Lincoln County Fair and Rodeo Successful

The heading of this article is self-explanatory; it was a success from every viewpoint.

Friday morning, the Carrizozo Band with S. H. Nickels as director, led the parade, after playing at several places on the streets. In the afternoon, the program as published in this paper was carried out to the letter. Softball games, bicycle races, horse races and other things in the way of sport, kept the crowds amused and ended each day with the rodeo which went over the top with the usual thrills.

Dr. R. E. Blaney and his committee worked long and hard, night and day and to their credit belongs the success which was the result of the well-managed affair. The dances each night at Community Hall were well patronized with an El Paso orchestra furnishing the music. Much credit is due the band without which, the Fair would have been a gloomy event instead of one of joy and entertainment.

Everybody helped with willing hands; unselfishly, and showed by the way they rolled up their sleeves and took valuable time from their lines of business and donated the money necessary to carry on the work, that they meant to make the Fair a winner, which they did. Therefore, it would be wrong to give credit to a few individuals where the people in general, contributed to the success of the undertaking.

On the whole, we congratulate our people for the good work done and which insures for the town a much better Fair for next year. The committees mentioned above were made up from the business and professional men of Carrizozo. They worked with that friendly contention or rather, emulation, as to who could best work and best agree. We wish to thank our neighbors from out-of-town for their presence and assistance in winding up of this successful public event. Come back next year, folks!

Mr. and Mrs. Transito Gurule were here from Mountainair last week, visiting with the Gregorio Pino, Saturnino Chavez and Ben Gallegos families. Mrs. Gurule is a niece to Sat and Joe Chavez and a cousin to Gregorio and Mrs. Gallegos.

Bear Hunter No. 1

Miss Kate Reynolds of Cisco, Texas, killed a black bear on the Reynolds & Taylor I—X ranch near Oscura yesterday morning. The bear was tressed by dogs after an exciting chase shortly before daylight. The hunting party had to wait until daylight, at which time, Miss Reynolds, with a well aimed shot, brought Mr. Bruin to the ground. As far as we know, this is No. 1 in Lincoln County this season.

Out-of-the Ordinary

It was in one of the fashionable theatres of London, England, and an American theatrical company was playing "Southern Skies" to a large audience. In the reserved seat section, one seat remained vacant until shortly the curtain raised on the first act, when an elderly gentleman entered and took the seat. His dignity and polished appearance attracted those near him; he was a stranger. The play dealt with scenes of long ago, in which the familiar songs of "My Old Kentucky Home" and "That Old Sweetheart of Mine" were sung. As the last strains died away and the applause subsided, the old stranger arose and asked that the songs be repeated. Seeing that he was an American, the company gladly consented. After the last strains of those beautiful songs floated over the audience, the stranger swooned in his seat and his head rested over the arm of the orchestra chair. Those nearest to him, rushed to his assistance, but efforts in his behalf were of no avail—he was dead. No marks of identification were found on the body, neither was there even a letter or card which might have led to his identity, but he had more than a sufficient amount of money on his person to give him burial and to furnish a suitable gravestone, on which was this simple inscription: "An American Stranger." What led the old gentleman to that theatre and what memories did those old sweet songs bring back to him? You might have a guess coming and you might be right.

Women will talk, so the saying goes, but Mrs. Harold McGee of Round Grove, Ill., yawns instead of talking. She began to yawn on Oct. 10 and continues in that state in spite of a force of physicians in their efforts to stop the malady. The only relief she has is when she is put to sleep with sedatives, but as soon as she awakes, the yawning begins. She's done no talking since Oct. 10, which is quite out-of-the-ordinary.—Funny, isn't it.

This is the only country under the sun, where absolute freedom of action, unrestrained, prevails without apology. A few days ago, the President of the United States traded several cartons of cigarettes for some spears and shark teeth with an Indian chief in the Panama Canal zone. In any of the old countries, such an action would have been branded as a national disgrace, but in the U. S. A., even the President would sit down with a dusky Indian, smoke with him and trade cigarettes for shark teeth. We would not be surprised at any time to hear of the President engaged in a game of crap shooting for a can of beer—and he would have no apologies to offer. Such is the difference between a free country and a monarchy.

The Peking, China, Bao, a daily newspaper, has ceased publication after being operated for 1500 years. The paper was founded 1500 years ago and was originally printed on six pages of yellow silk, stitched together. During the long life of the Bao, it had gone through many experiences and many changing scenes had passed before it. It was an ardent advocate of liberty of conscience for which it suffered many bitter persecutions.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Harry Traford, middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Harry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness.

He followed Hal into the lunchroom with the embarrassed friendliness of a whipped hound. Relief didn't at once come to the atmosphere with Hal's entrance. Crack's narrow look at Hal's face was uncertain, though one hand indolently jostled the golf ball. And Harry—Ireland laughed at himself for having forgotten that this thing was to be used against her; and he barely kept himself from looking at her, showing her his sincere, forgotten anger. He smiled amiably at Mrs. Pulpipher, saying "What? Not started eating yet?" "No," she said, as if weariness had come to her in the short time he'd been gone. "I—we were wondering—" Her look went in timorous question to Miller, then back to Hal. "We were just—just waiting for you," she said.

"I wish you hadn't," said Hal gently. "Miller and I've just been arranging a sort of transfer: he's taking my place and I'm taking his." He added, "I've got the fares."

He saw Mrs. Pulpipher belittle and recover. The nun's head was up and her gentle eyes on Hal's in something like proud gratitude, as if he had foreseen and spared her humiliation. Pulpipher gave a series of quick, single coughs, looked pleased and hopeful again; and Crack leaned away from the counter, his close-set eyes banking on Hal's in their own speculative haziness. Hal turned his back on Harry, wondering why the devil he had to start trembling, now it was all over. He prayed he would stop it before Harry noticed it: he felt her watching him.

Kerrigan came to his side as the others moved back toward the tables. "He tried it, 'ey?" Hal's tone was judicial, but his brown eyes above the tough, florid cheeks were nimbly with some special laughter.

Hal looked at him, frankly and humorously quizzical. "Yes, the louse," he said. "What's the joke?"

"I was wondering how long you'd keep from looking at her," Kerrigan said.

Hal gave a tight, sheepish smile and let his look answer Kerrigan's.

"Just wanted to gather myself a little and make the first one right," he said.

Kerrigan nodded brief commendation. "You've got old Spot landing where he won't try this again?"

"Ah," said Hal, gathering up his change. "Got his money and his papers—and the keys. Got an idea about what we might do, too. Like to ask you later."

Without any definite demonstration, Kerrigan welcomed the "we." "Good," he said. "Hungry?"

"Yes," said Hal, remembering that he was "You?"

"Yes."

Every one, including Miller, was seated at one of the big, white-enamel tables when they started back.

"Gathered yourself?" Kerrigan said without looking at him.

"Guess so," said Hal, smiling a little. "Go, sit beside her, then," said Kerrigan.

"Right," said Hal.

He pulled out the empty chair beside Harry—in next the wall. "Do you mind if I sit here?" he said, as lightly formal as he could manage.

She looked around at him without hurry, the parting of her lips delayed again till after the first smilling of her blue, yellow-necked eyes. "No," she said in near-husky ease.

"Thank you," said Hal, still casual. "I'd like to thank you," she said quietly.

"For what?"

"What you've just done."

"Please don't," he said.

"Why not?" she said.

He turned to her, his look bland—to deny understanding of whatever significance her eyes might show him. But there was no special significance, only deliberate interest, as if she really wanted to know why not. And he had a new idea, exciting for its simplicity. He watched her an instant longer, then let ingenuous smiling dissolve all his formality.

"I'll tell you exactly why," he said, leaning a little forward. "Because I didn't think Miller had the wit to try what he did. Because I should have sized there like a wooden Indian and let him get away with it if you hadn't looked at me the way you did. There. But I ask you please not to look at me that way any more if you can help it, because it's rotten for my temper."

Her lips parted further over bright teeth, and there was nothing of offense left in her look. And after he had momentarily felt the compliment in her candid pleasure, he realized how beautifully that beloved light he had her eyes—free of coquetry, true with reticent interest—sulted the soft, clear composure of her face.

"That's all darned honest of you," she said.

"Aren't you used to it—honesty?" said Hal.

She dropped her eyes, closed her lips, but she was still smiling when she looked up again. There was nothing conscious or dramatic about her saying, "No—not especially. But that doesn't stop my liking it."

"I'm glad," he said. "That makes it easy to be honest again. Honesty is my curse—one of them."

Her smile, and the light behind it, slowly disappeared. She watched him a moment, not thinking of what he'd said. "I like . . ." She began, and then the waitress' arm drove between them, her finger stabbing an item on the bill of fare that Harry held. "Corn-beef is delicious; veal chops is out."

"Out where?" said Hal.

"Veal chops is finished," she said.

Harry moved the card so he could look at it, too, her eyes on it, but uninterested. Hal glanced up quickly—across and down the table. Crack wasn't watching them; but Hal knew he had been.

The hotel couldn't take them all, and Mrs. Pulpipher was certain it would be too dear any way; but down the road a little they found cabins; the "Zee" sign convinced Mrs. Pulpipher and the sign "Showers" convinced Hal. Pairing the party was easy: the Pulpiphers for one cabin, Harry and Sister Anastasia for another, then Hal and Kerrigan, with Miller left for Crack. Miller started for his bed at once, peeling his coat awkwardly as he went.

"Miller?" Hal called after him. The man turned, grinning sleepy cleverness which Hal hoped was merely his continued attempt at ingratiating.

"Bags," Hal said.

"Ain't gonna need 'em jus' for the one night," he said. "I don't need 'em."

"Get 'em out," said Hal; and Miller went about it, still grinning.

As he undressed, Hal inspected the night shelter with quiet awe. The three-burner kerosene stove on the stained shelf—black, oiled dust thick on its underparts and crusty tracings of many bollings-over on top; an introduction to "reclaim." Some part of every thread in the carpet showed, with so much unbeaten dust scuffed into it that you wondered how you could be sure the thing was not antique. On the "bureau"—a shelf covered with spotted oilcloth and dignified with a murderous fragment of mirror—lay a broken comb, some hairpins, and part of a pink elastic garter.

Hal sat himself naked on the prickly blanket of his bed, and in a moment a trickle of sweat darted down the middle of his chest. All the places all across the continent can't be like this, he thought. Poverty is pitiable, in a front-line dugout or in the slum room of some one who clings to old habits of tidiness; but when it begins to fringe off into equator, pitiable's not the word. Miller's probably asleep now—comfortable here, with his clothes on. But the others—the Traford girl, the good nun; none of them, not even complacent, dreaming Crack can be—

Kerrigan came back from the shower, his gray hair in damp curls on his forehead, his cheeks glowing.

"Hello, Colonel," said Hal, smiling. "How's the shower?"

"I wouldn't like to guess what they keep there in winter," Kerrigan said. "But if you hear the federal see, it's easy to tell out. The door into the front store swings open whenever you happen to think. Crack's in there now, but he said he'd send up a rock-er when he was finished." He dug a freshly laundered suit of blue-and-white striped pajamas out of his bag and tossed them to the bed. Hal looked at them gratefully, their freshness like a small pool in the baking wood-cabin room.

"What was your thought about what next?" Kerrigan asked.

"Oh," said Hal. "Something like this. I shouldn't think any of 'em would be disappointed if we dropped Miller and his car. I know a folk in a company in Detroit—know him well enough to ask him a favor. What would you think if I got him to put me on to a good second-hand car and trust us for the price till we get to the Coast and sell it? If Miller was going to make a profit on the fares, we ought to be able to break even anyway. And if he can find the way, we can. What'd you think?"

"The scheme of a genius, a titan," Kerrigan rumbled, taking cigarettes from his coat.

"We can try it," said Hal. "Only, look—if we could tell the others—not tell them that it's through a friend of mine we're getting the car; if we could say you and I were chipping in on a bargain and expected a profit on the Coast."

Kerrigan's eyes were friendly with approval. "You mean the are-you-any-relation-to-Frederick-Ireland situation?" he said.

Hal nodded.

Then a shadow fell on Kerrigan's look and he turned his head dubiously toward the door, saying, "Hi there, nippers. Finished?"

The door was ajar and Crack's head was stuck around it. "Yes," said Crack, smiling with tentative amiability, as if he hoped to be asked in.

"Thank you very much," said Hal.

The door closed without sound; Hal and Kerrigan looked at each other, both listening.

After a moment Hal said in a subdued tone. "What does he carry that silly golf-ball for?"

Kerrigan shook his head. "Why do you suppose that oaf in New York picked on him to be with the Traford girl?"

"Don't know," said Hal. "Except the only man I've seen this year stupider than Larsen is Miller."

There was a car at the gas pumps, and Hal in yellow slicker and red-leather slippers walked across the grass with the headlights full on him, feeling as if he were on the stage of the Hollywood Bowl. He found the Gent's place all that Kerrigan had said of it, but the water that fell on him from the shower was cool and pristine and good, like delicious rain. And as he reveled in it, he plausibly acknowledged the miracle that made so simple a thing as cool water a tonic for body, a wine for spirit, an essence of immaculate luxury.

The flow of his shower slackened as the sound of raining began in the next compartment, beyond the partition that didn't bother to reach the ceiling. He heard a short breath taken—of pleasure and eagerness; and then Barry's near-husky voice quietly said, "Oh, d—n it."

Hal gave a single laugh of pleasure. "Can I help?" he said.

"Where are you?" she said.

"Next door. What's happened?"

"I walked into this b—this s—s—s—so shower with my darned wrist-watch on."

"Ah, cry-making," said Hal. "Sorry." "You don't sound it, but thanks just the same. Gosh, isn't it good—the water?"

"Beautiful," he said sincerely. "Beautiful. As beautiful as—"

"An cool water running over you after a hot day in an old car with seven people and a dog."

"Where's the dog?"

"Here—having his shower too. He loves showers."

Hal chuckled. "I'd like to see—I'd like—Well, yes."

"Good," said Barry. "I'm glad." "Glad of what?"

"Glad you can't. I haven't—I'm not—"

"What's not at all?"

"Well, practically not," she said. "Just jodhpurs and an old bed-jacket."

"I suppose you'll be going in for comedy in Hollywood," Hal said.

"Who told you I was going to Hollywood?" she said, at once guarded.

"You did."

"I didn't."

"You didn't say it with your mouth, but everything else about you did," said Hal.

"Oh," she said coolly. "You're one of those people who knows lots and lots about other people just by looking at them."

"No," he said. "I'm mostly pretty unobservant."

For a moment she said nothing under the cool showering of water. Then curiously, "What's a snob?"

"What do you want—an epigram?"

"No, I want to know what you say a snob is."

"A snob," he said, thinking, "a snob is what envious people call some one who minds his own business and only cultivates people he likes."

"Who made that up?"

"I did."

Her tone wasn't flippant, merely interested: "To fit yourself?"

"No," Hal laughed. "Why?"

"Just wondered. Sometimes today you were what I thought a snob might be. You weren't so darn nice to the Pulpiphers, and they were ready to be nice to you. You didn't let down for Kerrigan till you saw he wasn't going to run after you. And—"

"I wasn't asking anybody to run after me," said Hal. "I don't think I'd like it. And—what else?"

"And you made me mad."

"I'm sorry," he said happily. "But I was—I wasn't trying not to. You were making me mad, even before you looked at me there, when we had dinner."

"Ah? How?"

"What it honest or pretty?"

"Whatever you like," she said carelessly.

"Guess which it is, then," said Hal. "I thought you were too sure of your looks—wondering all the time which of us you'd have to keep from getting fresh. That made me mad."

"Because you wanted me to be pleased and surprised when you told me about my looks? Because you didn't want it made hard to get fresh?"

(TO BE CONTINUED)

"I Wish You Hadn't," Said Hal Gently.

To Serve Chicken and Fowls So All Get Some of the Best Parts

There are certain foods, meats particularly, that have especially desirable parts or favorite portions, which make them difficult to serve without seeming partially, whether the other dishes are served to the family or to guests. It is true that when there are visitors, they would be given what are considered the nicest parts, but when there are several persons and few best pieces, there still is a difficulty to surmount as best the hostess can.

Chicken and poultry of all kinds present problems but there are ways of preparing the meat, of mixing the choice parts and poorer ones, to equalize portions so that all get approximately the same desirable servings. The meat from the second joint, that best of all dark meat portions, and by many considered best of the bird, when cut from the bone can be distributed in smaller pieces throughout the preparation. And this is true of the breast, another favorite part, best liked by those who like white meat, not so rich in flavor as the dark. It can be cut and distributed, while the meat from the neck, legs, and wings, those parts of lesser appeal, can also be distributed through the preparation, equally.

Chicken dishes that can be served without partiality of portions are chicken pie, chicken croquettes, plain or fancy, chicken en casserole, chicken loaf, chicken chateaux, chicken souffle, escalloped chicken, plain or fancy. There are other preparations such as chicken chateaux and chicken mayonnaise that can be prepared of pieces of birds, but which require a degree of culinary ability to prepare properly.

The other preparations are within the scope of the young cook as they are dishes easy to prepare.

When mention was made of fancy croquettes and escalloped chicken, the difference between them and the plain ones consists in combining mushrooms, or sweet peppers, or pimiento, sweet corn, or macaroni, or celery, or a combination of the above ingredients or others congenial to fowl. Turkey, goose, duck, etc., can be used instead of the chicken or fowl.

Chicken chateaux is delicious and a dainty dish to serve. Add one teaspoon each of chopped parsley, and chopped sweet pepper, one-half teaspoon of burnt onion juice (or plain), one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons minced boiled celery, to one cup or one and one-half cups of minced cooked chicken. Butter a plain mold and line it one inch thick with boiled rice. Fill center with above mixture and cover with rice. Cover mold and steam for three-fourths hour. Unmold and pour tomato sauce (hot) around the mold but not over it. Put a sprig of parsley on top of mold, and serve.

WHY BAY TURNS YELLOW

La Jolla Bay, near San Diego, Calif., had this summer a visitation of "yellow water," unique in that region both because of the prominence of yellow and the extremely small size of the causative organism, says the Collecting Net, published in the interests of marine biological laboratories. No satisfactory identification of this organism has been obtained. Individuals had a length of only about six-thousandths of a millimeter. They had four flagella. The case was also remarkable on account of the entire absence of other plankton organisms during the period of its noted abundance, from about July 27 to August 7.

Are Our Eyes Getting Weaker?

Defects of Vision Increase With Years—Poor Light a Cause.

When born, nearly all babies have normal eyes. With the same kind of care that carries them through infancy and childhood, happy and healthy—their eyes should remain normal.

But it has been found that by the time children finish grade school, 20 per cent of them have defective vision. When they have finished college, 40 per cent have eye difficulties. Forty years of age shows 60 per cent with defective vision, and past sixty, 85 per cent are so affected.

Why should the eyes of so many show such an alarming increase in visual defects? Because these children, these growing girls and boys—young and older men and women, used their eyes with too little light!

In the daytime outdoors there is, of course, plenty of light—the natural daylight nature developed our eyes to see by. The light from an unclouded sky gives us 10,000 foot candles. In the shade of a tree, the light will be upwards of 1,000 foot candles. Close by a window there may be 200 foot candles of light shining on your book page or needle-work.

What is a foot candle? It is the scientist's "yardstick" of light measurement. The amount of light one candle would shine on a surface one foot away.

But at night—that is another story! It is very common for people to read or sew with only four foot candles of light, where they should have an illumination of at least 10 foot candles for the coarsest kind of eye-work; 20 foot candles for reading fine print and for sewing; 30 foot candles for continued use of the eyes.

Using the eyes with less light than these minimum amounts may result in eye-strain and possible permanent injury to vision.

Be sure you have enough light! If you use electricity—ask your light company to test your lamps and fixtures to see if they give enough light for safe seeing.

If you do not have electricity, get one of the new 800 candle power pressure lamps that burn kerosene or gasoline.

When your work is held three feet away from the lamp, the latter should be of at least 275 candle power intensity to assure the 20 to 30 foot candles of light you need to protect your sight. It is important that you use a high candlepower lamp to be sure you have enough light to protect your sight.

How do you feel this morning?

—there is usually a definite reason for this

New let's reason sensibly.

Don't try to get well in a day... this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again.

Off to School in Wash Silk Frocks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

"WHAT is the matter dear, don't you like your new dress?"—questioned an anxious and puzzled mother as she noted a lack of enthusiasm on the part of little daughter, who stood before her trying on a frock of a none too attractive utilitarian weave. While the sensitive little fingers smoothed the material, came the answer reluctantly and hesitatingly—"Ye-es, mother dear, only I like the nice silky kind better." This is a true story and it has a moral—a word to the wise is sufficient.

And why not wear silk to school? Of course it must be the right kind of silk that bespeaks the fitness of things. The sort we have in mind is the pure silk fabrics that are absolutely practical in that they wash and iron endlessly, clean constantly and do not stretch or sag.

A selection of charming colors is offered in the washable silk crepes. Little folks will love the bright rust shades, the rich hunter greens and the raspberry tone. Robin Hood red, smart browns and the new Tahiti green, also blues both navy and light, and for party wear there is a dainty tea-rose that is most attractive. The new spun silks (they launder beautifully) in plaids and checks are ideal for cunning play dresses that button up the back and are trimmed with Peter Pan collars. By the way Scotch Highland plaids made up with kilpleated skirts are outstanding this season.

When it comes to Sunday bests and party frocks, they will prove an incentive to good behavior to any little girl if made up of lovely taffetas silk chiffons (some with drawn threads forming a checked pattern) especially if a perky new hat and silk bag complete the ensemble.

Pleats, shirring and smocking in mother's and grown-up sister's mode are likewise very much in evidence in the styling of children's apparel. Many of the juvenile frocks have stitched pleats released halfway down the skirt. The little girl to the left in the picture is off to school in a dress of pure silk crepe that is going to prove an economy and energy-saving measure for mother, in that every time it comes from a tubbing it will be looking like new. It has the released pleats mentioned above. In this instance the pleats begin at the shoulder and are released halfway down the skirt. A white collar adds a demure note.

Little Missy with her smart new school bag is poised and proud in a prettily fashioned frock of deep rose colored silk crepe. The skirt is box-pleated. The pleating vogue, so pronounced this season, is further emphasized in the tiny accordion-pleated frills that edge the round collar effect and the fastening down the front. Eyelet-embroidered white crepe forms a double-collar line.

A society bud in the making stands to the right in the picture. She is "all dressed up" for a Sunday afternoon stroll in a silk crepe gown in the fashionable Tahiti green. The piping and sprightly bows are in wood brown. The full sleeves are shirred from the neckline over the shoulders, a very significant gesture in dressmaker details.

Yes, indeed, there is undoubtedly that something of magic in a neat, pretty silk frock, the sort that launders (mothers appreciate the "laundry" assurance) that can put glamor even into the arduous task of learning reading, writing, arithmetic, geography—practicing piano, too!

FLAID WOOL COAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

When the tang of frost is in the air the more warm, radiant color in our apparel the better. Which is why the new flaid wool coats which are the smartest sort for immediate wear, tune so delightfully into the autumn landscape. Why not heed the suggestion and go stepping into the formless ranks of fashion cloaked in stunning flaid wool which is luxuriantly colored with awnky sports fur?

NEW FALL STYLES DEMAND FREEDOM

"Have you noticed how much shorter, fuller and freer are the new fall skirts for sports and tailored clothes?" asked a stylist. "Quite a change from the straight and narrow silhouette we've had for some time."

"You'll see that same spirit of freedom and swing-along in the sturdy looking shoes to wear with these new clothes—that is, for tailored and sports wear. Low heels, simple lines, tongues, broad straps, high throats—all are good because they give correct accent to this new fashion of freedom."

"But what a contrast when it comes to afternoon and evening shoes! Soft, rich fabrics, falling in graceful folds call for finely feminine shoes. Rather simple in design because the 'law of balance' tells us that when skirts are more complicated, shoes should be less complicated."

Autumn Evening Clothes Rich in Fabric and Color

Your evening clothes this fall and winter will be of rich fabric, advises Harper's Bazaar, velvets, taffeta velvets, metals, lames and semi-transparent silk crepes.

The silhouette must be a flowing line from neck to hem. Anything sticking out is wrong. Nothing fits tight, but as the body is always evident a carefully fitted corset is more important than ever. There are draped effects rather than actual drapery. Many dresses are draped up in front to above the ankle. Some achieve the effect of barem trousers. There are flowing lines created by scarfs, back panels or argal sleeves. As to color, there is every shade of blue from azure to deep sapphire, then reds, then green. Fallettes are used for everything in every color.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Kathleen L. Watson

THE MOUNT PISGAH HOAX

THERE once were three men and a burro, who set out to seek their fortunes. It was in '84 or '85; they were out in the mountains; and it had been snowing.

Suddenly they came across the camp of some prospectors, and it seemed a good idea to stop and get warm and talk a little about the gold that everyone felt sure must underly all the Rockies.

The prospectors said that they were Leadville men. They had some very nice looking nuggets of gold, and these, they said, came from Mount Pisgah, where they had just been.

Mount Pisgah! The three men knew its general location, although they had never been there, and that very day they determined to hurry on and get to these new diggings before anyone else should hear of them. So they found the direction of the mountain, took a compass to guide them, and set out.

Partly because they were in a hurry and partly because they did not know any easier way to reach Mount Pisgah, they started straight across the country, and the snow fell and turned to slush and fell again, and hills reared in their way, and mountain streams tried to stop them, but they waded and climbed and slid on. A golden phantom danced before them and pointed to Mount Pisgah, and they floundered after her.

At last they reached the place, but to their disgust they found other men ahead of them. Still, there was room for everyone, so they began to make camp and ask questions. The first one, of course, was "where are the diggings?" They proved to be a small prospect hole some ten or fifteen feet deep, in which no gold could be seen. But perhaps, reasoned the three newcomers, if the Leadville men had taken their nuggets from this place there must be more somewhere near. So they began to dig at random.

One man finally found a vein of quartz, and this, he was sure, would bring him a fortune. He dug faithfully, and his little dump grew and began to look as a mine dump should. The others, inspired by the sight of this pile of ore, began offering to buy it, and although someone finally agreed to give $250 for the dump, its owner refused to sell.

At last he found a piece of quartz that he liked, and he and his friends gave it a rough assay, feverishly watching for the gold that they had longed for. To their disappointment, not even a trace of the yellow metal showed, and they realized that they had been fooled.

By this time the camp at Mount Pisgah numbered some 2,000 men. They had all been lured by the idea of finding gold, and now they all were sneaking about to discover who had been guilty of hoarding them. It was learned that the two men who dug the original "mine" had silted it, and were even then on their way out of the camp with what riches they had managed to acquire by the sale of claims.

The guilty pair were caught and brought to trial by the angry miners. Only one sentence, it was felt, would be just—that of death by hanging. But even as some of the group went hunting a rope the culprits managed to escape, and this time they got away safely. They had hoped, it was learned, to cause a gold rush and interest capital before they were found out.

So far, this sounds like one of the many minor farces of gold-rush days. But wait—Mount Pisgah now stands sentinel over a booming, rushing mining town where many billions of dollars have been made. In their disgust at being hoaxed, the miners neglected to look about them, and in 1891, only six or seven years later, vast fortunes were found almost at the very foot of the mountain.

For the little creek that flowed past Mount Pisgah, the little creek that no one crossed to see what was on the other side, was—

FOUND—ONE GOLD MINE

A MINE was discovered near Ajo, Arizona, in 1910, which had been worked long ago, and was evidently one of the lost mines in search of which so many prospectors spend their entire lives. There was a very large ledge of gold, showing free gold for 3,000 feet. The timbers in the extensive workings had mostly decayed from age. Old ruined houses stood nearby, and added to the desolation of the scene.

There were two shafts, one some fifty feet deep which gave out a cross-cut which had struck a vein of gold ore sixteen feet wide.

The other shaft, supposed to be about forty feet in depth, was inhabited by a swarm of bees and so could not be explored. High grade ore lay on the dump.

At some time or other this mine had been worked at a profit. What caused its abandonment can only be guessed, or whether any of the men who exultingly took out the golden ore lived to leave it—and why they never returned.

THE DARING YOUNG MEN

One of the oddest accidents on record occurred recently in Japan. A motor bus swerved, went over a steep cliff and crashed a hundred feet below. Suddenly cries for help came from a tree, part way down the mountain, which the bus had passed while falling. From its branches hung the seven passengers. They were trapeze artists in a travelling circus.—Collier's Weekly.

LOVE FINDS A WAY

Virgil F. Winslow was testifying in a Los Angeles court in an attempt to gain a divorce from Sarah G. Winslow, his wife for 35 years. "She was domineering—" his voice halted and tears came to his eyes. "I love my wife! I can't go through with this!" he shouted. Walking away from the witness stand, he went to his wife and embraced her. The case was dismissed.

"I Simply Swear by Calumet!"

"There's not a better baking powder made!"

says Mrs. Owen H. Fleming, of 1235 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.

MRS. FLEMING and Calumet are staunch friends. "I never have seen any sense in taking chances with your baking," she says "when you can use Calumet and be sure of success."

"I've converted lots of my friends to using Calumet, too. And they all say the same thing I do—it's the one baking powder that's absolutely dependable!"

A SIMPLE TWIST... and the Easy-Off top lifts off. No stirring, no brain buster!

WHY DOES CALUMET give such astonishing "baking luck"? Why is Calumet different from other baking powders? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl. A slower one for the oven... and Calumet's famous Double-Acting is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening—every time.

Calumet is so economical!

Moderately priced to begin with... a full 16-oz. in weight... a can of Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder, goes so much farther!

Beware of Forest Fires

The hunting season is near at hand and it is in keeping with our usual custom to issue a warning for hunters to do everything in their power to avoid forest fires.

There are those who are mindful about being careful, while there are others who pay little or no attention to that important duty. High winds are beginning to prevail and from now on through the hunting season the least amount of uncovered embers will result in a fire that it might take fire-fighters a week to put out.

Before retiring for the night, see that your campfire is out and substantially covered. In the morning, when there is the usual haste to get to hunting, the fire is liable to receive no attention, but it will only take a few minutes to cover up all traces of the breakfast fire and insure against disaster.

Now is the time to be careful. If every hunter will heed this warning, no evil results will follow. Again, a cigarette tossed away in a careless manner might do untold damage when it is cast into a bunch of dry weeds. We are trying to do our part in issuing this warning and if hunters will do theirs, the hunting season will pass without forest fires. Also be careful and look twice before you shoot at an object, lest you kill a man's cow or horse. Of course, you are the only human being in the forest at that time, so needn't fear of making a fellowman your target.

Japanese crowds march the streets crying: "Down with Italy!" and "Rescue Ethiopia!" It is a happy idea. How about letting Japan do the rescuing?—Toronto Mail and Empire.

If Uncle Sam, by some serious diplomatic lapse should be dragged into war with Italy we suppose the restaurants would have to rename spaghetti Yankee noodles.

We don't believe there would be so much kicking if the AAA would let hogs, wheat and potatoes alone and concentrate on reducing the production of spinach.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches, neuralgia, or rheumatism, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin. We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice. Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct. Remember this! Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly. You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

"Spy" Photographs Fail to Excite Us

Visitors May Take Pictures of Spans and Tunnels.

Washington.—What the United States does not consider military secrets was illustrated a few days since with the release of five Japanese tourists arrested by police in New Jersey when seen making photographs in the Holland tunnel. They were released promptly on their explanation that they were there making records of a recreational tour. In most countries strangers taking photographs are under suspicion as possible spies. This applies not merely to fortifications, but to structures or localities which have no direct military significance. Tunnels, bridges, highways and everything connected with transportation are deemed of more or less strategic importance in the event of war, as they are necessary to rapid mobilization. An invading army, for instance, would cut off the water supply of a city; the making of photographs of an aqueduct therefore might be regarded by some nations as an act of espionage.

The Government View.

The attitude of the United States War department seems remarkably lenient to foreign visitors, accustomed to the strict regulations at home. Photographing of fortifications is permitted here under certain conditions. Prints may be bought openly and many are reproduced in newspapers and magazines or on souvenir post cards. Not infrequently even aerial views of fortifications are published. What shall be seen and pictured

In Her Fall Dress

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is here shown in her first autumn afternoon dress, selected from Milgrin. The dress is fashioned of Jacquard satin crepe in a beautiful tone of chamberlain red. A soft cascade of drapery falls down the side of the skirt, which is ankle length. The drapery and plaiting over the shoulders are caught with a rhinestone and ruby tone clip.

at any American military post or fort depends largely upon the decision of the commandant, who is guided by the War department.

Civilian tourists of all nationalities appear at military posts of the United States. They are required if admitted, however, to check cameras. Photographs can be taken by accredited representatives of the press at the option of the officer in charge. They are made under his supervision so that they reveal no technical secrets.

Invite Photographers.

The army may even invite press photographers to be present at the testing of huge sea defense guns at Sandy Hook, but it prefers to issue photographs made for publication by its own signal corps.

News photographers who attended the recent army maneuvers were pledged not to make any plates of a new type of tank in use there. It was designated a "restricted project."

A restricted project is usually in the experimental or research stage. It may be studied for months before it is finally adopted. Severe penalties would be imposed on any officer releasing the facts concerning it or permitting pictures to be made of it.

Strange Fishes Sold; Museum in Mourning

Honolulu.—Enterprising Chinese fish merchants broke the scientific hearts of Bishop museum researchers when they peddled steaks from two strange fish of a species never seen before in Hawaii.

The anonymous specimens, weighing 41 and 23 pounds, respectively, were caught off the Kona coast, island of Hawaii. The fish had stubby tails and blunt snouts which made them strangely resemble hogs. Museum experts determined from photographs lucidly taken of the specimens that they slightly resembled fish of the Labridae family known as the Wrasse.

DO YOUR BEST

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

In his little book, "Kathrina," John Holland writes: Of all dull, dread thoughts man ever bore, none can wear the soul with discontent. Like consciousness of power unused.

Instinctively we want to attain our goal in life. We shun failure. No sacrifice is too great and no effort too difficult when we ardently seek possession of a coveted prize. When we honestly want to realize an ideal, all our powers are taxed to the very utmost.

In our strivings sometimes we fall where we least expect to do so. Some unsurmountable obstacle, not of our own making, and for which we are not responsible, obstructs our pathway. We falter and, as Theodore Roosevelt used to say, "get our second wind"; then go on. But try as we will, we just do not attain the goal. Perhaps it was not intended that we should reach it. It may be a question whether our ideals were ever intended to be realized. Browning wrote, "A man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for." Perhaps we were in error in setting up

Won Title and $1,000

Miss Charlotte Acres of Vancouver, B. C., won the world's professional five-mile swim championship for women, in Lake Ontario's cold and choppy waters in a field of 25; and with the title, and purse of $1,000, she also won the distinction of being the first Canadian girl to win the event in its eight years' history.

an abstract ideal in place of a definite and burning purpose as the motivating incentive of our lives. If the expression of a great and commanding purpose be our supreme ideal, what higher purpose could there be than "to do our best" under all circumstances and conditions regardless of consequences.

That man who does his best need never fear failure, remorse or defeat. He will never know, "The discontent of power unused." A man today holds a responsible position in the government because of the thoroughness with which he did his work. He rose to this position not through influence or "pull" but because he always did his best. Early in life he was taught "to do his best" even though the task seemed menial and unimportant. Doing our best means that under all circumstances, as far as we are able, we should live in the environment of the best. Hear the best music and see the best art. Choose the best companions and read the best literature. Think the best thoughts. Give to the world your best, live in the environment of the best, and life to you will never lose its meaning but will bring to you deserved contentment, joy and true success.

A Sponging House. A sponging house, mentioned in English stories, was a sort of tavern kept by a bailiff, where debtors could be lodged temporarily while arrangements for paying their debts were being made.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

BUNDLE teas are the latest idea for raising money with the smallest possible outlay. Bazaars and fairs often cost so much to get up, that the net proceeds are by no means commensurate with the amount of work involved, and the actual money expended in preparations. With a bundle tea the outlay is trifling. Nothing is sold at it except perhaps the afternoon tea and this is often free. The only thing required is that each person attending the tea brings a bundle and leaves it for a rummage sale, or a white elephant sale or a thrift sale, by whatever name the sale is called.

The bundles are not opened but go as they are, direct to some place where, in a short time, the articles contained in—the bundles will be displayed, priced and sold. Interest in the sale is created by the bundle tea, and many of the persons who attend it will also attend the sale.

What is in the bundles is entirely a matter for the person who contributes it to decide. It may be that she has oddments in the house that she cares very little for, yet which she realizes are actually worth-while things. She may be willing to let them represent her contribution to the good cause, for which the tea is given. The bundles may contain shoes, frocks, hats, scarfs, trinkets, pictures, ornaments, etc. Whatever one has to give, the tea offers the chance to dispose of, and whatever the articles sell for are exactly the same as a contribution of cash to the cause. If she wishes the woman can have new things in her bundle.

Bundle Teas. A bundle tea may be given by some person who is greatly interested in the charity for which the money is to be raised, and the cost of the tea be defrayed by her as well as the house or the lawn being open for the occasion. In summer bundle teas are frequently on the grounds of some estate. The person who throws open the house or grounds for the tea, generally supplies the tea and refreshments as her contribution to the worthy cause. Or sometimes there are several who supply the food while one opens her home and supplies the service. When a group of women decide to hold a bundle tea, it can be arranged to have no one be at actual expense. These women may finance it by buying the foods and the tea for which they get repaid, for costs only, from the proceeds of the contents of the bundles, the remainder going to the charity.

Bundle teas have been given as society events because women who have beautiful estates have thrown them open for the events. The fashion is set, and has been proven excellent, with good financial returns for the modest outlays.

White in Decoration. White is favored in decoration, sometimes to the extent of this being a color scheme. White is said to be the absence of all color, yet for convenience of expression, it is termed a color. Consequently I shall consider it to have such a significance, and also that shades of white such as cream, oyster white, etc., come under the one general term of white. This color has long been the one above all others for woodwork in rooms, a tint being added to accord with that of the wall paper. White is seldom lacking, for, from a decorative scheme, and occasionally becomes the dominant one, so that white rooms are spoken of, as are red rooms, blue rooms, etc. This designating of rooms by their major color feature was once the vogue, and today there is the tendency to return to the style.

White, in comparatively recent years, has been featured more in bathrooms and kitchens than in any other rooms of a house. But it became monotonous as carried out to the extreme, and, since this period, both these rooms have become glowing exponents of vivid hues. Now they are garish rather than of pristine purity, making a return to the simplicity of former years seem a welcome change. However, white rooms as developed today permit of gay notes of color, and this compromise adds beauty to decoration. In the modern white rooms, this addition interrupts monotony, and brings the type of decoration from the more mundane rooms to main rooms, especially to dining rooms.

To Remove Mildew

If mildew is present on a surface to be repainted, be careful to remove all trace of it before proceeding with the work. This can be done by washing with a strong soap solution to which a little household ammonia is added. Flush the surface with clean water and allow several days to dry. The use of a specially prepared paint to resist mildew is recommended.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—The Republican party leadership has made its first moves for the 1936 campaign. G. O. P. Ready for Fight

The executive committee of the Republican national committee has held a meeting here, a session that started and ended with enthusiasm bubbling over.

Whether all of this joy is justified, no one can tell, but certainly the Republican wheelhorses for the first time in almost five years have shown signs of genuine fight.

While, as I said, the executive committee meeting simply bubbled over with enthusiasm, unbiased observers could not help reaching the conclusion after they watched the situation that the committee did very little of a constructive nature.

Rank and file Republicans may take heart in the circumstances that brought their party leadership to headquarters four months earlier than they ordinarily meet.

It may have been by coincidence or it may have been by design but whatever the reason, the action of Robert H. Lucas, former executive head of the Republican national committee, in filing a libel suit against one of the party members is not going to help either Mr. Lucas or Charles D. Hillis, national committeeman from New York.

It was telling a Washington visitor the other day the system employed in the national Capital for the identification of streets, explaining that the north and south streets bore numbers and the east and west streets were named after letters in the alphabet.

From records of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of Washington and from the office of the registrar of deeds, I found definitely that the letter never had been used alone although out beyond "the first alphabet" where names are used for streets and the names begin with the alphabet in regular order, there are streets whose names begin with "J."

Further inquiry developed what I believe to be the basic reason, namely, similarity of the letter "I" and "J" when written.

has by joining him as a defendant in a suit against Mr. Kent. Mr. Lucas, it will be remembered, is the individual who got mixed up in a rather sour mess in the effort to beat Senator George W. Norris in Nebraska. Senator Norris has bolted the Republican party and supported Democratic nominees through the last eight years, meanwhile continuing to claim Republican affiliations when he sought election to the senate.

Thus, when a few weeks ago, Mr. Lucas personally sent a questionnaire to the hundreds of Republican state and county chairmen, seeking their views as to a Presidential nominee for the party, those who remembered his services with the Republican national committee immediately wondered what his object was.

He told me at the time of his poll that he wanted to discover exactly what the sentiment was of those party chairmen far removed from the hot bed of party control.

Now, however, he is in the limelight in a new fashion. If he has been damaged, as he claims, by the conspiring of Mr. Hillis and others, then he ought to collect and those who conspired ought to be exposed.

Let us turn from a discussion of political rows and personal enmities to learn something about one of the most calm and complacent women who has ever served in a public capacity. I refer to Miss Mary M. O'Reilly.

For 32 years, Miss O'Reilly has graced an office in the treasury. Starting as a minor clerk she continued as a servant of the public in the office of the director of the mint.

A few days ago, there came from the White House an executive order which said that the treasury might continue to keep Miss O'Reilly on the payroll for a year after November 1—she will be seventy years old on that date and under the law would be forced to retire.

I was telling a Washington visitor the other day the system employed in the national Capital for the identification of streets, explaining that the north and south streets bore numbers and the east and west streets were named after letters in the alphabet.

From records of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of Washington and from the office of the registrar of deeds, I found definitely that the letter never had been used alone although out beyond "the first alphabet" where names are used for streets and the names begin with the alphabet in regular order, there are streets whose names begin with "J."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. F. B. FITZPATRICK, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 20

THE MESSAGE OF JEREMIAH

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 7:1-26. GOLDEN TEXT—Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people. Jeremiah 1:23. PRIMARY TOPIC—What Jeremiah Said. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jeremiah's Striking Message. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Doing What God Commands. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Will of God for Our Times.

The prophet stood in the gate of the temple in order that the multitudes might hear him. The occasion was the coming together of the people from all over the country to attend a feast. From this place of prominence Jeremiah called the people to obedience.

1. What God Requires (vv. 1-7). 1. Amend your ways (v. 3). This means that their course of living should be reformed by exchanging bad deeds for good ones.

2. Personal experience (v. 4). The people regarded the temple as a charm against evil, irrespective of the condition of their hearts. Without a heart experience, the most sacred institution and ordinances are valueless.

3. Social justice (v. 5). The proof of their having reformed was the execution of justice between man and his neighbor. The evidence of one's being in touch with God is his fair dealing with his fellow men.

4. Not to oppress the helpless (v. 6). The stranger would likely be ignorant of the laws of the land. The widows and orphans would usually be imposed upon. Protection and defense of the weak is a sure sign of godliness.

5. Not walk after other gods (v. 8). The worship of idols and conformity to heathen customs go hand in hand. True morality is determined by the individual's attitude toward God.

6. Some Solenn Warnings (vv. 8-15). 1. The teachings of false prophets (vv. 8-11). These false prophets taught the people that attention to ceremony and observance of religious form exempted them from strict attention to morals.

2. By the destruction of Shiloh (vv. 12-15). God caused his tabernacle to be set up in Shiloh, but in Eli's time he gave it into the hands of the Philistines because of the idolatry of the people (1st. 18:30-35). The prophet declared that God would do even so with the temple, the city and the whole country.

3. Pray not for them (v. 10). There is such a thing as sinning unto death, in which case prayer is useless (v. 10; cf. 1 John 5:16). 2. Entire families devoted their energies to that which provoked God's anger (vv. 17-19). This was done by young and old, men and women. They did it with the definite purpose to provoke God's anger.

4. Judgment sure to Fall (v. 20). Because the people poured out their offerings to idols, the furious anger and wrath of God would be poured out upon men, beasts, trees and the fruit of the ground. How this has been fulfilled the history of the Jews makes clear.

5. Obedience to God Better than Sacrifice (vv. 21-23). The prophet appealed to history to show that God requires heart service rather than the observance of religious forms. Blessings came to Israel through obedience, while cursings followed disobedience. On condition of obedience to his requirements God promised to own them as his people and to bless them.

The essence of all fine breeding is in the gift of conciliation. A man who possesses every other virtue to respect, except that of courtesy, is in danger of forfeiting them all. A rude manner renders its owner always liable to affront. He is never without dignity who avoids wounding the dignity of others.—Lytton.

Duty He who in questions of right, virtue or duty sets himself above all ridicule is truly great.—Lavater.

WHY RAY TURNS YELLOW

La Jolla Bay, near San Diego, Calif., had this summer a visitation of "yellow water," unique in that region both because of the prominence of yellow and the extremely small size of the causative organism; says the Collecting Net, published in the interests of marine biological laboratories. No satisfactory identification of this organism has been obtained. Individuals had a length of only about six-thousandths of a millimeter. They had four flagella. The case was also remarkable on account of the entire absence of other plankton organisms during the period of its noted abundance, from about July 27 to August 7.

Every day, unthinkingly, mothers take the advice of unqualified persons—instead of their doctor's—on remedies for their child.

Doctors Say PHILLIPS' For Your Child

When it comes to the frequently-used "milk of magnesia," doctors, for over 50 years, have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia—the safe remedy for your child."

Remember this—And Always Say "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." When you buy your child deserves it; for your own peace of mind, see that you get it—Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

You cannot afford to be without Firestone Ground Grip Tires for Fall and Winter use on your car, truck and tractor. You will not need chains! They will give you the greatest satisfaction and save you money!

FALL RAINS and winter snows present a transportation problem to farmers. Firestone solved this problem when they developed the complete line of Ground Grip Tires for cars, trucks, tractors and all farm implements. There are three patented features that give Firestone Tires super-traction in mud, snow, sand, gravel or soft ground of any kind.

- 1. Gum-Dipped Cord Body The High Stretch Cord Body of Firestone Tires is Gum-Dipped (soaked in liquid rubber) giving extra strength and longer flexing life to withstand the terrific stresses and strains of the extra pulling power with only twelve pounds of air pressure. Firestone Tires are the only tires built that are Gum-Dipped.
- 2. Ground Grip Tread Built with 54% additional tough rubber and scientifically designed with heavy cross bars and deep grooves that are self-cleaning (chains are not necessary), giving super-traction and long wear. The bars of rubber are so placed that they will not bump when used on paved roads.
- 3. Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords This exclusive construction feature locks the thick, heavy tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body, making them one inseparable unit. This makes practical the use of a wider, flatter, thicker, deeper non-skid Firestone tread with higher shoulders and more and tougher rubber.
