Another Sad Misfortune

Saturday afternoon about five o'clock, while driving a gravel truck near the gravel pit about eight miles east of the overpass, the truck driven by William Bartlett, aged 35, turned over, pinning the unfortunate man underneath and breaking his legs just below the knees.

He was hurried to the Johnson hospital, where after an examination it was found that his legs must be amputated above the knees, which was done by Dr. Johnson, assisted by Dr. Shaver. Due to the shock and the enormous loss of blood in getting him from the scene of the accident to the hospital, he died near the hour of five o'clock Sunday morning.

Funeral services were held at the Santa Rita Church Monday afternoon with Father Salvatore conducting the same and at the grave, military rites were performed by the local Post of the American Legion. Interment was at the local cemetery.

OUT-OF-THE ORDINARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Dale were here from their ranch last Saturday. During the course of conversation, John related an incident which was rather unusual. He was working on the new highway northeast of Corona and the plat of the road called for a grade on the side of a hill. As the plow turned the hardened soil, he noticed that they had unearthed a coffin, which was found to contain the remains of some elderly gentleman. The clothing which covered the skeleton was still in an ordinary state of preservation, but on disturbing the box and exposing the remains to the air, all crumbled to dust. Who the stranger was, will never be known.

In her application for a divorce, Mrs. Mary Bricker of Los Angeles charges that her husband insisted on throwing hot tamales at her whenever he became angered. She always hid the tamales when he got mad, but he always found them. The husband denied the charge and said it was only a little fun.

Clinging to life by a slight thread, little Eva Nadine, one pound baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Locke of Yarrelton, Texas, has astounded watching physicians in her little antics in her living quarters, a small dresser drawer. In spite of the fact that her attendants say she cannot live, she is well developed, black-haired and makes a good-sized noise as she tries to put her tiny thumb in her mouth. She was born Thursday morning of last week and the nurses feed her with an eye dropper.

Another woman sued for freedom and as her grounds, she charged her husband with cruelty, battery, assault to kill and even went so far as to charge him with non-support. The decree was granted by default, but the fact of the matter was that poor husband made too much love to her and she wanted free-love.

A creek in Norwalk, Ohio, which has never been dry for the past 135 years has succumbed to the drouth. The creek has been the swimming place for many noted men of that section during their boyhood. It was also a fishing place for those who have been dead for many years, but now it is bone dry.

ROBBERS' ROOST

CHAPTER I

by ZANE GREY

Copyright—WNU Service.

One afternoon in the spring of 1937 a solitary horseman rode down the long, ghostly desert trail in the direction of the ford at Green River.

He was a young man in years, but he had the hard face and eagle eye of one matured in experience of that wild country. He bestrode a superb bay horse, dusty and travel-worn and a little lame. The rider was no slight burden, judging from his height and wide shoulders; moreover, the saddle carried a canteen, a rifle and a pack.

At length he rode into a trail and soon came in sight of the wide band of green cottonwood, willow and arrowweed, and the shining, muddy river. On the far side, up on the level, stood a green patch and a cluster of houses. This was the town of Green River, Utah.

The rider needed to reach that town before dark. His food supply had run out two days ago. But unless there was a boat in which he could row across he would most likely not make it. His horse was too lame to risk in the eddies of that heavy, swirling, sand-laden river.

He rode on down the trail to enter the zone of green. In the thick dust he noted fresh horse tracks. Under a cottonwood, some distance ahead, the rider espied a saddled horse, head down, cropping the grass. He proceeded more slowly, his sharp eyes vigilant, and was certain that he saw a man on the river bank.

Presently he rode out into an opening from which he could see a place where a ferry touched. Moored to the opposite bank was the ferryboat.

The rider sat his horse, aware that the man he had observed had stepped behind some willows. Such a move might have been casual. Then the man moved out into plain sight.

"Howdy," he said, inconspicuously. "Howdy," replied the rider. He became aware of a penetrating scrutiny which no doubt resembled his own.

The rider saw a striking figure of a man, gray with dust, hooded and spurred, aimed to the teeth. His wide sombrero shadowed a sharp bold face.

"Alcin' to cross?" he queried. "Yea, I see a ferry boat over there." But on the moment the rider was watching his questioner. Then he swept a long leg over the pommel and alid to the ground, without swerving in the slightest from a direct front.

"Lucky for me if I can cross on it. My horse is all in."

"Noticed that. Fine boss. Wal, I've been hangin' around for an hour, waitin' to go over. Reckon you'll be along soon."

"Town of Green River, isn't it?" "That's the handle. You're a stranger hereabouts?"

"I am that?" "Where you hail from?"

"I suppose I might as well say Wyoming as any place," returned the rider, casually.

The other man relaxed with a laugh. "Shore. One place is good as another. Same as a name. Mine is Hank Hays." He spoke as if he expected it to be recognized but it brought no reaction from his listener.

"You know this country?" queried the rider, and he too relaxed.

"Tolerable."

"Maybe you can tell me whether I ought to stop or keep on traveling?" "How! How! I shore can. But that depends," he said, pushing back his sombrero.

"Depends on what?" the rider asked. "Wal, on you. Have you got any money?"

"About ten dollars."

"Huh. You can't go in the ranch business with that. Not regular ranchin'. Lots of cattle between here and the brakes of the Dirty Devil. Henry mountains, too. Some outfit over there. Air you a cattleman?"

"No," replied the rider, thoughtfully. "Wal, that's straight talk from a stranger," replied Hays, who evidently took the blunt denial as something significant. "Hullo, another rider. . . . Shore the desert is full of strangers today."

Back up the trail appeared a short, heavy man astride a horse and leading two pack animals.

"I saw him a while back. And here comes our ferryman. Looks like a boy."

"Huh. You haven't them eyes for nothin'. Wal, we'll get across now."

The rider, after another glance at the approaching man with the horses, took note of the ferry. Boat and third traveler arrived at the bank about the same time.

Hays, after a sharp look at the man with the three horses, led his animal aboard.

"How much is the fare?" queried the newcomer.

"Two bits."

"For man or beast?" "Well sir, the regular fare is two bits for each man an' horse."

Whereupon the stout man threw the packs off his horses and carried them upon the boat.

"Wal, now, what is this fussy old geezer about?" queried Hays, much interested.

It was soon manifest. He tied the halter of his lead pack horse to the tail of his saddle horse. The second pack animal was similarly attached to the first. Then, bridled in hand, he stepped aboard.

current, which caught it, and moved it across quite readily into the slack water on that side.

"Didn't like that, did you, boy?" the rider said, as he led the animal ashore.

Hays slapped his mount, driving him off the ferry, while he watched the stout man lead his three horses along the gunwale of the boat, until they could touch bottom. Heaving and splashing they waded out, and their owner followed, carrying one pack.

"Fetch my other pack, boy," he called.

"Johnny, don't do nothin' of the kind," observed Hays.

"I reckon I didn't intend to," said the boy, resentfully.

Pushing hard the stout man carried his second pack ashore.

"You're not very obliging," he said, gruffly, as he felt in his pocket for loose change. The ferryboy came ashore, followed by Hays.

Presently the stout man, grumbling, and evidently annoyed at the necessity of producing a fat pocketbook, took out a one-dollar bill.

The rider, amused and interested from his stand on the bank, saw something that made him start. Hays whipped out a gun.

"Throw Up Your Hands!" Suddenly Yelled Hays.

"Throw up your hands!" suddenly yelled Hays.

"What's this? I robbers!" the stout man gulped.

Hays reached for the man's wallet. Then he stepped back, but still with gun extended.

"Get out of here now," he ordered. And apparently he paid no more heed to his frightened victim.

"Pretty well heeled, for an old bird," observed the robber, squeezing the fat wallet.

"You'll hear from me, you glib-tongued robber," replied the other, furiously, as he rode away.

Hays scratched his gun. He did not need to turn to face the rider, for, singularly enough, he had not done anything else.

"How'd that strike you, stranger?" "Pretty neat. It suited me," replied the rider.

"Is that all?" "I guess so. The stingy old skin-dog deserved to be touched. Wasn't that a slick way to treat the boy here out of six bits?"

"It shore was. An' that's what riled me. Reckon, though, if he hadn't fished the wallet I'd been a little more circumspect."

"Is there a sheriff at Green River?" "I never seen him, if there is. Wal, I'll be ridin' along. Air you comin' with me, stranger?"

"Might as well," returned the other. "Stranger, what'd you say your name was?"

"Call me Wall, Jim Wall," rejoined the rider.

Hays nonchalance reassured Wall as to the status of Green River.

"Any dance hall in this burg?" asked Wall.

"Nary dance hall, worse luck. Any weakness for such?"

"Can't say it's a weakness, but the last two I bumped into make me want to steer clear of more."

"Women?" queried the robber. "It wasn't any fault of mine."

"Wal, women ruined me," returned Hays, sentimentally.

"You don't look it."

"Men never look what they air."

"Don't agree with you. I can always tell what men are by their looks."

lert that he wanted the sheriff "cause he'd been robbed, my friend, Happy up an' says, 'Hey, my friend, did you lose anything on you?' Then the fellow up an' rode off."

It was this speech of Red's that decided several things for Jim Wall.

"I want to look after my horse," was all he said.

"Take him round back to the barn. I'm dog-tired. Send that lazy Jake after my horse."

This edifice was the last one on the street. The barn mentioned was some distance back at the end of a pole fence. Upon turning a corner to enter the corral he encountered a loose-jointed young man.

"Say, are you Jake?" he asked. "You bet," returned the other.

"There's a man out in front who calls himself Hank Hays. He wants you to come get his horse. Do you know him?"

The stable boy's reply to that was to rush off, his boots thudding.

"Enough said," muttered Wall to himself. "Mr. Hays stands well in Green River, as far as this outfit is concerned."

Wall mantered back and, before Hank Hays and the two individuals with whom he was talking were aware of his presence he had seen them. They turned at his slow, clicking step. Neither of the two with Hays was the man called Red.

"Hullo, here you air," spoke up Hays. "I was speakin' of you. Meet Happy Jack an' Brad Lincoln. . . . Fellers, this stranger to Green River answers to the handle Jim Wall."

Greetings were exchanged, but not one of the three offered a hand. To Wall the man called Happy Jack fitted his name. The only contradictory feature lay in his guns. Like Hank Hays, he packed two. The other, Lincoln, was some one to look at twice—a swarthy, dark, restless-eyed man, who, like Hays and his companion, had nothing of the cowboy stripe in his make-up.

"Let's have a drink," suggested Hays.

"Don't care if I do," responded Wall. The interior, bright with lamplight, proved to be more pretentious than the outside of the saloon.

The men lined up at the bar, to be served drinks by Red, who was evidently bartender as well as proprietor. Wall missed nothing.

"Cowpuncher?" queried Lincoln. "Yes. But I've not ridden the range much of late years," replied Wall.

"You've the cut of it. Where you aimin' for?"

"No place in particular," replied Wall, guardedly. "Might try riding here, if I can get on some outfit."

"On the dodge?" queried Lincoln. "What might you mean by 'on the dodge'?"

"Anybody particular lookin' for you?"

"I daresay. More than one man."

"So I thought. Friend, you have the cut, the eye, the movement, the hand of a gun-fighter. I happen to know the brand."

"Yea? Well, if that's so I hope it isn't against me in Utah."

Here Hays, who had heard this bit of dialogue, interposed both with person and speech:

"Wall, that's agin' a man anywhere in the West, generally. So many fools wantin' to try you out! But I reckon it's a ticket for my outfit."

"Your outfit?" questioned Wall. "Shore. Don't mind Brad. Let's go an' eat. . . . Fellers, we'll see you later."

Wall followed Hays into a back room, where a woman waved them to seats at a table.

At the conclusion of the meal Jim Wall had to guard himself against the feeling of well-being resulting from a full stomach.

"Have a cigar," offered Hays. "Don't care if I do."

"Wall, let's go out an' talk before we join the other fellers," suggested Hays. They returned to the big room. It was empty except for Red, who was filling a lamp.

"They've all gone down to meet the stage. It's overdue now."

"Stage? From where?" "West, so set easy," laughed Hays. "That one from east won't git in till next Wednesday. By that time you won't be here."

"Not? Where will I be, since you seem to know?"

"You may be in the garden of Eden, eatin' peaches," retorted Hays. "See here, Wall, you're a tasty cuss. Any reason why you can't be a good feller?"

"Come to think of that, yes, there is," returned Wall, thoughtfully.

"All right. Thanks for that much. I reckon I understand you better. What were you, Wall, once upon a time?"

Wall laughed musingly. "A country school teacher once."

"Wal! I'll be dog-goned!" ejaculated Hays. "It do beat all what a man can be, at different times in his life. But I'm concerned with now. An' I'd like to ask you some questions."

"Fire away."

"You said you was broke?" Hays began.

"I will be when I pay for this night's lodgin'."

"That's on me. I'll stake you to some money. You'll want to set in the game with us?"

Ill Humor Result of Tired Nerves

Temporary Upsets Should Be Looked Upon as Unimportant.

Even in the best regulated families it frequently happens that a party, eating or other good time which calls forth nervous energy is followed by a quarrel, or, at least, a feeling of irritability which makes the tension high in the home circle. The important matter is to regard these temperamental upsets as wholly unimportant. They are purely the result of fatigue, and no personal grudge should be held for the occurrence, regrettable, though it is, and unpleasant-at the time.

Just as thunder showers follow a hot sunshiny day, so these temperamental outbursts are purely the effect of too much exuberance, coupled with the necessity of being with close companions, when the real need is for a little period of rest and solitude. If possible to give yourself the "break" which a little rest and quiet affords after a strenuous time, do so, for the sake of yourself and others. But if this is not possible, and a deluge of words begins to be hurled from friends or members of the family, yourself included, let the event pass as quickly as does a momentary shower, and as soon as the "air has cleared," let it be forgotten. - It is not just the children of the household which should be granted this indulgence. Mothers are usually on the watch for such temperamental disturbances after a good time. Many adults have not outgrown this perfectly natural reaction of tired nerves and bodies. The difference is that mothers, knowing the cause, do not take the circumstances seriously.

Adults are not always as fair or generous in their judgments. However, it may seem at the time, nothing said in such a mood should be taken as significant. Let the sun shine as soon as the moment allows, and realize that all that were good friends before, still are the same, and that a nervous system which sometimes becomes tyrannical has been playing a few rather showy tricks which have nothing to do with the basis for love and friendship.

Animals "Made Up" for Motion Picture Work

There are beauty hints for animals as well as human beings, and a score of make-up devices as well. To the motion-picture camera all the members of the animal kingdom are alike; the only difference is in the personnel of the respective make-up departments and the dressing rooms, observes a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The dressing rooms for the jungle beasts on the film lot of one company are a hundred closely guarded cages. The make-up man is as different from the manicured attendants to the human players as are his charges.

A thick beard hides his bronzed skin. His beauty equipment consists of huge flies, fantastic shears, combs with yard-long handles—the sort of tools a beautician might see in a nightmare. He moves from cage to cage, his hands deftly wielding the instruments. For heaven forbid that a cinema cat or a "movie" monkey should hear the call to "camera!" without first being primed

Washington.—The end of June statements of all of the banks of the country are now a matter of record and Bank Deposits increase surprisingly, nearly all of the individual banks have shown increases in deposits and resources over a year ago. A couple of the largest banks in New York showed such astounding increases in deposits as $100,000,000, compared with June, 1933. But irrespective of the increase in deposits—that is, the money actually in possession of the banks—almost none of them disclosed any increase in the total loans now outstanding. Indeed, the rule was a decline from June 30, 1933.

Banking authorities in the government and outside tell me these figures on deposits and resources clearly indicate an improvement in the general banking situation. The Federal Reserve board in its latest report on conditions declared the banking structure was on a much firmer foundation. Yet, the fact that the banks have not made loans is being seized upon by a certain segment of politicians and alleged economists as proof that the banks are not doing their part. From very high quarters in the administration we hear intermittent yelps that the banks are not co-operating and are not attempting to loan money. This condition, as they construe it, is being used as the excuse for the existence of numerous of the government loaning agencies and for other activities under the New Deal that result in getting money out into the country.

The circumstances in the decline of bank loans, however, is to my mind not such as the critics of the banks claim. It must be remembered first of all that bankers, when they make loans, are putting out money belonging to you and to other depositors. They must be reasonably sure of getting it back, even though we do have now the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation that is supposed to prevent losses for the depositors. Bankers, therefore, are willing to make loans of the vast sums of idle cash their banks hold if they can only find someone who will put up security guaranteeing a return of the borrowed funds.

While some of the critics of the bankers have been continuing their attacks, I note statements from the Public Works administration, from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, from the Home Owners' Loan corporation, and the Farm Credit administration, among others, which show very clearly that the government or its agencies is unwilling to make loans unless it can force a reasonable chance for repayment. Just the other day, the Public Works administration withdrew an allocation of some $3,577,000 for construction of a bridge in Chicago because, according to Public Works Administrator Ickes, the political subdivision of that city having jurisdiction was unable to provide a guarantee of repayment of that loan. Every day local units of the Home Owners' Loan corporation are turning down applications by home owners who seek government money through mortgages on their property to aid them in whatever distress they find themselves. The same statement may be made respecting loans by the Reconstruction Finance corporation in its dealings with industry.

Lately the various Federal Reserve banks issued a weekly statement of their operations, and only three of the twelve reserve institutions reported having made loans to industry.

I have inquired in numerous quarters for reasons why borrowers were so few. The consensus Why Borrow—given me by men ers Are Few who should know, is that there are two distinct reasons for the small amount of loans being made by banks and, of course, the same reasons apply in the case of government loans, except that the government has been known to put out money in places from which it probably never will be returned. One of the reasons mentioned was that individuals and firms who most need money have nothing but their own signed obligations to put up as a guarantee. Obviously, if an individual or a corporation has no resources, the note of that individual or that corporation is of little value, however honest and well intentioned the borrower may be.

The second reason, and one that is quite as important, is the lack of confidence which business men tell me exists to a large extent in commerce and industry. Whatever is the basis for this lack of confidence is not a matter of concern in this discussion, but its existence seems to me to be a matter of the gravest importance. Whether taxpayers are afraid of the burden in levies which they can foresee, is the reason for their hesitancy, is not now wholly apparent. Many observers are convinced it is an industrial factor. There is also the question which one hears so often asked: Where and how far does the New Deal intend to go in socialization and reform? It seems to be obvious that each of these, and perhaps others, are factors standing in the way of a sound expansion of business under the recovery plan.

In the meantime, the federal government is going ahead with its program to spend our way out of the depression. Here is one item to show what is happening. This road building has resulted in the construction of enough miles—more than 22,000—of new highway almost to encircle the earth. This money was voted by congress in the last session as a means of creating work. Proponents of the appropriation, and administration authorities, hold that the $400,000,000 earmarked for road building would provide thousands of new jobs. Bureau of public roads figures indicate that this has been the result, but I find many observers who are wondering whether the amount of money that has been paid to labor for highway construction has been a proper proportionate part of the total set aside, when the purpose was solely the making of jobs.

Total figures by the public roads office show that 6,900 miles were completed and in use on July 1 of this year and that 14,000 miles were under construction, with the probability that they will be in use by the end of 1934. Contracts have been awarded, the bureau has said, for the construction of about 1,000 miles more, and work on this portion will be under way in the late summer.

It used to be assumed that when economic conditions were below par, many owners of automobiles would dispense with their machines until they were better situated financially. Such, however, seems not to have been the case in the last year. Automobile registrations, while they declined in 1933, continued to remain at an unusually high figure as compared with recent years. Official statistics show that 23,872,000 motor vehicles were in use last year. This is only 1 per cent below 1932. The decline from 1931 to 1932 was larger, but the point is, according to officials, that the decline was very small. The authorities insist that the reduction in total motor vehicles in use as compared with 1932 should be considered as hardly noticeable when the whole country and the whole number of motor vehicles is considered. Although I have not the official statistics concerning the sales of new cars last year, responsible sources inform me that this business was very much improved and they add also that the sales for 1934 in the first six months have been exceptionally high. This would indicate that a great many individuals have found money, in some way or another, which they could spare for a new automobile.

Washington observers lately have noticed an increasing tendency among conservatives throughout the country, whether Democratic or Republican, to align themselves under one banner. The movement as yet is much in the embryo, but I am told by various observers who are acquainted with political trends that the alignment is taking a rather definite shape.

Some months ago I reported in these columns the belief of many political leaders that Mr. Roosevelt, as President, was definitely engaged in the formation of a Roosevelt party that would adhere strictly to liberal standards. Assignments which the President has made, the legislation which he has proposed, and his general attitude on social matters coupled with an absolute disregard of old-time Democratic principles, has laid the groundwork for the regrouping of voters under a liberal and conservative alignment. It is to be noted in this connection that Mr. Roosevelt is continuing to expand his liberal doctrines under the guidance of some of the political leaders heretofore held to be radical members of the two old parties.

Another factor and influence that is noted now to be at work is the gradual concentration of business interests on the conservative side of political questions under the New Deal. Washington has heard lately of efforts being made which would result in the molding of business interests, or the spokesmen therefor, into a compact organization as a means of combating policies of the New Deal regarded by business leaders as radical in character.

It is too early to attempt a forecast as to the scope of this move. Nevertheless, it is quite apparent that a concentration of this strength is under way. Not only will these men and interests oppose expansion of such policies as NRA and the AAA but they are organizing to fight the ever-increasing burden of taxation and to oppose extension of government in business. It is a matter of record, of course, that the tendency of government policies in the United States since the World war has been steadily to the left. Conservatives have been unable thus far to check this trend, largely because the conservative element never has stood together. It is important and significant, therefore, that for the first time we are observing the development of a conservative organization in this country which has the avowed purpose of turning the American government back somewhat to the right and, as the leaders describe it, back again to the Constitution as it was originally drawn.

Chat on Variety of Food Matters

Readers' Perplexities May Be Relieved by This Expert Advice.

The following suggestions and advice are from a recognized American authority on the subjects dealt with:

The column today is devoted to answering questions which have been asked by readers. Perhaps some of these questions have been in your mind, but not enough to urge you to take your pen in hand. Here is the first:

"Which are better—broad noodles or thin noodles, and what is the best way to cook them?" The answer is neither is better—some like one kind and some like another. Probably the thinly cut noodles are most popular for soup. For noodles boiled or fried, a medium size is usually chosen, although one of the best dishes made from the foundation, which I had the other day, used the very thinnest. The boiled noodles were dressed with almonds browned in butter and sprinkled with poppy seeds. This is a dish of German origin, and is really food for a gourmet.

Now, as to cooking noodles. They should be placed in boiling water and cooked only until tender—five to eight minutes is the average time. Noodles need plenty of butter or sauce with them, as they are rather bland in flavor. One good combination is noodles, fried apples and buttered fine breadcrumbs; grated cheese, tomato sauce, stewed kidneys, sautéed chicken livers are other suggestions for sauces. I am sure I have mentioned before the attractiveness of a noodle ring as a setting for creamed meats, fish or vegetables; or for buttered vegetables. The boiled noodles are pressed into a ring mold, which is set in hot water to heat, and are then turned out on a hot platter ready for the filling.

Another question: "Will you send me a recipe for chicken soufflé? What is the trick in keeping it from falling?" The recipe is given today. The "trick" is using a white sauce, or soft breadcrumb formation for the beaten eggs and minced chicken, and setting the pan into hot water while baking, for a rather long time (45 minutes in a modern oven). This recipe can be varied by using other kinds of meat, fish or vegetables. Be sure plenty of seasoning is used for a soufflé, which otherwise may be too bland to be interesting.

Another letter writer asks what is the difference between brown Betty and scalloped apples. There are a dozen different ways of making this dessert. I am going to give you my favorite method today. You may prefer brown, instead of white sugar, and you may like to use soft crumbs instead of the fried breadcrumbs. Of course any other fruit may be used in a recipe of this sort. I personally like a mixture of sliced bananas and apples in this recipe. I also like a combination of rhubarb and raisins. Hard sauce is usually served with this dessert, but a thinner sauce, or plain cream, is very good. As a reader has asked for a recipe for ice cream sauce I will include it today in connection with brown Betty, which, by the way, may be served hot or cold. I prefer it hot myself, especially if hard sauce is used. This sauce belongs with hot foods, although one of its forms "butter frosting," is good on cakes, which are always at least cool when they are served.

Chicken Soufflé.
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk
3 eggs separated
1 cup minced chicken
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons onion juice

Melt butter, stir in flour, add milk gradually, stirring constantly until smooth. Pour gradually onto well-beaten yolks. Add minced chicken, salt and onion juice. Season to taste. Cool. Fold in stiffly beaten whites, place in a well-buttered mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about forty-five minutes, or until firm.

Scalloped Apples.
3 cups bread
2 tablespoons butter

Cuticura Talcum Powder
Protect your skin with a powder that is mildly antiseptic and at the same time fine, soft and smooth as silk. Fragrant, oriental balsamic essential oils comprise the medication of Cuticura Talcum. Instantly upon touching the skin these oils start their soothing, healing work and you are protected against irritation.

4 apples
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Cut bread into dice and saute with butter until brown. Peel apples and cut very thin. Dredge with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread, then add apples and remaining bread in alternate layers, saving a few of the crumbs to put on top. Bake one-half hour, covered, and the last fifteen minutes uncovered, in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

Ice Cream Sauce.
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup cream, whipped

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, then the vanilla and beaten egg yolks. Add the milk and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until it thickens. Remove from the fire and fold in the whipped cream.

Farmers Firmly Believe Drouth a Punishment

Latest reports from over the country, show that the farmers, in general, and most of them are convinced, that the present drouth was sent on the nation as a divine punishment for the killing of little pigs, plowing under the growing crops and destroying the things which a divine Providence had given us to sustain life. They also believe that this was done in order to cause prices to rise so that the big corporations might become more wealthy out of the pockets of the poor; the ones least able to stand the blow.

In that belief, the farmers are joined by Church, Sunday School and organizations of a kindred nature. Secretary Wallace and his AAA, are receiving stacks of letters daily, condemning the action of destroying crops and killing baby pigs, laying stress on the belief that the drouth is a punishment for this evil practice. Ministers of various denominations are spreading the doctrine among the farmers and it is growing at a rapid rate.

One of the greatest fears in the minds of Mr. Wallace and his AAA, is the psychological danger in the situation. It is a well known fact that the AAA and Secretary Wallace have been flirting with farmers to get their votes at the next election, but in the face of that endeavor comes this avalanche of protests which say that unless this wilful destruction of animal life and crops is stopped, we will have a worse visitation than the drouth sent upon us.

In other words, the protests say, if we destroy what the creator has given us, we must suffer the penalty for rebelling against nature. Nevertheless, these appeals are as sounding brass to Mr. Wallace and the AAA, for they say that regardless of the drouth and protests, the work of destruction must continue. In the meantime, the doctrine as outlined above, is spreading like a prairie fire.

SUCH IS LIFE

Slender Lines for Heavier Figures

Of course you want a slender-looking dress if you have a somewhat heavy figure. The up and down points of the hip-line are wisely planned for this, as is the deep V-neck with its delicate touch of lace. This dress is delightful in one of the bright silk or sheer cotton prints that are enlivening the season. Polka dots or colorful circles on a dark ground are a nice design, too, as the picture shows. The belt may be of the material of the dress, or it may be of a contrasting or harmonizing color. You'll like yourself in this dress. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Pattern 1779 is available in sizes 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 1/2 yards 53-inch fabric and 1/2 yard 2 1/2-inch lace.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Charles Isle Home of Strange Exiles

Story of Their Lives is Almost Unbelievable.

Kansas City.—On a burned and blackened volcanic island that rises precipitously from the sea nearly 600 miles west of the South American republic of Ecuador is gathered an astonishing assortment of queer human beings, says the Kansas City Times. An account of the lives of these persons on lonely Charles Island furnishes an incredible, almost unbelievable story.

Weird stories of strange happenings on the bleak, lava-strewn bit of land that once was a convict settlement have been filtering into civilized haunts of man. Captains and crews of small trading vessels which put in at the island have told outlandish yarns of the inhabitants and their modes of living. So disturbing were the accounts that the government of Ecuador sent officials to the isolated point of land to investigate. The inhabitants of the island were questioned and their methods of living were inquired into. Then an official report of the investigation was filed with the Ecuadorian government and authentic information about the island was made available. And, surprising thing, the report substantiates the fantastic accounts that have been coming from the island!

Cast of Characters.

This barren, jagged, rocky island whose shores are washed by the equatorial waters of the Pacific has nine inhabitants. The cast of characters: Frederick Ritter, of Berlin, eminent German physician, dentist and philosopher, who went to the island with him from her German home. She and Ritter forsook civilization to live a life of peace, which, they charged, modern civilization denied them.

Baroness Bousquet de Wagner, of Vienna, who went to the island after Ritter and his helpmate. Soon after her arrival she set herself up as "empress" of the island and governs her "kingdom" clad usually only in abbreviated pink panties and armed with a .22-caliber pistol.

Phillipson, Alonzo and Arends, men companions of the "empress" who came to the island with her.

A German couple, names unknown, and their infant child, born soon after their arrival on the desert island.

Ritter and Frau Koerwien were the first inhabitants of the island. They landed there with a pick and shovel and a bag of seeds and perhaps a score of books, among them a volume of Lao-tse, the ancient Chinese mystic. Ritter refused an offer of a professorship at Freiburg, and left behind a brilliant career as an experimenter in nutrition when he left Germany seeking a lonely spot to "live his own life." He and his woman companion landed on the island in 1929 and have lived there since.

Will Not Touch Meat.

They are vegetarians and will not touch the fish, turtle eggs, wild pig, birds, wild goats, or other meat which is abundant on the island.

Fruits, vegetables, nuts and occasionally a little chicken forms their only food. Everything they partake is mashed into a pulp before it enters their mouths. A dentist, Ritter, has extracted all his teeth and those of Frau Koerwien. It is one of the theories that teeth are a cause of shortened lives. With their teeth out, he believes he and his companion may attain ages of at least one hundred and eight years. However, to assist them in their mastication, he has made sets of rubber teeth which they slip into their mouths at meal times.

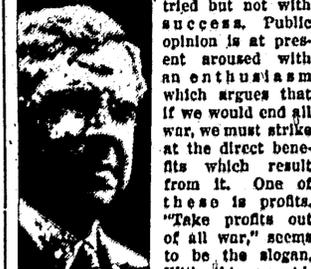

The two food enthusiasts live either in a one-room shack built of rough timber or in a faded tent near a spring. Their homes are remote and accessible only by climbing a stony path which winds up a steep, mountainous way. At the foot of the path is a bell with a sign instructing chance visitors to ring it before they approach "The Hermitage," which is the title they have given their home. The signal is to warn the two exiles, as, when they are alone they wear no clothing. It is only when visitors appear—which happens on the average of from six to eighteen months—that they don a bit of covering.

"Taking the Profits Out of War"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Numerous suggestions have been made for the abolition of war. Some of these have been tried but not with success. Public opinion is at present aroused with an enthusiasm which argues that if we would end all war, we must strike at the direct benefits which result from it. One of these is profits. "Take profits out of all war," seems to be the slogan. With this sentiment dominating the public mind we are not surprised to read press dispatches as follows: "One of the surest ways of preventing war would be to give the government the power to draft, not only men but wealth, industry, agriculture, and make them work without profit." The American Legion is quoted as having declared that when men are drafted, all machinery, even to the plow and tractor, and all farm implements everywhere in the country should be drafted also.

Prettiest Angler

Miss Helene Gould of Forest Hills, Long Island, was voted the prettiest woman angler in the summer colony in the Adirondacks near Stamford, N. Y. She not only wears this picturesque costume, but she gets the fish.

Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, whose judgment is respected by many persons, in a recent address, remarked: "Recapture all profits made by all industries engaged in war supplies above a small and reasonable return on the monies invested, and that all profits which are an incentive to war must be absolutely destroyed."

When we remember the fabulous fortunes which have been made out of the manufacture of war materials as well as the profits created by the sale of food stuffs and other necessities incident to war, we are inclined to believe that "taking the profits out of war" would help to remove one of the incentives to warfare. We have tried other schemes, why not try this one?

It should be remembered, however, that a disease is not cured permanently until the cause has been removed. The cause for war lies much deeper than just money profits. That profit is a large factor goes without question, but nations do not go to war just for the purpose of increasing their national treasures. It seems to be a serious question if war can ever be abolished through the application of a rule of practice which is wholly negative. Many suggestions have been of this character. Do not do this or that, remove this cause or that cause. Very good so far as they go, but negations never get beyond a certain point in the development of any great object. Some commanding suggestion of a positive character seems to be needed. If the cause of war is "Greed," why not advocate the extinction of Christianity which has never yet been honestly tried.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

ONE of the most difficult things to teach some children is responsibility while others have a natural sense of it. It is true that every normal person has to take to himself the responsibility for his or her actions in mature years, in fact, in all years except young childhood, when the responsibility for actions reverts to parents who are held accountable. When a person is irresponsible, he is not normal and must be treated as such. Parents who will pardon their children on flimsy excuses would resent being told their offspring was irresponsible. It is for them to help their youngsters to realize their responsibilities, and thus strengthen their characters.

This is no plea for severe punishment of children. This does not always, by any means, help them to feel responsibility. But it is written with the hope that there may be an awakening of this sense, for thereby law and order will be fostered. There is always a margin permissible for accidents which are not due to deliberate carelessness and foolhardiness. Recklessness is a form of irresponsibility either towards one's self or towards others, or both.

Courage is a totally different thing, for it is always used to avert calamity, while recklessness is taking a chance with the balance favorable to disaster. Courage is one of the traits of greatness, recklessness of little nature, chiefly, although it may permeate fine ones. It is sometimes the outstanding fault in what would be greatness without it.

Lack of responsibility is found in children who take no precautions to prevent a ball from smashing a window. Parents can stimulate responsibility by making the child earn the money to pay for the replacement of the glass. A first offense can be made easy to settle through letting the child be paid for running errands, etc., whereby he can earn the small sum needed. But repeated carelessness should not be allowed to pass so lightly.

Inculcating Responsibility.

Crime in children would be distinctly lessened if parents would help their children from a very early age to feel responsibility, not by thrusting responsibility on them, but by seeing that they take what falls naturally to little ones. Caring for pets stimulates responsibility. The knowledge that their cats or dogs, birds or rabbits, are dependent upon them for food and water and shelter, that without such care the pets would suffer, serves the double purpose of inculcating responsibility and helping the children to love dumb animals.

A large number of auto accidents are the direct results of lack of responsibility. Take a chance and it may come out all right, and when it doesn't and terrible suffering and deaths result, penalties must be paid, but life cannot be restored.

Anticipate Pleasures.

There are few people who do not enjoy looking beyond today in the prospect of good things that it is hoped will come; to the fulfillment of dreams; to a happy future, and a successful one. This can be a fine thing, since the person who cares to live without any forward glance is not a person of vision. Those who watch the trend in world affairs and have minds that comprehend clearly will see in the future many good things which have not culminated yet. Those who watch over a family of children, and who look ahead at their futures, will expect much that is good, but realize that, as parents, they have the present in which to prepare their little ones for such futures as they envision.

Michigan Naval Reserve Using Old Insull Boat

Detroit.—Sturdy naval reserve men now bustle about the decks of the training ship, the Truant, once the yacht of Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate.

The Truant was loaned to the Michigan Naval Reserve corps by the Illinois Naval militia which bought her from Insull ten years ago.

Insull had loaned it to the Illinois organization two years before the militia purchased it. The ship has the speedy lines that appeal to the sportsman, being 130 feet long, with a narrow beam of only 18 feet.

Mamma Coyote Knows How to Handle Young

Stevensville, Mont. — Anxious mothers can learn how to make children behave by watching a coyote on Carney Phelps' ranch.

Phelps said a mother coyote had five pups of belligerent nature. To keep them from fighting, she moved into an old badger hole with five tunnels leading from the main shaft.

By keeping one pup in each tunnel, "Ma" coyote kept them apart, except at meal times, when she and "Pa" saw to it that peace was preserved.

Lesson for August 12

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:1-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law, Romans 13:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Good Preacher and a Bad King.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Country Boy Who Became a Great Preacher.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing for God Against the Crowd.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Social Justice as a Universal Duty.

I. Israel's Desolation Predicted (vv. 1-3).

1. The prophet's lamentation (v. 1). Amos lamented over the doom which was to overtake the nation. The prophet is thus represented as entering into the sorrow which was to overtake Israel.

2. The nation's utter desolation and helplessness (vv. 2, 3). Israel is called a virgin because she had never been subdued by any foreign nation (Isa. 23:12). Her falling no more to rise, sets forth the utter desolation and helplessness to which the Assyrians subjected the nation.

II. The Urgent Call for the People to Return to God (vv. 4-9).

God through the prophet said, "Seek ye me and ye shall live." The implication is that while as yet the divine judgments are not executed, an opportunity is offered for them to turn to God. The time to repent is while judgment is stayed. In their turning to God they were called

1. To renounce idolatry (vv. 5, 6). They were to turn away from the places of idolatry—Bethel, Gilgal, and Beer-sheba. The judgment of God was to strike these places. He urged them the second time to seek the Lord, promising them life.

2. To cease to pervert judgment (v. 7). "Turn judgment to wormwood" implies the bitterness to the injured of the perversion of justice.

3. To cease to de throne righteousness (vv. 7-9). "Leaving off righteousness" means that unrighteousness was allowed to take its place. For the third time he urged them to seek the Lord. In this exhortation the Lord's name is given, with a statement of some of his works.

a. "Maketh the seven stars and Orion."

b. "Turneth the shadow of death into the morning."

c. "Maketh the day dark with night."

d. "Calloeth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth" both in rain and in deluge.

e. "Strengtheneth the spoiled against the strong."

III. The Sins Committed by the Wicked Nation (vv. 10-13).

1. They hated the judge who condemned their wicked practices (v. 10.)

2. They abhorred him that spoke uprightly (v. 10). This probably refers to the prophets themselves.

3. They trampled upon the poor (v. 11). The rich built magnificent houses out of the gains extorted from the poor, but the prophet assured them that God would not permit them to live in the houses nor drink of the wine thereof.

4. They afflicted the just (v. 12). This they did by taking a bribe. What a picture this of our own time!

5. They turned aside the poor in the gate (v. 12). Because the poor had no money they were turned aside. The times were so evil that the prudent would best keep silent.

IV. The Prophet's Plea for Repentance (vv. 14, 15).

No condition in the world, religious, social, or political, can become so difficult that the righteous are shut off from help. The righteous can

1. Seek God (v. 14). Those who seek God shall have with them the Lord of Hosts.

2. Hate the evil (v. 15). It is not enough merely to love the good; evil must be hated.

3. Establish judgment in the gate (v. 15). It was the custom in that day for the courts of justice to sit in the gate of the city. The prophet urged upon them the responsibility of placing honorable men in charge of public affairs.

V. The Judgment to Fall (vv. 16-20).

There is a coming day of retribution. Justice and right shall be vindicated. This will be realized in the day of the Lord (II. Thess. 1:7-10).

VI. Worship Which God Hates (vv. 21-27).

Sacrifices, observance of fast days, and even slinging when the heart is out of fellowship with God is most displeasing to him. Worship without holiness of life is an abomination to God.

May Hurt; But Not Injure

The skilled specialist said to his patient as he was about to perform a delicate operation on the arm, "I may hurt you, but I will not injure you." Sometimes the Father's will may hurt, but he will never injure his child.—Rev. Geo. Douglas.

Don't Find Fault

Never find fault with a sermon you may hear if you have not been praying earnestly during the week that your minister may be filled with the Holy Spirit.—E. W. Dale

Southwestern Briefs

The indebtedness of the Maricopa reservoir and power company has been limited by the Arizona corporation commission to $7,000,000.

State highway department officials and representatives of the federal bureau of public roads met in Los Angeles July 23 to discuss Arizona's 1934-35 budget.

Supt. C. R. McDowell reported to Gov. B. B. Moer that 472,283 persons entered Arizona through highway patrol stations during the last fiscal year ended June 30.

S. R. DeBoer, Denver landscape architect, has been selected by the state planning board of New Mexico to prepare an outline of improvements to be undertaken in that state.

The state motor vehicle division reported that revenue from the 5-cent gasoline tax during the fiscal year ended June 30 showed an increase of 7.4 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

More than 20,000 cattle have been purchased by the federal government from livestock growers in Arizona's drought-stricken areas, according to C. C. Pickrell, field director of the relief program.

Shallow wells and development of surface water is intended under the department of agriculture and Arizona FERA program on Indian reservations, Forrest M. Parker, Navajo ECW administrator, has been advised.

The national guard bureau at Washington has authorized the encampment this year of the Arizona national guard at Fort Alexander H. Tuthill. The bureau allocated $60,000 for the encampment, which will be held from August 11 to 25.

Lester Hankins of Greeley has been appointed assistant state supervisor of the Home Owners Loan Corporation in New Mexico. He was graduated from Greeley high school in 1924 and later attended Colorado State Teachers College.

Uniform prices for the purchase of cattle under the drought relief program ranging from $3 to $20 depending upon the condition and class of cattle were adopted at a conference of state and federal relief officials in Albuquerque.

The Nogales, Arizona city council plans to lower the 1934 city tax rate by budgeting for interest requirements only on the city's bonded indebtedness. According to reports, the city tax rate will drop from $1.84 to $1.26 on each hundred dollars of assessed valuation.

Preparations are being made now for the opening of the annual encampment of the 11th cavalry, staff corps and department heads, battery A 168th field artillery and the staff quarters detachment of the New Mexico national guard at Camp Luna near Las Vegas.

Construction plans for the Caballo hydro-electric dam in the Rio Grande river near Las Cruces are being delayed pending allocation of an additional $1,000,000 necessary for the completion of the "high dam" project, according to L. M. Lawson, international boundary commissioner.

The federal government allocated $5,000 to change the Yuma sewer line in an effort to prevent pollution of the Colorado river and avert a possible epidemic. Gov. B. B. Moer was advised by Col. Lawrence Westbrook of the FERA that drought relief funds would be used for the work.

A surprise pay day came to Company I of the Arizona national guard recently when checks arrived amounting to $553.60 for services performed by the guardsmen over a year ago in the search for the wrecked plane near Winslow that caused the death of Carmel Giragi and Jack Irish.

Entry lists, prizes and rules for the city and county wide flower show which will be sponsored by the Raton Federation of Women's Clubs Saturday, August 11, have been announced. Announcement last spring that such a show was to be sponsored was greeted with great interest by flower lovers of this locality, and a large number of entries is expected.

Work and a warm summer have brought peace to turbulent Rio Arriba county. When there is work there are no idle hands to point deadly revolvers and life and love moves smoothly. Sheriff Carlos Manzanara, who covers 5,000 square miles of territory, said that since the people have state and federal jobs there has been a decided slackening in the "passion killings" that usually are so prevalent.

W. S. Patterson of Santa Fe, whose scout service covers oil and gas development in New Mexico, reports that San Miguel county is about to secure the drilling of another "wild cat" as the result of a 200-foot water well in Pecos having developed an oil showing when it was cleaned out. About five barrels of high gravity oil have been bailed off this water and the government ranger who lost a good water well as the result of this unusual occurrence has been using the oil to run his car without any refining.

Dr. R. H. Pousma, head of Rehoboth Mission Hospital, is the author of a book of Navajo campfire stories which has just been published. The book, "He Who Always Wins and Other Navajo Campfire Stories," includes tales told by Navajos of their creation, the fight against the giants that resulted in forming the Grant, N. M., lava beds, and other folk stories told about campfires. The stories were gained directly from Indians. A Navajo man, who would have others tell him the story, would then relate it to Dr. Pousma.

Man Might Learn Much
From Birds and Beasts

"Wild animals have a code of manners often comically like ours. They are frequently courteous, tender-hearted, and considerate to the point of being romantic. They possess that unembarrassed demeanor which is indicative of soul peace, and show on many occasions a behavior that indicates good taste.

"Being a good sport is, in a deep sense, showing good manners. And birds and animals have a gallantry of bearing that seems a part of their code of behavior. They bear disappointment, pain, death with a courage that is extraordinary. A certain grace of heart is theirs.

"One display of their good manners is the tolerance with which wild creatures regard one another. Of course there are fights, but these originate almost always in love rivalry. There are no social climbers, no business antagonists. There are no jealousies over place and power. But there does appear to be a consciousness of the rights of others. A huge dead pine with a series of hollows, one above the other, will be tenanted, during a single mating season, by pairs of bluebirds, black woodpeckers, flickers, fox-squirrels, screeching owls, and sparrow-hawks! These are six families of entirely different nationalities, yet all live happily, one above the other, in the same tenement. And make no mistake, the serenity is the result of genuine tact and etiquette!

"And the vagaries of falling in love! Any observer of the human scene knows the impulse then to 'show off.' But while we like to impress the whole world with our superiority, a wild creature tries to appear exceptional only to the one by whom he wants to be loved. And all about us in the woods and fields and sky and grass one may observe etiquette of loving. In much of the affection of wild mates for each other there is a tenderness of consideration that is clear evidence that they care for each other beyond the physical attraction. And take the cardinals, for instance, who mate for life; even in the dead of winter they remember love and carol to each other!"

Savoring somewhat of sarcasm, this paragraph sums up the reflections of a distinguished writer and thinker:

"It appears that those who want to be really civilized might take a tip from the birds and the beasts! And it seemed to me that passing on this information about them from the comments of that well-known naturalist, Archibald Rutledge, would certainly be of no less value to my readers than anything I could say to them."

Question Appeared to Verge on the Personal

A harassed-looking man entered a gramophone shop and inquired for some modern light music, preferably dance records.

"Very well, sir," said the assistant. "I understand perfectly. By the way, didn't you buy some records of operatic music here last week?"

"That's right," said the customer, miserably; "but my wife doesn't care for them. She wants something really snappy."

"The assistant took down a number from the shelves.

"Have you had 'Seven Years With the Wrong Woman'?" he asked, naming a popular piece of music.

"No, twelve!" snapped the customer. "But, anyway, what the diavles has that got to do with you?"

—London Answers.

NEED OF CENSUS
TO SHOW VITAL
NATIONAL FACTS

A good deal of the governmental, business and social activities of any community depends upon accurate knowledge of the number of inhabitants which compose it.

Such vital information is seriously lacking these days. A leading life insurance company discusses the subject in a statistical bulletin under the heading, "How Many Are We?" Apparently there is no reliable information regarding the population of the country as a whole or of any of the states or large cities. The depression is to blame. Formerly it was comparatively easy to make population estimates in the years between the decennial census, but today it is difficult to make even an approximate guess. The simple and usually reliable methods then employed no longer are suitable to the sudden and fundamental changes which have taken place in our population during the last few years. Economic conditions have pushed down the birthrate, the tides of immigration have reversed, and millions of people are coming and going in search of work, never settling down in one place long enough to be counted. Washington has given up and is no longer preparing the annual estimates of population.

Meanwhile business men and governmental officials are clamoring to know the population facts about the various states and cities. It is information necessary for the apportionment of representatives, taxes, water supply, schools, roads, transportation, police services and for the conduct of industrial and commercial enterprise. Only another federal census can solve the problem, and the suggestion has arisen to take one in 1935, or five years early.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Sarcastic

"I say, waiter, take away this egg and wring its neck. I'd rather have it broiled!"

Fly in Clenched Hand Guarantee of Honesty

On the way from Vienna to Budapest, let's stop at the first opportunity, say at the Hungarian provincial town of Győr, for a taste of gypsy entertainment. A good Hungarian gypsy orchestra can, and does, turn the thoughts of the coldest of ladies towards romance better than any amount of champagne could do.

The cover charge evil has not penetrated this far inland, and we are treated to the spectacle of one of the gypsies going from customer to customer for tips after every third dance, holding what seems to be a collection plate in one hand, and with the other tightly clenched. Of this phenomenon, investigation proved more fruitful. The explanation of the one clenched hand is quite simple. It is a guarantee of honesty. It contains a live fly which the collector must bring back alive to his fellow musicians, to show that his hand has not accidentally abstracted a handful of coins from the collection plate for his own pocket, while he was in a far corner of the cafe.

The collector might, of course, catch him a new fly after a lapse from grace, and I suggested that the flies be branded. This novel idea was given due consideration by the orchestra, but then rejected, on the grounds that any motion so conspicuous as catching a new fly could not be concealed from the watchful eyes of the hardly-to-be-called-trusting colleagues.—Charles Layne in Esquire.

Odd Form of "Kindling"

Stone "kindling" is used to start fires. It is in the form of a synthetic stone which, when soaked in kerosene, burns for ten minutes. It can be used repeatedly, as it does not break down in the heat and absorbs the fuel, thus permitting it to burn gradually when soaked in lard for the same purpose and when coal oil was first employed as fuel, deposit of a peculiar granite was found which was used in the same manner.

ANCHO ITEMS

The Woman's Club met Wednesday with Mrs. J. M. Frame. The sun parlor and living room were decorated with garden flowers. The presence of Mrs. Atwood, Pres. of N. M. Federation of Women's Clubs and the graciousness and congeniality of the hostess, together with her able assistants, Meses. Heffen and J. Straley, made this meeting the outstanding one of the season. Other guests were Meses. McCammon, Price, Lowe, Geo. Straley and Miss Louise Hall.

Mrs. Belknap introduced Mrs. Atwood, who was given a hearty welcome and then Oleta Drake presented her with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Roll call was "Has NRA benefitted our Country?" It brot forth interesting comments. After the business, Mrs. Atwood made a splendid talk touching on topics of interest to club women; 4-year resume of club activities by Mrs. Hightower; Song, Lucille & Lila Lee Drake; Reading, "When Mother was a girl," Rosemary Hanley. In picture contest that followed, Lucille Drake won the prize.

As August 8, was the birthday of Mrs. T. J. Straley, club's oldest member, a surprise was arranged in her honor. Mrs. Drake handed her a prettily decorated box containing many gifts and also a bouquet of flowers. At tea time a delicious salad course together with iced tea was served. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Drake, August 23.

Jack Had a Close Call

Last Friday afternoon, while digging in an arroyo near the Bar W ranch, Jack Claunch being the nearest to the bank, a cave in occurred which completely covered him to a depth of over four feet. Jack Pruett, his companion, with proper presence of mind, ran to the Spencer residence where a call was sent in and several men began to dig and they worked for nearly an hour before he was rescued.

On being taken out, he was unconscious, but Truman Spencer, Jr., applied first aid before Dr. Johnson arrived. On the road to the hospital he regained consciousness and after examination at the hospital, no bones were found to be broken and he was soon himself again. Jack attributes his escape to the position he was in at the time of the accident. He was in a crouching pose as the cave-in occurred and that afforded him with space about his head which contained enough air to keep him alive until his rescuers could get him out. Slow up, Jack, old boy—be careful!

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Loughrey and Mrs. Loughrey's mother, Mrs. Callie Kahler of Tucumcari, came through here last Sunday morning, the ladies going on to El Paso for a visit and Tex remaining to make his run back to Tucum.
