STANDING OF THE CLUBS

	Won	Lost
White Oaks	12	2
Cobras	9	5

By Joe Chavez

The Carrizozo Cobras won both ends of a double-header Sunday on the local diamond by whitewashing Lincoln in the opener by a score of 12 to 0, and nosing out Fort Stanton in the second game by a score of 3 to 2. Alfredo Lopez pitched a fine brand of ball against Lincoln and coupled with airtight support from his teammates, he was never in a tight spot during the game.

Fort Stanton combined with White Oaks, Carrizozo, the Transient Camp, etc., but the Cobras were playing winning baseball behind the stellar pitching of Andy Lueiras and the result was that Carrizozo won by the above mentioned score. This proved to be a better game than the Cobras-Miners' game of two weeks ago. Both teams were fighting like wildcats and errors were mighty scarce throughout the melee. One feature of the game was the absence of umpire razzing. Both players and fans alike took the decisions in true sport style and the rooting was only what goes along to make a ball game thrilling and interesting. Celly Sandoval was there as usual, with his music box and kept the crowd in a very cheerful mood.

Florencio Mirelez, Jr., rejoined the Cobras and worked good behind the bat. Flo returned recently from Fort Bliss, where he and Grant Miller went about four weeks ago to join Uncle Sam's 7th Cavalry, but he did not pass the examination and was returned home.

Fort Stanton comes back here next Sunday and try to even up things with Carrizozo. It's going to be a hard-fought game with all the trimmings, so you had better be out there and root for your home team.

Attend the dance at Community Hall tomorrow night, Saturday, enjoy yourselves and at the same time help the boys buy baseballs and a bat or two. It will be highly appreciated.

Attention, Oddfellows!

On Tuesday night, July 30; the officers who were recently elected for the ensuing term of six months, will be installed. A good attendance is desired.

Concerning the recent Good-Will trip from Roswell, the Roswell Dispatch not only makes complimentary mention of the article appearing in our last week's issue, but published our article in full, under quotations.

In its foregoing, the Dispatch said: "Relative to the recent Roswell Good-Will tour made in Lincoln County, the following article appeared in the Carrizozo Outlook, showing that these trade trips are recognized as friendly gestures. The article was headed, 'Roswell to the Fore.' The article followed.

Mrs. M. C. St. John and the children returned the latter part of last week from Las Cruces, where they had been visiting Mrs. St. John's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Navarez and other relatives, for the past two weeks.

Corona News

V. C. Waldon and Miss Zanta DuBois were united in marriage at Estancia on July 20. Mr. Waldon is the attractive daughter of the late T. M. DuBois and Mrs. DuBois and has lived most of her life in Corona. She attended the Corona schools, the Radford School for Girls in El Paso and the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. Mr. Waldon moved to Corona about five years ago and is at present engaged in the agricultural business on the Jensen ranch, south of town, where the young couple are making their home. Their many friends extend congratulations.

J. T. Davidson returned home Monday night from Carrizozo, where he has been receiving medical attention.

Little Bobbie Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy McCamant, has been seriously ill in Carrizozo for several days.

Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Jack Davidson came up from Carrizozo Monday on some business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Dishman, Zelfa and William Ernest spent Sunday with the Clint Heister family in Santa Fe.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Davis and children have returned from a trip to Hamilton County, Texas, where they are contemplating the purchase of a farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Perkins entertained a group of their friends with an ice cream supper at their home on Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. George Simpson and Mrs. T. M. DuBois made a business trip to Albuquerque Monday.

Miss Billie Roll accompanied Mrs. Claudine Sandy to Pampa, Tex., Sunday.

Mrs. E. N. Conley left Sunday for a short visit with friends in Tucumcari.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Penix and Mary Catherine spent the weekend at Ruidoso.

Miss Donnie Franks has returned from Las Vegas where she attended the New Mexico Normal University during the first summer term.

Mrs. Wilmet Duplentis and daughter came over from Albuquerque Monday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Atkinson.

Congratulations: Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Madrid, a son, Cruz, July 16.

Dr. L. H. Barry, his daughter and grandson spent the weekend in Santa Fe.

Miss Jessie Fuller has returned from a three weeks' vacation trip to Missouri and Arkansas.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Jones have as their guests their son Roy and family of Lubbock, Tex.

Earl Porter and Joe Stroope were in Carrizozo Thursday on business.

Miss Dell Roberts, accompanied by Miss Tennis Brown, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pfeiffer made a business trip to Estancia Tuesday.

Pests

Orsa S. Stearns

Mrs. Maggie Lovelace

Wednesday afternoon, at his home in Nogal Canyon, Orsa S. Stearns, yardmaster at the local railroad yards, passed away following a lingering illness of about one year's duration. About six weeks ago, he was sent to the Southern Pacific Hospital at San Francisco, but receiving no relief, he came home to await the change, which sooner or later, comes to all mankind.

Mr. Stearns was born at Olmstead, Ohio, in 1877; came west and for awhile was employed in railroad work in Colorado. He came to Carrizozo about 27 years ago and from that time on, he was employed first by the E. P. & S. W. and after the change, the Southern Pacific. He was a careful and painstaking employee, who held the confidence of the company with which he was employed and also that of his associates in the railroad work.

Funeral services will be held at the home this afternoon at 2:30 and at 3:30, the remains will be interred in the cemetery at Angus with solemn Masonic Rites, to be conducted by Past Master F. L. Boughner and other officers of the local Masonic Lodge. Coming as it will, after publication of this paper, further particulars will appear next week.

Attention, Masons!

Members of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, will meet at the Masonic Temple at 1 o'clock this (Friday) afternoon to attend the funeral of our esteemed brother, Orsa S. Stearns, Visiting Masons invited.

Stephen B. Bostian, W. M.
R. E. Lemon, Sec'y.

Miss Zell Stewart of Miami and Shamrock, Texas, was a guest of the Allen Kiles at Ancho for ten days. During her visit, she and her hosts enjoyed trips to Santa Fe, Albuquerque, Carlsbad Caverns, Roswell, the White Sands, El Paso and Juarez, Mexico.

County School Supt., Mrs. Ola Jones is suffering from a badly sprained ankle, which happened in this manner. In coming out of the courthouse Tuesday afternoon, as she was crossing the sidewalk to take her car, a boy on roller skates ran against her and caused her to fall violently to the sidewalk, badly spraining one of her ankles. At this writing, she is confined to her bed, but will be out in a short time, which is causing a great deal of unpleasantness.

Miss Myrtle Owen of Roswell came in Wednesday to spend a few days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Owen.

Tuesday morning at 8:15, Mrs. Maggie Lovelace, long a resident of this place, passed away after a lingering illness of about two years. The funeral services were held at the Baptist Church Wednesday afternoon, with the Rev. Jordan conducting the same. A mixed quartet, Mesdames R. E. Lemon and Don English, Rev. Johnson and Marshall Beck, sang: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and "God be With You 'Till We Meet Again," with Mrs. T. E. Kelley at the piano, according to the last wishes of the deceased. Mrs. Ben S. Burns played the "consolation."

The seating capacity of the church was taken up and the floral offerings were many and beautiful. The pastor read comforting passages from the scriptures and finished with a short sermon dwelling on the Christian character of the deceased. He gave for his reason for reading the scriptures, that the feeble words of the human being, had no power to comfort the distressed like the words of the Master. In that statement, the Reverend gentleman minimized mortal speech and glorified the word of God; which was more appreciated by the audience and mourners, than hours spent in idle words which intensify the sufferings of broken hearts.

After the services, the large concourse of mourners followed the remains to the local cemetery where they were interred. Mrs. Lovelace was one of the early settlers of Carrizozo, coming here about thirty years ago. She was born in Brown County, Texas, in 1879. Seven years ago, she was united in marriage to Morgan Lovelace. During her long residence here, she was always foremost in civic doings and her charity, sympathy and human kindness knew no bounds. Her gentle disposition and Christian character made her friends, Legion. She was especially fond of the younger people, mingled with them and contributed to their pleasure and entertainment; so much so, that she was lovingly known among them as "Aunt Maggie."

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, five sisters, Mesdames, M. C. Prude of Mesalero, J. F. Hancock of Globe, Ariz., John Dingwall of Comanche, Texas, H. L. Allison of El Paso, Marcus Barber of Alamogordo and one brother, J. W. Bennett, also of Alamogordo, to all of whom the sympathy of our community is tendered.

Miss Cora Craws of Ocuca was in town the latter part of last week.

Out-of-the-Ordinary

A 34-year old Turk, Ahmetoglu, is a queer human being. His left side is entirely hollow. His heart, lungs and other organs are clustered together on the right side of his body. Another strange thing is that this queer bird has never been ill in his life.

At McClain, Ohio, W. N. Scott planted a crop of potatoes in the early spring and forgot about them. The next fall when he began to look for seed potatoes, he found the forgotten crop. He dug them up, sold 300 bushels for $450.00 and kept the remainder for seed. The forgotten crop was 500 bushels.

In Constants, Roumania, the fruit brokers in order to raise the price on oranges, dumped 30 carloads into the Black Sea. Fishermen followed the tugs and after they had dumped the fruit, the fishermen let down large dragnets and came back without fish, but good cargoes of oranges.

On the endurance plane 'Ole Miss,' Fred and Al Key had an uncomfortable experience. One of Al's teeth began to ache and Fred radioed to send drugs and forceps so that Fred could pull his brother's tooth. He said if that didn't work to send up a dentist and have him lowered to the plane so he could pull it. They sent up the forceps and Fred yanked it out.

At Hamilton Field, Calif., Captain Chas. Williamson of the 31st Bombardment Squadron went out to drop some bombs. He circled for several hundred feet, set up a target in San Francisco Bay and let go; nothing dropped. He had forgotten his bombs.

Geo. Crehore, Painsville, Ohio, has a pet rabbit and calls him "Primo Carnera." He chases cows, scraps with dogs and runs strangers out of the yard. Crehore has put up a sign to warn trespassers, "Beware of the rabbit."

Quincy, Mass.—Albert Niemeyer and Katherine Schaefer were sweethearts in Pennsylvania a half-century ago. A few years later they separated. Recently they met here and were re-united. Then their marriage followed. Now they are on their honeymoon. Niemeyer is 69 and his bride is 64. Neither of them had ever married during their long separation and they met accidentally.

Mrs. Elizabeth Curtiss of Cleveland, Ohio, 95, attends her sewing circle every week, also engages in civic work of every kind. She is a remarkable conversationalist, relating with accuracy things happening long ago. Mrs. Curtiss is progressive and doesn't condemn the young people for modern dress and mannerisms.

Manny Ericson of Clinton, Ia., holds the belt for living under misfortune. Last fall while hunting hickory nuts in the river bottoms, he fell from a high tree, breaking both legs and one arm. After being discharged from the hospital, while in the act of digging a well, it caved in on him. He was taken out more dead than alive, after being en-

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. McClintock arrived home Tuesday from a trip to Texas, where they visited Mrs. McClintock's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones are at home again after an extended tour through Virginia and Tennessee. They report a pleasant trip.

G. T. McQuillen, manager of the local telephone station, arrived home Monday from California, where he visited at the homes of his two daughters and accompanied them to the San Diego Exposition. His description of the big Fair and his visit in general, is extremely interesting.

Mrs. Josefa S. Vega returned Saturday night from Sierra Madre, California, where she had been visiting with the Fred Lalone family for the past three weeks. The Lalones asked to be remembered to their many friends in Lincoln County.

Mr. and Mrs. George Simpson, daughter, Mrs. Frank Hines and granddaughter, Charlotte were here Tuesday from Corona and were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brack Sloan.

Mrs. Selma Degitz and Marshall Beck arrived here Sunday from Denver, where Mrs. Degitz had been visiting relatives and Marshall being in line for his vacation, went to Colorado Springs, attended a golf tournament, after which he went to Raton and met Mrs. Degitz and they came to Carrizozo. Marshall will spend his vacation here.

Miss Eloise Gilmore of Tularosa spent a portion of last week as a guest of Miss Anna Belle Hoffman.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Shaver are here from Hot Springs, where Mack is employed by the government. They will visit for a week with the P. M. Shaver family.

Mrs. L. A. Johnston and Mrs. Elmer Connor of Houston, Texas who were guests of Mrs. L. N. Bell for a week, left Wednesday for home. They were delighted with our climate in comparison to the warm, sultry atmosphere of their home town. Mrs. Johnston is a sister to Mrs. Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Petty of the Economy Grocery & Market, were Alamogordo business visitors Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Salazar and Mrs. Montoya of Tularosa were week-end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Vega. Mrs. Montoya is Mrs. Vega's mother and Mrs. Salazar is her sister.

Mesdames Lillian Lane and children, Ray Sipple, accompanied by two young lady friends of White Oaks were visitors in town Sunday of last week.

tombled for 24 hours. His back was broken, also three ribs on one side and two on the other. He came out of it like a game sport, nevertheless. A short time after that, while picking cherries, he fell and fractured his neck. Physicians said it was his last, and they could do nothing for him—but Ericson surprised them all. He now goes about his daily duties, seemingly no worse for his misfortune.

Novelty's the Word for Swim Suits

and shakes out and dries, moisture injuring its appearance not in the least. See the velvet suit pictured in the center of the group.

JUST what, do you suppose, "are the wild waves saying" in regard to the whimsical, colorful and sometimes amusing water sports fashions which are so merrily splashing, dashing, swimming, bathing, diving and floating and frolicking in ocean blue, or lake or river or now fangled swimming pool or wherever enthusiastic water fans happen to be?

Well, one thing is certain, if they are saying anything, they are undoubtedly holding an exciting conversation as to the trend to novelty which is so outstandingly characteristic of the latest in swim and beach suits. This is especially true in regard to media and materials, which are that novel they deny the theory that there is nothing new under the sun.

There's lace, for instance, which as a charming innovation, so far as bathing suits are concerned, has set the fashion world abuzz this season. Dikusha, a youthful French designer of renown, conceived the idea. The lace makers obligingly followed along with a fabric that could be used with assured modesty and pleasing effect. Comfortable to swim in, attractive in appearance, lace threatens to be a leader in the race for beachwear popularity. In the picture, the suit to the left is fashioned of lace of firm dependable quality. Even the bathing cloaks are, of lace, closely woven and snug-fitting.

Another sensation is the debut of velvet as medium for the bathing suit. Of course the velvet has been processed to resist the ravages of water. Then, too, it is crinkled instead of smooth and shakes out and dries, moisture injuring its appearance not in the least. See the velvet suit pictured in the center of the group.

Knits will prove grand choices. While there is nothing new in the idea of the bathing suit which is knitted yet there is everything new in knitted effects as brought out this season. Their chief claim to novelty is in the daring and bizarre colorings and patterned effects instead of plain solid tones. The new print or jacquard knits are so spectacular that they easily add as much color to the beach panorama as do the gaily striped parasols and deck chairs.

The style tide in knitted suits is running strongly to the mailot, or skirtless swim suit, because it permits the greatest freedom of action and exposes a maximum of skin surface to healthful sun rays. Mailots are also most flattering to fine figures, which is another argument in their favor. A smart version of the mailot, is a jacquard knit with a deep U-neck, halter neck and the fitted uplift (characteristic of the majority of 1935 suits) is shown to the right in the illustration. Huge bubble dots, alternating outline and solid, contribute splashes of striking color to its patterning. Among the beguiling combinations are white dots on a skipper-blue ground, sulphur yellow on brown, rouge on glory blue and white on tropic green.

Many fashionwise water-fans will do their swimming and sunbathing in skirtless or skirted, if you so prefer, one-piece suits which have backs formed by adjustable straps drawn together at the back in a ring or some other ingenious and attractive device surrounding the waist as a self-belt, carelessly tied at the front to give the smart and casual touch.

BEACH TOWEL WRAP

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Immense bath towels with fantastic designs, fish, lobsters, and palm trees being their decorative motifs done in eye-appealing colors are being used at leading summer resorts as rugs and beach wraps. The picture shows how smartly and artfully they wrap themselves about scanty bathing suits. Measuring 36 by 72 inches as they do, these enormous bath-and-beach towels serve as single rugs or sandy shrouds, leading color and tone to the scene.

NEWEST STYLES IN OUTFITS FOR BEACH

From tailored severity to lacy lassness, the newest beach clothes range, with in-between numbers of quaint pastoral quality and daring modern themes.

There's a gay nineties air about a swim suit of polka-dotted red latex woolen with white ruffles around the top and bottom, and forming the shoulder straps, which cross in the back.

Then there is the English schoolboy outfit, so popular with beach lollers this season, which usually consists of tallor shorts and shirt of navy or polka-dotted twill, a matching ascot and a tailored white plique or linen jacket.

The Bavarian note is with us, too, in pastoral beach frocks of flowered glazed chintz, with lace bodices and sometimes even milkmaid aprons.

There is the Tyrolean trend, in gay chintz shirts and skirt-length slacks, with suspenders and gay belts. You wear these with a plumed Alpine hat.

Summer Prints Are Using Flowers as Big as Plates

Prints splashed with the biggest flowers Paris has ever used—flowers the size of a large dinner plate—are next on the summer style scene.

Black or white crepes printed with huge plate-sized yellow and green sunflowers fashion slender gowns whose hemlines and trains are encircled by diagonal flounces. Their tops are sometimes without shoulder straps, leaving shoulders and back bare, the décollete often rimmed by a big ruche of the flowers cut from the material and strung with loops of horseshair ribbon. More prints, this time patterned in saucer-sized tulips, fashion other gowns cut along similar lines.

Gaudy Ornaments

Ornaments for afternoons and evening wear are gaudy and often intricate a contrasting color. Quaint jeweled belts are daring and sometimes have brackets or other ornaments to match.

Roughage Reduces Dairy Feed Costs

Sufficient Supply of Legume Hay and Silage Will Be of Much Value.

By John Arcy, Extension Dairyman, North Carolina State College.—WNH Service.

An adequate supply of good roughage is recommended for decreasing the cost of feeding dairy cows and increasing their milk and cream production.

Cows fed liberally on roughage such as lespedeza, alfalfa, clover and soy bean silage will give a good milk flow with only a limited amount of grain in their ration.

To insure a sufficient supply of roughage for the summer and winter, dairymen should plan to produce enough hay and silage to give each animal all it needs.

About one and a half tons of legume hay and three tons of silage should be provided for each average-size cow during the winter. If no silage is available, the amount of legume hay should be increased to two and a half tons.

A combination of silage and hay is preferable to hay alone, since silage furnishes a succulent ration which is needed in winter. Also, a large quantity of silage can be produced on a small acreage. One acre of good corn or sorghum will supply enough silage to feed three cows six months.

The trench silo is so inexpensive and valuable that no farmer owning as many as four mature cows can afford to be without one. With such a silo, the farmer can store away an abundant supply of silage for the winter with comparatively little expense.

Farm Home Needs Shown by Recent Investigation

Outstanding needs of the farm home, as indicated by 17,981 cases investigated by the department of agricultural extension of Purdue university, are principally sewerage, paint and screening, according to a report received by the Federal Housing administration.

Of the farms investigated, the following percentage table was formulated: 93 per cent were found to be in need of a safe method of sewage disposal; 55 per cent were in need of new paint; 41 per cent required more adequate screening; 31 per cent, miscellaneous repairs and replacements; 28 per cent, foundation repairs; 25 per cent, more closet space; 14 per cent, kitchen sinks.

The purposes of the Purdue investigation were to promote sound and attractive building and to protect the farm home from unnecessary depreciation; to develop conditions which promote health and comfort; the provision of conveniences which add needless drudgery, and to encourage a suitable setting for the farm home.

Variation in Butterfat Tests

Dairymen are often puzzled at the wide variation that occurs in the per cent of fat in the milk of their cows when they are tested, according to Chas. W. Turner, Missouri College of Agriculture. Many times the fat content varies widely from milking to milking and from day to day. The feed, the interval between milking, the condition of the weather, and the condition of the animals are often assigned as reasons for the daily variations that occur. There are other variations that occur during the lactation period and from one year to another. These variations are probably caused by the season of the year, the stage of lactation, and the advancing age of the animal.

Trees for Shelter Belts

With increased interest in planting of trees, many farmers are planning to start shelter belts around their farmsteads. Only evergreen trees should be used for this purpose if best results are to be obtained. Little or no protection is afforded by deciduous trees which shed their leaves in the winter. Even when planted in extensive blocks they do not break the wind. Douglas fir, western yellow pine, Austrian pine, Blue spruce or White spruce if given proper care will develop enough in five years to give some protection, and by ten or twelve years will give adequate protection.—Prairie Farmer.

Millet, Fodder, Alfalfa

Millet is more nutritious than prairie or timothy hay, but feeding millet hay alone might produce enlarged joints and lameness, so it must be used along with other roughages and feeds. Good corn fodder, free from mold, has a little more feed value than timothy hay, writes A. L. Harvey, Division of Animal Husbandry, University of Minnesota. Alfalfa hay is an excellent roughage for horses but is so palatable that horses may overeat on it. Alfalfa hay and corn makes a fairly well-balanced horse ration.

Care of Brood Mares

Mares in foal will be healthier and the foal stronger at birth if they are used at moderate work nearly every day, advises an authority in the Missouri Farmer. In addition to this, parturition is easier because of the exercise. The mare's feed should supply the demand for the maintenance of her own body and also for the development of the fetus. The ration, therefore, should contain a little more protein and less than that demanded by a working gelding.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

DIDN'T SEE IT

The golfer stepped up to the tee and drove off. The ball sailed straight down the fairway, leaped onto the green and dived into the hole.

"What have you suddenly gone crazy about?" asked the golfer's wife, who was trying to learn something about the game.

"Why, I just made a hole in one!" yelled the golfer, a wild gleam of delight in his eyes.

"Did you," said his wife placidly.

"No, dear, I didn't see you." —Stray Stories Magazine.

HOW SONG THAT TOOK WORLD BY STORM WAS BORN

The story of the writing of Carrie Jacobs-Bond's famous song, "The End of a Perfect Day," has been told many, many times, and in many, many ways, but the truth is a very simple story, states a writer in the Kansas City Star.

"The inspiration came to me," says Mrs. Jacobs-Bond in her memoirs, "The Road of Melody," "as I was viewing a wonderful sunset from the top of Mount Rubidoux in Riverside, Calif. . . . The glory of this sunset from the mountain was the most beautiful thing I had ever seen."

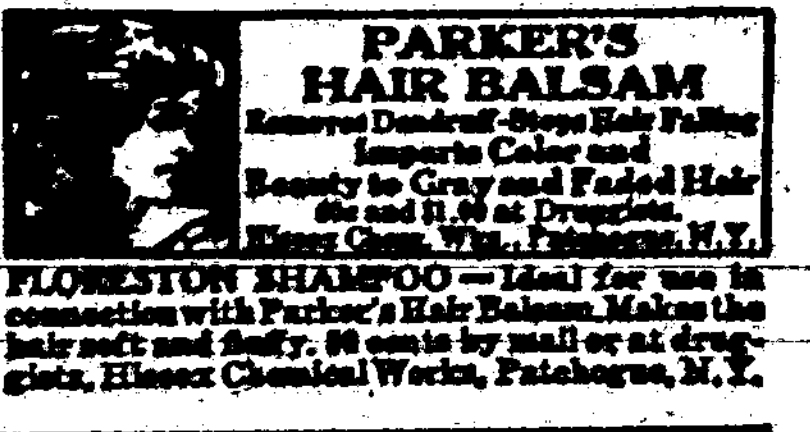

Mrs. Jacobs-Bond had been motoring through southern California with some nature-loving friends and, arriving back at the Mission Inn, where they were staying, after viewing the sunset, and while dressing for dinner, the words for "A Perfect Day" came to her as she was wishing she could express her thanks to those friends "in some little way, just out of the ordinary."

"I wrote them very hurriedly," she recalls, "and did not have time to change a word or a sentence. I took them down and read them at dinner that evening, then put them in my purse and thereupon forgot them."

"About three months later I was crossing the Mojave desert, in the moonlight, and, without realizing that I had memorized those words,

I began singing them to the original tune. . . . I finished the song entirely before morning.

"And that," adds Mrs. Jacobs-Bond, "is the true story of 'A Perfect Day.'"

Stones Reveal Viking Visit to Minnesota in Year 1362

Belief that a tribe of ancient Norsemen visited this territory in the fourteenth century was voiced by F. T. Gustavson, Pequot, Minn., nationally known anthropologist, after a study of several stones at Cormorant Lake, near Detroit Lakes, Minn., known as the "Norse Anchor Stones," write a Detroit Lakes United Press correspondent.

Tell-Tale Nails

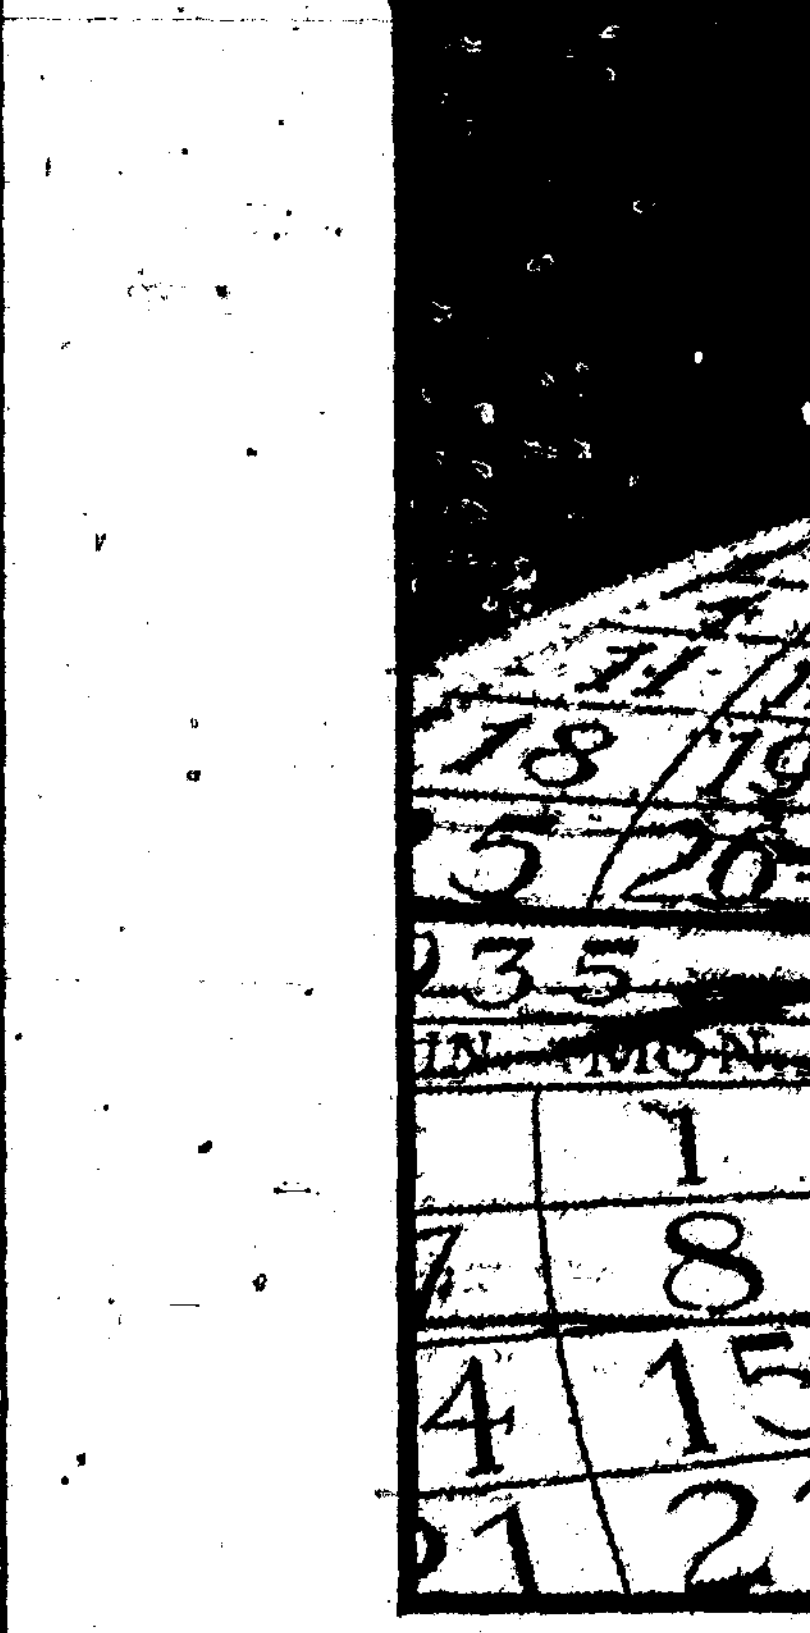

An experienced doctor, when feeling the pulse of a patient, will often assist his diagnosis by a casual glance at the finger-nails. The healthy nail is renewed once in 110 days, but the rate of growth is retarded by disease.

Endearing Terms in Stones

The favorite engagement ring of the Nineteenth century was set with gems whose initial letters formed a word of endearment such as "dearest" made up of diamonds, emeralds, amethysts, rubies, sapphires and turquoise.

Masons and Presidents

Presidents Washington, Jackson, Polk, Fillmore, Buchanan, Johnson, Garfield, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Franklin Roosevelt were Masons. Fillmore is thought by some writers to have been initiated into the order at an early age but to have recanted during the anti-Masonic agitation.

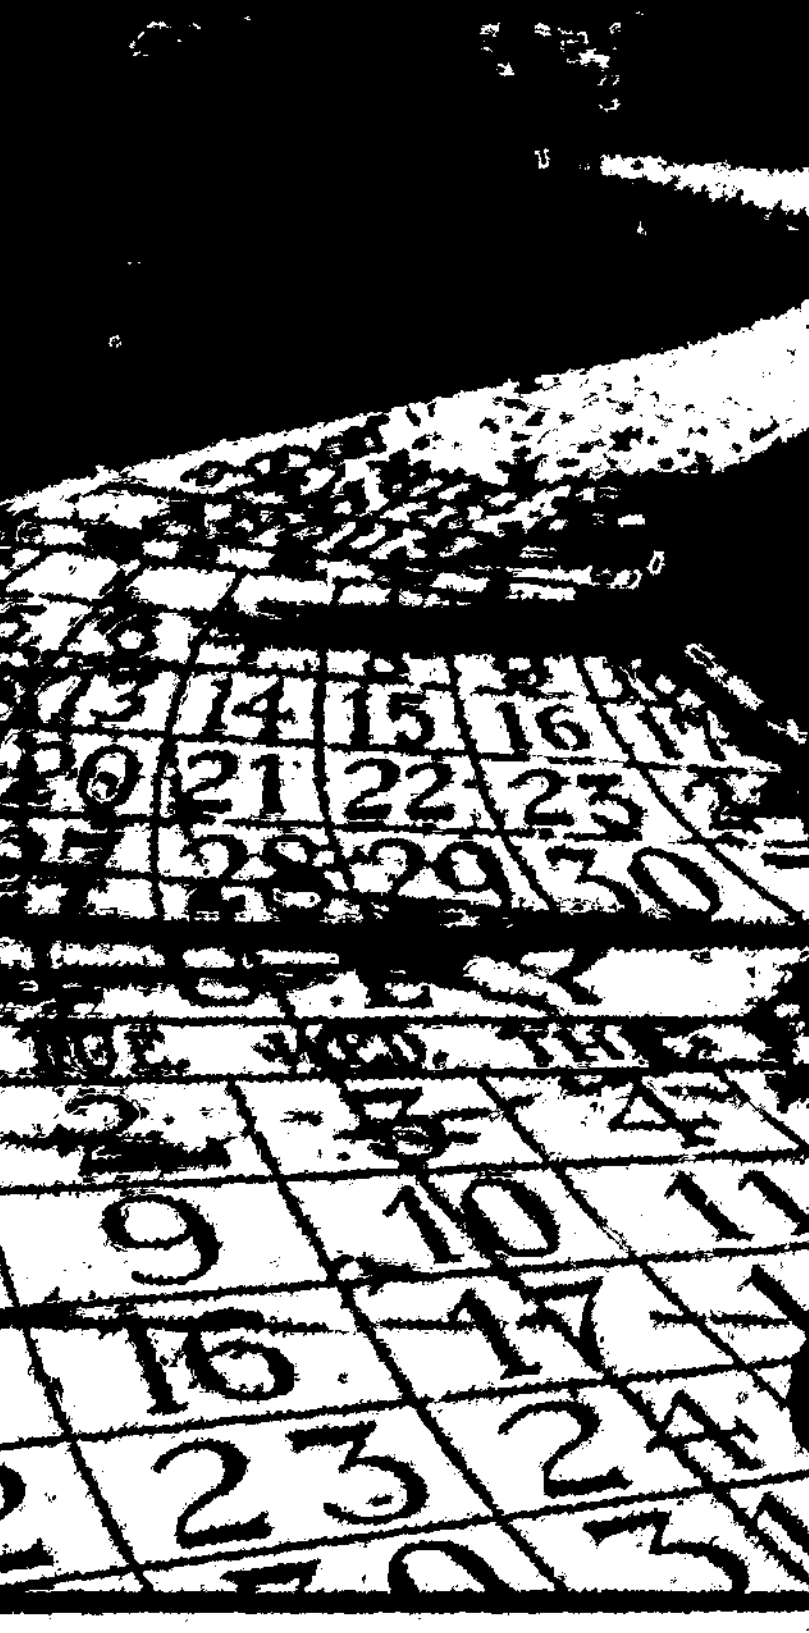

After viewing the relics, Gustavson declared that the runic inscription on the famous Kensington Runestone fits them entirely. The inscription reads: "Eight Goths and 22 Norwegians on exploration—journey from Vineland westward. We had camp by two skerries one day—journey north from this stone. We fished one day. When we returned home we found ten men red with blood and dead. Ave Marie. Save from evil! Have ten of our party in the sea to look after our ships in 14 day journey from this island. Year 1362."

Gustavson explained that a day's journey meant at that time the distance traveled by boat along the coast of Norway, about eighty miles. "The lake with the 'two skerries' is Cormorant Lake," he added, "while the sea where the ships were left is probably Hudson Bay. The party must have come down the Nelson river, Lake Winnipeg, and the Red river, and by this stream to Cormorant Lake—where vestiges of the Norsemen still remain."

To drive through Summer safely, you need high-film-strength oil!

Conoco Germ Processed Oil has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than plain mineral oils and resists heat better!

HERE'S THE PROOF... Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil Plain Mineral Oils Note that as heat increases, the plain mineral oils continue to lose film strength, but that above 225° (Minimum Summer crankcase temperature) Germ Processed Oil's film strength is not affected by heat. Tests made with Timken machine.

You do more driving—faster and longer driving—in Summer than at any other time. To protect your motor fully, your oil must have high film strength and maintain it at motor heats of 225° to 350°! Film strength keeps bearings and cylinders from wearing out—lack of it results in costly damage! Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oil so over-refined by new cleansing methods have even less. Moreover, these oils rapidly lose film strength as motor heat goes up. Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil protects your motor better than any plain mineral oil because it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength and extreme heat does not lessen this advantage. (See chart at left.)

extreme heat does not lessen this advantage. (See chart at left.) Road tests in cars equipped with both conventional babbit bearings and the new copper-lead, high-lead and cadmium-alloy bearings proved that Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil, protects all bearings from wear far better than plain mineral oils. You can drive through Summer safely—and without a worry—if you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Oil—the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that never drains away!

The Gran Quivira Road

A number of people from the upper country were here last week in the interest of a new road from Carrizozo to the Gran Quivira. They made their appeal to the County Commissioners and requested that body to intercede in order to put some of the vast amount of money allotted to this state for that project.

The Gran Quivira, as we know, is a National Monument. As such, is sadly in need of a good road to connect with the Carrizozo - Socorro Highway at this point.

The old road is in the worst condition one could imagine; it is very rough and rutty with hiccups which renders travel of the same almost impossible. The old road being in the lowlands, there would be no heavy grading to do—and that being the fact, it wouldn't require an enormous amount of money to give us a good and substantial road to the National Monument.

Roads have already been built from Mountainair and also from Corona, but neither of these will be of benefit to Carrizozo and the tourists who would be glad to make trips to the ancient Indian city, while on their way to California, but not having that advantage, they pass up one of the best features we have in this section of the state. Let us all pull together and get a good road from Carrizozo to the Gran Quivira National Monument.

Banks Rapidly Reduce Debt

Although the sum of $1,360,000,000 has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1933, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,540,000,000, or more than 75%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Loans were authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to 7,390 banks and trust companies in an aggregate amount of $2,350,000,000, but of this sum $345,000,000 was withdrawn or cancelled and $140,000,000 has not yet been taken out by the borrowers.

Simplification of Bank Checks

New York—In a bulletin issued by the Bank Management Commission of the American Bankers Association, plans are described for carrying on the simplification of bank checks, notes, drafts and similar instruments in respect to size and uniformity of arrangement of subject matter.

Detailed recommendations for this end were formulated by the association about ten years ago, the bulletin says, and promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce among banks, business houses using large numbers of checks, commercial stations and lithographers. As a result about 85 per cent adherence to the recommendations was brought about. The present bulletin, which describes the standard specifications in full, is issued to maintain this high level of adherence to the recommendations.

Must Be Clean

Be certain that the hardwood floors are perfectly clean before either waxing or shining them. If all stains are not removed they will show very plainly under the polished surface.

"What's one man's gain, is another's misfortune." Thus the old saying goes. During the heavy rain Monday, the Skating Rink that has its stand next to the Kelley Sport Shop on Alamo-gordo avenue, suffered a severe "blow down;" the tent under which the skaters do their stuff was blown off. It was immediately put back in place, nevertheless.

"Now, you're all the time talking about something good to eat," says a Subscriber who is the town payroll. A valuable prize will be given at this office to the party guessing who made the remark.

How many local people watched the eclipse of the moon Monday night? It happens only once in 50 years, it was announced over the radio. It was a beautiful sight. The eclipse was followed by the radio from New York to Chicago, ending with Hollywood, Cal. An interesting description was given of the history of the eclipse by radio that night. We were very fortunate in hearing the feature broadcast, watching the lunar display at the same time. We were asked if we intended to witness the next eclipse (50 years from now.) We soothingly answered, "If you'll keep us company."

Somebody wrote to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan suggesting that the Rocky mountains be levelled off. Now, we ask you, if that wouldn't be an ideal job for the PWA—or wouldn't it?

"Somehow or other," quoting a bird from Corona, "a Vice-President always reminds me of a fellow taking a trip in a rumble seat alone."

Will Rogers has a new idea to make work lighter. He was told to milk a cow in his picture 'Jubilo.' He sat down, pail in hand, and watched the cow. The whiskered boss came up and said 'What, no milk yet?' 'Nope,' Will drawled. "I always do my milking with a can opener."

We thought that we noticed a slight touch of fall weather in the air several mornings this week. Thus sings the poet: "The melancholy days are here, The saddest of the year." Chilly days will be with us soon, as the Mexican says—"poco pronto."

Ben Bernie, the Old Maestro, in reading comments on his programs on the radio came to this one: "Your performances have too much jazz music; it sounds cheap and degrading." "Very well, since that party doesn't like jazz," Ben Bernie replied, "how about some beautiful, sublime and soulful music from Gounod's opera of 'Faust,' entitled: 'Looky, Looky, Here Comes Cookie.'"

The baseball game last Sunday between the White Oaks Miners and the Carrizozo Cobras was certainly a hot one. I missed seeing it; in fact I always miss everything that's good. We'd like to see a return game in the near future. This game had one bad feature, 'Slugger' Les Molina was painfully injured.

Schmelling versus Max Baer to fight in September—Headline, Schmelling better get in shape, for, to begin with, he's an old man as far as prizefighting goes. To quote a local authority on such matters, when a man is 25, it's curtains for him; he's too old to engage in pugilistic encounters.

National Bank Notes
Changes in our money on the scale of about $800,000,000 are now going on through the retirement of national bank notes. This is reflected in increasing deposits in the Treasury of lawful money to replace bonds held against outstanding notes which will require some time for withdrawal from circulation.
The change in the currency will require a considerable shift of bank funds in many cases, but it is doubtful if so large a volume of currency has ever been retired and replaced in any country with so little disturbance.

"There is indeed a further journey which you must take, little one," he said, "but surely you welcome it—or are you so happy in the house of Aswami Pasha that you regret to leave Cairo?"

"I have small love for Aswami," she replied, "and less for Cairo. We are going, then, to Arabia? There, at least, I have my comforts—my servants."

"In the morning, Orange Blossom," he walked slowly towards her. "You have until the dawn of tomorrow in which to talk to me, to bewitch me with your beauty, and make me more completely your slave."

The woman smiled up at him as he bent over her. "You know that I love you, Yu'an," she whispered.

"I begin to believe so, since you have followed me around the world."

"Followed?"

"You were free to leave me at any time."

Dimly the note of a gong sounded in some place below. "Go now to your room," said Yu'an Hee See. "This is Aswami who has arrived. I shall be satisfied, perhaps for an hour."

In a small square room on the ground floor of the house, furnished very simply as an office, Aswami Pasha sat waiting.

To the gang assembled in the Restaurant Suleiman Bey in Paris he was known as the Chief, but here he was an Egyptian gentleman of established position. Nevertheless, he watched the door of the room with a certain nervousness not strictly in keeping with Moslem fatalism.

Yu'an Hee See stood framed in the open doorway, looking at the Egyptian, his eyes nearly closed. "You are an hour late. What is the explanation?"

"It is simple," was the reply. "The pilot made a forced landing, but a good one. We were ten miles from Heliopolis—which, I think, explains my delay."

"It explains it," the ready voice conceded. "I accept this explanation. I would add that if such accidents occur to others of our company disaster lies before us like a gulf which no man can pass."

"I have no fears," the Egyptian assured him. "Here is the roll. I can tell you where every man of the company is at the present moment."

"Or should be?"

"Some are out of reach, I admit, but with the others we can get in touch if you desire it."

"I do not desire it. You are responsible." He raised a plump hand, the pointed index finger curled. "I do not wish to see your report. Tell me that there has been no hitch."

"No hitch."

"Very good. I am perhaps foolish, but in London everything went wrong. Since this is our biggest venture, I thought that the auguries were unfavorable."

Across the coarse but handsome features of the Egyptian a momentary cloud passed, its passage instantly detected by those nearly closed eyes of Yu'an Hee See.

"You also have been disturbed?"

The voice was very soft but incredibly high.

"No, no, Excellency! Aswami forced a smile. "One of the men rather alarmed me on the night we met in Paris."

"It was the Scotman? He must be watched."

"No, not Maclean. I distrust him only when he is sober. Also, I have arranged to replace him if necessary. But Kid Brown exchanged words with a stranger downstairs in the restaurant. He went down with Frans Hartog, our second engineer, whom he had thrashed for a breach of orders. And this stranger, except for some Russian idioms, was the only person in the restaurant. Too late, he reported the matter to me, admitting that he may have been indiscreet."

"There was a momentary silence; then?"

"Repeat to me," said Yu'an Hee See, "in the man's own words, exactly what he reported to you, including his description of this stranger."

These desperately drab streets which lead from the docks at Marseilles to the more habitable quarters of the city were several inches deep in an unpleasant kind of light yellow mud.

The buildings were yellowish gray; the sky was of this muddy complexion also.

"Simply too unbelievably pigmy," Mileen declared, as the taxi scoured and thumped through the morose.

"And I'm real sorry I started."

"That's rather mean of you, Eileen," said Jack Rattray, the first officer, smiling his slow smile. "Don't you think so, doctor?"

Doctor Oestler patted Eileen's arm soothingly.

"At least, Miss Kearney," he said, "it makes a small change. We shall not be ashore again until we reach Port Said. Yes? And what does it matter, this mud and the gray sky? Ha! Presently we shall be convivial with a little cocktail—no? And it makes a small change."

Mileen turned to him and laughed. The outstanding characteristic of the American doctor, as she had discovered during their short acquaintance, was his astonishing quality of soothing. They presently reached a hotel, turned into the little lounge on the right of the door, and sat down at a table.

"Good Lord!" said Eileen. "There's that ghastly woman—with the chief!"

Near a pillar leaning very close together across a small table, were the chief engineer of the Wallaroo and a big, dark woman, apparently half-caste, handsome in her way, but of a generously curving figure not strictly fashionable.

"Good old Corky," said Jack Rattray. "He's a fast worker. He's well away with the lion tamer."

"Look who's here!" Eileen exclaimed.

Doctor Oestler and Jack Rattray stared across the lounge. Their popular fellow traveler, Mr. Durham, was crossing to them.

"Hal!" cried Doctor Oestler. "It is our Mr. Durham. He is leaving us—yes?"

"Yes," Rattray confirmed. "I should like to have a final word with him before I go back to the ship."

"He never even said good-by to me," Eileen complained.

But Durham had joined them now.

"Doctor and Mr. Rattray," he said, "I hope you will take a stirrup cup presently. Miss Kearney—if your friends can spare you for a moment—I have a private message for you. But I shan't detain you more than two minutes."

They left the house and walked upstairs, to where, upon a seat in an alcove outside the dining room, a man was waiting. A soft brown hat and a white raincoat lay beside him.

"Oh!" Eileen gasped, and clutched Durham's arm. Her face grew suddenly pale. Then this pallor was swept by a swift color.

Dawson Haig stood up. "I haven't frightened you, Eileen? I couldn't think of any other way. . . ."

When Mr. Frans Hartog came on board the Wallaroo at Marseilles to take possession of his cabin on D deck (both berths in which had been reserved in London); through a partly open door across the narrow alleyway Dawson Haig was watching. He saw the tall, blond German whom, with bloody mouth, he had seen coming down the stairs of the Restaurant Suleiman Bey!

Unseen, Dawson Haig left his hiding place and went up to the captain's room. Captain Peterson was seated at his desk, which was littered with papers. He was badly worried about this voyage. The gold was a big responsibility, in the first place, and now, to his other troubles had been added this sudden appearance of an official from Scotland Yard.

"I was right, captain," said Dawson Haig. "It's my man!"

The captain smiled resignedly. "It's a complete muddle to me, Inspector," he confessed. "Whatever is it all about? If this fellow is a criminal, why don't you arrest him? I shall be glad to be rid of him."

"Thank you," said Haig. "It isn't so simple as that. But here's the position, roughly: You have five passengers on board the Wallaroo, whom I suspect with good reason of being members of a dangerous international gang."

"Five!" said the skipper, staring under tufted eyebrows. "Have they all come aboard here?"

"No. Four joined you in London."

"Holy smoke! What's afoot, Inspector?"

"If I knew that, sir, I should know what I'm here to do out of," was Haig's reply. "Certain evidence came into our possession in London which seemed to point to the fact that members of a gang of dope dealers, receivers of stolen property, and other undesirable trades, were sailing in your ship. The exact number of the rooms occupied by them were discovered."

"Got those numbers?"

"I am almost certain I have. My list, however, was made from memory. But in a certain Paris cafe, which we believe to be a meeting place of these people, I recently had a night of a certain man. Today he has joined the Wallaroo, as a passenger. His room, which I have on the list, I think it safe to presume, captain, that the other four suspects should be watched?"

"I entirely agree with you, Inspector."

"The French authorities have just notified me," Haig went on, "that three other men—all they could trace—who were present at the restaurant I have mentioned, have all set out by different routes for the Near East. . . . London like a general assembly of some spot unknown. It's my job to find that spot, delivered in Sydney, to which port, apparently, he was booked.

A puzzling feature of his passport, which spoke of extensive traveling mostly in the Near East, was a visa, bearing yesterday's date, by the Egyptian consul in Marseilles, which strongly suggested that Mr. Chow's plans had been changed and that he was going ashore at Port Said.

Haig presently presented himself in the captain's cabin. There, he remained for a whole hour, busily transcribing from the borrowed Marconi books a number of incoming messages and outgoing messages, received or dispatched by the suspected five. While some of the messages seemed innocent enough, others, notably those sent by Doctor Oestler, quite obviously were compiled in some sort of code.

Haig went to his cabin and settled down before the little table to see what he could make out of this new material.

The half-caste woman known as Miss Edna, and supposed to be a vaudeville artist, Mr. Len Chow, and Doctor Oestler were the suspects whose names appeared in the Marconi books.

Studying a list of telegraphic addresses, which the captain had borrowed from the wireless room, Haig discovered that Mr. Chow's first two messages had been addressed to "Lilong Causeway London."

"Excellent!" he murmured. "Lilong Causeway London" was the telegraphic address of Jo Lung's establishment in Liverpool.

The messages themselves were simple enough. They were these:

One: "Arranged to transfer or signed Chow."

Two: "Head is on board signed Chow."

That's clear enough," Haig mused. "He is informing friend Polson that he has arranged to cancel from Port Said to Sydney and is leaving at the moment. He later sends the information that there is a 'head' on board, meaning Durham, at least. Durham thought he was spotted. He was quite right."

Then, in order of date was an interesting message which read:

"Maurice Paris sixteen to eighteen signed Pascal."

Mr. Len Chow's third message, addressed to "Pascal hotel Maurice Paris" read:

"Your friend leaving us at Marseilles signed Chow."

At which moment came the sound of a loud rap on the cabin door. Dawson Haig hastily adjusted his tinted glasses. Eileen Kearney stood outside. In a green jumper suit and beret, her cheeks flushed and her eyes brightened by a breeze, she looked absurdly young and disturbingly beautiful.

"You positively startled me, Eileen!" he said. "For heaven's sake, cut in quickly. Did anybody see you?"

"No!" she said breathlessly. "But I heard some one coming along the main alleyway and had to run!" She stepped inside and closed the door.

"It's good to see you," Haig declared. "But, according to our arrangements at Marseilles, I'm not supposed to know you yet! What's happened?"

"This," Eileen replied, speaking very rapidly. "Last night I was awakened by some one banging at a near-cabin door. I distinctly heard him say, 'Marconi message.'"

"That would be Doctor Oestler's cabin," said Haig. He stooped over his notes, scanning them rapidly until he came to the last of several messages received by Doctor Oestler. That must have been about half-past three this morning," he suggested.

"It was. Have you the message there?"

Dawson Haig smiled wryly. "I certainly have it here," he replied. "Shall I read it to you?"

"Yes, please do. Then I can tell you if it's the same."

Haig stared at her in a certain bewilderment, then: "This is it," he said: "Oestler passenger rms Wallaroo (b)h keeper searchlight near home stop know tell."

He looked up smiling. "Does that convey anything to you, Eileen?"

"No!" she confessed blankly, watching him. "It isn't the same. Of course, you can't possibly know what I'm talking about, so I must explain. While I was in the bath this morning that sudden squall of wind and rain came. Do you remember?"

Haig nodded.

"I had opened the porthole and fastened the door back to freshen the air in my cabin, and Doctor Oestler, whose cabin adjoins mine, must have gone the same. Because, when I got back—I returned first—a lot of papers which had been lying loose on my table had been blown right out into the main alleyway."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. F. R. FLETCHER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, & Western New York State.

Lesson for July 21 DAVID

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 26:1-19; II Samuel 1:22-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.—Philippians 2:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—David and the Sleeping King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and the Sleeping King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—David the Great-Hearted.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Generous Attitude Toward Others.

David is one of the most prominent of Bible characters. His many-sided life and his close association with Christ give him a place of importance second to none in all the Bible. It is in this light that this great character should be viewed, and not merely as "David (The Great-Hearted)."

I. His Birth and Youth (I Sam. 16; 17:15-34).

Bethlehem was the place of his birth, as well as that of his greater Son (Matt. 2:4). He was the youngest of Jesse's eight sons. His young manhood was spent as a shepherd. This was the first period of his schooling and preparation for life. From the brief descriptive word we learn that in his personal appearance he had auburn hair, fair eyes and a beautiful countenance (16:12). His life as a shepherd was attended with real hazards (17:34-37).

II. His Anointing (I Sam. 16:1-13).

God had revealed to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the new king. In determination of the divine choice, Jesse's sons passed before Samuel in order, beginning with Eliab, the oldest. Eliab was rejected in spite of his favorable physical qualifications. His inner condition as seen by God disqualified him. All glorying in the flesh must be set aside in the choice of a man for a place in God's program. David was chosen because of his fidelity as a shepherd boy. When the anointing oil was being applied, the Spirit of the Lord came upon him. David's attractiveness as a young man, and his unusual gifts were all to no avail without the Spirit.

III. David's Life at the Royal Court.

1. As a harpist and armorbearer to Saul (I Sam. 16:19-23). He was brought to play his harp before Saul in order that the evil spirit might be allayed.

2. His triumph over Goliath. For some reason David returned to look after his father's sheep. On being sent on an errand to his brethren in the camp, he saw the Philistine giant, Goliath, defying God and the army of Israel. He volunteered to fight, skillfully slung the stone which felled the giant, and with Goliath's own sword cut off his head.

3. Won the friendship of Jonathan. This friendship has been immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interest. Jonathan was the crown prince, heir to the throne according to divine purpose. Knowing this, Jonathan waived his rights.

IV. David's Life as an Outlaw (I Sam. 21:10-31; 18).

Though God appointed him king, David wandered for years as an outlaw to escape the murderous frenzy of Saul. During this time he did some foolish things, but he also learned many things in this bitter school which better fitted him to be a king, statesman, and poet, leaving to the world a rich heritage.

V. God's Royal Covenant (II Sam. 7:1-16).

On the ground of the setting forth of this covenant, he is the legal heir to the kingdom. Jesus Christ shall one day occupy the throne of his father David (Luke 1:31-33).

VI. David's Reign as King.

1. Made king of Judah at Hebron (II Sam. 2:4-5:3). A long war was waged between the house of David and that of Saul.

2. King over all Israel (II Sam. 5:4). The elders of Israel at last invited him to be king over all Israel according to the purpose of God as expressed by Samuel when he anointed him king.

VII. David's Sins and Failures.

1. Reto against the enemies of Israel (I Sam. 21, 30). This was a disgraceful act. Being the chosen and anointed of God, he should have trusted God to defend him against the fury of Saul.

2. Plurality of wives. He established a harem after the order of the heathen monarchs.

3. Crime as to Bathsheba and Uriah (II Sam. 11, 12). Amnon's sin, the rebellions of Absalom and Sheba, and Absalom's attempt to seize the throne were the inevitable fruits of his polygamous life.

4. Numbering the people (II Sam. 25).

Through a Partly Open Door Across the Narrow Alleyway, Dawson Haig Was Watching.

ed—he inclined to the idea that Durham, as well as himself, had been notified by Doctor Oestler from some well-informed source.

He bent over the messages which he had decoded. Those sent by the woman obviously related to the chief engineer, one of them reading:

"Organ grinder sure stop, big boy and next of kin nor running signed Val."

This he had translated as follows:

"Chief engineer captured. Commander and chief officer no good. Val."

That this meant that Corcoran had been bought over and become a party to some crooked deal, Haig did not believe for a moment. He read it to mean that the infatuated engineer was playing into the woman's hands. He was to be used, in some way, without his knowledge.

But—Haig stared up at the porthole as well as himself, had been notified by Doctor Oestler from some well-informed source.

FOR NEW READERS: THE STORY FROM THE OPENING CHAPTER

Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-by to his sister, Eileen, on board the Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying $24,000 in gold to Australia. Kearney meets Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, very much in love with Eileen. Haig is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, he delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can. While in the warehouse Kearney picks up a notebook, Yu'an Hee See, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends for his followers after Norwich and Kearney. Norwich is murdered. Haig is pursued over cryptic notes in the book, referring to stops to be made by the Wallaroo. While he is poring over them, a weird creature enters, seizes the book, and escapes. Matt's story of hearing horrible laughter while at Jo Lung's satisfies Haig his quarry was hiding there.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Edith L. Watson

Alaskan "Frontier" No Place for the Weakly

America's purchase of Alaska from Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000, less than two cents an acre, ridiculed at first but proved wise thirty years later by the Klondike gold rush, provided a new American frontier that is becoming recognized as 200 hardy families leave the United States to establish permanent settlements in the northern territory. Alaska is said to have 64,000,000 acres available for agriculture and grazing. Its coal land is estimated at 21,000,000 acres, sufficient to supply the United States for 5,000 years. North America's only important tin mines are in Alaska. Mt. McKinley, rising 20,000 feet, is the continent's highest peak. The territory's 369,569,000 acres, with its 60,000 population averaging only one person to each ten square miles, is said to possess "the world's most beautiful flora," while its fauna is diverse and its big game the largest on the continent.

many Americans believing it was only a vast area of frozen wastes. The colonizing families will each start out with a permanent home, farm buildings, live stock and equipment valued at $3,000. Beginning in 1933, they will have 30 years to pay the government, with 3 per cent interest. Alaska possesses much wilderness, offers rigorous opposition to civilization, demands hardihood in its pioneers; but provides a depression-time frontier.—Indianapolis News.

LETTER IN THE WALLET

"I AM searching for my brother."

The speaker had driven up to a farmhouse in Wet Mountain valley, at the foot of the Sangre de Cristo range in Colorado, and was telling his story to the farmer.

"George came West in 1860, eight years ago," he continued, "and after he left our home in Illinois we heard no more of him. I am very anxious to find out if he is alive or dead. I met a grocer in Denver who said that he sold George a bill of goods that year, and that my brother left some money in his care, saying that he would need it in the mountains, and that he would come back for it in the fall, but he never returned. All I can learn further is that he was headed for these mountains."

The farmer shook his head. "I do not know anything about it," he said, "but you must stay here, tonight, and in the morning we will see."

The next morning Skinner and his host went through the valley asking questions, but no one knew anything about his brother. At last Skinner decided to go up into the mountains, of the chance that he might find some traces of the missing man, and to this end he hired a guide and spent the summer wandering about, following every likely lead, but without success.

Autumn came. It was time to return to the valley. On the way Skinner and his guide camped one night at Humboldt on the eastern slope of Horn's peak. Nearby stood the remains of a cabin, and Skinner idly explored the long-deserted place, finding nothing of interest but an old leather wallet, wound around with wire. This he put into his pocket to be examined at leisure.

During the night a snowstorm commenced, and in the morning the two men packed hurriedly and started for the valley. The wallet was forgotten for the time being, but sometime later Skinner remembered his find, and carefully opened it. Its contents caused his heart to leap, for it was a letter written by his brother George about six months after he left Illinois.

The letter related that George had found a wonderfully rich mine. He was planning a trip to "the settlements" to spend the winter outfitting for the next spring, when he planned to return to the mine. Realizing the hazards of travel through the mountains, George had given the location of his mine in this letter, which he was leaving in his cabin, and also asked that anyone who found it should notify his brother in Illinois.

Skinner said nothing about his discovery, but as soon as spring came he went to his guide of the previous year and said that he was anxious to begin his search where it had been broken off—at the old cabin on Horn's peak.

The location was not hard to reach; but when they arrived, they found everything changed. Snowslides had peeled the face of the slope; trees had been carried away, great rocks had slid down and others from above had taken their places. Nothing remained as it had been, and the cabin had disappeared entirely.

Skinner was greatly disappointed. Still, he thought, he might find something more in spite of the changes made in the scene, and so he and the guide spent the entire summer at the place in the hope of finding some further trace of George, or of locating the mine. But fall came again, and they had learned nothing. They reluctantly started back.

They followed a different route from the one they had taken before, and the trail led them along the face of a steep precipice. It was a dangerous place; rocks loomed high above them and the bottom of the gorge was far below, while the footing was narrow and insecure. One of the pack-burros began to plunge and rear, and finally it fell off the trail, rolling down into the depths below them.

As soon as they could safely do so, Skinner and the guide climbed down to get the animal's pack, for the burro itself had been killed in the fall. As they approached the dead animal, they saw two skeletons, one of a man and the other of a burro, which had apparently been there for years.

It seems a coincidence too apt to be true, but when the articles strewn about were collected, a book was found among them which proved to be George Skinner's diary, and showed that the skeleton must be that of the missing miner. The diary referred to the wallet left in the cabin, and its last entry was apparently written the day after George left the mine. The camping outfit which had been packed on George's burro lay strewn about where the animal had fallen, and considerable gold lay nearby, showing that George's death had been accidental, and that no one had ever come across the body until the day, nine years later, when his brother made the discovery.

George Skinner's bones were interred where they lay, and his brother returned to Illinois. The next summer he came back, attracted by the idea of finding the lost mine, and for several years he spent some time in the search, but the snowslides had done its work thoroughly, and the gold remains hidden to this day.

Proof of Nobility That Is Inherent in Mankind

"Hollywood—Sitting up on her portable bed, Margherita Rouse, an invalid, became the wife of Chester Conklin, film comedian. The marriage ceremony was read in St. Alban's church here.

"The unusual romance began two years ago when Miss Rouse, bedridden by arthritis for 23 years, was brought to Mr. Conklin's house with a score of other invalids for a concert.

"Soon after they met, Conklin suggested that Miss Rouse try again to become well. Her case is responding to treatments and she is now able to sit up and use her hands. Their physician predicts she will be walking within a year.

"Miss Rouse is forty-one years old; Mr. Conklin, forty-six."

Excitingly, a noted woman writer draws these conclusions from the foregoing:

"I read that news item just after leaving a group of women who were disgusted with life. They were disillusioned with the thought of nobility in human beings. They laughed at the ideas of love and romance. Romance, they said, was dead, and all love today a matter of self-interest.

"Most of our readers doubtless have their times of doubt about all those things, for it is easier to prove human selfishness and greed than to show examples of the inherent nobility in men and women. An economic depression is not the soil in which romance flowers where all who run may read, and modern sophistication has even given new connotation to the word 'love.'

"That is why I feel that nothing I could ever say to my readers would be as worthwhile as passing on that story of the forty-one-year-old invalid who became the bride of a well-known movie actor. Those facts have a message more potent than anything words could say."

Washington.—It is slightly more than three months since President Roosevelt signed the congressional resolution appropriating five billion dollars for use by the administration in public works and public relief. To date, according to the records, less than half a billion dollars has been allocated for expenditure on agreed projects and of this sum approximately three hundred million dollars was turned over to the Civilian Conservation corps, a going institution.

The slow motion of the administration in getting its public works relief program underway is giving birth to an immense amount of criticism. It is one of the things that is giving more concern to the officials responsible for spending this vast sum of money in the recovery-reform effort of the New Deal. So many projects have been advanced and rejected in turn, so many new ideas have been brought forward and ballyhooed and so many false motions have been indulged in that Washington observers are rapidly reaching the conclusion that congress was correct when in debate, it was said the administration had no concrete plan for utilization of this vast fund.

To review the developments since April 8, when the President signed the appropriating resolution, is to say that conditions have been one continual round of confusion. First, it will be recalled the President sought to meet the wishes of congress as expressed in debate by relieving Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, of much of the responsibility and authority he held. This was accomplished by the new setup that was reported to you heretofore. Now, it seems, the new setup has failed to function and the bulk of the management of expenditures has settled down into the lap of Harry Hopkins, the relief administrator.

Mr. Ickes still has some authority. It apparently is enough toirk Mr. Hopkins. These two men differ widely in their views. Mr. Hopkins long has been looked upon as a reliever by profession; Mr. Ickes has attempted, insofar as he has been able, to employ practical methods in administration of his share of the funds.

Laying aside the personal equation which is best exemplified by the Ickes-Hopkins differences it must be said frankly that next to nothing has been accomplished. President Roosevelt has stated and reiterated that the expenditure program is getting underway satisfactorily, but the discussion among observers seems to show an alarming lack of co-ordination and of indecision.

One of the newest projects advanced, and it has just passed the stage of an executive order setting up a new agency, is the so-called National Youth administration. This new alphabetical unit—the NYA—has received fifty million dollars to spend in helping boys and girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five. It is supposed to be a means of preventing idleness among the young people who are of the age during which, unless they are occupied, irresponsible tendencies develop.

In announcing the new program, the President departed from his previously announced intention of assisting only persons now on relief. Whether this departure means that he has tossed aside definitely the rule laid down last winter that the dole must go or whether this is to be an isolated exception to that rule, is not immediately determinable. It remains as a fact that the government's assistance under the NYA will be available to needy young men who are not on the dole as well as to those who are on relief.

Secretary Perkins, of the Labor department, said the plan had been worked out by her and her associates in the children's bureau. She figured that 2,500,000 would be eligible for assistance under the plan. Those to be helped will be selected by local volunteer committees, thus establishing in each community another agency subject to federal domination and federal guidance.

Succinctly, the scope of the NYA as outlined by Mr. Roosevelt includes:

- Finding employment in private industry for unemployed youths.
- Training youths for industrial, technical and professional employment.
- Providing for continued attendance of needy youths in high schools and colleges.
- Providing work relief on projects to meet the needs of youth.

Miss Josephine Roche, an assistant secretary of the treasury, and Aubrey W. Williams, assistant to Administrator Hopkins, have been given sole responsibility for management of the latest alphabetical agency. The selection of Miss Roche was said by the President to have been in recognition of her long service in the social field, and her thorough understanding of problems of the growing generations.

Notwithstanding the sincerity and the desire of the President to initiate a program that will be helpful, one hears much doubt expressed that success will be attained. In the midst of many students of governmental affairs there are thoughts sitting back, and forth inquiring whether it is possible for a central group like the federal government to arrange satisfactory methods or occupations for a population so far flung as our own. It is further doubted that sufficient flexibility can be worked into any program to permit of any genuine good coming from the expenditure of even so vast a sum as fifty million dollars.

Beyond that, I have heard it asked how the administration expects to find employment for unemployed youths in industry when late figures show a larger list of unemployed adults than obtained at this time a year ago.

High schools and colleges, of course, are available to provide the educational requirements forming one idea in the general program. Those youths who desire to continue their education certainly are deserving of help and the NYA offers a means to that end. It is too early to forecast what the requirements will be or what sort of rules will be laid down respecting applicants for educational assistance. But even the administration's most vigorous critics have omitted throwing any barbs at this feature of the NYA.

Almost simultaneously with the President's announcement of the NYA he made known that he had decided on a program for construction projects what he said was the first group of non-federal projects under the public works section of the five billion dollar fund. He gave his approval to 63 projects, the total cost of which was figured at approximately twenty-one million dollars.

Each of the loans made in this allocation of funds was based on a grant of 45 per cent of the cost of the particular project by the community where the work is to be done. The federal government loans the other 55 per cent. In this way the cost to the government in most instances is expected to be held within the limitation of $1.143 per man per year.

Some weeks ago the President figured out that the cost of no project in which the federal government put money should exceed an amount greater than $1.143 for every man employed. This was designed to spread employment. But the rule thus far has been inoperative because not a single man has been put to work under any of these projects.

In the meantime, numerous and sundry other proposals for expending parts of the federal money have either been thrown overboard or have been held in abeyance pending further consideration. This is true of a gigantic housing program worked out by Secretary Ickes. It was planned there to spend $250,000,000 and when it was announced a press statement was forthcoming from the Public Works administration that hundreds of men would be offered jobs within a month, so far had the plans advanced.

Also, since April 8, nothing whatsoever has been done toward elimination of dangerous railroad grade crossings. I was told at the Interstate Commerce commission and again at the bureau of public roads that their plans were all ready to proceed with reduction of these highway traffic hazards and eliminate potential death traps where highways cross railroads. Something has blocked the effort in this direction, however, and as far as present information goes actual work on grade crossing elimination will not be started for the next several months.

While the administration is seeking to develop new projects to aid unemployment and relieve destitution, one of its pet schemes appears to be running amuck.

I refer to the effort to transplant 200 Middle Western farm families to the Matanuska valley of Alaska. This colonization project was carried on with federal relief money and those families which were uprooted were taken to Alaska to find the end of the rainbow. According to activity around the federal Relief administration here it is made to appear that the end of the rainbow was, as usual, some distance further on. Certainly it was not in the Matanuska valley because a number of the families already have determined to quit and return to their home communities in the states.

Members of congress who are acquainted with Alaskan conditions tell me that the Matanuska valley is probably the most fertile spot in continental United States. They hold to the conviction that almost any kind of food can be grown in the soil of that valley. But these men are under no illusions. They know the hardships that confront those settlers who were being planted there by the federal government in the hope of colonizing that area. Few of them, the house members assure me, can live there very long unless Uncle Sam is willing to spend millions in providing at least some of the modern conveniences of this day and age and supplying in addition means of transportation and communication. The word that comes direct from Matanuska colony to the Relief administration shows, in my opinion, that the project was conceived and executed without any thought having been given to the practical problems to be met.

TOWN HAPPENINGS

WHO? WHEN? WHY?

John Thomas and Bert Pfingsten of Hondo returned Friday from the Silver City Rodeo. John won first in bulldogging, second in calf roping and first in cow milking. Bert won second in bulldogging.

Julian Herrera and Damacio Chavez were here Wednesday from Capitan in the interest of a baseball team which they are organizing in their home town.

This office is in receipt of word from former mayor G. T. McQuillan, who is on his vacation visiting his two daughters at Long Beach. We instructed him before his departure to avoid the bathing beaches, but we were reminded that he has fallen by the wayside, judging from the picture he sent. Mr. McQuillan will take his daughters to the San Diego Exposition before his return home.

Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Marquez are here from Alamogordo, visiting the St. John family. Mrs. Marshall St. John and children are visiting relatives in Las Cruces this week.

There will be a big free barbecue at White Oaks during the dance given by Tommy and his 'Rocky Mountain Serenaders.' The boys gave a dance at the same place last Saturday night, and the music was so good, that White Oaks people engaged them for this week — and added the Big Free Barbecue to the means of entertainment. You are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Vega and children visited relatives in Tularosa last week-end.

The Benj. Holguin family are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kimbrell at Picacho this week.

A Correction—The Juan Martinez family were El Paso visitors last week, instead of California. They have returned.

L. A. Whitaker is enjoying himself at Long Beach, from which place he writes us that there are still plenty of lots for sale there, as indicated on a picture postcard. Whit will next take in the San Diego Exposition.

W. B. Sharp, trainmaster for the S. P. at Tucumcari, was here Tuesday on official business for his company.

Albert Morgan, Jr., son of Attorney Morgan, is here from Portales for a visit with his father and will return in time for the opening of school.

W. L. Holmes, proprietor of the Buckhorn Cafe at Capitan, was a business visitor in town yesterday and made this office a pleasant visit.

J. F. Tom has finished putting screens on the Luckey Dairy Barn. Mr. Karr, the proprietor, says they are now ready for any inspector.

Baptist Church

In order that some who want to go to Corona to the Singing Convention, our Sunday School will meet at nine o'clock next Sunday morning. Don't forget the hour; 9—and be on time, for we are to have a most interesting study, especially for the women. "A Woman Who Made a Religion Attractive." There will be preaching service at 8 in the evening. We are gratified at the manner in which the congregations have been holding up during the recent hot weather. You are, of course, always welcome to the services at this church.

Here Comes the Band

The Roswell Chamber of Commerce is sending a delegation on a good-will tour as far east as Carrizozo. They will be in Carrizozo July 17, from 1:45 to 2:30 p.m. There will be 100 in the party; will have a 60 piece band with them and will give a concert at Carrizozo. Turn out and make the visitors welcome.

Odd Fellows Install

At the first regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., the following officers were elected for the ensuing term of six months: Otto Prehm, Noble Grand; Thos. Cook, Vice Grand; W. J. Langston, Secretary; L. H. Dow, Treasurer.

Captain Rex Gaither, Commanding officer of the Service Company, 142nd Infantry, U. S. Guard, spent several days here this week, returning to Brownwood, Tex., his home station on Tuesday. Captain Gaither was much interested in this section of the state and Lincoln County more especially. He said on his departure that he will return here about Aug. 20 after he has carried his command to summer training period, which will be held at Camp Hulen Palacios, on Matagorda Bay. He was deeply interested in the Malpais or ancient lava flow, the Gran Quivira and also with old Lincoln and other places of historic nature. He expressed surprise to know that there was so little activity in letting the people outside of the state know of the wonders of this locality. Capt. Gaither said that on his next visit he would bring plans for a large Dude Ranch and will assist in other enterprises to make our county better known on the outside.

Mr. and Mrs. H.W. McCool and boys of Shamrock, Texas, visited Mrs. McCool's sister, Mrs. R. L. Huffmeyer, last week.
