Misses Cieta McClintock, Ruth Barnett and Evelyn Claunch were Nogal visitors Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Skinner attended the Fair in Roswell Wednesday.

A black bear was seen in Nogal Canyon Sunday afternoon, evidently looking for something to eat.

What About Taxation in New Mexico?

That is a paramount question in this year's political campaign. For the information of the people, here are the platform planks of the two parties on that most important subject. Read them both carefully and ANALYZE them.

DEMOCRAT

We reaffirm our oft repeated statement and belief that all property of the corporate, individual or otherwise, should be taxed at its actual value and that intangible property should be called upon to bear its just and equitable portion of the tax burden. We commend the present general basic system of taxation and revenue, namely: 1, A reasonably low general property tax maximum of twenty mills; 2, an income tax act properly drawn and enacted to equalize the same; 3, an emergency tax for the support of schools. All of the above to be continued only until such time as other and substituting sources of revenue are available.

We favor a constitutional amendment and necessary legislation to encourage building and ownership of homes, with complete revision of our tax system, to the end that a reasonable homestead exemption may be allowed; and this convention agrees to the principle of exempting of homes from taxation, and pledges necessary steps to that end.

Which platform faces the issues squarely? Which one sidesteps them?

The Democratic platform does not pledge repeal of the unfair and discriminatory sales tax. The Republican platform does pledge such repeal, and makes its pledge in plain understandable language, without evasion.

The Democrats vaguely suggest that there are other sources of revenue, but the present Democratic state administration has failed or has been afraid over a period of three years to adopt a program including those sources. Is there any reason to believe it will do so in the future?

The Republican platform points to sources from which it will obtain tax income to offset the sales tax, sources which are able to bear the burden and lift the bulk of it from the shoulders of those unable to pay it.

The Republicans name those sources as a tax on luxuries (not necessities of life), a franchise tax on corporations and a tax on intangibles; a gross income tax with proper exemptions, a graduated net income tax (making the big incomes carry the biggest load), and a production tax of a reasonable per cent upon the market value of oil, potash, ores, natural gas, timber, and other natural resources of the state.

The Democratic platforms of four years ago and two years ago pledged a tax on intangibles, but it never was levied; the Democratic party made a horse-trade with the railroads and power companies, whereby their taxes were reduced and with their assistance, the sales tax law was forced through the legislature, thereby taking the burden from those big corporations and passing it on to the people unable to bear it.

The Democratic party advocates an "income tax properly drawn and enacted to equalize the same." The present Dem. administration enacted an income tax law and the state collects little more than enough to pay for the administration of the law. After three years of failure to keep its pledges, either through unwillingness or inability, is it reasonable to believe the Democratic has suddenly acquired either the ability or the courage to put through a tax program which it has failed to enact thus far?

The Republican platform pledges that public utilities will be obliged to pay taxes on the same valuation on which they base their rates.

The Democratic does not dare to incur the opposition of the special interests to which the present reactionary administration in New Mexico is subservient, and come out flatly for a proper distribution of the tax burden and enumerate the sources from which it could, if it would, obtain tax income which would protect the masses of the people.

Check these statements against the two platforms as you analyze them. Draw your own conclusions. Remember that a vote for the Republican ticket on November 8th means the end of the sales tax and the placing of the tax burden in New Mexico where it belongs.

(This advertisement authorized and paid for by the Republican Party of New Mexico.)

REPUBLICAN

Realizing the great reduction of income from property taxes because of the 20-mill tax limitation, and fully realizing the necessity of properly maintaining our school system and public institutions, we pledge that necessary sources of revenue will be developed so that our schools and institutions will not suffer and will be maintained upon a high plane. However, we are unalterably opposed to the present sales tax which places upon those least able to bear it, the entire burden of such tax, and permits the great corporations, that are so greatly benefited by such tax limitation, to avoid the payment of any part thereof.

We further favor a tax on luxuries, a franchise tax on corporations and a tax on intangibles; a gross income tax with proper exemptions, a graduated net income tax; and a production tax of a reasonable per cent upon the market value of oil, potash, ores, natural gas, timber, and other natural resources in the state when sold.

We favor a reasonable exemption from taxes on homes and pledge a constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to enact laws to that end.

We demand that public utilities shall return their property for taxation at the same valuation they estimate its value for rate making purposes.

ANCHO ITEMS

The Woman's Club met with Mrs. Hightower Saturday afternoon, the time being spent in tacking the silk crazy quilt which is now ready for chances to be sold. A delicious salad course was served to the members present. Mrs. M. R. Hendrix, a newcomer to the community, joined the club.

A crowd of 22 jolly fun-makers motored to the Price Miller home Friday evening for a surprise party honoring Mrs. Miller's birthday anniversary. Bunco was played with Jack Pruett winning high score. Mrs. Pruett presented the honoree with an armful of lovely gifts and a beautifully decorated birthday cake. Refreshments of cocoa, sandwiches and cake were served.

Mrs. Belknap is now at Pastura working as relief operator.

Jack Pruett and family spent Sunday visiting friends and attending to business at Duran.

Mrs. Helms and family have moved to Carrizozo where Mr. Helms is working.

Mr. Beck, who has been on the sick list for several days, has been taken to Carrizozo for medical attention.

Rev. Sloan will be here Sunday morning immediately following Sunday School for his regular preaching service.

Entertained Grand Lodge Officers

Last Saturday evening at the Carrizozo Eating House, Comet Chapter No. 29, O. E. S., was hostess to sixty-nine members of the order at a banquet, honoring the presence of Mrs. Edith Turner, Grand Worthy Matron, E. M. Brickley, Grand Worthy Patron and other Grand officers of the state. The dinner was excellent, prepared and served under the direction of Mrs. E. H. Sweet, daughters Mmes. Lee and Muirhead. The tables were tastefully decorated with many beautiful flowers.

During the serving, Mrs. Don English sang beautiful selections accompanied by Mrs. T. E. Kelley at the piano and Miss Ruth Brickley favored the assemblage with a piano solo by Chopin. Mrs. F. A. English as toastmistress, performed her office in a becoming manner.

At the close of the banquet, members of the order gathered at the Masonic Temple where degree work was exemplified for the benefit of the Grand officers. The address of the Grand Matron and also that of the Grand Patron, were educational and inspiring.

Those from out-of-town were, Mrs. Qualtrough, El Paso; Mrs. Edith Turner, Silver City; Mr. and Mrs. Campredon and Miss Mary Duncan, Socorro; Mr. and Mrs. McCammon, Mmes. Donaldson and Warner, El Paso; Mrs. Tom Carr, Tucumcari; Mr. and Mrs. Kirk, Mmes. Sitton, Gaskin, Mr. and Mrs. Graham, Tularosa; Miss Ada Norton, Three Rivers; Miss Charlotte Rice, Lincoln; Mrs. Van Couverdon, Vaughn; Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Oscura; Mrs. Berry, Fort Stanton; Mmes. Green and Wolford, Alamogordo; Mr. and Mrs. Titaworth and Mrs. Rountree, Capitan.

Mrs. Bertha Garcia left for Alamogordo Wednesday night, where she will make her home.

PERSONALS

James Anderson of Tularosa, son Lloyd and E. L. Madson were here last Saturday to witness the Carrizozo - Tularosa football game.

Mrs. Agnes St. John arrived Wednesday evening from the Sacramento for a short visit with her children and the St. John family.

B. L. Moore is here from his ranch near Adobe, accompanied by Mrs. Moore, who is ill and was taken to the Johnson Hospital.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney, who was reported ill last week, has completely recovered.

Many Carrizozo people are attending the State Fair at Roswell this week, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris, M. U. Finley, L. A. Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor and others whose names we failed to get. There are many politicians there also, both state and county, who are wise to the fact that they will meet up with Lincoln County people with whom they may make medicine for the coming campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ellison entertained about 30 friends at their ranch home near Ancho last Friday evening. Dancing was the principal means of entertainment and before the close, host and hostess served refreshments.

Mrs. Ray Sipple of White Oaks was down Tuesday, attending to some business matters and returning home in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones entertained a goodly number of their friends at their cottage on Eagle Creek last Saturday night. Dancing and cards, intermingled with refreshments furnished a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Ben Greisen was a business visitor from Capitan yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shafer left last night for Roswell to attend the State Fair.

Nanking Is "Workshop" of Affairs of China

New Capital Is Attaining World-Wide Notice.

Washington.—Nanking is making itself heard round the world as the new capital of China. Although Peiping, the old northern capital, may be the bay window of China's international relationships, Nanking is the workshop," says the National Geographic society. "But because huge sums are expended by the nations in maintaining established embassy quarters at Peiping, it is unlikely that these will be moved to Nanking for some time."

"However, Russia's embassy is at Nanking, and it is represented by a consular office at Peiping; the British and French have diplomatic establishments in Nanking which are subsidiary, respectively, to embassy and legation at Peiping; the Japanese maintain consular offices at Nanking, branches of their legation at Peiping; and the office of the American consulate general at Nanking is a busy branch of the American legation at Peiping."

"Thus, because of its importance as China's capital city; its location, 210 miles inland on the south bank of the Yangtze river, backbone of Chinese commerce; its proximity to Shanghai's revenues; its comparative nearness to Canton; and its freedom from too intimate association with the Manchus, Nanking is becoming a more and more important factor in the story of new China.

Beautification Plans.

"Blue prints of extensive beautification plans for Nanking are being studied by the national government. Development of the area near Sun Yat-sen's tomb, outside Nanking's 22-mile-long wall, is progressing rapidly. Like pouring new wine into old bottles, an American builder is pouring cement into Chinese forms to achieve an occidental-oriental style of architecture for China's new capital. A New York architect has insisted that his employer, the national government, preserve China's characteristic form—hence many of the new buildings at Nanking are multiplo-storied pagodas of cement. The government recently completed construction of the first of these new style buildings, a seven-story cement pagoda.

"They are signs of the times, these new buildings. Nanking is growing up, stirring again with power it once knew as China's capital under the Ming. After the Ming, Peking (now Peiping) became the Chinese capital, and the world almost forgot Nanking. But with the infusion of new life into the republican form of government in 1928, China again chose more centrally located Nanking as the seat of government. Today some 650,000 residents—double the 1928 population—watch Nanking bravely seek a place beside London, Washington, Paris.

"Besides erecting many modern buildings, such as the new central hospital, the ministry of railways, and the ministry of communications, Nanking is laying roads—paved roads and good ones. Approximately 100 miles of wide asphalt boulevards wind in and out of the city. The Nanking-Shanghai highway, of macadam and dirt, will be finished within a year. It will link the capital more closely to China's financial and commercial seaport metropolis. A government railway connects Nanking with Shanghai (eight hours), and with Peiping (about 38 hours). River steamers take travelers to Shanghai or to Hankow and beyond.

City Is Air-Minded.

"Nanking is air-minded. Its skies buzz with the roar of American-made propellers on American planes. China's National Aviation company, in which an American corporation is the minority stockholder, maintains a daily flight schedule between Shanghai, Nanking, Hankow, Chungking, and Chengtu. Weekly schedules are down by ships of the Eurasia Aviation company (Sino-German) between Shanghai, Nanking, Loyang, Peiping, Sian, Lanchow, and Tihwa, capital of Sian-king.

"No great industrial establishments will be found in the new capital, but Nanking broadens, made by individuals in their homes, are world-famous. The Chinese in this region are farmers, small-shopkeepers, government employees, soldiers, policemen, hotel keepers, rickshaw-pullers, carriage and taxi drivers, or ordinary laborers. Much cotton is made into cloth by individual weavers.

"Co-operation on the part of the United States has meant much to Nanking's progress. The city shelters approximately 300 American, 80 British, and 40 French residents. American oil and steamship companies maintain offices there, and Chinese agents handle an appreciable number of American automobiles and radios. Over Nanking's streets roll approximately 2,000 privately-owned automobiles, 90 per cent of which are American-made."

Railroad Legislation

Washington.—As plans for the expansion of the New Deal program go on, it becomes more and more evident that the session of congress convening in January is due to take up the question of railroad legislation. Its nature is yet undetermined. Its scope is still veiled in secrecy. There is the certainty, however, that the Roosevelt administration is prepared to present far-reaching proposals dealing in a new way with the railroads of the country. The first intimation of this probability came recently through a visit to the President by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of railroads. Mr. Eastman let it be known after an extended conference with the President that railroad legislation was being drafted and that it would be presented to congress with the request that it be placed near the top of the "must" legislation desired by the President. Since Mr. Eastman's visit to the summer white house at Hyde Park, New York, however, it has been next to impossible to discover additional facts respecting the railroad program being worked out by the brain trusters and Mr. Eastman.

On unquestioned authority, nevertheless, it is made to appear that Mr. Eastman, or his professor aides, have an idea that there ought to be another member of the cabinet and that this member ought to be the secretary of transportation. On equally good authority it can be stated that the present plans—programs under the New Deal have proved to be like railroad time-tables, subject to change without notice—are designed to give the federal government additional supervisory authority over the railroads. Indeed, some insiders claim that Mr. Eastman may go as far as proposing that the government buy the railroad properties and lease them back to the railroad corporations for operation. This phase of the program remains wholly undisclosed beyond rumor and gossip, but it seems proper to say that, thus far, there has been no denial issued from any responsible quarter.

It is my understanding that numerous groups in the country are organizing for a bitter fight. It is well known, of course, that the railroads themselves have reorganized their associations into one solid and substantial agency which is to act as their spokesman. Indications are that out of the movement by the railroad managements will come a trade body to be known as the American Railway Institute, which will serve as the spokesman for all of the railroads. Plans call for establishment of headquarters in Washington where the group will be in close contact at all times with the shifting trends of governmental maneuvers respecting the railroads.

Federal Ownership

Coupled with the certainty that there will be railroad legislation considered by the forthcoming session of congress is a strong renewal of activity among advocates of government ownership. In previous letters, I have reported ownership advocates in and out of the administration were said to be working on plans for legislation designed eventually to result in federal ownership of the transportation systems. How far this has gone cannot now be stated. It can be said definitely, however, that the movement is gaining force and observers well acquainted with the undercurrent of government plans insist that the railroads have a battle on their hands that is larger than the immediate prospect of additional restrictive legislation.

In some quarters in Washington we hear the expression that the administration plans to seek enactment of regulation for the bus lines and other carriers that are in competition with the railroads. This has been tried several times before, but nothing has come of it because congress heretofore has refused to be serious about legislation for control of the bus lines operating over state and national highways. It is to be recalled, though, that congress heretofore have not been as subservient to the Chief Executive as has been the case since the New Deal became operative a year and a half ago. So, the extent to which the administration will or can go respecting control of the bus lines seems at this writing to be highly problematical. Authorities tell me, however, that the Eastman plan, which must be assumed to have Presidential approval, will be comprehensive and of itself, should give an indication of the severity of the fight that is to come.

In Sorry State

The argument that, I am told, is going to be advanced for further federal encroachment on private management of the railroads has to do with the sorry state in which it is claimed the roads had themselves as a result of the depression. They have borrowed about $400,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, thus using government credit to tide them over. As a result of these borrowings a belief has sprung up that the railroads are unable to finance themselves longer. Railroad corporation statements, however, seem to dispute this belief, but it is always difficult to offset argument of that kind. Government ownership advocates are using the argument and railroad executives find their case difficult to prove, because the average individual does not understand the ins and outs of such financial problems.

On the side of the railroads, the argument is being advanced that the carriers for the most part are in fairly good financial shape and that as soon as there is any sign of recovery they will benefit by an increased volume of traffic which, of course, means more revenue. The railroads claim further that there is too much restrictive legislation anyway, and that additional steps by the government in the nature of supervisory control is going to make their job more difficult if they are to earn sufficient revenue to pay their expenses.

There is still another phase of the railroad question that is causing some concern among students of the problem of transportation. It is that, if the present set-up of Interstate Commerce commission control over the railroads is disturbed, the chances are great that politics will again become involved. I think most persons agree that the railroads have kept out of politics to a large extent in the last ten or fifteen years, but the students of transportation insist to me that if such an office as secretary of transportation with cabinet membership is created right then the railroads again will be in politics up to their ears. Politicians will not long overlook the opportunity to dig their fingers into such a luscious situation. They will see how they can manipulate freight rates to the benefit of their own districts or states or other areas, they will likewise see numerous jobs, and politics without jobs sinks to a low ebb. It is thus made to appear, and in this statement I am voicing the consensus of numerous observers, that we are on the verge of a crucial decision. It is one that may mean as stated above, transfer of a gigantic industry into the hands of politicians or the framing of a scientific policy for the future. The forthcoming congress must decide.

AAA Explains Itself

The Agricultural Adjustment administration has just published a treatise on the plan and philosophy of the New Deal for American agriculture in the form of a 52-page booklet which is entitled "Achieving a Balance in Agriculture." In issuing the booklet the Adjustment administration at the same time released a statement describing the treatise as a statement "in popular language of the principles of economics and social welfare which the Agricultural Adjustment administration has followed in carrying out the adjustment program in agriculture." The booklet is being distributed in numbers running into the tens of thousands as a means of getting the story over to the people. It was printed at government expense in the government printing office.

The responsible officials in the Adjustment administration say the booklet is intended to place between two covers a complete story of "what we are trying to do." Observers in Washington freely are saying that it is one of the most elaborate documents to be released as a means of disseminating to the public the theories upon which a governmental activity is based.

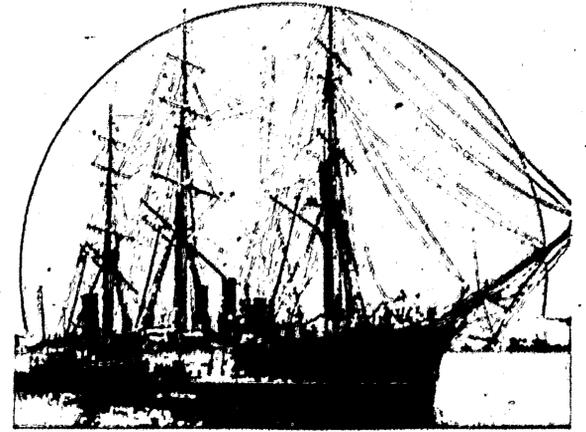

Five chapters treat the historical backgrounds of American agriculture, the development of the country's economic system and emergency of the situation which brought forth the agricultural adjustment act. These sections are followed by an exposition of the powers of the Agricultural Adjustment act, and an attempt then is made to summarize the gains claimed to have resulted from this experiment.

"The agricultural adjustment act," the booklet says, "is based on the experience of the past; it was framed to treat the farm problem as a whole and to treat it in relation to the other basic elements in our national life.

"The long time goal, the national policy of which these measures were an increasingly clear expression, is a balanced agriculture. There must be balance between the production of the farmers' fields and the consumption of their product. There must be balance between the income of the farmers and the income of their neighbors in the cities and towns. Insofar as we are successful in achieving and maintaining such a balance, we shall insure a fair share of our national income to the producers of the farm commodities on which our basic national welfare to a large extent depends."

The Department of Agriculture has made a complete compilation of statistics showing that farm production in the United States during 1933 was valued at $3,985,000,000, or approximately $655,000,000 greater than in 1932. But the farmers received an additional $271,000,000 in cash payments from the government for co-operation in restricting production in 1933, so that the gross income was around $4,256,000,000. The department's statistics indicate that the farmers, after paying their production expenses, had net income in 1933 of about $2,027,000,000 whereas their income, after expenses, in 1932 was only about $1,465,000,000, showing a definite improvement in the farmers' financial status.

Site of Jamestown Colony Will Be Dug Up

Hope to Uncover Story of First Settlement.

Washington.—A company of 200 men of the Civilian Conservation corps will be assigned to excavate Jamestown Island, where in 1607 the first permanent English settlement was founded in America. The excavation work will be conducted to uncover the story, as written in the 300-year-old foundations erected by 105 colonists of the settlement, for the official records of the national park service. Approval of the project was announced by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work.

Jamestown Island, in Virginia, is a part of the Colonial National monument. In the party that established the settlement was Capt. John Smith, who arrived in the hold of the tiny vessel in 1607 but soon was released to become a leader of the colony and one of the romantic figures of the Colonial days. It was a few years after the arrival of the party that John Rolfe married Pocahontas.

After years of tragedy and suffering, including Indian massacres, famine, fire and pestilence, Jamestown became the center of a prosperous colony. In 1639, after a vote by the General Assembly, the seat of government of Virginia was moved from Jamestown to Middle Plantation, now Williamsburg. With the passing of the capital Jamestown was abandoned and reclaimed by wilderness. The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities several years ago obtained about twenty acres of land on the island where a number of early American relics were found. Recently the remainder of the island was purchased by the federal government for national park purposes.

Plans for surveying the island and the locating of the foundations of the early homes have been made by B. Floyd Fitchinger, superintendent of the Colonial National monument. At present several sites are being considered for the camp of the C. C. G. company, which soon is to be moved from Yorktown to Jamestown. A level open space near the bridge connecting the island with the mainland has been chosen tentatively. Once the camp is installed it is planned to survey the entire island by dividing it into 100 square foot areas and exploring each separately.

Brothers Meet at Fair

Chicago.—For the first time since the elder of the two left his Tipperary (Ireland) home 42 years ago to seek his fortune in America, two brothers met through a World's Fair visit in Chicago.

The brothers are John J. Holloway of Lynn, Mass., and Patrick Holloway, fifty-seven, late soldier of fortune, who lives with a sister at 829 South Green Bay road, Highland Park.

Although John Holloway has visited Chicago several times before, always Patrick has been away—with the First Cavalry in China, with the Sixth Cavalry in Mexico, with the Rainbow Division in France. But this time when John stepped off the Boston bus, an elderly gentleman said to him: "Are you John Holloway?" "Sure! And you're Pat!"

Crows Act as Squirrel Dogs for This Hunter

Walnut Ridge, Ark.—Crows are squirrel dogs for C. E. Howerton, farmer near here.

Howerton's killed hunting dog, Old Drive, was pitted by a rattlesnake and the farmer didn't look for squirrels until the diminished family meat supply forced him into the woods. Without Old Drive he was helpless.

Cawing crows attracted his attention and he decided to shoot them. As he approached the crows flew and three squirrels scurried through a big tree. He bagged all three squirrels.

He heard more crows and found them quarreling with two squirrels over nuts being stored for winter. Now whenever Howerton hunts, crows lead him to his quarry.

Kansas Farmers Plan to Put in Artificial Ponds

Oberlin, Kan.—Farms of northwest Kansas may assume the appearance of a patchwork of checkers on the checkerboard if plans for artificial ponds on all farms in this area materialize.

The ponds, according to engineers, would aid in flood control, water conservation and will increase the supply of well water throughout the region.

A drive recently was started by business men of Oberlin in this section to obtain federal and state aid for development of basins to hold runoff water, since the drought has cut into supplies of water throughout the region. It is anticipated that such work, besides serving as a drought relief measure, would furnish jobs for unemployed.

Digger Indians Were Once Great Artists

Salt Lake City.—The Digger Indians of California may now be known as the "dirt eaters," but once they were great artists.

A collection of their basket work of intricate weave and design, is owned by John S. Bransford of Salt Lake City. The items were collected by Mrs. Bransford during the 80s in Plumas county, California.

Most of the pieces in the collection were made before the coming of the white man to California. Their entry marked the end of the Digger civilization, but the work is evidence that they once excelled in a difficult art.

Plan to Use Dry Ice for Cooling Airplanes

Calcutta.—A transportation company in India is experimenting with dry ice, or solid carbon dioxide, as an agent for cooling airplanes. If satisfactory results are obtained, planes traveling across that country will be air cooled in future. Should experiments prove successful travel should be facilitated between Calcutta and Bombay, where summer temperatures of 115 degrees are considered normal and 130 degrees is sometimes exceeded.

Stone Age House Found Stockholm.—A 5,000-year-old Stone Age dwelling has been unearthed at Katrineholm, in central Sweden, by Dr. Steen Florin, young scientist. The ancient abode contained a great number of flint axes and other weapons as well as many primitive household implements.

Doll Valued at $800,000 Tarragona, Spain.—In the vaults of a Tarragona bank is a toy valued at $800,000. It is a doll made of finely chiseled marble. It was found in the tomb of an infant believed to have died about 300 A. D.

Hand-Knit or Crochet's the Thing!

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ARE we knitting and crocheting these days? Well, now, are we? It's a veritable knitting and crochet marathon the fair sex is staging.

For proof positive that fashion's followers are knitting and crocheting like mad in their leisure hours, just try to sidestep the hanks of bright yarn and the balls of gay crochet cotton which pop out at most any time and place from within the depths of the spacious "knitting bag" which most every woman carries along nowadays wheresoever she goes.

Of course there's a reason for this increasing enthusiasm among those who hand knit and crochet, and it's this—the news is going out from style centers everywhere that the vogue for things hand-knit or crocheted is extending not only into the fall but it promises to become even more exciting and fascinating as winter draws nigh.

You can see for yourself from this group illustration that the newer ideas are nothing less than inspiring. Wouldn't you just love to have an ensemble like the one pictured, two views of which are here given? This adorable model is a Hermes creation, comes from the Paris collection of this famous designer of hand-made fashions. The three pieces, jacket, skirt and blouse, are worked of knitting and crochet cotton, a heavy thread which comes in exquisite colors and will wash like new. It is practical for early fall wear. Notice the cord fastenings, the draped cowl at the back of the jacket and the crocheted-covered buttons—style details which fairly tingle with individualized chic. You can get this crochet cotton at most any fancywork department, and it is not at all expensive.

This model also comes from a celebrated Parisian creator who excels in hand-knit modes. The classic tailored appearance of this patrician two-piece gives it surpassing distinction. It is knitted, as is also the roll-brim hat, of knitting and crochet cotton, the kind that is dependably washable and wearable. New notes are offered for the knitter in its high, round neck, clever neckline which savors of a peplum effect and the unusual trimming detail on the front of the blouse in the form of simulated pockets together with vertical markings which tend to slenderize.

Also from a recent Paris collection comes the high-style blouse pictured in the foreground. The diagonal stitch which is of unusual interest gives slimming lines and there is a nicety about every detail which makes appeal to discriminating taste. The collar with its frilly jabot and the turned-back cuffs are dramatic touches which greatly enhance. The belt is neatly worked in a tight firm stitch—altogether a model which glorifies the art of crochet.

Speaking of the popularity of hand-knit costumes it is not at all unusual for women to knit not one but several suits and dresses. They are doing it right along this season. Besides the many alluring and novel details which beautify the newer modes, an outstanding play is being made on color. Just now fashion-informed women are choosing rich mossy greens, forest green being a favorite. Wear velvet accessories in matching green including scarf, beret bag and belt and you will be delighted with results. Rust color and allied copperish browns play a close second to the voguish green. Be sure to monogram your sports-knitted and crocheted togs, thus adding a final touch of distinction.

EVENING CHARM

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Very flattering are the alluring short capelets of tulle, fluted, bonneted or frilled which many of the smartest women are wearing under shimmering evening lights. The model pictured is a Paris creation. Maggy Rouff designs it, using a bright red tulle for the capelet and white chiffon for the frock. Fan-shaped pleating beginning at the waistline falls the length of the dress to the floor, joining the deep-pleated sounce. The silhouette that drops narrow pleatings from waistline to hemline is a new departure.

DOTTED SWISS AS POPULAR AS EVER

Dear old dotted swiss is with us again. Dear Dotty is never far away, although she retires demurely to the country, from whence she first migrated. She was at Lady D's ball, too, her background white and her dots blue. Her hem had a four-inch ruffle all the way around and was shorter than the majority of her companions. She was accompanied by a cape fitted to the shoulders, tied at the neck with a small bow and buttoned down the front with tiny white linen shirt buttons. The cape was cut square in front and back and edged with ruffles of the same width as that on the skirt. Pale pink satin sandals peeped out from beneath the hem of the skirt.

Long-Handled Bags Back in Limelight of Fashion

Long-handled bags recalling those the belles of the '30s and 1900s carried are being seen again. Though their conception is modern, their inspiration is as old fashioned as a Quaker bonnet. They come in the form of calfskin or pigskin pouches, sometimes with plain, sometimes with pleated bodies, finished with a double handle whose top comes eight or ten inches above the bag. Black ottoman pouches are being seen in the afternoon and evening.

Novel Earrings

Earrings worn on the tops of the ears are the latest novelty in costume jewelry. They take the form of tiny gold wings.

Coolie Hats Popular

Coolie type hats for women are popular in London.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, a Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for October 7 FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—John 15:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. John 15:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and His Friends.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Be Jesus' Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May We Be Friends of Christ?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live a Fruitful Christian Life.

Under the beautiful allegory of the vine and the branches, Jesus set forth the spiritual oneness of himself and his disciples. He showed them that though he was going away, they would be in vital touch with their unseen Lord, and that through them his life was to be manifested to the world and his purposes accomplished.

I. The Relationship of the Disciple to Jesus and the Father (vv. 1-3).

1. Jesus is the source of the disciples' life (v. 1). He is the true vine. Through the incarnation Jesus identified himself with humanity, and by virtue of his atoning death and resurrection it is possible for the believer to be a partaker of his life, so that between the disciple and his Lord there is a community of life. As the vine pours its life into the branch, so Christ pours his life into the believer.

2. The discipline of the disciple is in the hands of the Father (v. 1). The "Father is the husbandman." Just as the culture of the vine is in the hands of a husbandman, so the discipline of the believer's life is in the hands of the Father. He knows exactly how deep to cut with his pruning knife, and can be absolutely trusted to cut no deeper than necessary, for he is our affectionate Father. In this disciplinary process he

a. Removes the unfruitful branch (v. 2). He does not take the trouble to prune the fruitless branch—the nominal church member; the mere professor he removes.

b. Purges the fruitful branch—that it may produce more fruit (v. 2). He restrains our natural tendencies and desires in order that the virtues of the Lord, the fruit of the Spirit, may shine forth.

3. The instrument by which the discipline is accomplished is Jesus' words (v. 3). If the believer's life is to be fruitful in character and service, the pruning knife, Christ's words, must be intelligently and regularly applied.

II. The Conditions of Fruit-bearing (vv. 4-7).

The supreme and grand object in pruning the vine is fruit. God's whole design in producing the vine and making men branches thereof was to obtain fruit, more fruit, much fruit.

1. Abiding in Christ (vv. 4-6). As the branches draw sap and life from the vine, so believers must abide in Christ, from whom they derive their purity, strength, and wisdom. Indeed, it is a mutual abiding—the disciple in Christ, and Christ in the disciple. It is really Christ's life expressing itself through the believer.

2. Christ's words abiding in us (v. 7). So mighty is the power of the one who abides in Christ and in whom the words of Christ abide, that Heaven can withhold no gift from him. In fact, the one who is united to Christ by faith and prayerfully meditates upon his words will be so led by the Spirit to pray as to have success without limit (Col. 3:16).

III. The Blessed Issue of a Fruitful Life (vv. 8-16).

1. The glorification of the Father (v. 8). The Father will be glorified through much fruit-bearing (Matt. 5:16).

2. Credentials of discipleship (v. 8). The way to prove that one is a child of God is to manifest the characteristics of God in his acts and service.

3. Abiding in Christ's love and keeping his commandments (vv. 9, 10). The way to abide in Christ's love is to keep his commandments.

4. Fullness of joy (v. 11). The way to have fullness of joy is to have Christ's joy in us.

5. Loving one another (vv. 12, 13). The one who abides in Christ and has the "life of Christ flowing into him will love his fellow-man, especially his brother in Christ.

6. Friends of Christ (vv. 14, 15). Christ's friends do whatsoever he commands. Being thus obedient to him, we are taken into his confidence and have made known unto us the heavenly Father's will.

7. Perpetual fruit-bearing in love with power in prayer (v. 16). This enriched life becomes possible through the sovereign choice and ordination of Christ.

The Attitude of Hope

It is good and right to hope. It is the natural attitude of an immortal soul. Let us hope that some great happiness awaits us. Let us hope that past pain and sorrow may be forgotten, and that new ambitions, new goods may rise up before us with all their golden opportunities.

Dare to Venture

He who fears to venture as his heart urges and his reason permits is a coward; he who ventures further than he intended to go is a slave.—Heine.

NAME SUITORS OF COUNTESS IN FIGHT FOR RYAN FORTUNE

$5,000,000 Involved in Annulment Proceedings Brought by Mate.

New York.—The astonishing story of how and why the young and beautiful Countess Clarisse Marietta von Wurmbbrand-Stuppach became twice engaged before wedding wealthy Clendenin J. Ryan, Jr.—who is now suing to annul their marriage—has been revealed following startling disclosures of the countess' adventures in Europe before her marriage.

These disclosures are now expected, to play an important part in Ryan's suit for annulment, which will be bitterly opposed by the countess when it comes up in court this fall. She says: "I married Clendenin because I love him, not for his money."

Heir to $8,000,000

When he is thirty Ryan will fall heir to $8,000,000 of the $15,000,000 estate of his grandfather, Thomas Fortune Ryan, utility magnate. Any attempt the countess may make to share in this fortune—despite her declaration that she married him only for love—will be fought vigorously by Ryan's lawyers in court.

At present the countess is in Europe visiting her mother, the Dowager Countess Marie, but she plans to return to fight the annulment suit.

In Vienna, detectives backtracking on the Von Wurmbbrand-Stuppachs have learned that the dowager countess was arrested in 1933, charged with having defrauded creditors. In police and court files are depositions, letters, an indictment, affidavits, records of testimony, charges and countercharges.

And through them all runs one recurring theme:

"I told them that payment would not be made until after the marriage of my daughter."

That is the dowager countess speaking, admitting she had no money and was heavily in debt, and revealing her determination to marry her daughter off to a wealthy man.

She died eventually, of course, but not until the daughter had been engaged to two men. Baron Karl Buchsboevden was the first.

Brief Wooing

The baron was wealthy and not parsimonious. To the dowager countess he appeared to be just the man for her daughter. Two days after Countess Clarisse met the baron they were engaged. The wedding date was set for two months later.

In Salzburg the engagement of Countess Clarisse Marietta von Wurmbbrand-Stuppach was fittingly celebrated. Her forthcoming marriage would unite an old Austrian house with one of the German nobility.

No one now presented bills to the dowager. Her daughter was marrying a wealthy German.

Arrangements were made so they did not even have to pay for their stay in Vienna, an agreement being made at a large hotel by which payment of the bill would be made after the marriage.

The expense of a trousseau was a problem, but the dowager countess solved it by appealing to the baron, who undertook the financial responsibility.

The baron, however, never paid for the trousseau. He suddenly broke the engagement.

Count Mitrofsky was the second member of the nobility to whom the Countess Clarisse Marietta became engaged. This engagement, too, was broken. The reason is not clearly known. Then, in February of this year, the Countess Clarisse, having come to America, was married to Ryan.

Lives Week in Icy Pit After Fall on Mt. Blanc

Paris.—Guy La Bour, who fell into a crevasse while climbing snowy Mt. Blanc, told the dramatic story of his week of imprisonment in the lonely ice cavern.

The young Frenchman said that he slipped and tumbled headlong into a crevasse 60 feet deep.

"It was dark, so I wound about me 40 yards of rope, put my feet into a mountain sack, and made the best of things while awaiting the inevitable search.

"In the morning I managed to climb 12 yards, but further effort proved futile. Happily, my food supply, consisting of fruit and flour-meal, lasted for five days, until August 23. Then I ate the wax of my candles."

Lesson on Punctuality Given by Police Judge

Davenport, Ia.—Police Magistrate John Hornby is a bachelor, which may explain his habit of waiting on others. For some time he has been obliged to wait 10 to 20 minutes on attorneys and court attaches before he could open court. Recently the judge took his seat promptly at 9, waited two minutes, and then left. After attorneys and court attendants had cooled their heels for 30 minutes the judge returned and gave them a lecture on punctuality.

Flock of Ducks Lose in Battle With Bees

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Bees attacked a flock of ducks on the Howbridge farm near here and killed 11 of the ducks. For some time the bees and ducks had been sharing an orchard in amicable fashion. Suddenly the fight started.

WHY ALL THE NOISE?

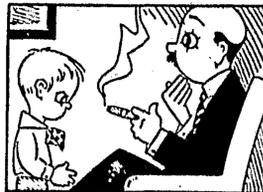

It was little George's first time at the opera. The conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and began to wave his baton, and the famous soprano started to sing.

"What's the man shaking the stick at the woman for?" the boy asked his mother.

"Keep quiet," whispered his mother. "He isn't shaking the stick at the woman."

Little George was not convinced. "Well, then, what's she hollering for?"—American Legion Monthly.

FOR BIG TIME

Father—So, you are one of the star players of the home club.
Young Hopeful—Yes, but I'm prepared to jump to the big leagues if they want me.

You Might Like a Snack

Gasworks Doctor (medically examining applicant for job)—Humph!
"Fraid you won't do. Your teeth are too bad."

Amazed Applicant—Teeth too bad! Well, what's it matter? I'm going to shovel coals—not chew it!—Bystander Magazine.

Teaching Tidiness

Mayor—I never saw the park littered so with paper as it is this morning. How do you account for it?
Superintendent—The park commissioner had leaflets distributed yesterday asking people not to throw paper about.

My Mistake

Colonel—Disgusting to see a girl dressed like that!
Sir, that's my daughter!

Colonel—I am sorry, sir. I didn't know you were her father.
I am not—I'm her mother!—Tatler Magazine.

Just Space

Friend—What's your son been talking up at college this year?
Dear Old Dad—Space—notting but space.

Supersupervision

"Do you think the stock market can be supervised?"
"Certainly," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "But inside information has speculative value, and what I want to know is who is going to supervise the supervisors."

Ignorance Is Bliss

"You've discharged your bookkeeper?"
"Yip."
"Don't keep any account of how your business is going?"
"No. I have been losing so much I didn't want to know about it."—Portland Express.

THAT'S SOMETHING

"Have you ever done any deep-sea fishing?"
"Well, I became engaged on an ocean liner."

Some Comfort

"It is said when a man goes mad the first one he injures is the one he loves most," remarked friend husband.
"Well," snapped his wife, "it's a comfort to know that if you go mad you'll be so busy injuring yourself I will have a chance to escape."

Do You Know Why?

Teacher—If one maid can clean a room in two hours, how long does it take two maids working together?
Pupil—Four hours.—Pearsons' Magazine.

Controlled Irs

"I note with approval," said the consultant, "that you are slow to anger."
"You are mistaken," answered Senator Sorghum. "I try not to be demonstrative. But I have always found that the angrier you are, the more desirable it is to keep quiet and think hard."

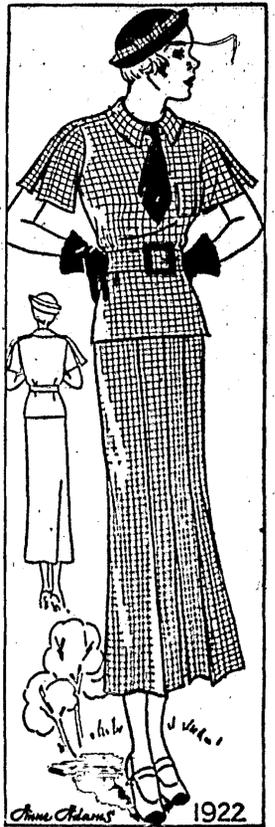

The Home Wrecker

"That fellow spoiled my marriage."
"How?"
"Married my cook and now my wife does the cooking."

TWO-PIECE FROCK HAS REAL CHARM

Pattern 1922

This is one of those tremendously chic two-piece frocks which do their stuff so quietly and subtly you have to stop and look carefully to find out where all that style really comes from. Front pleats that all turn in, are one of its clever little tricks, and pleated sleeves that grow into a devastatingly smart epaulet on the shoulders are another. The rest of it is mostly very good proportions and a demure and becoming little round collar. The original was made of red and white checked gingham and worn with navy blue accessories. It was stunning!

Pattern 1922 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 5 yards 20-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 213 West Seventeenth street, New York city.

Smiles

EVEN

"What's a joint account, pop?"
"It's an account where one person does the depositing and the other the withdrawing."

Unemployed Wife

Her Father—Harold seems to have an exemplary character. I don't see why you say your marriage to him was a hideous mistake.

Mrs. Junebride—It's just that I married him to reform him and now I find that he never needed reforming.

Corners

"Is prosperity just around the corner?"

"Of course it is," answered Senator Sorghum. "But in looking for it you've got to take care about selecting a lucky corner."

The Idea

Father—Jane, that young knot Simpson's affairs couldn't be in worse shape than they are.

Daughter (Indignantly)—You forget that I am to marry him, Papa.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Talking About Taxation

On page 1 of this issue you will find a comparison of the platforms of the two political parties with reference to taxation, the one thing which is uppermost in the minds of the people of the state of New Mexico. In order to grasp the true meaning of that comparison, it will be necessary for you to read it carefully—it will only take you a small amount of time, eight minutes.

The principal thing in comparison is the much discussed sales tax, which the Republican platform condemns, while the Democratic platform endorses. Now, more than at any time in past history, people are reading and it may be safely said, we are a reading nation. In view of that fact, a simple reminder to the wise, is sufficient.

If you will keep a count on how much you are paying for sales tax, you will find to what an enormous amount that tax will arrive before the month is gone. If you have been in favor of that tax, you cannot help but see by the argument that the sales tax is not for the common people, but against them.

When it has been proven to you that the sales tax was put into operation so that the big corporations might have their taxes reduced at the expense of those least able to bear the burden, or in other words, the tax levied on the common people made the reduction for the corporations, you can plainly see the "nigger in the woodpile."

We, therefore, recommend that you read the article and come to your own conclusions.

Gen. Johnson of the NRA has resigned amid tears, flowers and 'razzberries', but his son, a chip from the old block, is retained. This would suggest that said son will still receive instructions from the hard boiled Dad, with the assistance of the General's girl friend and confidential advisor, who has been the "whisperer," with much effect.

While attending the Republican convention at Santa Fe last week, we met many old friends, among whom were, Guthrie Smith of the New Mexico State Record, J. D. Lamb and Bert Holland of the State Corporation Commission. Guthrie, as one of the principal characters in the play, "The End of the Santa Fe Trail," to be staged by the Elks, has grown a fine set of whiskers. When we met Gus, we didn't know him, for with his growth of spinach, he looked like a Mormon Elder and somehow, we can't get over it.

Predicts New Ice Age For America

Savant Says It Will Come in 10,000 Years.

London.—Another ice age, in which the polar cap will creep far down into Europe and North America, is coming in ten thousand years or so, says Dr. G. C. Simpson, director of the British meteorological office.

It will be followed by a warm era, when the semitropical conditions, in which monstrous saurians splashed under giant ferns in what is now the United States, will return.

Deserting the rule which he enforces in his own office, that weather forecasts must be limited to the next 48 hours, Doctor Simpson told what it would be like on the earth hundreds of thousands of years ahead.

He based his prophecies on a theory of solar changes which he has lately shown to be confirmed by the story of world weather in the period covered by the last four ice ages.

Sun's Heat Changes.

It is the sun's heat, he says, that changes. A complete cycle of change takes anything from 100,000 to 1,000,000 years, and the difference in radiation represents a range of about 40 per cent.

"We are at present approaching a minimum," he said, "and our climate is cold and dry. All the evidence points to the conclusion that the earth will continue to get colder and drier for a long time yet."

But even after the sun's radiation has begun to increase again, he explained, Europe would have to go through another ice age before we once again got really warm weather, with temperatures from five to ten degrees higher than they are now and, no doubt, another influx of semi-tropical life.

An increase in solar radiation, he said, would mean that there was more difference in temperature between the equator and the poles. There would, therefore, be stronger winds, more cloud, and more rain and snow.

"At first," he explained, "the increased precipitation would result in greater accumulation of snow, and the increased cloud would prevent summer melting. The polar ice caps and the ice fields on mountains would extend, spreading into lower latitudes and down to lower heights."

Warm Period to Follow.

That would bring the next ice age to its maximum, perhaps hundreds of thousands of years hence. Then, as the sun's radiation further increased in strength, the ice would be first checked in its advance and finally melted. There would follow the warmest time of all, "a warm, wet interglacial period," with half as much cloud again as there is now.

Next, as the sun's radiation began to decrease in intensity again, the same sea of changes would be reversed, and after another ice age we would drift slowly back to present conditions. We should have had two ice ages in the course of the one solar cycle, while in the tropics there would have been a single wet period corresponding with the wet, interglacial period nearer the poles.

When the next ice ages are on, the Atlantic will be a much less healthy place for ships than will the Pacific. It will be largely filled up with ice, because Arctic ice has a much greater tendency at this time to drift down by that route than into the Pacific.

NOVELS OF FUTURITY

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

We have been re-reading some of the novels published about twenty-five years ago, which at the time were ranked as "first sellers"; "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by John Fox Jr., "The Choir Invisible," by James Lane Allen, and others. We were much impressed with the wholesome style of these books and their clear delineation of characters dominated by that knightly spirit of feudal times, chivalry. The influence of such books upon the young people of these days was most beneficial and in no small sense helped to develop character. Of course these books are still being read, and upon inquiry at a public library in a town of about ten thousand population we discovered that they are daily withdrawn. The publishers of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" placed a reprint edition on the market in 1931.

When we contrast the modern novel, especially the novel of the post-war period, with those of twenty-five years ago, we are seriously impressed with the absence of this element of chivalry. The so-called modern novel makes its appeal to sex and the morbid depressions, with delineations of character largely in the field of psycho-analysis. This is not true of all literature which has come from our press or that of Europe, but is quite characteristic of what we call the American novel. Books of this nature have been sold in large quantities, which indicates a demand of a certain type. On the other hand, books on philosophy and biography have had an equally large sale, which clearly indicates that popular demand was not wholly on the side of the novel.

Miss London

Miss Betty Thaw, elevator operator in a department store, was declared the most beautiful girl in London and was selected to represent the metropolis in the international beauty pageant.

In one of our leading magazines there recently appeared a cartoon which pictured a movie-producer looking out of his window at a crowd waiting to gain admittance to a theater where the film "Little Women" was on the screen. He could not understand why such a picture appealed to so large a crowd and remarked, "It is not in accord with human nature." One needed only to glance at the walls of his office, filled with salacious pictures, to understand how grossly he was misled in judging the demands of the popular mind. Movie producers have sensed this very fact and are now filming novels of recognized literary merit. Perhaps we shall soon have a new era for the novel as we seem to be promised for the movies.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE problem of keeping your wardrobe up and span when traveling or on a vacation, and at the same time not increasing expenses materially, is one which the suggestions given here should help to solve. Speed of the work is needed also. When garments are sent to be laundered, several days are generally required for the job. In the meantime you are minus clothes which may be much needed.

If there is space in trunk or large suit case to pack a tourist's folding ironing board, and an electric iron, you can do most of the work yourself, that is if you are willing to expend the effort and take the precious moments away from actual vacationing. If not try cold water pressing to remove wrinkles. Put a paper on a table or bed, and over it lay two thicknesses of hand towel, or a bath towel.

cellent. The porcelain slab back of a set wash bowl or the sides of a bathtub—if you are so fortunate as to have a private bath—any of these places supply good surfaces.

Stockings and wash gloves of all kinds can be kept spotlessly clean with very little labor. When worn they will stretch smooth. Fancy cuffs to gloves can be carefully pressed and smoothed by rubbing as in cold water pressing. Then arrange smooth and flat and put under a weight. If a book or magazine is used for the weight, be sure to cover it well with paper, and place a sufficient thickness of dry white cloth (a thickness of towel for instance) over the gloves to absorb any dampness. Never use any but an old or cheap book.

It is wise to have crinkly crepe night gowns, silk crepe of this sort can be bought, and gowns made of it also. These will launder beautifully and should never be ironed anyway. Glove silk lingerie is recommended for easiness of laundering at no extra cost.

"Foolish" Farming

Marquette, Mich.—The Upper peninsula, agriculturally speaking, has its eye on a downstate farmer, starting in on a new place in Baraga county, who planted some strange seed beans that he had picked up, no one, not even the planter, knows where.

The Upper peninsula was not a bean country; they couldn't be grown successfully, farmers said. But in the fall of 1930 the farmer harvested a good sized crop. An agricultural agent noticed it, and spread the word. This year at least 200 acres of the beans have been planted.

The bean, apparently some form of Japanese plant which thrives better here than in Japan, is expected to be raised in paying quantities within a few years as a result of the downstate farmer's "foolishness."

Care of Rubber Plant

When the lower leaves on a rubber plant turn yellow and drop off, it is not an indication that something is wrong with the plant. Whenever a rubber plant starts to send forth new top growth, it invariably loses its lower leaves.

The rubber plant requires a soil made up of equal parts of soil, well rotted manure and good garden loam. In winter it should be kept in a fairly sunny place where the temperature remains around 65 degrees.

It must have a great deal of fresh air and be thoroughly watered every day. The foliage should be sprayed every week.

Once in eighteen months is often enough to transplant the rubber plant.

Lynwood Rowe, better known as "Schoolboy," is the 22-year-old pitcher who has been doing such remarkable hurling for the Detroit club. As may be judged from this photograph, he keeps up his strength with spinach.

Cherry Jelly.

(Any kind except wild cherry or chokecherry.)
 3 cups (1½ pounds) juice
 6½ cups (2½ pounds) sugar
 1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, stem and crush about three pounds fully ripe cherries. Do not pit. Add one-half cup water, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer 10 minutes. (For stronger cherry flavor, add one-fourth teaspoon almond extract before pouring.) Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard one-half minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about nine glasses.

NO PERFECT VACUUM

Completely empty space probably does not exist anywhere in the universe, according to studies made at Mt. Wilson observatory. These studies showed that the region between the stars is an excellent but not a perfect vacuum, there is about one atom of matter in every cubic inch of space. A single drop of water, containing about one thousand billion atoms, would furnish enough matter to fill three and three quarter million cubic miles of space to that density.—Literary Digest.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who tells him he is working for an Englishman, Herrick, who has located a big ranch in the mountains. Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. With Hays and two other rustlers, Jim Wall goes to Herrick's ranch. Herrick announces that his sister, Helen, is coming to live with him. Hays unfolds his plan for getting possession of Herrick's 13,000 head of live stock. He and his lieutenants ride away to drive off the first bunch of cattle. Heeseman, Hays' rival among the cattle rustlers, tells Wall that Hays was once his (Heeseman's) partner and double-crossed him. Jim is sent to meet Miss Herrick. He tries to impress on her that he (Jim) is a desperado of the worst type, but the girl treats the information lightly. Hays betrays unusual interest in the coming of Miss Herrick. The rustlers begin driving cattle from the ranch. Wall finds himself falling in love with Helen, and he fears Hays has designs on the girl.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

At breakfast next morning Hays raved about the fact that Smoky had not been there for over two weeks.

"Things air comin' to a head," he concluded, gloomily.

"Reckon they ought to have made two drives by now," rejoined Happy Jack. "I rid down the valley yestiddy eight or ten miles. Cattle thinned out, boss. Any cowboy with eyes in the back of his head would be on to us by now."

"Shore. Haven't I kept them workin' up here. But I've no control over this hossback ridin' after hounds. Pretty soon Herrick will be chasin' down Limestone way. Then the fire'll be out."

"Hank, he wouldn't know the difference," interposed Jim.

"Aw, I don't care," replied Hays, harshly, and that finally intimidated much. "Wait till Smoky's outfit shows up!"

Every morning when Jim rode down to the corrals he fell back under the spell of something sweeter than wine. The sunny hours with the sage flat ahead, the fragrant pines, the baying hounds, and always out in front this bright-haired girl, were vastly different from the dark hours when the day was done. Nothing could be truer than that this utterly incongruous and bitter-sweet situation could not last. In moments of humility, engendered by the higher emotions this girl aroused, Jim clasped to his breast the fact that he was protecting her from worse men.

Barnes and another of the cowboys had taken the horses for the Herricks up to the house. To Jim's honest dismay he espied Helen riding ahead, with the cowboys behind leading her brother's mount. Herrick was not coming. The hounds bounded and cowered about her, keen for the chase.

Miss Herrick looked far less proud and unattainable in the boy's riding garb she had adopted. Moreover, it had transformed her, yet her femininity appeared more provokingly manifest than ever.

Barnes turned Herrick's horse over to a stable boy, and with his companion fell in behind Miss Herrick, who rode out upon the valley. Jim rejoined them, and they trotted their horses together.

"Why didn't Herrick come?" asked Jim.

"He was rowin' with Heeseman," replied Barnes, soberly.

"You don't say! What about?"

"Reckon I don't know. They shet up as I come along," returned the cowboy. "But I seen enough to calculate somethin' wrong. They was on the porch. Herrick looked sort of peevish. He didn't want his sister to go huntin' today, I heard that. An' she said right pert she was goin'."

"How did Heeseman look?" went on Jim, ponderingly. Something was up. For two days Heeseman's outfit had been through hauling timber.

"Dead serious, like he was tryin' to persuade the boss to somethin'."

Jim lapsed into silence. What turn would affairs take next? It was getting warm around Star ranch.

Each day the hunters had to ride farther afield to find game. Jack-rabbit chasing had grown too tame for Miss Herrick.

Three or four miles out the hounds jumped a coyote from a clump of sagebrush.

The cowboys took the lead, then came Miss Herrick, while Jim brought up the rear. It was a long, gradual ascent up to an open ridge.

Here the hounds jumped a herd of deer. Despite the yelling of the cowboys they dashed up the ridge with a chorus of wild yelps and barks. They all passed out of hearing.

Jim caught up with Miss Herrick, who waited in an open spot among the pines. Flushed and disheveled, with her sombrero on the pommel, panting from the arduous ride, she made a distracting picture.

"Hunt's off for us, Miss Herrick," said Jim.

"Too bad! But wasn't it fun—while it lasted?" she replied gayly. "Let us rest the horses. I'm out of breath myself."

Jim dismounted to tighten his saddle cinches.

"Wall, take a look at my cinches," she said.

"May I ask you not to call me Wall? I must remind you I'm no butter."

"Pray pardon me," she rejoined, in surprise. "I presume I should address you as Mr. Wall?"

"Yes, if you're too stuck up to call me Jim," he said.

She lifted her chin and deigned no reply. And that infuriated him.

"While I'm at it I'll tell you this, too," he went on doggedly. "You must not ride around alone again. I've had no chance to speak with you. But I told your brother. He laughed in my face. He is a fool."

"Mr. Wall, I will not listen to such talk," she spoke up, spiritedly.

"Oh, yes, you will," he flashed, striding over to her horse. "You're not in an English drawing room now, confronted by a disrespectful butler. You're in Utah, girl. And I am Jim Wall."

"That last is obvious, to my regret," she returned coldly. "Will you please be so kind as to tighten my cinches? It will be the last service I shall require of you."

"Thank the Lord!" ejaculated Jim, in grim heartiness. "All the same I'll tell you. If you were an American tenderfoot, it wouldn't be hard to make you understand. If you were western, you would not need to be told. But as an English lady of quality, who thinks her class, will protect her anywhere, you need to be jarred. . . . It's wrong for you to ride around alone on this range like any wild tomboy."

"Why?"

"Some of these men might kidnap you for ransom."

"Nonsense," she retorted, contemptuously.

"What do you say, Miss Herrick, when I tell you that Hank Hays has been watching you from the ridges, riding the lonely trails, biding his chance to waylay you?"

"She paled at that."

"I don't believe it," she said, presently.

"And you'll go on riding alone when it suits your royal fancy?" he queried witheringly.

"That is no longer any concern of yours," she replied, at last stung. "But ing—pierced Wall with something infinitely more imperious and staggering than bitter wrath. He let go of her. There was blood on her lips and cheeks; otherwise her face was like alabaster.

"I think I must have been in love with you—and wanted to protect you—from men worse than myself," he went on, huskily. "I hope this will be a lesson to you. . . . Your brother was crazy to come here—crazier to let you come. Go home! Go before it's too late. Make him go. He will be ruined shortly."

She wiped the blood from her cheeks, and then shudderingly from her lips. "You—did that—to frighten me?" she presently whispered, in horror, yet as if fascinated by something looming.

"Get on your horse and ride ahead of me," he ordered, curtly. "Now, Miss Helen Herrick, one last word: Don't tell your brother what I did to you till after I'm gone. . . . If you do I'll kill him!"

She left a glove lying on the ground. Jim made no effort to recover it. His horse had grazed a few paces away, and when he had reached him and mounted Miss Herrick was in her saddle. Jim let her get a few rods in advance before he followed.

The excess of his emotion wore off, leaving him composed, and sternly glad the issue had developed as it had. The situation had become intolerable for him. It mocked him that he had actually desired to appear well in the eyes of this girl. How ridiculous that one of a robber gang should be vain! But he was not conscious that being a thief made any difference in a man's feeling about women. He knew that he could not command respect or love; but that in no wise inhibited his own feelings. Strange, he had indeed fallen in love with Helen Herrick.

She rode on slowly down the ridge without looking to right or left. Her gaze appeared to be lowered.

The ranch-house came in sight. Miss Herrick saw it and halted a moment, to let Jim catch up with her.

"Can you be gentleman enough to tell me the truth?" she asked.

"I have not lied to you," replied Jim.

"That—that first time you kissed me—was it honestly unpremeditated?"

"Miss Herrick, I don't know what to swear by. But, yes, I have. My mother! I swear by memory of her that I never dreamed of insulting you—I looked up. There your face was close. Your lips red! And I kissed them."

They went on for perhaps ten paces, as far as the road, before she spoke again. "I believe you," she said, without a tremor of the rich, low voice, though it was evident her emotion was deeply stirred. "Your action was inexcusable, unforgivable. But I should not have struck you with the whip. . . . That, and your passion to frighten me, perhaps justified your brutality. . . . I shall not tell. . . . Don't leave Star ranch."

For an instant Jim felt as if he were upon the verge of a precipice. But her change from revulsion to inscrutable generosity called to all that was good within him.

"Miss Herrick, I'm sorry, but I must leave," he replied, sadly. "I'm only a wandering rider—a gunslinger and—a member of a gang of robbers. And I was mad enough to fall in love with you. . . . Forget it. . . . Go home to England. But if you won't do that—never ride out alone again."

He spurred his horse and galloped down the road, by the barns and across the court, into the lane that led along the brook. Suddenly he espied a compact group of mounted riders coming down the road beyond Hays' cabin. They bestrode bays and blacks, and there was that about them which drew Jim sharply up with a fiery thrill. Smoky's outfit!

Hays stood out in front of the cabin, hunched, his legs spread apart as if to anchor himself solidly, his hands at his hips, his sandy hair standing up ruffled like a mane.

"Huh! The boss isn't mad. Oh, no!" soliloquized Jim. "Small wonder. Smoky's outfit has busted loose, or is going to—Well, now, I've a bunch there's luck in this for me."

Jim made for the bridge and, crossing, looked up to see the horses of Smoky's outfit standing, bridles down, and the riders up on the porch. Jim mounted the steps.

Hank Hays sat upon the bench, his shaggy head against the wall, his pale eyes blazing at the row of men leaning on the porch rail.

Smoky was lighting a cigarette, not in the least perturbed, but his eyes had a hard, steely gleam. Brad Lincoln sat back on the rail, eyeing the chief with a sardonic grin. Mac appeared more than usually ghoulish; Bridges and Sparrowhawk Latimer betrayed extreme nervousness.

"Hello, men. What's the mix? Am I in or out?" returned Jim, sharply.

"I reckon you're in," replied Smoky. "Hank is the only one that's out. . . . Hysar, Jim, catch this." He drew a dark green bundle from a bulging pocket and tossed it to Jim—a large, heavy roll of greenbacks tied with a buckskin thong.

"Yours on the divvy, Jim," went on Smoky. "Don't count it now. There's a heap of small bills inside an' if you untie them byar there'll be a mess. But it's a square divvy to the last dollar."

"That's a hefty roll, Smoky, for a man to get for nothing," observed Jim, dubiously.

GREATER MOTOR PROTECTION— LOWER OIL CONSUMPTION PROVED

At Indianapolis Motor Speedway, under AAA supervision (Sanction No. 3001), New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil was tested against five other nationally known motor oils.

Six identical stock cars were broken in on oils assigned them by lot. Each car was filled with five quarts of its assigned oil—no more added—and driven until the motor was wrecked.

New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil carried its car 4,729 miles—3,105.8 miles farther than the first oil to fail and 1,410.2 miles farther than the best of the five oils!

Could you ask for better proof of greater motor protection and lower oil consumption? Drive into a Conoco Red Triangle Station today and fill with New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil!

Stockmen Organize
Monday afternoon at the Carrizozo Eating House, 50 stockmen gathered for the purpose of making a grazing district permit. After some discussion, organization was effected and the following officers were elected: President, William Gallacher
Treasurer, Louis Nelda
Directors, Ben Rentsfrow and Frank Maxwell.

This district is from the National Forest on the east to the Gallinas mountains on the north and from the Lincoln County line on the south to the Oscura foothills on the west.

M. U. Finley made a trip to Roswell Wednesday and returned, accompanied by Mrs. Finley, who had been ill in a hospital, but she is recovering nicely.

Louis Adams has sold his residence on Main street to Vincent Bell of the City Garage. What disposition will be made of the building is not known.

A. T. (Bert) Pfingsten
Everybody knows Bert Pfingsten—but this is the first time he has come before the public as a candidate for office. He accepted the nomination for Representative for this county at the recent county Republican convention and his announcement will be found in the column arranged for that purpose. He solicits the support of the people regardless of past party affiliations and if elected, Lincoln County will have a representative in every sense of the word.

Mrs. Murph Muirhead of El Paso is here this week, assisting her mother, Mrs. E. H. Sweet at the Carrizozo Eating House, during the absence of her sister, Mrs. Jimmy Lee, who is visiting old friends and former schoolmates in Emporia, Kansas.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer and son Bill were visitors from White Oaks yesterday, returning home late in the afternoon.
