

Out-of-the-Ordinary

What had been a gruesome Halloween-mystery for the past sixty years, was solved recently when an old mansion by the seashore in Massachusetts was torn down. The old building had many rooms and long, narrow hallways. The attic was used only for depositing things of a useless nature such as cast-off furniture, etc., which had accumulated for years without number. Halloween was to be observed with great pomp at the old mansion. Harold Weatherstone and Julia Martin, only child of the owners of the estate, were married at high-noon. After the wedding dinner, attending guests amused themselves with dancing and various forms of entertainment. In the old-fashioned game of "drop-the-handkerchief," the handkerchief fell to the new bride. As she played around the circle, she passively dropped it behind the groom, who seeing it, picked it up and gave chase, much to the merriment of the guests. Knowing the old home so well, she darted from one room to another, followed by the new husband, who thought he would shortly overtake her, but he failed. Up and up she ran until she reached the old attic. In a secluded corner she found an ancient trunk, into which she jumped and closed the lid—it had a spring lock. Every rogg in the old mansion was searched and last of all, the attic, but by that time, she had died from suffocation. Searchers passed the trunk time and again, but seeing it locked and hearing no sound, the search was abandoned. Cruel gossip tried to connect another with the mysterious disappearance of the new Mrs. Weatherstone and the mystery deepened with the fading years, until in tearing down the old mansion and breaking open the old trunk revealed the ghastly skeleton of the young bride and unraveled the Halloween mystery. The groom never married and devoted most of his life in an endeavor to solve the mystery.

Firmly entrenched in her home at New Brunswick, N. J., Mrs. Mary Dougherty continued to prevent construction of $233,000 postoffice while officials looked at each other to find a way out of the blockade. Her home had been condemned to give way to the building of the postoffice, but the government has not paid her and until the money is in her hands, the game little Irish mother is defending her home with her dead husband's shotgun. She told officials she did not wish to be unreasonable, but unless she was paid, she would fill the first man full of lead who disturbed that home. If you were a government officer, what would you do?

On Oct. 30, a child was born to a couple in Chicago. The wife is 27 and her husband is 94. The announcement appeared in the American Medical Journal which omitted the names of the parents, so as to prevent a gossiping public from finding out how many good neighbors the 94-year old bird had.—Kind of the Journal, wasn't it?

Perkins—DuBois

Mrs. R. L. Willingham of her ranch near Corona was a Carrizozo visitor Saturday. She reports that Miss Geraldine DuBois, proprietress of the Corona Drug Store and Mr. Archie Perkins, instructor in the Hi School at that place, were married last week. The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DuBois of Corona, and is Vice-Chairman of the Lincoln County Republican organization. The new Mrs. Perkins is also a registered pharmacist; and a very capable young business lady. The groom is a well-liked and efficient teacher in the hi school at that place. The best of wishes of this and the community in which the happy couple live are extended.

Both are graduates of the New Mexico State University, where the bride is a member of Chi Omega, social fraternity and Mortar Board, Jr. Honorary fraternity. The groom is prominent in football, being a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Kappa. At present he is teaching commercial work and coaching in the Corona schools.

At Armistice

(Prayer of the Old Mother) Lord, Thou hast given me sons I sent them away to fight for the fatherland They died, but died like men The country was saved by their hands For this I thank Thee.

Lord, Thou gavest me no daughters To wait when life has been thinned To the barest thread, and to listen For voices that cry in the wind For this I thank Thee.

Will Rogers

(The Friend of Mankind)

Editors, more especially those of the press gang who knew Will Rogers, have been requested to give some editorial expression to his memory. After his death, the Outlook commented editorially in our issue of Aug. 30, on the life of the great humorist and we know of nothing more appropriate to his memory than to re-print the article, which follows:

Who would have thought a few weeks ago, that Will Rogers, who was born and reared in ordinary conditions and arose to a position wherein he had entertained more people in the different nations of the earth than any other personage on the globe, would now be dead, gone, lamented and not forgotten.

He was, without question, the only man who could fit into all classes of society, feel at home and cause his friends to feel at ease. He had a natural faculty of changing from the serious to the humorous side of things and in such a manner as to leave his audiences with the desire to hear him again.

The writer knew Will Rogers; knew of his many becoming characteristics. The last interview we had with him was several years ago in Roswell at a big road meeting and when we witnessed some of his marvelous polo playing on the grounds at the Military Institute.

To become better acquainted with Will Rogers; meant to associate yourself with a man whose thought and life blended with the masses of the people regardless of station, situation or conditions of mortal existence. He was a man who rejoiced with those who were happy; wept with the sorrowing; consoled the afflicted; ministered to the needy and comforted those far less fortunate than himself who were without hope in the world, sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death. His private acts of charity and benevolence were little known to the outside world as he preferred rather to "keep them locked up in his heart," than to parade them for the praise of men. His great soul was too big to resort to trifling things for self-gratification.

We can ill afford to lose such men as Will Rogers and yet, had he not cast enough sunshine in the paths of those whom he benefited by his ministrations in this world to entitle him to a rest from his labors? The end must come to everyone from the least to the highest mortal greatness and we should be satisfied with the thought that he passed to the great beyond without humankind suffering, thus ending a life of usefulness, leaving behind him no enemies, and a combined world-wide friendship.

School Notes

The State Teachers' Convention which was held at Albuquerque Sept. 30 to Nov. 2, was a most inspirational meeting. The speakers were outstanding educators of the day—Miss Hefernan, State Director of Rural Education, California, spoke at length on the trends of better schools for all rural pupils. The thought she left with the audience was this: Teachers know the whole child while trying to direct his school activities. To direct said activities, every effort must be made on the part of the teacher to contact the home in such a way that there will be a fine cooperative spirit existing between the school and the home. Mr. Cameron Beck, member of the Stock Exchange, New York, brought the teachers a vital message as to the importance of stressing every phase of good citizenship. The business world is just a bit disappointed at the lack of honesty, integrity, promptness and courtesy that is being manifested by the graduates from our various institutes of learning.

The teachers of the rural schools of Lincoln County sent splendid exhibits. The following is a brief summary of what each school furnished for the state exhibit: Lincoln, art and sand table zoo; San Patricio, collection of rock specimens, booklets on map study and school songs; Ruidoso, Indian unit and illustrated map of New Mexico; Picacho, a mural depicting the community activities of their village; Escobedo, a movie showing the history of wool; White Oaks, art and jointed animals; Bogle, splendid toys made by pupils; Ramon, art and an excellent toy display; Angus, nature study book—showing the plant and animal life of Angus; Jicarilla, complete mining project; Alto, complete sand mill project; Mon Jeu, art and toys; Oscura, complete set of toy furniture and song booklets; Ancho, two complete Indian units, color charts and schoolhouse unit; Baca Canyon, toys and art; Escobedo, toys and art; Fort Stanton, art; Lon, manual training exhibit; Arabela, a very excellent farm exhibit, complete in every way; Asperos, splendid booklets on units of local interest; Glencoe, art and a well prepared movie illustrating a unit of 7th and 8th grade geography; Macho, art and sand table display; Erwin, home unit.

The teachers throughout the county are to be complimented upon their spirit of cooperation. Angus can boast of a 100% attendance for the entire school for the month of October.

The Ruidoso PTA is going to have a carnival on Nov. 9, at 7 p. m., at Wingfield's Hall. Everyone is invited. The PTA members are planning some very entertaining shows as well as lots of good things to eat. At next regular meeting on Nov. 12, Col. Ingalls of N. M. M. I. is going to give an address to which everyone is cordially invited to come and listen to.

New Books Bought for School Library

With a part of the proceeds from the evening of one-act plays recently given by the Dramatic Club, eight new books were purchased for the hi school library. As the reference books were already adequate, the books were chiefly fiction. They were: The Bridge of San Luis Rey, by Thornton Wilder; Shadows on the Rocks, by Willa Cather; Bob, Son of Battle, by Ollivant; Smoky, the Cowhorse, by Will James; Lantern in Her Hand, by Aldrich; The Black Arrow, by Stevenson; The Glorious Adventure, by Halliburton and Parkman's Oregon Trail. These are books which are valuable whether they concern a cow pony or the fate of a man. The Dramatic Club expresses its gratitude to all of those who attended its performance and made the purchase of these new books possible.—Reporter.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his late life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach from New York within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Trafford, middle-aged Gless Kerrigan, Sister Anastasia, a nun and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Barry's reluctance annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness. His distrust with Kerrigan ripens, and he makes a little progress with Barry.

"Well, we don't have to die afterwards—unless we want to," Kerrigan went on. "And it's no fair dying either till each of the others asks one question. We draw lots to see who starts."

He broke matches to different lengths, offered them in his fist, the ends protruding evenly. He said, "Or don't you want to do this?" glancing at Barry.

"Mm," said Barry, and held out her hand. "Who goes first—long or short?"

"Long."

There was a thin air of excitement about it, as in a game of Truth or Consequences. Barry studiously kept her eyes on Kerrigan. Hal rummaged in his mind for the right question to ask her when his turn came. And the little tenseness stayed about them after Barry had drawn the middle-length match, Hal the short, with Kerrigan to begin.

"Frankly, I don't know," he started this, said Kerrigan, his eyes cheerful and warm, "so I'll make it dull as possible. I was born in Chicago, fifty-one years ago, with a cant. My mother wanted me to go into the church, my stepfather wanted me in a bank, so I decided to be a cowboy. I entered the University of Chicago at the age of seventeen and came out of it again at seventeen and a quarter for a job on the range in Wyoming. I wrote up a barroom shooting and had the misfortune to get it printed in a Cheyenne paper. Since then I've worked on nineteen newspapers, being fired from one and resigning from eighteen in the nick of time. I am on my way to the twentieth, and last, run by an old friend in Southern California. I like horses, shad roe, and derby hats; and I never take old brandy except when I can get it. So there."

"Ah, is that all?" said Barry, her brows raised, her blue eyes tenderly disappointed.

"Enough for today," said Kerrigan.

"Now it's—"

"But I got a question," said Barry.

"So you do?"

"Any question?"

Kerrigan said, "The more personal, the moreattering." In quiet courtliness.

She looked at him, looked down at the knife she fingered in her firm, dexterous hand, then up again gently.

"Have you been married?" she said.

"Never," said Kerrigan. "I used to keep coming down with love, but there was always something happened."

She watched him a second longer, the gentleness draining reluctantly from her eyes. Then for the first time since they'd sat down she turned to Hal, leucially, and said, "You get one."

"The one time you were fired—"

Hal began, watching to be sure it was all right. Kerrigan's look started a pleased daze. "Why were you?" Hal said.

"Well, it's a long story—a long story," said Kerrigan.

"Then all the better," said Barry, low and comfortable. "Come on—you started this."

"Well, my friends, it seems I have a half-brother," said Kerrigan, still tauting the cheerful reminiscence: "elder—respectable, systematic as a ball-team, steady, worldly, ambitious. He owns 'The Road to Mandalay' in his morning bath."

"I need to displease him very much in youth," Kerrigan went on. "So we didn't get along. He gave up the job of reforming me—and went into a bank and did well. Ten years passed. I had a job on a paper in Montana. My half-brother's bank sent him out to look at some copper mines that were in trouble and I was asked to get an interview. I knew the situation at the mine, and I was pretty sure the situation in my brother's head hadn't changed much in ten years. So instead of listening to what he thought he ought to think about it and getting ten years' remuneration X, M. C. A. on the side, I suggested out a couple of not-unions of what I thought he ought to think and went off to sit up with a sick friend."

"My brother made his tell pretty big when he saw the interview, but it was better when he found out who wrote it. And before I could get to the office, I was fired. It was a dirty trick on him. But it made a new man of me. That was before I got need to having things made new men of me all the time."

Barry watched him for a moment of confidential pleasure, smiling, and then said, "I like that." And Hal suspected that if the match should be drawn as chance favored with the little red wax, Kerrigan might have blushed.

"Now the question," he said to Barry.

"Now the question," he said to Barry.

"Now the question," he said to Barry.

as if she were going to tell his fortune. Then in quiet leisure she said:

"I'm twenty-three. I was born in Massachusetts, in Deerfield. Both my parents are dead. I finished high school and was secretary to a country lawyer for two years. I'd always wanted to go on the stage, so when I—when things changed, when my father died, I got a job in stock. I had three years of that round the East, without getting to Broadway; and now I'm going to try to get into pictures." She looked down thoughtfully, perhaps reverently, at the knife in her hand, to show she had finished. "Thanks for listenin'," she added, with a brighter glance at Kerrigan. "You get questions, too."

"What do you like best—to do?" said Kerrigan at once.

"Read," she said.

"You've read a lot?" he said.

She smiled easily. "I learned to read when I was six, and I've read ever since. I've learned darn-near everything I know from reading—what I like, what I don't like, what I—what I want. I copied characters in books until one day I found I didn't have any idea who I really was at all. And that frightened me a little."

Lunch came then, and she seemed to stop sooner than she had at first intended. Hal hoped the obituarial would be ended too—including his question to Barry. He couldn't ask her any of the things he found he really wanted to know; and such passable questions as he thought of sounded silly. But when the dishes were settled and the ice-cream and coffee situation straightened out, Kerrigan looked at him and said, "Now your question."

Barry looked up at Hal with a frank, quiet confidence that gave him unexpected pleasure.

"If you—when you make good in the movies, and have lots of money," he said, "what will you do?"

had a son, I'd put him in that. Twice a year I give myself a good kicking for not having gone into railroads, at your age." He looked expectantly at Barry.

Her eyes were leucially—as if she hadn't till then thought of anything she could want to ask. And then, without more than the most superficial apology in her tone, she said, "Please don't answer if you'd rather not. The reason I'm asking—the reason stops and I forget I had it, whether you tell me or not. Are you Frederick Ireland's son?"

He tried to force from her clear, polite look a hint of why she wanted to know; but all he could see was confirmation of what she had said; she didn't ask out of idle curiosity and yet the answer wasn't momentous to her.

"Yes, I am," he said.

She believed him, but it gave her nothing to think about. And Hal swore he would find out why she had asked that of him if he had to back her into a corner on the last day and shake her firm shoulders till she told him. No, not shake them; hold them, perhaps, but not shake them. And it should be before the last day, too. I wonder, he said to himself, if you'd tell me why you wanted to know that, without my even asking you. If you weren't so good to look at, Miss Trafford, you probably wouldn't be making so much trouble for yourself.

"I've met your father," said Kerrigan, without special significance.

"Have you?" said Hal. "Where?"

"In Paris," said Kerrigan. "When Wilson came over the first time. Were you with him?"

"No," said Hal; "I wasn't."

But Hal was wondering why, when it had never come hard to take challenges, he should shy at the prospect of later pretending to this girl that he was in love with her. She knew her way round; and had never seen her before, and would probably never—Hal interrupted himself with a fresh wonder: why couldn't he easily conceive of not seeing her again? A little more than twenty-four hours it was, since they'd started; he didn't even know what she looked like with her hat off. Oh, the hell with it; just remember how easily she can make you mad and don't go Travelers' Aid till you have to.

Straight roads long-laid across the fatness of Ohio, with the sultry, flat afternoon in a hazy layer between the land and the stubbornly moving sun. Then Kerrigan saw "Detroit" on a signboard at less than a hundred miles. Palsipher hummed a vague, contented piece of tune over to himself; Barry and Mrs. Palsipher were discussing Florida oranges, mail-order shopping, red hair, and railway travel, with Sister Anastasia's gentle surprise and inquiry between them; and Kerrigan pored over his pocket atlas, pulling away the smoke from his short cigarette, to identify each strand in the web of railroads that converged upon Toledo.

Perhaps two hours more; and even if the ease of relief was rolling in now with every mile, the thing to do was push straight on without stopping, whether stark hunger overtook the Palsiphers or not.

"Say," came Crack's drawy, confidential whisper near Hal's ear. Hal turned his head a little, his attention in alert suspense. "We could eat in Detroit," Crack said in softly implian conspiracy. "Run right through, we could—nor give this bird another chance to try a quick one." Hal made himself ignore the coincidence; he nodded briefly and said, "Good idea."

If Crack, banking in the secret sunshine of his own little schemes, could be made uneasy, there must be something more to Miller's influence than Hal liked to allow.

In the next rising of talk behind them Hal leant a little toward Kerrigan and murmured: "Is there anything about that fella that—" He thought he saw understanding in Kerrigan's eyes and turned back to the road without finishing.

But Kerrigan said, "Which fella?" curiously. Hal glanced at him again quickly; the brown eyes still seemed to understand what he meant. And Hal dismissed the subject glacially, muttering, "Later, later."

Across the Manasse and through the fringes of Toledo. It grew dark slowly; then the sprawl of a city began to intrude upon the openness, gradually and in disorder.

"Dearborn," Crack suddenly whispered, and Hal wondered why it sounded exciting, even fatally sinister.

Crack seemed to know Detroit, and to know the names he spoke with under- tones of leashed significance: Toledo graph road; Michigan road that went straight into the deck behind them for two hundred and eighty miles to become Michigan boulevard in Chicago; River Rouge—a dark-gleaming creek that curled under the highway and gave its name to the plant where had worked more people than it took to build the Pyramids or sell the Arch-roads.

"You see, feel things gain' on here," said Crack quietly behind Hal's head. "Don't you?"

"Yes, you do," said Hal.

"I see Detroit," Crack said in shy companionship. "I need to work here."

Hal had a queer curiosity to know what it was Crack had worked at; but something suggested that if he asked, the long, unimpaired voice wouldn't tell him the truth.

In the early ten o'clock—the night hereabouts, the pavement still re-echoing the sun's impetuosity—when they found the Collins square.

"Where you?" said Kerrigan. "At I

CROCHETED FLOWERS FOR POT HOLDERS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Pot holders crocheted with heavy string are very practical and when made in flower forms are really lovely. They are heavy enough to protect the hands without requiring padding. These three pot holders are crocheted in the same manner but in different combinations of red, yellow and green. The petals are crocheted separately of one color and then slip attached together and finished in contrasting colors. Size when finished about six inches.

Instruction sheet No. 731 with illustrations and instructions how to crochet these holders, also how to arrange the colors, will be mailed to you for 10 cents. Material can also be bought from this department. Information and price are given when mailing instructions.

Address Home Craft Co., Dept. B., Nineteenth and St. Louis Ave., St. Louis, Mo. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for reply when writing for any information.

WHITE CANARIES

Canaries have recently been bred in several new colors—black, blue, red and white. The only one, however, that has been definitely fixed and is regularly produced is white; and the one man who knows how to obtain this color has such a demand for these white songsters that he is asking—and getting—$500 a pair for them.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true. Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. They use a liquid

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Laxative, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

are built different—they have three patented construction features not used in any other truck tire. The body is built with Gum-Dipped High Stretch cords. Gum-Dipping, the patented Firestone process, soaks the cords in pure liquid rubber, insulating and coating every strand in every cord. This is why Firestone Tires run cooler and are stronger.

The tread is made of a new and tougher rubber compound which gives greatest resistance to wear. This, together with the scientific non-skid design, gives greater traction and longer non-skid mileage. Firestone locks this wider, heavier and more rugged tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord

Scientists Say Gulf Stream Warms Europe, and Not U. S.

One by one our cherished delusions fall. It has long been taught that the Gulf Stream governs the climate of the southern and eastern parts of the United States, but scientists dispute this—rather warmly. They say it is not the thing which makes the Gulf and South Atlantic states warm, but that it is the cause of the comparative mildness of the climate of northern Europe.

against the Yankee skippers. The reason was the Yankees knew the stream and utilized it or refused to fight it, and the English skippers blundered into its power. It is estimated the Gulf Stream, at its greatest depth and force when it reaches the open Atlantic, discharges water at the rate of 300,000,000,000 gallons per hour, or 1,000 times more than the Mississippi river. It seems to be practically unvarying through the centuries.—Tulsa Daily World.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It may be, and possibly is, true that the bulk of our people pay little attention to the fact that gold is pouring into the United States in an unprecedented volume. I can understand how the wheat farmer of the plains country or the cotton farmer of the South or any other type of farmer can fall to become excited over the influx of gold in the last five or six months. It appears to be a far cry from the grain fields or the cotton fields or the quarries or the small town to the heavy concentration of yellow metal to which the United States has been subjected. But the link nevertheless exists. It exists as surely and as definitely as night follows day and, therefore, it becomes a subject in which all of us are vitally interested.

Since the beginning of September a widespread flight of capital from Europe has manifested itself in the shape of gold exports to the United States. Three or four hundred millions of dollars in gold have landed here in that time. They bring the net inflow of gold for the year well above $1,000,000,000. And, going a bit further, this addition plus another $1,000,000,000 places our gold stocks in excess of $9,400,000,000 or roughly $2,000,000,000 more than was held here when the dollar was devalued under President Roosevelt's instructions.

It seems impossible to attribute this heavy and prolonged inflow to any single cause. Immediately after devaluation of the dollar, there was a steady stream of yellow metal headed for the United States which was due almost entirely to a desire of American holders of gold, temporarily stored abroad, to repatriate. But even in that case, there was a contributory factor to be considered. Monetary manipulation by the American government had a temporary effect on our exports, increasing them to some extent and it was increasing the balance of payments due to this country. So, we find our policies—that is, policies of the Roosevelt administration—responsible for the start of the inflow.

Later, another influence developed. Under the pressure of American monetary policies, foreign powers found their allegiance to the gold standard severely strained. Silver purchases by the treasury had an effect. The combination was primarily responsible for the second rush of gold.

Subsequently, the Italian-Ethiopian controversy began to take serious form and a new flood of gold to America developed. This was different than that which had immediately preceded it because this movement was related to international conditions of a political nature whereas the previous movement had resulted without relation to international strife in a military way but centered wholly upon American monetary policies and their effect upon economic conditions abroad.

Now, let us consider what can happen. Those acquainted with finance recognize in the existence of a gigantic stock of gold—the largest in American history and approximately 45 per cent of the entire world stock—the existence of a potential, if indeed it is not a probable, base for inflation. There is so much gold held by the American government, which holds virtually all of the gold stocks in this country, that no end of paper money can be issued against it. Those who believe in that type of currency policies say that it would be perfectly safe; that the government could pay off dollar for dollar or even more than a dollar for every paper dollar outstanding from the gold it holds. This school of thought contends that there is actually a shortage of money in circulation and insists that this is one reason why the country has not recovered from the depression more rapidly than conditions show. Of course, a cold appraisal of that argument catalogues it as the same old demand for inflation of the currency and everyone knows what inflation will do in the way of wrecking the person who works for wages or whose sole income consists of a compensation delivered to him in the form of weekly, semi-monthly, or monthly pay checks. The size of that check never has and never will catch up with the increase in prices which that individual must pay to live.

What Can Happen

Then, there is another potential danger in this tremendous hoard of gold. It is in many ways similar to that which I have just related. It is, however, more of a psychological condition than the first. I refer to the attitude usually adopted by those who pull for inflation when they see a government possessed of vast stores of precious metals. In this instance, the tangent of inflationist sentiment is joined with the sponsors of the silver buying program. 'We Want More Money' they see all of this gold and silver and they simply cannot resist the opportunity for continued hoarding. Their speeches and their conversations are almost like a college yell: "We want more money," the more money which they desire being nothing more nor less than currency run off in the printing press of the great bureau of engraving and printing in Washington.

Whether it is the first or the second type of inflation that is demanded, whether it is the printing press-money or the money issued against gold as security, the results are the same. It is to be remembered in this connection that none of us can obtain gold from the treasury. The Roosevelt administration demanded of and obtained from congress legislation which definitely prohibited payment of gold for monetary use by the treasury under any circumstances except for the settlement of balances owed foreign nations. But that fact has not deterred demands by inflationists. They are calling and will continue to call for more paper money, and with every call the prices you pay for commodities are bound to increase—that is, they will increase until or unless there is a release of gold again for circulation as money.

So, it is quite apparent that as long as this influx of gold continues and as long as other nations are harassed by monetary manipulation in the United States, we are continually threatened with a "business boom" which is nothing less than inflation of credit. The real danger confronting this country, then, lies in that direction. Summarized, the threat is this: If that inflationist "business boom" gets started, no power on earth is able or will be able to stop it. The next and final step after that is complete destruction of our currency, and medium of exchange.

Political developments in the last few weeks have been completely dominated by the spurge of activity on the part of former President Herbert Hoover. His pot shots at the New Deal in several speeches have agitated the Democrats much more than they are willing to admit and, notwithstanding assertions of satisfaction, they have thrown a new fear into the laps of the Roosevelt New Dealers.

Stirred by Hoover

But, if the Hoover speeches have excited the New Dealers and the conservative Democrats, they have almost precipitated a riot among the Republicans of whom he must be said to be, at least, the titular leader. The bulk of the Republicans look upon Mr. Hoover, because of these recent speeches, as a potential Republican nominee for the Presidency against Mr. Roosevelt next year. They look upon him, further, as an individual who is likely to disrupt plans that contemplate reconciliation, a love feast, among the various factions of the Republican party. They have been struggling to lay a base for this love feast and because of the intense hatred that some of their number have for Mr. Hoover, his activity has opened this breach again, made it a blood-red wound.

Political observers and commentators have shown all manner of excitement because Mr. Hoover has made no statement whether he will or will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination. In plain words, they have been trying valiantly to conduct a campaign that will smoke out Mr. Hoover and make him say whether he is or is not a candidate.

All of the efforts to find out what Mr. Hoover proposes to do have failed and will continue to fail, even with the underground work of the New Deal, to bring from him a statement as to his purposes. He will announce them in his own good time and his statement will be definite when it is made.

Personally, from all of the information I have been able to assemble, I do not believe that Mr. Hoover has any intention of seeking the nomination. I am convinced his purpose is directed wholly and completely to one end: he fears the New Deal and he is trying with all of the power that he possesses to acquaint the country with his views which are obviously in opposition to the theories and policies and experiments of the New Deal. From sources which I consider to be faithful, because they always have been accurate heretofore, it is apparent to me that Mr. Hoover desires to lend his help in acquainting the country with the things in the New Deal which he regards as dangerous to our nation's well being and that beyond such a purpose he is content to enjoy life as a neighbor and vacationist.

But there is another phase of this situation which seems to me to warrant consideration. While some of the anti-Hooverites have been denouncing him, even calling him names under their breath, Mr. Hoover has done the Republican party a big favor. By his attacks on the New Deal; by his condemnation of the things in it which he regards as certain to be destructive; in short, by his activity which many consider as a campaign for the nomination, he has made the Republicans conscious of the job they have to do. He has awakened them and has put light into them which three or four short months ago did not exist.

If you feel tired, run-down, nervous, and out of sorts

—there is usually a definite reason for this

Now let's reason sensibly. Don't try to get well in a day... this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried. But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs. Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down... a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic. Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again.

When your car's in cold storage at the curb this winter, don't have misgivings. Simply do what no oiling system can do by itself... make your engine stay oiled at a standstill, by changing to Conoco Germ Processed Oil.

Then when the thermometer slides, so will every part of your engine. You can come out calmly, as late as you like, to an engine that's oiled IN ADVANCE—clear to the top—before you've touched door-latch or starter. No more cruel, scraping starts, without half enough lubrication. And right there, you know, is where engineers lay more than half the blame for worn-out motors.

But the Conoco Germ Process... patented... spares you all that. How? By giving this oil the startling power to COMBINE with metal. That's what gives you the famous Hidden Quirt, which won't drain down. It's up there for starting, and then while you're running it backs up the high-durability Germ Processed Oil film.

You may have one of the newest cars—with their copper-lead, high-lead, or cadmium-alloy bearings. Or you may have an older model—with babbit bearings. But you can be sure that any bearing—or any other moving part—is safer with Germ Processed Oil.

This season don't merely change your oil... change your car's whole future... all for the better. Get to your helpful Conoco man before Sunday comes. Continental Oil Company, Established 1875.

How do you do, Ladies and Gentleman; how DO you do! (This saying was swiped from a radio favorite.)

The wind doth blow. As a bird says "You come from Carrizozo; that's the place where the wind blows all the time, isn't it?" Answer to this query: "The wind doesn't blow ALL the time, sort of meets itself going back." We can laugh and joke about the duststorms we have—but it gets our angors to have some one from out of town speak of our sandstorms. Maybe I'm wrong. But as a man who has passed on remarked "What are writ are writ."

"What the Carrizozo Band needs is a good performer on euphonium (baritone.) How about County Treasurer Louis Adams? Louis used to play pretty good Cornet, and the change to a larger mouthpiece such as is used on euphonium could be accomplished easily by Louis. I hear remarks all over town that the Carrizozo Band has done remarkably well in the short time they had in preparing for the County Fair—about two weeks. They have graduated from the "Carrizozo Silver Cornet" (an amateur band) class, and are well on their way to become a fair band, size of the town, of course, taken into consideration. In other words, what can you expect, Sousa's band?

This isn't an advertisement for the radio; Shux no. The lack of talent for the Carrizozo band is attributed, to a surprising measure, to the radio. Young folks, as well as the older people, including myself, haven't patience enough to practise music, when there are excellent programs on the radio that may be had merely by turning the dial. Don English, please note; quoting Senor Don,

The Townsend Club is growing. Here's luck in your endeavor. It certainly is a laudable undertaking.

The teachers have left bag and baggage for Albuquerque to attend the Teachers' Convention. I presume the men would sooner be out deer hunting, but that's telling tales out of school—Yo no say; Quien Savvy. In English—Who knows?

This didn't happen—Wouldn't it be rather comical at the wild cow milking contest at the Fair if someone would make an intentional mistake, substituting a bull for a wild cow, in their hurry?

"You're all the time writing about our windy weather," says Town Marshal Ita Greer. "How about the still, sunshiny days

Illinois Pyramids Linked to Aztecs

Evidence of Mayan Influence Also Is Found.

Chicago.—Illinois has its own "pyramids" which, while they do not reveal the wealth of buried cities such as found in the Near East excavations, still show with scientific accuracy the cultural evolution of the prehistoric people who dwelt in these valleys long ago.

It was not necessarily an invasion, or a migration of the Aztec and Mayan people, but the slow outgrowth of contacts by hunting, trade or war.

Outgrowth of Contacts. The intimate connection between Arkansas, Ohio and Illinois groups is shown, adding to the material for the survey which is being made of ancient cultures of the entire Mississippi valley region.

There are about 100 acres on the site worked upon during the summer. It was a village site, with a playground indicated by the finding of "chunky stones," or disks, with which the people played.

Redefining Success

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The generally accepted definition for success is good fortune, prosperity, something that makes a popular hit. The word is usually associated with monetary values.

and later a reckoning was demanded. The one who received many talents received the same reward as did the one of lesser number; but the one who refused to use the one talent he had was condemned.

True success always reflects moral rather than material values. Honesty, integrity and thoroughness as well as loyalty are among the traits of character upon which real success depends.

In many small communities a physician is faithful in his daily practice and enjoys the confidence of his patients. That man may be a greater success than his colleague who is located in a large city with a much larger practice.

Fabric Honors Go to New Woolens

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MOST of the glory in the fabric realm is going to the new woolens this season. Whether you work or play, whether you travel or saunter about town, whether you are campus-bound or en route to the office, whether you are counted among the spectator sports group in the grandstand or whether you tea at five or dance at the midnight "prom," if you would register among the best-dressed, fashion decrees that your costume be of some one or other of the handsome new wools that are showing this season.

Time was "way back when" that the merits of woolens were reckoned in terms of sturdy utilization qualities that insured comfort when the temperature went low as well as sterling wearability throughout the practical hours. But now all is changed in that you may have your woolen weaves as fastidious, as eloquent of chic and charm as you please.

Wherefore, the new wool fabrics have become the idol of fashion. The current collections intrigue with their wide versatility, their breath-taking novelty, the colorings which are rich and beautiful beyond wildest flights of fancy, together with weaves and textures the likes of which were not dreamed of in days of yore.

The woman who knows her woolens will choose according to time, place and occasion. For sports and for practical daytime clothes, rabbit woolens are outstanding. They are shown in cunning novelty checks and stripes and bold plaids which particularly stress the new wines, chic violet tones, dark browns and deep rich greens. Nubby mixture tweeds and herringbones are also favorites in sports woolens. Popular also are homespuns, surface cordings, diagonal or vertical ribblings and endless weaves that are nubbed, slubbed, flecked and highly metallized, fascinating and mysterious beyond anything previously achieved in the annals of the woolen industry.

Wool crepes, printed challis and cashmeres are especially lovely styled in soft types that are suitable to wear under fur coats. There is much excitement, too, in regard to the new sheer woolens.

Quite the newest trend in fashioning the smartest woolen suits is to bind the edges with a simple for after the manner shown to the left in the group pictured. Here we see a young fashionable clad in a jacket frock of sheer black woolen. It has the new short pleated. The edges of the jacket and the modishly flared skirt are banded with black Persian lamb. The crushed ascot scarf is of bright green moire. Speaking of sheer black, at this moment it is the rage for daytime dresses, with clever buttonings, shirings, pleatings and metal girdets to give the individual touch.

Campus-bound, the chic girl centered in the trio is wearing a smart two-piece frock of lightweight woolen styled to look young. Gray Persian lamb decorates the collar and the patch pockets of the tailored jacket that fastens down the front with self-fabric covered buttons.

Smartly simple in line, the three-piece frock for the junior, shown to the right, is practically a "must" in the school wardrobe. The cardigan jacket and the tailored skirt are made of a sheer, soft rabbit woolen fabric. The tucked-in blouse of soft wool Jersey in the natural tan color, worn with a Peter Pan collar outside the cardigan.

Ventilated Crib Helps Save Corn

Late Maturing Crop May Be Salvaged if Properly Dried, Cured.

By W. A. Foster, Rural Architect, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

Since much of the corn crop was late in maturing, cribs which not only protect the grain but give it plenty of ventilation for drying and curing will save what might otherwise be heavy losses.

Facilities for adequate ventilation can be built into new cribs or added to those which will be undergoing repairs this fall. In addition to plenty of air circulation, the crib should protect the grain against bad weather and keep rats, mice and other destructive rodents away from the corn.

In figuring the amount of space needed, the farmer can base his estimates on the fact that ear corn requires two and a half cubic feet to the bushel, while shelled corn or small grain requires just half that much. This means that a crib 10 feet wide and 10 feet high will hold 40 bushels of ear corn to each foot of length. The most convenient length is 36 to 40 feet.

Since it is better to have all of the crib room at one location rather than scattered about the farmstead, the "growing plan" is ideal, especially for the young farmer who is just starting to build up his place. One crib may be built on the selected site this fall. Later on another unit may be added facing the first and with a driveway between. As small grain bins are needed they may be built above the cribs and the roof finally completed.

Either wood or concrete floors are satisfactory for corn cribs if properly constructed. However, extra care should be taken to "build out" the rats. This can be done by placing a strip of half-inch mesh hardware cloth around the edge of the crib between the studding and the outside wall. This strip should reach from the floor to about 2 feet up on the walls and be topped with a strip of galvanized iron bent outward to prevent the rats from getting through the wall above the strip of hardware cloth.

Hogging Down Corn Found to Be Satisfactory Plan

Practical feeders and experiment stations have shown that hogs properly managed will gain as rapidly and as economically when allowed to harvest the corn crop as when the crop is harvested and fed in the usual manner, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

For hogging down corn most feeders prefer well grown but thin shoots weighing from 125 to 150 pounds—shoots that have been grown through the summer on forage and have not been previously fed a heavy grain ration. Such hogs will eat a large amount of feed and will gain rapidly. Heavier hogs such as brood sows and fattening hogs almost finished are likely to break down too much corn and not clean it up so well as they go along, thereby increasing the waste.

Some farmers turn in a few sows until shoots learn how to break down the corn, but take the sows out before they become too fat. It is also a common practice to move the fattening hogs to a new area before the corn is entirely cleaned up, and follow them with sows and smaller pigs. Such management insures minimum waste.

Renting Equipped Farms

The usual terms on which fully equipped farms are rented are a 50-50 division of income and expense. This type of lease is known as the 50-50 live stock share lease. The landlord furnishes the farm and one-half of the productive live stock. He pays the taxes, insurance, and upkeep of the buildings. The tenant furnishes the work stock and machinery and the other one-half of the productive live stock. The operating expense and the operating income are shared equally. Slight modifications of this plan may be made to cover special conditions on individual farms.—George A. Pond, division of agricultural economics, University of Minnesota.

Australia Taxes Wheat

In an effort to solve the surplus wheat problem in Australia, the commonwealth has adopted a law permitting the levying of a processing tax of not more than 7.5 cents per bushel, to be paid farmers for withholding their grain from the market. This is not an acreage control plan, but a marketing plan. Farmers who suffer any loss from holding the wheat may be compensated up to the limit of the tax. Conditions to the payment require that the beneficiary of the tax be the actual producer of the wheat, that the grain be in good condition when stored, that it be at least six months in storage and that it total at least 4,000 bushels.

Agricultural Notes

For each pound of ragweed grown in the corn field deduct three pounds of corn.

Farmers save freight by buying highly concentrated fertilizer and applying with machines adapted for the purpose.

Collective farmers of Minsk province, U. S. S. R., have drained more than 225,000 acres of swamp to make farm land.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for November 3

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE

LESSON TEXT—11 Kings 18:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Black Man God Chose For.

JUNIOR TOPIC—In Time of Danger, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Results of Doing Wrong. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Nations Accountable to God.

1. The Siege of Jerusalem (vv. 1-12). The time (vv. 1, 2). It began on the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign, lasting about eighteen months. The tenth month, according to the Jew's calendar, corresponds to our December-January, as their calendar began about the middle of March. The reason the exact time is given is that this was to be an event of great importance to the Jews in their exile. In their gloomy exile God directed Ezekiel to utter a parable unto the captives of that day (Ezek. 24).

2. The method (v. 11). Nebuchadnezzar came in person with a large army and encamped against Jerusalem, building forts against it round about. It is thought that several walls were built around the city, shutting it in. On the tops of these walls forts were built from which missiles of destruction could be hurled by their engines of war against the city. With the city thus shut in, its fall was only a question of time.

3. The famine (v. 3). Heikie says: "It was speedily followed as is always the case, with an outbreak of pestilence. Food was well-nigh gone. There had long been no bread. Mothers were at last driven to murder and eat their children. The richest citizens wandered about searching for scraps in the dung hills." Even outside the city the people were starving. "There was no bread for the people of the land." It is estimated that one-third of the people of Jerusalem died of starvation.

11. Zedekiah's Flight and Fate (vv. 4-7). 1. "The city was broken up" (v. 4). The Chaldeans had succeeded in making an opening in the wall so large that they could make their way into the city in spite of all that the Hebrews could do. Resistance was carried on to the bitter end.

2. Zedekiah's flight (v. 4). The king with his men of war fled by night toward the plain. His object no doubt was to cross the Jordan at Jericho and hide in the mountains east of the Jordan.

3. Zedekiah's fate (vv. 5-7). a. He was overtaken in the plains of Jericho (v. 5). As soon as the Chaldean army discovered the flight they pursued and captured him.

b. He was brought to the king of Babylon at Riblah (v. 6). Riblah was a town north of Damascus. It was the king's headquarters from which he directed his armies against Tyre and Jerusalem. Before Nebuchadnezzar Zedekiah was tried as a criminal.

c. His fate. His sons were slain in his sight. His own eyes were put out. He was bound with fetters of brass and they carried him to Babylon where he remained a prisoner to the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

111. Jerusalem Destroyed (vv. 8-10). The dismantling of the city was delayed a month, perhaps awaiting instructions from Nebuchadnezzar who was at Riblah. The work of destruction was executed by the officer next in rank to the king.

1. They burnt the house of the Lord (v. 9). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon, with additions and alterations. Before burning it, they plundered it of all its sacred contents.

2. Burnt the king's house (v. 9). This was doubtless the palace built by Solomon.

3. Burnt all the houses of Jerusalem (v. 9). The implication is that the common houses were left for the people (v. 12).

4. They broke down the walls of Jerusalem. The aim in this was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.

IV. The Disposition of the Temple Furniture and Priesta (vv. 13-21). 1. The temple furniture carried to Babylon (vv. 13-17). The pillars of brass and the brazen sea were broken into pieces by the Babylonians and together with the utensils were carried to Babylon.

2. Certain officers and priests taken to Riblah (vv. 18-21). These officers and priests and three score men of the land were taken to Riblah, where they were slain by the king of Babylon. The events recorded in Second Kings cover a period of 808 years. God had said, "If thou wilt, then I will"; they had invited disaster by disobedience.

FASCINATING TALKS OF LOST MINES

THE VALLAGRANA LEDGE

DON TOMAS AGUILA was the richest man in Monterey. Surely he had no need for more, but such is wealth that no one ever thinks he has enough. Don Tomas, certainly, felt that he would like to add to his riches. There was a silver mine in Lower California—the Vallagrana—which brought forth enormous quantities of the pale metal. Don Tomas wished to own a part of this mine—a third would do—and he would pay $150,000 for the privilege. But why should its owners part with a third of their wealth? Alas, no, senior, it could not be!

To whom the Don made his offer is slightly obscure. The Vallagrana was an Indian mine, owned and worked by the natives of Baja, California. Surely he did not imagine that they would be interested in the transaction. Or perhaps he was gambling in futures, and made his offer to the men who started out to locate the fabulous ledge of silver—the offer to become valid if and when that location had been successfully made.

The mine was real—there is no doubt of that. It takes its name from the Mexican governor of Lower California, who, due to one of those political tempests which have hurried every so often over Mexico, was forced to flee in 1800 to La Paz. On the way, Vallagrana and his followers took refuge for a time in an Indian camp. The governor evidently had a manner of making friends. Before he left the hospitable Indians they had showed their guests the wonderful ledge of silver, which was their treasure. Wonderful it certainly was, for the outcrop could be traced for over 1,800 feet, and was over 25 feet wide at the surface!

After promising absolute secrecy, the governor and his party were given seven specimens of the ore for souvenirs, and later they departed for La Paz. Various vicissitudes befell them; then, and a year later only one man still had his piece of ore. At last he had it assayed. It ran 3,900 ounces of silver to the ton!

The prospect of obtaining more of this precious ore overcame the memory of promises made. Vallagrana, then, what had happened, and in July of 1803 he and five other men landed in La Paz on their way back to the wonderful ledge.

But Indians had strict codes of justice. After the former governor and his men left La Paz, they were never seen nor heard of again.

Every year since 1803 there have been others who hoped to find the ledge of silver. They have started out confidently; often they have paid an Indian or two to guide them to their goal. But these "guides" have never seemed to find the location of the silver.

UNPROFITABLE MURDER

AN OLD Utah Indian told Pete Madison, prospector-at-large, a story of gold. There were two miners, the tribesman said, who spent the winter in the Pat's Hole section of Moffat county, Colorado. They worked all winter, in spite of storms, and at last collected about 25 pounds of gold.

Finally they ran out of provisions. It would seem pleasant to see other people again, a sort of vacation after the long, tiresome winter, so the two left their camp and started west toward a settlement where they expected to buy supplies.

In the early days of the West, "bad men" seemed to be hidden in the most unexpected places. A band of such outlaws appeared after the two miners had crossed the Utah line, and they found that they must fight for their lives.

There was a ledge back of them; they stood against this and defended themselves as best they could against the desperadoes.

It was an uneven battle. One miner went down; the other tried to fight his way through but a bullet stopped him.

Much to the chagrin of the outlaws, the miners had only enough gold with them to pay for their supplies and a modest spree. It had been scarcely worth while killing them for this. And now the point arose that if these bodies should be discovered, posses would certainly trail down the murderers.

The only thing to do was to conceal the corpses where they lay. Accordingly, the outlaws pried off the face of the ledge so that fallen rocks and dirt covered the two dead men, and hurried away from the scene.

This was the story that the old Utah Indian told Pete Madison, and fate, a characteristic chaser of golden phantoms, made up his mind to hunt out the mine. He went as far as the ranch of Harry Chew, an old-timer in that region, and here he found substantiation to the story of the fight: Years before, while Chew was exploring a steel cliff in Pool canyon, Utah, he had found a human skull, exposed by erosion, at the foot of a ledge. Curious to know what lay out of sight, he dug around and uncovered two bodies—evidently those of the unfortunate miners.

Beyond this neither man was able to trace. The mine remains hidden among the hills, perhaps concealed by fallen trees or rock slides, and the lucky discoverer has not yet come along.

'STRESSING PLAID' FOR WOMEN GAINS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The world of fashion is growing increasingly plaid-conscious. Never has eye seen plaids so gorgeous, so bold in color and in such fascinating wool weaves as are now enlivening the style panorama. The tunic of soft spongy woolen here pictured is in the smart new gray. The same gray is in the plaid contrasting the vivid reds, greens, yellows and white. Note the ascot tie, which is a very special style feature of the majority of sports costumes.

Two-Piece Dresses
Two-piece styles are exceptionally good for this fall, especially in thin, light-weight wool or crepe.

TROUSERED STYLE FOR WOMEN GAINS

The trousers-for-women idea is strong in the new fall fashions, and girls who heretofore have restricted their mannish costuming to the beach or the back yard, may now come right out in the open and wear trousers to dinner and dance.

There seems no doubt that some of the leading designers are all for the trousered mode.

Some gowns have the trousers beneath a skirt, slit to the waist.

Some feature divided skirts concealingly draped.

And some come right out with undisciplined trousers in formal afternoon and dinner clothes.

The most daring variation of the theme presented thus far is the slashed evening skirt which reveals matching shorts.

Umbrella Skirt Is Favored by Coeds for Sweater Use

The umbrella skirt is the newest thing on the campus horizon.

It's the skirt that college girls will wear with their sweaters this fall, it looks like its name. It's a skirt with a decided flare, gored in the umbrella manner, with crosses between the seams. It demonstrates the new rule of shorter and fuller, and it's shown in all the new fannels and tweeds.

College girls, tired of the classic button-down-the-front skirt of wrap-around cut, are going in for gored this fall. The majority of skirts shown in college shops around town are definitely flared, and gored to the last notch.

They come in nice soft monotone tweeds and Angora fabrics, and are shown in colors to blend or contrast with any sweater.

Evening Caps

A luscious satin evening cap is bordered at the front with silver fox and caught together at the neckline with a large baguette diamond and ruby clip.
