We're going to make camp."

This suggestion coincided with a need, evidently, for Young Jim got stiffly-quit of the canoe, lay down on the ledge and buried his face in the clear waters of the stream. He drank at length, with frequent interruptions for breathing. As he did this LaFano bore the canoe up into a protecting screen of bushes, careful to disturb them as little as possible. There was a chance that those three back yonder would suspect something and come searching. He wanted no complications. Returning to the stream he stood looking somberly down at his charge.

Thirst slacked, mind somewhat cleared by the bathing, Young Jim hitched himself up on one hip.

"Now," he said, pleasantly enough, "what the h—'s this all about? How does it come that you're giving me orders?"

"I came after you." "From Good-Bye?" "Yes."

"Who sent you?" "Never mind that." The boy frowned. "Are we on our way there now?"

"Might say so. A roundabout way." "What d'you mean by that?" He rose, belligerent now.

"We are going to Good-Bye when you're fit to go. That will be when you can be of some use here."

NO PROOF THAT AMERICANS ARE "GOING INDIAN"

Harvard's division of anthropology in its recent researches seems to have disposed of the theory that used to be stoutly maintained, that is, that the American type of man is reverting to that of the Indian.

We have always been skeptical of the hypothesis that the mingled white race of North America would approach nearer and nearer in resemblance to the Indian simply because it inhabits the same territory and is subject to the same influences of climate. The Indian is tall (though not in some tribes), rangy, ravenoned and in color ruddy brown.

Enthusiastic theorists profess to see the same characteristics appearing in Americans whose families have been on this side the ocean two or three hundred years. They even add factuality, which is regarded as an Indian trait.

But the whites of America have bred and prospered in an environment entirely at variance with that of the Indian, with the exception of the climate. They are now largely sedentary, if we except the farmer, and are not hunters and walkers. They tend to grow shorter in stature in cities, though by no means stunted.

The Indians are red-brown in color because their primitives, ages ago in Asia, were of that complexion. There can be no doubt that the aboriginal races of this continent crossed to it from the cradle of humanity first in the habit of the great bodies of land, by means of the chain of islands spanning Bering sea and including it on the south.

Some of the descendants of these first settlers retain all of the features of present nomadic tribes in northeastern Asia. Others have been modified in form and physiognomy by the life they have led and probably by the foods that have been their daily sustenance. We scarcely know what ten or twenty centuries of maize and venison would accomplish, but it must be something that would be visible.—F. H. Collier, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

False Words of Praise

From the Albuquerque Journal: "You have done a good job—go home and tell the press and your people."

These were the words of Gov. Hockenull in passing benediction upon the Legislature—a Legislature that fastened a Sales Tax upon the people—a tax upon the necessities of life, while the special interests escaped their proportion of the tax for the support of the schools.

It will be hard for the governor or members of the Legislature to convince the people of the state that they should be the ones to bear the further tax burdens without the state administration first having attempted to devise some just program.

It will be a hopeless task to explain away the fact that the governor, after announcing a Commission to draft a program, never called that Commission together, and threw the whole responsibility, unannounced, upon the Legislature.

It is folly to claim any accomplishment for a sales tax measure that was drafted by the special interests and accepted by the governor because he had no program of his own—that met such hard opposition in the House that he had to call in the Democratic state chairman, political employees and others to jam the measure through the House.

Yet the governor has the nerve to tell the people: "I have not seen a Democrat here play politics."

Some people are so blinded by their own virtue they cannot see the realities.

We Don't Think They Will

It is difficult for us to believe that New Mexicans will sit idly by and accept any such treatment at the hands of the Legislature and the administration.

We predict that there will be a very definite answer heard next fall when the election is held.

And, unless we're mistaken, the people will clearly show that they do not approve of the actions taken during this special session.—Lordsburg Liberal.

More—About Sales Tax

Gov. Hockenull is quoted as saying that all thinking people of the state will agree with him that the foul-smelling sales tax law is a good one. In that saying, he places the New Mexico press in the class where it is without the power of thought and is therefore, all wet, when with hardly an exception, it opposed the sales tax, of which he proudly claims to be the parent.

In his statement, he brands the people of the state who have cried out against the tax, as ignorant of their own interests—and are not capable of making their wants known as they should.

With decks of the representatives piled high with reason-

We Invite You—

Knowledge is truth. Nothing is more convincing.

Our obligation as Ford dealers in this community is not only to sell and service cars. Just as important is our duty to acquaint the public with up-to-date facts about automobile values. We believe that only in this way can intelligent comparisons be made.

So, this invitation is given to everyone—owners of large or small cars—mechanics—other automobile dealers, come in and inspect the new 1934 Ford V-8.
You will find out why a Ford buying wave is going over the country.

If you would like to drive the new Ford that is your privilege.
New thrills will delight you.
We will not bombard you with requests to buy—the car will do that.

We are looking for you!

stances against the sales tax, and the voice of the people so decisive against it, he makes the statement which is an insult to the intelligence of our citizens.

In six months' time, there will be a new Legislature which will tear to shreds every vestige of that measure enacted against the will of the common people
(the masses) of this state.

Fortunate, indeed, it is, that the time will shortly come when we can weed out the representatives who danced to the fiddles of the interests and ignored the pleas of those who were responsible for their being in the halls of the legislature. If they will but listen, they may hear the muttering thunders in the distance. What must be the homecomings of those who voted to lessen the taxes on the big interests while they placed the burden on the backs of those who were the least able to bear them? Alibis will be of no avail.
You may go where you will, and hear nothing but expressions of discontent. Many are sullen and say nothing which in itself means that there is a set determination to take somebody for a lovely ride this fall—and HOW!

No Trick Gadgets On Ford V-8 Car

No matter what the possibilities for sensational publicity Ford has never resorted to stunt features to sell his cars. Freakish body designs on an automobile are just as speculative as freakish designs on houses. Millions of dollars were spent to sell American Motorists on free wheeling. Ford declined to put it on his cars. The Ford purchaser gets a proven car both in style and operation. There are no trick gadgets to catch the fancy and later on prove to be mistakes. The Ford policy of continuous improvement is well shown in this year's car. It is the best car the Ford Motor Company has ever built.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, C. 1934, Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for May 6

JESUS ACCLAIMED AS KING

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:1-46. GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name.—Phil. 2:9. PRIMARY TOPIC—When Children Sang to Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Saviour-King. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loyalty to Jesus, Our King. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Acknowledging the Lordship of Jesus.

The picture presented in this chapter is a very dark one. The common designation "Triumphal Entry" is most unfortunate, for it was only such in appearance. Back of the cry "Hosanna" was being formed the awful cry "Crucify Him." It may be possible that the awful word "Crucify" was uttered by some of the same persons who cried "Hosanna."

I. The Preparation (vv. 1-9). 1. The sending of the disciples for the ass (vv. 1-3). Jesus told them just where to go to find it and how to answer the inquiry of the one who owned it. This shows how perfectly Jesus knows our way.

2. The fulfillment of prophecy (vv. 4, 5). Some five hundred years before, Zechariah made this prediction (Zech. 9:9). Christ's coming in this way was in exact fulfillment of this prediction. This is highly instructive to those who would understand as yet unfulfilled prophecies. The prediction of Zechariah 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as that of Zechariah 9:9.

3. The obedience of the disciples (v. 9). The request may have seemed unreasonable, but they obeyed.

II. The Entrance of the King (vv. 7-11). 1. The disciples put their garments upon the ass and set the Lord thereupon (v. 7). This act showed their recognition of him as their king (II Kings 9:13).

2. The action of the multitude (vv. 8, 9). Some spread their garments in the way; others who had no garments to spare cut down branches and did the same with them.

3. The city awakened (vv. 10, 11). It was a stirring time in Jerusalem, but a more stirring time awaits that city. This will take place when the Lord returns to the earth in power. III. The King Rejected (vv. 12-16). The immediate occasion of this rejection was the cleansing of the temple. A similar cleansing had been made some two years before (John 2:13-17), but the worldlings had gone back to their old trade. Exchange was not in itself wrong, but doing it for gain was wrong.

IV. The Nation Rejected by the King (vv. 17-46). Having shown their unwillingness to receive Christ as their king when officially presented to them, the king now turns from them and makes known their awful condition in parables.

1. The barren fig tree cursed (vv. 17-22). It was on the morning after his official presentation as he was returning from Jerusalem that Jesus observed the unfruitful fig tree. Because of hunger he sought for figs and finding none, he caused to fall upon the tree a withering curse. The barren fig tree is a type of Israel. With its leaves it gave a show of life, but being destitute of fruit it had no right to cumber the ground. The nation thus stood as a mountain in the way of the gospel. Jesus encouraged the disciples by showing that if they had faith even this great mountain could not stand in their way.

2. The parable of the two sons (vv. 23-32). Both sons are told by the father to work in his vineyard. The one, like the profligate publican, refused outright to obey but afterwards repented and went; the other pretended a willingness to obey but in reality did not. The first one represents the publicans and harlots; the second, the proud and self-righteous Pharisees, the priests, and elders. Jesus declared the publicans and harlots would go into the kingdom before them.

3. The parable of the householder (vv. 33-40).

- a. The householder. This was God himself. b. The vineyard. This means Israel (Isa. 5:1-7; Jer. 2:21; Ps. 80:9). c. The husbandmen. These were the spiritual guides, the rulers and teachers of Israel. d. The servants sent for the fruit of the vineyard. These were the various prophets whom God sent. e. The son sent by the householder. This was the Lord Jesus Christ. They knew him to be the son, but they did not show him reverence. They cast him out of the vineyard and slew him.

Value of Silence

The devotional value of silence is recognized as a period of silence spent with God, broken only by vocal meditation and prayer preparing for and arising out of the silence.

Serving God

"Let us serve God in the sunshine while he makes the sun shine. We shall then serve him all the better in the dark when he sends the darkness. The darkness is sure to come."

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Anyone who attempts to interpret Washington news or appraise its effects meets a circumstance frequently where the only course is one of watchful waiting. There is no alternative. Complex situations must work out; ulterior purposes must be disclosed to a slight degree, if there are such purposes, and some scent must be had of the factors and influences at work. Otherwise, appraisal of the potential effects usually will miss its mark under circumstances of that kind.

Dr. Wirt's Charges

Of such a type were the charges by Dr. William A. Wirt, the school superintendent from Gary, Ind., who asserted that "brain trusters" of the Roosevelt administration were seeking to overthrow our form of government and establish a communistic or Russian Soviet state in its place. Doctor Wirt's accusations came out of the blue sky, so to speak, because there was no advance notice of them. Of course, there were thousands of persons who were uneasy about the trend of events and the plans of the New Dealers. Apparently, however, most of them were unwilling to make themselves a target for the unbelieving by becoming vocal about their opinions. So, the setting in which Washington observers found themselves was, to say the least, a new one.

With these facts in mind, I have awaited an exposition of Doctor Wirt's charges before attempting to analyze them or to fit them into other things that have been happening to make a complete picture. His appearance before the house committee of inquiry left nothing to be desired in the dramatics. He was there, accompanied by that famed attorney, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, which, in itself, a surprise. And Doctor Wirt stood up against the barrage of attempts to discredit him! He never flinched; he fought back, and he was apparently convinced of his own findings, a fact that gave him added courage.

Doctor Wirt wasted no words in telling of the famous party in a nearby Virginia home where Lawrence Todd, Washington representative of the Russian Soviet news agency "Tass" and several "satellites" of the brain trust were at dinner with the Indiana educator. He quoted Todd as the authority for the statement that President Roosevelt was the "Kerensky" of the present revolution and that presently Mr. Roosevelt would be supplanted by a "Stalin," even as occurred in Russia.

Of course, Mr. Todd has no part in the government, officially, and a good many of those who scoffed at Doctor Wirt originally contended the charges were just "baloney." But he made the statements under oath and their effect now is the thing with which we are concerned. For to say that the charges have had no effect is to make a statement that the moon is made of green cheese.

To those of us whose job it is to keep a finger on the pulse of public sentiment, it has been apparent for several months that a reaction against many of the New Deal principles had set in. I, for one, however, was unable to gauge it accurately. I could not tell how deeply rooted these convictions were. It required some such incident as the Wirt charges to focus attention on the fact that there were doubters before most of us here could gain an idea of the "oppositionist" movement that appeared to exist. Let me say at this point, too, that it is apparent Mr. Roosevelt is not the only target; the criticism seems to be more of the ideas prompted by his brain trust advisers than the President's own reform or recovery principles. There is a decided difference, one realizes, between the two, for one group in the administration is promoting reform and another recovery.

Reaction Sets In

Here is where the Wirt testimony becomes important in its effect. By making the charges, Doctor Wirt directed attention to the two schools of thought. In effect, he has called upon the country to distinguish between reform and recovery programs, and has asked the question whether we shall sacrifice recovery in order that reform ideas may be forced down the throats of those who find it difficult to swallow untried theories.

There can be no doubt that several millions of Americans who, heretofore, were willing to trust Mr. Roosevelt to run the whole show, are now making individual examinations of the structure which the New Dealers have, or propose to, set up. I think it equally true as well that these examinations by individuals will result in a crystallizing of opinions more than has happened up to this time. They undoubtedly will find some good and some bad, some workable and some unworkable, items among the New Deal plans. That ought to be a wholesome thing for the country. History seems to prove that a cross section of our national mind is nearly always correct after the hysteria dies down. Thus, the opinions I gather around Washington stress the importance of the reform that obviously is going to result from New Deal methods. But they emphasize equally the importance of the Wirt testimony in balking an onrushing wave of so-called reforms that so many persons consider to be actually destructive of the basic and proved practices of our commerce and industry.

And, after all, that is the point at issue in this country today. Doctor Wirt quoted Mr. Todd as having said that "Roosevelt is in midstream and the current is too strong for him to turn back." I still have faith in our system of government and I have more faith in a majority opinion of the people of the United States. Since Doctor Wirt testified, they are on their guard. It may be that the sun of the brain trust theorist is setting.

One more observation about the Wirt affair: in a long service in Washington, I have seen few hearings as badly muddled by a committee of congress.

Each of the members of the committee knew, of course, that the atmosphere was surcharged with politics. Some of the Democrats obviously were afraid that Doctor Wirt was going to explode a bombshell of politics that would do their party no good at all, and some of the Republicans were afraid that Doctor Wirt would not explode that bombshell. Consequently, there was haggling without end. I believe the consensus among the hundred-odd correspondents who were reporting the hearing was that Representative Bulwinkle of North Carolina, a Democrat and the chairman, reflected no particular credit upon himself or the committee as inquisitors. Criticism of Representative McGugin, a Republican from Kansas, also was heard, for Mr. McGugin went just as far in supporting the witness as Mr. Bulwinkle did in harassing him.

In the background of the committee, haggling, stood the tall, gray-haired figure of "Jim" Reed. Senator Reed, when he was in the senate, was probably the most feared of all debaters. His vitriolic retorts and cutting statements seldom failed to make spines quiver. His presence as Doctor Wirt's counsel failed at first to cheer Mr. Bulwinkle, but the fact that he was there provided Mr. McGugin with assurance of help in any battle of words.

Certain evidence of people's views always is reflected in congress rather quickly after changes in sentiment take place, and it is no different now. There was a time during the first months of President Roosevelt's administration when anything he sent to congress was put through, and no questions were asked. Currently, however, there is a disposition among members of both political parties in congress to inquire into the character of legislation they are putting through. For example, the bill that the President wanted for controlling the security exchanges, like the New York Stock Exchange, was advertised by Democratic leaders at first as being ready to go through without question. Mr. Roosevelt said he wanted "teeth" in it, and teeth were put in it, plenty of them. Indeed, the proposed legislation would have left little of the stock exchange to operate. Rigid control was a mild expression compared with that original stock market bill.

Stock exchange members, brokerage houses and plain investors suddenly awakened to the fact that the bill was going to do things to them. They started to fight. They found responsive chords in the house and senate. Reason and logic, as opponents of the bill understood those words, began to prevail and, presently, rumors of proposed changes in the measure began to crop up. And what's more, the changes began to be accepted by a majority of the committees that had the bill in charge, despite frequent reiterations by Senator Fletcher, chairman of the senate banking committee, and Chairman Rayburn, of the house Interstate Commerce committee, that the President wanted the teeth left in.

It is to be admitted, I think, that there was a lot of monkey-doodle business going on among some members of security exchanges. My belief is that they did not always give the individual investors in stocks a fair shake. But some of the reformers included in the administration's brain trust appear to have overlooked the good in whatever amount it exists in the stock exchanges.

But, to get to the point of the story. Many persons hold to the view that the government should not spread a parental wing too far over private affairs. It has been done already beyond the anticipation of a majority of the people. They want to be free to deal in stocks, to speculate, even to gamble, if you please, without having bureaucracy here in Washington to tell them what to do.

The legislation will go through eventually. Of that there is no doubt. In its final form, however, it will not be the handiwork of the reformers. There will be reforms brought about by it, only they will be for the purposes of correcting abuses and not for the purpose of trying out theories on somebody's money.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT MOTOR OILS—Conoco dares to give you the facts!

Here are no idle claims—But PROOF!

A representative of the AAA Contest Board, vigilant, unbiased investigator.

COMPARE this positive proof of superiority with all the exaggerated claims you hear about motor oils—now the facts can be told. We arranged with the Contest Board, American Automobile Association, to test five widely-known and advertised motor oils along with New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil in a daring "Destruction Test."

These six oils, a single fill of 5 quarts, with no more oil added, in six brand new strictly stock cars, were driven until the motor in each car was destroyed from lack of lubrication. The first oil failed with motor destroyed at 1,713.2 miles—others failed in rapid succession. The best of the competing oils ran a total of 3,318.8 miles... while New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil lubricated its motor for a total of 4,729 miles!... and more than 1,400 miles farther than the second best oil. Thanks to Conoco's Hidden Quart protection, this amazing victory stands unchallenged!

This is evidence... these are facts... that should open a new era of results and economy for your motor. Drive into a Conoco Station or dealer—fill with this New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. There's no longer any guess about what oil is best for your car!

Warning TO NEW CAR OWNERS

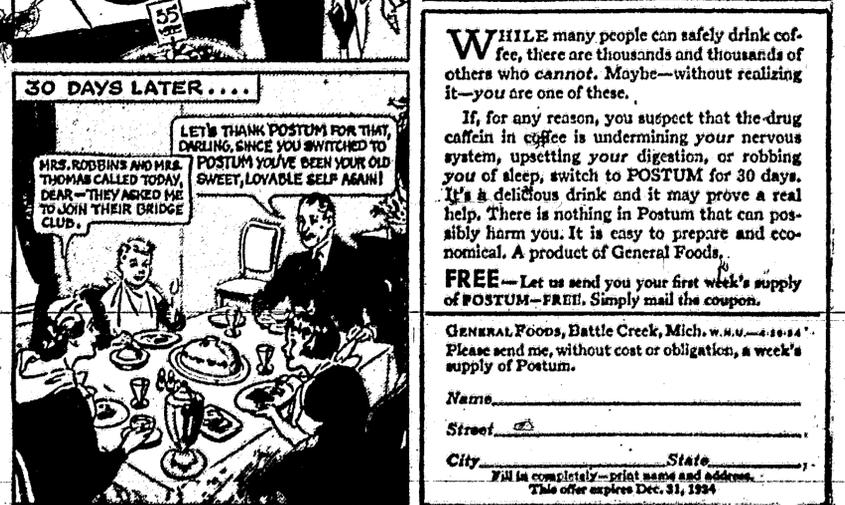

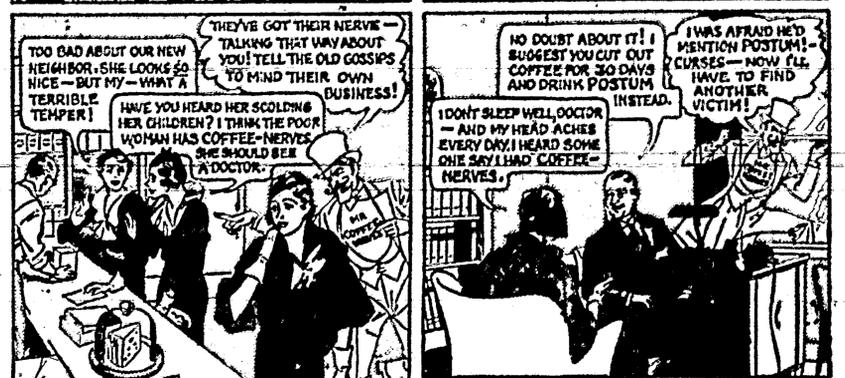

Some car manufacturers are using new types of bearings which will stand greater pressures and temperatures, resulting from increased power and speed. New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil has been exhaustively tested on these new bearings. The results show that it gives them greater protection against damage than many straight mineral oils now on the market. Protect your new car by using the motor oil you can be sure of.

The White Sands Monument

Many Carrizozo people went to Alamogordo last Sunday to join in the celebration of Old Settlers' Day and to dedicate the White Sands as a National Monument. Uncle Pete Johnson and Ed Harris led the van at an early hour and they were followed by others, all anxious to visit the White Sands and get a thrill out of that vast space of whiteness which so closely resembles snow in its appearance.

Many old-timers, principal among whom was Ex-Senator Albert B. Fall, gave addresses. Mr. Fall's advanced age and his weakened physical condition made it impossible for him to give a lengthy address, but what he said was to his old friends and neighbors with whom he had lived since the early 80's. The old-timers listened with eagerness and many there were who gave vent to tears, as he told of early days with his old friends and experiences in what was then the territory of New Mexico. He was the center of attraction, which showed that the people of our section of the state are stronger for their old friend than ever.
