Business Men's Club

The Carrizozo Business Men's Club with its new president, Attorney John E. Hall, held an important meeting Wednesday evening in the dining rooms of the Carrizozo Eating House. Various matters of interest to the community in general came up for consideration and discussion, chief among which was the proposed project to be known as the "Bull Gap Dam," which is to be made about 4 miles northwest of Oscura. This proposed dam will be large enough to hold all of the water which comes down the bull gap and other tributaries and will be held for irrigation purposes. Heretofore, that vast amount of water has gone mainly to waste in the Malpais; whereas, with the dam, it will all be stored and put to good use. The government will put up $144,000 and the sponsors must meet the figures of $4,410. This would give work to nearly 200 men. Leslie Moline of the Rehabilitation Department made a talk in which he said that he was engaged in the project and hoped that his department might yet be designated to sponsor the remaining $4,410 under a new set-up. He further stated that a later report would be of more interest to the club. W. G. Stevenson was present and talked along the same line as did Mr. Moline. The executive committee held a session after the gavel fell on the main meeting, and the various committees appointed for the County Fair, met at the office of the Town Council Board.

High School Assemblies This Year

The plans for conducting the High School Assemblies have been changed for this year. Supt. Hall is doing all that is possible to make these programs both interesting and educational and would like to have as many of the patrons come and enjoy them.

A special Assembly Committee has been appointed for the sole purpose of arranging these Assemblies and seeing that more enjoyment and more benefit comes from them. This Committee has made arrangements for all dates between now and the Xmas holidays. With a few exceptions these fall on Friday. The program will begin at 8:20: Sept. 27—Woman's Club Play. Oct. 4—Dramatic Club, Grades Glee Club. "11—History Class Columbus Day.

School Notes

Ola C. Jones, Co. Supt.

The past week, the following rural schools were visited: by Mrs. Ola C. Jones, County Supt. and Mrs. Mary Watson, Rural Supervisor:

Nogal—Mrs. Thelma Chappel. The pupils have cleaned the school grounds of all obnoxious weeds and have made many little improvements in the interior of the building.

Angus—Miss Gloria Campbell. The pupils are working on a nature study unit. All material being secured from the immediate community.

Mon Jeau—Miss Amelia Fritz. The pupils are also working on a nature study here.

Escondido—Miss Carmen Pino. The pupils are carrying out all activities with the Home Unit; every pupil contributing his share to the success of same.

Blueswater—Miss Lora Trujillo. In this school the activity program is being carried out very nicely. The Indian Unit is being correlated this six weeks' period.

Arabel—Mrs. Marie Pacheco and Miss Ann Kimbrell. The enrollment is 54 and still increasing. There is an excellent spirit being manifested in this school. There is a stressing of English at all times and a splendid reading program in all grades.

Richardson—Miss Lucia Gomez. The pupils are studying the Home Unit. The whole group are so happy and are striving in every way to learn English.

Encinoso—Miss Harriet Blackshere. The pupils have just completed the Clothing Unit. Special stress is dramatization of stories in the Pre-Primer and Primer groups, thus stimulating and encouraging interest in learning to speak better English.

Stetson—Mr. L. Vernon Baker, Miss Dorothy Arnold, Miss Jane Raymond and Miss Jennie Hunt. The enrollment has increased to such an extent that another teacher was needed. Miss Jennie Hunt was selected for this position.

It is very encouraging to note the decided improvement in the professional attitude with the majority of the teachers.

We particularly note that San Patricio and Ruidoso are especially happy because their Building Programs have been approved and work will soon begin on them.

Miss Cora Craws of Oscura was here Wednesday and while in town, made this office a friendly call.

A. P. Jones was a business visitor here yesterday from his home across the Malpais.

A. W. Drake was here yesterday from Ancho on business.

"18—Home Economics Club.

"25—Senior Class.

Nov. 1—No Assembly.

"11—Armistice, American Legion.

"15—Sophomores.

"27—Thanksgiving, Dramatic Club.

Dec. 6—Freshmen.

"13—Science Department.

"20—Christmas Program.

All classes, dramatic and glee clubs.

Remember, we would like to see as many of the patrons out at our Assemblies as possible.

RELIEF AND THIEVERY

With all the talk about the relief measures and projects for the benefit of those who are in need of assistance, there still remains an element which seems to delight or rather are inclined to steal from those more fortunate than themselves.

We are not in line with those who believe that the needy should not be assisted, but when there is so much of inducements held out to people in distressed circumstances, there seems to be no need of stealing that which belongs to other people. Stealing is not confined to the lower classes—it exists among the more wealthy as well. With the first, stealing comes from what might be termed a necessity. With the upper classes, where it exists, it is a mania. If the rich woman steals, she is called a kleptomaniac, while the poor woman who steals is called a thief. Let us repeat what we have oftentimes said. "It makes a big difference as to who does those things."

Ranchmen report that there have been cattle thieves working of late. One ranchman in particular reports that he has suffered the loss of 15 head of cattle during the last two weeks. This is alarming and must be stopped. In view of that fact, the Outlook would like to head a vigilance committee to keep watch on the cattle thieves and if we catch them with the goods, we should apply the rope. Sheriff McCamant cannot do everything. He needs the assistance of the people who are opposed to that system of robbery which is so costly to our ranchmen. To that end, peacefully if possible, but roughly if necessary, let us assist our leading interests in the protection of their stock.

Colonel Taylor

Carrizozo has again been honored. This time it comes in the way of our esteemed citizen and Representative, J. V. Taylor, who has been appointed on the Governor's staff as Colonel, aide-camp. The appointment also makes Colonel Taylor a Commander in the New Mexico National Guard. Governor Tingley is to be commended on the wisdom of the appointment and the Outlook salutes the new Colonel and offer our congratulations. Mr. Taylor has made a good representative and the above appointment coming without solicitation, is a reward of merit—Honor to whom honor is due.

ANCHO ITEMS

(Too late for last week)

Mrs. Allen Kile and niece Sallie Silvers are spending a few days in El Paso. Sallie will see the circus now showing in El Paso.

Mrs. Cap Straley is greatly improved from the severe burns she received several weeks ago. A good number of people came out to vote Tuesday.

County Clerk Ernest Key was an Ancho visitor Tuesday. Misses Berry and Crawford and Mr. Craig were Carrizozo visitors Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Santiago Luercas are the parents of a fine baby girl, born last Wednesday.

L. P. Hall was a Carrizozo visitor Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Goodson of Luna, were White Oaks visitors last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Frame are now residing in the Jicarillas, Mr. Frame being connected with a mining project there.

Lincoln County Singing Convention will be held at Ancho Sunday, Oct. 13. This will be the fourth convention of that nature since it was organized. The first was given at Carrizozo, the second at Capitan and the third at Corona.

Mrs. Don English, who has been sponsoring these conventions and to whom belongs the credit for their success, wishes to announce that the singing will begin at 10 a. m., continuing until 12 o'clock noon, when dinner will be had. All parties interested will please bring basket lunches.

At 1 p. m. the singing will be resumed, and the affair will end at 4. As this will be the fourth convention, a larger attendance than has been at past events of this nature, is expected.

W. J. Ayers of Three Rivers left this morning for the S. P. Hospital at San Francisco, where he is to receive medical attention. He was accompanied as far as Benson, Ariz., by his daughter, Miss Gertrude, who will remain with her sister, Mrs. Anna Adams, until her father's return which will be about several weeks. Mr. Ayers says the hay crop in the vicinity of Three Rivers is the best in 10 years.

Johnny Mackey of San Patricio was a business visitor here on Monday of this week.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Franks and Miss Donnie Franks of Corona were here last Saturday, Melvin attending a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners of which he is a member and the ladies visited Carrizozo friends during the day, all returning home in the evening.

Mrs. Jake Cochran, daughter Mrs. Gene Norton, nee LeNora Cochran, Mrs. R. M. Rice and small daughter Helen Gloria of Capitan were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday.

The Drama and Music Study Club held its first meeting for the year Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. R. E. Blaney. This was a business meeting and the following officers were elected: Mrs. Blaney, Pres.; Mrs. Burns, Vice-Pres.; Mrs. Degitz, Secretary and Treasurer. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Ziegler, with Miss Ruth and Ella Brickley in charge of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Spence, daughters Josephine and Helene came down from Aztec the latter part of last week and have decided to make Carrizozo their dwelling place for the fall and winter months.

This office is in receipt of a nice letter from Miss Eliza Hobbie, who has again enrolled at the St. Helen's Hall, school for girls at Portland, Oregon, this being her second year. She speaks of the pleasant time she had in old Carrizozo during the vacation period. The girls have many forms of amusement such as swimming, boating, tennis, etc. She expressed her appreciation of the visits of the Outlook and finishes up her letter by saying, "I'll be seeing you at Christmas time."

Mrs. F. J. Sager entertained the Carrizozo Bridge Club at the Carrizozo Eating House Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Albert B. Fall of Three Rivers and daughter, Mrs. C. C. Chase were Santa Fe visitors for a few days last week, says the Santa Fe New Mexican and greeted their old friends. The New Mexican further proceeds by saying that they are actively and determinedly in fighting the attempt to evict the aged and invalid Mr. Fall from his old ranch home.

Mrs. Jimmy Lee of the Carrizozo Eating House has returned from a pleasure trip to California, where she spent about two weeks with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Reinfrow were in from their ranch across the Malpais Saturday.

Miss Lorena Sager, music instructor of Santa Fe, is spending the present week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Sager.

Miss Louise Shelton, who left here a short time ago for Denver, is now enrolled in the Denver University and is much pleased with that educational institution. Miss Louise was accompanied on her trip by her mother, Mrs. J. M. Shelton, who returned home after seeing her daughter permanently located.

A. E. Huntsinger of the Citizens' State Bank was a business visitor at Vaughn this week.

Out-of-the Ordinary

In the year of 1923, Frank McNeely of Colorado Springs, Colo., was sentenced to 2 years in the federal penitentiary for passing counterfeit money. After serving a year, he heard that his wife and children were on the verge of starvation. He managed to escape and for eleven years, avoided arrest. Last November he went into the coal business under the name of Wm. McNeely. He was apprehended and again sent to the pen, but through the help of influential friends he only served eight months. He has returned to Colorado Springs and is again in the coal business. He says he thinks he ought to be given a place in society, and we think so too. What do you think?

Kind hearted Judge Weber of Austin, Minn., became interested in a boy, who had been sent to him and asked that he send him to some kind of a reform school. Taking pity on the lad, the judge invited him to his home to dine with the family. After dismissing him, the judge gave him a good moral lecture and sent him home. But reaching for his watch for the correct time, he found that the culprit had stolen his would be benefactor's gold timepiece. Kindness has oftentimes been imposed on; but what should be done in cases like the above? It's a problem.

On a lawn belonging to Capt. John Boranzky at Philadelphia, a flock of birds were noticed in the act of feeding a sparrow. The act was repeated every day and seemed to be so out-of-the-ordinary, that the captain had the sparrow followed and with the aid of a net, it was captured in a tree. The sparrow was totally blind and would cause some to think that sympathy among birds is more than that exercised among human beings, or would that argument be correct?—Think it over.

A dog belonging to Mrs. Edna Bell, aged 65, Rochester, N. Y., kept silent vigil over her body after she died, neither ate nor drank for a period of 24 hours. After all efforts failed, a net was thrown over the dog and by that means only, he was taken from faithful watch. He followed the body to its last resting place and all inducements to make him leave the spot proved of no avail. He remained at the graveside until he died of exposure and starvation.

A story which baffles the history of American prison acts of violence comes from Sioux Falls, S. Dakota. In the prison at that place, both men and women are allowed to attend the prison chapel during the divine service. Zane Wilson and his sweetheart were both sentenced to long terms for bank-breaking and hijacking. On Sunday morning of last week, men and women as usual, assembled for the service. On being dismissed, Wilson pushed aside the attendant who was with his sweetheart and before he could be prevented, plunged a dagger into her heart, killing her instantly. He gave no reason for the crime and no motive for the act could be found. He will be executed for the murder, it is said.

Gains in Highway Safety Are Noted

Many States Have Adopted Constructive Measures.

Washington.—Sweeping efforts by the state legislatures to curb motor fatalities through enactment of approved legislation was reported in a survey made public by the American Automobile association.

"Scores of constructive safety measures enacted should prove of material help in what must be a continuing drive to improve the safety record of the country as a whole," Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, Mich., president of the national motoring body, declared.

Among the safety gains, Mr. Henry cited the rapid progress of the AAA safety responsibility law; extension and strengthening of highway patrol; safety glass requirements; compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment, and drivers' license laws.

Amendments and Law.

"There is reason for particular gratification over the forward march of the safety responsibility bill sponsored by this association," he said. "Five new states enacted the Model Bill in 1935, namely, Arizona, Colorado, Ohio, Oregon and West Virginia. It was enacted by congress for the District of Columbia. Strengthening amendments were adopted in several states. The law is now in effect in 20 states and the District of Columbia.

"State highway patrols received much attention at the hands of the legislatures. Four states, namely Colorado, Montana, North Dakota and Oklahoma, established patrols for the first time. Seven states increased the strength of the patrol force, namely, Connecticut, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington and West Virginia. The patrol system is now in operation throughout the Union, except in Georgia. There is no doubt, however, that the strength of the patrol force in most instances is below requirements, more particularly so in view of the rising ratio of motor fatalities on rural highways.

States Added to Safety Parade.

"Fifteen states enacted legislation providing that motor vehicles be equipped with safety glass. This brings the total of "safety glass" states up to 23.

"Five states passed laws providing for compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment. These are: Connecticut, Colorado, Oregon, Utah, and Vermont. This brings the total of compulsory inspection states up to 14. This movement had its inception along the Atlantic seaboard, but it is now apparently spreading to mountain and Pacific coast states, indicating a more general trend toward national acceptance.

"A drivers' license law was adopted this year by Idaho, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, and Utah, bringing the list up to 34. There is little doubt that drivers' license law, coupled with a safety-responsibility law, are proving the most effective measure from the standpoint of control of the reckless and irresponsible driver, and states which lack this legislation are at a decided disadvantage."

AN OLD MOTTO

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Life is a series of consequences. Given a cause, a definite result occurs. Nothing happens by mere chance. The universe is controlled by law. Were this not so this world could not long exist. In truth it never would have been evolved. Some people believe in "luck"; however, the affairs of life which appear most risky are governed by law. The practice of gambling is controlled, so we are informed, by the law of averages. Any person who thoroughly understands this law may win at any game. We frequently hear the remark: "I was lucky today." Perhaps the remark "I was fortunate" would have better expressed the truth. One is very fortunate, indeed, if, upon all occasions, he competes successfully with all the workings of nature's laws. "Let mercy be seasoned with justice" is not written into the universe of nature. Obedience is not easy at any time, and yet obedience is always there, and disobedience is slavery.

Fortunately we are not ignorant of these laws. We should know what they are and especially how they operate. Nowhere is this knowledge more important than in the world of moral and spiritual values. One of these laws was recently found by the writer upon the wall of an old priory and which read as follows: "If we would gaze on the star of our destiny, we must look for it in our own hearts." This priory is located on the ground of the Lafayette Inn, one of the authenticated historic places of the state of New York. The Inn is at Geneva, N. Y., and overlooks the beautiful Seneca lake. This old motto, upon which many people have gazed, is important in the development of human character. Obedience to this law means happiness and friends. Disobedience will doubtless result in a miserable and friendless world. The star of destiny must first be in our own heart.

Life is what we make it but the power which makes it comes not so much from without as from within. Thoughts mold character and ideals develop destiny, for, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

The grape-vine leaf-of-the-damask-weave-was delicately outlined-in-green-silk.

RESTORING and ornamenting fine old linens is both interesting and practical. It does not signify returning the articles to their original uses, but to others, equally good, and making the designs woven in the damask serve as needlecraft patterns. In almost every home there are tablecloths which have worn places in them which render the damask unfit for this use, although most, or at least a good proportion of the linen is firm and good. It is these strong portions that are excellent for napkins, centerpieces, dollies, cocktail napkins, etc. By ornamenting the articles with embroidery in outline stitches of any preferred sort, they become distinctive, especially when the work follows the pattern motifs of the damask.

This damask pattern decoration is unique, and gives a certain charm and point to the embroidery. The articles should be so cut that one complete design unit comes at one of the corners of each napkin. Use fine embroidery medium, and fine outline stitches and work the outline of the unit, being very careful to follow each smallest curve and angle of the pattern. The medium should be in contrast to the whiteness of the linen, so that the tracery of the design is well defined, and delicate. For centerpieces and runners, select one of the chief pattern units and outline each one over the entire surface wherever it appears.

A Smart Set.

Floor designs lend themselves delightfully to this work, so also do leaf and foliage designs. Geometric patterns are not quite so attractive in this style of decoration but even they are good.

One of the decided advantages of this work that is sure to appeal to the embroiderer is that the material itself supplies the embroidery design. It is all ready without any transferring or stamping of the design. Moreover, in damasks the weave in background and design differs, and the embroidered outline accents by its inclusion this inherent beauty of the material.

A grape leaf design was effectively

Car With Eight Wheels Makes Debut

Herr Gotthardt Rimmek, Berlin automobile engineer, is shown here with the new eight-wheeled passenger car which he has designed. He claims that the car offers greater security and is better equipped to take bumps. He explains this by the fact that the wheels of the car do not go through the depressions, but pass over them. Furthermore, a breaking of the axles or a blow-out of a tire will have no serious effect since the car will continue on seven wheels.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 22

JAMES (A GREAT CHRISTIAN LEADER)

LESSON-TEXT—Acts 15:1-21; James 1:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him.—James 1:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What James Tells Us to Do.

JUNIOR TOPIC—James' Motto for Juniors.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Meet Life's Tests.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of James for Today.

Three individuals by the name of James are mentioned in the New Testament. In all probability this James was the brother of the Lord and the writer of the Epistle which bears his name.

I. James Presiding at a Church Council (Acts 15:1-21).

1. The controversy in the church at Antioch (vv. 1-5). A most difficult problem confronted the church, threatening its disruption into a Jewish and Gentile division. It was not a question of the admission of the Gentiles into the church. That had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was, on what ground could they be received? Should Gentile believers be required to keep the Mosaic law as a condition of salvation? In order to settle the matter, Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem for the decision of the mother church.

II. The Deliberation of the Council (vv. 6-21).

1. Peter speaks (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness to the acceptance of the Gentiles by giving the Holy Spirit to them as unto the Jews. Since God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so.

2. Paul and Barnabas rehearsed their experience (v. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on the preaching of salvation by grace through faith.

3. The argument of James (vv. 14-21). He took the fact declared by Peter and showed how it harmonized with prophecy (Amos 9:11-15). He showed that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict, but in harmony with God's plan. He made clear God's plan as follows:

a. To take out from among the Gentiles a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now being done by the calling out of the church.

b. After the church is completed, Israel will be converted and restored to their land by the Lord himself at his return (vv. 16, 17).

c. This will be followed by the conversion of the world through the agency of converted Israel (v. 17; cf. Rom. 11:15). Having shown that there was no conflict with the Scriptures rightly divided, he gave his judgment that the Gentiles should not be troubled with the things that are Jewish, but should be warned against the perils of heathenism, such as meat offered to idols, fornication, and blood.

4. The decision (vv. 22-20). The mother church unanimously endorsed James' recommendation. They sent a letter stating the decision of the conference. This decision was duly delivered to the church at Antioch and was received with rejoicing.

II. James Giving Counsel to Christians (James 1:1-17).

1. Concerning trials (vv. 2-17).

a. The Christian's attitude toward them (vv. 2-4). They were to meet them joyfully because of their beneficial effects. Trials reveal fidelity, and by their effects develop the grace of patience.

b. The Christian's supreme need in these trials (vv. 5-8). It is wisdom to meet them intelligently. He makes clear that the source of this wisdom is in God and that the means of gaining it is asking in faith, and the very liberality of God is the guarantee that the needed supply will be provided.

c. The rich and the poor are sharers alike in affliction (vv. 9-11). Frequently the poor man thinks that the rich are free from testings, whereas they are usually more severely tested.

d. The blessed reward of enduring the testing (v. 12). The one who faithfully endures the temptation shall be awarded the crown of life.

e. The source of temptation (vv. 13-17). Temptations spring out of human desire. They do not come from God. Sin is not necessarily the desire, but the gratifying of it improperly. When one is thus led away by his natural desires, sin is conceived which brings forth death. In such case, sin is the gratification of a right desire in a wrong way.

Life.

Life is not so complex if we do not persist in making it so. We need faith; we need to be brave, to keep the corners of the mouth turned up and not down. And after all it is only a step at a time.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

Affliction.

Much of what a man tells you in the hour of affliction, in sudden anger, or in any outpouring of his heart, should be sacred. In his craving-for-sympathy he has spoken to you as to his own soul.

Leather Lungs Won

Johnny Meyers, known as "Leather Lungs," isn't a large person; indeed, he is a member of the midget colony at the San Diego exposition. Nevertheless, he won first place in the barkers' contest, out-yelling the Chicago World's fair champion. So Johnny captured the cup he is holding in this photograph, and from it he gave a long drink to each of the losers.

Buffalo Bull Invades Barnyard in Washington

Kennelick, Wash.—Shades of Deadwood Bill. Farmers in the Rattlesnake hills region west of here rubbed their eyes when a buffalo bull appeared in the barnyard of James Mann.

Apparently quite tame, the animal stayed long enough to have a meal of hay then wandered to the next farm. Ranchers believe the buffalo escaped from a farm at Yakima, 300 miles away, where the beasts are reared commercially.

PARTY WILL STUDY PHANTOMS OF ANDES

Explorers Face Unknown Perils in South America.

New York—Members of a British-American expedition who will seek to explore territory in the Upper Andes and along the Amazon, from which no white man has ever returned alive, sailed from here recently.

Capt. Eric Erskine Loch, D. S. O., retired British officer, heads the expedition, which is sponsored by the Museum of the American Indian (Heye foundation). Four others make up the party. Their first destination is Guayaquil, Ecuador, where they will be joined by two Ecuadorian scientists. The group then will proceed by mountain railway to Robamba, whence they will travel by motor truck to Hacienda Leta, Patate, in the Upper Andes.

This is the last point of civilization the party will contact before trekking through isolated regions. The trip through hitherto unexplored, unmaped territory will be made by mule, on foot, by canoe and raft.

Indian Friendship Sought. Loch said before sailing that the main purpose of the expedition is to establish friendly relations with the Sababela Indians, an almost "unknown" tribe, and to bring back ethnological specimens for the Museum of the American Indian.

Geographical data and maps obtained by the party, he said, will be added to the common international fund of such knowledge. "No museum in the world," he declared, "has any ethnological specimens of the Sababela. They are a fierce and shy tribe, known as the 'phantom people' by a few whites who have been near their territory and called the 'auka' or 'wild men' by neighboring tribes."

"No white man has ever penetrated the Sababela country and come out alive. Ours is the first exploration party on record to set out for this area. In 1927 a small group of Peruvian laborers, in search of supplies, stumbled upon a number of the Indians. All the Peruvians were murdered."

Loch added, however, that he is confident he and the other members of the expedition will be able to win the confidence and friendship of the Sababela.

"It will be a long job," he said. "We may remain in the interior for ten months or a year. After we have convinced the Indians that our mission is peaceful we will begin our studies. For an interpreter we will use one of the members of a near-by tribe."

Takes Gift Machetes. The explorer showed visitors the "calling cards" which he intends to use as a means of introduction to the Sababela. These were hundreds of machetes, made in Connecticut.

"I hope the Indians will accept them as tokens of friendship," he said. "It would be pretty bad if they turned out to be boomerangs."

This will be Loch's second trip to Ecuador and the valley of the upper Amazon. In 1932 he accompanied Commander George Dyott on his Ecuadorian expedition.

A romantic note was injected by Loch when he pointed out that the expedition will go to the shores of the lake near the perpetual snow line of the Llanaganas mountains where tradition says the "lost treasure" of the Incas was hidden 400 years ago, at the time of the conquest by Spain.

"Our expedition is purely of scientific purpose," he said, "but of course we will not pass by the lake which tradition has made one of the treasure storehouses of the world without attempting to prove or disprove this legend."

Wear Tag of Shame to Designate Bad Drivers
Huntington, Ind.—Violators of minor traffic rules of the city hereafter must wear the "scarlet letter" of their shame for 30 days or pay $1 fine, according to a new plan worked out by R. C. Forst, chief of police.

The violators may be tagged without their knowledge for turning in the middle of a block, passing stop signals, leaving engines running with no driver, parking more than 12 inches from the curb, parking where prohibited, "detective muffer" or "cutout," no lights, bright lights, double parking, overtime parking, one headlight and cutting corners or other violations that may be "written in."

A second violation by a motorist "wearing" one of the warnings, printed in red ink, will result in a trip to the police station. Removal of the sticker within 30 days without paying $1 also will result in prohibition, it was said.

Left Hand Is Better in Shooting, Science Finds
Los Angeles.—Do you want to become a better marksman with revolver or pistol?

Shoot with "the other hand." That is, right-handers should use the left hand, and vice versa, because the more developed muscles conflict less with each other. It is muscle conflict that makes for a more tremble hand.

WE HAD driven the width of Texas, through New Mexico and into Arizona without seeing anything more than scenery to indicate we had reached the great open spaces, the wild and woolly West. Six days ago, before starting from New York on our journey to the Pacific coast, our friend Norman, who had made the trip four times, said to us: "You'll see plenty of cowboys, and Indians, too. And on the desert there'll be prospectors, regular old desert rats. They're interesting to talk to."

But here we were nearing Phoenix and hadn't even seen a horse, let alone a real cowboy astride one. It was discouraging.

And then suddenly Janet cried, "There's one!"

"One what?" I asked, sitting bolt upright, and nearly running the car off the road.

"A prospector! See! There! Coming across the desert with his pack burro!"

"By jove, she's right!" Jerry and his wife, Hazel, had sighted the man at the same instant. And a moment later I saw him, too, not 50 yards away. He was heading in a diagonal course for the automobile road.

"Stop, you idiot!" Jerry yelled. "We can't talk to him going 50 miles an hour."

I didn't like the way Jerry yelled and I don't like Jerry especially well, anyhow, but I stopped. I was as anxious to get a closeup of the prospector as were the others. There was a possibility he might have something that I could buy to add to my collection of frontier relics.

We stopped at a point that I judged would intersect the desert man's path, and waited. He was an old man, we saw, wearing a 6-inch beard, battered felt and a collarless, ragged shirt. His trousers were held up by one suspender strap, and the legs of them were tucked into 8-inch boots with run-down heels. He looked for all the world like one of the gold prospectors you're always reading about in western magazines and novels.

The burro was mouse-colored and shaggy. Atop his back was piled camping gear and cooking utensils and other implements that we judged were used in the search for gold.

When within a dozen yards of us he looked up and grinned toothlessly. It was then that my heart leaped. For strapped about his thin waist was a holster, from which protruded the walnut handle of an ancient six-shooter.

"Look Here!" I exclaimed. "We're offering You Real Money for the Worthless Old Thing. Cash!"

Even without seeing the revolving barrel and muzzle I knew that it was of that variety I wanted and had been searching for, for years, to complete my collection of old American guns. And I knew that Jerry, who wanted a similar weapon, had seen it, too.

I climbed out of the car in the hope of getting the jump on old Jerry, but he was right beside me, and the girls came laughing behind.

"Listen," I said breathlessly to the old man, "how much do you want for that gun? Give you five bucks!"

"Double it," said Jerry annoyingly, and grinned.

The old man stared at us in amazement, looked from one to the other and then at the girls. Thinking about it later I don't wonder that he acted a little frightened.

"Listen," I said again, "I'll give you twenty-five for that six-shooter, Mr. Prospector, and right on the line, too."

"Thirty!" said Jerry.

As yet the old man hadn't said a word, but he grasped the opportunity while Jerry and I were gawking at each other.

"Don't want to sell it," he said. Jerry and I stared in amazement.

"Look here!" I exclaimed, "we're offering you real money for the worthless old thing. Cash! Do you understand?"

"Will you take fifty dollars?" I asked.

"Yes," he said.

Exactly what I wanted. And, miracle of miracles, there were two notches cut in the handle!

Triumphantly I returned to the car and showed my prize to Jerry. But the sour look was still on his face, and there wasn't much satisfaction in gloating. That would come later.

We drove off, leaving the old prospector standing there on the edge of the automobile road, looking after us. The money was still in his hand, and the last glimpse I had of him in the rear-view mirror he had taken off his battered hat and was scratching his head. His face wore the same expression of bewilderment. I chuckled. Crazy old coot!

An hour later we drove into Phoenix and put up at a good hotel. I was happy. I examined my gun, found that it contained one cartridge, which I extracted, then carefully wrapped both gun and ammunition reverently in an old silk handkerchief.

After dinner I went into the lobby and sat down, picturing just how I would rearrange my den at home so that the relic would be prominently displayed. Presently I noticed that some one had come in and joined a companion on the divan just behind where I sat. I couldn't help overhearing their conversation.

"Hello, Joe," said the newcomer. "How they going?"

"Good," said the other man. "Sold three. How about you?"

"Five," said Joe. "Got fifty-five for the last one." He chuckled. "I was working about 40 miles north of town. Four suckers came along and the men in the party began scrapping over who was to have the gun. They finally decided to flip a coin and the loudest talker won. Came across with fifty-five smacks without a squawk. By the way, I got to stroll down to Charlie's and order me a new set of prospector's clothes. Those old ones make me look too young. What do you think?"

"Wouldn't hurt any. And while you're at it, you'd better sink another ten bucks and get yourself a new burro. Lop-ears deserves going to pasture." The first speaker stood up.

"Well, I'll be seeing you. There's a case of those frontier guns waiting for me at the freight house, fresh from the factory. I've got to go down and cut notches in the handles. So long."

"So long," said Joe.

Immense Timber Wolves in the Michigan Forests

Big timber wolves continue to roam the wilderness areas of northern Michigan. Just recently, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., the bounty division of the state department of conservation, reported that it had bountied the pelt of timber wolf taken by a bounty trapper in Ontonagon county, which was captured near Matchwood and measured 6 feet 8 1/2 inches. "Although subject to stretching in the removal of the pelt from the carcass, the hide is believed to be the largest of its kind taken in the upper peninsula within recent years." Undoubtedly this is true for a 6-foot 8 1/2-inch timber wolf is a big animal and seldom do they run this large.

It is not the largest timber wolf ever taken in Michigan, however. Back in 1922 a state trapper, operating in the woods near Sidnav, in the upper peninsula, sent in the hide of a mature timber wolf that measured 84 inches. It was in prime condition and beautifully marked. This pelt was sold to a resident of Grand Rapids, who desired to have a rug made of the hide. According to J. Stokley Ligon, who was then in charge of predatory animal control work in Michigan, this was the largest timber wolf reported as coming from Michigan.

As a rule the Michigan timber wolf seldom runs larger than 60 to 70 inches in length and even that is considered a large animal. The species is not at all numerous in the state, having disappeared from most of the upper peninsula following the cutting of the heavy timber. Unlike the coyote, which has largely supplanted it in the upper country, the timber wolf must have dense swamp and ridge timber to prosper. It shuns the open cut-over country and moves on when forests disappear.

Bird Sells Newspapers

Travelers at the West station in Budapest may buy newspapers of the most unusual paper seller in Hungary. He is a tame sparrow, which assists Margit Szep, who runs the stand. The bird gives change by picking up small coins and placing them in the customer's hand. Margit rescued the sparrow when it fell from its nest and trained it. The bird "goes to bed" in a pocket of Margit's apron, especially lined with wool for him.

Ghost, Girl Ventriloquist

Tarves, Scotland, is breathing freely again after its greatest ghost scare, which was started by a nine-year-old girl. The district had been mystified and alarmed for some time by strange voices which came from the walls of a house, reciting the Lord's prayer one minute and singing popular songs the next. A trap was set and the "ghost" was found to be the girl, who confessed to being a natural ventriloquist.

City Celebrates for Month

Selkirk, Scotland, ancient capital of the Scottish borders, recently completed a month of celebrations commemorating its foundation 400 years ago. Among the outstanding events were the traditional ceremony of riding the borders, in which 200 huntmen participated, and the march, arm in arm, of 8,000 lads, who sang old border songs as they went through the town.

Hams Hidden in Talcum

French customs officers at Modane, on the Franco-Italian frontier, recently noticed a railway car loaded with barrels, which were billed as containing talc. They were consigned from Italy to a man in Lyons. Seventy-five of the 111 barrels held choice smoked hams packed in talcum powder. The customs charges on the pork seized totaled $1,300.

Penalizing the Little Fellow

Many of our lawmakers fail to understand the fact that when we levy penalties on the 'big fellow,' the 'little fellow' is liable to be hurt the most.

On July 1, a new chain store tax law went into effect in Iowa, placing a stiff graduation tax on concerns operating more than one retail outlet.

The results — Many gasoline stations have been permanently abandoned, the state has lost a large percentage of its annual pump tax, every large oil company, with a single exception, has been forced out of the marketing business in Iowa — and 2,200 workers have been dropped from the payrolls of the major oil companies. Many, unable to find employment, must go on the already bulging relief rolls.

The Iowa chain tax was put forward as a measure to help the common people — the small business man and worker. Its effect has been absolutely opposite, it has hit the worker hardest of all, and has robbed the state of revenue that must be made up by increased taxes on other business and other workers.

Furthermore, like all measures which lay down barriers to initiative, it will frighten capital and prevent investors from putting their money into productive enterprises that would provide new jobs and taxes.

A number of other states are said to be considering similar chain tax laws. The example of Iowa should make the voters think twice about proposals to penalize the 'big fellow' — lest they find in practise that it is again at the 'little fellow's' expense.

The Napoleonic Grand-Stand Player

With sixteen different countries aligned against Italy in her determination to war with Ethiopia, Mussolini, with his arrogance, selfishness and dictatorial policies, will give no heed to the voice of the League of Nations. Late dispatches say he will plunge his country into war at any cost.

In that as well as in many other things, this monster who seeks to emulate Napoleon, goes ahead with the heartless system of ruling or ruining everything that comes in his way. He has driven out of Italy the Masonic and Odd-Fellow orders and put to exile all leaders of these noble orders whose only sin was to preserve peace and promote harmony on the earth.

Even Turkey, as bad as that so-called country is, has joined with 15 others in their efforts for peace. Notwithstanding all peace overtures thrown out by the League of Nations, Mussolini goes ahead with war preparations, heedless of arbitration or in favor of a settlement of any kind, because he is just itching for trouble.

In that, we do not believe he is sincere. We believe that when it comes to a show-down, the Dictator will weaken, show his yellow streak and back up — we have always thought him a coward and grand-stand player, and time will prove it.

Roswell State Fair
Oct. 2, 3, 4 and 5

Roswell—The parade on the opening morning of the Eastern New Mexico State Fair to be held here Oct. 2, 3, 4 and 5 will select the queen of the fair in an unusual way. The best float in the parade in addition to receiving the $75 first prize in the float competition, will select the queen for the lady riding on that float will be the queen.

The coronation ceremonies will take place at the fair grounds on the last night of the fair. This is only one of the many unusual features in this opening spectacle.

"Old Timers" Day on Friday, Oct. 4, is another big day at the fair when men and women who have been in New Mexico 30 years or longer are guests of honor.

The morning parade of horses, buggies, hacks, chuck wagons, carrying the Old Timers, many of whom are dressed as they were when they came to the Territory is a colorful affair. Automobiles are barred from this parade. At noon the Old Timers are guests at a Barbecue.

Exhibits both in the Livestock department and the products division promise to surpass by far the record set last year. Many Counties from all portions of the state are planning exhibits and the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association has been allotted three times as much space as they had last year.

A Rodeo each afternoon, and special entertainment features day and night provide a full program of amusement for the 4 days.

Frock Keeps Matron Looking "Just Right"

PATTERN, 2335

Looking just right about the house, and neatly tailored enough for street or porch appearance, is no trick at all for the handy woman who knows how to run up a seam! The clever matron likes the extra formality the flattering revers lend the house frock. The pleated sleeves—besides being flattering—allow for plenty of action and the paneled skirt with its roomy pockets has a way with it, if the hips are just a bit too generous! A neat pin-stripe cotton or tailored geometric design would be excellent. An eyelet detail makes a lovely street dress.

Pattern 2335 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 24, 30, 34, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 takes 4 1/2 yards 30-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address all orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

"Yes, that accounts for me wearing these clothes. What's the use of trying to be economical?"—Tit-Bits Magazine.

CONCENTRATED FOOD

"It's a shame the boss cut out the lunch hour."
"Oh, I don't mind. He's had seasoning put in the gum flaps of the envelopes and now we don't need any lunch."

A Fair Imitation
Count—Oh, yes, we have wonderful estates on the continent, you know all my ancestors lived on bluffs.
Miss De Peyster—And I suppose you are taking after them.—Kansas City Times.

Inducement
"Crimson Gulch pays very little to members of a jury."
"Yes," answered Cactus Joe. "But think of the opportunity they enjoy for hearing all the local scandal!"

Daily Dialogue
Subhub—A lion-tamer says you can't tame a lion by looking it in the eye.
Hubbub—Naturally. A lion can "out-look" any human eye ever aimed at it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IF AND WHEN

"Does your husband play the game for money?"
"Yes, but I've given up hopes that he's ever going to get rich that way."

He Passes
Teacher—Listen to this sentence, Tom. "The car was traveling 60 miles an hour." Can you parse it?
Tom—None, but my dad's car can!

Already Supplied
Office Boy—Some one to see you, sir, a gentleman with a mustache.
Absent-minded Employer—I can't see him. Tell him I have one already.

A Gift
"Where did you get the plot of your second novel?"
"From the film version of my first!"
—New York Daily Mirror.

Sick Slicker

CHAPTER I

Monday
"Listen," his father said to Hal Ireland downtown—in the large office of the bank that was all soft carpets, soft lights, soft paneling, and enough floor-space rental to keep five families in comfort for a year; "listen."
"I've been listening, sir," said Hal, "for twenty minutes."

The Old Man seemed to wait a little for the slow draining of humor from Hal's alert, gray eyes. Then he said in quiet irony:
"I dare say you've been told about your charm—"

"Never by you, sir," said Hal with a faint bow, checked gently for fear of starting the slow, heavy throb in his head again.

"I dare say you've been told that when you bow that way, and let your eyes twinkle, you're apt to get your way. But I venture to point out what I can't convince myself you've learned for yourself: that the business world is not made up of pretty girls or susceptible matrons—social or theatrical; that the business of the country, about which you know nothing, is carried on by men who think more of persistence and application than they do of capacity to hold whiskey, or acquaintance with speakeasy proprietors or hand-caps at golf or the fit of white flannels."

"The San Francisco job is open till the first of the month—because they need somebody, not because I've asked them to let you coast in on my name. You've got your last penny from me for transportation or anything else—till next quarter's allowance. If you want the job, get yourself out there. If you don't, don't."

Hal's quick, mobile face was set, and he met his father's steady look with bright, impersonal steadiness, rather as if he had a peevish, disappointing child before him. Then he got up and straightened his good shoulders with a deep breath.

"That all?" he asked.
"That's all," said the Old Man, briskly casual.

"Right," said Hal, with a practiced clipping of the word. "Well—bye."
He swung his back on his father and walked over the thick carpet to the door. In the silence, he could feel his father expecting him to turn there for another word—of hope, or of opening. So he pulled the door, caught the other knob behind him, and stepped out, leaving only the soft, efficient click of the latch for comment.

Dalrymple—known downtown as Frederick Ireland's knife and fork—was walking unoptimistically outside, where he couldn't be seen from the banking floor. "Bad?" he asked apprehensively.

"Bad," said Hal, letting his gray eyes light again with their welcoming humor. "Rage-making. Do you know anything about bromo-seltzer? Does it really work?"
"They say so, but I've never needed—"

"And I'm never going to again—never, never—probably. How do you get to California on six dollars?"
"Lord, Mister Hal," said Dalrymple, "is six dollars all you've—out of the, that cheque?"

"Fraid so," Hal reached into an inside pocket and brought out the zig-zag length of the railroad ticket, with a couple of pullman slips pinned to the top. Dalrymple looked relieved.

"Oh, but you've got transportation," he said.
"On a train that's now probably simply whooshing through northern Ohio. Here, take 'em, and if you can get an adjustment, credit the Old Man's account with my compliments."

"If I could—if you'll let me—"
Hal smiled, and his eyes wrinkled in the corners. "You're a h—l of a nice guy, Dimple." he said, "but I'm so mad—so mad, for the first time in my life, that I wouldn't borrow a Confederate nickel from anybody who paid taxes in the same state with that—that—with my father. He told me—if you'll believe it, Dimple: he told me I know nothing about money or life or this country or him or myself or modern plumbing or brokers' loans or God-knows-what-not that's of the most quivering importance to a young man's career. He even made me the simply astounding revelation that I was an only child. Had you heard that, Dimple? He sat there and told me—but what the h—l, you're busy. And I've got to get to the Coast. Bromo-seltzer wouldn't make it any worse, could it?"

Dalrymple looked worried, confused, pathetic, and he murmured: "No, no," helplessly. So Hal patted his arm, promised to let him know what happened, and started uptown again.

It was in the subway that he remembered the sign they had laughed at last night. In the West Forties, it was, and if he could remember from which place they had been going to which other place, he would remember the street. "California... 52A" was the line he recalled, among a list of fares to Chicago, Miami, Detroit, Pittsburg, and other destinations which he had no faintest desire to reach.

"There," Tony had said, grabbing at him; "go out to the Coast that way, boy. Rub elbows with the people; see they know your native land."

Just west of Broadway—in the Forties. He'd had it; by G—d, he'd had it. He wouldn't borrow a nickel from any one of fifty people who'd lend him money in the next half hour if he went to them. He'd hock something—the curly ugly silver dressing-table set his father had given him. He'd get to the Coast on fifty dollars and tell his father what to do with any inauspicious future fight-talks that occurred to him.

CHAPTER II

Tuesday
Hal's headache was gone next morning, but so nearly—was the warning sense of triumph in his inspiration. And that went entirely at nine o'clock when he walked into the bare, dingy, and crowded garage office from which decrepit careful of share-expense travelers were dispatched about the country. He hadn't stopped to think what the mechanics of the thing might be; but here the possibilities of dreariness seemed promptly infinite. Eight July days of four hundred miles' driving each, through country reputed to be hotter than outside, Forty-ninth street already promised to be; crowded into an unwashed derelict of a fine car among a selection from this assembly of desolate, if not actively objectionable looking people. . . . The first rough cartoon of these vistas nearly had him back on the street again—to telephone Dalrymple for the easy loan that would put him on this afternoon's Century.

A decent-looking man in a clean shirt-looked at him across the shabby desk firmly. The telephone rang. "Yes, this is Larsen," said the man, frowning. "Call me later. I'm very busy."

"How Far You Going?" Larsen Asked Her.

Hal opened his old suitcase against the wall near the door and sat on it. Larsen started pawing over the piles of little slips before him. "Now—" he said twice, almost looking up, but each time thinking better of it. Then suddenly, "You can't take that dog." Hal looked around for the dog, then up quickly to examine who it should be in this place with so smartly bred a fox-terrier.

"I've got to take the dog," said the girl in soft, almost-husky gravity. "He'll sit in my lap; he'll be no trouble." Pretty, quite pretty, Hal saw; perhaps a little tough, surely self-conscious—the even solemnity in her large eyes aware that unauthorized people were looking at her, might any minute speak to her and have to be rebuffed. But pretty, really quite pretty.

"How far you going?" Larsen asked her.
"Los Angeles," said the girl steadily.

"Oh," said Larsen, as if Los Angeles were just this side of New Rochelle. "If you keep him in your lap, all right." He turned to the man whose crossed legs Hal could see beyond her. "Does he bite?"
"I don't know," said a lazy, careless voice.

Larsen was startled. "You two're together," he said.
"No," said the man.

Larsen looked at her; she made a slight negative motion with her head and dropped her eyes to the dog. Larsen fumbled through the slips of paper, stopping to frown at one. "You're going to L. A.," he said to the girl. "Yes," she said, barely looking up to him for an instant. "And so are you," Larsen said to the man. "Yes, but I'm not with her." "Then who is?" said Larsen. Hal let half a smile come through his moodiness as he shook his head. And Larsen was saved from further astonishment by his telephone, into which he said again he was very busy, loading three seven-passenger cars for Chl and the West.

Hal's eyes kept coming back to the girl. She seemed not to hear what was going on in the room—stayed quietly, solemnly sure that some one would speak to her. Periodically that annoyed Hal and he looked away. Then he would find himself looking at her again, seeing how the smooth, slight dip of her cheeks under high cheek-bones seemed to be pursing her lips a little, adding solemnly to her wide, possessed mouth.

"Hello, hello," said Larsen impatiently into the telephone; "I'm very busy. I'm loading seven three-passenger cars for Chl and the West." Larsen was sweating. He called suddenly over his shoulder, as if taking a desperate remedy, "De Soto!" A small, cheerful, soft-eyed man, without a hat and looking as if he had just crawled from under a car, came in expectantly.

"Take her bags," said Larsen, pointing his pencil at a woman, "and take her to Dallas." The lady's shocked disapproval of little De Soto lost some of its impetuosity when he grinned at her eagerly and said: "Like a fast ride, lady?" She glared down, her pince-nez quivering. "Hope y'do, 'cause anybody rides with me gets a fast one."

"Now," said Larsen more happily, as if their disappearance made it a family party again. But the telephone rang, and Larsen began his weary piece about Chl and the West almost before he had lifted the receiver. "Now, that dog—" he started again, and Hal saw a sort of quick pride take the girl's face as she raised her head. "No, that's right," Larsen added. "We settled that. We settled about the dog. Now Los Angeles—everybody going to Los Angeles goes with Jake Miller. Miller?" he shouted at the garage door. "Where's Miller?"

After an hour Hal went across the baking street for a glass of ginger ale. When he came back the slight, tidy man smoking beside the doorway gave him a lazy smile and in a voice that was oddly unkind of pitch said, "Goin' to L. A.?"

"Guess so," said Hal, trying to be neither discourteous nor encouraging. The trip was going to be bad enough without entering into relations with anybody.

"So'm I," said the man. "My name's Crack—Mar'n Crack." His eyes seemed dreamily looking for the effect of this on Hal.

Hal leaned against the wall, facing the street, and lighted a cigarette. I'm d—d if I'll offer him my name, Hal said to himself; if he's interested, he heard it in there.

"You any relation to Frederick Ireland—the big shot downtown?"
Hal looked at him with cool amusement in his gray eyes. "Sure," he said. "Couldn't be closer." Crack gave a slight, polite laugh. From his side pocket he drew a bright, new golf ball, dropped it to the pavement where it clicked smartly and leaped up to his waiting hand again.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
C.W.M.D. By Editha L. Watson

THE CURSE OF GOLD

IN "THE Golden days of '49," there were five or six men from Indiana, who went West and worked together on shares. They were mining on the San Joaquin river, and had not found any great wealth to spur them on. One day Charles Tooker, one of their number, went out to hunt herbs for medicine, and in his wanderings about he dislodged a boulder and uncovered a nugget which weighed fully 90 pounds, and was nearly pure gold. No other gold was to be found near the place.

Tooker wanted to keep this wonderful treasure for himself instead of sharing it with his comrades. (Had he been honest, no more would remain to tell, but his cupidity started a chain of events which reads like some Oriental fable.) He concealed the nugget where it lay, and went back to camp with the herbs and without saying a word about his golden find.

In spite of himself, he could not act exactly natural. Still, how could any one behave in an ordinary manner when he knew that an enormous lump of gold, worth a fortune, was his if he could get away with it? It would prey on any man's mind. He remained with the party for a month, trying to avert suspicion, but the spell of that great lump of gold was on him, and the other men wondered what was ailing him. At last he could bear the suspense no longer. He had bought a mule from an immigrant, and one night he took the animal to the place where the wonderful nugget lay, dug it out, loaded it on the mule, and set out for other parts.

Two of the men at his camp, who had been suspicious of his actions, had followed him. They saw with bulging eyes the wonderful lump of gold—at last they knew what had been on his mind! They were justly resentful that he was trying to get away with the gold instead of sharing it as was agreed, but they were not quite sure what to do, so they trailed on behind him. They followed all night, and at daybreak they came up in time to fight against a couple of outlaws who set upon Tooker, hoping to rob him of whatever treasure he might have. They succeeded, too, and left Tooker and one of his former friends dead as they hurried away with the laden burro.

The other man returned to camp, aroused his friends, and told them the story. Immediately they armed themselves and set out on the trail of the thieves, catching up with them as they were camped at night. In the ensuing fight two more of the Indians were killed, and one of the outlaws. The remaining desperado hid the nugget and escaped; he went to San Francisco and lay low.

After six months, this man felt that it would be safe to go back for the nugget. Instead of making the trip alone, for he knew only too well the perils that lurked in wait for lone travelers in that rough country, he got together a party for the purpose of retrieving the gold, and they were to set out together. Two men in the expedition, however, who knew where the monstrous nugget was buried, rode ahead, found the gold, loaded it on a mule, and hurried off. They had a day and a half start on the rest of the party, so they took the stolen treasure 40 miles away to a small mining camp, buried it there, staked a claim over it, and went to work like honorable citizens and honest miners. For six weeks they kept up this pretense; at last, feeling that the trail was clear, they dug up the great lump of gold and went their way. Where they went, and what became of them, we do not know.

The next time the nugget was heard of, it was in the possession of three miners, who joined a large immigrant train and showed it to the travelers. They had found it, they said, in the Hot Creek mountains of Nevada. After going for some distance with the immigrants, the miners and their treasure left.

Only the nugget, if it could talk, could relate the adventures through which it passed. It again dropped from all knowledge, only to be recalled again by a half-breed Indian at a military post in Colorado. He knew where it was, he boasted, even in the simplicity of his heart, giving directions for its finding, and a sergeant and two privates deserted and went to see if he were right.

The cache was 50 miles away from the post, but the three men reached it, found the nugget, and headed for Kansas with it. They had been followed by other soldiers with orders for their arrest, and the party came up with the two privates at last, but too late, for they lay dead on the trail. The sergeant had killed them for the gold, and had fled onward with it.

Strangely enough, in spite of the fact that the deserter and murderer was hunted by the government as the criminal he was, he was never captured. The fact that the nugget apparently passed into the possession of Indians may perhaps suggest the reason why he was never found.

And there the story rests. The wonderful, accursed lump of gold had done all the damage it could, for only white men are so quick to murder for the sake of gold. In Indian hands, perhaps kept for an object of ceremony, it vanished from the sight of every eye since.

More Velvet Than Ever in Fall Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WE ARE going to be more elegant in dress this fall and winter than ever. All the pre-showings of advance fashions declare for greater luxury in jewels, in fur, in fabrics, in costume design. Where there is luxury and elegance in apparel there is velvet. Which leads to the message we would convey—the outstanding importance of velvet in the mode.

There is simply no limit to the enthusiasm which style creators are expressing for velvet this fall. It's velvet everywhere this season.

Apportion of the craze for velvet which is sweeping throughout the world of fashions Paris cables the news of tailored cloth suits which are styled with velvet collars and revers. Several suits shown in early contour showings have velvet skirts with cloth jackets often of rough surfaced, bright colored novelty woolen.

The girl planning her going-away-to-school wardrobe will adore the new velvet-plus-woolen outfits. Consider, for instance, the cunning ensemble shown to the right in the picture. It is a style-elect when it comes to assembling the college girl's wardrobe. The dress is of silk deep red (red of the Italian master paintings) velvet. The bodice is delightfully fitted in squares. The cloth cape in matching red has velvet buttons and velvet flowers at the throat.

Black velorganza, which is a thin velvet pile on an organdie base, fashions the handsome costume to the left in the group. Note that the faring jacket is lined with the same gay printed organdie as makes the blouse. Linings which correlate the ensemble into a harmonious unit is a pet theme with fashion this season.

There is a boldly picturesque note about the so-called "plate" dress centered in the trio. The unique bodice is of green mat velvet. The skirt is of non-crushable heavy white linen strikingly printed in green.

Velvet has become almost inseparable with black when it comes to talking from the viewpoint of daytime fashions. However, it is a little newer this year to introduce color—any of the dark warm colors that are booming for fall, particularly the wine purple and rich green range reflecting the Italian renaissance influence.

The favorite velvet suit for all-around wear during the daytime activities is linked with fitted lines. The very short jacket is apt to have almost a basque trimness, with its neatly buttoned-up-the-front closing, and intricate seaming and gores for the skirt.

The shirtwaist in velvet, begun by Mainbocher, is contributing a subject of exciting interest to the new style program. Speaking of color in velvet this trend is particularly noticeable in many of the early fall hats which are of velvet in delectable warm autumn hues. The little chapeau in the inset here shown is an ultra smart plaid velvet toque with a green feather curled to the left. The new berets of deep wine green or purple velvet are decidedly picturesque, some of them big floppy affairs dipping down over one eye, others with the new triangular and squared contours which are decidedly smart and effective.

READY FOR SCHOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Coat fashions for the junior miss should be considered as "first aid" to preparedness in the matter of school girl wardrobe needs for fall. The model pictured is highly significant as to certain style trends that are outstanding in the new autumn and winter modes. Note a slight flare from the hipline. Double-breasted in somewhat of a coachman style this coat takes on a new note of chic. The fur-bordered collar carries a capelike air. The material for this attractive coat is a checked velour woolen. The hat is included in the ensemble, being made of the same smart wool-weave.

Style Trend

Bows of ermine are being worn instead of buckles on evening shoes in London.

DRAPE BRIDAL VEIL IN MANY NEW WAYS

New ways of draping the bridal veil are offered the girl who is planning an early fall wedding. While in general these may be said to derive from the Russian tiara effects, they should more properly be credited to the Renaissance period. This includes the Italian, the Russian, and the Hungarian periods of corresponding dates.

One of the most charming of these diadem effects was recently constructed by Worth. Of tulle and old lace, over a stiffened wire foundation, it gains in width clear to the ears and is softened by incrustated draperies at the top in crenellated fashion.

Chanel has made a bridal head-dress which starts with a cap of tulle, embroidered in crosslines of dull silver. This silver note is recalled in the torse which divides the upturning and downturning sections of the slightly circular-cut aureole, diminishing to nothing at the back of the head and giving full sweep to the simple tulle veil.

Knitted Evening Gown of Cellophane is the Latest

A knitted evening gown of cellophane yarn is one of the sensations of the current mode.

We have seen knitted evening gowns before, introduced first at Palm Beach and taken up by New York and Paris. But the idea of using cellophane yarn is new.

The glittering cellophane, in black, follows the dictates of the season as to brilliance and glitter, and fits the figure like a mermaid's scales.

Knitted suits are blossoming forth in faultlessly tailored models, with contrasting linings and a distinct swag-gar.

Glossy Lace for Gowns

Glossy, transparent lace is used for gowns in black, navy and dark red. A pale shaded flower trims the corsage, and mittens of the lace go with the dress.

White Snakeroot Poisons Animals

Dairy Products or Meat of Stock Affected Causes Serious Illness.

Supplied by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.
Heavy rains which have made Illinois pasture luxuriant this year have not ended the danger of white snakeroot poisoning to man and to live stock during the coming few months. Even though pasture grass is abundant, animals may eat the leaves of the poisonous white snakeroot weed from time to time. Overstocking pastures, even if they are good ones, increases the risks from the poisoning, which occurs every year.

Persons using dairy products or meat of animals affected by "trembles," as white snakeroot poisoning is known, may contract milky sickness, an ailment which runs a rapid course and has a high mortality rate.

Keeping live stock away from white snakeroot and eradicating the weed from pastures and woodlots are the only sure ways of preventing the poisoning. Treatments thus far developed are far from satisfactory. Tremetol is the toxic agent in the plant and is absorbed into the animal's system when the plant is eaten, according to Dr. Robert Graham, chief in animal pathology and hygiene at the college.

The plant is a tall, slender perennial herb which usually grows in partially cleared woodlots, swampy areas, shady ravines and in groves along streams. The greatest danger is through summer, until late in the fall. This is especially true during dry years when pastures are short and dry. White snakeroot can generally be recognized by its broadly oval leaves, set opposite each other and having sharply toothed, or serrated, edges. The non-poisonous varieties usually have narrower leaves.

In small patches the weed is best eradicated by pulling each plant by the roots. In large patches proper cropping is the most satisfactory means of eradication. Live stock should be kept out of pastures containing any of the weed.

Weakness, loss of appetite, constipation and a trembling of the voluntary muscles when the animal is forced to move are among the early symptoms of poisoning. When these symptoms are observed the stock should be taken from pasture and a reliable veterinarian called. The immediate attention of a physician should be given to cases of milk sickness among humans.

Spring Tooth Implement

Kills Out Quack Grass

A new way to rout that old pest quack-grass is by the use of the field tiller, an implement equipped with spring teeth. The method is 80 per cent effective. With this implement, tillage is started in mid-summer, just as soon as quack-grass hay or small grain is removed from the field. The quack roots are none too vigorous then.

Without previous cultivation, the tiller is taken over the field, teeth set to dig about an inch or two deep. In a few days, when the field starts to get green, the tiller goes over it again, this time crosswise and with teeth set an inch or so deeper. This procedure is continued until freezing weather arrives, by which time the ground will have been stirred six inches deep or more. Freezing will destroy most of the roots that haven't been killed by that time.

Then in spring, go over the ground once or twice more and it is ready for planting. Remember, though: Each time over, go a different direction, and go a little deeper.—Farm Journal.

Breeding Dairy Heifers

No arbitrary age can be set for breeding dairy heifers, according to an authority, as this is determined by the maturity of the individual animal. The feeding schedule also enters into this question as those animals that are fed a liberal grain ration will mature more rapidly than those receiving a limited ration of grain. As a general rule, however, Jersey and Guernsey heifers should be bred to freshen at from twenty-four to thirty months of age. Ayrshire and Holstein animals should be bred to freshen from twenty-seven to thirty-two months of age.

Around the Farm

Farmers of Palestine are enjoying prosperity this year.

More than 4,000,000 farms in this country are on unimproved roads.

Growing corn in hills is a practice taught to early settlers by Indians.

Alfalfa produces the highest quality of hay that can be grown in North Carolina, say live stock experts.

A fairly common practice in Great Britain is that of selling fields of potatoes and orchards of fruit in bulk.

The Bee Culture Laboratory says that there are about 5,000 bees in a pound and that a hive of 20,000 would therefore weigh four pounds.

Sweet potato vines should be cut off at the surface of the soil immediately after a frost. Toxic materials in the frost-killed foliage are frequently translocated to the roots, causing them to rot.

Color and Light Are Co-Partners

Official of Decorators' Society Urges Protection of Eyesight.

The important part that painting and decorating play in aiding eyesight is emphasized in a recent statement by Ray Isard, well-known decorator of Omaha, who is also first vice president of the International Society of Master Painters and Decorators.

"It is not only important to have adequate lighting facilities," says Mr. Isard, "but it is imperative to have wall surfaces that make the most of that light. All members of the painting craft in the country are being urged to support wholeheartedly the splendid Better Light—Better Sight Movement. Such backing is not only a benefit to every community but a humanitarian service for those who, as a result, guard their priceless gift of good eyesight."

Mr. Isard calls attention to the fact that this movement applies not only to the home but also to the factory and office, to schools and hospitals. In talking of such structures, Mr. Isard says that window openings in the walls of light shafts and exterior areaways need particular attention. Many such "wells" receive little light and cause the rooms on which they open to be dim and gloomy.

"When such areaways and light shafts are painted white," points out Mr. Isard, "a flood of light is reflected through the windows and the adjacent rooms are made much brighter. Sealing conditions are greatly improved and efficiency is increased."

"Owners of large office buildings are becoming more and more conscious of the way illumination can be increased by reflection and of the saving of their tenants' eyesight. This has brought about the painting of the dark and dismal areas," Mr. Isard states.

"Scientists have established the fact that unpainted red brick has a coefficient of light reflection of only 15 or 20 per cent, while the same brick painted with a high-grade white paint has a reflection coefficient of 80 per cent," Mr. Isard points out.

He urges all owners of buildings to get behind the Better Light—Better Sight campaign by repainting dark areaways. "They will not only be rendering their tenants a real service," Mr. Isard states, "but tenants will be easier to attract and hold as a result of the brighter quarters they have to offer."

TOWN HAPPENINGS

WHO? WHEN? WHY?

Mrs. Juan Osorio and Miss Cecilia Vidaurri arrived home from California the latter part of last week accompanied by Mrs. Luis Vidaurri, who will visit here with relatives for several weeks. On Tuesday morning, Sabino Vidaurri, Ernest Lopez, Mrs. Luis Vidaurri, Lucillo Vidaurri and Fred Martinez left for Albuquerque, the last two named boys to attend Business College at that place.

Willis R. Lovelace, prominent stockman of the Corona country, was a business visitor in town this Tuesday.

Max Ramirez was here on business from his ranch near R. Benton last Friday afternoon and while in town, made this office a friendly call.

Our old friend Robert Hinchey, daughter Mrs. Helen Meeks and son-in-law Henry Rogers were business callers from Lincoln on this Monday. While here, Mr. Hinchey made this office a pleasant visit.

Lell and Marshall St. John and Lorenzo Garcia went to Fort Stanton Sunday in quest of a ball game and finding none there, they proceeded to Lincoln, but had to turn back due to the high water in Rio Bonito. The boys missed it; there was a game going on in Capitan at the time and several in the major leagues.

Lloyd Vigil, who has been critically ill the past two weeks, is much improved at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance P. Smith were here from their home in Oscura last Saturday, Vance attending the regular communication of the local Masonic lodge, while Mrs. Smith visited Carrizozo friends.

M. G. Peckham of the Sanitary Barber Shop has secured the services of Lovell Bryan, who comes from Tularosa. Mr. Bryan, like Mr. Peckham, is a finished tonsorial artist and is making a good assistant to 'Peck.' Drop in and let the boys fix you up in first-class style.

Diego Salcido sent word informing this office to change his paper from Tinnie to Hondo, N. M. Diego was County Commissioner for two terms several years ago, from District No. 1, Lincoln.

R. E. Kent of Oscura was a visitor in town this Tuesday.

Mrs. M. G. Peckham and daughter Vernon Ruth returned Tuesday from Albuquerque where they visited Mrs. Peckham's sister for about ten days.

J. A. Brubaker, proprietor of the Liberty Garage at Capitan, who is engaged in superintending CCC work for the government, is now located at Mayhill, N. M., so he states in a letter received from him by this office this week.

G. S. Hoover was in town from Capitan last Saturday, attending the local Masonic communication.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thornton were up from their ranch - farm near Oscura Tuesday with a nice selection of peaches.

M. Doering has had the foundation laid for an extra room in the rear of the wholesale Kandy Shop, Frank Todd, proprietor, next door to his hotel.

Gunter Kroegel of the New Mexico Mechanical Equipment Co. made a business trip to Albuquerque Tuesday, staying over and returning home Thursday evening.

Pioneer Dies

Last Friday at his home in Lincoln, Frank Salazar, pioneer of Lincoln County, passed away after a short illness. Mr. Salazar lived for many years in Lincoln, where he was well thought of by his many friends and neighbors. The funeral was held in Lincoln on Saturday afternoon and attended by a host of friends of the family.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sara Salazar, daughter of the late Captain Saturnino Baca and Mrs. Juanita Baca, several children and other relatives, to all of whom the sympathy of their many friends over Lincoln County is tendered.

One daughter of the deceased, Mrs. Carlos Vigil, resides in Carrizozo and was present at her father's funeral.

In The District Court of Lincoln County, State of New Mexico.

Marguerite Chesser, Plaintiff, vs.

Reginald Gordon Chesser, Defendant.

No. 4305

Notice of Suit

To the Defendant, Reginald Gordon Chesser:

You are hereby notified that a suit has been commenced against you in the above entitled cause and court, and the object and general nature of said suit is to obtain a divorce from the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and the plaintiff.

Unless you, the said defendant, Reginald Gordon Chesser, enter your appearance in said suit on or before October 15, 1935, judgment and decree will be rendered against you by default.

The name and address of Plaintiff's attorneys is: Askren, Watson & Haney, Carrizozo, New Mexico.

Witness my hand and seal of said Court, this the 11th day of September, 1935.

(Seal)

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will hold an all-day quilting bee at the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer Thursday, Sept. 19. All members are urged to attend and each member is requested to bring a covered-dish lunch. Be sure to attend.

On Thursday, Sept. 5, a farewell party was given for Miss Louise Shelton, who is soon to leave for Denver to attend school. The party was given at the home of Mrs. Nellie Branum with Miss Leslye Cooper as hostess, assisted by Meses J. M. Shelton, Nellie Branum and Margie Clouse. There were 30 guests present and the card game was "Trivoli," a Spanish game. Prizes were won by Miss Evelyn Claunch and Walter Grumbles.

The Club Recreativo met at the home of Mrs. Lorenzo Garcia last Friday. After business, refreshments were served. Next meeting will be with Miss Cuenca Garcia.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Lowe will leave shortly for Carlsbad, to be employed in the Bank under Mr. Brickley. Mr. Lowe has resigned his position as assistant at the local postoffice, his place being taken by Joe Davine.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Ellison of Ancho made a trip to Roswell Thursday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shafer were Roswell business visitors Thursday.
