STANDING OF THE CLUBS

	Won	Lost
White Oaks	12	2
Cobras	10	5

By Joe Chavez

The Carrizozo Cobras were scheduled to go to Adobe last Sunday and the White Oaks-Fort Stanton combination were booked with Alamogordo at Alamogordo, but old man Jupiter Pluvius atuck his snoot in the proceedings and the boys were content to remain at home by the fireside and play with the baby. (Some single men of the teams have little brothers—get me?)

Those who haven't, there are the teams' mascots and bat boys.

Negotiations are under way for a three or four-day baseball tournament to be held in Carrizozo on the week of August 12, presumably to begin on the 16th and end on the 18th, Sunday; it all depending on the number of teams entering the contest. Carrizozo, White Oaks, Fort Stanton, Hondo and Alamogordo have expressed their willingness to compete in the tournament, but one more team is essential to complete the roster and any other sandlot team wishing to try their wares for a good sized jack pot, may do so by getting in touch with M. C. St. John, press agent for the Carrizozo team.

At a meeting held Tuesday night, the management drew plans for formulating rules and regulations for the tournament. Chief among these, was that of forbidding all entrants from acquiring the services of any ball player within a radius of one hundred miles from Carrizozo. In other words, no team must hire professional players from El Paso, Roswell, Albuquerque, the Texas League, etc.

Other towns in the state have had tournaments of this kind in the past and all have met with great success. Carrizozo merchants in all lines of business should wake up to the fact that it will be a big drawing card for the town, and thereby help boost the tournament. We'll hear some more about it later on, but let's all begin talking BASEBALL TOURNAMENT!

Ben C. Sanchez of Ziegler Bros. Store slipped one over on us recently. Ben visited in Las Cruces for almost a week and we were "in the dark." We'll forgive you this time, Ben, but don't let the old lady find it out!

Mrs. Gunther Kroggel and son Pat spent the week-end at the ranch home of her mother Mrs. Annabelle Risinger near Adobe.

Keineth Fuller was here from Gallinas Tuesday.

Attorney and Mrs. John E. Hall are in Santa Fe, the Attorney attending a meeting of the State Bar Association.

Mrs. Ola Jones, County School Supt. was an Arabela visitor this Tuesday.

Mrs. Chas. Joyce left the first of the week for Kansas City, after receiving word that her mother Mrs. G. E. Rabskopf was ill, but later advices from Mrs. Joyce are to the effect that the mother's condition is improving nicely.

Out-of-the Ordinary

Harry Roberts, Bolivar, N. Y., was a farmer and had two mules. One of them died and Harry had no where-with-all to purchase a new one. The work on the farm must be done, so he invented a scheme. He took a young bull and hitched him up with the mule. At first, Harry thought his scheme had failed. The mule kicked the bull and the bull hooked the mule, until finally they became reconciled and the work of plowing and planting went on. The strange team have given up their fights, work in unison and actually eat out of the same trough.

France has many things to her credit, but in the following case, she should have a big medal. A certain army officer left his post of duty to play the accordion in a recital. He was sentenced to serve three months in jail. In pronouncing sentence the court martial decided that while deserting his post was a breach of army rules, the additional misdemeanor was playing the accordion, thus adding an extra insult to army discipline.

At Palestine, Ky., Lydia Jackson, nee, age 93, who has had her third husband, will marry Jim Kinsey, negro wood chopper next week. Lydia was sold as a slave in 1852, going from Virginia to North Carolina. At her advanced age, she still retains much of her young vitality. She boasts of the fact that she can make the best biscuits and can fry chicken better than anyone in North Carolina. Jim is 28 and is said to be the best wood chopper in the state. Lydia says she don't mind Jim shooting craps as long as he brings home the bacon and pays the rent.

The strange case of Court Justice Force Crater of New York is being brought up again, after five years of disappearance. Detectives are of the belief that he is still alive. Being wealthy and director of the bank, he layed his plans in order, took a sufficient amount of money from the bank, leaving all his desk drawers empty. That evening he dined with some friends, entered a taxi and waved them good bye. That was the last seen of the Judge. Going through his desk a second time, they found $16,000 in an envelope and addressed to Mrs. Crater. Who put the money there after the desk had been inspected and found empty? Who, how and when, may never be known. He was high in society, politics and had been appointed to a seat of the New York Supreme Court bench shortly before his disappearance.

At a meeting of the advisory board of the White Sands Grazing District No. 4, held in Carrizozo Aug. 1, 2, 3, temporary licenses only, were issued. These licenses were issued on a basis of the number of head of livestock now owned by applicants. No allotment of any area or particular lands were made. This was done on the recommendation of the Administrator, acting for the Secretary of the Interior. Another meeting will be held in Carrizozo on Aug. 16, to hear appeals.

Messrs. Angus Campbell, Harry Connor, John Withers and Thomas Rourke were here from Fort Stanton yesterday.

All on Relief

None for the Harvest Fields

Reports from agricultural states are to the effect that farmers are without help to harvest the grain, because of the fact that so many people are on Relief and refuse to go into the harvest fields.

The workers claim that the farmers won't pay what they're getting on Relief; they say that relief work is so much easier, in fact it is a "lunch" compared to toiling in the harvest fields.

These conditions are to be found in the Dakotas, Minnesota and mainly throughout the middle-western states.

In South Dakota, the Relief organization was compelled to close its doors in order to force men into the harvest fields.

There we have conditions almost unbelievable. Workers on Relief, or rather the dole, permitting grain to rot rather than go into the fields and harvest it.

It is a well known fact that no one should be allowed to starve, but men have been set to work on these Relief programs and given to understand that it is some sort of "picnic" (and all that stuff.) So much so, that they will refuse to work at anything else.

What will happen when the money runs out, we halt to express our opinion.

The Rhode Island Election

Foreshadowing the election in Rhode Island Tuesday, predictions were made by the Democrats that the vote would uphold the New Deal and serve as a showing that the policies of the administration had been endorsed. After sweeping the state here speakers at the expense of the taxpayers and doing everything in their power to make the election go Democratic, it went overwhelmingly Republican.

The President refused to be interviewed on the result. The huge bond of $12,000,000 for public works sponsored by the Democrats which would have placed an enormous burden on the people of the state was rejected by a huge majority. On the whole and according to the opinions of leading senators, the result tied the can of disapproval to the extravagant expenditures of the New Deal.

There will be cemetery working at Angus, Friday, Aug. 16. Everybody come. Work is badly needed.—Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. George Young were here from Vaughn yesterday, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Dave Beckett, Mr. Young and Mrs. Beckett seeking medical treatment. Mrs. Beckett had an accident about one week ago in which she sustained a broken collar bone. George is suffering from a badly infected finger. They left for home in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Moline are spending the week-end at Santa Fe.

C. L. Midcap was here from Lincoln yesterday. Mr. Midcap is the agent for the alcoholic unit in the government service and is inspecting a plant at Lincoln here this coming term.

Mrs. J. M. Reynolds, who had been visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Conley and Mrs. Sallie Mae Reynolds for the past month, left last Saturday for her home in Baird, Texas.

Charles Stevens Dies

Word was received here this week of the death of our old friend and former neighbor, Charles Stevens, who passed on at his home in Bannock, Arizona, on July 26. Mr. Stevens was at one time sheriff of Lincoln County and left with his family for Arizona about 17 years ago. He was nearing the age of 80 years. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters to mourn his loss, to all of whom, the sympathy of their many friends in Lincoln County is extended.

New Coffee Shoppe

Mrs. John Walker, Prop., opened up last night. See the ad on page 8.

Andres Lueras, Sr., was a visitor here from El Paso for a few days this week.

Professor H. E. Alden and daughter Catalina were here for a few days this week, the Professor tuning a goodly number of pianos over town.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Poage came over from Albuquerque last Sunday, accompanied by Mrs. Poage's brother, Ralph Hall and Miss Ruth Kelley. They left Ralph at the Hall ranch near Ancho, where he will remain until the beginning of school, and after visiting relatives here the Poages and Miss Ruth returned to the Duke City Sunday evening.

The New Mexico History examination will be held in the office of the County Superintendent, August 24, 10 A. M. A16

The consensus of opinion around town is that Lowell Burton of the Economy Grocery & Market was the best skater during the Skating Rink's stay in town. "Pancho" Sarafin, Lorenzo Garcia and Joe Chavez took honors for the most stamina in floor mopping.

Elwood Stearns was down from his farm on the Bonito Wednesday. He said that the rains in that region have been so heavy as to overflow the Bonito Dam.

Vaden Elliott came up from Alamogordo the first of the week, where he had been at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Elliott, for the past month. Vaden will attend school here this coming term.

Mrs. J. M. Reynolds, who had been visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Conley and Mrs. Sallie Mae Reynolds for the past month, left last Saturday for her home in Baird, Texas.

ECONOMIC CONTROL by LEONARD A. BARRETT

A strong prejudice exists in many minds against economic control. Any form of control means power which may be directed into constructive as well as destructive channels.

Economic power means congestion of wealth which in turn means accumulation of profits which again means activity in some industry beneficial to humanity.

Sokol Champs

Mrs. Marie Konecny of Berwyn, Ill., the mother of an eleven-year-old boy, and Francis Schwartz of Chicago, were acclaimed the individual man and woman champions of the Czechoslovak Union of America...

In order to produce profits is another question, and should be settled upon an entirely different basis than the destruction of the means through which labor was made possible and the public benefited.

We destroy initiative and creative enthusiasm the moment we deprive industry of the power to accumulate profits. The inevitable question arises, can we have material prosperity without economic control?

Why not argue that economic control be directed into channels of social values and moral uplift rather than destroyed by legislation? Is it not a problem which could be better solved by a proper appraisal of social values with an appeal to conscience?

Painted Designs In the earliest Colonial times, paint was used extensively for applying floral designs to chests and other pieces of furniture.

The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THERE are some little courtesies in telephone conversations which are appreciated decidedly by those who are called up.

"Is this a convenient time. Am I interrupting you in your work? If I am, won't you give me a ring when you are free, or I can call you again later on?"

Unless it is interrupting the person disadvantageously, it is friendly to take the call when received, even though you may have to say, "I have just a few moments, and shall be delighted to talk with you even though it may not be for very long."

Party Line Courtesies It is a courtesy to others on a party line to make all calls reasonably short. Also when there are indications that the wire is wanted, it is graceful to say:

"I think some one wishes to use this line, so I am going to say good-bye now." To this may be added, "I still have some things I want to talk over with you, so I'll call back later," or, "Will you call me back when you have time?"

One thing, frequently forgotten when making a long call, though wires are individual and not party lines, is that some one may want to call you or the person at the other end of the wire. It may be something delightful you, or the other person, will miss out on, if you cannot be reached at the very time.

Make Decisions Quickly Making decisions is one of the things every person has to do. Some persons make them very quickly, seemingly without even giving matters their due consideration. Yet this does not mean that they have poor judgment.

The person who figuratively hems and haws over each trifling decision is laying out trouble for herself. No one's judgment is perfect, and sometimes mistakes will occur even after much mental worry before coming to the settled opinion.

Parents are well advised when they encourage their little folk to decide things for themselves. For example, let a child decide what frock it will wear among those which are suitable. It may be that the color is the only difference between two, set out for the child's choice.

When a child feels a decision has been wrong, he may worry, and wish he could reverse it. It is at such times that parents can help the child to realize that he is learning to discriminate, and that his judgment is growing.

Knit Outfits Are Ideal for Vacation

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHETHER you spend your summer in town or in country, on the golf course, or at the beach you will find it the better part of wisdom and good taste to have at hand one or several of the prettily colorful, porous, airy knitted outfits that have been developed in wide variety to keep you cool as the mercury mounts. They'll keep you fashionable at the same time because of their graceful, alluring lines, smart tailoring and casual appearance.

For vacation purposes knits are ideal. Throw them into your valise at home and take them out ready to wear when you reach your destination, as wrinkles disappear with a shake. Their sporty appearance, too, tunes them to practically all daytime requirements whether your program calls for active recreation or just lazing about.

The vast majority of these creations for warm weather wear are two-piece dresses coming in linen, feather-weight seersucker, silk and cotton knits. Sweater blouses in openwork effects, many with self belts and novelty tie girdles, are undeniably in the lead. These are generally set off by skirts in plain stitches. A new touch, which is seen with increasing frequency is a match of sleeves with front blouse panels. Sleeves, by the way, are usually short and of the puffed type.

Ideal for bridges and teas on sultry afternoons and suited as well to spectator sports is the two-piece ensemble, knitted of a silk trim, shown to the right in the picture. Hand fashioned throughout, it is marked by a lacy knit bosom which matches split umbrella sleeves. A novel touch is provided by a braided neckline running into a tie effect, with two crystal clips for adjustment purposes. The neckline theme is carried out in a braided cable cord ending in a long graceful tassel. Other details of interest include the rib bottom of the blouse, and the novelty rack hemline of the skirt. Dusty pink is a becoming color for this smart, serviceable costume and it is also definitely modish in blue, wheat, gold, antique mauve and white, also other summery shades.

Simplicity is the keynote of the two-piece cotton knit, shown to the left, rendering it perfect for golf and tennis and just as good for morning shopping on these cloying summer days. It is an almost imperceptible bird's eye knit with a unique, straight collar line developed in a rib effect, similar to the treatment of the brief puff sleeves and the bottom of the blouse. Ample freedom of action is permitted by semi-concealed pleats, front and back, which make walking no battle against skirt restrictions. At the same time the skirt is fashioned so as to retain its trim effect. A decorative touch is introduced by a self-belt which may be casually and even negligently, tied at either side in accordance with your whim.

As a pert addition to your beach wardrobe you will find that a knit pajama outfit, as centered in the illustration, will give you endless comfort and satisfaction. The garment, which is in a corduroy stitch, is distinguished by the wide knit rib waistline which assures close fit. The contrasting stripes of the waist are carried out in the wide opening club collar, which is also in a rib knit. Interesting details are the button closing in the now-so-voguish shirtwaist effect, the pocket monogram, the wide pants and the backless treatment. Gray is an unusually effective shade for this pajama, the contrasting stripes being red and blue.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
C.W.P. By Editha L. Watson

THE HILL OF SILVER

A FEW years more than a century ago, a company of eleven men set out from San Antonio, Texas, to search for a wonderful silver mine. This mine was supposed to be near the old fort of San Luis de las Amarillas, on the San Saba river. It was known to legend as the Hill of Silver, and a vast fortune in that valuable metal awaited the man, or men, who should be lucky enough to find it.

It—or something like it—had been "found" many times before. The Indians knew about it, and rumors of its wonders had reached the Spaniards of Mexico as early as the Eighteenth century. The Apaches indicated its direction; the Lipans brought silver from its veins to San Antonio; the Comanches knew its location, and the Caddos, Wacos, and Tehuacanas, who survive only by their names on maps of the south, fought off the white men who traveled near it. Don Fernando de Miranda, lieutenant general of the province of Texas, found a mine which he claimed was of vast extent, and from which he brought samples of ore, and reported that he had been told of even richer mines farther on. Early eastern adventurers established a little smelter for gold and silver; some distance away they had a mine, which they claimed had been worked by the Spaniards; all this was somewhere in the extensive territory of the Hill of Silver.

The little group of eleven men from San Antonio were not hunting blindly. Their leaders were James and Rezin Bowles, who were supposed to have seen with their own eyes the fabulous wealth of this hidden mine to which they were going. James Bowles, who was to become one of the martyred heroes of the Alamo, was said to have joined the tribe of Lipans who guarded the mine, for the express purpose of learning its location. Having succeeded, he organized this company to go back, fight off the Indians, and secure as much as they could of the rich ore.

The old fort was only 150 miles from San Antonio; both Bowles had been at the mine. Putting these facts together, one might suppose that the travelers would head straight for the source of the treasure. But for some obscure reason, they wandered about for three weeks, following James Bowles, who was "looking over the lay of the land," and finally wound up about six miles east of the fort—where they were attacked by a large band of hostile Indians. A day or so before, a friendly Comanche had warned them of the projected raid, so they were prepared to fight, but one man was killed and three were wounded, and there were no means of caring for the injured. So, as soon as they could move them, they took their casualties back to San Antonio, making the trip, though crippled and halting, in ten days.

Perhaps reasoning that if he had gone straight on to his objective the expedition would have met success, James Bowles organized another party, of thirty men this time, and started out again for the silver treasure. This time he led them to the right location, but legend disagrees as to whether he found the mine or not.

That there actually is a Hill of Silver in that region is substantiated by records in the archives of Mexico. According to these records, the mine was worked in the early days of the San Saba mission. When the local Indians arose and killed everyone at the mine, it was considered polite to abandon the place for a while, until it should be safe to return and continue operations. But during the years after this massacre, so many things of great importance occurred to the Spaniards, and so many of those who knew the location of the mine were killed or returned to Mexico, that the Hill of Silver became actually lost.

Several years ago silver bullets were found in the bottom of San Sabu springs, and this find served to bring the lost site to notice again. It is said that treasure-seekers are now hunting over an area of more than 2,500 square miles, hoping to find the wonderful silver hill.

Other lost and hidden treasures of Texas include the famous "Niggerhead," in the wild country along the Rio Grande border. There is not much of a story to go on in the search for this mine, but it is said that a negro who worked for a ranch below Sanderson found the ore and brought specimens of it into camp. He disappeared shortly afterward, and ever since then the hunt has been keen, but with no results. Then there is that deep spring one hundred miles southwest of San Antonio, where "seven jackloads of silver" were thrown in early days when bandits attacked the transporting party. Not long ago drought caused the water to become much lower than ever before, and a bucket which scraped the bottom of the spring brought up a Spanish silver coin dated 1742.

After every violent storm along the coast of Texas, Spanish doubloons are found on the islands in the gulf—only a few at a time, of course, but still enough to recall legends of Jean Lafitte, who is supposed to have buried his wealth on some of these islands.

Fight on Apple Worms Making Slow Progress

Research experts of the Department of Agriculture are seeking elimination of the worms of the codling moth which destroy large quantities of apples and pears. One effective method has been the use of the poisonous spray, lead arsenate being employed. This method, however, has a drawback in the occasional disclosure of quantities of poison still remaining on the skins at marketing time.

One angle of the new attack is along the line of development of new spraying materials which would be death-dealing to the moth, but harmless to man. Another plan is proper practices within the orchards to curtail the changes of development of the moth, and, thirdly, all other methods failing, new means of removing the spray residue before marketing will be sought.

In the search for substitute sprays, nicotine has proved the most promising. Before this alkaloid can be used in a practical way, however, it will be necessary to develop means to make it stick better to fruit and foliage in spite of rains, and also to prevent too rapid evaporation. In this direction some progress has been made with nicotine combinations, such as with bentonite, with tannic acid, and with mineral oil. None of the combinations developed thus far, however, are sufficiently effective, cheap and satisfactory to replace lead arsenate.

THE NEW FIRESTONE GROUND GRIP TIRE WILL ENABLE YOU TO USE YOUR CAR, TRUCK AND TRACTOR IN ALL KINDS OF WEATHER

THE body of this tire is built with patented Gum-Dipped Cords, giving it extra strength and greater flexing ability without creating heat, the greatest enemy of tire life.

The extra-heavy super traction tread on this tire is scientifically designed to prevent the bumpiness on smooth roads that is so objectionable in other tires designed for traction in soft ground. This heavy self-cleaning tread, required to withstand unusual pulling traction and strains, is securely locked to the cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra Gum-Dipped cord layers under the tread.

These new and unusually effective Firestone super traction tires enable you to operate your tractors, trucks and passenger cars for all kinds of farm work and over ground and roads that could not be traveled with ordinary tires, even equipped with chains.

Why Buy a Tire That Does Not Carry the Manufacturer's Name or Guarantee when you can buy Firestone Tires bearing the Firestone Name and Guarantee in any one of the five grades of tires — and get better quality and service at no higher price

1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 1/2 to 2/3 as quick.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, better tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

LACE AND CHIFFON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace and chiffon make a charming combination and one that is most fashionable at the present moment. For the model pictured silk lace goes partner with navy silk chiffon, the matching jacket being entirely of the lace. The V-neckline in front can be adjusted high or low.

SUMMER PARTY TOGS

NOW HOLD INTEREST

Summer party dresses are absorbing the attention of the younger set these days. Sleek sophistication is out for summer evenings, so far as the youngsters are concerned, and fluffy ruffles are the rule of the day. Sheer confections of lace and net and organdy are blossoming in shop windows, with plenty of frills and furbelows.

Consider, for instance, an evening gown made entirely of diagonal ruffles of Chantilly net lace, mounted on tulle. In petal pink or baby blue it is about as fetching a costume as ever was donned by a dewy debutante.

White also is on the up-and-up for summer evenings, what with the nec epidemic of organdies and organzas and such. Ruffled white net is a rare-fire summer dance frock number, with a black net jacket, if you must be sophisticated.

"Something Different" Is Slogan for Accessories

"Something different" is the slogan for the accessories which accent the new clothes. Almost every one has changed its shape and design a bit.

Gloves are shorter, bags are deeper, belts are wider, handkerchiefs larger and all marked by new touches and trims. Short gloves of pigskin, doe-skin or suede are the last word in chic accessories to the new tailleur. They extend only about one inch higher than the wristbone, sometimes slashed briefly up the back and buttoning on the back of the hand.

Buttons Trim

Tiny buttons of crochet or pearl are part of the dainty detail of these lingerie blouses. Rows of them range down front frills or along the sides of cuffs.

A Ship Without a Sail

As a further proof that the New Deal is a ship without sails, aimlessly drifting on a sea of depression comes the decision of the Farm Credit Administration to assist instituting a vast group, spawned by the depression, and known as "part time" farmers.

This lot is made up of suburban residents, who normally are engaged as farmers, skilled, led and otherwise, or have derived their livelihood from commercial enterprises. Now that the depression has whittled down their incomes, they have invaded the province of farmers by planting small acreages, the yields of which are thrown on the market in competition with the work of the horny-handed son of the soil.

Heretofore, it has been the policy of the government not to assist this group in their destructive competition with the farmer. Now, with the new ruling, they are to have the aid of the very government which is weeping crocodile tears at the sorry plight of the legitimate farmer.

While that government is on one hand, preaching the gospel of over-production to the farmers, urging them on every side to reduce their acreage so that they may have more favorable prices; taxing the people that agriculturalists may be paid a Bonus to accomplish this very thing; they finance another group, really invaders of the farmers' province and thereby destroy much of the good done by their production control measures. The Scotsman who paid his young son to forego his supper and then charged a similar sum for his breakfast is an apt illustration.—Roy Record.

We Need Mining

The mines are again operating on a pure supply and demand basis, without artificial props to keep them up.

As a result, the need for a fair tax and legislative treatment becomes even greater than in the past. Unfriendly laws, exorbitant taxes—these are the worst enemies of mining recovery.

We need the jobs, the investments, the purchasing power that mining affords. Our lawmakers can do much to help.

Sad, but True

It is true that textiles and numerous other manufactured commodities are coming to us from abroad—even American flags made in Japan.

And it is equally true that since our farmers were paid by the AAA to cut down farm production, we have been importing more and more agricultural produce from abroad.

Comments
By Lewis A. Burke

"I think that the merchants of Carrizozo should have a 'Trade Day.' Some bargains could be offered by the business men of your town," observes a Nogal man. Do I hear any remarks?

Princess Rassari Hessa Tamaya, first cousin of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, an Abyssinian belle, is in New York to study voice. The princess makes a striking figure in her colorful native costume. We presume she has a good voice; we might witness a program composed of standard classical vocal selections with native Ethiopian folk-songs and tribal dances in the near future.

Mussolini is said to have a chemical which, when spread on the ground, will burn the feet of the African soldiers. But he wants to be sure that the Ethiopians hot-foot in the other direction. A colored man almost generally is the fiercest warrior. Note—If Ethiopia needs some assistance, they might call on Joe Louis, the new dusky heavyweight pugilist.

"The Good-Will parade recently by the progressive city of Roswell was an event that I'll remember for a long time," remarks a local business man. "I think it would be a good idea for the merchants and professional men of Carrizozo to do likewise."

A tourist inquired as to the location of the town "So-rocco" (Socorro) Tuesday. We've heard of the above-mentioned town called "Sock orro," but this one takes the cake. While we're discussing the difficulty in pronouncing names, Carrizozo isn't so hot, either. It is decidedly amusing at the local depot to see the passengers trying to fathom out the name of this place.

We think Huey Long should be ashamed of himself for calling President Roosevelt a liar, faker and telling him to go to hell. And the beauty part of it is, he gets by with it. Note—if we'd use such language to the chief executive, we'd be put in the penitentiary. Still, no matter if you admire Senor Long or not, it requires a lot of nerve to do it.

We see the picture of Jack Garner in one of our exchanges, captioned "Hot Air Cools Jack Garner." Amigo Jack proves that cool air can be obtained from hot air. (We hope it's not the talkative type, Senor Garner. They did a good thing when they kept him quiet, for he was the original Hot Air Dispenser.)

The passing of Mrs. Maggie Lovelace last week saddened the entire community. She was a lovable woman—and if there's a heaven, she'll certainly go there. Mrs. Lovelace is a woman we'll sadly miss.

Foreign production is so much cheaper than ours that even our present tariff wall is ineffective, remarks a rancher from Oscura. What we need is a higher wall, not more leaks in the dike which is already proving impotent when it comes to protecting us from a flood of products of Chinese labor in Asia and slave labor in Russia, the rancher said.

This week's Sentence Sermon—"Why wait for the Heaves—go to Church now." The advice of a local pastor.

Did you ever notice how sweet the birds sing when you arise early in the morning? Wonder where they get their dated coffee—at Burnett's or Patty's?

SEES INFLATION A SLOW PROCESS

A Real Danger for the Future, Col. Ayres Tells Banking Groups.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Present prospects do not indicate that inflation severe enough to cause further dollar devaluation will come soon in this country, but as an ultimate development it seems to be a very real danger, Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Company, said here tonight in an address before the Graduate School of Banking. He believed this statement to be true "unless the government enters frankly upon a policy of issuing fiat money with which to meet its expenses." At present that does not seem to be in sight, he said.

The Graduate School is operated jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University to offer advanced studies for bank officers. "We have so enormously increased the capacity of our banking system for credit expansion that it is difficult to see how we could have a vigorous business revival without having it develop into a credit inflation," Colonel Ayres declared.

Inflation a Slow Process
If inflation does come it will be a slow process, he said, pointing out that in Germany, France, Belgium and Italy it took about five years to develop from the time when the governments entered upon policies of financing large peace-time deficits by bank credit up to the time when the public generally began to spend money rapidly because of fear that it would still further depreciate in purchasing power.

"If we are to go through such a period here it would seem likely that it might last rather longer than the corresponding periods did abroad," he said. "Its beginning would date from the spring of 1933 when we left the old gold basis for our money and entered upon the policy of financing large governmental deficits by the sale of Federal securities mainly to banks rather than to private investors."

"The method that we are following is the one that proved disastrous in Europe for in all those countries including Germany, the increasing issues of money that caused the inflations were not mere printing press issues of fiat currency, but were secured by government bonds and notes discounted at the banks. Nevertheless, the process is inherently a slow one."

Among the clearest lessons taught by the European experience, Colonel Ayres asserted, is that there are "no good hedges against inflation." He added:

Did Not Lighten Debt Burden
"One of the strange facts about these inflations is that while they destroyed the values of most existing debts, they did not succeed in lightening the debt burdens of either the people as a whole, or of the corporations."

"Inflation destroys the value of bonds and mortgages and so confiscates the property of these holders of obligations and hands it over to the shareholders and the equity owners. However, it introduces so many new economic difficulties that these share and equity holders are at once forced to incur new indebtedness so that when stabilization comes the problems of debt are about as troublesome as they were before, or even more so."

The five requisites of inflation were listed by Colonel Ayres as first, a period of sustained active business; second, a rising stock market; third, real credit expansion; fourth, greater outflow of gold than we can tolerate which would force us to cut our currency entirely free from gold; and fifth, continued large budget deficits in government operation.

A PROPHECY

Significant economic developments to be expected in the next decade are listed by a prominent business writer as follows: (1) Higher standard of living. (2) Continued advances in technical processes of production. (3) Factory built houses, better and cheaper than hand made houses. (4) Somewhat cheaper money. (5) Faster travel. (6) News printed by radio. (7) Mechanical cotton picker, revolutionizing the South. (8) Cheaper electric power. (9) Better distribution of goods; more chain stores. (10) Another depression five or six years hence, preceded by an inflationary boom.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it that one farmer raises 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and the other one, on the other side of the fence, raises 25 bushels to the acre? Why is it that one farmer produces 100 pounds of pork on five bushels of corn, and another uses 25 bushels? Not until power machinery, scientific principles of soil fertilization and reclamation, rotation of crops, diversification of crops and economical feeding are applied to the farm, will the farmer's problem be solved, says a farm authority.

BANKING READY

NEW YORK.—There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the June issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

An official survey on June 16 indicated that the Government of the United States, through its loans, was the potential owner of more than half of the existing world stocks of American cotton.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

Eileen was enjoying that sense of martyrdom so dear to woman's nature. Her spirit was seeking Dawson Haig all the time. Where was he? Was he safe? Did he appreciate what she was doing? With it all, she was so happy that she was frightened.

Doctor Oestler had stepped to the open doorway to examine the casket by daylight; and:

"My gentleman," said a soft voice. The doctor stared through his glasses at the speaker. It was the Armenian fortune teller.

"I do not wish to buy anything, ha?" said the doctor good humoredly. "I do not wish my palm to be read—no? And I do not wish to know my future. Is it so?"

"It is not so, my gentleman," the soft voice continued. "It is that I know where there are boxes such as this, but ever so much better—and cheaper."

"You know this—ha?" said Doctor Oestler, smiling at Eileen.

"You think perhaps I don't know this?"

"I think—ha?—you may, I say I do not wish to buy even such a box." "I make you a bargain," the man went on earnestly. "I charge you nothing—nothing—unless you buy from the shop I take you to. This is my bargain."

Eileen began to laugh. "My lady laughs," said the Armenian earnestly. "But I will show her." He took her hand, as Doctor Oestler returned and placed the casket on the counter from which he had taken it. The doctor rejoined them.

"If I tell this lady true," said the man, still holding Eileen's hand, "something I cannot know except from the palm, will you come with me to the shop I show you?"

Eileen agreed. "But he'll fall down on it and expect half-a-crown all the same."

"We shall see—ha! Proceed, my good fellow."

"You belong," said the man, staring into her hand, "not to England—not, I think, to Europe, but to some country far west of Europe—perhaps it is America."

"Detected my accent," was Eileen's mental comment.

"You come not to Egypt, but to somewhere farther—to India, I think. And in India some one is waiting for you—some one you love and who loves you, No! He stared closer. "It is not so. Yet there is some one who waits. There is some one—I think in England—this one I have spoken of—who is now on his way to India, or to some place very near to India. And there he will meet you. . . Ah, but still I am not right! He is here, this one—here, in Port Said!"

Eileen betrayed herself by a sudden start.

"For him there are many dangers . . . and for you, too, lady. I read it in your palm. But you will be married, and be very happy. There will be—"

"That's enough," said Eileen, startled by the man's reading.

"Then we must stick to our bargain—yes?" said Doctor Oestler. The man smiled triumphantly. "Please follow, my lady, my gentleman," he said. "It is not far. Please follow."

Eileen was conscious of a sudden vague uneasiness. It was very difficult to appreciate the fact that she was in the company of a criminal, but it remained a fact, nevertheless, a fact that the man's strange charm of manner invariably made her forget.

"Perhaps the others would like to come?" she suggested.

Doctor Oestler nodded, returned to the shop, and presently came back. "The ladies are still absorbed with silk wear," he said, smiling. "sit under—ha? So I have left Doctor Heatherley to take care of them, and I arrange that we shall meet at the Eastern exchange in half an hour."

The Armenian led them into the native quarter. Eileen's brain began working rapidly. The question repeated itself over and over again: "Should I go? Should I go?"

Perhaps even at the last moment she would have conjured up some excuse. But suddenly she saw a slight which reassured her. . . made her heart ring. Dawson Haig had followed Len Chow, when the Chinaman, apparently aimlessly, had set out, and had temporarily lost sight of him at a corner. Almost at the same moment he had seen Eileen—alone with Doctor Oestler—accompanied by the fortune teller.

And so Eileen, glancing back apprehensively along the narrow street, recognized the glitter of "Mr. Smith's" smoked glasses. Dawson Haig followed, twenty paces behind! Doctor Oestler was talking to the palmist-guide and could not possibly have noticed her backward glance. . .

On they went into several streets. Presently, in a street alive from end to end, they paused. A dingy little shop on the left was evidently their objective. Eileen glanced back.

Dawson Haig was still only twenty paces behind!

The shop was purely Arab in appearance. They went down two steps into the interior, and from a disner the proprietor, whom the guide addressed as Mohammed, appeared.

Mohammed was quite the most venerable specimen of a living Egyptian upon whom Eileen had ever set eyes. His face was a maze of wrinkles, and of the color of a walnut shell. His eyes, bright as a snake's, lurked deep in cavities resembling small caves. Wisps of dirty white hair, almost indistinguishable from his turban, and a straggly beard of the same, outlined that aged countenance.

Mohammed bowed low, opened a door hidden in the dark recess from which he had emerged, and stood aside. Eileen glanced back in the direction of the street. . .

Dawson Haig was outside. Confidently, now, she stepped through into a big room—to pause, breathless with astonishment. The fortune teller had not exaggerated. This was, indeed, a wonder house, a treasury of beautiful things! And there were other rooms beyond.

"You see, my lady," said the palmist softly, "what I tell you true."

It was indeed true, since this, and not the establishment in Stamboul, was the principal warehouse of that great and mysterious industry controlled by Yu'an Hee See. Here, to Port Said, came the choicest pieces, to be distributed for sale.

Some even found their buyers in Turkey, some in France, and some in England. . .

Eileen experienced a sense of bewilderment. It was amazing, in fact, terrifying. . . opening as it did out of that tawdry little shop—what did it mean? What could it mean? She looked around that Aladdin's cave, and slowly the realization came to her that only a Rockefeller could have bid for the contents.

CHAPTER VII

Dawson Haig pulled up before the shop of Mohammed.

Further consideration had convinced him that his earlier fears for Eileen were groundless. His own life hung upon a thread. This he recognized. And he scrupulously avoided overhanging windows and watched warily anyone who walked too closely behind him. But he had no intention of leaving Eileen alone in the company of Doctor Oestler.

He entered the shop, and looked about him. The place was empty. Haig clapped his hands—and a moment later the aged proprietor appeared, bowing low.

"What can I do for you, my gentleman?" he croaked.

"I came to join my friends, who arrived here just ahead of me," Haig replied.

"Ah! Mohammed nodded. "Yes, yes. Wait but one moment."

The door of the treasure house was opened, and he had a glimpse of a long, low room lined with shelves and cases. The sound of Mohammed's shuffling slippers grew faint—died away.

A blank wall faced the shop, and there were no passers-by. It was a queer backwater, and Haig wondered what had induced Eileen to visit it. He stared again through the open door. Then he moved forward and looked along the room.

Like a flash of summer lightning revelation came. . . This was a branch—or perhaps the parent establishment—of Jo Lung's Limehouse emporium.

Came the sound of shuffling footsteps returning. The aged Arab reappeared.

"My gentleman," he said, "I am sorry to keep you waiting, but your friends have gone."

"Gone!"

"By the other door," Haig stared, through dimness, seeking for the expression in those sunken eyes. "They didn't stay long!" he snapped.

The old Arab spread his palms eloquently. "They buy nothing, sir."

"Show me the way to this other door," Dawson Haig directed. "I shall overtake them more quickly by going out that way."

Mohammed bowed low. "Please follow," he said.

Haig entered, his hand upon the butt of an automatic. Yes, the very arrangement of the place told him now that this was the receiving house. Jo Lung's was merely a salesroom. But—Eileen! "This way, my gentleman." The Arab, mounting three steps, indicated a further room beyond.

Dawson Haig followed. A second treasure cave stretched before him. There was a sort of narrow passage connecting this room with another beyond. Through this corridor the aged Arab was hurrying. Haig increased his stride, entered the passage almost on the heels of Mohammed—and . . .

The floor collapsed beneath his feet. . . a stifling drug-like smell swept up to meet, to envelop him, as he fell. "My G—d!"

Too late, he knew. . . to what "other door" this old fiend had led him. . . the "Bath of Feathers!"

Doctor Heatherley, and the two women passengers from the Wallaroo sat at a table outside the Eastern exchange, long drinks with straws before them. Presently Doctor Heatherley glanced at his watch.

"Our friends are late," said he. "They must have found the Mystery shop."

"What's the Mystery shop?" one of the women asked.

Doctor Heatherley smiled. "All sorts of stories are told about Port Said," he replied, "most of them frankly lies. There's supposed to be a store here compared with which Simon Arct's is merely 'Woolworth's.' I've never found anybody to lead me to the Mystery shop, but I believe there is such a shop. Doctor Oestler may know where it is."

Even as he spoke, Doctor Oestler, smiling broadly, bore down upon them.

"Well, my friends," he said, taking a chair, removing his hat and mopping his forehead. "I have walked quickly, ha—hoping to overtake our Miss Kearney."

"Hoping to overtake her?" said the ship's doctor, blankly. "But she was with you! You said that you and Miss Kearney were going to make some purchases elsewhere."

Doctor Oestler nodded his head vigorously. "It is so," he agreed. "It is so, yes. We went, as I said. This shop is not a hundred yards from here. It belongs to a Greek—ha?—who has most excellent perfumes. Miss Kearney also knows it well. I excuse myself—ha?—while she is making her selection, for I see it will occupy her for at least a quarter of an hour—yes! He shrugged deprecatingly. "I call at another establishment that I know of, and purchase—ha—these five hundred cigarettes, look—then hurry back. Miss Kearney has already left the shop of Ostopoulos, and so I continue to hurry—and here, yes, you see me."

The ship's doctor stood up. "It sounds very odd to me," he said. "Port Said's healthy enough in these days, but not for a woman walking about alone. I'll walk back with you." Doctor Heatherley turned to the two women. "No news of the Hangman. May take it for granted he is drowned."

"Len Chow has succeeded. The lady is on her way."

"Joseph, the new Armenian, did good work here."

"Mohammed reports Dawson Haig, chief inspector C. I. D., is dead."

"Joseph, recommended by Mohammed, joins up here in place of Fernand. 'R. M. S. Wallaroo in the Canal. British and American consuls Port Said very active."

"Position on Wallaroo strained in regard to doctor and madame, but legally secure."

"Len Chow due at Kenah tomorrow five o'clock. Franz Hartog reports from Cairo."

"Polodos arrived Stamboul tonight." Yu'an Hee See removed his glasses, remaining motionless for several minutes, hissing softly. Then, again he pressed the bell. The Chinese servant came instantly to his summons.

"Effendi Aswami Pasha."

The servant bowed low, and withdrew silently.

Port Said was seething with indignation. When towards dusk it became evident that Eileen Kearney had been abducted, for no other conclusion remained, both the American and British consulates set to work in earnest.

The town was combed with a nicety calculated to discover a rat in a cornfield. But no traces could be found of the missing girl. Doctor Oestler's account of what had happened was simple enough. Miss Kearney had suggested walking along to the shop of the agent merchant, and he had accompanied her. The doctor's statement was confirmed both by the Greek agent merchant and by the Egyptian tobaccoist, Mr. Len Chow. It was learned from the Eastern exchange, had caught the train to Cairo, only having had lunch in the hotel. Of Franz Hartog no trace could be found.

The news, of course, was known on board, and a state of consternation prevailed. Port Said was living up to its ancient reputation. Every woman passenger who was ashore hurried back to the ship.

Captain Peterson paced his cabin, his tanned, lined face haggard with anxiety. The company's agent sat at the desk, Shale, the British consul, standing beside him, and the American consul stood by the door.

"It's all very well, Mr. Forman," said Shale, addressing his American confere. "But what can I do?"

"What can you do, sir?" the other retorted. "A young American citizen—daughter of my friend Kearney in Colombo—is kidnapped in broad daylight when she is in the company of a suspected person! What can you do?"

"Suspected, yes," cried the other desperately. "But that's not proof!"

"What puzzles me," the captain interjected, trying to pour oil on troubled waters, "is the absence of Inspector Haig. If we had the authority of Scotland Yard behind us, we might be able to act. Besides, what evidence there is, he holds."

"It's little enough," said the British consul—"unless he had added to it since this morning."

Mr. Forman's face was very stern. "In short, sir," he said, "you don't intend to take any steps about this gang of crooks you've got on board; although you know—whatever the evidence may be, and I say it—the evidence—that they are certainly responsible?"

"But the inspector himself assured me that there was nothing to justify an arrest," said Captain Peterson.

"Another point; the attempt to murder Inspector Haig off here last night is good enough to show the type of desperados we're dealing with."

"That's true enough," the captain admitted. "But nobody on board ever saw the missing Chinaman speak to a soul except to the stewards."

"There's nothing," Shale explained wearily, "nothing whatever, to connect him with the rest of the gang. Surely you can see that, Forman? I mean, the attempted murder can't be used as evidence to hold these people."

Forman tugged savagely at his moustache. "That man Oestler is lying," he declared outright. "You all think the same as I do. How can I ever face Mike Kearney with a tale like this!"

Doctor Oestler had only just left the cabin, when he had been submitted to a close cross-examination on the exact circumstances of his visit to those two shops with Eileen. However as the shopkeepers had been questioned and had confirmed his statement in every particular, there was nothing whatever to go upon. His papers were in order, or appeared to be. He had even produced correspondence which seemed to leave no doubt upon the point. And since he was certainly bound for Australia, common sense suggested that this part of his story, at least, was true.

The woman Ednam produced a contract with an Australian vaudeville circuit and displayed a number of professional photographs, programmes, and billing matter relating to recent engagements in Europe. She declared that although she had made the acquaintance of Doctor Oestler on board, she had never met him before.

The agent was in a quandary. To hold the ship meant transferring mails and a loss of thousands of pounds to the company. And if Eileen were found any time during the night or early morning she could quite easily be transported to Suez in time to rejoin the Wallaroo there. The suspects were actually on board.

"If only Inspector Haig would turn up!" Norman exclaimed irritably. "He may hold the clue to the situation."

"I'm putting all my faith in the Inspector," the captain declared. "It's because he's evidently on the job that I still have hope."

"But there's nothing to show," Forman cried, "that he's on the job at all! If I understand the situation, no one has seen this man, Haig, since he left the ship early this morning."

"It's my belief," said Captain Peterson, "that he was following Miss Kearney and Doctor Oestler."

"I agree with you, captain!" cried the British consul. "Inspector Haig was following them. And I think we may venture to hope that he's the only man who knows what actually took place. If it's an abduction, it's highly probable that he's in pursuit of the abductor."

"It's very odd he hasn't got in touch," Forman cut in.

The agent nodded in agreement. "I think that—odd, too, captain," he admitted. "I don't care for the look of it. Assuming that the inspector witnessed this outrage—if an outrage has occurred—and went off in pursuit, he wouldn't do so without leaving some clue to his route, in case he should fall. He was too experienced a man for that."

"Might I ask, Mr. Dimes, the exact meaning of your remark?" Forman, a man of action, knew himself helpless; and he was getting angry. "Are you implying that this Inspector Haig is not engaged in looking for Miss Kearney, but has also disappeared?"

Animal Ecology

In a general way animal ecology is a science which seeks to give some definite form to the vast number of observations which have been accumulated during the last few hundred years by field naturalists and various other people interested in wild animals. Ecology is concerned with reducing and co-ordinating vast available information concerning habits, life histories, and numbers of the different animals, with a view to solving some of the urgent practical problems arising as a result of man's becoming civilized and interfering with the animal and plant life around him.

Lesson for August 4

JOSIAH

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 22:1-5, 21-23. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.—Matthew 4:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When a King Reads the Bible. JUNIOR TOPIC—When a King Used the Bible. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Things That Keep God Out. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Our Religion Owes to Reformers.

I. Josiah, a Godly Young King (II Kings 22:1, 2).

"He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left." About one hundred years elapsed between the reformation under Hezekiah and that of Josiah. Sometime during this period the Book of God's Law had been lost. Two wicked kings had reigned in this interval. It was incumbent upon the king to have the Law of God at his command and faithfully to read it. A country's highest well-being can only be attained when it has godly rulers, and rulers and people not only read the Bible, but order their lives and conduct according to its teachings. Not until rulers and people return to God and conform their lives to the standard of his Word can we hope for return of permanent prosperity.

II. The Book of the Law Found (II Kings 22:3-10).

1. The occasion (vv. 3-5). It was while restoring the temple during Josiah's administration that the Law was found. In clearing out the dark corners to make repairs and to find a place to store the subscriptions made by the people, many lost things were found.

2. The Book read before the king (vv. 8, 10). Upon making a report of the work to the king, Shaphan informed him of the finding of the Book of the Law of the Lord, and he read the Book before the king.

III. The Effect of the Reading of the Law Upon the King (II Kings 22:11-20).

1. He rent his clothes (v. 11). As the Law was read before him he was led to realize the awful extent of the nation's departure from God. The reading of the royal robes indicated the king's penitence and sorrow.

2. The king sent a delegation to make inquiry of the Lord (vv. 12-20). He included himself in the guilt before God (v. 13). His sense of sin was so keen that he sent to inquire of the Lord as to whether there was any means of diverting the divine judgments.

3. The message of Huldah the prophetess (vv. 15-20).

a. Confirmation of what the Law said (vv. 15-17). She said that all the curses written in the Law must fall, for the sins had been so flagrant that God's wrath could not be restrained. It was not too late, upon repenting, to obtain mercy from God, but outward consequences of sin must be realized.

b. Acceptance of Josiah's repentance (vv. 18-20). Because of his tenderness of heart and deep penitence, the Lord said he was to be gathered to his grave in peace and should thus escape all the evil brought on Jerusalem and its people. What Huldah said was true, even though Josiah died in battle (II Chron. 35:22-25).

IV. The Reformation Instituted by Josiah (II Kings 23:1-25).

1. The king read the Law (vv. 1, 2). He gathered together the inhabitants of Jerusalem, including the priests, Levites, and elders and read unto them the Law. What a happy scene it would be if the President of the United States would call the representatives of the people together to hear God's law read.

2. The king made a covenant before the Lord (v. 3). In this covenant he pledged himself:

a. To walk before the Lord. This meant that he would get personally right with God.

b. To keep God's commandments, his testimonies and his statutes. This obedience was to be a heart-obedience.

c. To perform the words of covenant which were written in this Book. The king not only entered into this sincerely but caused all who were present to "stand to" it.

3. The king took away the abominations (vv. 4-20). He not only broke down the places of idolatrous worship, but slew the priests who officiated at the altar.

4. The Passover kept (vv. 21-23). So fully and heartily did they enter into this reformation that this Passover was unlike any that had been held since the days of the judges.

5. Workers of the occult driven out (vv. 24, 25). All the days of the king they departed not from following after the Lord.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

National Press Building, Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Politics varies little from week to week or from administration to administration. There is much the same reaction to smart newsmen and much the same consequences when a politician makes a bonehead play. Those who make the mistakes pay the penalties and just now one hears an abundance of discussion in Washington as to whether Mr. Roosevelt has made a political mistake that may cost him dearly later on.

It will be recalled how in 1928 Senator William E. Borah of Idaho exacted a pledge from candidate Herbert Hoover that if Mr. Hoover were elected he would immediately call a special session of congress to deal with the agricultural tariff. Mr. Hoover carried out his promise and in so doing brought about his eventual downfall. He asked congress for a specific thing, namely, revision of the tariff affecting agricultural imports so that American agriculture could live. But congress, as congress does so many times, refused to stay in bounds. It got out of hand so badly that when the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill finally was enacted into law it turned out to be a boomerang of the worst kind. It overwhelmed Mr. Hoover and all of those who attempted to justify it.

Now to bring the parallel to date, Mr. Roosevelt has asked congress for a three point tax program. It is another one of those specific things. No sooner had his special message landed at the Capitol than house and senate members began going around to see how it could be expanded. Each member had his own ideas and each member began insisting and continues to insist on having those ideas included in the Roosevelt tax bill. From this tax program will result, a good many observers believe, a stareback on the President and his aspirations for reelection next year.

The efforts to expand the tax bill—and a good many of them are going to be successful—represent only the beginning. The thing is like a snowball and snowballs have a way of getting too large to manage. Sometimes they roll down upon the boy who started to make them. When the President first tossed his tax message into what was presumed to be the last stage of the session, he explained that the purpose of the new taxes was ultimately to balance the budget and at the same time to lay a foundation for redistribution of wealth. After the first flurry in which the administration spokesmen at the Capitol tried to rush through a bill, examination disclosed that the schedules he had proposed accomplished neither a balanced budget nor the objective of redistributed wealth. The potential yield of the income tax on the greater incomes failed in any way to produce a wealth redistribution. Nor did the proposed tax on inheritances and gifts yield a great return because in none of the instances are there large sources of revenue to tap.

When the President offered his tax bill he suggested informally that the probable yield would be about $341,000,000 annually. Congressional examination of the schedules developed a conviction among leaders at the Capitol, that the yield would not be in excess of $100,000,000 annually. Then, along came Secretary Morgenthau who expressed various and sundry ideas about taxation but made no recommendations whatsoever. That, according to the trained political observers here, was another mistake. It left the door wide open and naturally there was forthcoming a perfect deluge of the tax ideas born among individual members after the President's message was delivered.

While it is too early yet to predict the final form of the tax legislation, it appears on the basis of present circumstances that the new bill will tax the incomes of a great many hundreds of thousands of persons at a heavier rate than they now are paying. They will get the full force and effect of these tax rates next March 15 when the first installment of taxes on incomes of 1935 is due.

Thereby hang the possible political consequences of the President's tax message. People never like to pay taxes, and to pay taxes now, with economic conditions what they are, is much more distasteful than in prosperous days. So, the political observers in their discussion around Washington now contend that Mr. Roosevelt will have much to answer for if the Republicans and New Deal opposition have the ability to utilize the material made available to them. Previously, in these columns, I have referred to the possible strategy of the President in seeking re-election through an appeal to the masses. This course has been freely charged by those who contend that the $5,000,000,000 public works-relief fund which he has available to spend as he sees fit may be used to advantage in a political way.

Now that congress has given every indication of its determination to go beyond the President's tax proposal and assess taxes against most all of the new phases of a political character referred to earlier have become much more significant.

Although little blood has yet been shed, there has been a major casualty already in the clash between Ethiopia and Italy. It appears that the Pact of Paris, otherwise known as the Kellogg pact and the Treaty for the Renunciation of War, is about ready to be buried in an East African grave.

With an eye toward the dispute between Ethiopia and Italy, Secretary Hull of our State department has proclaimed anew America's belief in the sanctity of the treaty arranged during the term of office of Secretary Frank B. Kellogg and Foreign Minister Briand, of France. He has said very definitely that the United States looks to both Italy and Ethiopia to live up to their obligations under that treaty because each nation is a signatory thereto.

But, while Mr. Hull's pronouncement must be regarded as a most commendable thing and his attitude must be accepted as properly representative of American conscience, the fact that the United States expects the two nations to live up to their obligations does not insure that result. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that the Kellogg pact is about to become, if it has not already become, just another scrap of paper.

In frequent conversations, one hears the question asked: Why is the United States taking such interest in the controversy between Italy and Ethiopia? Those nations are thousands of miles away. They represent little that has a direct contact with our economic or political life as they stand today. Why, then, should the American government interest itself in that controversy except on a basis of the American people's natural love for peace?

The answer is simple. One can go back through history and discover where every important war had its beginning over issues of no more concern to other nations directly than the issues between Ethiopia and Italy.

One must become a bit disturbed in examining the political structure obtaining throughout the world today. It is in the nature of a keg of powder. Japan and Russia are at bayonet points because Russia feels Japan is expanding in the Far East and is seeking eventually to take over a portion of the territory so long under control of the Russian Bear. Besides there is a Chinese question in the Far East with the Japanese encroachment upon Chinese affairs. This condition has left a bad taste in the mouths of many statesmen and it will be influential if and when there is a realignment resulting from the crisis in Africa.

President Roosevelt has taken some notice of the plaint of members of house and senate who have been feeling the effects of Washington's intense heat. He has partially redefined the list of "must" legislation that he wants passed before congress adjourns. Heading this list, of course, is the tax legislation and it is more than intimated that he will not agree to an adjournment until a new tax law has been passed and signed.

Mr. Roosevelt also is inclined to insist that congress enact the bill which will deny corporations or citizens the right to sue the federal government on account of losses allegedly sustained through the government's gold policy. This legislation, from the administration's standpoint, is imperative because unless courts are denied jurisdiction in such suits it is an undoubted fact that there will be many of them filed before congress reconvenes next January. Thus, if the administration desires to avoid serious court battles in the face of the Supreme court's decision in the famous gold cases, it must prevent the filing of those suits. Once they are filed, an act of congress cannot prevent the rendering of a final decision and the adjudication of damages if any are found.

Another measure which the President wants enacted is the banking act of 1935. It has undergone considerable revision at the hands of the senate sub-committee, presided over by Senator Glass of Virginia, but the latest word from the White House is that the administration will not insist upon the radical provisions originally written into the bill by Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve board. The Eccles plan, it will be recalled, was regarded by many as certain to result in placing control of the banking structure in a politically minded Federal Reserve board. The Glass revision is considered to have eliminated that danger.

The President has encountered a serious obstacle in the banking bill, however, that is related to political questions. As the bill now stands, banks would be permitted to underwrite issues of corporate securities, that is, to act as agent for the sale of those securities. Mr. Roosevelt is seeking to find some way by which the underwriting bank can be prevented from investing its own funds in those securities, a danger he regards as grave.

Why Permit Men Monopoly of Fun?

"In this corner (we are describing a boxing bout) is Myron Emory, weight 132 pounds. And in this corner Charlie Young, weight 114. The boys are known as the Cuban Flash and the New Hampshire Wildcat. They will now fight four rounds for the whiskerweight championship of the world."

The reporter, in a popular magazine, goes on to describe the fight; how the boxers, lean, tanned, eager, advanced to the center of the ring; how the crowd applauded wildly; how they battled, now boxing cleverly, now slugging hard, the crowd shrieking encouragement. Twice one of the fighters was knocked to the canvas, but twice he arose and earned himself the decision of a draw.

And now, says a woman writer, whose widely read articles are not usually devoted to prize-ring activities, the point of this boxing report in this space. It was really a very strange contest. For the fighters, Emory and Young, were seventy-nine and seventy-eight years old! The referee was a hundred and three.

The bout took place in St. Petersburg, Fla., a popular haven for old people. It was managed by the Three Quarter Century club, all of whose members are over seventy-five, all active in some sport.

And no old-time athletes are these men. Just elderly people who when they retired to that city in the sun found all sorts of diversions—for young people. They realized that if they were to have any fun there they would have to organize activities for themselves. So they founded the Three Quarter Century club—"not to turn back the years, but to utilize fully the years they have left." It appears they are adding to them.

But—the Three Quarter Century are all men. My thought is, what about the women? They don't have to box, or join the baseball team, but there are goodly activities in that city of the sun that would give them no less fun. Have they been so preoccupied all those years before that they can't learn now how to take fun like their men? What's an idea for the generation to follow them. Let this July 4th be remembered as an Independence day for a Woman's Three Quarter Century club!

After they look over the sights of the big Fair, Jesse will return to Bear Creek and Lon to Corona.

Granville Richardson and Fermín Pacheco were here on a business visit from Arabela last Friday.

FOR SALE—About 50 head of good young cows and heifers. Several spring calves in the bunch; one registered bull; all white faces.—W. B. Payne, 35 miles northeast of Capitan. A2

We hope that the Misses Ella and Ruth Brickley are enjoying their visit to the San Diego Exposition.

Gunther Kroggel of the New Mexico Mechanical Equipment Co., made a trip to Arabela this Tuesday with a 300-pound kerosene burning refrigerator for Leopoldo Pacheco. The task of unloading required the efforts of three men, Mr. Kroggel and two helpers. When nearing their destination, they encountered a water spout which would have swept the empty truck off the road, but the heavy load prevented a swamp.

W. J. Ayers and daughter Miss Gertrude of their ranch near Three Rivers were Carrizozo business visitors last Saturday.

Mrs. Elsa Charles of Alamo-gordo and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dingwall of Tucumcari were here to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Maggie Lovelace.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberts, Mrs. M. G. Peckham, daughters Mrs. Fay Harkey and Vernon Ruth, left Saturday evening for Albuquerque, where Mr. and Mrs. Roberts left the party and went on to Gallup on a business mission, leaving the others to visit relatives. On the return trip, Albert caught up with them as he passed through Albuquerque. They arrived home Monday morning.

Prof. A. B. Moss and Mrs. T. Laramie, P. T. A. president of Lincoln were business visitors in town Wednesday of this week in the interest of a new addition to the Lincoln school. They made this office a pleasant call while here.

Joss, Juan and Cruz Otero of Capitan were business visitors at Santa Fe the first of the week.

Red Burnett was a visitor from the Alto regions yesterday.

Fred Baldonado and Robert Swan, Sr. are erecting adobe residences on the east side of the railroad tracks.

The State Fair

Some extensive changes have been made in the premium list of the Eastern New Mexico State Fair to be held in Roswell Oct. 2, 3, 4 and 5. These books are just now coming off the press and a postcard to the secretary of the fair at Roswell will bring a copy. Increases have been made in premiums in some departments and there have been re-classifications which it is hoped will enable more farmers and stockmen to send exhibits, and more women to make entries in the domestic arts departments.

Livestock barns at the fair grounds will be enlarged and the general exhibit space will be increased this year. Reservations for space for County exhibits have already been received from the western part of the state in addition to the usual community exhibits from eastern New Mexico.

A much larger space has been reserved for the New Mexico Pure Seed Association show this year. New and different entertainment features have been arranged for each of the four days of the fair.

Shall We Destroy the Wealth?

The recent proposals to create new and more stringent federal taxes, based on the demagogic demand of "share the wealth," have met with virtually unanimous denunciation from newspapers, from industrial leaders, and from the best economic commentators.

As many unbiased experts have pointed out, "share the wealth" would really "destroy the wealth." It is all very well to talk about soaking the rich, and breaking up accumulated capital, but when you do that you break up industry, you destroy jobs, you artificially dry up the springs of productive enterprise, you stop progress—and in the long run, the person who gets soaked the hardest is the man looking for a job.

These new proposals are not primarily destined to raise revenue — drastic and confiscatory as they are, they would produce but a minute fraction of the money that is being spent today for federal activities. The rich are too few and far between and the estates that would be taxed almost into non-existence are fewer yet.

The proposals come under the head of "reform" — and are they put forward at a time when other unprecedented "reforms" are the greatest obstacles in the way of recovery.

We need to stimulate capital, not to frighten it; we need to give the investor the confidence that will make him put his money to work, not make him give up in despair because of policies that would destroy his accumulations and labors of generations.

Fair, equitable and reasonable taxation is essential to economic and social stability; inequitable, unfair and confiscatory taxation can only create havoc—at the expense of every worker, every home-owner, and every citizen. —Industrial News Review.

W. T. Lumpkins, son Louis, Mrs. Eva Laine were here from Capitan this Thursday.

Big crowds turn out every night to the skating rink across Rolland's Drug Store—some to skate, others to try their stamina, and the majority to enjoy a hearty laugh. Great game—if you can take it with a smile.
