New Mexico Magazine for May

New Mexico may not need a navy; drouth and dust fail to suggest one. But if the Sunshine State goes in for a fleet of its own there's one man who'll be happy to serve as admiral, skipper, helmsman or mate—Harvey Fergusson, famed author of Rio Grande. His experiences in navigation of the state's principal watercourse are described in New Mexico Magazine for May, off the press April 25th. Fergusson admits he's an authority in the matter and proves it with "Down the Rio in Boats."

Sport of an even more dangerous sort is dealt with by S. Omar Barker in "Four Footed Dynamite." He takes the rodeo apart to reveal its three R's: ridin', ropin', rasslin'. Serious business, the rodeo, but Barker discovers it can be a scream from the sidelines.

In "Prunes and Cartridges" Col. Jack Potter presents a reminiscence of cowboy days—a true one full of salty humor; Evon Z. Vogt describes in "Autographs in Stone" the remarkable history recorded on Inscription Rock; Bernard W. Kenney shows that a dog, danger and devotion can deliver plenty of stuff for a stirring story; "Along the Roadside, Too" gives Elizabeth Emerson a chance to show that the Sunshine State is more flower garden than desert; Gilberto Espinosa concludes his series on "New Mexico Santos;" "Chile for the Nation" by Jolt Stewart unveils the relationship of a peculiarly potent industry to art, architecture and food; David Baxter gives a surprising twist to a fishing story of "Rainbow Under the Moon;" Frances Gillmor, co author of "Traders to the Navajos" reviews "South west," new book by Laura Adams Armer, while customary features of art, poetry, conservation and highways complete an issue as varied as the spring season itself.

Saturnino Chavez is having a garage erected at his residence on the east side this week. Pablo Tellea is doing the work.

The P. T. A. will meet this evening at the high school auditorium and a good attendance is requested. After the meeting, the 6th grade will give an exhibition of their work in their school room and those interested are invited

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Byron were in town last Saturday from their ranch home near Polly and while here, made this office a friendly call.

STANDING OF THE CLUBS

|            | Won | Lost |
|------------|-----|------|
| Cobras     | 1   | 2    |
| White Oaks | 2   | 0    |

Manager Ray Stipple took his White Oaks Coal Diggers to Hondo last Sunday and gave the lower valley boys a good setback, by handing them a goose egg. Hondo could not solve Young Shaw's delivery and he blanked them, while his teammates were piling up nine scores to win the game 9 to 0.

The Carrizozo Cobras could not get an engagement last Sunday, so they were forced to be idle that day.

At this writing (Friday morning,) we understand that the Mescalero Indians are coming here next Sunday for a game with the Cobras.—Boys, forget about baseball for the time being and let's enjoy some nice indoor sport. Next Sunday will be an ideal day for red flannel lingerie and sleigh riding. But don't get discouraged—after this God-sent spell, we'll have some good ball games, happy minds and plenty beans (we hope.)

Hail, Hail, Hail, the Rain is Here!!!—Who said anything about sandstorms?

We have no idea what White Oaks will do Sunday, but we think they'll gather 'round a fire and tell fish yarns.

Carrizozo Cleaners Changes Hands

"The Dreamer"

Much jest and criticism is too often directed toward what we call the dreamer, and we are too often prone to call his dreams "aircastles;" but let us dwell for a short period of time on achievements which had their origination in dreams. Some of us today can readily recall the ox cart age and at that time, the telephone, telegraph, automobile, airplane, electric light, typewriter, adding machine, radio and many more things of usefulness in this time, were only seen in dreams.

What we have today, are only results of what was once called dreams. A man may advance a certain thought, but others will say it is impossible. Before long it comes to pass and the dreamer, as he is called, never receives credit for it. The dreamer is the one who looks ahead of his time and they say he is crazy — but later on, the dream is realized by some genius and he is hailed as a benefactor.

What we now have and what we get in the future, the credit must be given to the dreamer and thus does the thing which was considered impossible, terminate in a reality.

Mr. and Mrs. Murph Muirhead are here from El Paso and will remain for an indefinite period.

Perry Sears of Capitan was a business visitor in town Wednesday of this week.

"SLUGGER" SMITH

By R. H. WILKINSON
Ball Syndicate—WNU Service.

"NO MAN," said Elmer Stone, "was ever more proud of his sobriquet than David 'Slugger' Smith."

Slugger was a small man, puny, almost emaciated in appearance—a friendly sort of person, the type of man toward whom you instantly warm without knowing why; a man, great of spirit, it and generous of heart.

"Sam Cook just called David, 'Slugger.' It was toward the end of the annual baseball game between volunteer Hook and Ladder No. 1 of Dexter and Hose 3 of Bartlett. David, an ardent follower of the big leagues, himself an enthusiastic player and a third baseman of whom, all Dexterites were proud, stepped up to bat in the last half of the ninth, with the score 2 to 2, and slugged out a home run.

"Sam, who was seated beside me in the bleachers exclaimed: 'What a slugger that guy turned out to be! The name seemed to suit David fine. It was sort of catchy and somehow suggestive of the reason for its origin.'

"There was, as usual, a celebration that night in the clubhouse, and David was the hero of the hour. Sam proposed a toast to 'Slugger' Smith, and everybody cheered and applauded and thought the moniker well bestowed.

"David was ordinarily a modest and reticent type of man, but that name tickled his vanity. He grinned from ear to ear, and you could tell by the look in his eyes that he was mighty proud to be called 'Slugger.'

"That night after the celebration David went home and, emboldened by the flattery of his teammates (a boldness augmented by several generous mugs of Peter Saylor's very best home brew) woke his wife, Dora, from a sound slumber, and apprised her of the great honor that had been bestowed upon himself.

"It was, I suspect, the home brew that freed David's tongue, for Dora Smith approved not at all of her husband's enthusiasm and interest in the national sport. She frowned upon his association with such ordinary people as myself and Sam Cook. And since the day of their wedding, five years before, she had never ceased trying to convince him that baseball was a degrading and vulgar pastime.

"For Dora had social ambitions. She wanted to be somebody, to travel in smart company, to be distinctive and aloof. At that time Dexter had no group of people that could be classed as aristocrats, but Dora had dreams of such a group, with herself in the role of social lion.

"And so when David, with boyish enthusiasm and righteous pride, told how he had earned his sobriquet, his ardor was almost instantly squelched by cold and condemning stares, by harsh and cruel scolding, by unympathetic and unfair upbraiding. Fortunately, David had fortified himself with enough home brew to dispel any oppressiveness which might have been his reaction to such a rebuff, and, more fortunately still, Dora had that evening received a letter, the contents of which had excited her to a high fever and left little room in her mind for other matters. Hence the tirade was cut unusually short, and David crawled into bed to dream blissful dreams of slugging home runs for Hook and Ladder No. 1.

"Dora woke him early the next morning. Fully clothed she sat on the bed's edge, and held the letter in her hand. Even to David's sleepdrugged brain was borne the knowledge that something important was about to happen. He rubbed his eyes, sat up and prepared to listen. Dora beamed.

"David, it's happened! We're rich!" David blinked. "Rich?"

"Richer than I'd ever dreamed. David, just listen to this: Uncle Thomas, my mother's brother, who lived in Boston, died two weeks ago, and bequeathed us his entire fortune. Nearly a million dollars!"

"David looked concerned. 'Say, that's a shame. Tom was a good egg. What killed him?'

"Dora's glance hardened for an instant, and then she was beaming again. 'Think of it, David, a million dollars! Think of what it means! Travel! Meeting smart people! Mingling with the highest of society! Oh, David, we'll be the envy of everyone in Dexter!'

"David wasn't exactly agog over the idea, and protested at giving up his job and accompanying his wife on a trip abroad. But he was a mild-mannered man, easily persuaded in preference to asserting himself. During the next two weeks, while Dora was packing and making preparations for their tour, he went around town with a doleful look on his face, a look that brightened only when some one addressed him by his newly acquired sobriquet. If some one on the opposite side of the street shouted at him: 'Hi, Slugger!' you'd see a grin appear that would warm the cockles of your heart.

"We hated to see David go. He was a regular fellow, liked by us all, a good mixer, an unselfish friend. He told us they were to be devoted to acquiring culture and a snooty attitude.

"And despite the fact that none of us could ever conceive of David as an aristocrat or anything more superior than the boys of Hook and Ladder No. 1's baseball team, we felt and the day of his departure. Somehow it seemed he was stepping out of the role in which we had always known him and into another and stranger character.

"This fear was substantiated when, from one source or another, we began to hear news of the Smiths' social climb. Due mostly to Dora's determination and initiative they had advanced far and succeeded in making an impression on some of Europe's high society.

"This news was further supported when it became known that Dora had invested several thousands of dollars with a genealogy expert, and acquired among other things, a coat of arms, and a large book containing details of the Smith family as far back as Capt. John Smith. A little later we were advised that mail addressed to Mr. or Mrs. David Smith would be ignored; if we wanted to communicate with Slugger we must address the envelope to D. Richard Smythe, which was, Dora discovered, the correct way of spelling and pronouncing the good old name.

"This latter information was disturbing. It forced us to admit that our conjectures regarding 'Slugger' Smith were wrong. He had succumbed at last, gone high hat, become an aristocrat, would undoubtedly look down with scorn and contempt upon his one-time cronies.

"Our last remaining hope was dashed asunder when one day the train from Boston deposited Slugger and Dora at Dexter's depot. Those of us who, as usual, were gathered on the platform to check up on the train's arrival, were saddened by what we saw. There was Slugger in a cut-away coat and striped trousers, carrying a little snow-white Pomeranian dog under his arm. He followed Dora across the station platform and looked right through us as if we had been so much thin air.

"It was sad. None of us addressed him. We would have felt uneasy doing so. He seemed strange and unreal; he wasn't the man upon whom we had bestowed the sobriquet of 'Slugger' and who had been proud of the honor.

"Several times we met this strange being about town during the next few days. And always he looked through us or failed to turn his face in our direction at all. We did not attempt to renew old friendship; we were too fearful of being humiliated and scorned.

"The thing might have gone on indefinitely had not Bob Terill, who had secured a position in Boston shortly after the Smiths departed from Europe, returned to town one day and confronted David in the post office that evening. Bob of course had no news of David, was not aware of the great transformation that had taken place in the one-time crony to us all, and at sight of him he let out a whoop and came across the floor. 'Slugger! I'm a son of an ox! By all that's holy, what is this, a masquerade!' he ejaculated again, and reached out and whacked David between the shoulder blades.

"And then something very surprising happened. Instead of spurning Bob's greeting with a look of scorn and contempt, an expression of serene happiness appeared on his face. He grinned from ear to ear and thrust out his hand.

"Thanks, Bob," he said, his tone husky, "thanks. I—I was afraid every one had forgotten about that name of mine. I was afraid to speak to anyone; afraid they wouldn't call me 'Slugger!'"

Frozen Grasshoppers in Glacier for Many Years

Probably one of the most curious sights of the world is a glacier full of frozen grasshoppers. This is known as Grasshopper glacier, and is to be seen in Montana, observes a writer in the Montreal Herald. The huge mass of ice, under the crush of which the grasshoppers are buried, is under the shadow of Granite peak, a 13,000-foot mountain. Millions of grasshoppers are embedded in the ice of the glacier, and no one knows how many thousands of years they have been there. Those near the surface, are plainly seen through the clear ice.

Just how the grasshoppers came to be in the ice is a matter which has long perplexed scientists. One idea is that the insects were suddenly killed by a cold blast of air when crossing the mountains on one of their periodic flights southward. Falling, they became buried in ice and snow.

Electric-Magnet Finds Tools

Among the most successful ways of fishing for tools lost at the bottom of an oil well a mile and a half deep is a powerful electric magnet which is lowered into the hole. When contact can be made, the magnet lifts them quickly to the surface. Broken bits, tubing catchers, spearheads, slips, ball-catchers, and various other metal parts are lost in drilling or later operations and must be recovered or the hole deviated around them. The bigger the hole the larger the magnet that can be used with a consequent greater lifting power. Magnets are constructed from 3/4 to 2 1/2 inches in diameter. A 9-inch magnet has a lifting power of 1,500 pounds plate steel. The apparatus is installed in a truck on which is mounted the cable drum.

Buried in Mortar

Probably the principal point of interest in Algeria is the tomb of St. Germain, a Christian martyr of the sixteenth century, who was killed by being smothered in a block of mortar. The cast may be seen in the museum of Mustapha Superior, in the suburbs.

Meaning of Word "Hooverize"

The word "Hooverize" was coined from the name of Herbert Hoover when he was United States food administrator during the World war. It means to economize in the use of food; to use certain foods sparingly or not at all and substitute others.

The Road to Health

By DR. R. ALLEN GRIFFITH

HOW TEETH INFECT THE SYSTEM

WITH the exception of venereal disease, every disease, every germ that enters the human system must enter through the mouth, nose or a break in the skin. The mouth is the most extensive breeding place for germs. Before any disease can gain a foothold in the human system, it must have a place of incubation and a period of incubation and that place is the unclean mouth.

Where are the pneumococcus, the tubercle bacillus, the virus of scarlet fever, measles, croup, etc., most frequently found? In the unclean human mouth. We are not astonished when we find millions of chains of the six varieties of streptococci and millions of pneumococci in the average mouth and these are among the dangerous disease germs. All of these micro-organisms are absorbed from spaces around and between the teeth into the mucous membrane of the mouth and into the tonsils. They are swallowed into the stomach and drawn into the lungs. Constant and persistent doses of micro-organisms and their toxins ultimately break down the resistance of the healthy human organism.

The germs found in diseased teeth and septic mouths are swept into the stomach with solid and liquid food and infected saliva. While many of them are destroyed, many of them pass into the intestines where they set up putrefaction and manufacture toxins and food poisons. These have a special predilection for nerve cells.

The absorption of micro-organisms and their toxins into the circulation is responsible for rheumatism, arthritis and endocarditis. The micro-organisms are carried by the blood stream to the joints and heart where they produce these destructive diseases. This has been proven by injecting into guinea pigs cultures made from the mouths of persons so infected, the same diseases being produced in the guinea pigs. Also, treatment of the mouth has caused an improvement or cure of the diseased conditions.

Without treatment of the mouth, the cure of many of these diseases by systematic treatment otherwise has failed and will continue to fail.

At the Century of Progress in Chicago in the dental exhibit was shown the fossil jaw of a mammoth which contained a dental abscess that would hold three and one-half quarts of pus. Who knows but what this dental abscess may have caused the death of even this immense prehistoric animal?

THE FIRST PERMANENT TOOTH

THE first permanent tooth comes into the mouth between the sixth and seventh years. It comes in just back of the baby teeth and is frequently mistaken for a baby tooth because it does not replace another tooth. It is called the six-year molar, and is the largest and most important tooth in the dental arch.

The six-year molar is of the greatest concern to dentists. Most dentists are familiar with the troublesome nature of the tooth. It drives more children to the dentist than all other teeth combined.

If we are to do the most for children we must save the six-year molars. When the six-year molars are extracted the dental arch is robbed of its support. It soon collapses. The teeth in front of it fall backward and a space appears between the front teeth. The beautiful, symmetrical curve of the face is lost, and nothing can restore it.

The six-year molars are particularly valuable because they do most of the chewing for a period of five years. These four teeth take their places when the child is six years of age, the upper biting squarely upon the lower. There are no teeth back of them until the child is twelve years of age, when the second molars come in.

In front of them are the baby molars which are small and frail and are not made for chewing heavy food. If the baby molars are lost or decayed they cannot assist the six-year molars in chewing food. Thus, for five years, the four six-year molars are compelled to chew all the food that goes to nourish the rapidly-developing child. The six-year molars also act as a prop to hold the jaws apart while the other permanent teeth are coming in. The pressure of the jaws falls upon these four teeth until the other back teeth come in between the ages of ten and twelve, and in case one or two of these first permanent teeth are lost, the jaws are not held open the correct distance and the jaws close upon the other teeth that are only part way in, forcing them out of line and preventing them from coming entirely in.

The only proper way to care for your children's teeth is to place the child in the care of a dentist at three years of age. He will keep the child's teeth free from decay if the visits are made at frequent intervals. He will fill small cavities as soon as they appear, and keep the teeth free from stains and tartar. He will tell you how to keep the mouth in a clean, healthy condition, and if this rule is followed the permanent teeth will come in in a clean, healthy mouth free from decay.

GERMAN ATHLETICISM

Before long all German students of both sexes will have to take a course of sports and gymnastics for the first three terms of their academic careers. The obligatory course will comprise gymnastics, athletics, boxing, swimming and shooting, and there will be inter-school and inter-university championships. After one year students will be examined for a sports diploma. Unsuccessful candidates will not be allowed to begin their fourth term.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It appears that at last all of those questions as to whether the national industrial recovery act is constitutional are going to be answered by the Supreme court of the United States. That is, they will be answered by a Supreme court decision unless the moving spirits in NRA decide again to dodge the issue as they once have done.

Sometime ago W. E. Belcher, an Alabama lumberman, ran afoul of a national recovery administration code ruling and he was promptly prosecuted. Lower courts decided adversely to the government, however, and the NRA lawyers decided to appeal. They wanted a Supreme court decision. But before the case reached the stage of argument before the highest court in the land, the Department of Justice suddenly withdrew the petition and announced its refusal to prosecute Mr. Belcher any further.

There immediately was set up a far-flung cry accusing the NRA and the Department of Justice of being afraid of a constitutional test. Legal brains of the Department of Justice stood pat and offered no explanation, but NRA brain-trusters let it be known that they preferred to avoid a test at this time because of the imminent expiration of the industrial recovery act.

They pointed out that the law expires June 10 and that congress is now engaged in consideration of a revision. The implication was that the NRA believed a test in the Belcher case was a waste of time and money because of the probability that a Supreme court decision would not be handed down until after the present law was no longer operative.

Now, however, the NRA authorities think they have found the right kind of a case for a constitutional test. They have announced they will fight to have the act declared constitutional in a case in which the Schechter Live Poultry market of Brooklyn, N. Y., is accused of violating the poultry code. So instead of trying out the constitutional question on boards, the brain trusters are seeking a decision on the hen.

The whole situation is regarded by observers as being much confused and no one seems to know exactly what is behind the sudden reversal of position on the part of NRA and the Department of Justice lawyers except a good many folks think the NRA could not stand the gaff of countrywide editorial criticism. It is true that after abandonment of the Belcher case was announced, nearly every important metropolitan newspaper in the country printed editorial comment about the action and little of it was favorable to the NRA. Examined from this viewpoint then, there are some who believe the administration was goaded into a constitutional test of NRA.

Politically, the Department of Justice's determination to avoid a test in the Belcher case already is having repercussions. Barbs and backbiting are coming not alone from Republican antagonists but from among Democrats in congress as well. Senator Hastings, a Delaware Republican, and Senator Clark, a Missouri Democrat, joined in an effort to have Attorney General Cummings reverse his position and urged upon the head of the Department of Justice the necessity for clarification of legal questions involved. The administration's position also has drawn fire from Republican Leader Snell in the house and there are in that body also certain of the so-called progressives who have charged that President Roosevelt is unwilling to face the music in the Belcher case.

Economically, the decision to refrain from pressing the Belcher case for final adjudication by the Supreme court has caused a wave of uncertainty to permeate the business structure.

What the end is going to be, even Donald Heberg, number one man in NRA, has avoided saying. Since he has not enunciated policies his subordinates are afraid to move. Consequently, according to some of the letters now going out from the NRA to business interests, the whole question of codes and their enforcement frankly can be said to be up in the air.

If the NRA can be said to be up in the air, the agricultural adjustment administration can be said to be a rudderless ship. There is no longer any doubt that AAA policy is confused, not to say floundering about in helpless fashion. It has reached the stage where delegations and individuals are arriving in increasing numbers to wait on the doorstep of Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis for advice as to what the program is.

It ought to be said just here that Mr. Wallace and Mr. Davis are showing signs of irritation and that is always significant. It was only the other day that a group of farm organization leaders came in to Washington to tell Mr. Wallace how the Department of Agriculture must do something to enable farmers in the areas that were drought stricken to plant crops. They pointed out the necessity for quick action because crops must be planted within the next few weeks. They did not stop there, however, but added points of criticism about AAA policy. This so irked Mr. Wallace that he announced abruptly that the interview was closed.

The secretary was quoted by members of the delegation as having inquired whether the Roosevelt administration had not done more for farmers than any previous administration. He was reported also to have said he did not like the attitude or the spirit which the visitors displayed in their conversations with him. The result was that the farm leaders went away from the vast building housing the Department of Agriculture with a decidedly bad taste in their mouths and the prediction is heard frequently now that these men will cause much trouble for Mr. Wallace hereafter by telling their stories among the home folks.

I think it is generally conceded that economical and political numskulls may be found in positions of responsibility among farm organizations but after all they serve as something of a leadership for groups that speak for agriculture and when Mr. Wallace becomes angered by their criticism of his administration, serious trouble for him lies not so far ahead. Such circumstances as the one just mentioned usually are accepted as indicating a thin skin on the part of a public official and that condition is nearly always fatal—it ruined Herbert Hoover.

Around the halls of congress, also, there is increasing criticism of Mr. Wallace and it is of a character to undermine him if it continues. When such stalwart Democrats as Senator George of Georgia describes a cabinet officer as being unfit for the office he holds, the situation as regards that individual necessarily becomes precarious.

The controversies that are centering around Secretary Wallace naturally are having their reaction on his legislative proposals. It is my understanding that considerable difficulty is faced by the amendments to the adjustment act which the secretary desires to have passed at this session of congress. These amendments are described by the secretary as being designed to strengthen the adjustment act and accord the AAA more power in enforcement. It seems, however, a certain bloc in congress holds the conviction that there is already sufficient power in Mr. Wallace's hands and those members are growing resentful toward proposals delegating more authority to him.

The recent house-cleaning which resulted in elimination of certain of the brain trusters in the Department of Agriculture and its stepchild, the AAA, had a wholesome effect on relationship between the Department of Agriculture and congress as a whole, yet in some quarters it appears, the house-cleaning did not remove all of the stigma with which oppositionists have stained the administration's farm policies.

With reference to the house-cleaning, it should be said just here that another move is in the making. Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the present undersecretary of agriculture, is slated to be dehorned insofar as farm recovery policies are concerned. When President Roosevelt gets his hands on the five billion voted in the public works relief bill, Professor Tugwell will be given charge of something like nine hundred millions to spend in a way that is variously described as "scientific." His job will be to sort out lands that are productive from those that are mediocre or without value at all in agriculture and to find uses for those which should not be used as farm lands.

I believe it is not too much to say that conditions in the NRA and AAA have added to the "honeymoon" general uncertainty concerning the political and economic outlook of the administration. In this connection it should be mentioned that the Republicans are showing signs of life. For instance, Republican Leader Snell took a shot at President Roosevelt the other day that indicates a forthcoming deluge of criticism of him personally for the first time since he entered the White House.

The volume of mail being received on Capitol Hill tells its story as well. Members of the house and senate are beginning to inquire of each other what their political course should be in view of the type of inquiries that are now being received.

Through many months, the personal charm of the President has seemed to prevent expressions of a critical nature and certainly has held off complaints from the business section of the country. Certainly those who have money invested were not being told about future plans. It seems now, however, that the "honeymoon" for which Mr. Roosevelt asked has ended and that henceforth it will be a battle of realities.

The most direct attack upon the President and upon the New Deal came from Representative James Wadsworth, a New York Republican. Mr. Wadsworth stressed uncertainty. In fact, he called it one of the three or four major "evils" of the administration.

UPHOLDS RIGHTS OF LITTLE ONES TO FOOD CHOICE

Despite the almost perfect set of formulas worked out for infant feeding by the medical profession, a writer in the Parents Magazine calls our attention to the strange spectacle of babies starving in the midst of plenty. She believes an over-anxious mother is usually at fault when a child goes on a hunger strike, and she urges less forcible feeding and more consideration for the young epicure's tastes and natural disinclination to be hurried.

This close observer of quaint infant customs informs us that, unlike the adult, the baby clings to his first loves and often does not take readily to new things. He does not tire of the same food, rather he likes it better day after day. So don't try, at first, to serve baby spinach one day, carrots the next, and tomatoes the day following. Changing flavors is upsetting and annoying to him early in the game of life and may prevent him from liking any one thing well.

"Go slowly with new flavors," advises the writer. "If you discover there really is a food which makes baby shiver and shake and weep when he tastes or smells it, remove it for a time from his diet. Allow him to have a few preferences. Remember, small as he is, he is an individual with his own likes and dislikes."

Are you using 1924 oil in your 1934-35 car?

Plain mineral oils are obsolete! You need a Germ Processed* oil for today's car!

BACK in 1924 most cars had less than 60 horsepower, and any high-quality motor oil could lubricate them properly.

But today's cars range from 80 to 180 horsepower and the average is over 100. With increased power have come like increases in bearing pressure and crankcase temperature. Oil today must do a job undreamed of ten years ago.

Yet motor oils generally have no more oiliness and film strength now than they had 10 years ago. New refining methods have recently come into use to make oils free from carbon and sludge. But the new refining processes have lowered instead of increased film strength and oiliness—the very qualities on which depends an oil's lubricating value!

There is one exception—Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. It, too, is free from carbon and sludge troubles. But more important, Timken Machine tests prove that the new Germ Process* puts into this oil 2 to 4 times the film strength of any straight mineral oil!

That extra film strength enables Germ Processed Oil to stay on the job and prevent wear under the most extreme pressures and heat. It helps Germ Processed Oil give long mileage, as proved by the famous Indianapolis Destruction Test.

Plain mineral oils were all right ten years ago—today they are becoming obsolete. Say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—custom-made for today's cars!

Surrender of Corn Wallace

Secretary Wallace has lifted all restrictions on spring wheat acreage. His action is a confession and a surrender. It says, more forcefully than words can say it, that limitation of production, that creation of artificial scarcities which is the cardinal economic policy of the administration, is a reckless and unscrupulous gamble with the public welfare as the stake.

Unfortunately, Corn Wallace's surrender is not a complete one. He is afraid to go ahead with his wheat restrictions, but he will continue to play for the same stakes in cotton, corn, hogs and whatever other products he can get his fingers on. Less to eat and less to wear and materially higher prices for food and clothing are his objectives. He hopes that he will not create shortages so severe that starvation will result. What he is aiming at is hunger in moderation, just a little pinching of the bellies of the poor.

He pictures himself a kindly man and frequently quotes from Scripture. He hopes, perhaps he even prays, that the droughts will not be too severe and the parasites too numerous. But always he pares down the planted acreage toward the danger mark. The winter wheat acreage, from which the larger part of America's bread comes, is so pared today and nothing can be done about it at this late hour. Nature has not smiled on the Wallace gamble and he is now trying to minimize the losses by lifting restrictions on planting in the spring wheat belt. The action he has taken proves, if any proof were needed, the essential recklessness of his program. —Chicago Tribune.

How the NRA Works

The Tiffany Woolen Mill of Webster closed last week with a statement by the president: "I cannot operate this mill successfully under the NRA and am tired of operating it at a loss." About 300 employes are thrown out of work.

The East Webster Mill of the S. Slater Company closed on the same day "because of business conditions," throwing 550 more persons out of work.

Some 1,500 woolen workers in East Douglas, Manchaug, Franklin and Millbury are out on strike demanding more wages.

More wages are much to be desired, along with more profits for the manufacturers. When higher wages cannot be paid because there are no profits, employes who demand higher wages may exercise their right to strike. But it is an unfortunate situation which throws men and women out of employment and on to relief rolls. —Springfield Union.

GOLDEN DAWN

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin sends the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Beiden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment, from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, asleep. Knowing detectives are on her trail, she disappears, and McNamara learns that she has sailed for France.

"Santa Claus has been good to you two, hasn't he? Well, are you high willing to go back to your regular jobs now?"

Flynn threw the money on the chief's desk. "We swore an oath—" he began, but McNamara cut him short.

"So have I!" he reminded Flynn severely.

"We know every move you've made in this case," Flynn shouted.

"And I knew every move you were going to make before you made it."

Angellotti tucked his present in his pocket. "Come on, Flynn," he urged.

"I can't be called off for money," Flynn persisted stubbornly.

Dan McNamara swept the money on his desk into the drawer. "The widows and orphans of the Holcemen's Benevolent and Protective association will be glad to get this. On your way—you and your oath."

Flynn sighed deeply and went out. Fifteen minutes later he came back and said humbly: "Chief, I've changed my mind."

Alas! McNamara was Irish, too. He glanced at the clock. "You're fifteen minutes late, so I'll fine you two hundred and fifty dollars for tardiness and impudence and dilatory and house-breaking."

"I'll get you for this, McNamara!"

"I don't think so. My advice to you, Pat Flynn, would be to quit monkeying with TNT. I've known detective sergeants to be taken for a ride."

"Threatening me, eh?"

"Not at all. I wouldn't harm a hair of your red head—and by the way, red hair in the Irish is a sign that they breed back to the Danes and Swedes. A pure-bred Irishman would know enough to lay off a girl with powerful and implacable friends. All you were after was a hundred and twenty-five dollars—half the state reward for recapturing that girl—and when she sends you double that you're not sport enough to meet her half-way."

"I took an oath," Flynn mumbled.

"You should have taken a phizic."

"Well, I did take an emetic. Chief, I'll never forgive you those tear and stink bombs."

"Well, you shadowed my house and entered it unlawfully."

"Well, I found a hipstick—"

"Belonged to the nurse I had looking after a sick friend of mine," the chief lied glibly.

But Flynn only grinned sarcastically. "I found stained bandages, too."

"Well, the pot can't get nowhere by calling the kettle black," McNamara decided. "Clear out!"

"Give me the money and I'll lay off."

But Dan McNamara shook his head. "I know your kind, Pat. There's no sense wanting good money on you because you won't stay bought. Clear out, I tell you."

So Flynn cleared out, carrying with him infinitely more respect for his chief than he had heretofore entertained. Well, some day he'd collect heavy interest on that two hundred and fifty dollars.

The last patient had left Stephen Burt's office for the day and the ever watchful Lanny had locked the office door.

"Tired, Stovie?" she queried anxiously, as he loaded his pipe.

"No, of course not," he replied absently. "What have I done to be tired?"

"Well, you had another session with that terrible Mrs. Merton."

"She doesn't weary me any more. She merely excites my sympathy. Still sleepless, of course, and still bothered about her poor devil of a husband. She's had detectives on his trail for a month. They've cost her ten dollars a day each and they haven't discovered anything to Merton's discredit."

"It's about time for Mrs. Merton to commence hearing voices of sorts," Lanny commented dryly. "Highball, Stovie?"

"Yes, thank you, Lanny," he said, and deluged Lanny with his sunny smile. "Yes, Mrs. Merton is hearing voices. Her first husband who is dead keeps whispering through spaces to her. He's trying to tell her how sorry he is. I understand he made a dirty will."

"He would—if he had any common sense. What a poor, beaten, derelict Merton! He hasn't the courage of a mouse."

"What can he do, Lanny? His wife is unbalanced, but if he swears out a warrant charging her with insanity, she'll snap out of her lunacy. Mrs. Merton isn't sufficiently insane to be incarcerated. And she's a beautiful woman, well-to-do, respectable. Merton couldn't get to first base on an insanity warrant."

"Then why doesn't he divorce her on grounds of mental cruelty?"

"The man's chivalrous and profoundly sympathetic. Besides, he hasn't any witnesses to prove a charge of mental cruelty. And he can't run away from her, because he has a thriving business he may not abandon. I told her again today not to come to my office any more; that I could do nothing for her; that she was a nuisance—and to try some other doctor. She went out in a rage."

Lanny jumped up. "Now who do you suppose that is knocking? Your office hours are plainly printed on the door."

"Oh, Lanny, don't be so hard-boiled. Let the patient in."

"Who's there?" Lanny shouted angrily.

"Oh! So it's you, is it? I knew you were there," the voice of Dan McNamara boomed.

Lanny unlocked the door. "Lucky for you you're not a nut, Dan. Stovie and I are just pinning one on—"

"I'll join you, if that's the case," McNamara proffered his huge hand, that resembled nothing as much in life as a bunch of bananas. "Howdy, Medico. He planted himself in the visitor's chair."

"You have news of Nance Beiden," Stephen challenged.

"Gobs of it, Doctor."

Lanny entered with a highball. "I had a letter from Nance yesterday, Dan. She's in Paris. Can you beat that?"

"I can," McNamara replied coolly. "She's got an apartment at twenty-seven Rue St. Honore, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives her around in a Citroen car. And she's having her picture painted."

"She's written you, too, then?"

"Divil a line. I have my information from the prefect of police of Paris."

"Dan, you're marvelous!"

"What's more, Lanny, she's living with her normal personality."

"How do you know?"

"She registered as required by law, under her real name of Penelope Gatlin."

"Not a great deal. She said, among other things, that after leaving my house she found two hundred dollars. So she returned it."

"Give me that two hundred, Lanny. Stephen, our little thief is honest."

"As one personality she would remember you gave her two hundred dollars, but as the other she couldn't remember who gave it to her," said Lanny.

"Get over to Paris as quick as you can," McNamara commanded, "or she'll be stealing the Eiffel tower."

"Stephen can't spare me," said Lanny.

"It's got to be," McNamara urged. "Nance fled the town with a letter of credit for ten thousand, but she'll go through that like a weasel through a rat hole. Take a bankroll with you, Lanny, and when you get there take charge of her funds."

"And have her nose done over while you're there," Stephen urged.

"There's a hitch," said Lanny. "The girl evidently got a passport in New York—"

"Not in New York. In San Francisco," McNamara interrupted.

"Well, will a strange photograph on her passport get her back into the United States?"

"She can go to the American consul in Paris, and present proof that she's the same woman with a different nose," Stephen said.

"She'll do nothing of the sort," McNamara was very emphatic. "When her trail is lost it will be lost forever. Lanny, when you have that new nose built for the girl, have half a dozen new passport photographs of her taken, and send them and her passport to me."

"The seal of the United States of America is on the passport and covers a part of the photograph. I know a man that'll make me a seal that would fool the American eagle himself. We'll fit it down over the old seal and stamp the new photograph. Then I'll send it back to you—and may God have mercy on my soul, for you can blackmail me for that the longest day I live," Dan cried.

Naming the U. S. A.

The same United States of America is really an evolutionary product, a name which began to develop as soon as the colonies banded themselves together, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Some of the old local coins refer to the "Unity States of America." The Declaration of Independence asserts "that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states." It also speaks of them as the United States of America. So do the Articles of Confederation and Constitution. The "autarchy" by which the name is used is that of the people, as delegated to the Continental congress and the other bodies which shaped the form of our government.

"This morning," McNamara continued, "the president of the Security Trust company telephoned me that the girl's mother had called him up to ask if Penelope had been cashing any checks lately. The banker gathered that the mother has a notion her daughter's dead. She doesn't like the idea of having to wait seven years to have the girl declared officially dead before she can lay claim to Penelope's estate."

"Did you find out the name of her mother?" Stephen asked.

"Oh, yes. She's married again, you understand. Naturally she didn't get any information out of the banker. He's on to her, and it was none of her business whether Penelope has been cashing checks or not."

"Get the girl's case record, Lanny," Stephen commanded. "What is her mother's name, Chief?"

"Mrs. Rudolph Merton."

"She's a patient of Stovie's?" Lanny yelled. "She's such a nut the squirrels chase her."

Stephen snatched writing and laid down his pen. "I told you, Lanny, that Mrs. Merton wasn't insane enough to be punished."

"Guess I've got Lanny's news beaten,

after all, Stephen. This Mrs. Rudolph Merton is the girl's foster-mother."

"Hooray! Hooray! Hooray!" cried Lanny. "How do you know? Did the banker tell you?"

"No. I dug the information up myself."

"Why? How?"

"Why? I wanted to investigate the girl's fortune. So yesterday I had a copy of the will and a copy of the appraisal of the estate made at the courthouse in San Jose and sent up to me. Gatlin stated in the will that he left all of his estate to his beloved adopted daughter, Penelope Gatlin. At the time of his death his estate was worth practically half a million dollars and has since doubled in value. Nance Beiden is a lost heiress."

"Not wholly lost," Stephen reminded him. "There are times when she remembers who she is and that she has money."

"She doesn't know anything about her mother," Lanny declared. "I asked her, but she could tell me nothing. And she was Penelope Gatlin when I asked her."

"There is a reason for that," Doctor Burt's scientific mind was already racing along this new trail. "Penelope has had a wretched childhood; she knew nothing but unhappiness up to the time she received the shock that threw her mental gears out of mesh. She hated her mother with a terrible hatred. Feared her, probably. Then she made up her mind to forget her mother. And the will to forget was so strong that she succeeded."

"Not only did she forget her mother but her entire past life as well. Well, she ran away, and she'll never find her way back until she acquires sufficient courage to face the old issues again, surmount them and defeat them."

"But is that possible?" McNamara asked.

"Quite. She will have to have assistance and the sort of treatment I think I can give her, and she must have assurance that never again will she be subjected to the old unhappiness. By the way, I wonder if Penelope was a love child. Have you looked up her parentage, Dan?"

"I haven't. Can't you ask Mrs. Merton about the girl?"

"I suppose I could. But if lunacy ran in the family of her father or mother, I'm not going to bother with Penelope."

"If you decide to take her on, we'll have to get her back into this city," McNamara mourned, "and Flynn will pick her up."

"We'll fix her nose first," Lanny said. McNamara beamed upon her. "Her criminal photographs and Bertillon measurements are gone to glory, Lanny. What did Penelope say in her letter?"

"Not a great deal. She said, among other things, that after leaving my house she found two hundred dollars. So she returned it."

"Give me that two hundred, Lanny. Stephen, our little thief is honest."

Red Clover Crop to Make Comeback

Plant Breeders Developing New Possibilities for Improvement.

By Dr. C. M. Woodworth, Chief in Plant Genetics, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

What was once the principal and about the only legume crop in Illinois may be headed for a comeback as a result of new experiments being conducted by plant breeders of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Red clover is the crop. The plant breeders are uncovering new possibilities for improving it so that it can withstand the hazards which have slowly been killing it out.

Illinois was once one of the greatest states in the production of red clover, but plant diseases, insects and adverse weather have cut production so severely that the state hardly ever has enough seed to meet its own needs. Red clover failures also have brought on feed shortages with subsequent losses to dairymen and stockmen.

Preliminary work by plant breeders has revealed that there are extreme differences among red clover plants in characters that are important from the standpoint of successful production of the crop. Hardly any two plants have been found to be alike. Also the difficulties in red clover-improvement work have been more clearly recognized. However, it is believed that plants can be selected and new strains built up that will be superior and useful in overcoming present hazards.

In the past plant breeders have avoided the red clover crop because it is so hard to propagate under conditions of controlled pollination. The plants are almost entirely self-sterile, insects being depended upon for pollination under field conditions. Hand pollination can be done on a small scale, however.

Evidence of neglect of this crop by plant breeders is seen in the few distinct strains now existing. Red clover seed is a conglomerate mixture as to color and will produce all types of plants. When the plants are spaced so that their distinguishing characters can be observed, they are seen to differ in leaf markings, flower color, growth habits, winter hardiness, resistance to disease and persistency.

Moldiness throughout the silage, he said, comes from poor packing. Finer cutting, packing, and adding water are ways to remedy the situation another year. Moldy silage at the surface occurs when air seeps in. If silage is removed fast enough, the mold will not have time to develop. If it cannot be removed fast enough, it may be covered with matched boards or with canvas pressed closely to the silage to exclude air.

He said that hot silage is traced to normal fermentation which produces heat, or to the growth of mold which also produces heat. In neither instance does the heat itself do any harm.

The freezing of silage does no harm other than interference in the removal of silage from the silo, Professor Van Alstine pointed out, and added that an insulated silo avoids this difficulty.

Asserts Poor Packing Is Cause for Mold in Silos

Moldy silage may occur around the sides of a silo where the silo is not tight, and the only remedy is to use a tight silo, says Prof. E. Van Alstine of the department of agronomy at Cornell.

Moldiness throughout the silage, he said, comes from poor packing. Finer cutting, packing, and adding water are ways to remedy the situation another year. Moldy silage at the surface occurs when air seeps in. If silage is removed fast enough, the mold will not have time to develop. ## Heart-Girth and Weight

Every dairyman who has his cows tested regularly—and that should include all dairymen who are in the business for a living—should know the weight of each cow under test. For farms with wagon scales, this is easy. But other dairymen may use the method of estimating the weight according to the heart-girth—a well-established and sufficiently reliable system. The bureau of dairy industry has recently completed a new table of weights, based on American-type Holsteins and Jerseys. By this table and a good tape-line you can come within a few pounds of the true weight of any cow, from a piece of 50 inches girth weighing 304 pounds to a monster of 92 inches weighing 1,074.—Farm Journal.

Locusts for Reforestation

Locust trees have been a satisfactory species for reforestation on abandoned coal strippling land in eastern Ohio, reports the county agent in Mingo county. He has under supervision nine farm school demonstrations, several years old where pine and locusts have been planted. These trees have crowded out weeds and briars and are now taking on the appearance of a real forest. Some 4-H club members in the county have taken forestry projects. While a number of farmers set out trees in 1934, the season was too dry for most of them to survive.—Ohio Farmer.

Choose Compact, Beefy Cows

In selecting cows for baby beef production, the compact, beefy sort is preferable. It is important that the cows show evidence of being good milkers, says Wallace's Farmer. A good milking dam will produce, as a rule, the best and growthiest calf. It is well to keep in mind that there is no real substitute for milk as food for a growing calf. A cow that is a liberal producer of milk is sometimes worth two of the kind that fails to milk in sufficient quantity to properly raise her calf.

Just a Little Smile

HARD BOILED

The new maid was no "find" as far as intelligence was concerned. Her mistress was finding the task of training her somewhat arduous. At breakfast she showed her an egg-timing glass.

"This runs for three and a half minutes, Bridget," she said. "You can boil the master's eggs with it."

Five minutes later the maid came into the dining room.

Call for Man-Tailored Jacket Suit

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fit yourself out with a neat, trim man-tailored suit to which give "class" with accessories that are eye-filling and chic down to the minutest item, then—on with the Easter style parade!

It is not that the strictly man-tailored short-jacket suit is the only type sponsored by leaders in fashion for the new season. On the contrary, suit-buying is a bewildering problem these days. The range takes in every known species from the softly styled bolero, cape-sleeve jacket, also with a-cape sort, to the tailored one-piece-dress variety which, when topped with its inevitable jacket, is so styled as to look the part of a jacket-and-skirt talleur. Then, too, the swagger-coat suits are as smart as the smartest. In fact any costume is in fashion this season just so it's a suit.

However, there comes the crucial moment in the life of every fashion-following woman when she must arrive at a definite decision as to "what to buy" in way of a new spring outfit. Reducing generalities as to style trends in the suit realm to a concrete unit we are inclined to believe that the advice offered in the first paragraph of this discourse on suits is as about as safe and sane and style-promising as any we can suggest. We assure you that there is a decided fair among the best-dressed women for the strictly man-tailored jacket and skirt versions; two pleasing exponents of which we present in the illustration herewith.

There is no need to dwell upon the satisfactions the whole season through that one gets out of a neat dated-up-to-the-moment suit such as pictured to the left. A classic type such as this is the very foundation of a successful wardrobe. No matter how many frills and furbelows and sweetly feminine pretty-pretty clothes one may possess, when it comes to "something to wear" which will prove equal to every daytime occasion, there is nothing which can take the place of a good-looking suit, as is this model. It is tailored of slate blue men's suiting with a white overcheck. The jacket has that easy-at-the-waist look which is indicative of the newest allhouette. The blouse is white challis printed in red and black dots with an ascot scarf neckline.

The companion suit to the right accents the vogue for contrast. Also it is a smartly feminized interpretation of a masculine fashion in that the black broadcloth of a man's dinner jacket is combined with the striped fabric of formal trousers. Under this ultra chic brain-trimmed jacket, milady wears a very dainty balliste blouse which has a jabot and collar with fine val lace-encrusted edge.

The beauty of a strictly tailored suit is that miracles can be worked in its appearance by varying the accessories worn with it. For example, fancy how stunning the double-breast talleur will look when its owner tops it with one of the stunning new natural chamols hats, tying a stitched scarf of the identical chamols about her throat, carrying a chamols hand-bag and wearing gloves of matching chamols. A navy blue gallor of the new rough spun-glass straw, with navy blue footweir and other accessory items would likewise prove a pleasing diversion.

SPRING SUITS ARE OF RABBIT WOOL

Fifth avenue shops already are showing rabbit wool suits for spring in soft pastels. The favorite style consists of a one-piece dress on shirtwaist lines, with a loose hip-length jacket in a deeper tone of the same color. The frock is tailored to the last notch, has short sleeves, a monogrammed ascot of self-material, a saddle-leather belt and a kick pleat in the skirt.

The jacket, in a darker tone, is loose and casual, and may be worn admirably with springtime prints or sweaters and skirts.

The new spring weight rabbit wools come in soft, silky shadow checks and stripes, diagonal and otherwise, are soft as the proverbial kitten's ear and as light as a spring zephyr.

There's a putty-color that is grand in combination with a dark brown jacket, felt crusher hat, brown leather belt and brown accessories.

Three-Piece Ensembles to Be More and More Popular

Three-piece ensembles continue to be more and more popular. As a change from the winter woolen or fur coat with one-piece dress, there are novel ensembles for all hours of the day, composed either of a full jersey or woaden dress with cape to match, sometimes with an additional sort of waist-coat or cardigan jacket, of three-quarter or rather seven-eighths coat in the same material as the dress underneath, or matching its trimming; also of very smart afternoon velvet coats trimmed with fur and shorter than the dress in the same velvet, completed by a-lame or rayon chenille tunic.

Rug Into Coat
Cashmere rugs used for sports clothes are a novel idea for spring. The soft silky rugs, resembling camel's hair, are used in tones of beige and brown to fashion loose three-quarter length coats and trim suits.

PEACH-BASKET HAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If anyone asks you to describe the new peach-basket hat just tell them it has a crown which narrows at the top and a brim which slopes to the edge. An inverted peach-basket inspired this new shape which is quite the topic of conversation among milliners here and abroad. The model pictured has one of the very narrow brims although some peach-basket chapeaux widen their brims into picturesque and fluttering mushroom effects. Belting ribbon and a stiffened mesh veil trim the navy blue millan straw peach-basket hat here shown. Many of the wider brimmed models are made of stitched fabric, either crepe or taffeta and some few navy or black satin models are to be seen.

Scarf the Thing
The scarf is among the indispensable of this season's wardrobe. Plain materials and plaids, every shape and size, are augmented sequin and ostrich feather scarves.

Suits for Spring
Fashion says "Suits for spring with a capital S." Jacket suits, cape suits, topcoat suits—all are in favor.

Lesson for April 28
THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 3:14-17; Psalm 19:7-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—O how love I thy law! It is my meditation all the day.—Psalm 119:97.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Book God Gave Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Book God Gave Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Use the Bible.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Inspiration and Authority of the Bible.

I. The Origin or Source (II Tim. 3:10).

They are inspired of God, which literally means "God-breathed." Peter says "Holy men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Ghost" (II Pet. 1:21). When Paul declares the Scriptures to be God-breathed, he means that the utterances resulted from God's breath in men's mouths. Because they are God-breathed they are the veritable words of God. The holy Scriptures not only contain the word of God, but they are in verity the message of God to men.

II. The Value of the Scriptures (II Tim. 3:14-17).

1. Able to make wise unto salvation (v. 15). Salvation is alone in Christ. It is obtained through faith in his finished work on the cross.

2. Disciplines the life (v. 16, 17). It is profitable for doctrine, which is the divine standard-of-conduct—in the Holy Bible, alone is to be found this standard of life. Not only is it the standard of life, but of all thought. Then, too, it reproves, that is, confutes error. The way to deal with error is not denunciation, but the positive presentation of the revealed truth. It also corrects, that is, sets straight many of the dislocations of personal and social conduct. The Word of God is the standard of measurement which sets straight the lives of moral beings. Further, it instructs in righteousness, and thoroughly equips the minister for Christian service. The mastery of God's holy Word is the indispensable equipment for Christian service. One who lacks this knowledge of the holy Scriptures is utterly unfit for the Christian ministry, no matter how well trained he may be in other things.

III. The Nature and Effect of God's Law (Ps. 19:7-11).

1. It is perfect. It is without a flaw. It converts and restores the soul: it turns man back to God himself to lead a life of holiness. It not only converts sinners, but restores the saints to divine fellowship.

2. It is sure. It is absolutely dependable. Man's reasonings change, but God's Word endures forever. God cannot lie. It makes wise the simple. Common men and women as to natural gifts become wise even in the rightful things of the world, because of their mastery of the Word of God.

3. It is right. The precepts and judgments of the Lord are expressions of absolute righteousness because they proceed from the righteous God and are, therefore, inherently right.

4. It is pure. There is no admixture of error. There is no compromise with that which is untrue. Because of this, it enlightens the eyes. All that mars the spiritual vision is taken away. Conduct for the Christian is clearly defined.

5. It is clean. This is seen in the effects of the Word of God upon the life. The individual who is sanctified by it is clean within and without.

6. It is true and righteous. The decisions of God's Word are true without exception. The judgments of God's Word are unimpeachable. Because of these qualities, God's Word is more to be desired than the choicest of gold. Obedience thereto brings great reward.

IV. The Prayer of the Believer (Ps. 19:12-14).

The life brought face to face with God's Word is seen as sinful. The soul cries out for

1. Cleansing (v. 12). The perfect law reveals the imperfections of the life. The Word of God reveals sins of which the individual may be ignorant.

2. To be kept from presumptuous sins. Presumptuous sins are peculiarly dangerous. In the Mosiac economy no sacrifice was provided for such sins.

3. Freedom from the dominion of such sins (v. 13). How awful is the slavery of those who are in bondage to presumptuous sins.

4. That the words of the mouth and the meditations of the heart be kept in line with God's Word (v. 14). From many dangers the believer would be saved if the words and meditations of his heart were kept in line with the Scriptures.

MEDITATIONS

Does it strike you that the mischeif of our life is really our constant fretfulness?

Christ would not be diverted from the main issues of life and destiny. He observed a strict economy in his resources.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero, who says, there is not only an art, but even an eloquence in it.—Hannah More.

APPALLING THOUGHT

Father—Why keep worrying about the children?
Wife—I can't help it.
Father—But, my dear, you are hurting your bridge game.

"No more tired, let-down feeling for me"

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscles strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

It is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you... and will unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily?"

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone... if your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerve... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today.

GOLDEN DAWN

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin splits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment, from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, asleep. Knowing detectives are on her trail, she disappears, and McNamara learns that she has sailed for France.

"Santa Claus has been good to you two, hasn't he? Well, are you both willing to go back to your regular jobs now?"

Flynn threw the money on the chief's desk. "We swore an oath—" he began, but McNamara cut him short. "So have I!" he reminded Flynn severely.

"We know every move you've made in this case," Flynn shouted.

"And I knew every move you were going to make before you made it." Angellotti tucked his present in his pocket. "Come on, Flynn," he urged. "I can't be called off for money," Flynn persisted stubbornly.

Dan McNamara swept the money on his desk into the drawer. "The widows and orphans of the Policemen's Benevolent and Protective association will be glad to get this. On your way—you and your oath."

Flynn sighed deeply and went out. Fifteen minutes later he came back and said humbly: "Chief, I've changed my mind."

Alas! McNamara was Irish, too. He glanced at the clock. "You're fifteen minutes late, so I'll fine you two hundred and fifty dollars for tardiness and impudence and dilatory, and house-breaking."

"I'll get you for this, McNamara!" "I don't think so. My advice to you, Pat Flynn, would be to quit monkeying with TNT. I've known detective-sergeants to be taken for a ride."

"Threatening me, eh?" "Not at all. I wouldn't harm a hair of your red head—and by the way, red hair in the Irish is a sign that they breed back to the Danes and Swedes. A pure-bred Irishman would know enough to lay off a girl with powerful and implacable friends. All you were after was a hundred and twenty-five dollars—half the state reward for recapturing that girl—and when she sends you double that you're not sport enough to meet her half-way."

"I took an oath," Flynn mumbled. "You should have taken a phizic."

"Well, I did take an emetic. Chief I'll never forgive you those tear and stink bombs."

"Well, you shadowed my house and entered it unlawfully."

"Well, I found a lipstick—"

"Belonged to the nurse I had looking after a sick friend of mine," the chief lied glibly.

But Flynn only grinned ferociously. "I found stained bandages, too."

"Well, the pot can't get nowhere by calling the kettle black," McNamara decided. "Clear out!"

"Give me the money and I'll lay off."

But Dan McNamara shook his head. "I know your kind, Pat. There's no sense wanting good money on you because you won't stay bought. Clear out, I tell you."

So Flynn cleared out, carrying with him infinitely more respect for his chief than he had heretofore entertained. Well, some day he'd collect heavy interest on that two hundred and fifty dollars.

The last patient had left Stephen Burt's office for the day and the ever watchful Lanny had locked the office door.

"Tired, Stevie?" she queried anxiously, as he loaded his pipe.

"No, of course not," he replied absently. "What have I done to be tired?"

"Well, you had another session with that terrible Mrs. Merton."

"She doesn't weary me any more. She merely excites my sympathy. Still sleepless, of course, and still bothered about her poor devil of a husband. She had detectives on his trail for a month. They've cost her ten dollars a day each and they haven't discovered anything to Merton's discredit."

"It's about time for Mrs. Merton to commence hearing voices of sorts," Lanny commented dryly. "Highball, Stevie!"

"Yes, thank you, Lanny," he said, and deluged Lanny with his sunny smile. "Yes, Mrs. Merton is hearing voices. Her first husband who is dead keeps whispering through space to her. She's trying to tell her how sorry he is. I understand he made a dirty will."

"What can he do, Lanny? His wife is unbalanced, but if he swears out a warrant charging her with insanity, she'll snap out of her lunacy. Mrs. Merton isn't sufficiently insane to be incarcerated. And she's a beautiful woman, well-to-do, respectable. Merton couldn't get to first base on an insanity warrant."

"Then why doesn't he divorce her on grounds of mental cruelty?"

"The man's chivalrous and profoundly sympathetic. Besides, he hasn't any witnesses to prove a charge of mental cruelty. And he can't run away from her, because he has a thriving business he may not abandon. I told her again today not to come to my office any more; that I could do nothing for her; that she was a nuisance—and to try some other doctor. She went out in a rage."

Lanny jumped up. "Now who do you suppose that is knocking? Your office hours are plainly printed on the door."

"Oh, Lanny! don't be so hard-boiled. Let the patient in."

"Who's there?" Lanny shouted angrily.

"Oh! So it's you, is it? I knew you were there," the voice of Dan McNamara boomed.

Lanny unlocked the door. "Lucky for you you're not a nut, Dan. Steve and I are just planning one on."

"I'll join you, if that's the case," McNamara proffered his huge hand, that resembled nothing so much in life as a bunch of bananas. "Howdy, medico." He planted himself in the visitors' chair.

"You have news of Nance Belden," Stephen challenged.

"Gobs of it, Doctor."

Lanny entered with a highball. "I had a letter from Nance yesterday, Dan. She's in Paris. Can you beat that?"

"I can," McNamara replied coolly. "She's got an apartment at twenty-seven Rue St. Honoré, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives her around in a Citroën car. And she's having her picture painted."

"She's written you, too, then?"

"Divil a line, I have my information from the prefect of police of Paris."

"Dan, you're marvelous!"

"What's more, Lanny, she's living with her normal personality."

"How do you know?"

"She registered as required by law, under her real name of Penelope Gatlin."

"Get Over to Paris as Quick as You Can," McNamara Commanded.

Lin. I've known her name since the day after her escape from San Quentin."

McNamara proceeded to relate the tale he had previously related to Stephen, who had neglected to retail it to Lanny. "Well, if this isn't a h— of a tale, Dan!" she said.

"Does it heat your nose, Lanny?"

"Beats it by a mile, although while she was at my house she told me as much about herself as she could remember."

after all, Stephen. This Mrs. Rudolph Merton is the girl's foster-mother."

"Hooray! Hooray! Hooray!" cried Lanny. "How do you know? Did the banker tell you?"

"No, I dug the information up myself."

"Why? How?"

"Why? I wanted to investigate the girl's fortune. So yesterday I had a copy of the will and a copy of the appraisal of the estate made at the courthouse in San Jose and sent up to me. Gatlin stated in the will that he left all of his estate to his beloved adopted daughter, Penelope Gatlin. At the time of his death his estate was worth practically half a million dollars and has since doubled in value. Nance Belden is a lost heiress."

"Not wholly lost," Stephen reminded him. "There are times when she remembers who she is and that she has money."

"She doesn't know anything about her mother," Lanny declared. "I asked her, but she could tell me nothing. And she was Penelope Gatlin when I asked her."

"There is a reason for that." Doctor Burt's scientific mind was already racing along this new trail. "Penelope has had a wretched childhood; she knew nothing but unhappiness up to the time she received the shock that threw her mental gears out of mesh. She hated her mother with a terrible hatred. Feared her, probably. Then she made up her mind to forget her mother. And the will to forget was so strong that she succeeded."

"Not only did she forget her mother, but her entire past life as well. Well, she ran away, and she'll never find her way back until she acquires sufficient courage to face the old issues—again, surmount them and defeat them."

"But is that possible?" McNamara asked.

"Quite. She will have to have assistance and the sort of treatment I think I can give her, and she must have assurance that never again will she be subjected to the old unhappiness. By the way, I wonder if Penelope was a love child. Have you looked up her parentage, Dan?"

"I haven't. Can't you ask Mrs. Merton about the girl?"

"I suppose I could. But if lunacy ran in the family of her father or mother, I'm not going to bother with Penelope."

"If you decide to take her on, we'll have to get her back into this city," McNamara mourned, "and Flynn will pick her up."

"We'll fix her nose first," Lanny said. McNamara beamed upon her. "Her criminal photographs and Bertillon measurements are gone to glory, Lanny. What did Penelope say in her letter?"

"Not a great deal. She said, among other things, that after leaving my house she found two hundred dollars. So she returned it."

"Give me that two hundred, Lanny. Stephen, our little thief is honest."

"As one personality she would remember you gave her two hundred dollars, but as the other she couldn't remember who gave it to her," said Lanny.

"Get over to Paris as quick as you can," McNamara commanded, "or she'll be stealing the Eiffel tower."

"Stephen can't spare me," said Lanny.

"Stephen can spare you," he decided. "It's got to be," McNamara urged. "Nance fled the town with a letter of credit for ten thousand, but she'll go through that like a wasp through a rat hole. Take a bankroll with you, Lanny, and when you get there take charge of her funds."

"And have her nose done over while you're there," Stephen urged.

"There's a hitch," said Lanny. "The girl evidently got a passport in New York."

"Not in New York. In San Francisco," McNamara interrupted.

"Well, with a strange photograph on her passport get her back into the United States?"

"She can go to the American consul in Paris, and present proof that she's the same woman with a different nose," Stephen said.

"She'll do nothing of the sort," McNamara was very emphatic. "When her trail is lost it will be lost forever. Lanny, when you have that nose done for the girl, have half a dozen new passport photographs of her taken, and send them and her passport to me. The seal of the United States of America is on the passport and covers a part of the photograph. I know a man that'll make me a seal that would fool the American eagle himself. Well, if it does over the old seal and stamp the new photograph. Then I'll send it back to you—and may God have mercy on my soul, for you can blackmail me for that the longest day I live." Dan cried. TO BE CONTINUED.

Naming the U. S. A. The name United States of America is really an evolutionary product, a name which began to develop as soon as the colonies banded themselves together, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Some of the old local coins refer to the "United States of America." The Declaration of Independence asserts "that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states." It also speaks of them as the United States of America. So do the Articles of Confederation and Constitution. The "independence" by which the name is used is that of the people, as delegates to the Continental congress and the other bodies which shaped the form of our government.

Red Clover Crop to Make Comeback

Plant Breeders Developing New Possibilities for Improvement.

By Dr. C. M. Woodworth, Chief in Plant Genetics, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

What was once the principal and about the only legume crop in Illinois may be headed for a comeback as a result of new experiments being conducted by plant breeders of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Red clover is the crop. The plant breeders are uncovering new possibilities for improving it so that it can withstand the hazards which have slowly been killing it out.

Illinois was once one of the greatest states in the production of red clover, but plant diseases, insects and adverse weather have cut production so severely that the state hardly ever has even enough seed to meet its own needs. Red clover failures also have brought on feed shortages with subsequent losses to dairymen and stockmen.

Preliminary work by plant breeders has revealed that there are extreme differences among red clover plants in characters that are important from the standpoint of successful production of the crop. Hardly any two plants have been found to be alike. Also the difficulties in red clover improvement work have been more clearly recognized. However, it is believed that plants can be selected and new strains built up that will be superior and useful in overcoming present hazards.

In the past plant breeders have avoided the red clover crop because it is so hard to propagate under conditions of controlled pollination. The plants are almost entirely self-sterile, insects being depended upon for pollination under field conditions. Hand pollination can be done on a small scale, however.

Evidence of neglect of this crop by plant breeders is seen in the few distinct strains now existing. Red clover seed is a conglomerate mixture as to color and will produce all types of plants. When the plants are spaced so that their distinguishing characters can be observed, they are seen to differ in leaf markings, flower color, growth habits, winter hardiness, resistance to disease and perianth.

Asserts Poor Packing Is Cause for Mold in Silos

Moldy silage may occur around the sides of a silo where the silo is not tight, and the only remedy is to use a tight silo, says Prof. E. Van Alstine of the department of agronomy at Cornell.

Moldiness throughout the silage, he said, comes from poor packing. Finer cutting, packing, and adding water are ways to remedy the situation another year. Moldy silage at the surface occurs when air seeps in. If silage is removed fast enough, the mold will not have time to develop. If it cannot be removed fast enough, it may be covered with matched boards or with canvas pressed closely to the silage to exclude air.

He said that hot silage is traced to normal fermentation which produces heat, or to the growth of mold, which also produces heat. In neither instance does the heat itself do any harm. The freeing of silage does no harm other than interference in the removal of silage from the silo. Professor Van Alstine pointed out, and added that an insulated silo avoids this difficulty.

Heart-Girth and Weight

Every dairymen who has his cows tested regularly—and that should include all dairymen who are in the business for a living—should know the weight of each cow under test. For farms with wagon scales, this is easy. But other dairymen may use the method of estimating the weight according to the heart-girth—a well-established and sufficiently reliable system. The bureau of dairy industry has recently completed a new table of weights, based on American-type Holsteins and Jerseys. By this table and a good tape-line you can come within a few pounds of the true weight of any cow, from a heifer of 50 inches girth weighing 854 pounds to a monster of 82 inches weighing 1,975.—Farm Journal.

Locusts for Reforestation

Locust trees have been a satisfactory species for reforestation on abandoned coal stripping land in eastern Ohio, reports the county agent in Muskingum county. He has under supervision nine farms—woodlot demonstrations—several years old where pine and locusts have been planted. These trees have crowded out weeds and briars and are now taking on the appearance of a real forest. Some 4-H club members in the county have taken forestry projects. While a number of farmers set out trees in 1934, the season was too dry for most of them to survive.—Ohio Farmer.

Choose Compact, Beefy Cows

In selecting cows for baby beef production, the compact, beefy sort is preferable. It is important that the cows show evidence of being good milkers, says Wallace Farmer, a good milking man will produce, as a rule, the best and growthiest calf. It is well to keep in mind that there is no real substitute for milk as food for a growing calf. A cow that is a liberal producer of milk is sometimes worth two of the kind that fails to milk in sufficient quantity to properly raise her calf.

Five minutes later the maid came into the dining room.

Call for Man-Tailored Jacket Suit

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Put yourself out with a neat, trim man-tailored suit to which give "class" with accessories that are eye-filling and chic down to the minutest item, then—on with the Easter style parade!

It is not that the strictly man-tailored short-jacket suit is the only type sponsored by leaders in fashion for the new season. On the contrary, suit-making is a bewildering problem these days. The range takes in every known species from the softly styled Bolero, cape-sleeve jacket, also with a-cape sort, to the tailored one-piece-dress variety which, when topped with its inevitable jacket, is so styled as to look the part of a jacket-and-skirt talleur. Then, too, the swagger-coat suits are as smart as the smartest. In fact any costume is in fashion this season just so it's a suit.

However, there comes the crucial moment in the life of every fashion-following woman when she must arrive at a definite decision as to "what to buy" in way of a new spring outfit. Reducing generalities as to style trends in the suit realm to a concrete unit we are inclined to believe that the advice offered in the first paragraph of this discourse on suits is as about as safe and sane and style-promising as any we can suggest. We assure you that there is a decided flair among the best-dressed women for the strictly man-tailored jacket and skirt versions, two pleasing exponents of which we present in the illustration herewith.

There is no need to dwell upon the satisfactions the whole season through, that one gets out of a neat dressed-up-to-the-moment suit such as pictured to the left. A classic type such as this is the very foundation of a successful wardrobe. No matter how many frills and furbelows and sweetly feminine pretty-pretty clothes one may possess, when it comes to "something to wear" which will prove equal to every daytime occasion, there is nothing which can take the place of a good-looking suit, as is this model. It is tailored of slate blue men's suiting with a white overcheck. The jacket has that easy-at-the-waist look which is indicative of the newest silhouette. The blouse is white challis printed in red and black dots with an ascot scarf neckline.

The companion suit to the right accents the vogue for contrast. Also it is a smartly feminized interpretation of a masculine fashion in that the black broadcloth of a man's dinner jacket is combined with the striped fabric of formal trousers. Under this ultra chic brim-trimmed jacket milady wears a very dainty batiste blouse which has a jabot and collar with fine val lace-encrusted edge.

The beauty of a strictly tailored suit is that miracles can be worked in its appearance by varying the accessories worn with it. For example, fancy how stunning the double-breast talleur will look when its owner tops it with one of the stunning new natural chamols hats, tying a attached scarf of the identical chamols about her throat, carrying a chamols handbag and wearing gloves of matching chamols. A navy blue sailor of the new rough spun-glass straw, with navy blue footwear and other accessory items would likewise prove a pleasing diversion.

SPRING SUITS ARE OF RABBIT WOOL

Fifth avenue shops already are showing rabbit wool suits for spring in soft pastels. The favorite style consists of a one-piece dress on shirtwaist lines, with a loose hip-length jacket in a deeper tone of the same color. The frock is tailored to the last notch, has short sleeves, a monogrammed ascot of self-material, a saddle-leather belt and a kick pleat in the skirt.

The jacket, in a darker tone, is loose and casual, and may be worn admirably with springtime prints or sweaters and skirts.

The new spring weight rabbit woolens come in soft, silky shadow checks and stripes, diagonal and otherwise, are soft as the proverbial kitten's ear and as light as a spring zephyr.

There's a putty color that is grand in combination with a dark brown jacket, felt crusher hat, brown leather belt and brown accessories.

Three-Piece Ensembles to Be More and More Popular

Three-piece ensembles continue to be more and more popular. As a change from the winter woollen or fur coat with one-piece dress, there are novel ensembles for all hours of the day, composed either of a full Jersey or woden dress with cape to match, sometimes with an additional sort of waist-coat or cardigan jacket, of three-quarter or rather seven-eighths coat in the same material as the dress underneath, or matching its trimming; also of very smart afternoon suit coats trimmed with fur and shorter than the dress in the same velvet, completed by a tulle or rayon chiffon tunic.

Key Late Coat
Cashmere rugs used for sports clothes are a novel idea for spring. The soft silky rugs, resembling curls of hair, are used in tones of beige and brown to fashion loose three-quarter length coats and trim suits.

Suits for Spring
Fashion says "Suits for spring with a capital S." Jacket suits, cape suits, sport suits—all are in favor.

PEACH-BASKET HAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If anyone asks you to describe the new peach-basket hat just tell them it has a crown which narrows at the top and a brim which slopes to the edge. An inverted-peach-basket inspired this new shape which is quite the topic of conversation among milliners here and abroad. The model pictured has one of the very narrow brims, although some peach-basket chapeaux widen their brims into picturesque and flattering mushroom effects. Bejotting ribbon and a stiffened mesh veil trim the navy blue milan straw peach-basket hat here shown. Many of the wider brimmed models are made of stitched fabric, either crepe or taffeta, and some few navy or black satin models are to be seen.

Scarf the Thing
The scarf is among the indispensable of this season's wardrobe. Plain materials and plaids, every shape and size, are augmented sequin and ostrich feather scarves.

Suits for Spring
Fashion says "Suits for spring with a capital S." Jacket suits, cape suits, sport suits—all are in favor.

Lesson for April 28
THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 3:14-17; Psalm 119:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—O how love I thy law! It is my meditation all the day.—Psalm 119:97.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Book God Gave Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Book God Gave Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Use the Bible.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Inspiration and Authority of the Bible.

I. The Origin or Source (II Tim. 3:10).

They are inspired of God, which literally means "God-breathed." Peter says "Holy men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Ghost" (II Pet. 1:21). When Paul declares the Scriptures to be God-breathed, he means that the utterances resulted from God's breath in men's mouths. Because they are God-breathed they are the veritable words of God. The holy Scriptures not only contain the word of God, but they are in verity the message of God to men.

II. The Value of the Scriptures (II Tim. 3:14-17).

1. Able to make wise unto salvation (v. 15). Salvation is alone in Christ. It is obtained through faith in his finished work on the cross.

2. Disciplines the life (vv. 16, 17). It is profitable for doctrine, which is the divine standard of conduct, in the Holy Bible alone is to be found this standard of life. Not only is it the standard of life, but of all thought. Then, too, it reproves, that is, corrects error. The way to deal with error is not denunciation, but the positive presentation of the revealed truth. It also corrects, that is, sets straight many of the dislocations of personal and social conduct. The Word of God is the standard of measurement which sets straight the lives of moral beings. Further, it instructs in righteousness and thoroughly equips the minister for Christian service. The mastery of God's holy Word is the indispensable equipment for Christian service. One who lacks this knowledge of the holy Scriptures is utterly unfit for the Christian ministry, no matter how well trained he may be in other things.

III. The Nature and Effect of God's Law (Ps. 19:7-11).

1. It is perfect. It is without a flaw. It converts and restores the soul; it turns man back to God himself to lead a life of holiness. It not only converts sinners, but restores the saints to divine fellowship.

2. It is sure. It is absolutely dependable. Man's reasonings change, but God's Word endures forever. God cannot lie. It makes wise the simple. Common men and women us to natural gifts become wise even in the rightful things of the world, because of their mastery of the Word of God.

3. It is right. The precepts and judgments of the Lord are expressions of absolute righteousness because they proceed from the righteous God and are, therefore, inherently right.

4. It is pure. There is no admixture of error. There is no compromise with that which is untrue. Because of this, it enlightens the eyes. All that mars the spiritual vision is taken away. Conduct for the Christian is clearly defined.

5. It is clean. This is seen in the effects of the Word of God upon the life. The individual who is sanctified by it is clean within and without.

6. It is true and righteous. The decisions of God's Word are true without exception. The judgments of God's Word are unimpeachable. Because of these qualities, God's Word is more to be desired than the choicest of gold. Obedience thereto brings great reward.

IV. The Prayer of the Believer (Ps. 19:12-14).

The life brought face to face with God's Word is seen as sinful. The soul cries out for:

1. Cleansing (v. 12). The perfect law reveals the imperfections of the life. The Word of God reveals sins of which the individual may be ignorant.
2. To be kept from presumptuous sins. Presumptuous sins are peculiarly dangerous. In the Mosaic economy no sacrifice was provided for such sins.
3. Freedom from the dominion of such sins (v. 13). How awful is the slavery of those who are in bondage to presumptuous sins.
4. That the words of the mouth and the meditations of the heart be kept in line with God's Word (v. 14). From many dangers the believer would be saved if the words and meditations of his heart were kept in line with the Scriptures!

MEDITATIONS

Does it strike you that the mischief of our life is really our constant fratricide?

Christ would not be diverted from the main issues of life and destiny. He observed a strict economy in his resources.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero, who says, there is not only an art, but even a eloquence in it.—Hannah More.

APPALLING THOUGHT

Father—Why keep worrying about the children?
Wife—I can't help it.
Father—But, my dear, you are hurting your bridge game.

"No more tired, let-down feeling for me"

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscles strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

IT is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you... and will, unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone... if your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $3 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today.
