Sad Accidents

Two sad accidents in which engineer Henry Hoffman and son Harold were the victims, figure in the week's happenings and both are next to serious in nature and coincident. Saturday, on the highway near the CCC Camp, Harold was struck by a passing car belonging to a Tulsa man by the name of Buck, we understand. The car struck Harold in the back, almost penetrating one of his kidneys. When Henry came in from his run, he went out to the spot where Harold had been hurt to ascertain in what manner the accident occurred. Nick Vega was coming from White Oaks with the mail and seeing Henry hunting as if for something lost, he stopped to aid Henry in the search, when a car approached driven by P. M. Melton of Ancho and as it neared the place where Henry and Nick stood, it swerved to the left and came directly toward them.

Seeing the car would hit them, both jumped to one side. Nick got into the clear, but Henry was hit on the left leg, breaking it in several places. He was taken to Johnson's Hospital where an X-ray examination revealed the injury so serious that Dr. Johnson ordered him sent to Hotel Dieu in El Paso, to which place he was taken Tuesday evening on No. 11.

Mrs. Levin W. Stewart of Douglas, Ariz., who has been with her brother Jess Vandeventer of Ancho for the past week, stopped over for a few days' visit with friends here. Mrs. Stewart once resided in White Oaks in the good old days and her many friends were glad to see her. While in Carrizozo, she was the guest of Mrs. Albert Ziegler.

The Carrizozo Bridge Club met with Mrs. Albert Ziegler yesterday, Thursday afternoon.

Dionicio Martinez passed away at his home on the east side yesterday evening after a lingering illness. The funeral will be held this afternoon. He is survived by his wife and other relatives, to all of whom the sympathy of this community is tendered.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Spencer and son A. N. were El Paso visitors this week. Mrs. Spencer calling on friends at that place, while their small son A. N. took in the Al G. Barnes Circus.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Burks of Capitan were business visitors here yesterday.

Mrs. L. N. Bell was a visitor at Hobbs for a portion of the week. She said that the town was booming; houses were not only scarce, but all taken up by newcomers. Mrs. Bell is of the opinion that some one with a small capital would do well to invest in a string of three-room houses at that place, for, according to Mrs. Bell, it would be a good paying proposition.

John Scharf has gone back to Three Rivers and is now with Lester Greer on the San Andres goat ranch. He moved down from White Oaks this week.

ATTENTION!

COUNTY FAIR

The annual Lincoln County Fair will be held in Carrizozo on October 18 and 19. Preparations are being made to add new attractions this year, including barbecue, steer and goat roping, horse races and athletic events including baseball and soft ball. The Fair will be held under the management of a committee of five, of which Dr. R. E. Blaney is chairman. The active participation of the entire county is desired. Watch next week's paper for further details.

Burks-Reynolds

On Sept. 3, at Portales, Miss Bertie Lou Burks of Capitan and Herman Reynolds of Portales were united in marriage. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Burks. She is a very charming young lady and is possessed of many becoming characteristics. The groom is a son of L. E. Reynolds, owner of the East Valley View Farms in the locality of Portales and is associated with his father in that industry. The young couple will make their home at Portales and the good wishes of their many friends in Portales and Capitan will attend them.

The election Tuesday ended with a light vote over the county, which was a decisive defeat for all the five amendments as follows:

No.	For	Against	Majority
1	147	217	70
2	77	279	202
3	95	260	165
4	135	219	84
5	123	219	86

In some precincts no votes were cast and others held no elections whatever and sent in a few scattering votes which would not materially change the above figures. All amendments were defeated over the entire state, 2 to 1. Judges and clerks worked all day without remuneration.

Mrs. R. L. Willingham came down from her ranch near Corona Wednesday and is spending the week-end with her daughter Mrs. Brooks Lewis and other children who are attending school here.

Mrs. Grace Hobbie has returned from Portland, Ore., where she accompanied her daughter Eliza to enroll for her second year at St. Helen's Hall, school for girls, conducted by the Episcopal Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Wooten are here this week from Tucson, Ariz., Austin attending to the interests of Undertaker T. E. Kelley, who is attending the convention of undertakers in Albuquerque.

County Clerk Ernest Key made a flying trip around the County Tuesday of this week.

ANCHO ITEMS

A group of merry-makers assembled at the home of Mrs. M. R. Hendrix, four miles west of Ancho, last Friday evening and had a party. The occasion was to celebrate the birthdays of Miss Dorris Ferguson and Mrs. Hendrix, the former's being on that day, Sept. 18, and the latter's on Sept. 18. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carl, Miss Imogene Miller and Alvin Carl of Carrizozo; Carl Craig and Miss Mary Crawford of Ancho. Others of the group were neighbors and youngsters from Ancho. Table games were enjoyed by the grown-ups, while the younger ones played moonlight lawn games. Refreshments of cake and cold drinks were served to twenty-five guests. Mrs. Hendrix and Miss Ferguson received lovely gifts. Mr. Craig had the misfortune of running into a barbed wire fence and cutting himself painfully, for which we offer our regrets.

Respect Ranchers' Rights

In this issue of the Outlook you will find two notices, one from Sheriff A. S. McCamant, the other from Deputy Sheriff Jack Davidson, who have been compelled to this means in order to prevent their valuable stock from being killed by numb-skull hunters who blaze away regardless of giving a thought or care as to where the ranchers' stock is located. At the first movement of a bush, they will fire without a thought of what they are shooting at and nine times out of ten, it will be a steer instead of a deer.

This is not a fancy; it's a fact. Ranchers have suffered from that sort of bone-headedness too long and are determined to put a stop to it. If we should be consulted in this matter, we would give some advice like this: First of all, if you want to be a good sport and do the square thing, go and introduce yourself to the ranchman, let him feel of your head and ascertain if in his judgment, you have enough common horse-sense to know the difference between a steer and a deer. If his diagnosis is favorable, ask his permission to hunt on his land. If he allows you to hunt, respect his rights, appreciate his kindness and don't kill his valuable stock. Until such a time, heed the warning and avoid trouble. The notices are published for the ranchers' protection and means Y O U!

Philip Bright was appointed Scoutmaster of the local troop of Boy Scouts at the regular meeting of the Business Men's Club Wednesday evening at the popular Carrizozo Eating House. The Carrizozo Business Men's Club is sponsoring this movement.

Mrs. S. G. Allen spent a few days in El Paso this week.

Out-of-the-Ordinary

One of the strangest and most pathetic stories we have heard for many years, comes in the week's news from Landisburg, Pa. Out of respect for the family and to prevent the folks from being too widely advertised, the names were omitted from the narrative. In a family having but one child, a son, naturally he was idolized by the parents. He became of age just as the world war broke out and joining the marine forces, served overseas until he became an amnesia victim and was confined in a hospital in France for many months, but was finally discharged and came to this country. After arriving here, he suffered a relapse and loss of memory. He wandered about over the country for 12 years, during which time, the parents kept a light in the window to serve as a beacon signal of welcome, should their son ever return. During those long years, all efforts to locate him were of no avail. Suffering the pangs of a broken heart, the mother died six years ago and on her deathbed, she made the father promise to keep the light burning as long as he lived. The son finally drifted into a Red Cross office in Portland, Oregon, wanted to know where he was, who he was and said he was sure that he was an ex service man. The Red Cross sent out inquiries and had his picture published in one of the daily papers, which in some strange manner, reached the father in the northern woods of Pennsylvania. Recognizing the picture, the overjoyed father wired the Red Cross to hold and care for him and made preparations to have him sent home. No sooner had the arrangements been completed, the anxious father passed away. Now, the son has been returned but only to perhaps spend the remainder of his existence in a house of refuge. That strange incident in which three innocent people suffered to the above extent, would cause one to form the opinion that this old world is unevenly balanced. What do you think?

While prospecting in Sheep Creek near Salmon, Idaho, two weeks ago, Jack Sheek of Gibbonsville, his dog treed a big black bear. Jack has always been noted for his good throwing and was a star pitcher on his home town team. Jack picked up a heavy, smooth rock, hurled it at the bear, struck him behind the ear, killing him instantly. The big fellow weighed 400 pounds. A close examination showed that his neck had been broken with the force of the blow.

At Holyoke, Mass., "Pepper," an airdale dog 12 years old, has his second growth of teeth. When he was 9 years old, he had no teeth and for a year he lived on mush and milk. Two years ago, a new set of teeth came in and now he can eat anything and can chew an automobile casing to pieces.

Brazil is where the Nuts come from but this one has it beat a city block. As soon as it begins to get cold, John Hanngrouch at Northampton, Mass., goes to bed and remains there until spring, letting his hair and whiskers grow. We wonder how one of the local barbers would like the job of fixing him up?

Nation Will Save Its Historic Sites

Preservation of Landmarks Adopted as a Policy.

Washington.—Preservation of historic sites, buildings and other milestones along the paths traveled by the men and women who created a nation on this continent has been declared for the first time to be a national policy, and provision made by congress to rescue and restore for the inspiration and benefit of the American people such significant reminders of their heroic past.

Under the broad terms of two bills, one of which already has become law and the other of which appears assured of enactment before congress adjourns, it is hoped to rescue and restore such survivals as the Spanish missions in the southwest, Derby Wharf and other sites and buildings in Old Salem, Mass., built in Colonial times, and beautiful antebellum plantation homes in South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, which are in daily increasing danger of destruction.

The Hermitage plantation on the Savannah river, described as "one of the priceless historical heirlooms of this country" was disturbed recently to make way for an industrial plant.

The buildings were purchased by Henry Ford and removed to another site owned by him at Richmond, Va.

Old Homes May Be Torn Down.

At Portsmouth, N. H., are fine old examples of early American homes not as yet endangered but are in the old part of town where, unless measures are taken to preserve them, they are certain soon to be torn down.

And in the West and Middle West, along the Oregon Trail, and the route of the Pony Express and the Overland Stage are the sites and survivals of pioneer posts and events.

It is desired to preserve and restore, in Wyoming, Fort Laramie and Fort Bridger, and to protect Register Cliff in the southern part of the state on the sand stone sides of which are inscribed the names, with dates, of many of the 50,000 pioneers who passed that way in the "Chiricahua and Forties and of whom in some cases, these are the only surviving records.

The signatures, now in danger of erosion and obliteration, can be stabilized for the benefit of future historians and genealogists, and all others interested in the recreation of sights and scenes of those early days.

All these and many other antiquities of national significance are to be surveyed, evaluated and acquired.

VACATIONS

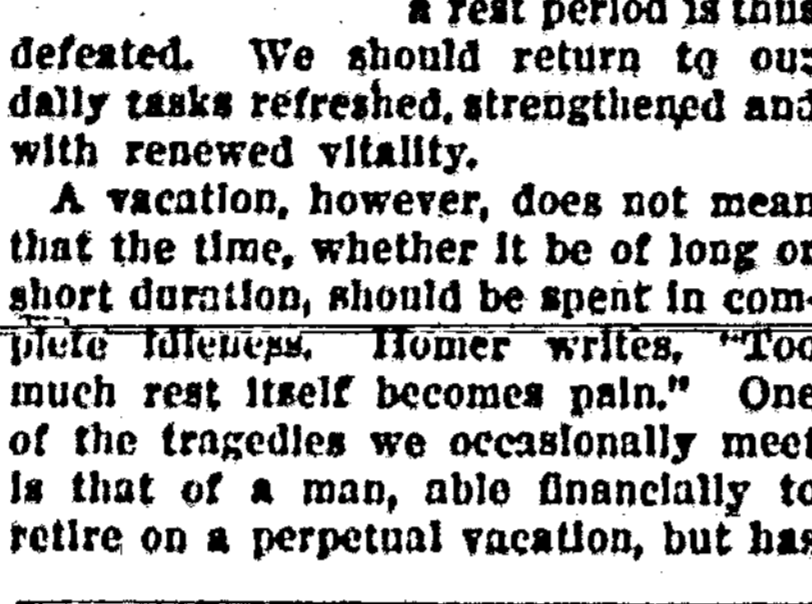

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Cowper writes, "Absence of occupation is not rest; a mind quite vacant is a mind disturbed."

It is interesting to note the various ideas people have about a vacation. True, it is freedom from customary toil and yet many persons return to their work after their vacation more tired than before they went away. They toiled very hard to have a good time.

The very idea of a rest period is thus defeated. We should return to our daily tasks refreshed, strengthened and with renewed vitality.

A vacation, however, does not mean that the time, whether it be of long or short duration, should be spent in complete idleness. Homer writes, "Too much rest itself becomes pain." One of the tragedies we occasionally meet is that of a man, able financially to retire on a perpetual vacation, but has nothing to which he can retire. He has never learned to play and has never cultivated a hobby. When his usual routine is abandoned he finds himself very miserable indeed. The very idea of an endless vacation to him is positively unendurable. The greatest benefit of a vacation comes from a change in thought and habits and perhaps environment, in other words, in complete contrast with and freedom from daily grind. The real benefit is found in the change! "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Bill Posed Nicely

Bill, head man in the traffic corral at the St. Louis zoo, appears to be looking directly into the lens of the camera, but as a matter of fact he's looking at some tempting green foliage held by a keeper directly back of the camera. The instant the shutter clicked, Bill dashed for the outer recesses of the corral at top speed.

Much benefit may come to us not only physically but mentally. When we are on a vacation we absent ourselves from our problems and are thus able to view them from a distance. What seemed large and important may appear relatively less important. What seemed unsolvable may appear easy of solution. It is possible to be too near a problem to thoroughly understand or comprehend all the issues involved. Many of our most fruitful ideas come to us in the early morning hours after a good night's sleep. Vacations also afford a time for spiritual rejuvenation. The mountains, forests and ocean, or whatever may be the environment, inspire us to higher thoughts; to a sense of gratitude and appreciation for the beauty and grandeur of this very wonderful world. Mountains were not made to be inhabited. We climb them to obtain a point of view. Who would want to spend an endless vacation upon a mountain top? True rest is not found in idleness but in service.

"Rest is not quitting the busy career. Rest is the fitting of self to one's sphere." Rest is not found in freedom from duty, but is found in doing our duty in every day tasks. If we have thus learned how to rest the entire year may be a vacation.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

AS PEOPLE advance in years, it is important for them to be able to enjoy themselves alone. It is a wise thing to learn this trick at any time, but it becomes almost an essential to happiness to know how to employ time in pleasant ways without any companionship, when past the prime of life.

Just what shall occupy the attention is for each individual to determine, as tastes differ widely, but there are certain ways which may be suggested that lie within the scope of possibility for almost everyone. That is, none of the things require expensive outfits, nor are costly to do.

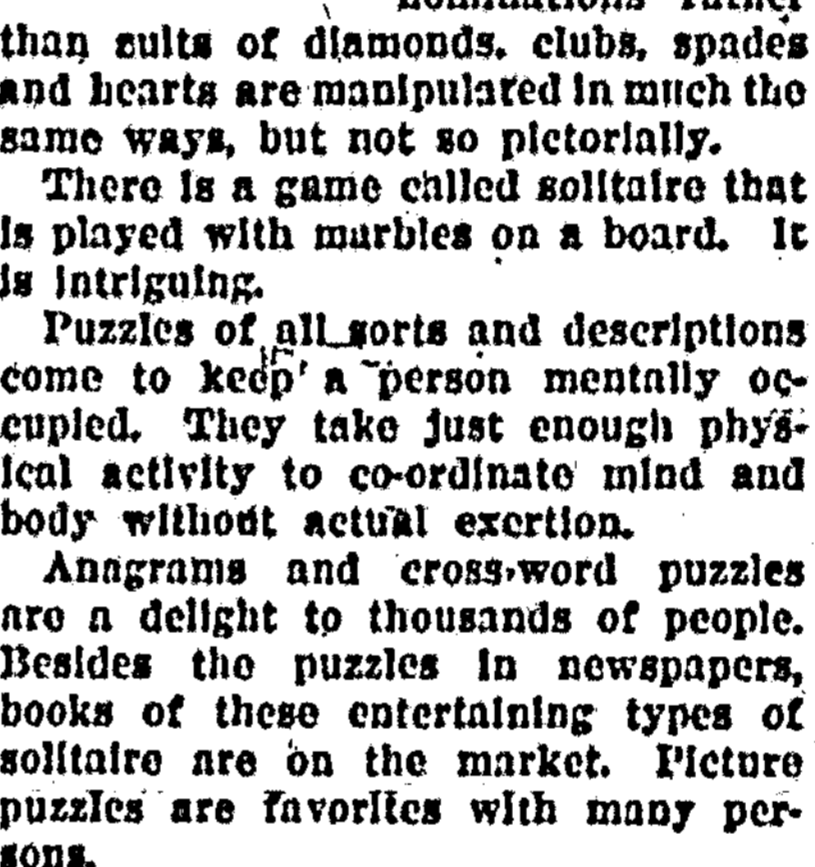

Games of solitaire are a recognized diversion. Of these there are endless kinds. Most of them are played with a single deck of cards. Some require cards other than the regulation ones.

Entertaining Oneself. Numbers is one such game for those who do not care for playing cards. Denominations rather than suits of diamonds, clubs, spades and hearts are manipulated in much the same ways, but not so pictorially.

There is a game called solitaire that is played with marbles on a board. It is intriguing.

Puzzles of all sorts and descriptions come to keep a person mentally occupied. They take just enough physical activity to co-ordinate mind and body without actual exertion.

Anagrams and cross-word puzzles are a delight to thousands of people. Besides the puzzles in newspapers, books of these entertaining types of solitaire are on the market. Picture puzzles are favorites with many persons.

Occupations in Variety. Embroidery, knitting, crocheting, tatting, and all forms of artistry done with a needle of one sort or another employ a woman's time pleasantly, and with such good results that her handiwork can aid in decoration of a home, in practical ways, as found in rugs, table linens, etc. Also, handsome accessories of costumes can be so made, or ornamented, such as bags and scarfs.

Interest in collecting special articles is a marvelous way of keeping one's interest in things that are broadening in scope. This can be done without companionship, but whatever the subject chosen, it never fails to bring one in contact with those of similar interests. So it works to the advantage of occupation alone, and to companionship at times with those mutually minded.

Games of cards come in the category of entertainments that are inactive enough for those in advancing years to enjoy. These, also, help to foster contacts of social life. Those past the prime of life should know how to play good games of cards.

The Joy of Living. It is surprising how easy it is to complain and how hard it is to be thankful. This seems to be an actual attitude toward the things of life, even though by so doing we strengthen and exaggerate the difficulties, and decrease and render less effectual the fortunate ones. We are inclined to blame circumstances and sometimes other people for our misfortunes without realizing that, in small or large measure, we have ourselves to blame—not in causing the troubles, perhaps, though we often do that, but in making the effects of them continue and thereby adding to the weight of them.

Without being a Pollyanna, we can be thankful much more often than we are. It is more than likely that circumstances, and other people are partly or entirely responsible for the good as well as the bad things. But for the fortunate matters we are prone to feel that, to our own efforts, credit is due. It is not suggested that we attribute to misfortunes any need of good fortune. However, if we scan the former carefully we shall find that there are certain aspects not all bad. For these flecks and areas of good we can rejoice. If it amazing how one good thought will lead to another, and we may find, without forcing joy into trouble, we still may lessen the latter by our discernment.

Bottle green jersey trimmed with matching grosgrain ribbon makes a smart skitwaist dress for campus wear. The green leather belt with its ring and double buckles is a new note.

Effect of Rarefied Air. The rarefied air of high altitudes has a strange effect on the minds of mountain climbers. They not only experience difficulty in remembering what they are doing, but sometimes have hallucinations which cause them to descend the mountain while believing they are still going upward.

Sets World Record

Under the terms of a bill which has passed both the senate and house and is assured of enactment before congress adjourns, the secretary of the interior is instructed to make an intensive expert nation-wide survey to determine the existence and exceptional value of places and properties of interest as commemorating or illustrating the history of the United States, preliminary to their acquisition, when authorized by gift, purchase or otherwise.

In this work the secretary is to be assisted by a general advisory board of not to exceed 11 qualified experts appointed by him to serve without salary in cooperation with the staff of the historical division of the National Park service.

Another bill, already enacted, provides for a National Park trust fund board to accept and administer gifts or bequests of properties to the National Park service which is charged with the duty of preserving and restoring national monuments.

Bald-Headed Man Wins a Free Permanent Wave

Calcutta.—Fortune has played queer tricks on some of the prize-winners in Calcutta's jubilee "dip," of which the final results have just been announced.

A completely bald business man has drawn a ticket entitling him to a free permanent wave, and a poverty-stricken coolie has won a cocktail shaker.

An Indian cook has, however, done better. He has received a permit to dine with a friend free of charge at one of Calcutta's most palatial hotels.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. F. B. PRYZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, C. Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for September 15
TIMOTHY

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 1:1-14. GOLDEN TEXT—Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth. II Timothy 2:15. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Boy Timothy. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Missionary in the Making. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Training for Service. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Training in Home and Church.

Timothy's training would be the proper training for every child. In the measure that such training be given there would be a more abundant supply of Christian workers.

I. Timothy's Parentage (Acts 16:1). His father was a Greek and his mother a believing Jewess. On his mother's side at least, he had a godly ancestry. Usually the influence of the mother makes the son. A pious mother and a pious grandmother were back of Timothy.

II. Timothy's Training (II Tim. 1:5; 3:14,15). A wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. Through this training, he knew the Scriptures from his childhood. The faith which came to him from his grandmother through the laws of heredity, but through careful training and teaching. Grace is not received by the laws of heredity. The factors involved in his training were a godly ancestry, a home where God was feared, and a diligent study of the Scriptures.

III. Timothy's Call (Acts 16:1-3). While on his second missionary journey in company with Silas, Paul found Timothy at Lystra near Derbe. Perhaps he had been converted on Paul's first missionary journey, but hearing a favorable report of him by the brethren, Paul circumcised him so as not to offend the Jews because his father was a Greek. This was not contrary to the decision of the Jerusalem council. It was a case where conciliation could be made without compromise of truth.

IV. Timothy's Character. 1. Of a retiring disposition (II Tim. 1:6). He had received a gift from God at the hands of the apostles, but it needed to be stirred up; that is, fanned into a flame. Such a temperament would mature in touch with a great personality like Paul.

2. Courageous (II Tim. 2:1-3). Having been stirred up, he was freed from the spirit of fear and deliberately identified himself with Paul in his suffering and trials.

3. Faithful. He continued in the difficult field of Ephesus during many years. He was the only man of the needed fidelity to minister to the Philippians (Phil. 2:20). The secret of his faithfulness in such a position was his fidelity to the Word of God.

V. Timothy's Ministry. 1. As fellow missionary with Paul (Phil. 2:22). 2. As pastor of the church at Ephesus. Here he labored for many years, tactfully meeting the difficulties of that great church. The Christian minister must believe in the Scriptures as God's Word and be able to rightly divide them so as to meet the need of those who hear him.

VI. Paul's Farewell Message to Timothy (II Tim. 1:1-14). 1. Personal relationship (vv. 1, 2). Timothy was Paul's spiritual son, therefore a peculiar love went out to him. This strong affection was a vital factor in influencing Timothy's life.

2. Paul's deep interest in Timothy (vv. 3-5). a. Prayer for him. While a prisoner in a lonely dungeon, he thinks of Timothy and prays for him. b. Longed to see him. This reveals the vital reciprocal affection between Paul and Timothy, and also Paul's inner self. He was intensely human. c. Gives Timothy Earnest Counsel (vv. 6-14).

a. To stir up the divine gift within him (vv. 6, 7). To stir up means to fan into flame. Enthusiasm of the Christian worker has a tendency to wane and, therefore, needs to be constantly stirred up. b. Be not ashamed (vv. 8-12). He must be willing to suffer affliction for Christ's sake. c. Hold fast the essential truths of the gospel (vv. 13, 14). This means the fundamental truths of Christianity, including the incarnation, atonement, resurrection, and coming again of Jesus Christ. These doctrines have been committed to God's servants as precious deposits. Servants of Christ are charged with the solemn obligation of guarding them as the shepherd guards his sheep or the soldier that which has been committed unto him.

Two Rules There are two good rules which ought to be written upon every heart. Never believe anything bad about any body, unless you positively know that it is true. Never tell even that, unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary, and that God is listening while you tell.—Van Dyke.

Judgment I have learned to judge of men by their own deeds; I do not make the accident of birth the standard of their merit.—Hale.

Huey P. Long

The unfortunate tragedy at Baton Rouge Monday night in which two prominent men lost their lives, rings down the curtain on Senator Huey Long as one of the most outstanding figures in public life.

Born amid common environments, he gradually worked himself up from an ordinary house-to-house canvasser to a position second to none occupied by a public man in any of the sister states. First, being elected to lower offices, he gradually climbed the ladder until he was elected Governor of the state of Louisiana — and afterwards to the Senate of the United States.

With all of the enemies Long had and with all the abuses heaped upon him, it goes without fear of contradiction that he had more friends among the common people of his state than any other individual may dream of. He was a foe to the cotton trust of the south and also of the Standard Oil Company — and made many reforms that stand as monuments of his strategy and quickness of thought.

With many things Senator Long advocated, we did not agree. His share — the wealth plan was to us most ridiculous, which was the chief thing in our disfavor. But big men make mistakes as well as the little fellows. Senator Long wasn't alone in what we considered his errors; the present national administration has made many advances which have already been discarded and thrown into the trash heap. But it always makes a big difference on who pulls the boners.

Through his efforts, although dictatorial in nature, made his native state one of the best in the union in many ways. Long had to his credit that he, to a large extent, liberated the common people, relieved them of being slaves to the commissary system which kept them in penal servitude — and also secured for them the liberty of buying where they choiced. He obtained for them better wages, shorter hours and better working conditions, etc.

In all reforms, he had the trusts to fight, and how successful he was, the records will show. Long was ridiculed, beamed, fun-poked, cursed, abused and damned, but through all of it, he maintained his position and gained to the surprise of the worst of his enemies. We are not writing this article to befriend Huey Long; he doesn't need it. His enemies agreed that he was a foeman worthy of his steel. His last feeble words were framed into a fervent prayer that his program for the poor students at the University, whom he had befriended with free tuition, Hello. How are you these days? This was set up in type Monday. Did we hear you say it was a short summer we've had? Yea, verily. We tell you all that a fire felt mighty good this Monday. It is liable to be warm and pleasant by publication day (Friday.) But don't pay any attention to us, for you can't believe everything you see in a newspaper. — Now laff that off.

Our greatest suspense — Italy and Ethiopia; we wish they'd start something.

Radio Rube isn't very active of late. The reason is on account of the pesky static. We listen in on the news from WOAI, San Antonio at 9 in the evening, also KFI at 11 p. m. But who is Radio Rube, a new subscriber might ask. It is a column written by Yours Truly referring to the broadcasts. Station K O B in Albuquerque, now, listen. You broadcast entirely too much jazz. From 2 until 2:30 p. m. is the only good music we hear. We presume the jazz records are for the entertainment of the "enlightened" University students to dance by. Now I feel considerably better since that's off my chest.

"The town of the cool nights" is almost passe now. — But one thing we have for which to be thankful, the days are full of sunshine. No floods — ask Coach Hubert Detloff to relate his experiences in the Las Cruces disaster recently.

We note by the El Paso newspapers that they are having bull fights across the river in Juarez, Mexico. My mother and myself were one of the very few people to see a Matador lose his life, being gored by the vicious animal. It was on Easter Sunday, quite some time ago. His name was Antonio Rivas, if I can recall it rightly. This was scheduled to be his last bullfight, according to Spanish handbills circulated on the Mexican side. — It was.

Who said "I like a fibber, but that bird suits me too well?"

This week's sentence sermon: Life's greatest possessions can't be measured in money.

With reference to the above, let me say that Happiness and Health are something that money cannot buy.

News items broadcast over KSL in Salt Lake City at 7 in the morning. KSL is a 50,000 watt power broadcasting station, so it comes in loud and clear. Keep this for reference. — P. S. Perhaps you knew this before.

"Step right this way. Have your picture taken; three for 10c" The studio is located in front of the Lyric Theatre, and does good business, we understand.

R. E. Kent called me on the carpet saying thusly: "Every time I get The Outlook I get angry, mad and sore. It seems to me that you should know how to spell 'Oscur-o.'" 'Tis spelt with an 'O' on the last syllable. You all the time spell it with an 'A.' — The sign on the depot gives it 'Oscur-a' and maps spell it 'Oscur-o.'

—I'll be seein' you.

books and financial support might be carried out.

Doubtful it is that there will be a man to take his place; it would be next to impossible. He is gone — and with all his faults, it still remains that the common people of the state of Louisiana more especially, have lost their best friend.

YU'AN HEE SEE LAUGHS By SAX ROHMER

CHAPTER XII—Continued Eileen looked swiftly about her. There was no substitute for a garment in the place. Taking a swift step forward, and conquering a deadly nausea, she struck the hesitating buyer on his fat face!

But this spurt of strength which had faded under the sense of outrage now deserted her. She staggered, away forward. . . .

about der share-out? Dis it is I ask. Yet about der share-out? "They thinn a grain of the truth," said Macles. "Something a goss-aggly, and we've been left to face the music. It's true, we have the money, but we'll never live to spend it unless we do what I suggest."

He Was on His Knees Beside a Pathetic White Figure.

Oestler, whose face, suddenly, had grown very white. "The Panther," he said calmly. "She'll be putting a boat ashore!"

Macles, who was dead sober—he had touched nothing for twenty-four hours—fixed bleary eyes upon the speaker. "I say," he replied "the life is more valuable than gold. The Chief has gone and—so has Mr. King. And there's a Breetish warship noding about the island. We a' know that. They can put a landing party ashore, to cut us off on the east, and they can blow this place to smithereens in two minutes. Listen to wha' the lady are saying!"

On the threshold of the room beyond, he fell back. A man lay upon the floor in a pool of blood, his throat torn as though by the fangs of a wild animal!

"This was how poor Norwich died! The Thing I saw in London is here somewhere!"

But the rathole was empty, from moldy, decaying roof, to stinking cellars! The only person, other than Eileen, found on the premises was Aswami Pasha, his jugular pierced by curving teeth, his blood pumping out from those ghastly wounds. And Haig thought he detected a faint smell of musk.

In a long, low hangar, which from above (from an airplane, for example) resembled no more than a mound in the desert, the German U-boat bought for breaking-up purposes by an agent of Yu'an Hee See three years before, and "lost" owing to the parting of a tow-rop on her way from the Australian yards, lay under floodlights suspended from the roof.

Two streams of negroes poured, like black ants, up and down her gangway, the upstream laden with small, heavy boxes, the downstream empty-handed. Two million pounds in minted money was thus transferred from the dhow at anchor in the nearby harbor to the hidden submarine.

On the light-flooded wharf, Doctor Oestler, excited by many glasses of champagne, grasped the arm of Macles as the Scot came down the gangway. "I tell you, Mgc," said the doctor hoarsely, "she is overloaded! Ha!"

Macles broke away from the detaining hand. "Shut your mouth," he replied roughly. "Dinna sail wi' me if ye ha' doubts."

But the Austrian physician was not without supporters. Len Chow, second-in-command of the U-boat, stood by him. "I agree with the doctor," he said in his monotonous tones, "that only two tons should be shipped."

"Go to h—!" He brushed Len Chow aside and passed on. An Arab boy came running. A launch from the gunboat was headed for the jelly. . . .

"O Lord!" he cried, "for this one wee deed in a sinful life—spare me a grain o' mercy!"

The inhabitants of that nameless town dominated by the palace of Yu'an Hee See, willing servants of the master on the hill, had flown at the moment that the battleship had showed her nose over the horizon.

The palace surpassed anything which Lieutenant Markham had seen or imagined. The female inhabitants, huddled in ensconced corners, were staring wide-eyed at the intruders.

Lieutenant Markham pressed on through more and more extravagant apartments. . . . and suddenly found muscular arms about his neck and tearful dark eyes looking up into his own!

"Oh, thank God, I see you!" cried Celeste. "But tell me quickly—is she safe? Is she safe—the little girl—Eileen—who was here?"

"She means Miss Kearney, sir," said one of the party. "The American lady who disappeared in Port Said."

Lieutenant Markham, looking into the quivering face, suddenly understood. "I am sorry," he said, "truly sorry. But I have no news of her. But, I think—" as the woman's massive figure seemed to become limp—"she is safe."

"One of the right sort, sir," said the former speaker. "She could give us a few tips."

"I can give you no tip, my friend," Celeste replied sorrowfully. "All I know is what happen inside these walls." She waved eloquent hands. "But in that room there—" she pointed dramatically to a narrow door paneled in dull gold—"in that room there, this morning, something happen. . . . I think—a good thing."

This Collar and Cuff set is quite a departure from the many models shown in open net work. The solid work gives the pieces more definite form and very little starching is necessary to hold the shape.

Package No. 711 contains sufficient white Mountain Craft crochet cotton to complete this three piece set. Complete instructions and set illustrated on a model are also included.

DIFFERENT AMOUNTS OF LIGHT NEEDED.

A survey shows that 22 per cent of children finishing grade school have damaged eye sight.

This regrettable increase in eye troubles is in many instances caused by eye strain resulting from reading, studying, sewing at night with poor light and not enough light.

Science measures light in terms of foot-candles. A foot-candle is the amount of light one standard candle shines on a surface one foot away.

Your light may look bright, but it is the illumination you get on your work that saves your eyes from strain; and this diminishes rapidly the farther away you are from your lamp.

If you use electricity, your light company will recommend the right size bulbs to use. If your home is not wired, one of the new 300 candlepower kerosene or gasoline pressure mantle lamps will supply plenty of "live" natural light for every home need.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building
Washington, D. C.

Washington—Politics being inseparable from governmental administration under our system, it becomes pertinent at this time to examine what has happened in the late session of congress. In a nation where a two-party political structure obtains, politics cannot be segregated from the administration in the larger sense. It is not with a critical attitude, therefore, that the magnifying glass is held over the doings of President Roosevelt, his cabinet and brain trust advisers and the congress that has lately adjourned. I believe it will be agreed that politics has predominated in the management of our national affairs during the last eight months especially. The fervor and appeal that was held for recovery by all of us during the earlier days of the Roosevelt administration seems to have been largely dissipated. That is not to say that no one wants to see recovery accomplished. It is to say, however, that this fervor and this appeal has been somewhat subordinated. Thus, it can be summarized in a brief sentence: The administration, looking to the elections of 1936, has been engaged in building campaign battle lines and forging campaign ammunition.

The 1934 congressional elections presented to the country an issue based on the performances and the future program of President Roosevelt. It was accorded a proposition where citizens were voting either to give the New Deal a future mandate and the President authority to proceed as he thought best or to vote a mandate that would call a halt on those same performances and policies. The country supported Mr. Roosevelt, some of his advisers since have told me, in a manner even more substantial than he had anticipated. He emerged from that campaign with a larger Democratic majority in the house than he had before. In addition he was accorded much more than a necessary two-thirds of the senate. The picture looked rosy.

Though the congress that has just ended its session gave the President many anxious hours, I think that on the whole it can be regarded as having provided him with a record of rather arduous and faithful response to his wishes. He did not obtain quite all that he wanted nor did he obtain that portion of his program exactly in the form he desired. But, again, politics in congress is almost a matter of general compromise anyway so that the President can be said to have come out very well. He can proceed now to any plans for that session of congress which convenes next January and which, in accordance with nearly all precedents, will adjourn ahead of the national political conventions next June.

Politics being the game that it is, one must look into the future to discover the ultimate goal. So, looking into the future, one discerns several objects or objectives of decided, as well as important, interest to the individual voters. In the first place, the consensus surely is that Mr. Roosevelt has built a legislative and administrative structure in our government that presents a concrete and unqualified issue to the American people, namely, to proceed along New Deal lines and make the necessary changes in the Constitution to permit execution of those policies or to throw the whole thing overboard. There can be no equivocation. As the structure stands at this time and as it will stand until the next session of congress is under way, many New Deal propositions are of doubtful constitutionality. If they are so held by the Supreme court of the United States then Mr. Roosevelt is believed certain to turn to the country and request Constitutional revision.

His latest and perhaps his most definite move in this direction was in connection with the so-called Guffey coal bill. It will be recalled that, in placing that piece of legislation on the "must" list of measures to be acted on before congress adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt advised house leaders that he wanted it passed and he did not care particularly whether some members of congress had "reasonable doubts" about its constitutionality. In effect, therefore, the President commanded passage of legislation that must place before the Supreme court a vital question for determination. It will be tested. Of that there is no doubt. If the law is held unconstitutional, it merely means that its provisions form another part of the campaign battleground observed to be shaping.

Mr. Roosevelt also succeeded in forcing through congress the legislation destroying the public utility holding companies. It was a tough fight but the President was victorious. Now, I hear from many sources that court examination of the legislation likewise will come because some folks are convinced it is "unconstitutional." If it is, it is unconstitutional.

And so it is in the case of several other pieces of legislation, including New Deal ideas late statutes. One by one, it appears they will get before courts for review. Thus, the line of cleavage is marked.

While the President has remained silent, neither denying nor confirming the undercurrent of information that I have reported here, one cannot fail to reach the conclusion that if many of the New Deal measures are held invalid, the President and his New Deal supporters, of necessity, must go to the country in the next election seeking constitutional modification to permit the use of policies now inimical to our form of government. That is the issue which the voters will be called upon to decide.

Since we have examined the circumstances from the New Deal side, let us likewise see what the Republicans and other oppositionists are doing. Lately, I have talked with some of the recognized Republican wheel horses. Whether they speak the sentiment of the masses of Republican voters or whether they voiced only their own views is not important here. Political straw do show which way the political winds are blowing. So when these veterans of many political battles say that they welcome the creation by the New Dealers of an issue, they evidently see in the situation worthwhile opportunities. When they say that they are willing to go to the country in defense of the Constitution as it stands and the traditions it represents, they evidently feel they are on firm ground.

Much water can go over the dam between now and November, 1936, and much sentiment can be changed in that time. But the Republicans thus far have done very little in the way of building up their case. While they appear to be enthusiastic about their chances against Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, they have thus far failed to develop even a nucleus of an organization.

It may be their strategy not to start their cannonading too early. Indeed, I have heard the thought expressed that it would be unwise to use ammunition too far in advance. At any rate, there have been only a scattered few direct attacks on what certainly must be the issue of 1936, the question of revision or retention of our Constitution. It is to be noted in this connection that those Republicans who have let go with a few shots have been of the ultraconservative type. I think it is generally agreed that the Republican set-up next year will be managed not by the old ultraconservatives but by those who have pulled away to some extent and who are willing to admit that times have changed conditions and a new model, perhaps not streamlined, is necessary.

One argument advanced why Republican leadership has not been more active is that if a start is made too early, the Roosevelt administration will have an opportunity to answer all of the criticism. Said one Republican leader: "We would be utterly foolish to permit the New Dealers to know all of our arguments too far in advance. I, for one, am content to let them proceed with their socialistic regimentation because I know that every time a calf is given too much rope, it chokes itself to death."

Then there is another factor which I understand is responsible for the delay in Republican attacks. A good many Republicans have a hope, at least, that a campaign based on a plan for maintenance of our Constitution and the traditions and modes of living which it represents will draw to the Republican candidate a certain segment of Democrats who are unsympathetic with the New Deal. There has been plenty of evidence in the session of congress just adjourned that at heart numerous Democrats lean to the conservative as distinguished from the New Deal method of government. The closing hours of the congressional session seemed to belie this. But anyone who mingled among old time Democrats in the house could not fail to have observed existence of a doubt as to the wisdom of many New Deal policies. Those men were forced to line up behind the Presidential program not because they believed in it fully but for two other reasons. These reasons were: first, they still entertained some fear that if they broke with the President it might mean their political defeat for renomination and re-election, and second, they were harassed and physically and mentally tired and wanted to go home.

The late summer and fall months during which these representatives and senators naturally will be among their constituents is rather likely to provide them with a better knowledge of where they stand. They will come back next January either convinced that they must tie fast to the New Deal or they will be more obstreperous than they have been in the recent session. If the strength appears to be on the Roosevelt side, the next session of congress will be simply a rubber stamp for the Chief Executive. If, on the other hand, they find that the enthusiasm for the New Deal has waned, I think it is fair to predict that the next session of congress will be one of the most troublesome with which any President has yet been confronted.

Mustangs Still Pay Dividends

Capturing Animals on Western Plains Continues Paying Business.

Capturing wild horses on the western plains is still a profitable business, but the romantic wild stallion of the mesa is another vanishing American.

The cowboys and Indians once pursued the hardy, fiery little mustangs to replenish their remudas (strings of remounts), and to improve the domesticated breed. They now go out and round up scrawny, half-starved "crows" and ship them off to the East. The destination is the slaughter house. Their hides are tanned into leather, their hoofs boiled into glue, and their flesh canned for dog and chicken food.

There's no romance about it now. Recently 142 head were shipped East after their purchase from Indians and range riders. Thousands are rounded up each year and jammed into freight cars.

Cheap leather, glue, and dog food is an inglorious end for the horses of Arabian blood that the Spaniards introduced into North America four centuries ago. After Columbus discovered the new world, Cortez brought the first horses, 16 in all, to Mexico in 1519, and Narvaez followed with 980. De Soto landed in Florida in 1539 with 115. Many of the horses died of starvation. De Soto abandoned his on the west bank of the Mississippi. Others were turned out to graze and stray (which is "mustang" in Spanish). Despite attacks from wolves, mountain lions, and bears, the mustang herds multiplied and spread through the West rapidly.

Indians regarded them with amazement before they learned that horses could be lassoed and broken to saddle. For the first time the Comanches and Apaches had an equivalent of "why walk when you can ride?" This enabled the tribes to expand their hunting grounds, and soon they were encroaching upon rival domains. Warfare then became incessant among the Indians and continued until the white settlers arrived and conquered everybody.

The mustang became the source of the rancher's cow ponies, and later the army's cavalry troops were mounted almost entirely from horses whose ancestry was alternately wild and tame. No horse could duplicate the little mustang pound-for-pound in strength and grit. Some of them were hammer-headed and as homely as sin. Others were sleek and beautiful. But no true westerner ever underestimated his dependence upon them.

Cross-breeding with the English thoroughbreds imported from the East has brought about great changes in the western horse herds. The wild herds led by fleet stallions (which, like the biggest fish, "always got away") were gradually depleted by horse hunters and, in search of safety, driven from the better grazing lands. There was less and less need of taming wild horses. The bronco (Spanish for "wild and rough") still carries on the wild stallion's untamable tradition.

While the modern horse did not appear here until the sixteenth century, it is in America that the most complete fossil story of the prehistoric horse is found. Bones representing all geologic ages were found in the asphalt beds at Rancho La Brea in California. The horse traces from the Mohippus, a four-toed animal 11 inches high. In the next age it reached the size of a collie dog. Gradually the multiple toes gave way to the single horn covered toe of the fourth prehistoric horse, a type almost as large as the horse of today.

Aircraft and Radio Assist in Battle on Forest Fires

Increasing use is being made of radio and aircraft in protecting state and national forests from fire, says the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Both airplane and radio aided in apprehending a firebug from the air, in a case recently reported by the New York conservation department.

A man was seen starting a forest fire by Albert Leo-Wolf, forest-patrol plane pilot. He reported by radio and later located his man at a nearby cabin. This information also was radioed, resulting in the arrest, conviction, and sentence of the firebug. Approximately 1,000 radio sets for

Tortured with Itching of Pimples

Relieved After Using Cuticura

"My face was a mass of pimples due to some external irritation, and I was in agony for three months. The pimples were hard, red and large and were scattered all over my face. I was tortured with the itching and it kept me awake.

"I used many remedies, but to no avail. A friend asked me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so I did. Soon an improvement could be seen, and after using for two and a half months my complexion was clear." (Signed) Joseph Paradis, 1078 S. Blvd., New York City, May 2, 1935.

Here's what happens when oil hasn't enough film strength!

You can prevent costly wear with Germ Processed Oil

It has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil!

WHEN you drive very slowly or very fast or pick up suddenly, the bearings in your motor have a tremendous load put on them. The bearings and shafts are pressed together so tightly that only an extremely thin film of oil remains between them.

If the oil film is not strong enough to withstand the load, the film ruptures and the bearing and shaft grind together. Part of the bearing is ground away. After this happens time and again, it means a trip to the shop and a big repair bill.

You need oil with extra high film strength to prevent this costly wear. Yet plain mineral oils have very little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing methods have even less!

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil will give you the protection you need! Germ Processing—adding concentrated oily essence to highly refined oil—gives it 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil. Timken machine tests prove it!

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

You'll save money when you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Germ Processed—the oil with greater film strength—the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that never drains away!

Say "OK-Drain" — FILL WITH —

Fine Registered Bulls

Last Saturday, Sheriff McCamant delivered seven 3 year-old registered Hereford bulls to Alamogordo for Walter Baird & Brothers. The young bulls weighed on the average of 900 pounds and were selected from the McCamant herd and brought a top-notch price. The bulls made two trips to Three Rivers. On the first trip, the bridge had been washed out and they were returned here to await the repairing of the same and after the place was made passable, they were driven down and sent over to the White Sands, where the Baird Brothers have a ranch on one of the White Sands islands. There were 36 head of young bulls in the herd, but the Baird Brothers selected the above seven on account of their ages and remarkable stock qualities.
