

FORT STANTON NEWS

Alden S. Lowey and Miss Fay Pogue stole away and were quietly married in Roswell on Sept. 1. "Red" is X-Ray technician here and Miss Pogue was formerly at Mesalero. They will be at home on Scenic Drive in Capitan, and their friends extend best wishes.

Mrs. Ida Coor, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fagan, has returned to her home in Fresno, California.

Mrs. M. Cavanaugh and the Sellers children have returned to Santa Fe after having spent the summer here and at the Cavanaugh ranch.

The center of interest for the past few days has been a bear cub. The little fellow, nearly starved when captured, attracted so much interest that he was finally moved from his License Row home to new quarters to protect him from harm. A request for permission to keep him is being sent to the Game Commission.

Charles Taylor of Kansas City who has been at the Fort for some four years, died Saturday and was buried in the local cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Mmes. Porter, Genaler, Land and Hendren attended a card party given by Mrs. Coe on the Ruidoso last Friday.

Dr. and Mrs. Porter are spending a few days in El Paso.

Mrs. W. H. Gould of Cleveland is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gould, Jr., in Capitan.

Mrs. Berry and Miss Rice attended a meeting of the Eastern Star in Carrizozo Thursday night.

School registration began on Monday and work in earnest began Tuesday. The teachers are Phronis Hulbert of Lincoln and Warren Rockwell of Capitan.

Miss C. Austin, R. N., has been transferred here from the Marine Hospital at New Orleans, filling the vacancy left by the transfer of Mrs. Chalin.

Mrs. W. T. McKneely, daughter Grace and son Stephen, who have been visiting Dr. and Mrs. McKneely, have returned to their home in Hammond, La.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Norris, formerly of this place, visited here and at Mrs. Berry's cabin on the Ruidoso Sunday. Walter is at the veterans' hospital in Albuquerque.

Dr. Robert Moore, dental surgeon, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on dental care to the staff and patients in Amusement Hall Wednesday night.

One of the prettiest places on the "hill" is the cottage of Wm. Peterson. The massed beds of flowers are now one gorgeous riot of brilliant color. His dahlias are remarkable for their huge size and exquisite colors.

The ways of the government are strange. Several millions of dollars go into the Boulder Dam in order that more crops can be raised and other millions are spent to destroy the crops that are already growing. Sir Basil Zaharoff gets $800,000 in submarine graft and the men and women who do the government's work are given a cut in salary.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. McDonald were in from their ranch north of town Monday. They brought encouraging reports and said that rain had fallen in their locality and grass had begun to grow to a nipping length.

PERSONALS

Miss Roma Jeffords and C. Kiene of the Sarita Metals Corporation near White Oaks, were business visitors in town yesterday.

Don English, President of the Young People's Republican Club, left Wednesday evening for Tucumcari to join Mrs. English and baby Frank Charles, who have been visiting with Mrs. English's mother, Mrs. Magruder, for several weeks. They will return home the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Agnes St. John left Monday night for the Sacramento to resume her duties on the Oliver Lee ranch home.

Mrs. Bryan Cazier, who had been spending the summer with the P. M. Johnson family, has returned to her home in Tucumcari.

Mrs. J. B. French has been up at Eagle Creek for the past week and J. B. joined her at the resort Tuesday and will spend the remainder of the week at their cottage.

Mrs. Mary C. Marquez was here from Tucumcari to spend the week-end with the Saturnino Chavez family, returning home on No. 12 Monday evening.

Johnny Brady was up from Hondo the first part of the week on some business.

Judge and Mrs. John Gutknecht, who have been touring the old countries overseas, will arrive at Montreal, Canada, today. They had a pleasant voyage, and will reach Chicago tomorrow.

A surprise stork shower was given to Mrs. Evalyn Dixon Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Montie Gardenhire. Hostesses were Mesdames Sam Allen, Clint Branum, Claud Branum and Montie Gardenhire. Refreshments of tuna fish salad, sandwiches and iced tea were served. Mrs. Dixon was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Moore were in from their ranch near Adobe last Saturday. "Shorty" has had lots of rain on his ranch of late and his cattle are doing nicely.

Mrs. Paul Frame of Odessa, Texas, Mrs. H. O. Murrell, sons Jim and Frank are visiting with the Peter Frame family of Carrizozo and J. M. Frame family of Ancho this week.

The next meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church will be held at the home of Mrs. J. V. Taylor at the I-X ranch Wednesday, Sept. 12.

The next meeting of the Young People's Republican Club will be held shortly at Community Hall. Watch for announcements. Don English, Pres. Refugio Garcia, Sec'y.

Miss Signa Freek, sister of Mrs. Thelma Degitz and Supt. of the Staele Hospital at Denver, Mrs. Degitz's daughter, Dorothy of Rye, Colo., and son Harold of Boulder, Colo., were here Sunday and were guests of Mrs. Degitz and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler.

Miss Elizabeth Such is the new clerk at the Carrizozo Bakery.

DIAMOND DUST

The Mesalero Indians came to Carrizozo again last Sunday and in the absence of rain, they took Carrizozo's measure and beat us by a score of 11 to 8. The game was full of thrills and good plays, according to those who saw it. Sally Ortiz was on the mound for Carrizozo, with Whittis catching.

On the east side diamond, the East-Siders and San Pedro played one of the best games we've seen in a long while. Both teams were neck and neck and at the end of the game, San Pedro forged ahead to win by one score. Andres Lueras pitched good ball, but a few errors by his teammates cost him the game. Jerry Beltran was the feature of the game, making some difficult running catches in the outfield. Ernest Lopez covered the hot corner for Carrizozo. Joe "Tarzan" Candelaria and "Angel Face" Lorenzo Garcia saw to it that the teams play the game according to Hoyle.

White Oaks came here on Labor Day and turned the planks on Carrizozo by a 10 to 8 score. Hubert Detloff donned a Carrizozo uniform. Several of our boys were absent from the lineup.

Standing of Teams:

Team	Games won	Games Lost
Carrizozo	16	8
East-Siders	7	8
Sluggers	6	1

New Business Enterprise

Elsewhere in this paper you will find the announcement of Gunther C. Kroggel, manager of the New Mexico Mechanical Equipment Co. Mr. Kroggel first came to this part of New Mexico in 1926 and left here in '28 for Chicago, where he held a position as engineering accountant for the most exclusive hotel company in Chicago for over five years. During this time he also studied refrigeration engineering at the Chicago University and became a member of the National Association of Practical Refrigeration Engineers. Mr. Kroggel, believing in a great future for New Mexico, returned to Lincoln County in December of last year and has become a permanent resident and member of the business circle of Carrizozo.

Call for Republican County Convention

A delegate convention of the Republicans of Lincoln County is hereby called to meet at the School Gymnasium in Capitan, N.M., on Sept 22, 1934, at 10:30 a. m. The object of said county convention is as follows:

- To select 18 delegates to the Republican State Convention which meets in Santa Fe, N. M., on September 24, 1934.
- To nominate a complete Republican County ticket for Lincoln County to be voted for at the ensuing election, November 6, 1934.
- To select a County Central Committee for the ensuing two years, whose duty will be to select a County Chairman.
- To transact any other business which may properly come before said convention.

By order of the Republican State Executive Committee apportionment of delegates to the State Convention will be on the basis of one delegate for each 75 votes or major fraction thereof, cast for R. C. Dillon for Governor in November, 1928.

The several precincts of Lincoln County are entitled to representation in said County Convention, on the basis of one delegate for every 10 votes or major fraction thereof, cast for R. C. Dillon at the election held in November, 1928. On above basis precincts are entitled to representation as follows:

Pct.	Name	Delegates
1	Lincoln	16
2	Hondo	19
3	Arabela	9
4	Picacho	6
5	Roberton	4
6	Encinoso	5
7	Jicarilla	2
8	White Oaks	1
9	Capitan	10
10	Ruidoso	7
11	Nogal	2
12	Bonito	2
13	Corona	15
14	Carrizozo	26
15	Oscara	1
16	Ancho	5
17	Spindle	1
18	Joneta	2
19	White Mountain	3
20	Ramon	1

Total Delegates 187

The chairmen of the several precincts are hereby ordered to call precinct primaries at some convenient place in the precinct for the 15th day of September.

NOGAL NOTES

(By "CHICO")

The Nogal - Carrizozo school bus is now in operation with J. J. May as driver.

The Nogal school started Monday with a good attendance and Mrs. Chappell as teacher.

R. D. Martin was home from the High Rolls CCC camp this week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cox of Fort Stanton and Mr. Cox's brother and wife of Texas were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Skinner over the week-end.

Miss Mary Dell Martin spent last week in Capitan.

B. T. Cochran of Lordsburg was through Nogal Tuesday, enroute to Clovis.

Muirhead-Sweet

The following account of the wedding of Miss Louise Sweet and Murph Muirhead will be of interest to the many friends of the bride, more especially, as she is one of our leading young ladies and the surprise which the young couple sprung on their friends was complete in every detail. We are clipping an article from the El Paso Times concerning the wedding which follows:

Miss Louise Howard Sweet, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Sweet of Carrizozo, became the bride of Murph Muirhead of La Luz, at a wedding ceremony solemnized yesterday at 5:30 in the study of the First Presbyterian church of El Paso. The Rev. Wistor Smith was officiant.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Jimmy Lee, was her attendant and Walter Stout served as Mr. Muirhead's best man. The bride was costumed in tweed suit of brown tints, with hat and other accessories of brown. Her corsage bouquet was of yellow roses. Only members of the family and nearest friends were present for the wedding.

The bride, daughter of the late E. H. Sweet of Carrizozo, was graduated in the 1928 class from Radford School for Girls. Mr. Muirhead, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Muirhead of La Luz, is a nephew of Mrs. T. H. Sanders and a brother of Mrs. Stout of El Paso. Mr. Muirhead is engaged in the tile business in El Paso, where he and his bride will make their home.

The good-natured and kind-hearted Louise will be missed by this community and the patrons of the Carrizozo Eating House, and all join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Muirhead a great and unmarred measure of happiness.

1934, by posting not less than three notices, at least five days previous to said primaries, in public places in the precinct, said notices to give the hour and place of precinct meeting where said primaries are to be held.

No proxies will be accepted in said convention unless held by a resident of the precinct in which the regularly selected delegate resides.

All who are desirous of supporting a party whose platform is based on the Declaration of Principles as approved by Senator Bronson Cutting and R. C. Dillon, and the State Central Committee on July 21st in Santa Fe, are cordially invited to attend and participate in precinct primaries.

By order of the Republican County Central Committee.
J. B. French, Chairman,
Attest: J. E. Brady, Sec'y.

Henry Lutz

Under the head of political announcements will be found, the card of the above named gentleman, who needs no introduction to the people of Lincoln County. Mr. Lutz has served the county both in territorial days and also since the advent of statehood. He served as County Treasurer for two terms in territorial days and after moving here from Lincoln, he became Carrizozo's first Mayor. He has also served the county as commissioner on which board he was chosen as chairman and served with credit to himself and the people whom he represented. In all official capacities, he made an ideal public servant. He now comes forward with his announcement for County Assessor, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention. If nominated and elected, Mr. Lutz will be a public servant, who will serve the county impartially and for the benefit of all concerned.

A. B. Moss

In this issue of the Outlook appears the announcement of the above named gentleman, who announces himself as a candidate for the office of County School Superintendent, subject to the deliberations of the coming Republican County Convention. Mr. Moss has been in the educational profession for the past eleven years, during which time, he served in the counties of Lea, Union and lastly in this county, where he has served in the capacity of Principal of the Lincoln school for the past five years. He is a last-termer of the State Normal University at Las Vegas and will receive his A. B. Degree with six weeks work. He has had training experience in grade and high school work, including supervision and administration in the educational profession. At the request of his many friends over the county, he has placed his announcement and if nominated and elected, he pledges himself to serve the people without favoritism and to the best of his professional ability.

In High Gear When President Travels

Secret Service Must Anticipate Every Danger.

Washington.—In the face of world violence, secret service men are taking no chances in protecting the President from cranks and fanatics. Their authority is greater than that of admirals, generals and contributors to campaign funds, according to Herbert Corey and George Holmes, two Washington political writers, who describe, in the Metropolitan, each step these officers take to safeguard the President.

When the President is in the White House, they explain, the secret service system works so smoothly it is automatic; when he leaves the White House, the men go into high gear; and when he leaves Washington on a long trip, an advance campaign that anticipates every possible danger is mapped out by Dick Jervis, chief of the White House detail.

Take Every Precaution.

"When Jervis gets the news that a Presidential tour is in contemplation," they state, "he calls in Col. Ed Starling, a rawboned Kentuckian, handy with a gun. Starling is given a schedule of the route with the stops and times tentatively defined. He then gets in touch with the police chief in each city and tells him when and where the President will be, and arrangements are made.

"Sometimes two hundred or three hundred policemen are needed at the station. Perhaps more. A lane is policed from the door of the private car to the automobile waiting with its engine running. Every man in every one of the cars that are to follow has been inspected and passed by Starling before he gets his green ticket. Plain clothes men are scattered through the waiting crowd. A man who mutters to himself, or is unpleasantly excited or seems to have a large lump in his coat pocket is investigated. Nothing is permitted to get into the gears of the machine. When the train has backed slowly into the station, the crowd has been as neatly packed as though the scene were on a Hollywood lot. The only movement possible is of the facial muscles.

"Some one catches a glimpse of a well known figure. . . . Starling has his men so banked that several thousand tons of human flesh are held back during the moments occupied by the inevitable hand shaking and beaming. The President walks towards his car through a corridor of blue clothes and shouting men. Secret service men are in front of him and behind him and at each side, ready to provide effective interference if necessary.

Police Help Out.

"Along the line of march policemen have been stationed by the hundreds. If necessary, reinforcements have been called in from other cities. Secret service men dog trot by the side of the Presidential car and behind it, their eyes fastened on the men and women packed solidly against the curb.

"The President is always in the first car of the line, just as he is always in the last car of the train. Dick Jervis sits at the right hand of the driver. If the Vice President is a member of the party, he follows in the second car. Otherwise the second car is always that of the secret service. Cars are never permitted to stop. If one enthusiast broke through the line to shake hands with the President, he might be followed by ten thousand.

"At the hotel a special entrance has been arranged, which is guarded by other police and plainclothes men.

"In case of doubt," the writers conclude, "the rule is to act first and investigate afterwards."

"Who's to Blame?"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

There is a good deal of self-pity in the world which plays havoc with the psychic centers. Self-pity destroys initiative, self-control and ambition. The false notion, entertained by some persons, that the world owes them a living, is both dangerous and pernicious. Some of our college graduates have the idea that a job should be furnished them as one of their inalienable rights.

They forget that a person, regardless of his culture, is not entitled to a reward beyond his capacity to earn it.

We are emerging from the worst depression in the history of our country. Many who were not able to weather the storm sought refuge in self-pity, which in some cases led to self-destruction. Self-pity always seeks to place the blame on some other person or condition, and not upon one's own

Challenger

T. O. M. Sopwith's yacht Endeavor which has come across the Atlantic from England to try to capture the America's cup, which will be defended by an American boat not yet selected. Endeavor is manned by an amateur crew, the professional crew having quit because of a wage dispute.

Judgment. When a person builds a house he should remember that storms blow hard and fire destroys. If he be a wise builder he will take precautions and have lightning rods placed on the roof of his house and will seek protection against fire and storms through adequate insurance. If he does this he will be secured against the ravages of the elements, if he fails so to do, whose fault is it if the elements play havoc with his building? He certainly cannot justly place the blame upon anybody but himself.

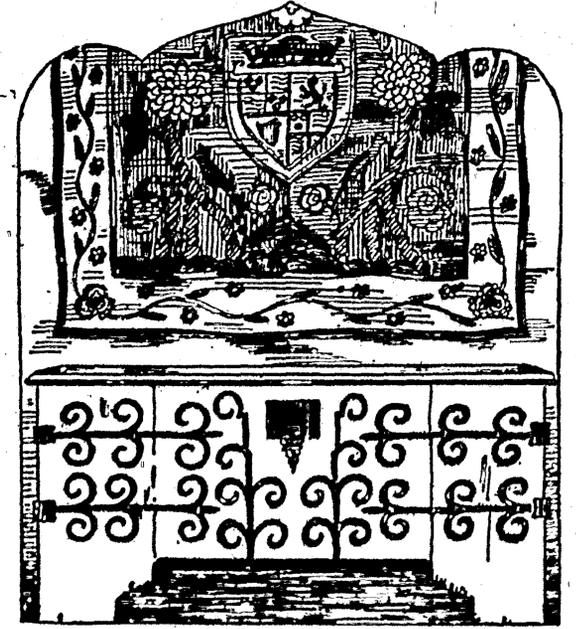

A storm in the economic world struck hard upon the financial structures many persons set up. Proper protection in some cases speeded recovery; where this protection was absent the inevitable was the result. No house built upon sand can withstand the havoc of storms.

An Antique Coat-of-Arms Tapestry Over a Quaint Oaken Chest in a Hall.

TAPESTRIES are unexcelled for fascinating wall decorations. They vie with rare paintings which alone are their peers. In fact some of the finest painters made designs for tapestries. Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Michelangelo, among the very early artists and Rubens, Van Dyke and Durer also made the drawings, or cartoons as they are called, for famous tapestries.

Tapestries are considered woven textiles but the weaving is a distinct and different type from regular weaving, even hand weaving as it is known today. It is, of course, woven by hand, but the colors are either introduced on tiny separate bobbins or by means of a sort of threaded needle passed over, under and about warp threads. Whichever way the colors are introduced by hand, they are woven into the gorgeous pictorial patterns in the same way.

An Embroidered Tapestry.

It is interesting to note that one of the most famous of all tapestries is not actually a tapestry in the strictest sense, but is an embroidered picture. It was Queen Mathilda of England who told the story of her famous husband William the Conqueror's exploits not with her pen but with her needle. There are people, ships, animals, trees, earth, and sea, all wrought in colors which today are a feast to the eye just to look upon. The foundation is fine linen unornamented except in the embroidered portions, which tell the story which is real history. Unlike other tapestries which are of large proportions the linen of the Bayeux tapestry is only some 24 inches wide. While its width is slight, its length makes up for it, being 227 feet. The background is a wonderful bit of weaving. The embroidery is the most stupendous undertaking of all ages, and shows marvellously against the unworked foundation.

It is this embroidered tapestry which lends sanction to the thought of modern tapestry embroideries. These can be of rare beauty provided the worker has the ingenuity to conceive of handsome pictorial effects worthy of careful embroidery, and then uses embroidery materials of artistic tones and exquisite color harmonies. Today the term tapestries is not so inclusive, but signifies the hand woven pictorial textiles, some of which are modern in the same way as are the famous antique ones.

Wall Hangings.

Wall hangings and embroidered wall pictures are names given to the scenic needleworked textiles at the present time. Of these there are beautiful examples in modern work. The background remains minus stitchery, the design alone being embroidered. Women who want wall hangings can have them at small cost by working them themselves. The pictures and the colors and the embroidery must all be excellent for them to be worthy their purpose.

Rich Fabric's the Thing for Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ADVANCE fall fashions cause one to think in terms of handsome materials, for it is fine fabrics, we're telling you, which will be making fine costumes this season.

The scheme of things for the new style program runs about like this—a strikingly simple silhouette, with emphasis on the elegance and unusualness of the material which fashions it, relying on breathtaking neckwear sets, buttons, buckles and countless other unique gadgets to dramatize the whole.

The big buttons which adorn the newly arrived frocks and wraps so spectacularly are of eye-filling proportions, some of them being simply enormous. It is such bizarre details as these huge buttons which add unlimited swank and distinction to the otherwise modestly styled fall modes.

It does not take long after catching a glimpse of the midseason and early fall styles to realize how strong buttons are going, in the new showings. For example, consider the very good-looking town and country dress to the left in the picture. Buttons all over it! The shirtwaist dress of which this model is a striking exponent, that is styled like a coat with buttons from neckline to hemline down the front and on the pockets, likewise the cuffs, is regarded as one of the most important numbers on the fall fashion program.

It is self-evident that this spectacular use of big buttons does a lot to distinguish this dress, but when it comes to keying enthusiasm to even a higher note, it is the intriguing material which fashions this dress which does just that. This fabric is an entirely new bemberg and wool weave in a radiant brown which is enlivened with a delicate interweaving of glossy yellow-and-gold threads. For daytime and sports you are going to find this bemberg and wool weave the very sort you are looking for.

That big news in regard to the ensemble pictured to the right is its color. The smart, checked woolen of which it is made is in tones of green, and green this autumn is scheduled to make a front-stage play. That the dress which is topped with a stunning matched coat, like its companion in the illustration, should show a shirtwaist tendency is not a mere happenstance but rather a natural sequence of events for the shirtwaist idea which prevailed so conspicuously all summer, carrying over into fall with a high and mighty gesture. A brown fabric bag and brown felt slouch hat, go well with this two-tone green check.

There is nothing smarter for immediate wear than a shirtwaist dress of some one or other of the newer lightweight wools. If the material reflects the glint and gleam of gold and silver, so much the better, for it is the metal-shot fabrics which are getting most of the notice for fall and winter. One way of interpreting the metal note is to see to it that your scarf or your neckpiece and other decorative accessories be fashioned of a metal-touched weave.

We would like to tell you in conclusion that there is a new canton crepe in the market. It works up very happily into practical street costumes.

TRIMMINGS FEATURE FALL SHOE STYLES

There are frills and thrills for the feet—if seeing is believing.

Afternoon dresses of marvelously colored prints are all arustle with frills and ruchings, large and small. Some are of the frock itself, while others stand out in crisp white contrast around both the neckline and the cuffs.

And the new shoes are not to be outdone. They, too, repeat this ruffled theme. The just-out blue and brown kidskin shoes have little butterfly bows, odd trimmings lined with white and knotted colls of stitched and pleated kidskin tabs.

Leather flowers are doing their smart duty several places, too—on plain kidskin pumps, either at the side or in front, and trimming leather and fabric purses, belts, hats and the gauntlet cuffs of gloves.

Some leather bracelets and clips are trimmed with metal and some are even set with stones while others are content to ornament themselves with knots of leather or bits of bead, glass, or straw.

Black Hose to Return to Fashion for Autumn Wear

The latest cry of the fashion prophets is black stockings; not gun-metal ones or bluish-black ones, but plain, ordinary, old-fashioned black stockings.

It's a wild gamble, betting on black stockings, when one remembers how often and how uselessly the very same fashion prophets have heralded the return of curves and long hair.

Black stockings have at least one worthwhile virtue. They make plump ankles and fat legs look slimmer. But it must be admitted they have a strong tendency to make skinny legs look like soda straws.

Picture Hats

The first velvet picture hats have made their appearance at Chantilly, France. Some of them have crowns of sheer tulle or lace.

Cool Shoes

White buckskin shoes with diamond perforations are chic and cool for summer wear.

COLORFUL VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The new velvets are conveying a message of color as gay and exotic as ever a rainbow reflected. As the season progresses your eye will be gladdened with such glorified hues as fuchsia, nasturtium, lime green and the new inkberry which is a rich plum tone. Feminine and flattering in color and styling is the wrap of powder blue transparent velvet here pictured. The scarf collar ties in a knot and the elbow sleeves are voluminously full.

Pleated Skirts Popular for All Ages for Fall

Pleated skirts will be important in early fall fashions, according to a stylist, who returned recently from Paris. This also speaks with enthusiasm of velvet bows that are used to trim both daytime and evening dresses, explaining that bows in different colors are substituted to give a change in appearance to the frock.

Drouth Relief

Washington.—Chester C. Davis, the agricultural adjustment administrator, in a conversation I had with him the other day, uttered an observation which seems to be decidedly worthwhile and one which, because of the assurance and contents, ought to be repeated here. My conversation with Mr. Davis had to do with questions concerning drouth relief and I want to quote his remarks because of the widespread destruction of the current period when rainfall has been nil in so many communities.

"It is as unsafe and unjust to measure the true potentialities of this country," Mr. Davis said, "by the extreme drouth conditions of this year as it was to measure them by the bumper crop years which happened to coincide with high prices so that everybody felt sudden riches were in sight. The one extreme is just as deceptive as the other."

Mr. Davis outlined what the government was attempting to do since its policy has been changed and since individuals no longer are required to fend for themselves. He declared the changes in policy that have been taken represent a frank recognition of responsibilities by the present leadership and it was his conviction that more has been done in the face of similar conditions than ever has been done before to relieve human distress. He added that it had been found difficult, of course, to meet and solve many of the problems and that there is not sufficient progress even in our national government to counteract all of the effects of such a calamity. The administrator holds to the belief, however, that the steps taken by the administration constitute the beginnings of a national program from which apparently it is proposed eventually to develop national policies for dealing with all kinds of distress. Obviously, Mr. Davis did not touch on these phases because his job is to deal with agricultural situations and he has not gone beyond them.

Calling attention to the fact that the drouth relief program is the greatest ever undertaken in this or any other country, Mr. Davis summarized the joint activity of the several government agencies in the following language: The purchase of surplus cattle, with the processing of meat for relief distribution; encouragement of production of forage crops; co-ordination of seed purchase; human employment relief; purchase of adapted feed grain; reforestation and other measures to conserve moisture, prevent wind erosion and minimize the effects of future drouth, and in addition such crop benefit payments as have been made and which now turn out to be in his opinion crop insurance.

Mr. Davis is optimistic concerning the future of the American farmer, despite the hardships of the current drouth. He suggested, however, that it was necessary to face the facts of the current drouth, but also, to resort to the language of the street, the administrator thinks the country must not allow the current problems to knock it down.

"If the doubts and fears lately expressed had been heeded," Mr. Davis added, "the great plains never would have been settled. The troubles of today are but repetition on a less fearful scale of the obstacles encountered by the early settlers. But instead of turning back in the face of hardships, those pioneers established their homes and did not let drouth, food, hail, or Indians stop them.

"Instead, the pioneers and their sons searched the world for drouth-resistant wheat and grains which would mature in season. They bred up the drouth-resistant forage crops and planted them. They built a civilization on an expanse of the map which once was labeled the Great American desert. The drouths we have lived through in the past did not conquer the spirit nor stop the development of the West. The drouth of 1934 will not stop the men of the West in their forward march to conquer nature."

The thing about the remarks which Mr. Davis uttered that appealed to me and to numerous other Washington observers was the candor with which he treated the problems. He made no attempt in this conversation nor has he done so in several speeches he has made lately to use language that was hysterical. For an example of what I mean, dispatches coming from President Roosevelt's train on his homeward trip across the northern half of this country gave various figures as to the loss occasioned by the drouth. One of these dispatches credited an emergency relief official with the statement that the drouth had cost the farmers five billion dollars. Another dispatch placed the figure somewhat lower and gave no authority for the estimate. But the point is that while Mr. Davis recognizes the desperation of the farmers and the necessity for their relief, there was nothing sensational in his discussion. It is to be remembered that the total farm income of 1933 was only a little more than six billion dollars and it is hard for observers here to believe that the drouth has destroyed five-sixths of this country's agricultural income this year. In the light of this fact, the tempered remarks by Mr. Davis take on added significance and weight.

Will Ask More Funds

It now seems certain that when the congress returns to Washington next January it will be called upon immediately by the administration to vote more funds for relief of the drouth victims. Until later, however, the extent to which the administration will seek to go in this direction cannot be foretold. It is evident that having seen the circumstances first hand, Mr. Roosevelt's entire sympathy will be behind whatever proposal he makes.

Observers here, however, foresee some dangers as a result of the present desperate conditions. They know that Mr. Roosevelt will, as he has frequently stated, go the limit with federal funds, but the danger foreseen by astute observers here is that some of the members of the house and senate will attempt to go beyond all reason in preparation of relief plans during next winter. It is not unusual, as the records show, that on every occasion when the federal treasury doors are opened senators or representatives will come forward with scores of plans under the guise of human relief to get their hands on government money for their constituents. It is fair to say that some of these will be sincere. It is equally fair to say that, as in the past, some of them will have been misguided. The conversations one hears around Washington therefore indicate that those charged with government responsibility must be on their guard if vast sums are not to be wasted under the guise of extending relief to needy victims of nature's pranks this year.

Some of the brain trusters already have developed far flung plans for the physical transfer of thousands of farm families from the drouth stricken districts into other areas where they can get started again. While generally speaking I believe sentiment in the government favors doing anything that will afford relief next winter, a good many of the higher authorities in the administration point out that the scheme of transposition of whole families and their belongings presents grave problems.

Without attempting to discuss the merit or demerit of the scheme, it seems to me that attention ought to be called to the fact that human beings just can't agree to such programs.

Price Situation

There was a cartoon in one of the eastern metropolitan newspapers the other day that depicted Uncle Sam begging a small boy labeled "Prices" to grow up so that he could reach his height of 1934. Beside it was another caricature which showed Uncle Sam warning the same boy to stop growing and announcing that if he, the prices of food, grows too much, "I will crack down." I refer to this cartoon because most Washington observers see the price situation in this country to be quite confusing. It is to be recalled that throughout last year and early in 1934 the administration predicted all of its actions on a desire to raise prices. Now, however, the effect of the prolonged drouth in the agricultural areas is being felt in the cities and President Roosevelt announced his fear that profiteering in food prices is likely to result and made known that the administration has definite plans to curb any undue rise in prices. Thus far it has not been made clear what is considered an undue price rise under present conditions but the President stated with emphasis in a press conference that he would not permit profiteering to take place in the coming fall and winter because, he indicated, he thought the price increases would be unjustified.

The President and Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, are working hand in hand in the development of machinery which they intend to use to protect consumers from profiteering. Mr. Roosevelt asserted he had plenty of power with which to do this job. Mr. Wallace, speaking later, said the first check that would be placed on an undue rise in prices would be closer supervision of the grain markets. Any indications of manipulation in those markets will be dealt with summarily, according to Mr. Wallace.

The circumstances surrounding price questions, however, have caused many observers to ask for further exposition of the administration's policies in this regard. As far as I have been able to learn, none of the administration spokesmen are willing at this time to go beyond the threat to crack down if there is profiteering. It must be assumed, therefore, that moderate price increases will be tolerated. If they are not, it is made to appear that the policies upon which the agricultural adjustment administration have been operating and those that have served as the guideposts for NIA in its code making are no longer holding favor with the administration. In other words, there is profound confusion over the question of price increases at this time.

Ruins of World's Oldest City

Mtzhket, in the Transcaucasia, Four Thousand Years Old When Christ Was Born; Other Lost Places Centers of Mystery.

Among the lovely but lonely hills of Transcaucasia stand the splendid ruins of Mtzhket, said to be the world's oldest city. When Christ was a child Mtzhket had already seen some 4,000 years of life, and its hills were crowded with stately castles and temples. They say that it was founded by Japhet, Noah's son, after the Great Flood.

Here again is a city which was suddenly deserted somewhere about fifteen centuries ago. The story is that its king took a sudden dislike to it and moved, with all his court, to found a new capital. It may be so.

On January 24, 1896, the Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, came suddenly upon the lost city of Kashgar, which lies a thousand miles east of the Caspian sea, half hidden amid drifting sand-dunes. It covered an area of several thousand acres, and must at one time have been a populous place, but its history has been swallowed in the maw of time, and it is impossible to say who lived there or to what race they belonged.

The strange point is that the city was not built of brick or stone, but of wood. Yet today there are no trees growing within many miles of the spot.

When the explorer began to dig he found an amazing variety of furniture, pictures, images in clay and plaster of paris, and many other articles. Yet, as in the lost city of the Fayum, there were no bodies. Here, once more, it seems that the whole of a great population walked out.

Among the ruins is the bed of a river long dry. It seems possible that some earthquake or other catastrophe may have turned this river, and by cutting off the water supply left the city uninhabitable. Then by degrees the sands swept over it, and have left it and its treasures for the study of scientists of today.

Central Asia is the home of mystery. In Turkestan, on the right bank of the Amu Daria, is a chain of rocky hills, among which stands the modern town of Karkli.

Prospectors, searching the hills for minerals, came upon a tunnel mouth which led to a vast underground city two miles long, a perfect labyrinth of streets, squares, and corridors. Here and there falls of earth blocked the way, but most of this cavern city remains in a perfect state.

The dry air had preserved the contents of the houses, and they were full of utensils made of wood, baked clay, and metal. There were effigies, designs, and inscriptions, besides pots, urns, vases, and gold and silver money.

Many of these articles were lying about just as they had been left by their owners, who seem to have gone away in a terrible hurry. Perhaps some enemy broke in on them. No one will ever know.

Strangest of all such stories is that of Angkor, the dead city of the Cambodian jungles in French Indo-China. For many centuries Angkor was the capital of the great Khmer empire, and it grew to a size and importance second to none in the world at that date. It is said that its population actually reached a total of a million. One day, some seven centuries ago, the emperor at the head of his people marched out of the city—and never returned; nor does history record any reason for this amazing exodus.

Angkor, with its marvelously ornamented palaces and pagodas, was left empty and deserted. The climate of Cambodia is one of the hottest and wettest in the world, and within a very few years the jungle swept in and covered the empty city—covered it so completely that its very existence was forgotten, and its rediscovery late in the Nineteenth century was one of the greatest surprises in the history of archeology.

Except for the natural damage done by the passage of time, the place was singularly perfect, and the high walls surrounding it, with their great gates, still stood. So did the magnificent Bayon or Buddhist temple, beneath which, so legend has it, lies the immense treasure of its last monarch.

Death is, according to legend, the portion of all who set eyes on this forbidden treasure. Five men have so far won to the entrance of the secret hoard, but all have died, and some four years ago the French government forbade any further search. An official expedition is to be sent into the jungle to ascertain whether there is any truth in these tales of hidden gold.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"The Challenge to Liberty"

Nothing perhaps for years, has created more of a stir in political circles than the recent article in the Saturday Evening Post by ex president Herbert Hoover, under the head of "The Challenge to Liberty."

In his article to the American people, Mr. Hoover expected to be criticized by the administration, but nevertheless, it furnishes the public with food for thought. In commenting on the article, most newspapers of the opposition, criticize Mr. Hoover because he offers no remedy for prevailing conditions, but that would have been entirely out of place, and would have furnished grounds for other criticisms and besides, the time for offering remedies has not arrived.

It is easy enough to make criticisms like that of secretary Ickes, knowing as we do that he has his nose in the government feed-bag, but facts are facts and the more Mr. Hoover's article is criticized by such political strap hangers, the more the thinking, reading, intelligent public will investigate.

He cannot be accused of using personalities, neither is there any spark of bitterness over his past defeat. One of the main things on which he lays stress is that the political trend in Washington is in the wrong direction and contrary to the spirit of liberty for which our forefathers fought, bled and died. He attacks the code system, which all must admit, has failed of its purpose because of the fact that on account of coercion, threats of imprisonment, attempts at the boycott system and other methods have been used to which the people have rebelled in the belief that they were still American freemen.

Laying other things aside, it must be conceded that his position on preserving our cherished ideals of liberty and American freedom will be upheld by multitudes of red blooded Americans over our country. To argue contrarywise, would be akin to treading on the flag, on graves of departed patriots, scoffing at freedom and despoiling that which we have cherished since the foundation of our Republic.

If the New Deal is worth anything, it is worth criticism and the ex-president deserves credit for his display of courage in that which he believes to be right. Liberty, with some politicians means nothing but a thin veil, through which they only care to see their own evil designing ends, but to the thinking people, the masses, "The Challenge to Liberty" will be read and digested with more than ordinary interest.

Austria Center of Main Trade Routes From East

Geographical Position Gives It Undue Importance.

Washington.—"Geographical position gives Austria a place of exaggerated importance in international affairs," says a National Geographic society bulletin. "No less than six nations touch the borders of a country no larger than the state of Maine. Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Italy, and Switzerland, watch every event inside these borders with consuming interest.

"Austria was reduced by the treaty of Versailles to a mere shadow of her former self. A vast empire was whittled down to one small state, overlaid with industries, and deprived of most natural resources. Her wheat fields went to Hungary, her coal mines to Czechoslovakia, and her sea ports of Trieste and Fiume to Italy. Today Austria has to import most of her coal and much of her foodstuffs.

Battles Handicaps.

"Against these handicaps she has waged a sturdy battle—increasing agricultural production and developing water power as a substitute for coal. The fertile plains north of the Danube have been under intense cultivation, agricultural schools were established, and every possible effort was made to aid and educate the farmer.

"On the other side of the scales are her mines and her industries, always provided that she can find a foreign market for her products. The mountains of Styria, a province in the Southeast, are rich in iron, and the furnaces and steel works of Graz, Leoben and Donawitz supply the country with 99 per cent of the metal used. Carinthian iron was familiar to the Romans, and later greatly in demand for the armor and trappings of knight-hood.

"Austrian salt mines, also old in history, were known to the people of the Bronze age. In addition to upper Styria there are two other important industrial districts. Vorarlberg, famous for embroidery and cotton weaving, and Vienna with its textile mills and machine shops.

"Factories and machinery make a poor introduction to the vast industries of the Danube. But the Vienna of today is a city of sharp contrasts and puzzling contradictions. The Baroque facades of Hapsburg palaces still line the wide Ringstrasse, but beyond rise the clean, straight walls of a huge municipal apartment block. The Schonbrunn palace, luxurious residence of Maria Theresa, is now an orphanage for workers' children. Ideals of modern socialism mingle with imperial traditions.

"For sixteen years Vienna has been a capital without an empire. The sources of her wealth and power are gone, but there is one thing that treaties could not take away, and that is her geographical location. She lies at the crossroads of Europe, where the main trade routes from the Baltic to the Adriatic cross the great east-west highway of the Danube.

Tourist Trade Important.

"Geography destined the city to play an important commercial role, and geography may prove a deciding factor in her future recovery. The Danube continues to carry a heavy burden of shipping. No less than seven great

Ten-Hour Rest Is Park Geysers Code

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Perhaps the influence of the NRA has at last reached the geysers of Yellowstone park. At any rate, rangers point out, Riverside geyser is lengthening the time between eruptions. Whereas a year ago it was spouting every eight hours, it now rests ten hours between shows.

railway lines meet within the city, and it seems likely that Vienna will remain an important center of distribution, despite political upheavals.

"During the last few years Austria has relied increasingly upon tourist trade to balance the budget. More than two-thirds of the country is mountainous, with towering snow peaks, narrow valleys, hidden villages, and deep blue lakes—an ideal vacation land. Austria is famous for her lakes, particularly those of Salzkammergut in the vicinity of Salzburg. There are sports for every season. During the summer, spas and health resorts are crowded, tiny flatboats shoot down the swift waters of the Inn, and energetic mountaineers assault the most forbidding of Alpine peaks."

Russian War Debt Question Still With Us

Conferences Held Looking to Settlement.

By WILLIAM L. DRUCKART

Washington. The Russian debt question is still with us. Away back in 1917, it will be remembered, the Wilson administration in its conduct of the World war authorized and made enormous loans to foreign governments to aid in the fight against Pan-Germanism. Some of the debts have been funded. Some, like the Russian, have been virtually repudiated. But the Soviet government, after renouncing all obligations of its predecessors in Russia, is now trying to work out some sort of settlement of the obligation, which amounts to three or four hundred million dollars.

Upon recognition of the Soviet by President Roosevelt, plans immediately were made by this government to aid in financing exports to Russia. To accomplish this, the first export-import bank was established. But along came a bill by Senator Johnson of California which prohibited extension of credit to any foreign government which owed money in this country. That effectively precluded aid by the export import bank for American exporters who desire to sell to the Soviet. The result was early moves by the Soviet ambassador to Washington looking to a settlement of the old war time debt so that the effect of the Johnson law would be abrogated, insofar as they were concerned. These conferences are now under way. Little progress has been made, but Secretary Hull of the State department, the American commissioner, is optimistic and thinks that eventually some method of repayment may be worked out.

Engineers Select Site for Dams on Rio Grande

El Paso, Texas. Two tentative sites for storage dams to equalize and conserve the lower Rio Grande flow have been selected by W. F. Anderson and A. M. Amor, consulting engineers of the international boundary commission.

The engineers selected a place at El Jardin, between Laredo and Del Rio, as one of the sites for a storage dam with a capacity of 1,500,000 acre feet.

The other site is at the lower end of the San Juan river in Mexico.

The engineers are making a survey on possibilities of equalizing and conserving the flow so that lower Rio Grande residents will not experience a drought one month and a flood the next.

Uncover Will Draw 18 Years Before Revolution

Sycamore, Ill.—A last will and testament, drawn 18 years before the outbreak of the Revolutionary war but still legible, was uncovered among the belongings of Emerson Andrew here. The parchment document, penned and sealed on August 6, 1757, by Samuel Davis at Massachusetts Bay, is now more than 177 years old. Davis bequeathed his home property, a horse and cattle to his wife. He gave each of three daughters a share in other land holdings and stock. To one surviving son he left 25 pounds of "lawful silver money," and to a kinsman left 20 pounds "providing he behaved well."

Doctor's Yearly Salary of $1 Is Sliced to 87c

Augusta, Ga.—"I hope I won't be criticized for drawing down more than one salary," said Dr. Elmer V. Campbell, mayor of Hallowell and director of the division of sanitary engineering at the state house, when he received an 87 cent check from the United States public health service in payment for his services during the past year as collaborating sanitary engineer in Maine. The salary was $1 a year, but was cut because of the depression.

License as Veterinary Is Won by College Girl

San Francisco.—Pretty Patricia Heene is ready to hang out her shingle as a veterinarian. It was revealed here. Miss Heene was recently granted a license to practice in the state of Washington and is hopeful of soon securing a California license. She is a graduate of Washington State college and a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

WANTS WALSH'S SEAT

James E. Murray, a Butte attorney, won the Democratic nomination for the United States senate to serve out the remainder of the term of the late Thomas J. Walsh.

Parrots Learn How to Speak in "University"

Berlin.—Unique in that its students are all parrots, a "university" has been opened here where fond mammas or papas may bring their squawkers for instruction in languages.

The school is international in scope, the birds being taught German, French and English. Contrary to most methods of teaching the birds, the "professor" has phonograph records made of his voice repeating the sentences that the owners desire to have drilled into their birds.

For two hours a day the bird is given his individual instruction until he is able to repeat the sentence. It generally takes about four weeks to give a parrot a vocabulary of sixty words but longer time is required to make them respond to the proper answers.

Ancient Well Reveals Bones of Latin Warrior

Rome.—The body of an early Latin warrior, belonging to the civilization-tradition says was planted in Italy by Aeneas and the Dardanians, has been found in an old and disused well near the village of Lanuvio, 20 miles from here.

This ancestor of the Romans lay in his sarcophagus, wrapped in his armor, with his sword beside him, his shield and helmet, exactly as he was buried between 2,500 and 3,000 years ago.

When the sarcophagus was opened and the air entered the bones dissolved into dust. The bronze breastplate, the helmet and the sword are in relatively good condition.

Sheepmen Confronted With Threat From East

Butte, Mont.—Western sheepmen, who fought the cattlemen for range rights in some of the bloodiest range wars of the Old West, face a new enemy, according to A. A. Evans, president of the North American Sheep Shearers' union. Eastern sportsmen, he said, were backing a movement to have sheep ruled off large tracts of western lands as a means of preserving game. Evans said that charges that sheep destroyed feed needed for game were false, as they usually ranged on lands unsuitable for wild game in any considerable numbers.

British Rabbits Prove Menace to Forest Work

London.—Forestry work in Britain is being checked by rabbits, which have become almost a plague. According to a bulletin of the forestry commission, a single rabbit can do $50 worth of damage in a night to a plantation of young trees. To fence in an acre against these costs about $65.

The Hon. James A. Bees says there now scarcely is a place in Britain where a forest plantation is safe against rabbits, whereas in Germany one never sees a rabbit, and the only fencing around forest plantations is an occasional one against deer.

IDYLLIC ROMANCE TURNS OUT TO BE SORDID AFFAIR

Poetess Turned Over to Relative While U. S. Holds "Prince."

New York.—Louise Krist, eighteen-year-old poetess and musician, whose disappearance from her home a little over a month ago created a furor in New York's Greenwich village, has been released from the Florence Crittendon home for wayward minors and given over to the custody of an unidentified aunt.

With her grand poetic passion for the "Prince" Childe de Rohan d'Harcourt perceptibly chilled, Louise has agreed to certain promises she was asked to make. The girl's case came up again recently and she again refused to sign a complaint of seduction against the "prince" with whom she lived for 18 days while city, state and federal authorities were looking for white slavers and kidnappers.

Magistrate Jonas Goldstein, in postponing the case indefinitely, declared that the problem of the girl's infatuation is not one for a criminal court.

The magistrate said that psychiatrists had examined the girl and had reached the same conclusion as the court—"that a great deal of harm and no good would follow if the defendant were sent to a reformatory."

"Prince" is Held.

Meanwhile the "prince" is a prisoner on Ellis Island where he will be tried shortly on charges of having violated the immigration laws. The "prince" contends the title he carries is merely a nick name and that he is really a native of Oklahoma.

The spotlight was turned on the idyllic romance of the pair when they were picked up by the police on the lower East side after having been recognized by a restaurant proprietor. At the time they carried a fortune of $1.88. Of this sum 45 cents nestled in the pockets of the "prince's" royal raiment while Rosebud, as her parents call her, possessed the rest.

Their luggage consisted of a yellow leather brief case which they used when they registered at various hotels. It contained no bridal finery, but the nucleus of a 125,000-word novel. Instead of initials it was marked with mystic daubs of gold paint.

Crashed the Meeting.

D'Harcourt, who is forty-six years old, had been dictating this terrifying tome to Rosebud ever since that mystic night when they fled together from the Raven Poetry circle meeting in the precincts of Greenwich village.

Among those present while the Ravens croaked their poems were Miss Jane O'Ryan, sister of Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, and Vincent Beltrone, a Fascist editor, who pleaded with Rosebud not to heed the wiles of the "prince," who hadn't been invited, and crashed the meeting anyway.

Until dawn D'Harcourt and Louise walked Manhattan's streets.

The next night the "prince" and his "monumental love" registered at the Hotel America. Two nights later they stayed at the Hotel Margaret. Their third rendezvous was the Hotel Byron. After that they were "visiting friends."

The "count" as he is known to habitués of the village, and Louise were haled into the West Side court after their apprehension. The former, whose previous adventures range from burglary, attempted extortion, and wife beating, down to poetry and mysticism, was arraigned on suspicion of seduction and his paramour was charged with being a wayward minor.

D'Harcourt was later released when Louise denied that she had been seduced during her 18-day idyll and that she and the "count" were going to be married. He was subsequently arrested on a warrant issued by the Department of Labor charging him with violation of the immigration laws.

The projects will be directed by the county agent's office assisted by the welfare organization.

New Mexico babies have less than half the chance of living than those in the rest of the United States, according to Miss Kay Parker, state health bureau statistician. She said 344 of every 1,000 in the state died before they were a year old, while the average for the nation was only 58 per 1,000. She said in New Mexico 40 per cent of the deaths are from unknown causes or cases without medical attention.

News has been received at Las Vegas that Judge Carrick Buck, who is a niece of Mrs. B. Archibald of Las Vegas, has succeeded Judge Ahil and taken her office as judge of Kanab court. She is the first woman judge of Hawaii. Before her, Judge Buck's mother, Mrs. Henriette Hume Buck, was the first woman admitted to law practice in the state of New Mexico. After finishing her law studies in California Judge Buck went to Hawaii, where she has practiced for many years.

A carload of drought cattle from eastern New Mexico was received in Gallup for use in the transient station, Carl Taylor, manager of the Gallup station, said. The cattle are all in good condition. Taylor has made arrangements for Fatsie Cresto, rancher near Gallup, to pasture the cattle and they will be slaughtered as needed. Taylor said two to three heaves a week were consumed by the transients in Gallup, fifty in the new camp at McGuffey and between twenty-five and thirty transient families quartered in town.

Lesson for September 9

HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE BACK TO GOD

LESSON TEXT—II. Chronicles 30:1-27

GOLDEN TEXT—For if ye turn again unto the Lord, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land; for the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him. II. Chronicles 30:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King's Call to God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A King's Call to Worship God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Good Leader?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Godly Leaders in Civic Life.

1. Hezekiah Calls the People to Keep the Passover (vv. 1-12).

The way for a sinning and divided people to get back to God and be united is around the crucified Lord. The Passover was a memorial of the nation's deliverance through the shedding of the blood of the sacrificial lamb.

1. The invitation was representative of the nation (v. 2). The king took counsel with the princes and the congregation to show that the proclamation was the expression of the nation's desire.

2. The time was unusual (vv. 2-4). There was not sufficient time to sanctify the people nor to gather them together at the regular time, so they resolved, instead of postponing it for a year, to hold it on the fourteenth day of the second month. This liberty had been granted before in an exigency (Num. 9:9-13).

3. The scope of the invitation (vv. 5-9). It included all of both nations who would come to keep the Passover to the Lord God of Israel. "Israel" is now used to include both kingdoms. The effort was to win back the nation which had seceded. The posts who were sent with the message were authorized to supplement the proclamation with an urgent exhortation to join as a united nation. This urgent invitation was tactfully put as follows:

a. It touched ancestral memories—"Turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel" (v. 6). Both kingdoms had a common ancestry.

b. Recent, bitter experience—"Be not ye like your fathers and brethren who trespassed against the Lord God and were given up to desolation as ye see" (v. 7).

c. Yearning for captive kinsfolk—"Your brethren and children shall find compassion before their captors" (v. 8).

d. The instinct of self-preservation—"So that they shall come again into this land" (v. 9).

e. The forgiving mercy of God—"For the Lord your God is gracious and merciful" (v. 9). God will not turn any sincere seeker from him (John 6:37).

4. Israel's reception of the invitation (vv. 10-12).

a. Some mocked (v. 10). This urgent and sincere invitation excited only opposition and ridicule by certain tribes.

b. Some with humble hearts come to Jerusalem (v. 11). In Judah God gave them one heart to accept the summons to unite in the Lord around the great Passover.

11. The Passover Kept (vv. 13-27).

1. Removal of heathen altars (vv. 13, 14). These altars were erected in Jerusalem in the time of Ahas (23:24). Before there could be worship of the true God, all these traces of idolatry must be removed.

2. The Passover killed (v. 15). The zeal of the people was shown in their going forward with the service, though the priests were not ready.

3. The priests and Levites shamed (vv. 15-20). The zeal of the people put to shame the priests and the Levites. They were stimulated to perform their duties by the law of God as given by Moses. They even took charge of the killing of the Passover, since many of the officers were not sanctified so as to render this service for themselves. The Lord healed—that is, forgave the people.

4. The praise of glad hearts (vv. 21, 22). They continued for seven days in this glad service.

a. The Levites and priests sang God's praises daily on loud instruments (v. 21).

b. Hezekiah spoke comforting words to the Levites (v. 22) and commended them and their teaching of the knowledge of God.

c. They made confession of their sins to God (v. 22). This was the evidence that their action was genuine.

5. The Passover prolonged seven days (vv. 23-27). The king's object in prolonging the feast was to make a lasting impression upon the people so as to result in thorough conversion.

ROBBERS' ROOST

by ZANE GREY

Copyright—WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, in the early days of the cattle industry, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who admits being a robber, and tells Wall he is working for an Englishman, Herrick, who has located a big ranch in the mountains. Herrick has employed a small army of gun-fighters, and Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. Wall saves Hank's life by bludgeoning a gambler out of shooting. With Hays and two other rustlers, Happy Jack and Lincoln, Jim Wall goes to Herrick's ranch. Herrick announces that his sister, Helen, is coming to the ranch. Hays unfolds his plan for getting possession of Herrick's 12,000 head of live stock. He and his lieutenants ride away to drive off the first bunch of cattle.

"Smoky, it's shore a big idee," declared Hays, enthusiastically. "But what about Heeseeman?"

"Let's clean out his bunch."

Hays shook his head.

"Fellers, if we pick a fight with that outfit some of us will get killed an' others crippled. Then we couldn't pull the deal. A better idee is for one of us to kill Heeseeman."

"Reckon it would be. They'd bust the outfit."

"Who'd you pick on to do that, Hank?"

Jeff Bridges boomed out: "Why, Smoky, of course, or Brad."

"Nope," said Hays, shaking his head. "With all that's due Smoky an' Brad I wouldn't choose either. Jim, here, is the man for that job."

"Mebbe we could drive off six or eight thousand head of stock before Heeseeman ever found out," put in Smoky. "What's the sense of fightin' it out till we have to?"

The suggestion found instant favor on all sides.

"But we don't want Heeseeman trailin' us," expostulated Hays.

"You mean after we pull the deal?" queried Brad, incredulously.

"Shore I mean after."

"Wal, what in thunderation do we care for him, when we've got the coin an' are on our way to that roost we're due to find?"

"I don't just like the idee, fellers," replied Hays, evasively.

Jim Wall, studying the robber leader closely, imagined that Hays was not exposing all the details of his plot.

"Let's put my idee to a vote," said Smoky.

When this suggestion was solemnly complied with, making use of the deck of cards, it was found that Slocum had won.

"So far, so good," said Hays, as if relieved. "Now let's see. . . Smoky, tomorrow you take your gang, includin' Brad, an' quit. Pack a slow of grub an' grain, an' hide out below. Cache what you don't need. I'll go to Grand Junction for new hands. See? But all I'll come back with will be instructions for you to follow. Then you can go drivin'."

"Good. An' how about the cash?"

"Wal, them buyers won't pay me in advance, you can gamble on that. But they'll pay you. Just divide with your outfit an' save our share."

"Short an' sweet. I like it more all the time," declared Smoky.

"We'll want to know where your camp is," went on Hays. "Reckon I'd better ride out with you tomorrow."

"No. You rustle for Grand Junction. We'll see that Happy an' Jim know where to find our camp."

Jim thought of something: "Men, has it occurred to you that you can't drive cattle up this road and through the ranch?"

"Shore. No need. It'd be a seventy-mile drive if we came this way. But we'll drive round by Limestone, an' up the other valley road. About the same distance to Grand."

The conference ended. Hays turned to the open fire, and seeking a seat in the shadow by the chimney he pondered. It was Jim's opinion that the chief had vastly more on his mind than he had divulged. Lincoln gave him a suspicious stare. The others seemed eminently pleased with the outlook, though no more was said in Jim's hearing. They joked and smoked.

Jim bade them good night and went out. His last glimpse of Hays was thought-provoking. Lighting another cigar, Jim strolled up and down the porch, revolving in mind the conference.

It was a spring night, starry, with an edge on the mountain air that meant frost in the morning.

Was it possible that this lantern-eyed robber had evil intentions toward Herrick's sister? Jim scouted the suspicion.

"Hang the girl part of it, anyhow," he muttered, slinging his half-smoked cigar out into the noisy brook. Why did a woman have to come along to upset the best-laid plans of men?

The next morning brought somber faces and action. Five of Hays' outfit rode away with six of the pack horses and most of the supplies. Hays watched them until they disappeared among the cedars.

"Wal, now I'll brave the job," he said.

"What excuse will you give him?" asked Jim.

"Anythin' would do to tell Herrick. But Heeseeman will see through me, I'm afraid."

"Very well. You tell Herrick that your outfit split over me."

"Over you? Dog-gone! That ain't no poor. But why?"

"Both Slocum and Lincoln are sort of touchy about gun-throwing, aren't they? Wal, tell him how queer that brand of gunman is—how he instinctively hates the real gunman. And that Slocum and Lincoln made you choose between them and me."

"Ahuh. Sort of so the idee will get to Heeseeman's ears that in a pinch with guns I'd rather have you backin' me than them?"

"Exactly."

Not long afterward Hays returned to the cabin jubilant. "You'd never guess, Jim. That Englisher laughed like the very devil. An' he ordered me to ride off after some desperadoes who're not afraid of Jim Wall."

"Hal! Hal! But Heeseeman won't get a laugh out of it."

"Shoot the lights out of him," said Hays, fiercely. "Wal, I'm off for Grand. Happy, pack me a snack of grub."

"How long will it take you to ride over?"

"Eight hours, I reckon. An' I'll be back tomorrow night."

"Certainly these buyers will know you're selling stolen cattle?"

"Oh, shore."

After Hays had gone Jim settled himself to pass the hours away.

"Mebbe it won't be so tedious," observed Happy Jack, dryly. "We've got three rifles an' a sack of shells right handy. So let 'em come."

Jim half expected a visit from Herrick, but the morning dragged by without any sign of anyone. About mid-afternoon, however, six riders appeared coming down the lane along the bench.

They had supper, after which Jack smoked and talked, while Jim listened. Evidently Happy Jack had taken a liking to him. Jim went to bed early, not because he was sleepy, but to keep from calling on that fellow Heeseeman.

How many nights Jim Wall had lain down under the dark trees to wakefulness, to the throbbing thoughts that must mock the rest of any man who has strayed from the straight and narrow path! It tormented him at certain times. But that never kept the old concentrated pondering over tomorrow from gaining control of his consciousness.

There had been no hesitation about Hank Hays declaring himself in regard to Heeseeman. Callous, contemptuous, Hays had indicated the desirability of riding the range of Heeseeman. But Heeseeman had been subtle.

Unquestionably his motive had been to undermine Hays in Jim's regard. And a few questions and an assertion or two had had their effect. Jim made the reservation that he had not accepted Hays on anything but face value. Still the robber had gradually built up a character of intent force, cunning, and strength. These had crashed, though there was no good reason for that. Jim had not accepted Hays' word for anything.

Hays was not a square partner! This stuck in Jim's craw.

Why this seemed true puzzled Jim. Heeseeman had simply verified a forming but still disputed suspicion in Jim's mind—that Hank Hays had evil designs upon Herrick's sister. Heeseeman and Hays had probably known for weeks that this English girl was expected to arrive.

"Suppose he had! What business was that of Jim's? None, except that he now formed one of Hays' hand and as such had a right to question activities. Rustling cattle, at least in a moderate way, was almost a legitimate business. Ranchers, since the early days of the cattle drives from Texas, had accepted their common losses. It had been only big steals that roused them to ire and action, to make outlaws out of rustlers. Nevertheless, it was extremely doubtful, out here in the wilds of Utah, that even a wholesale steal would be profitable. To abduct a girl, however, might throw western interest upon the perpetrators. Hays' object assuredly was to collect ransom.

Still that had not been Heeseeman's intention, for had it been Jim's original suspicion. He gave it up in disgust. Time would tell. But he did not feel further inclined to call upon Heeseeman. He would stick to Hays, awaiting developments.

The evening day passed uneventfully. No one of Smoky's outfit showed up, nor did Hays return. Jim waited for Herrick to give him orders, which were not forthcoming. The rancher was chasing jackrabbits and coyotes with the bounds.

Next morning Jim made it a point to ride over to the barns. The rancher came down in a queer costume. The red coat took Jim's eye. A motley pack of hounds and sheep dogs was new to Jim, as he had not seen or heard any dogs about the ranch. Jim was invited to ride along with Herrick and the several cowboys. They went by Heeseeman's camp, which was vacant. Jim was to learn that the rancher had put the Heeseeman outfit to work on the cutting and peeling of logs up on the slope, preparatory to the erection of a new barn.

Jack rabbits were as thick as bees. The cowboys led the dogs, which soon became unmanageable and bolted. Then the race was on. Where the ground was level and unobstructed by brush or cut up by washes Herrick did fairly well as to horsemanship, but in rough going he could not keep to the English saddle. He would put his horse at anything and he had a jarring fall.

Notwithstanding this, Herrick finished out the hunt. He was funny, and queer, but he was game, and Jim liked him. On the way back Jim amused the Englishman by snooting jack rabbits with his revolver. He managed to kill three out of five to Herrick's infinite astonishment and admiration.

He would put his horse at anything and he had a jarring fall.

The slight made Jim start. How often had he seen the like—a compact little company of riders, dark-garbed, riding dark horses! It was tremendously suggestive to a man of his experience.

He reached inside the door and, drawing out his rifle, advanced to the front of the porch.

CHAPTER IV

When the group of riders reached the point where the lane crossed the brook, just out of pistol range, they halted, and one, evidently the leader, came on to the bridge.

"Hi, thar," he yelled, reining his horse.

"Hi, yourself," shouted back Jim.

The man, who, of course, Jim took to be Heeseeman, walked his horse half the intervening distance and stopped again.

At this juncture Happy Jack emerged from the cabin and carelessly propped a rifle against the wall.

"Who's callin'?" he boomed.

"I don't know," replied Jim.

"I'm Bill Heeseeman, an' I come to talk," called the visitor.

"Friendly talk?" queried Jim.

"Wal, if it ain't you'll be to blame."

"Come right over."

Jim leaned his rifle against the rail and stood aside. Heeseeman did not look up as he mounted the steps. He took off an old sombrero to disclose the tanned, clear-skinned face of a man under forty with narrow, blue eyes reddened by wind and dust. It was a more open visage than Jim had expected to see. Certainly Heeseeman was a more prepossessing man, at first sight, than Hays.

"Mind if I set down?" he asked.

"Make yourself at home," replied Jim.

"Air you Wall?"

"Yes, that's my name. And this is Happy Jack, another of Hays' outfit."

Heeseeman nodded to Jack, who replied with a civil "Howdy," and went back into the cabin. Then Heeseeman leaned against the wall and treated Jim to a frank, shrewd gaze.

"You're Hays' right-hand man, just late from Wyoming?"

"Last is correct, anyhow."

"Do you know him?" queried Heeseeman, in lower voice.

"Perhaps not so well as you," replied Jim, who suddenly reminded himself that he knew Hays but slightly.

"I'm goin' to tell you somethin'."

"Heeseeman, you'll only waste your breath," declared Jim, impatiently.

"Wal, I don't waste much of that," drawled the other. "But if you wasn't new to Utah I'd aye myself this trouble. An' you're goin' to believe what I tell you."

Heeseeman's eyes were fixed on Jim's face, and he had a jarring fall.

Notwithstanding this, Herrick finished out the hunt. He was funny, and queer, but he was game, and Jim liked him. On the way back Jim amused the Englishman by snooting jack rabbits with his revolver. He managed to kill three out of five to Herrick's infinite astonishment and admiration.

Heeseeman's eyes were fixed on Jim's face, and he had a jarring fall.

Notwithstanding this, Herrick finished out the hunt. He was funny, and queer, but he was game, and Jim liked him. On the way back Jim amused the Englishman by snooting jack rabbits with his revolver. He managed to kill three out of five to Herrick's infinite astonishment and admiration.

Heeseeman's eyes were fixed on Jim's face, and he had a jarring fall.

"Why will it?"

"Because it's true."

No argument could gainsay that; moreover, the man had truth in his blue slits of eyes and in his voice.

"Did Hays tell you I was a rustler?"

"I think he mentioned it."

"Did he tell you we was pard once? . . . That he double-crossed me?"

"No."

"Wal, I'll let it go at that," returned Heeseeman, coolly. "Mech obliged for lettin' me come up. An' if you get curious just ride over to see me."

He rose, stretched his long leghs, and walked off the porch to mount his horse, leaving Jim about as surprised as he had ever been. Happy Jack came out in time to see him join his comrades and ride back with them toward the corrals.

"Short visit. Glad it was. What'd he want?"

"Darn! If I savvy, altogether. Didn't you hear any of our talk?"

"No. I reckoned the less I heard the better. Then Hank couldn't razz me. But I had a hunch of what he was up to."

Jim did not press the question. He carried his rifle back into the cabin, rather ashamed of his overhaste, and feeling already curious enough to call on Heeseeman.

They had supper, after which Jack smoked and talked, while Jim listened. Evidently Happy Jack had taken a liking to him. Jim went to bed early, not because he was sleepy, but to keep from calling on that fellow Heeseeman.

How many nights Jim Wall had lain down under the dark trees to wakefulness, to the throbbing thoughts that must mock the rest of any man who has strayed from the straight and narrow path! It tormented him at certain times. But that never kept the old concentrated pondering over tomorrow from gaining control of his consciousness.

There had been no hesitation about Hank Hays declaring himself in regard to Heeseeman. Callous, contemptuous, Hays had indicated the desirability of riding the range of Heeseeman. But Heeseeman had been subtle.

Unquestionably his motive had been to undermine Hays in Jim's regard. And a few questions and an assertion or two had had their effect. Jim made the reservation that he had not accepted Hays on anything but face value. Still the robber had gradually built up a character of intent force, cunning, and strength. These had crashed, though there was no good reason for that. Jim had not accepted Hays' word for anything.

Hays was not a square partner! This stuck in Jim's craw.

Why this seemed true puzzled Jim. Heeseeman had simply verified a forming but still disputed suspicion in Jim's mind—that Hank Hays had evil designs upon Herrick's sister. Heeseeman and Hays had probably known for weeks that this English girl was expected to arrive.

"Suppose he had! What business was that of Jim's? None, except that he now formed one of Hays' hand and as such had a right to question activities. Rustling cattle, at least in a moderate way, was almost a legitimate business. Ranchers, since the early days of the cattle drives from Texas, had accepted their common losses. It had been only big steals that roused them to ire and action, to make outlaws out of rustlers. Nevertheless, it was extremely doubtful, out here in the wilds of Utah, that even a wholesale steal would be profitable. To abduct a girl, however, might throw western interest upon the perpetrators. Hays' object assuredly was to collect ransom.

Still that had not been Heeseeman's intention, for had it been Jim's original suspicion. He gave it up in disgust. Time would tell. But he did not feel further inclined to call upon Heeseeman. He would stick to Hays, awaiting developments.

The evening day passed uneventfully. No one of Smoky's outfit showed up, nor did Hays return. Jim waited for Herrick to give him orders, which were not forthcoming. The rancher was chasing jackrabbits and coyotes with the bounds.

Next morning Jim made it a point to ride over to the barns. The rancher came down in a queer costume. The red coat took Jim's eye. A motley pack of hounds and sheep dogs was new to Jim, as he had not seen or heard any dogs about the ranch. Jim was invited to ride along with Herrick and the several cowboys. They went by Heeseeman's camp, which was vacant. Jim was to learn that the rancher had put the Heeseeman outfit to work on the cutting and peeling of logs up on the slope, preparatory to the erection of a new barn.

Jack rabbits were as thick as bees. The cowboys led the dogs, which soon became unmanageable and bolted. Then the race was on. Where the ground was level and unobstructed by brush or cut up by washes Herrick did fairly well as to horsemanship, but in rough going he could not keep to the English saddle. He would put his horse at anything and he had a jarring fall.

Notwithstanding this, Herrick finished out the hunt. He was funny, and queer, but he was game, and Jim liked him. On the way back Jim amused the Englishman by snooting jack rabbits with his revolver. He managed to kill three out of five to Herrick's infinite astonishment and admiration.

Woman's Club Met

August 27, to consider the proposition set before it by the FERA that the club sponsor its county canning project, the making of mattresses and the sewing for relief work. The work itself is to be done by those now on direct relief and will be paid for at the rate of 40c per hour, the club only supervising the activities, getting together the articles necessary for the work, and providing a place where it can be done. In spite of the inclement weather, a large number of members were present, voting unanimously to further this cause.

The FERA urged that work begin at once, as beef and apples were on hand ready to be canned. A committee of Mmes. Beck, Hall and Miss Melaas was named to solicit loans of articles required. To expedite this part of the work, the club decided to make calls for the same through the paper. So if anyone has an oil stove, a pressure cooker, a skillet or a sewing machine to lend for this purpose, please notify Mmes. Beck or Young. Clean cloths for dish rags and tea towels would be acceptable.

Kimbrell-Marquez

Last Friday in the city of Albuquerque, occurred the marriage of Albert Kimbrell and Miss Adeline Marquez. Adeline was born and reared in Tularosa and after finishing her school at that place about four years ago, she moved to Carrizozo, where she has been engaged in clerical work for several of our business firms; at present being connected with the FERA, relief work.

Albert is the oldest son of Assessor and Mrs. Wm. Kimbrell, was born and reared in Picacho and like his esteemed wife, is a very polished and refined young man. The many friends of the young couple extend to them best wishes for future happiness.

W. B. Payne, rancher from the Capitan country, was here Monday on some business matters and returned in the evening.

Mack Shaver came in from Albuquerque last Saturday, remained over Sunday with the home folks and returned Monday. Mack is working with the state engineer's force at different places over the state.

H. A. Miller is erecting a residence across the alley from the Henry Lutz home. Joe Vega is laying the 'dohes on the wall.

Mr. and Mrs. J.F. Petty of the Economy Grocery Store, who are now in Amarillo, Texas, will return Saturday, so we understand.

H. R. Herting, storekeeper at Fort Stanton, came over Tuesday night, accompanied by Geo. Elmgren, the scenic painter and B. H. Leemkuil. They attended the meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 80, I. O. O. F.

Otho Lowe won the prize at the Lyric Theatre last night, which amounted to $45.00.

Mrs. Nick Vega, son Nick, Jr. and daughter Carmel Viola spent last week-end visiting relatives in Tularosa.

The L. R. U. Club of Capitan met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Montie Gardenhire. There were three tables of bridge and one guest table. Those present were Mesdames Dixon, LaFleur, Hall, McCreary and Clint Branum. Refreshments of strawberry ice cream, angel food cake and coffee were served.

The Carrizozo golfers, of whom we made mention last week, have returned from Albuquerque. No, the boys didn't win any prizes, but they all returned intact and report a good time.

Blessings of the Mind
The blessings of fortune are the lowest; the next are the bodily advantages of strength and health; but the superlative blessings, in fine, are those of the mind.
