OUT-OF-THE ORDINARY

At Brookville, Pa. Rev. M. G. Dickenson would make an ideal mail carrier. In less than twelve years, he has walked more than 20,000 miles in order to reach his flocks. He divides his time between the towns of Kirkman, Richardville and Brookville and walks the entire distance, refusing offers of rides and yellow-legged chicken during his trips. On his travels, he reads his bible or notes on his next sermon. His combined salary from the three places is said to be $9.00 a week. No wonder he walks.

Emil Mulnite, East Windsor, Conn., wondered why one of his roosters was so kind and unselfish, especially to the ladies around the barn yard, until he killed him last week. He would scratch for feed, back up and leave it for the other chickens even to the roosters. He would almost starve in order to see the others have the eats. The mystery was solved when he was dressed—Emil found that he had two normal-sized hearts.

Mayor Rutherford B. Irons of San Diego, Calif., was sentenced last week to serve six months in the county jail for hit-and-run speeding. After being jailed, a reporter asked if he had anything to say, in answer to which he said—"this is the Irony of fate."

Allan Brown, watchman at the Hondo mines near Victor, Colo., had been on duty for twelve long hours without a bite to eat and when food was brought to him, he ate so greedily that he found he had swallowed his false teeth. After a few days in a hospital, he was able to eat—and gum it.

At Woodstock, Pa., with the weather 15 below zero, Mrs. Florence Clark entertained a crowd of friends at an out-door picnic. They made a clearing in a two-foot snow and built a fire, where they prepared a dinner of roast chicken with all the trimmings. Guests used cakes of ice for seats, enjoyed the refreshments, held a big dance and had a great time.

In London, England, a certain circle of ladies adopted the fad of having their husbands take their pet dogs out walking during their leisure hours, but the men counteracted by advertising for pup-walkers and had signs on their hats, some of which read in this manner: "This dog belongs to Mrs. John Smith, who thinks more of him than she does of her husband." "This dog belongs to Mrs. Jones, whose husband refuses to act as his nurse." The husbands won out.

Several years ago, according to George Elmgren, in the Fort Stanton "Caduceus," one man on the hill owned a pet gorilla and taught him to smoke cigars. It became so addicted to the habit that he would steal his master's cigars and he had to hide them. The storekeeper kept his cigars on top of the case and one night the gorilla came in, grabbed a paw full of cigars and got away with them. The storekeeper being near-sighted, charged the cigars to Fat Johnson, the Fort's electrician.

Due to something beyond the understanding of people at Oxford, Ohio, five of the six village councilmen elected two years ago, have died in office.

NEW MEXICO BROADCAST

The City of Santa Fe and the points of scenic interest adjacent to Santa Fe, will be the subject of a radio program, broadcast Sunday evening, Feb. 24, at 8:30 o'clock, over radio station KOA. It was announced by Roy Shafer, local Ford dealer. The program devoted to this region will be one of the popular Ford Ranger Revues. The particular charms and recreational advantages of this section will be featured in a Traveltalk, now a regular part of the Ranger Revue. It will be narrated by Walter Campbell, famous radio announcer, who will recount the scenic wonders of the district and urge vacationers to spend their vacation motoring through this section of the Rocky Mountain west.

The Ford Ranger traveltalks have proved to be extremely popular since their inauguration, some weeks ago. Their purpose is purely one of telling the world some of the advantages to be enjoyed by travelers who take their vacations in the Rocky Mountain Region. Two traveltalks are broadcast each week, one on Wednesday at 6:45 p. m. and the other on Sunday at 8:30. Each features some well known and attractive region in one of the three states of Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, declared the local Ford dealer.

Bad Smash-Up

Last Saturday at Socorro, Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris had a bad collision with another car, which was purely due to negligence on the part of the driver of the other car. Mr. Harris, as we understand, was on the right side of the street and saw the other car, as he thought, making an attempt to cross the street in front of him. The other fellow had a new car and interested in showing it to some friends, he made a rapid turn, running directly against the Harris car and badly smashing both conveyances. Will Ed escaped without injury, but Mrs. Harris sustained a broken collar bone. Medical aid was administered to Mrs. Harris and she is getting along nicely. The car was brought to the Carrizozo Auto Company for repairs.

WOMAN'S CLUB

The February meeting of the Woman's Club was held at the home of Mrs. Carl Jones, with Mmes. Petty, P. M. Johnson, Stimmel, Shaver, Misses Stover and McGee as assistant hostesses. On account of the president being delayed, the program was given first. Mrs. Burns in charge, presented the following: "Drifting Along Dreamy River," a xylophone solo by Rhea Boughper, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Burns. Encore, "Naughty Gnomes;" Readings, "Fifth Hand at Bridge," Ella Brickley; "At the Theatre," Mrs. Blaney; Piano solo, "By the Waters of Minnetonka," Ruth Petty. Encore, "Waltz E Minor" by Chopin.

Business was then taken up, the club singing "O, Fair New Mexico," Mrs. Kelley at the piano. Then followed the flag salute. To the disappointment of the club the building committee was not ready to report, the matter still being under advisement, as some information was not yet in. Anyway the club is thinking and talking in terms of "Our Club House," hoping it will materialize. We are told the laws of success are: "Have faith; work; and water with expectation." Let's try them.

The refreshments were coffee and a variety of cakes. We reiterate that the women of Carrizozo do make lovely cake. As it will be inconvenient for Mrs. Shaffer to be hostess of the next meeting, it will be held at the home of Mrs. C. A. Snow.

The public is cordially invited to an entertainment and dance to be given Mar. 15, at Community Hall. Music, dancing, singing and boxing, followed by a jltney dance. SUCH IS LIFE—Maybe It Will Rain!

By Charles Sughroe

SHADOW OF DOUBT

Mrs. Hardface was trailing her diminutive husband round the big store much against his will. After purchasing several articles she paused and looked pensive. "Ah," she said at last, "I remember. We want a lamp-shade for the drawing room light." Presently the article in question caught her eye. "There's the very lamp-shade I wanted!" she cried. "It's two guineas. Don't you think it will do, John?" He shook his head. "No, my dear," he replied, miserably. "I think it's a shade too dear."

Betrayed

Bagshaw was pouring out his unhappy experience to his friend at the club. "And what caused you to leave before the meeting was over?" asked the latter. Bagshaw looked uncomfortable. "Well," he stammered, "the lecturer stated that one's shady character is denoted on the lower part of the face." "Well, what of that?" asked the other. The dejected one lowered his voice. "Why," he murmured, "I've got a double chin."

Good Bag

Jones came along the street looking wet and unhappy. "Hello," said his neighbor. "Where have you been?" "Fishing," replied Jones mournfully. "Catch much?" was the question. "A lot," Jones replied. "First rain there; first train back. Caught in a thunder storm; caught a cold." "And—an after-thought—I shall catch it when I get home."

Imported Asphalt No Longer Needed

U. S. Petroleum Refineries Now Supply Country.

Washington. — One more product which the United States formerly imported from abroad is now almost entirely manufactured at home. Recent statistics of the United States bureau of mines show that more than nine-tenths of the asphalt used in this country is made at petroleum refineries, and only 1 per cent is derived from native deposits occurring in various parts of the world, such as the famous pitch lake on the island of Trinidad, British West Indies.

"Asphalt, whether natural or artificial, is a black, sticky substance famed for countless centuries as a binder, preservative, and waterproofing material," says the National Geographic society. "Native asphalt, or pitch, was employed by the ancient Egyptians for impregnating mummy wrappings, while Assyrian boatmen daubed it on the sides of their circular gulfers."

Has Many Uses.

"Nebuchadnezzar used asphalt to smooth the streets of Babylon for the wheels of his gold-plated chariots, but many centuries were to pass before the world rediscovered asphalt's weathering qualities and the ease with which it can be combined with other paving materials. Today asphalt is the leading medium for an estimated three-quarters of American city streets having pavements of a higher grade than untreated macadam.

"In that part of the United States public works (2,000,000,000) highway program now completed, or under construction, nearly three-quarters of all highway types above the class of untreated gravel or stone roads are of asphalt, or use asphalt as a binding medium. An equal percentage of all airport surfacing better than plain earth, gravel or cinders consists of the same material.

"Property and life itself are being made safer along the turbulent Mississippi where, only this year, U. S. army engineers believe they have solved the century-old problem of diverting the banks to keep the stream in its channel. Great, tough waterproof mats, impregnated with asphalt, have been laid from low waterline out to the channel, thus literally paving the river bed.

"The sports world is served by resilient asphalt surfaces for tennis and handball courts, and playgrounds. The arena of the Madison Square garden bowl, in New York, is of asphalt construction throughout the first place of its kind ever built.

"Versatility for industrial purposes is demonstrated by the use of asphalt for battery box walls, in the heat-resistant enamel of automobile hoods and for moisture proof shipping containers. Asphalt yields a protective paper for wrapping and is an essential in tree surgery.

Composition a Mystery.

"Although the exact chemical composition of asphalt is not known, chemists have found that it consists of a very complex mixture of hydrocarbons and their non-metallic derivatives. Certain of these compounds are heavy, oily bodies, which hold the harder, solid constituents in solution. The oily bodies give plasticity, and the harder bodies provide waterproofing and cementation.

"Asph. It is recovered from the crude black oils of Mexico, South America, California and some of the mid-continent fields by a simple distillation process. Solvents such as gasoline, kerosene and gas oils are boiled off in the still, leaving the thick, sticky, non-volatile asphalt behind. As the only constituents of asphalt can also be boiled off, it is a simple matter to produce a finished asphalt of any degree of hardness.

"Native asphalt, such as those of Trinidad and Venezuela, have been produced over long periods of time in nature's laboratory or refinery. The original petroleum in which they occurred was subjected to a slow process of evaporation which eventually removed the lighter solvent oils. Asphalt also occurs in certain sandstones and limestones, and in a very brittle form known as Gilsonite, in Colorado."

FOR SALE—A HOME?

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT

In the daily press an announcement frequently occurs as follows: For Sale—The Home of Mr. —, located —. Purchaser may have immediate possession. Sale at auction, courthouse, (date, time). Terms: Cash. This announcement was of a sheriff's sale. Because of unpaid taxes long overdue, or a default on a mortgage, the law, in its effort to protect the owner of the mortgage, or the state in its collection of taxes, offered the place for sale. Such sales are usually made at a price only a little in advance of the taxes or mortgage due. The original owner vacates the premises, if he has not already done so, and the purchaser takes possession. A tragedy? Yes! It is always a tragedy, and a most painful one, when one loses a home.

Let us pause for a moment and examine the transaction a little more

Heroine Gets Medals

This is Miss Christine Stewart of Brookline, Mass., with the Gold Medal of the Life Saving Benevolent Association of New York and the medal of the Massachusetts Humane society, given for her heroism in attempting to save the life of Emily McDougal of Brookline, who was washed into the sea by a wave at Bar Harbor, Maine. Miss Stewart jumped into the surf and kept Miss McDougal afloat for 40 minutes, until help came. Miss McDougal was dead when taken from the water. Three hundred dollars goes with the New York award, and fifty dollars for the Massachusetts medal, which is the William Penn Harding award for the bravest act of the year.

What did the sheriff really offer for sale? A piece of land upon which stood a house with its furnishings for which the owner, in order to possess, may have sacrificed a very great deal, but what was sold under the hammer of the sheriff, was a "house." The advertisement was in error in calling it a "home."

A house is not a home, and a home need not be in a house. One may have a home in a one-room apartment, or any spot where a family dwell together in love and understanding. A home therefore is not a "thing"—it is a "spirit," a state of mind and heart. What the sheriff's order for sale really meant, was, a "house" for sale. The owner had moved his "home" elsewhere. A home can neither be bought nor sold. Its possession is priceless in value. It can never be mortgaged, and no taxes can ever be levied upon it, and no debts can ever take it from us.

The crying need of our country is for homes which reflect more of the spirit of our parents and even grandparents, and less of the superficial spirit of our Twentieth century materialism.

Horse traffic at Tower bridge, London, comprises more than one-third of the total.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IN THESE busy days anything that will reduce work is a blessing. Labor saving devices are featured in every line of work, and they lessen tasks decidedly. Giving them all the credit possible, there is yet another way in which most women can make their work easier without any cost whatsoever. The fact is that from 10 to 25 per cent of work is due to our own selves. If we put the same amount of thought and effort into devising ways and means of reducing our work as the manufacturers of labor saving devices do, we would be amazed at the work we could save ourselves.

Let us for a few moments consider how we can save ourselves work. One important item is to have a place for each thing. Stop and think of the articles for which you have as yet found no particular place. If you are punctilious about this matter, it may be that your flat will be extremely small, but most will not be so fortunate. The next thing is to put the things invariably in their specific places immediately after you are through with them. Avoid laying anything down for a moment first. Just as likely as not you will forget about it. It really is labor saving to finish the work up by doing this finishing bit. If not, your mind has to be diverted from its new thoughts and plans, and be recalled to an unfinished job, when you do once spy the thing out of place and hastily thrust it where it belongs. Meanwhile some spot is disarranged or made untidy by having what doesn't belong to that particular place left carelessly in it, or on it.

Reduce Kitchen Work.

There are many women who make work for themselves when cooking. They get out dishes more than are needed because they do not plan well. For example, when measuring dry and liquid ingredients if you can measure the dry ones first, the same measuring cup is ready for the liquid afterwards, and two cups will not be required. But if you measure the liquid first, either you must use a second cup or take the time to wash and thoroughly dry the first before measuring the dry ingredients, or, of course, they will stick to the receptacle.

The sugar container should have a sugar scoop in it, or something which takes the place of the scoop. If not, every time you need to replenish a sugar bowl, every time you need sugar for cooking, you have to get a large kitchen spoon or a cup and then use it, and put it back. Three operations, each small, it is true, but three just the same, instead of one. Enough of these minute tasks and you will discover that both extra time and extra work are involved, frequently when time is a matter of importance.

Also let your head save your heels. A woman who has difficulty in walking or being long on her feet will learn this method of labor saving. The woman who wishes to save herself should follow the same plan. It is one thing to bemoan the fact that you work too hard and have no time, which may all be true, but it is better to use this energy in finding out where useless work can be eliminated, and proceed accordingly.

Build on Faith and Trust

Writer's Opinion Is That Vows to Keep Faith, and to Be Honest, Are All That May Reasonably Be Exchanged at Matrimonial Altar.

By HELEN WELSHMER, in the New York World-Telegram.

Mrs. Virginia Overshiner Cogswell announces that she is disillusioned about men and marriage. Why shouldn't she be? She says she wants to terminate her seventh marriage. To take back your heart seven times is a procedure monotonous enough to bore anyone.

While Mrs. Cogswell's attitude is not difficult to understand, the contention remains that it isn't sporting of her to tell girls, "Don't marry!" Not every one tries seven times without finding a satisfactory husband. By a little pre-marital consideration, a man and woman can often determine whether the chemical allure which drew them together has a chance for survival. Certainly no man and woman—though their marriage score be seven times seven—must continue the nuptial relationship when love has vanished and isn't expected back. Dictates of sound judgment, good taste and health suggest that such people at least live apart.

First of all, two enamored human beings should determine whether their affection for each other is real or synthetic. It is best to fashion wedding garments only when love is all wool, a yard wide, guaranteed not to shrink, fade or run.

Compatibility—mental, physical and spiritual—is an important marital prerequisite. People who have been reared with a common background, who have a community of tastes and interests, who have studied the same textbooks and found the same answers to their problems, have a much better chance of success than those who represent different worlds.

Adoration is a nice part of love. But when there is nothing but a tender emotion, it is surprising how quickly small differences can toughen it.

Two people who believe that they can follow their own interests apart from the affection bestowed on each other soon find that the moments of worship in each other's presence have lost their savor. Anybody can worship a honey-colored idol on a shelf or admire a colored glass window in a cathedral. But when you marry you must observe that the object of your devotion can't sit forever on a pedestal.

Probably the greatest mistake that people make is to take the marriage ceremony literally. Two people promise to love, cherish and protect each other until death parts them.

The first vow should be cut. No one can promise to love anyone else forever. We can promise to keep faith, to be honest and honorable, to cherish our affection, to guard it and nurture it. But if it passes with the spring or summer, all we can do is surrender with grace. We cannot bank on finality in any human relationship.

The Bible, which says that two people shall become one flesh, makes no mention of one heart or one soul. After all, marriage can't succeed if love is held with bonds. It has to be a voluntary offering. We can't restrain the wind, the tide, the rain, the spring, or love. Love, most of all, it comes and goes at the giver's bidding.

But love is not as variable a quality as we may suppose from this freedom of disposal. When two people's hearts click, and those two are understanding and compatible and respect each other's freedom as individuals, the chances are that love will last.

A marriage built on a cornerstone of possessiveness may topple in the first high wind. But one erected on faith and trust will stand, although the waters rise, the winds blow and the storms come.

The last few years of economic sacrifice and struggle have taught youth—and youth's parents, too—that it is considerably more important for two people to be able to laugh together, weep together and plan together than to have frosted rolls in the cupboard and several cars in the garage. Marriage has to be woven from spiritual stuff rather than material. Or it will fall down—seven times out of seven!

Love, in brief, can't be put on a mercenary standard. It requires respect more than adulation.

If, having come to marriage prepared, Mrs. Cogswell found unhappiness in seven instances, fate has played her a distinctly raw deal. We don't blame her at all for warning other women against the glorified state. But it is nice to know that most people have had better luck!

Neglect
When a violin is dully played on, it is kept in order; but if it be awhile neglected and cast into a corner, the strings are apt to break, the frets to crack, the bridge to fly off, and no small trouble and air is requisite to bring it into order again.
—Swinnock.

FIRST DUTY OF CIVIC HEADS TO GUARD HEALTH?

By DR. J. M. WISAN, Chairman, Council on Mouth Hygiene, New Jersey State Dental Society.

It is a foregone conclusion that organized community efforts will be more effective in protecting the health of the people than will individual efforts. One need go no further to prove this point than to cite the decrease of diphtheria and tuberculosis cases to show the efficacy of well-directed health programs.

We should have more public health projects which have as their objective the improvement of dental conditions. Wherever intensive dental programs have been instituted, there has been a marked improvement in dental conditions. Macon, Ga.; Cleveland, Ohio; Peoria, Ill., and many other communities have shown that consistent efforts will help children to have normally functioning teeth.

Too often authorities take the attitude that dental disease is beyond their control. Others take the position that they have not sufficient funds to carry on a dental program. However, it is clear that spending money is controlled by individual concepts.

One town will spend thousands of dollars for Fourth of July celebrations of many thousands of dollars for useless jobs, or buy high-priced cars for public officials, but will cut down the health budget. An editorial comment of a New Jersey newspaper reported that during the depression the average decrease of school budgets was more than 20 per cent, while the decrease in other municipal government departments was only 2 per cent.

When public officials recognize that health is the most indispensable factor in our lives, when they realize that health expenditures should come first rather than last, I am certain that a great deal more will be accomplished in promoting the health of our citizenry.

Healed by Cuticura

"Three years ago my face and arms broke out with a skin eruption that was followed by large, red pimples. They feasted and went all over my face and arms. They itched and burned and I could never shave. I lost much rest at night with them.

"Nothing I tried helped very much. Then I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased them. I used about four cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment and now I feel like a new man. I am completely healed." (Signed) Harry R. The Administration and the Labor Organizations

The word "strike" is no longer found daily in newspaper headlines. But this doesn't mean that labor is satisfied either with government labor plans or industry. It is as far from holding out the palm of peace now as it was a year ago. Washington observers have been forecasting a labor blow-up for some months—and it looks as if that long-feared event put in its official appearance on Feb. 2. On that day, burly, hard-bolled Jno. H. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, thrust a thick wedge between the American Federation of Labor and the Roosevelt Administration.

Focal point of Mr. Lewis' attack was Donald Richberg, who is often termed the "Assistant President." Reason for the attack was renewal of the existing automobile code, which the Federation has bitterly opposed, in that it permits men to work 48 hours per week—as compared to the 80 hour week for all industry, which the Federation passionately espouses. Mr. Lewis said flatly that Richberg is a "traitor to organized labor." He stated that Mr. Richberg has deserted his former comrades. It is interesting to remember, in this connection, that Mr. Richberg made his reputation as a hard fighting labor lawyer, that when Gen. Johnson appointed him to the post of NRA counsel, conservatives feared he would be excessively pro-labor in his attitude. Mr. Richberg's reply to the union charge of treason, was that, "If a refusal to yield to such a demand be treason, let those who charge it make the most of it."

President Green followed by saying that Lewis' statement "reflects the Federation's feelings very strongly." Mr. Green then said that he would shortly go to the White House with a union protest against delay in codification of the tobacco industry. That brings up another important point in the widening gap between Administration and labor leaders. Cigarette manufacturers, afraid of unionization of their industry, will have nothing to do with the proposed tobacco code. That, to labor's way of thinking, is bad enough—and it becomes infinitely worse in the light of the fact that the NRA chairman is S. Clay Williams, formerly president of one of the "big three" cigarette makers—the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. N.R.A. officials have said several times that Mr. Williams withdraws from board meetings when the tobacco code is being discussed, in an effort to avoid charges of prejudice. But he doesn't seem to be convinced. They don't call the N.R.A. officials liars directly—but they intimate just about that. Mr. Roosevelt makes all present government policies, and Mr. Richberg and Mr. Williams and others are directly responsible to him. It is therefore possible that the labor leaders will eventually come out with direct criticism of the President—and the potential political results of that would be tremendous. A. F. of L.'s membership is a potent political influence, and the Labor Administration battle is likely to be one of the most important internal problems of the next year. Whether strikes will result—and on a greater scale than a year ago—cannot be safely forecast now.—Industrial News Review.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter which a confederate of Nance steals. Nance escapes, although shot, by swimming to a speed-boat manned by friends, and she is sent to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment.

"Those cops at your house will stick around, Lanny, and when you return they'll want to know where you've been. What are you going to tell them?"

"Tell them nothing. Let those two cops sit in their car in front of my house all night and watch it. What do I care? At least they'll keep burglars away. And when finally they do round me up and walk me down to central station to be questioned, you'll do the questioning, will you not?"

"Lanny," said Dan McNamara, "if you were a man and on the force I'd make you a detective sergeant. You're a bear-cat, that's what you are. But you smuggled that letter out of San Quentin for Nance and turned it over to Sapphire Susie!"

"Indeed! Well, let me tell you, Dan McNamara, that I'm a respectable woman and I never associate, if I know it, with ladies known to the police by such names."

"Maybe you didn't know it, but you gave Sapphire Susie a lift in your car from the main gate at San Quentin down to Greenbrae. The guard remembers seeing her hanging around the main gate, as if she was waiting for somebody; later she got into a coupe with a middle-aged lady, who looked so respectable he took another look at the pass she had just surrendered to him and remembers that the name on the pass was yours. The pass entitled you to visit Nance Belden. Guards may not remember such incidents until something happens. Then they're fast on their feet, Lanny."

"And who, if you please, is Sapphire Susie?"

"She's did a stretch at San Quentin for blackmail. She was discharged a week before you visited Nance, and before Susie left the Big House, Nance fixed it with her to lend a helping hand. Apparently Nance didn't want to confide the minute details of her plan of escape to Susie. Susie's a swell looker but a little bit dumb—she levied blackmail through the mail, understood, and signed her name, instead of hiring a smart shyster lawyer. So Nance decided to send her written instructions out by you, and Susie agreed to pick you up, pinch the letter and deliver it."

"Dan, I assure you I wasn't in any plot to effect a prison delivery. If I'd thought for an instant I was doing anything wrong—why, Nance told me to read her letter and if I disapproved of it, contents to destroy it. I didn't see any harm in that."

"You violated the rules of the prison and you could be punished for it by a term in that same prison."

"I'm a respectable woman—"

"That gets you nowhere. I was a respectable chief of police once—and now look at me. If your part in this leaks out you can only be punished—and you can't be convicted unless you talk in your sleep. If my part in this should leak out I'll be punished and disgraced and thrown out of the best job I've ever had. However—" he raised his glass to her—"mud in your eye, Lanny."

"Happy days, Dan, you gorgeous softy."

The doornell rang. Dan opened it and Doctor Burt stepped in. He paused in amazement at sight of Lanny, glass in hand; she motioned him with it down the hall. "First door at the end, Stevie. You'll find your patient there."

"That girl with the dissociated personality, Nance Belden, escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon, Chief," Stephen began, and handed the letter a newspaper. "Big story. First woman to escape from San Quentin."

He gazed severely upon Lanny. "What are you doing here, Lanny?"

"All I— I to pay Stevie dear, and no rich hot. That Belden girl is here with a bullet hole in her shoulder; she's suffering from shock and submersion and chill and loss of blood and she's cold as a penguin's tail. I've given her a mild noogie of Dan's terrible booze and a forthright of a grain of strychnine and an alcohol rub. She's sleeping. Did you bring those hot-water bottles?"

"Yes," she said humbly, indicating a bag she carried. Lanny fell upon the bag, and retired to the kitchen to fill the hot-water bottles and tuck them in alongside her child patient. "Lucky if she doesn't develop pneumonia, Stevie."

Doctor Burt stood looking down at the sleeping Nance. "Out of the way—"

den's arms and straight into yours. You guessed she'd call on Lanny, eh. Dan, you're an old fox."

"No, Doc, I'm not. A fox has brains."

"He's a lamb, Stevie, just a big ram lamb."

While Lanny was assisting Doctor Burt in dressing Nance Belden's wound, Dan McNamara sat in his plain little living room and read the story of her escape from San-Quentin. It appeared that throughout all of Sunday afternoon two men, in a motor boat, had been anchored in the cove off San Quentin apparently fishing for striped bass, which abound at this particular point in San Francisco bay. There were other boats anchored there also—eight in all. The guard at the entrance to the women's quarters had observed them, until about four-thirty p.m., just before locking-up time a guard in one of the look-out towers on the hill had telephoned him that a boat had approached close to the shore.

The guard had thereupon stepped out of his kiosk and around to the rear of it, which faced toward the beach, less than thirty feet distant. He had shouted at the men in the boat and warned them to be off, that they were not permitted to approach that close, that they were within the deadline. To this the men replied that they couldn't help it; that their motor had gone dead and that the tide had set them in; that they were trying to make repairs and would be off as soon as they could.

While the guard was in the rear of his station, engaged in this conversation, Nance Belden had approached the gate, kicked off her shoes and, digging her toes into the quarter-inch wire mesh of the sixteen-foot gate, had scrambled to the top with incredible rapidity. She was just climbing down the outside of the gate when the guard in the tower on the hill saw her and immediately telephoned to the guard at the main gate; also to the guard arguing with the men in the motor-boat. Upon hearing the telephone bell ringing in his station, that guard had walked back into it; at the same time, keeping the kiosk between her and the approaching guard, Nance Belden had dashed down to the beach and commenced swimming rapidly toward the motor-boat, the motor of which instantly started, and the boat commenced edging in to pick her up.

When the guard in the kiosk, apprised of what was taking place, ran out with a rifle in his hand and shouted to Nance Belden to come back or he would shoot her, a machine-gun in the motor-boat promptly came into action against him. He had not been hit, but a shower of bullets had splattered the ground around and in front of him and another burst had gone over his head and through the sentry box. The guard had fired once at the Belden woman and hit her, but immediately thereafter, fearful of being killed, he had thrown himself flat on the ground.

The guard in the watch-tower on the hill had then brought his machine-gun into action. His first burst had been short, and drew answering fire from the machine gunner in the boat. Although the range was four hundred yards, the first burst from the motor-boat tore through the wooden watch-tower, which rather distracted the aim of the guard there; nevertheless, the latter stuck to his gun and continued to fire, splattering bullets around the swimming girl and into the boat.

The men in the boat did not hesitate, but came on through the hail of bullets; the escaping prisoner had in the meanwhile either sunk or dived; at any rate a widening ring of red appeared on the water. She was down about thirty seconds, then her head emerged close to the boat, and she swam with one arm to the side of it; a man reached over and grasped her under both arms and jerked her into the boat, which instantly turned, put on full speed and raced away close past two other boats. Fearful of killing innocent people, the guard in the watch-tower held his fire until the escaping boat was in the clear; then he and the guard in another tower came into action again. Not a target moving at a speed of forty-five miles an hour is not easily hit; the fire was either over or short and the boat did not stop. When it was out of range, it turned, and in the rapidly fading light of the winter day, headed up into San Pablo bay, running close to the south shore to avoid the chop of the waves in this shallow expanse of water. They ran without lights.

While the course they had taken would seem to indicate a desire to run up Carquinez straits to the Sacramento or the San Joaquin rivers, land and escape in a waiting automobile into central California, the warden realized that his quarry was not lacking in intelligence; that, fast as they fled, they would realize that the telephone is faster; that the roar of their motor must betray them a mile away. He had, therefore, taken the precaution to notify the chiefs of police of Pittsburg, Martinez, Sausalito, Richmond, Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco, leaving to these the task of notifying intermediate points. The warden had a suspicion the fugitives would double back to San Francisco—particularly since the girl was wounded, and must be hidden in order to receive medical attention.

"And here she is," Dan McNamara muttered. "Cripes, what a woman! Lord, how I love a woman with brains and courage. Just a little simple matter of taking pains and taking risks. She didn't go in to the dining hall for dinner with the other prisoners. Smart! Knew she couldn't make a fast swim on a full stomach. Smart enough to notice the warden's oversight in failing to fill in with barbed wire topping that eighteen-inch space at the top of his gate. Of course they figured they needn't bother with that, because no woman could climb a sixteen-foot wire mesh fence anyhow, and if she did she'd only drop down into the waiting arms of the guard, who is never absent, night or day. But Nance Belden knew she could climb that fence barefoot; she knew she had thirty seconds to do it and a drop on the other side from the top of the gate. Her job was to induce the guard to turn his back—and her friends in the boat did that!"

"She knew she'd been seen from the watch-tower on the hill and the guard at the gates notified by telephone; as he returned from the edge of the beach, around the south side of his kiosk, Nance slipped by him on the north side and was in the water as the guard took up the 'phone. Smart! She knew no guard will stick under machine-gun fire at fifty yards, merely to stop a woman convict escaping from prison. Smart! Sank and swam under water—and then the signal course between the boats of the other fishermen, after they picked her up. Fine psychology—she engineered it all—and I know she's a nut! And then straight to Lanny for medical attention—straight to the one human being she knew she could trust—no, I'll not send her back. And I don't particularly want to catch her friends either. I'll say they're friends! Wish I had a couple of friends that'd come on through machine-gun fire for me! I had thought the world was selfish and cruel and thieving and lying—but there's nobility left in it after all."

Stephen Burt came out of the bedroom and sat down and stared at the chief of police with grave interest. "Well, my good Javert," he said presently.

"Your good what?"

"I called you Javert. Don't you know who Javert was?"

Dan McNamara shook his head. "I never picked him up, Doc."

"You wouldn't. He was a character in 'Les Misérables,' a novel by Victor Hugo. It was a fly-cop in Paris, and he pursued an ex-convict named Jean Valjean for twenty years, because he believed the man was a crook. Once a crook, always a crook, was Javert's philosophy. And when he discovered at last he had the goods on Jean Valjean and it was his duty to arrest him, he discovered simultaneously that Jean Valjean was also a good and noble man, which proved extremely embarrassing to Javert."

"I understand how that could be, all right, Doc. What did Javert do then?"

"He climbed up on the railing of a bridge over the Seine, unlimed his shield, threw it into the river and jumped in after it."

"He committed suicide in order to give his man the breaks."

"Exactly."

"Well," Dan McNamara decided after pondering this a half minute, "I wouldn't be boob enough to do that. He should have made a stoop-pigeon out of Jean Valjean and maybe he'd have gotten somewhere in his job."

Stephen smiled. He liked this heavy man with the Celtic face as inscrutable as a Chinaman's. As a specialist in mental diseases he knew the part heredity plays in the formation of character, and one did not have to look at the chief twice to know that he came of courageous ancestry. No vague fears or anxieties in this fellow, Stephen thought. Courageous men are usually honest men; even when they are not honest they are sufficiently courageous to pay the price, no matter how high, for the things they do with their eyes open—to pay it cheerfully and refrain thereafter from whimping.

"Be you're going to protect this girl, are you, Chief?"

Gov. Clyde Tingley has applied to the federal government for $313,488 aid in paying New Mexico teachers' salaries. Gov. Tingley said he had informed Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator, that amount was necessary to operate schools in the state for the normal term.

New Mexico's new federal relief building in Santa Fe was dedicated Jan. 30. Mrs. David Chavez, secretary of the Public Welfare Board, presented the building to the state and FERA, and Gov. Tingley accepted on behalf of the state and Maj. E. O. Braught on behalf of the FERA.

Increased aid to Mesa, Arizona, farmers in paying their water assessments has been obtained through the Agricultural Credit Finance Corporation, it was learned from L. G. Galland, treasurer of the Water Users' Association, as the total amount of loans made to valley farmers for this purpose reached $142,324 on December 31, 1934.

Grazing regulations, as contemplated under the new Taylor act, credits, drought relief, promotion of wool consumption, control of wool substitutes and wool marketing problems were among the important matters considered by the delegates to the seventh annual convention of the National Wool Growers Association in Phoenix.

Tumacacori mission, Tubac, Ariz., stormpoint of many an Apache attack in the pioneer days, was besieged recently by a horde of fortune hunters. Income from investments, State Land Office, state school from counties, District Court and justice of the peace sources was greater in 1934 than in 1933 with a correspondingly greater sum to the state common school fund and current school fund, according to the New Mexico state treasurer. Additionally, there was income from the liquor board and retail dealers' licenses which did not exist in 1933.

The future of the cattle industry shows an optimistic future, according to D. L. Mullendore, Wichita, Kan., president of the Production Credit Corp., speaking at a recent meeting in Albuquerque, New Mex. "Higher prices for cattle during the past month have cheered us," Mullendore said. "Improved pasture conditions in Kansas and Colorado has been noted and here in New Mexico conditions are looking better."

Although unemployment has increased due to New Mexico being an agricultural state and the labor being seasonal, the national reemployment service has been forced to reduce its personnel, according to Waite J. Keeney, director for New Mexico. Whereas there were nine districts, now there are five, operating at about $3,000 a month, a reduction of about 40 per cent over the previous costs, Keeney said. New Mexico is operating its own state reemployment service in a few counties, leaving 23 for the national service to handle.

Washington.—At last after years of talking, a social security program is before congress.

Social Security

And now that it is before congress there is a brand new outburst of talk, because it seems the "social securers" never can agree among themselves. The result is that leadership in the house and in the senate is trying vainly to follow administration instructions, and has fun of all kinds of difficulties. The end is not yet, but it is safe to say without fear of any necessity for retraction that the social security program will not go back to President Roosevelt as a law in the form it was presented as an administration bill.

I find everywhere among those not charged with responsibility for the social security legislation that there is much confusion and lack of understanding as to what the President has proposed. It is easily understood. Any time that it requires thirty thousand words to explain a piece of legislation obviously that legislation must be complex. To comprehend what the length of Mr. Roosevelt's social security measure is, it is only necessary, I think, to remind readers that the message with its explanation of the legislation would fill approximately thirty-five columns of an ordinary newspaper. Many persons naturally will fall asleep before they wade through that much material.

But, let us attempt to summarize the social security bill. It provides, first, for a national system of compulsory contributory old age insurance; second, it authorizes appropriations to be used as federal subsidies (plain gifts) to the individual states to help them pension the aged who cannot be brought under an insurance system predicated upon their service in commerce and industry and, third, a voluntary system of old age annuities is set up.

The system of compulsory contributory old age insurance is designed to protect those who are no longer able to work but who have done their turn on the payrolls of industry. An old age fund is set up in the Treasury of the United States. Initially, the money comes from the Treasury but thereafter there is a tax operating on payrolls of all those who employ workers in numbers exceeding four. This tax will start January 1, 1937, at a rate of 1 per cent. It is increased to 2 per cent as of January 1, 1942; 3 per cent as of January 1, 1947; 4 per cent as of January 1, 1952, and 5 per cent after January 1, 1957. The employer pays the tax but he collects half of it by a deduction from the payroll of the individual worker.

The age of sixty-five years is fixed as the time when a worker shall retire and receive this pension. The pensioner can receive as much as $30 a month. If the individual dies before retirement, his dependents receive back the amount paid in in his behalf.

As a part of the old age pension system the legislation sets up an old age fund in which workers may purchase an annuity but they never may acquire more than a total of $0,000 maturity value—the ultimate amount—from which their income may be increased.

Then there is the much discussed unemployment insurance. This also is predicated upon a tax on industrial payrolls but it is a state proposition. That is, the federal government is attempting to encourage individual states to enact legislation which will protect the worker in periods such as that through which we have passed since 1929. In other words, this phase of the legislation is designed to cause workers and their employers to lay aside a certain percentage of their income while they are employed, to be used when times are hard.

There are countless subdivisions in the bill, none of which are simple, that seek to protect the many who for one reason or another do not qualify under the general terms of the legislation. For instance, aid to dependent children is provided. Federal health subsidies—a kind of health insurance—is proposed. Maternal aid is arranged, and extraordinary cases are covered, such as aid to crippled children. There are other subdivisions much too intricate to analyze here for the reason that their application is decidedly limited. The drafters of the legislation sought to cover all. Whether they have done so can be determined only after the legislation has been in operation some years.

Counting the Cost

I have been unable to compute the cost of this legislation to the federal and state government and no one, of course, can approximate the expense it will be to industry. It is one of those things so far reaching in its effect as to make utterly impossible advance calculations of the cost in dollars and cents. Suffice it to say that all through the bill as it now stands its way through legislative channels are frequent paragraphs where money either is appropriated or authorized to be appropriated in the future. One was covered the money phases of the bill the other day with a remark that it was not unlike the conversations between Amos and Andy, the radio comedians, for there is five million, three million, twenty million, seventy-eight million and so on through the list.

Yet it is not the money phases that constitute the difficulties in the legislation as the leaders in congress see them. The bill sets up an intricate system of administration against which even the present far flung list of New Deal agencies pales into insignificance.

First, there is the ponderous organization for administration to be created here in Washington. Beneath that there are state organizations in every state, regional and county organizations, and even city administrative bureaus. I think it takes no stretch of the imagination to foresee how many workers will be necessary to do just the plain chores of keeping a record of all the individuals on the government payrolls, federal and state, for administration of this legislation.

Here in Washington, we will have a social insurance board, a group of three members, receiving $10,000 a year each and serving for six years. The federal emergency relief administrator will have duties to perform in conjunction with the social insurance board as well as apart from it. The secretary of labor is given jurisdiction over some phases of the administration and the public health service is charged with conduct of the health insurance phases.

"This is not all. The secretary of the treasury is charged with the management and investment of all of the monies under the various funds and it is he who must see that they are properly disbursed."

In congress, considerable jealousy has arisen among committee chairmen, party wheel-horses and those who would enjoy being administration spokesmen.

Jealousy Aroused

Some of them, it hardly need be said, believe their political salvation lies in following the administration blindly and to addition there is another segment of legislators who keep their eyes on the historical significance of passing events. This group wants to have a leading part in enactment of the social security legislation because, it must be said, this is the greatest of all experiments undertaken at any time by the American government. From lobby conversation it is perfectly evident that there are many men in the house and senate who would be willing to retire to whatever rewards—their political service has given them only to become known as the father of the social security legislation.

This condition has precipitated several humorous circumstances. Senator Wagner of New York sponsored the legislation in the senate and Representative Lewis of Maryland proposed it in the house. Senator Wagner's committee arranged to start hearings on a stated date in the senate and this date was announced rather suddenly. No sooner had the Wagner committee hearings been announced than Representative Doughton of North Carolina scheduled similar hearings before his ways and means committee in the house. He set the hearings one day ahead of the senate and the rivalry between the two for headline witness has been, to say the least, a source of many jokes.

Some weeks ago I reported to you that there were rumblings of difficulties ahead for President's gigantic public works program, as his new experiment in recovery efforts is described. He asked congress for a lump sum of $4,500,000,000 with which to revive the heavy industries and other lines of commercial endeavor that they may absorb some of those unemployed now on relief rolls. It will be remembered that in his annual message, to congress he said with emphasis that federal aid to the destitute must stop; that the giving of relief directly was a state responsibility.

Trouble Ahead

The first hitch encountered by the administration wheel-horses in guiding the public works bill through congress developed in the house when the leaders, anxious to pass the legislation as a special rule which limited debate to a couple of hours and made it almost impossible for individual members to amend the bill. Several scores of Democrats and all of the Republicans balked. For several days the house leaders fought gallantly to keep the stubborn opposition from running away with things, but the defections from the Democratic ranks became so large that a compromise had to be offered. It was accepted and the Republican critics and Democratic opponents were successfully squelched.

One result of the near revolt against the house Democratic leadership was the exposition of feeling against Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior who also carries the titles of public works administrator and oil administrator. A lot of Democrats dislike Mr. Ickes for what they call his political aloofness. Apparently he has not yielded to their demands for patronage appointments and naturally men seeking elective offices hold out that plan as bait to voters.

FOR PEACE AND HONESTY

IT HAS become a revered custom on Washington's birthday to take a moment's halt in the rushing tides of modern events and to find fresh inspiration in recalling to mind the ideals, the warnings, the hopes and the visions with which he, in the serenity, the courage, the sincerity of purpose and the unbiased judgment that were characteristic of his public career, launched the newly liberated nation of colonial states in the troubled and uncertain waters upon which it was venturing and delivered it into the custody of his successors in the trust. Clearly beyond the confusions of succeeding political dynasties, observes a writer in the Kansas City Star, stands out the personality of this first President and his utterances of hope and warning seem as significant and potent today.

A great, a solitary figure, a symbol of the cause for which he fought, a personification of the constitutional foundations upon which he helped to place his conceptions of an ideal democratic government, he stands out at the head of the long line of presidential leaders an enduring inspiration even to the present day. If he had the temper of a man, he knew how to use it and control it. When plotting army officers and scheming politicians sought to undermine his influence and his ability as a commander, he put his devotion to his cause above his personal feelings and turned the tide against them by his dignified forbearance and forgiveness.

Let us recall some of his words, amidst our world troubles and misunderstandings, written to his friend, Benjamin Harrison:

"My first wish is to see war, this plague to mankind, banished from the earth."

"Of all the animosities which have existed among mankind, those which are caused by difference of sentiments in religion appear to me the most inveterate and distressing and ought to be deprecated. I was in hopes that the enlightened and liberal policy which has marked the present age would at least have reconciled Christians of every denomination so far that we should never again see their religious disputes carried to such a pitch as to endanger the peace of society."

"It has always been a source of serious reflection and sincere regret to me that the youth of the United States should be sent to foreign countries for the purpose of education. I have greatly wished to see a plan adopted by which the arts, sciences and belles-lettres could be taught to their fullest extent here, with the means of acquiring the liberal knowledge necessary to qualify our citizens for the exigencies of public as well as private life."

"The more I am acquainted with agricultural affairs, the better pleased I am with them. I am led to reflect how much more delightful to an uneducated mind is the task of making improvements on the earth, than in the vain glory which can be acquired from ravaging it by a career of conquests."

"This government, the offspring of our own choice, unaided and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support."

"Towards the preservation of your government and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite, not only that you discountenance oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretenses."

"It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy."

"Harmony and a liberal intercourse with all nations are recommended by policy, humanity and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an impartial hand, neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences, consulting the natural course of things, diffusing and diversifying, by gentle means, the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing."

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. . . . It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?"

"Promote then as an object of primary importance institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened."

"As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it."

"Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all; religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence."

Farm Inventory Is Guide to Business

All Equipment and Livestock Should Be Listed for Tax Purposes.

By F. T. Burdick, Economics Department, Colorado College of Agriculture, WNU Service.

Can you give a complete list of all the machinery, live stock, supplies and property that you own?

A complete inventory of your property will prove a valuable aid in answering this question, and in helping to plan for needed repair or replacement of equipment.

Inventories may save money, too. A complete check may show that the tax assessor has listed you for too much property. All business men need to know the facts about their equipment and holdings, and farmers are no exception.

Do you know how much feed of various kinds it takes to carry each class of live stock through the winter? If not, now is a good time to make some careful estimates. Find out just how much feed is on hand, and you can tell how much you will have to buy or may have for sale. You will have some valuable information to help you in planning ahead.

A complicated set of record books is not necessary for taking a farm inventory. The simplest form of pocket notebook is better than nothing. The inventory and other farm records and accounts can be kept in a book supplied by the college extension service. The important thing is to get the information written down, and a notebook than can be slipped in the pocket.

Farmers are urged to adopt the inventory habit and assemble information about the farm. It pays to study what you are doing, and it pays to plan ahead.

Cold Frame Is Advised for Early Vegetables

The construction of a cold frame will be a big help in the growing of early vegetables, says E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at North Carolina State college.

At small expense, he says, a cold frame can be prepared to protect the young vegetables until they have become comparatively hardy and until the coldest weather has passed.

The frame should be located on the southern or eastern slope of a hill, when possible, to protect it from the north winds and to give the plants the best exposure to the sunlight. Bank dirt around the northern and western sides of the frame as an additional protection.

A frame is what the name implies. Morrow says a framework of boards over which can be spread light cloth or canvas to protect the plants from the weather. The top of the frame should be approximately 3 feet from the ground.

Seeds Stimulated by Rays

Seeds that refuse to sprout when planted can be roused from dormancy by soaking and then exposing them to the proper colored light for a short time. Only the longer wavelengths of light have this stimulating power Dr. L. H. Flint, of the United States Department of Agriculture, has found. Seeds exposed to light at the blue violet end of the spectrum refused to germinate. Even seeds that had been given the stimulating treatment with the longer wavelengths at the red end of the spectrum and then were exposed to blue or green light would not sprout. The treated seeds need not be germinated immediately. They can be dried out and planted later.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Kicking in Harness

To prevent this dangerous habit take two straps 1 1/2 inches wide with a good ring; have the straps long enough to buckle around the hind legs, one above the hock and one below. First buckle the ring in both straps; then take a stout rope, put a ring in the rope, and tie it around the breast of the collar so that the double will come back behind the belly-band and make the ring stay. Now take another piece of stout rope, tie it in the ring on the hind leg, bring it up through ring at the belly-band and back to the other ring on the hind leg. Do not leave any slack for the horse or mule to get his feet over.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Winter Manuring Pays

Top-dressing the wheat crop with manure in mid-winter has increased the crop by six bushels to the acre, and clover hay 850 pounds at the Ohio experiment station, according to Robert M. Salter, agronomist. These results were on wheat that had received 100 pounds of superphosphate at seeding time. On land lacking a supply of phosphate, results would not be so good. Rate of application was four and one-half tons to the acre in making the test.

Buckwheat for Cows

Buckwheat can be used in feeding dairy cows up to 25 per cent of the grain ration, says a writer in Prairie Farmer. It has about the same protein content as a half-and-half mixture of ground ear corn and oats, while it supplies about 85 per cent as much digestible nutrients as such a mixture. If 100 pounds of buckwheat can be purchased for less than 85 per cent of the cost of 100 pounds of the corn and oats mixture, it will pay to use it, otherwise not.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. F. E. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, & Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 17

PETER TEACHES GOOD CITIZENSHIP

LESSON TEXT—1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5. GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Letter From Peter. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Becomes a Teacher. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Good Citizen. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Responsibilities of a Good Citizen.

In order to get an intelligent grasp of today's lesson one must get a view of the entire Epistle as to its purpose and method. The purpose was to establish all who were passing through suffering and testing (see 1:7; 3:13; 4:12; 5:10-12).

The principles of Christian behavior set forth in this text are of a broader scope than citizenship. They embrace:

1. Behavior as Pilgrims and Sojourners (vv. 11, 12). Christians are really sojourners on the earth. They have not their permanent home here. They are journeying through the earth on their way to their eternal home in the heavens. Their heavenly citizenship (Phil. 3:20) should constrain them to the maintenance of conduct consistent with their high calling.

1. Abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11). The term "lusts" here includes the entire army of unclean forces springing from our carnal natures. They are enumerated in Galatians 5:19-21.

2. Behavior among the Gentiles or heathen (v. 12). The word conversation here means behavior. Christians are under obligation to so live as to render it impossible for the world to speak evil against them as evil-doers.

11. Behavior as Citizens (vv. 13-17). While the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven, he has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth during his earthly sojourn. He should be in subordination to properly constituted authority.

1. Obey all requirements of civil rulers (v. 13). Fidelity to Christ is shown by loyalty to civil authority. The intelligent Christian recognizes the necessity of government and graciously submits to those in authority over him, regardless of the form of government. His duties as a citizen he performs as the Lord's free man, not through servile fear. Government even of a low order is better than anarchy. Free submission to governmental authority puts to silence the ignorance of foolish men (vv. 15, 16).

2. Honor all men (v. 17). The Christian sees in every man the image of God and will, therefore, give him the honor due him. This applies to all relations wherein we touch human life.

3. Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The brotherhood is composed of those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

4. Fear God (v. 17). This means to recognize God's sovereignty, righteousness, and holiness, and properly to reverence him.

5. Honor the king (v. 17). This had a peculiar significance at the time this was written, because in all probability the wicked Nero was then reigning as the emperor.

111. Behavior in a World of Opposition (1 Pet. 4:1-5).

1. Arise for the conflict (v. 1). Christians are engaged in a tremendous conflict with evil forces within and without. Satan and his angels are bent on the believers' defeat and destruction.

2. The salutary effect of suffering (v. 1). Suffering has a remedial effect upon God's children. The one who suffers with Christ as an example will have the consciousness that it is his identity with Christ that calls forth the opposition of the world.

3. God's will the regulating force of his life (v. 2). The will of God, not the lusts of the flesh, is the directing force of the believer's life.

4. The consciousness of a wasted life (v. 3). Looking back upon a wasted life in serving the lusts of the flesh will move one to give no more time to serving such a master.

5. The attitude of the world toward the one who separates himself from it (v. 4). The world speaks evil of those who will not go its way. The world not only wonders at the life of the Christian who separates himself from its pleasures, such as dancing, card playing, wine drinking, etc., but will heap upon him nicknames of reproach.

6. Account shall be given (v. 6). The Christian should, so live as to be able to render a good account to God.

Fellowship With God

Every mental movement and religious activity of life should be a heartfelt plea for deeper and sweeter fellowship with God.

Need of the Day
The greatest need of today is a renaissance of character among the people of this distracted earth; a renaissance of that quality of character which recognizes obligations as an honest man recognizes his debts, and of the quality of faith that gives us the desire and the courage to help instead of to hide.

Belief Imperative
An optimistic view of life is a hollow sham unless it is based on a belief in human immortality.

Scent Your Linens
Do you like your linens scented? If you do, here is a very economical way to do it: Buy a quantity of your favorite scented toilet soap. Place a cake between each pile of linens. The linen will take on the scent of the soap and yet you will always have soap on hand when needed. Continue to replace the bars.

HUMAN NEED FOR SOCIETY NOT TO BE DISREGARDED

"What do you think of that woman who for twenty-five years has lived alone in a lighthouse?"

"For company this woman has only her two dogs. And according to her interview with the newspapers she is never lonely. That's what I call a wonderful person—to need no one. Think of all the time she saves in not having to listen to foolish talk. Think of the wealth she can store in her mind with all the uninterrupted time she has—the reading she can do! She can learn more about the world and foreign parts in that lighthouse than the people who rush around taking quick tours to places and never having time to think."

The eminent woman writer to whom the above was addressed disagrees to some extent with her questioner as to the value of solitude, carried to extremes. She says:

"Pope said, in his Essay on Man, 'The proper study of mankind is man.'"

"I have always been an exponent of the fascinating 'traveling' that can be done in books and in the mind; also of the benefits of occasional solitude. But I am afraid, my dear reader, that I cannot recommend staying alone twenty-five years in a lighthouse."

"It is true that too many of us are too dependent on other people. It is true that real fulfillment in the lives of normal humans must involve other humans. To really live, we need people in our lives. We need to be with them, to learn from them, to do for them, to love them."

"It is the old story of the Happy Medium. Too much company can waste previous force. No company at all can prevent those forces from ever being realized."

HANDICAP TO BE LIFTED

It is good to give the unfortunate a living; it is still better to raise them to a life worth living. It is not so much the infirmity that causes unhappiness as the grief of useless dependent existence.—Helen Keller.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

2. Gargle Thoroughly—throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat. Do this twice. Do not rinse mouth.

3. If you have a cold, take 2 BAYER Aspirin Tablets. Drink full glass of water. Repeat if necessary, following directions in package.

Modern Scientific Method Wonderfully Easy

REMEMBER PICTURES HERE

Here's a safe, modern and effective way to relieve sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes. Many doctors advise it and millions are following this way. Try it.

All you do is crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in 1/2 glass of water and gargle with it twice—as pictured here. (If you have signs of a cold, take BAYER Aspirin and drink plenty of water.)

Get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. They disintegrate quickly and completely, making a gargle without irritating particles.
