"Grass Roots" Republicans at Springfield, Ill., take bold stand against the New Dealers. Old-age pensions, payment of the Bonus and other measures of interest to the public at large, set forth in undivided resolutions with the slogan "Back to Constitution of our Fathers," adopted amid glowing enthusiasm.

Senator Huey P. Long talked for twenty-four (24) hours in order to delay the vote of continuing the NRA in spite of the Supreme Court decision. If that vote can be delayed until Sunday, the Blue Eagle is DEAD as a Mackerel.

In making a survey of the cost of the 1934 general elections, the Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico places the actual cost of the same at $46,121.22. This is shown in a tabulated statement of the 17 Counties of the state at a cost per capita of 23c of the population; 44c of registered voters and 60c of actual voters. The per capita of Lincoln County was 60 cents and the total cost of the election was $2,125.00.

Bonnell-Smith

The little stone St. Anne's Chapel at the Bonnell ranch was the scene of a pretty wedding last Sunday afternoon, when Miss Orilla Bonnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Bonnell, became the bride of Adolf Louis Casper of Silver City. This was the first wedding ceremony performed in the new chapel and the same was presided over by the Rev. F. B. Howden, Jr., of the Episcopal Church. The wedding bore more of a significance from the fact that the bride was from one of the oldest families of this section of the state, being the granddaughter of the late Frank B. Coe.

The bride was born and reared in the Ruidoso Canyon. She was a student of the New Mexico University, also of the City University of Oklahoma City, receiving her degree at the University of the state of Oklahoma. After her graduation, she attended the Chicago Art Institute for a period of two years.

The groom is a graduate of the State Teachers' College at Silver City and was principal of a New Mexico school last year. Following a short honeymoon, the couple will be at home in Albuquerque for the summer months.

GOLF TOURNAMENT

The two-day golf tournament closed Sunday with Shorty Hornbuckle of Clovis winning over Ralph Petty, home boy, by 7 to 6 in the finals. In the semi-finals, Hornbuckle beat Wm. Gallacher 4 to 3 and Petty beat Koehane 4 to 3. Petty won the Medalist honors with 33. Four men had tied 33 in the qualifying rounds and in the play-off Petty and Gallacher again tied. White Sands District Election

Over 500 stockmen assembled here Tuesday for the purpose of holding an election for members of the advisory board for the White Sands District which includes the counties of Lincoln, Otero, Dona Ana, Sierra and Socorro. A. D. Molohan, deputy grazing supervisor, opened the meeting and read the Taylor Grazing Act, pausing after each paragraph to explain the particulars and to answer questions.

On reassembling at 2 p. m., those who had qualified as candidates for election on the board had their names put on the blackboard and the voting began and lasted until the close of the polls at 5 o'clock. There were 213 votes cast and those who were elected will form the Advisory Board. The duties of the board will be to settle all disputes and pass on complaints that may arise in the district. Following is the Board complete:

DIAMOND DUST

STANDING OF THE CLUBS

	Won	Lost
White Oaks	7	1
Cobras	4	3

The San Antonio baseball team came across the Jornada flats much reinforced last Sunday afternoon, and turned the tables on the Carrizozo Cobras by a score of 9 to 5. San Antonio scored right from the beginning of the game, but our boys caught up with them in short order and up to the seventh inning, it was a toss up between the two teams. Carrizozo was at a disadvantage when two of the regulars were absent from the line-up, the catcher and shortstop. This compelled Captain Sally Ortiz to maneuver his line-up and in so doing, other spots were weakened. The base umpire gave Carrizozo a little the worst of the deal, when in three or four instances, he called men out who were safe as plain as day. Leandro Vega did a good job in calling the balls and strikes. The team goes to Baca Canyon next Sunday for a return game with the transients.

The White Oaks Miners won from the newly organized Fort Stanton team at Fort Stanton, by a rugged score of 21 to 15. White Oaks now has a string of seven victories against one defeat this season, and next Sunday they will try to add No. 8 to their standing, when they will play at Cedarvale.

The Cobras and the Miners are bidding strongly for the game at Fort Stanton on the 4th of July. Whichever team tops the bid, will have our support and we hope to see a royal battle, for the Stanton boys will have a team on the field, not only of ball players, but real game sports. More power!

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones made a trip to Albuquerque this week and returned, bringing with them Mrs. E. M. Barber, wife of Attorney E. M. Barber, formerly of this place. Mrs. Barber will visit her many Carrizozo friends before her return, which will be the latter part of this or the first of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Queen and baby left this week for Julian, Calif., where Mr. Queen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Queen, are now located. Mr. Queen being connected with a large mining company at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler, Mrs. Selma Degitz and Frank Lesnett were Fort Stanton visitors last Sunday.

End of NRA

It is doubtful if any law ever passed in this country stirred up so much discussion and dissent as the act creating the NRA. Now, a year and a half after its birth, the argument has finally ended—and all the voices which fought about its legality are stilled. The Supreme Court has decided that the NRA violates the Constitution. The decision is unanimous, all nine justices agreeing with the opinion read by Mr. Hughes. Briefly, the court has ruled that Congress exceeded its authority when it delegated the power to promulgate codes of fair competition to the President; that the Federal government lacks the power to regulate hours and wages in transactions affecting interstate commerce; that the NRA is, therefore, invalid.

A newspaper report on the day of the decision says that lawyers close to the Administration believed that the opinion doomed the NRA to complete and permanent extinction; that it would be impossible to redraw the act so as to make it constitutional in the light of the high court's lucidly expressed views. It is possible that elimination of NRA will cause a certain amount of hardship in some industries. But, without criticizing the splendid intentions of those responsible for the act, the court's decision will be of great benefit to the country. It shows that the constitution is not dead—and that constitutional freedom still exists, and cannot be negated by legislative fiat. The NRA tended to set up government as a dictator over all business—and it is not difficult to believe that the founders of the country would be the first to approve of the Supreme Court's historic-making decision.—Industrial News Review.

Prophets of Doom Seen in All Ages

Wrote Pessimistically of the Tendency of Times.

London.—Taking issue with those who see the world as proceeding in a continuous downward direction and with "prophets of doom" in general, a correspondent of the London Times sends to that paper an anthology of pessimism compiled by himself. It commences, he says, with an early Babylonian tablet lamenting the growth of irreligion, of disregard for law and disrespect for parents. It proceeds inexorably through Egyptian papyrus and the inspired lamentations of the Hebrew prophets, through the melancholy forebodings of Greek writers to the ample records of the great Latin authors of the Augustan age. Livy, who died three years after Augustus, observes in the preface to his first book that "to most readers the earliest origins and the period immediately succeeding them will give little pleasure, for they will be in haste to reach these modern times, in which the might of a people which has long been very powerful is working its own undoing."

successive age have spoken of their own times and of the immediate future in terms of almost unrelieved gloom. Claudian alone was optimistic in his prophesies of the future greatness of Rome ("De Cons. Stil.", III, 150): "Tis she alone who has received the conquered into her bosom and like a mother, not an empress, protected the human race with a common name, summoning those whom she has defeated to share her citizenship and drawing together distant races with bonds of affection. . . . There will never be a limit to the empire of Rome." Within five years the jealous Honorius had murdered Stilicho, who alone might have saved Rome from destruction a few months later at the hands of Alaric. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the graffiti of despairing men scratched on the walls of the church tower of Ashorell in Hertfordshire at the time of the Black Death, the passionate outbursts of Piers Plowman, the measured wisdom of Bacon and innumerable passages in Shakespeare, Spenser and Raleigh, culminating in Milton's exuberant prose—all alike show how keenly good men in every age are aware of "how many are the perils through which we have to go."

PROBING THE PAST

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The word "if" has occupied no small place in our thinking during these depression years. We have frequently heard the expression, "If only I had not done this or that—if I had only waited and not been so hasty—if only the crash could have been postponed a year or two I would have been in a better position to meet it." The remorse, created by an endeavor to reconstruct the past, would be entirely eliminated were it possible to erase from our vocabulary that little word "if." How foolish! Introspection is a valuable mental attitude providing we do not let it lead us to self-pity or remorse. A rehearsal of past motives and decisions should lead us to avoid repeating mistakes. Otherwise nothing is gained by probing the past. When rehearsing a past decision we should have vividly in mind the conditions in which that decision was made or act performed. The difficulty with most of us is that we divorce the consideration of these conditions from our thinking when we let that little word "if" dominate our mood. Given the same conditions and the same ex-

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

One of the Latest Styles of Sheets in Which Both Featherstitching and Hemstitching Are Employed.

FINE sheets and pillow cases may be perfectly plain with hems hand stitched, machine or hand hemstitched, or ornamented with embroidery. Color may enter into the ornamentation on white bed linens, or the entire cotton or linen may be tinted. Linen remains the textile pre-eminent for these articles, but the name bed linen has become flexible, signifying, in its broad meaning, both cotton and linen. In cotton sheeting, percale holds the high place. Many homemakers are content with machine-stitched hems, while others consistently cling to hand hem.

Quaint and beautiful stitchery is now put on bed linens, chiefly in the form of fine featherstitching, of a single front each side the main stem, or two or three. The latter makes as wide a line of work as is attractive for the articles. Sometimes the embroidery alone appears on the sheet just above the plain hem. Again the hems are machine or hand hemstitched and then the featherstitching is done by hand or machine above it. The handsomest of these styles of fancy hems has the featherstitching come between a hemstitched hem and another row of hemstitching or of drawn work if the stitchery is done by hand. Drawing Threads. The woman who decides to have ornamental hems of her own work either uses linen sheeting, or expects to devote as much time pulling out threads of cotton sheeting as she takes to do the embroidery. But when the linens are finished, she has handsome sheets and pillow cases whichever textile she uses. The reason why linen can have its threads more rapidly drawn out, is because good flax fibers spin into strong fine strands which remain individual, while cotton, which has shorter fibers differs when spun. It does not keep its separateness under weaving as does linen. Hems can be partly finished by machine and partly by hand, and a pleasing combination of works result. The sheets and pillow cases may be bought with machine hemstitched ends. Then the featherstitching can be done at home. © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Chic Triple Sheer Print's the Thing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The perfect costume for all-around practical daytime wear has arrived! See it pictured herewith. It's the dress with a jacket that is fashioned of the now-so-stylish triple sheer print. The smartest, the neatest, the most sensible and serviceable, the most attractive and best looking are befitting words when it comes to describing these jacket outfits.

There is not the slightest doubt about the wisdom of including one of the new ingeniously designed jacketed costumes in one's spring and summer wardrobe. It will prove an ever faithful standby ready for every daytime occasion. In the illustration we are showing three particularly good-looking models. They are types that women can live in from morning to night and always look well groomed.

These brand new jacket styles are in that famous fabric, triple sheer of bemberg, which is expensive in looks but not in cost. The material is pure dye, cool, washable, or dry-cleans perfectly, if you so prefer. Furthermore, it may be pressed with a hot iron without fear of pulling or slipping at the seams. And, oh, Joy of Joys, it is practically wrinkle proof and resistant to perspiration.

The extremely good-looking jacket suit to the right in the group is the sort that is ready to go places at a moment's notice. White pique spaghetti cordings and fastenings effectively trim the navy-white (other color combinations are available) sheer of bemberg material. Bandings of self-fabric are stitched row-and-row on a net foundation for the sleeves, the same also effectively used in the yoke of the dress. This treatment which has to do with appliques and stitched bandings and folds of the dress print on net backgrounds is one which is being played up by designers throughout current styling.

A flattering jacket costume in a new flower-patterned triple sheer with collar of organdie applique on a foundation of mousseline de sole is pictured to the left. Shirring accents shoulders, sleeves, and pockets. Shirring is very popular just now. It is the fashion to wear flowers, too, which is why this charming young woman has planned a cluster of dainty posies at her throat.

What's more, fashion goes so far as to suggest "sets" of flowers. That is to say, a gardenia on one's hat is matched with a boutonniere of gardenias. More flower power is to be expected, that the floral motif is to be changed to tune in with the mood and the color scheme of the costume. Pin violets on your hat today, wearing matching flowers on your coat lapel or on the bodice of your frock. Perhaps bright field flowers is choice for the day following, or if you would flaunt the favorite flower of the moment, it's the carnation.

As you can see, looking at the costume centered in the picture, a block print in triple sheer of bemberg has a heap o' swank about it. The brief jacket is styled in cape effect, and the yoke of the slim frock alternates narrow stripes of self-material spaced with the net foundation to which they are attached. Her lovely summery chapeau has gone very feminine what with its flowers and ribbons and a big floppy brim.

Modern Handling Makes Milk Safe

Cleanliness Most Important to Keep the Herd Free From Disease.

By J. M. Brannon, Dairy Bacteriologist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service. Adoption of milk ordinances by nearly 600 municipalities of the country during the past ten years is only one of the many marked advances that have been made to raise the sanitary quality of the consumer's milk supply. Milk handled by modern methods is probably among the safest foods on the market.

Just now the problem of dairymen and farmers is to keep down bacterial growth in milk at a time of the year when the weather is getting warmer. This means cooling the milk just as quickly as possible to as low as 50 degrees. Consumers, too, have a responsibility in getting the milk off the doorstep before it warms up to the point where bacteria can start to grow.

Fortunately, pasteurization is becoming more widespread. By this process all the disease germs that are likely to get into milk can be destroyed.

Tuberculosis, the best known of the diseases transmitted from unhealthy cows to man, has been given a setback through tuberculosis eradication campaigns. Illinois and 17 other states are now accredited as having 98 per cent of their dairy cows free from this disease.

A campaign is also now being waged against Bang's disease, which is associated with undulant fever that is transmitted to humans through milk. Still another disease organism against which farmers and dairymen must be on guard is the one which causes mastitis in the cow and septic sore throat and possibly other troubles in humans. Typhoid, scarlet fever and diphtheria are other diseases against which the dairy industry must be constantly on guard.

Some organisms must be fought not because they cause diseases but because they give the milk off-flavors and other disagreeable characteristics.

Clean barns, clean cows and clean utensils coupled with the prompt cooling of milk immediately after it comes from the cows, are the mainstays of the dairy industry in producing a higher quality product.

Oats Leads as Feed for Horses, Says an Expert

Oats are the best grain for the horse; they are light, palatable, and balanced feed, asserts a writer in the Missouri Farmer. Corn is a good grain, but is used to best advantage if it forms only from one-third to one-half of the grain ration of the brood mare. If wheat is fed, it must be given ground or rolled and in small quantities. Barley is a good horse feed; it is more bulky than wheat and more nearly like oats than corn in composition. Barley is often cooked and fed once or twice a week in the evening for its medicinal qualities. In most instances it is preferable to grind or roll barley before feeding. Bran is an almost essential horse feed and acts as a regulator and a preventive of overfeeding. It is bulky and palatable and lightens the ration. Soy beans and cowpeas are relished by horses and serve as a useful addition to the grain feed for mares in foal. They are relatively rich in protein and consequently combine well with corn.

Dry Up Milch Cows

Tests have shown that for the good of the cow and the quantity and quality of the milk it is best to dry up all cows at least six weeks before freshening time, says an authority in Pathfinder Magazine. Unless the cow gives more than two and a half gallons of milk a day or stringiness or off-color of the milk indicate the presence of mastitis the animal can be dried up by simply reducing the grain feed by about three-fourths and ceasing to milk. The other plan is to skip milkings for a week before stopping altogether but the former is easier and just as satisfactory except in cases where the quantity of milk is exceptionally large or where there is evidence of disease.

Rubbing Post for Pigs

Rubbing posts to help pigs rid themselves of mange mites will be much more effective if set on a slant of at least 45 degrees, suggests R. L. Donovan, superintendent of the North Central School and Station at Grand Rapids. Slanting the post enables a pig to scratch under his front legs and along his belly, places he could not reach on a post set straight up. The object of a rubbing post is to get the pigs covered with old crankcase oil which will kill mange mites. Therefore the rubbing post is wrapped with old sacks which are kept soaked with the oil.

Old Bees Die Off

The bees which come through the winter, reared the previous autumn, are old and incapable of much work. As the season opens they go out to collect the early nectar and pollen, and also care for the brood. The amount of brood is at first small, and as the new workers emerge they assist in the brood rearing so that the extent of the brood can be gradually increased until it reaches its maximum about the beginning of the summer. The old bees die off rapidly.

FOODS OF THE 'GOOD OLD DAYS'

No Longer "Regional," but Still Enjoyed.

Any reminder of the good old days when American cookery traditions were being formed is sure to warm our hearts and make the gastric juices run a little swifter but it is safe to assert that we'd have a gastric reaction of a more painful sort if we were actually to return to the daily fare of our ancestors. We do not want to revive the mistakes and the deficiencies of the early American diet, but there can be much pleasure and benefit from renewing our acquaintance with some of the dishes which derived from the early days in this country.

Indian cookery lore has been combined with and modified by the customs and traditions of each separate group of settlers. In Charleston, C. C., the cookery is a very special mixture of French and negro art. Certain of the favorite old-time dishes of the Middle and Far West were evolved during the covered wagon pilgrimages. Thus the beginnings of camp cookery, although much of it was far less healthful than present-day camp food, as the frying pan was the most extensively used implement over those open fires. It is no accident we associate clam bakes and blueberry puddings with Cape Cod, chile con carne with Texas and New Mexico or fish pilans with Charleston, where the rice fields used to stretch in every direction. Now all these regional dishes may be enjoyed at any point of the compass—Little Gay in the Parents' Magazine.

Work Piled on Teachers

Philadelphia high schools have become so crowded because of industrial bores that teachers are doing almost twice as much work. There are not only too many students in one class, but it also is found that teachers must regulate their courses to pupils of different levels of abilities.

Household Hint

If your oven is a very-quick one, it is apt to dry out roasted meat. Place a saucpan, half full of water, in a corner of the oven. The steam from the water will keep the air moist and the meat will be juicy.

GLAMOR OF LACE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace has been shown in beautiful creations at every Paris collection this season. This very choice formal is of salmon pink lace, the full transparent skirt showing the slim, color-matched slip beneath. The wash of velvet ribbon is also in the identical salmon pink. Three strands of graduated pearls, a rhinestone bracelet and a pearl bracelet are the complementing jewelry notes.

PLEATED SKIRTS IN CHIFFON NEW STYLE

The tidal wave that has brought in more width for skirts has also brought in pleats. This type of fuller skirt is available in daytime and evening fashions, although the evening skirt version is being seen more often at present. It is a fashion that may be said to have come out of the emphasis on flouting chiffon skirts, for most of the pleated styles so far are done in chiffon.

There is a particular genre in chiffon and pleats that goes with subburst pleats, entire skirts—and bodices also pleated—very Grecian, and reminiscent of the subburst evening skirts which Mainbocher and Louiseboulanger offered in evening frocks at their openings.

But there are other interpretations of the pleated idea, in front fullness or back fullness, in those concentrated panel godets that are used often for adding width this season.

Coarse Novelty Straws

Take Lead in Millinery It is the way of hats to be anything and everything but ordinary. One of the new lines—it's impossible to designate any one type as the newest—is the hat with a brim which projects forward. Beret types are draped that way.

Coarse novelty straws, some shiny, some rough, are everywhere, but so, too, are Milans. There are any number of stitched taffeta hats and unusual felts.

The long threatened return of trimming has come. Milliners have followed the lead of the couturiers and are trimming with flowers.

Formal Swagger Coat

The formal swagger coat is a pliant newcomer. Done in woolsens that vary from black to palest blue, with full sleeves and soft collars, they flare and swing above the most elegant of afternoon dresses.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

The New Mexico Singers Association will gather at Clovis, June 8-9, for a musical festival. The program will begin at 8 p. m., Saturday and close at 4 p. m. Sunday. In addition to the singers of our state, the singers of west Texas will be represented, and also the different music houses will assist and have representatives at the event.

Rain continues to fall through the central part of Kansas, so much so that trains have been detouring through other states which caused them to be as much as 24 hours behind schedule time. Occasional twisters thru the state have added to the bad conditions. The highways are flooded, crossings and bridges have been swept away. According to men experienced in highway work, it will require nearly a month's labor to get the Kansas roads in proper shape, that means, if the rains stop this week.

The unbiased report of the Brookings Institute covering the late lamented NRA states: "Not only did the program not work out as planned, but the plan itself, was a mistaken one. The NRA on the whole, has retarded recovery," yet so eager was the administration to insure governmental control of American business that the President insists upon the passage of a new NRA measure, which the Newspaper Publishers Association declares, is violative of the fundamental principles upon which this government was founded."

NOTICE

The following has been sent out by the Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico:

It is not required that unpaid taxes for 1933 and prior years should be paid on or before June 15, 1935. The taxpayer has until Dec. 1, 1935 to pay 1933 and prior taxes.

The payment of 1934 taxes on or before June 15, 1935, will enable the State and the various municipalities and school districts to settle unpaid bills before the end of the fiscal year, and will place the various units of government on a sound financial basis.

If the 1934 taxes are paid before June 15, 1935, it will place the taxpayer who owes for previous years in a position to settle the remainder of his delinquent taxes without interest or penalties.

It may be well to note that if the taxpayers fail to take advantage of the provisions of Chapter 123 of the Laws of 1935, property will be sold for taxes on the first Monday in December, according to the provisions of Chapter 27 of the Laws of 1934, Special Session.

TO FOIL BANK CROOKS

NEW YORK—The American Bankers Association Protective Committee has developed a plan of bank inspection to bring out exposure hazards or weak spots in respect to attacks by criminals based on its long-established, nation-wide experience in investigating bank burglaries, holdups and sneak thefts.

The inspection covers eighty leading questions and seventeen recommendations which are instructive in the prevention of such crimes. These relate to such subjects as the use of alarms and other protective equipment, also the condition of windows, doors, skylights and other entrances which have facilitated the early morning entry of bandits who kidnap bank employees from their homes during the night, or break into the bank premises and bind and gag the employees.

BANKERS' HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished homes," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

- a. Stopping soil erosion.
 - b. Planting legumes.
 - c. Raising livestock.
 - d. Developing pastures.
- "Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:
1. Draw up a farm inventory.
 2. Keep a record, daily or weekly.
 3. Budget expenses, and keep within it."

THE VALUE of well-printed, neat-appearing stationery as a means of getting and holding desirable business has been amply demonstrated. Consult us before going elsewhere.

As Stephen hung up the telephone receiver, chuckling, Miss Ordway brought in his mail. In it he found a registered parcel that had been through the custom house, with duty prepaid on it. It contained the finest and most expensive combination stop-watch and time-piece he had ever seen, and a note that read:

"Dear Doctor Burt: I know it would not be an fair for me to ask you for a bill for professional services, for I realize that what you did for me was done as one human being to another and quite without thought of financial remuneration. Moreover, I prefer to remain forever your debtor. You will never know what you have done for me. Christ, restoring life to the dead son of the widow of Nain, performed no greater miracle than did you in restoring life and happiness to my dead soul. I would try to thank you if words were not so pitifully inadequate to express the profundity of my gratitude. Will you not please accept the enclosed trifle as a token of that gratitude, and add one more debt to those already owed you by me?"

"It is not easy to learn to live with my secret, now that I have found it out. I am trying to regard the past as one harks back in memory to a very serious illness. Some days, when I have achieved sufficient courage I am curious about my other self, evolved from darkness. There are blanks in my life. Perhaps you can fill them in. Perhaps you will not care to, knowing that they are better left blank. I do not think, however, that I was ever terribly wicked. If so, I have no recollection of it."

"Your grateful,"

"Old Mother-Nature is speaking to Penelope," he soliloquized, and replaced his father's old watch with the one Penelope had sent him. "Give Nature a chance—give her an even break—and she'll prove herself the greatest physician of all."

After some consideration he wrote, the following to Penelope:

"Come home and let me iron out the few remaining wrinkles so your life will be as smooth as you could wish. The watch is wonderful. Thanks and I think you are very wonderful, too. Love as usual."

"Stephen."

It occurred to him to tuck that last phrase in, for good measure. Love—not merely the love of a man for a woman but the love that is a fine friendship—was, he knew, very necessary to Penelope. She must, he knew, be assured that in all the world somebody really cared. Nobody knew better than he the wreckage that kindness and love denied can make of human lives; never a day passed without leaving him evidence of this.

He was not getting quite his little alloy of life. Money, success, the joy of accomplishment, professional standing, the respect of his colleagues, he had, plus some good friends and true. But he was lonely.

He decided not to write alone. It would be far better to drop in unannounced on Lanny and Dan, take pot luck for dinner.

CHAPTER XII

It was late fall. Stephen had just returned from his vacation; it was his first day back at the office and he was a bit rebellious at the flood of patients that awaited him. He finally got rid of the last one at five-thirty, and following his custom, settled back for a pipeful of tobacco, when Miss Ordway entered:

"There's a young lady calling," she announced. "She says she is Miss Elliott."

"I don't know her, Miss Ordway. A prospective patient?"

"I imagine she is. I didn't ask."

"Tell her it's beyond office hours and suggest that she call during office hours tomorrow."

Miss Ordway departed to deliver the message, but returned presently to say that the young lady begged to be permitted to see him. "Very well," show her in," he acquiesced irritably, "but remember Professor Finnegan if she stays too long."

Miss Elliott entered. Stephen rose and waved her to a chair. Then: "Well, Miss Elliott, what seems to be the trouble?"

"Does my general appearance indicate to you, even remotely, that I am one who requires the services of a neurologist and psychiatrist?" she asked him.

Stephen smiled. "Scarcely. What is it, then? You want a subscription to something?"

"How acute you are, Doctor. I am soliciting subscriptions to a fund designed to furnish expert medical attention to a very deserving public servant."

I refer to Detective Sergeant Patrick Joseph Flynn."

"I know him, Miss Elliott. What's wrong with Flynn?"

"His blood pressure seems to be very high."

"Nothing doing, Miss Elliott," Stephen interrupted. "I admit I sold this terrible Flynn the notion that he had high blood pressure, but I did that for a reason I do not care to explain. The man has the arteries of a boy. What's Flynn to you? And just who might you be?"

"You have my name. What I want to know is this: Are you ashamed to take me out to dinner?"

"No, of course not," Stephen blinked. "I appear eminently respectable?"

"Quite. In fact, a most presentable lady."

"Not so homely, eh?"

"On the contrary. But I shall not go to dinner with you."

"Why?"

"Well while the experience might be delightful, I think you're too pert."

The lovely face drooped sorrowfully. "Oh, Stephen, would you be that mean to poor little Penelope?"

"Good god of love!" Stephen almost yelled. "Are you my little Penelope?"

"Of course I am. Oh, Stephen, you great booby, not to recognize me!"

He came from behind his desk, took her fiercely by the shoulders and gazed down at her, too amazed to speak.

"That's a pretty good second-hand nose, isn't it?" Penelope queried, with just the suspicion of a quaver in her tone. "Don't tell me you disapprove. I adore it myself!"

Very soberly he quoted: "And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me, with buds of roses in your hair, and kisses on your mouth."

"Oh, Stovie!" she whispered. "Take one."

He took three, and Penelope rested contentedly in his arms.

He hugged her fraternally. "My dear, dear girl," he declared, "if I were a praying man I'd get right down on my knees and send up a prayer of gratitude to Omnipotence. You're worth it!"

"Oh, yes, indeed I am," the girl cried with a catch in her voice. "I'm happy—not perfectly happy but—hug me! Oh, Stephen, Stephen, it was so hard not to come back when I received your cablegram. But I had to fight things out and I didn't want to come home until I could meet you bravely. Stephen, are you truly glad to see me again?"

"I am," he answered, and marveled that he should be so glad as he was.

"That way happiness lies. You seem to have the formula," he replied gravely.

The door from Miss Ordway's office opened and the nurse looked in.

"I'm sorry, Doctor Burt, but Professor Finnegan has just telephoned that you are fifteen minutes late to your engagement to meet the great German savant, Herr Doktor Uffitz."

"But I didn't press the button, Miss Ordway."

"I know you didn't, Stovie, dear," Penelope spoke up, "but I did—accidentally."

Miss Ordway blushingly withdrew. "Who is Professor Finnegan, darling?" Penelope wanted to know.

"Just a flimsy person Lanny and I invented to help rid me of nuts that stay too long, sweetheart. You don't have to consider him at all."

"I wouldn't, of course," said Penelope. "I'm queen here, am I not?"

Noah Webster's "Best Seller"

In 1828, Noah Webster published "A Grammatical Institute of the English Language." It was written in three parts: A spelling book, a grammar and a reader, observes a writer in Comopolitan Magazine. Webster's royalty, though less than one cent a volume, still must have been pretty handsome, for the book was the first of the American best sellers. Before the beginning of the Civil War it was selling at the rate of more than a million copies a year. Webster began work on his famous dictionary in 1807; it was published in 1828, and contained 12,000 words, and about 30,000 definitions that had not appeared in any other dictionary.

Snake Spits Poison

The snake which spits poison is the Egyptian spitting cobra. The mechanism of this spitting appears to be that by compression of the poison glands the venom is forced out through the fangs, and at the same time a blast of air is exhaled. This carries the liquid forward as a spray for a considerable distance, and if it strikes a person in the eye, intense irritation is not up which results in temporary and sometimes permanent blindness.

Glucose is derived from corn in commercial practice and is one of the forms assumed by sugar—chemically identical with the sugar in the blood and tissues. It is upon the sugar in the blood that we draw when we do any muscular work.

the same. I wrote you a meticulous account of your illness, so you understand all about that, but what I want you to know now is that no power on earth can ever discover you for the purpose of making you pay the penalty for the misdeeds of Nance Helden. By the way, where did you get that name?"

"I had forgotten who I was and I had to have a name. So I picked that one out of a book."

"The new nose has helped wonderfully, hasn't it?"

She nodded. "I do not want to hide from people now, Stephen."

"You must not. That would be depriving the people of the sight of something very sweet and wonderful."

The eager wistfulness in her eyes thrilled him. "Do you think I'm sweet and wonderful, Stephen? I want you to, most of all."

"My dear, come here," he commanded, "and sit on my knees just as you used to do when you were Nance Helden and a simple child of impulse—when you hadn't the least compunction about making love to me."

Penelope flushed, but nevertheless obeyed. Stephen drew her cheek down to his. "I want to tell you something," he murmured. "The first night I saw you, my heart went out to you. And when Dan told me how it all happened, I had a tremendous admiration for your courage and wit. I love brainy people, Penelope, and you have brains. I knew what was wrong with you and I felt so sorry for you, my poor dear; I wanted to help you more than I ever wanted to help any human being. I understood all about you; you were just a little lost atom crying so pitifully to be saved, to know love and protection and happiness, that you developed into a game, and Lanny and Dan and I just had to play it to the finish."

"Have you thought of me sometimes?"

"Often than I cared to admit to myself. Penelope, I know all about you. In this box on my desk are all the records. Look at them, Penelope dear."

"Then you bothered to find out everything—you cared for me just a little bit?"

"A considerable bit—just how much I didn't realize until now. I want you for my patient always, or as long as we both live."

"What do you mean, Stephen?"

"I'm clumsy, I dare say, but I have more than a suspicion that I've been in love with you—and now that I have you back I'm quite certain I love you enough to want you to marry me. I think my love for you will grow with the years that we are going to spend together."

"And you'll never think back—never be ashamed of me—never regret your course? And are you sure this isn't just play?"

"Pity is akin to love. It started in pity, sweetheart—and it's growing every minute. Fast work, my Penelope, but I'm not afraid to trust my instinct. You're my woman. You love me a little, do you not?"

"Why?" said Penelope soberly. "I've loved you from the day Dan brought me to this office. You were kind to me, and you didn't seem to see my nose. I was so grateful—and ever since I've been waiting out there, somewhere."

She hugged him fiercely. "Oh, Stovie, darling, all the rest of my life I shall devote to you. I'll not be oppressive with my love and I'll not be possessive, but I do want the task of adding to your happiness. I know what happens in I. I can appreciate even a little bit—and I'll never forget to cherish what you gave me and give back all I can."

"That way happiness lies. You seem to have the formula," he replied gravely.

Dental Hygiene

The Road to Health

By DR. R. ALLEN GRIFFITH

DISCOLORED TEETH

TEETH are never pure white. A negro's teeth look white because of the contrast with his dark skin. Most teeth are a blending of yellow and blue. The enamel and dentine are both semi-transparent, the dentine carrying the underlying color, which is more or less yellow.

Discoloration of the teeth is usually due to deposits on the outer surface, to fillings or to drugs to treat teeth. Deposits that form on the outer surfaces of teeth are due to the formation of main plaques which become stained by food, tobacco, etc. This class of stains is due entirely to failure to keep the tooth surfaces clean.

In certain parts of the country, many of the children have badly spotted teeth and discolored enamel. This is due to the mineral content of the water.

Where the enamel is broken or worn away so the dentine is exposed it is very easily discolored. When the front teeth erupt their cutting edges have three serrations which wear away as the teeth are used. This wear increases with age and finally, in many instances, the enamel is worn through. Discoloration then is easy. Many tobacco users' teeth finally become very dark as the stain penetrates through the tiny canals which radiate all through the dentine. Women who smoke will find their front teeth growing disgustingly unsightly as they grow older.

Pitted teeth are also a source of discoloration. Pits in teeth are usually due to childhood diseases, such as measles, scarlet fever, etc. Any illness that interferes with the nutrition for a short period of time may cause pits in the teeth. Yet the teeth are not directly attacked by these diseases, as many people suppose. Dentists are frequently asked if the pits are not produced on the teeth in the same manner as they are produced on the face in chickenpox. This is not true. The pits are a secondary result, due to the fact that all the powers of the system are concentrated on combating the disease and its effects, during the period when the teeth are forming.

Pitted teeth decay rapidly because they afford a lodging place for the fermentation of food. They are usually treated by filling which is necessary after decay starts. Many of these cases can be treated by polishing. The enamel can be polished down until the surface is smooth, which prevents decay, and removes and prevents a return of the discoloration.

CITY VS. COUNTRY TEETH

IT IS a commonly accepted theory that the country boy is healthier than the city boy. With his advantages of outdoor life and exercise, he should be, but many statistics show that he is not. The physical examination of the school children of the United States shows that the country child is from 5 to 20 per cent more defective than the city child.

Take the tuberculosis statistics as a test.

We have been taught that fresh air and outdoor life are the panacea for tuberculosis. We read advertisements everywhere declaring that this, that or the other sanitarium, located in some distant part of the country, offers a sure cure for tuberculosis, largely on account of climatic conditions.

Statistics show that only a fraction of 1 per cent of city children have tuberculosis, in spite of the smoky atmosphere of the city, while 37 per cent of country children have an affection of the lungs. The proportion runs just about four to one against the rural youngsters.

This list could be carried on indefinitely.

What is this condition due to? It can only be due to one thing. The city child gets better medical and dental attention than the country child.

No one can go through our country districts without noticing the dirty, unkempt mouths of most people.

They seldom visit a dentist except to have a tooth extracted.

Bad teeth are acknowledged to have a direct bearing on the health, and teeth without doubt play an important part in the poor showing of the country child.

The army draft in the late war disclosed the fact that the city boy has far better teeth and is more perfect physically than the boy from the rural districts. The city boy has a far better opportunity to come in contact with the dentist and learn to take care of his teeth and keep them in a high state of efficiency. In most of our city schools there is some sort of dental examinations of the children, while only a few states make any attempt to care for the teeth of the children in country schools.

The draft in the late war also showed that a large per cent of the physical defects of our boys are remediable, and they were remedied wherever possible. In this not the best possible argument for military training? Would it not be far better to draft our young men who are out of work now and put them in the army where they would receive proper medical and dental care than to keep them in idleness on a dole?

With a Hand Book on the Rearing of Vegetables, for Reference Purposes, I Prepared the Ground, and Planted Probably a Half a Million Seeds.

Bugs

By James J. Montague

I AM told that some scientists believe that long after man has perished from the earth the insect world will continue to prosper and increase. It really was not necessary for scientists or any one else to tell me that. I have been convinced of it ever since I began to live in a small town and undertook to raise a small garden.

At the beginning it was partly a vegetable garden. I had heard that no vegetables are really good unless fresh from the soil, and that these are little more than second rate unless raised by one's self. So I bought seeds and fertilizers and curious tools and fell to work. With a hand book on the rearing of vegetables, for reference purposes, I prepared the ground, enriched the soil with expensive chemicals the book instructed me to buy, and planted probably a half a million seeds. Then pretty well spent by my exertions, I waited for the fruit of my labors to become ripe for the harvest.

It was then I discovered that the adage to the effect that everything comes to him who waits was invented by some malevolent rascal who had a grudge against his fellow men, and well understood how to satisfy it. I waited. But the bugs didn't. First came the cut worms, which like burglars never go out on their jobs till after nightfall. Then they gather together in schools, and creep over the surface of the ground in parallel columns. Each cut worm, when he arrives at the rising stem of a newly planted vegetable, halts, gnaws a hole half way through it, and then moves on to the next one. He could of course eat all the way through the stem, but it gets a little woody in the middle, and he is careful of his teeth. Eating half a stem is easier, and it kills the plant just as dead, which later, of course, is one of his purposes.

After the cut worms have been destroyed by pursuing each one down to his hole, prying open his jaws and filling them with arsenate of lead, the aphids gather together. The aphids are extremely small bugs, which the ants use for cows, for the tiny things contain juices which are to the ants as nectar and ambrosia. Although some of my fellow gardeners insist that I am wrong, I am certain that the ants, in order that these cattle of theirs shall be good providers, catch them and convey them to the most luscious vegetables and the most fruitful trees. I am sure of this because whenever I clamber up a plum tree to see if the fruit is setting, I find on an average one ant to every 200,000 aphids—this is merely an estimate—and I am sure the ants are acting in the capacity of vaqueros.

You can destroy aphids by spraying them with kerosene, but this has the disadvantage of killing the trees along with the aphids, and when you have cut down a dead tree, and purchased and planted another it is too late to hope for a fruit crop that same year. If any vegetation gets by the cut worms and the aphids, moths of a number of varieties find it out by some secret underground means of communication they have built up through the years and deposit their young, of whom they must be extremely fond, for they leave them where the very choicest vegetables are handy by.

With moth grubs, as with our own race, one man's meat is another man's poison. The currant worms fall ill if they, when aroused from their sleep, gnaw at the privet hedge, so their fathers and mothers make sure that they are tucked into snug little beds on or near the currant bushes. When they waken in the spring they clamor up these bushes, take a firm hold on the undersides of the leaves, and fall to work. By and by the owner of the currant plants observes that the leaves are bulging in places, which means that the grubs are munching their underleaves. There is, however, one excellent way of getting rid of them. That consists of cutting the bushes down, and it is pleasant, when they fall, to observe the little creatures blindly hunting about for more bushes, and not finding them.

You find, after gardening a very short time that Nature, like man is progressive, and is already making extensive use of man's discovery of germs. Time was when huge alone competed for some mysterious prize, which the final crumbling of the universe is to be awarded to the fittest to survive. But lately which germs, observing the ease with which beetles and aphids and other creatures make a living, have decided that a rich field is ripe for the harvest, and have taken to the soil. Our tulips, which once had nothing the matter with them except the results of occasional neglect, have this year been showing signs of premature decay. We called in a tulip doctor who said they had a newly discovered germ disease. The progenitors of this malady are microbes which hide in the soil till they observe that the family is taking pride in the stately slender stemmed blossoms. Then they permit themselves to be carried up in the sap stream to the petals, which they proceed to curl and after the fashion of the frizz papers which our great aunts used to wear before the days of bobs and permanents. Once these germs fall to work there is one thing to do, which is to pull the tulips up by the roots and never attempt to raise any more. If you do you will fill the soil with germs, who possess infinite patience, and then, their appetites keyed up by long waiting, will proceed to do their stuff once more.

After you have learned, as you must, that flowers and vegetables are becoming extinct on the earth, you may decide to provide pleasant surroundings by raising a lawn. While you make this decision, it is conveyed by some mysterious air telegraphy to a growing army of beetles, which, driven out of Asia by overcrowding, stowed away on freight vessels and came East to grow up with the country. Arriving on the Pacific coast, the beetles hitch-hiked across the country till they reached Chicago, and then, wishing one another good luck, spread far wise eastward. Some of them, having an eye for lofty places, proceeded to climb the stately eastern elms, and denude them of verdure, often overnight. But here man was on the alert. It takes a fine elm tree two or three hundred years to grow to important size, and many of them were on the estates of the moneyed class. Spraying machines were bought and put to work and gradually the beetles became discouraged.

But with them came cousins of theirs who fed on grass. These insect Nebuchadnezzars, as soon as they found a stretch of greensward, dug in and left baby grubs about six inches under the soil. When these hatched and looked about them for foliage they decided that the young grass roots were excellent eating, and these they masticated till, lacking roots, the grass ceased to grow any more.

If you have a "brown patch" in your lawn, you will know what is the matter. Some million Asiatic beetles are waxing fat under your sod, and will presently fly forth only to return again and start another grub hatchery.

You can cope with these insects by spreading lead poison on the ground, but not for long. The little rascals are discovering that lead is not particularly hygienic nutriment, and soon the only way to destroy them will be to take out each grass root and throttle the bugs, you find munching on it. That will take a long time, and most people will find it irksome. Time was when I was extremely sorry for Adam and Eve, who had to leave their garden just when it was at its gorgeous best. But perhaps if they had not sacrificed their prospects by misconduct, and had lived as long as some of the Patriarchs who followed them into the world, they would find Eden hardly worth the trouble to protect against bugs.

Modern Mother

JEANNETTE was washing the kitchen window when she saw the roadster turn into the driveway. She ran out quickly and grabbed it up. The roadster had stopped. A young man was alighting. He grinned and called out, "Thanks, but you needn't have bothered."

"I thought I was but it seems that I'm not." George spoke without hesitation. "Oh, I'm sorry," Jeannette said in a tiny voice feeling her heart leap with joy.

Ugly Rumor Spreads. It begins to appear that the farmers' march on Washington may bring a setback on the administration. Certainly, opponents of the administration are not going to let President Roosevelt, Secretary Wallace, and Agricultural Administrator Davis forget very soon their feeling that the march was not of the spontaneous sort.

Deadhead. The actress' small son was sent to Sunday school and returned an hour later with his collection money intact. Mother asked him why he had not put the pennies in the plate.

Ferocity. "How's the war on crime going in Crimston Gulch?" "You couldn't call it a war," said Cactus Joe. "The boys have been mixed in together in such wild stuff that it's something fiercer than a war—it's a family quarrel."

Musical Terms. "What is your favorite air?" "The millionaire."

Carefree Art. "An artist should not have to think about money." "Perhaps you are right," said Mr. Dustin Stax. "Every time an artist tries to sell me a picture he wants enough money to keep him from worry the rest of his life."

To the Contrary. "Are you a student of political economy?" asked the visitor. "Not with the appropriations now before me," said Senator Sorghum. "I'm now a student of political extravagance."

Ups and Downs. "Of course, life must have its ups and downs." "The people rather approve of the idea," said Mr. Dustin Stax, "otherwise the roller coaster wouldn't have been so successful."

Philadelphia, Publishing Center. Philadelphia publishes more medical books than any other city and more than half of the Bibles printed in the United States. Sixty per cent of the surgical instruments manufactured in the country are made there.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The senate has again indulged in its favorite pastime of straining at the gnats and swallowing the camels. Its latest camel that was swallowed at one gulp and with the same ease as the man on the flying trapeze was passage of the so-called Wagner labor disputes bill. The consensus seems to be that reformers in the senate reached the highwater mark when they capitulated to the labor lobby and put further insurmountable difficulties in the way of recovery for business.

Claws for Blue Eagle. The Wagner bill is an outgrowth of attempts to develop through the national industrial recovery act a policy compelling employers to bargain collectively with their employees. That is, the famed section 7-A was intended to make it impossible for employers to enter into an agreement with their employees except by dealing with a committee selected by a majority of the workers. It was the assumption when this provision was written two years ago that the American Federation of Labor would have a majority in all of the important industries. It developed, however, that company unions, not affiliated with any other organization, constituted a majority in scores of factories and plants. Thus, the A. F. of L. encountered an unexpected obstacle.

Digging Through the World. A widely accepted theory regarding the earth's make-up is that a solid crust, corresponding to the rind of an orange, encloses a molten interior corresponding to the pulp, says Tit-Bits Magazine. This theory is supported by mining and boring experience which shows the average rise of temperature downwards to be one degree Fahrenheit for every 50 or 60 feet. Thus at 50-miles the temperature must be 4,000 degrees, or far higher than the fusing point of platinum, which melts at 3,000 degrees. The late Lord Kelvin declared that this planet could not maintain its shape unless the supposed crust were 2,500 miles thick, and concluded that the mass of the earth "is on the whole more rigid than a continuous solid globe of glass of the same dimensions."

Praise for Hull. Secretary Hull of the Department of State is being lauded with praises these days on his diplomatic accomplishments and is receiving a sharp exodus of dollar capital into new investments in lines made profitable by tariff changes complete or pending. The information I gather respecting the reciprocal tariff policies indicates, however, that the movement of capital into South American investments results partially from Agricultural Adjustment Administration activities. But it seems that the agricultural crop reduction plans would not of themselves cause as large an outflow of dollars for industrial investment in South America as has taken place if they were operative alone.

Smiles. Take a peep at this delightful home frock, with its big, bright buttons strategically placed for giving charm—then look at the stretch of the garment spread open. Cut it out, and it almost finishes itself like magic—put it on, and it changes your appearance in the same surprising way! It's vastly becoming, this simple frock with the easy lines, and a good, quick beginning to your new supply of house dresses. There are brightly cottons which look like plaid ginghams. Try a colorful one for this—contrast the yoke and sleeves if you wish.

Expensive Art. "Your picture show makes an unusually high charge for admission," said the traveling salesman. "The expense is heavy," answered Cactus Joe. "Our audience is so sympathetic in hating the villains that every screen is riddled with bullet holes."

Power. "Why did that actress marry her press agent?" "She wanted security," said Miss Cayenne. "She let him understand that if his compliments did not continue to please her, he'd lose his home and his job both at once."
