PRICE $2.00 THE YEAR

Personals

The Worthy Grand Matron of New Mexico, Mrs. Zoe Benton Lusk, will make her official visit to Comet Chapter No. 29, Monday evening, Dec. 9. All Stars are cordially invited to join us in our deliberations. A banquet will be given in the banquet room of the Masonic Temple at 6 p. m. Stars and their husbands, husbands and their wives, Stars and their beaus and Stars and their sweethearts are invited. Tickets are on sale by the secretary, Mrs. R. E. Blaney, at 50 cents each. Buy your tickets as early as possible and not later than Sunday, December 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter LaFleur and son Walter, Jr., were here for the week end, visiting the A. J. Rolland and Walter Grumbles families. Walter is with the state highway department and has been transferred from Roswell to Tularosa.

Miss Ula Edmiston and sister Ruth came in the latter part of last week from Dallas, Texas, and spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Edmiston and other relatives, returning to Dallas Monday. Although having been residents of the Texas city for a number of years, Lincoln County still has a claim on the ladies. They were born and reared here, which gives us the right to first claim.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Baile are now residing in the Phipps Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Rantfrow of their ranch across the Malpais were visitors in town this Wednesday, Doyle making this office a pleasant call while here. The Rantfrows are among those having a sweet tooth, as evidenced by the box of Chocolates he took away. Are they good—you tell 'em. (Doyle came in and renewed his subscription to the Outlook, by the way.)

Mrs. M. R. Hendrix and son Fred of Ancho were visitors in town this Tuesday. They made this office a pleasant call, renewing their subscription to The Outlook, also taking away some delicious Chocolates. Note—It is our treat this time.

Mrs. Clara Snyder—Your favor of recent date received; thanks a lot.

Mrs. Erva Claunch of the Beauty Shoppe—Much obliged for the (you know what.) We hope that you and yours have enjoyed the Chocolates.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Corn, granddaughter Mary Ann Gray, spent Thanksgiving Day with Mrs. Ada Gray and sons.

Frank Todd was a business visitor at El Paso Tuesday and Wednesday, returning home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Sanchez and family spent last Sunday at El Paso, returning home in the evening.

Big dance at Community Hall after basketball games tomorrow night, Dec. 7. Music by the "Carrizozo-lans." Be there!

Mary Ann Gray is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grumbles at Tucumcari this week.

Business Men's Club

At the annual election of officers held Wednesday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President - John E. Hall
Vice-President - F. A. English
Sec'y Treas. - F. L. Boughner
Trustees for 1 Year - F. H. Johnson & A. J. Rolland

These officers will take office at the first regular meeting of the Club in January.

The Club has taken charge of the sale of tickets in this territory for the Southwestern Sun-Bowl Association. Details are yet to be worked out and announcement will be made later as to mode of handling the sale. F. L. Boughner, Secretary.

The Man in the Green Shirt

The Junior Class of the Carrizozo High School will present as its annual play, "The Man in the Green Shirt." The performance will be given on the evening of Dec. 12 in the High School Auditorium. This play contains the right amount of suspense to keep you guessing and the exact amount of humor to keep you laughing the rest of the time. The Man in the Green Shirt is an elusive gentleman whose acquaintance you must make.

Tickets for this play will be on sale this week-end by members of the class, who cordially invite you to begin the Christmas season with "The Man in the Green Shirt."

County Assessor L. H. Dow—Many thanks for your subscription. We hope that you'll continue to enjoy The Outlook, also the dollar box of Delicious Chocolates.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer—Mrs. Mayer was the first of our subscribers to take advantage of our Outlook - Fascination Chocolate offer. The Mayers are among our oldest subscribers; they renewed their subscription and took away a dollar box of Delicious Chocolates. We thank you.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Buile—Your favor received; thanks a lot. Hope you'll enjoy The Outlook; also the Chocolates.

When in Ancho—

Carrizozo people are frequent visitors at Ancho, but many are not aware of the fact that they now have a place where one or many may enjoy a rest and refreshments while in our neighboring town. At "Bill's Place" you may have oysters served in any style and special lunches of all kinds. Quick and satisfactory service is Bill's motto. When at Ancho, be sure to give Bill a call. Paste this in your hat. Bill's Tellin' YOU!

Marshall Atkinson of Corona—You've been a subscriber to The Outlook ever since Heck was a pup. Marshall renewed his subscription to The Outlook, taking with him a box of delicious, dainty Chocolates. Moral: Go thou and do likewise. (We accept silver as well as paper dollars, too)

FOR SALE—New Quilts at the home of Mrs. C. Carl. D25

It Won't Be Long Now

Here's Your Chance

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Huffmeyer—We are very much obliged for your subscription; hope you'll like The Outlook; also the $1 box of Chocolates.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. McClintock—Yours received; you renewed your subscription, thereby entitling you to a dollar box of Chocolates. Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Waldrep are among those mentioned as being new subscribers to The Outlook. Many thanks.

Miss Jane Spencer is Secretary for the White Sands Grazing District, with offices in the Citizens State Bank Building.

Mrs. George Herrera passed away Monday night at her home on the east side, after being ill only a few hours. The remains were interred in the local cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, two children, her parents, one sister and other relatives, to all of whom the sympathy of the community is tendered.

Jimmy Lucero is the new barber at M. G. Peckham's Barber Shop on Alamogordo avenue.

Mrs. Ramey of Lincoln was a visitor in Carrizozo on Monday of this week. She was accompanied by Mrs. Roy Ramey.

Calvin Carl—Your favor of recent date received; many thanks.

Bill Robinson, columnist, who makes a portion of his living in telling strange tales and sometimes lies a little to give color to an article, was in town this week. He tried to pay the Outlook a visit, but Sheriff McCamant and two state policemen were on his track and he left sooner than he intended to.

Miss Julia Romero was an El Paso visitor this week.

and assorted flavors. Samples of this fine line of choice confections may be seen at this office. Be one of the first to accept this extraordinary offer. Persons accepting this offer must come to this office for the candy.

Just address Carrizozo Outlook, Box 368, Carrizozo, N. M., and attach your check for $2.00.

Come in and get your Chocolates—we'll see that you get the paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray R. Sale and Miss Graca M. Jones spent Thanksgiving week in Altus, Oklahoma, where they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Ebb K. Jones.

Mrs. Alice Roberts returned Monday from California, where she spent several months visiting her sons, Bert at Oakdale and Pink at Oakland and their families. The boys send their best regards to their many Carrizozo friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Purcey left here Nov. 23, for Fort Worth to see the football game between S. M. U. and T. C. U. played last Saturday. They said the game was very exciting. S. M. U. won by a score of 20 to 14.

The Carrizozo Business Men's Club held an important meeting at the regular 6 o'clock dinner at the Carrizozo Eating House Wednesday evening.

Miss Carmen Pino was here from Escondido to spend the week-end with the home folks.

Vincent Reil took the Outlook's offer, renewing his subscription and getting a dollar box of Delicious Chocolates. The candy was so good that he says he'll re-subscribe in order to get more.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sager—Mr. Sager was second on the list of subscribers to take advantage of our Outlook - Delicious Chocolate offer. And many thanks.

Mrs. Chloë Fisher of Capitan—Many thanks for your renewal. "The lady at my right takes a box of Delicious Chocolates," with apologies to the auctioneer. Mrs. Fisher has subscribed for the Outlook for a long time.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Norman—You're among our new subscribers. Trust that you'll get a kick out of The Outlook—and the dollar box of Delicious Chocolates.

The New York Mutual

Perry Sears of Capitan has been appointed as agent for Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. This is the oldest life insurance company in the United States, having been in operation for the past 82 years. Good life insurance like that of the New York Mutual, has proved to be the only investment that has survived the depression without depreciation in value. When you are approached by an agent for a good company like the New York Mutual, he is endeavoring to sell you one of the best pieces of goods obtainable. Get in touch with him. D13

Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Phillips were here this week from their home near Angus, making purchases at our business houses.

Among letters received at this office this week was one from Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French. They have located at Tucson, Arizona, at which place they will spend the winter months and to that address, they wish to receive their Outlook.

There will be a meeting of the Townsend Club at the courthouse Monday night, Dec. 9. The public is invited.

When you step into Ziegler Bros. Store, take a look at the decorations, which is the handiwork of Ben Sanchez. On the south wall he has a desert scene, with the castle and camel train in the foreground. The work of painting in the various colors is very pretty; but we missed one thing, Ben. Where is the harem?

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grumbles were here from Tucumcari, spending the week-end with relatives.

Miss Ula Edmiston of Dallas, Tex.—You are among the new subscribers to The Outlook. Trust you'll enjoy the paper; also the $1 box of Delicious Chocolates.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Zumwalt—We hope you will enjoy the Outlook; also the Chocolates. They are among the new subscribers added to our rapidly growing list.

Out-of-the-Ordinary

"Stranger Than Fiction"

A strange story of a death-bed compact that kept love alive in heart of a "lifer" in the Minnesota penitentiary, eight years after his sweetheart died in Italy, came to light a few weeks ago. Michael Gentileore was freed from prison after serving 23 years for the murder of a roommate in Virginia, Minn. On leaving Italy, he promised Maria Delano, that after he prospered, he would return and they would be married. Instead of prospering, he went to prison. After 8 years, Maria died without knowing the fate of her lover. During the 8-year period, she kept up her love letters, but when she died she entered into a sacred compact with a close friend, who continued the love letters, always signing the name of Maria. Michael never knew the truth until he returned to Italy.

When the Swedish Contralto, Gertrude Wettergren, made this country a visit, she asked a newspaper man to give her a "kick." The modesty of the reporter compelled him to refuse to treat a lady in such a manner, but the singer said: "please kick me and give me a good hard one." "What for?" inquired the news fiend. "To give me good luck in this country," the contralto said. — The reporter complied with her wishes, giving her a swift kick, whereupon she joyfully thanked him.

We had a nice letter this week from J. R. Jenkins of Corona in which he says that four of his race horses were taken to California and won in every short race in which they were entered. On the return they won in Arizona and more recently they won at the Midland, Texas, Fair. The horses are now on their way to San Antonio. Mr. Jenkins has some young colts to train in the spring.

Carrizozo P. T. A.

meets this evening, Friday, Dec. 6, at 7:30 p. m. Everybody welcome.

Billy Gallacher—Your renewal received. Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins were visitors from Capitan this morning.

Mrs. F. E. Richard is in Albuquerque, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cooper, and forming the acquaintance of her new grandson. Mrs. Cooper is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Richard.

The windows of Ziegler Bros. present a decided holiday - appearing spectacle, being the handiwork of J. M. Beck.

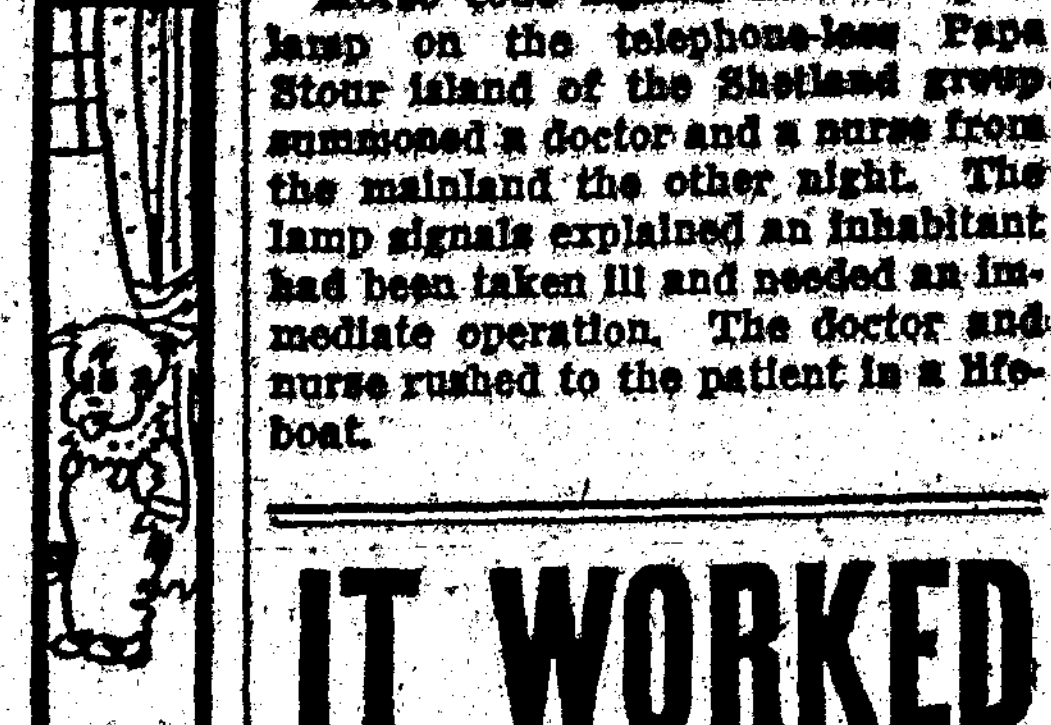

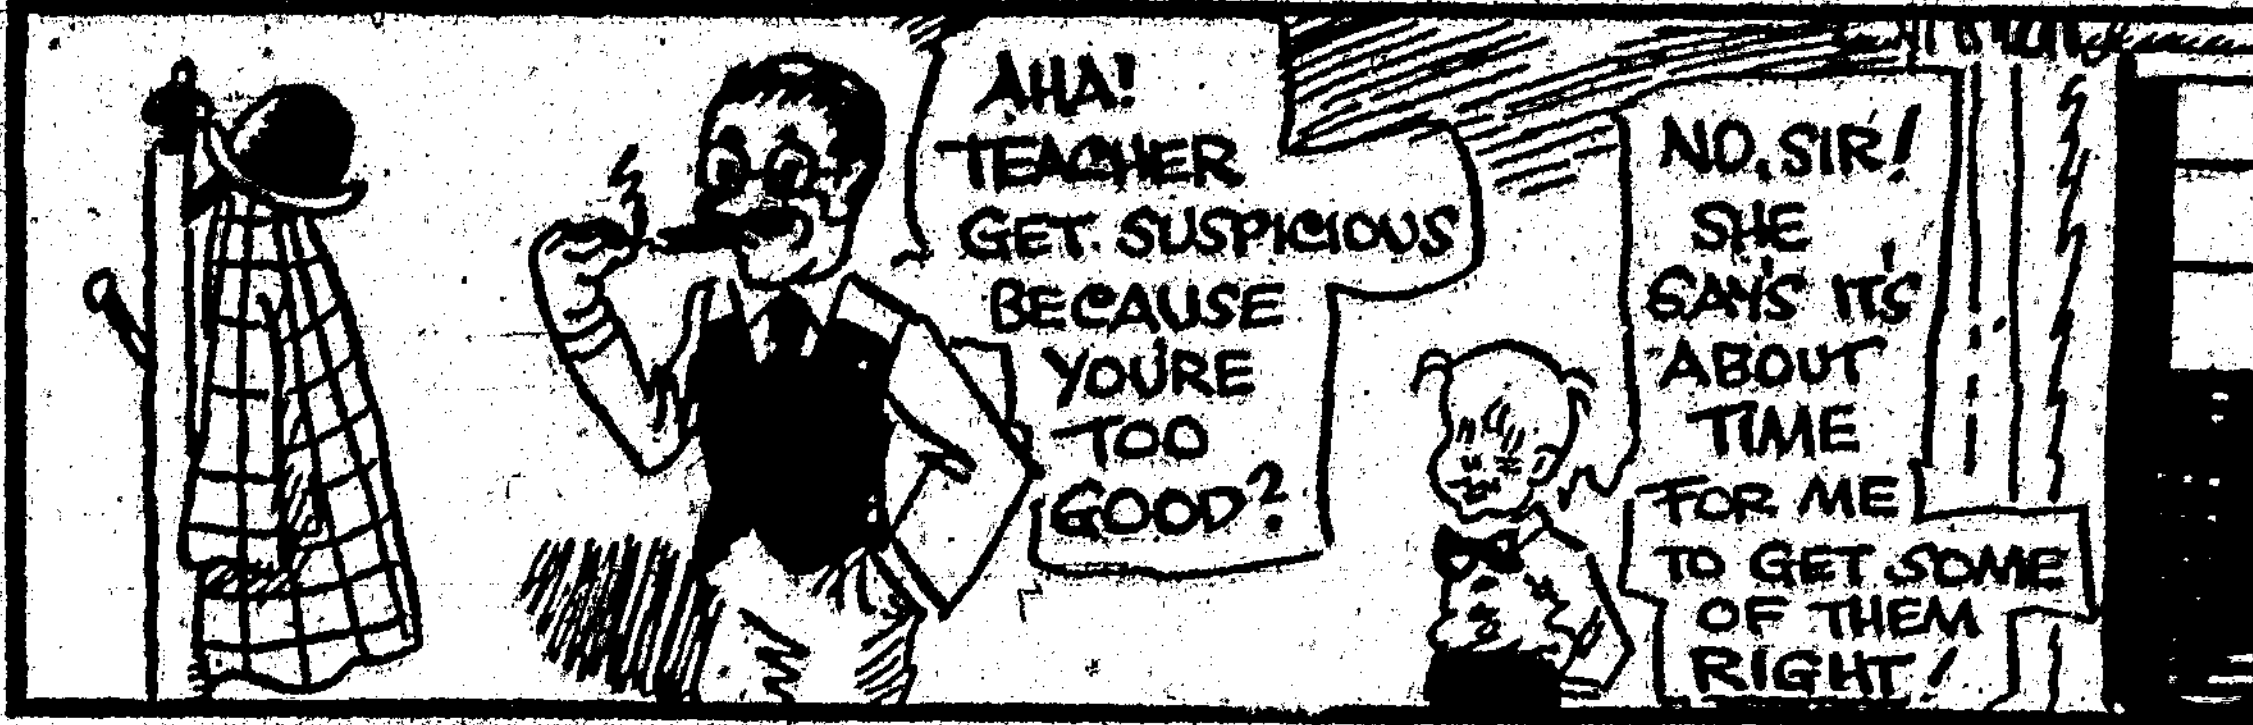

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richard—Much obliged for your subscription.

The town is extremely fortunate in the promise of a visit by a distinguished gentleman who calls himself "The Man in the Green Shirt." This celebrity will be in Carrizozo on the evening of Dec. 12.

Messrs. Gus Grossmiller and Park were business visitors from Coyote this morning.

Self-Help Leaders Going to College

New Institution to Provide Proper Training.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—A new college to train leaders for the self-help co-operative movement has been established here.

As their laboratory and clinic, the students are working in the Santa Barbara county co-operative industries, a local co-operative which has more than 1,000 members...

Director of the new college is Dr. Ralph Scanlan, for the last several years professor of social science at Santa Barbara State college.

Calls Need Paramount.

The need for properly trained leaders for the self-help co-operative movement, said Doctor Scanlan, "has become increasingly apparent to all who have watched the movement and who regard it as the most promising development in a walter of relief activities to solve the knotty problem of the economic rehabilitation of our unemployed."

"Hundreds of self-help co-operatives have been started throughout the country during the last few years. Many have failed, after a burst of enthusiastic growth. According to a federal survey, the collapse in a great majority of cases was due to a lack of competent leadership."

"Land and equipment are essential in the productive activities of the cooperatives, to mix with the labor and skill of their members, but equally important are leaders who can show people how to work together to earn their own living and thus get out of the relief rolls.

"It is the purpose of the new college to train these needed leaders, teach them the technique of co-operative enterprise, build up their cultural backgrounds in the applied arts and the applied sciences of well-being, give them a rounded practical experience in the model local co-operative and send them out into the state and nation to assist in the rehabilitation of the unemployed."

Get Actual Experience.

Students spend their afternoons working in the various sections of the co-operative on a revolving plan to gain a varied experience. They also attend round-table meetings of the planning committee, held Monday, Tuesday and Friday evenings, as well as the Saturday afternoon meeting of the government board.

Class work occupies the morning. There is a course in the technique of co-operation and the management of co-operative enterprises, under the direction of Hjalmar Rutzbeck, director of the Santa Barbara county co-operative industries and formerly of the division of self-help co-operatives of the federal government.

Danish Farmer Solves Case of Lost Chickens

Copenhagen.—A sheep which prefers chicken to grass was found by a Danish farmer near Hjoerring. The farmer had noticed that his chickens were disappearing one by one, and after a careful watch came to the conclusion that the one sheep he had on the farm was the thief. To prove his theory, he drove some hens with their chickens toward the sheep. The sheep waited until a chicken was within striking distance and then seized it in its mouth, eating the bird up with evident relish.

This Factory Makes Beggars "Invalids"

Madrid.—A factory for making beggars "invalids" has been discovered here by a Spanish journalist who lived for a month on the streets of Madrid, as a beggar. An apparently one-armed beggar introduced him to this factory of synthetic injuries, which is run by a man who was formerly a sculptor, but now makes a comfortable living by fitting healthy beggars with infirmities. His work consists largely of creating the appearance of one arm, or one leg, but he can also give his clients "blindness."

CAN WE AFFORD ANOTHER WAR?

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

In his book, "The Economics of Recovery," Mr. Leonard Ayres of the Cleveland Trust company at Cleveland, Ohio, writes: "The lesson of this depression is that we cannot afford any more great wars." True. A prevailing and rather persistent notion argues today that war brings prosperity. If we had another great war, all securities would increase in value and the produce of the soil like wheat and other grains would rise to fabulous prices. The fallacy of this argument is at once apparent when we consider the fact that the aftermath of the last great war was the depression through which we have been passing. In this same book Mr.

Gives Gay Touch

A breezy little cape of checked hilton tweed is a gay and warm addition to the wool dress or suit. Here it is in dark blue and white with matching blue velvet collar and is worn over a navy blue tweed suit.

Ayres writes, "The depression is one of the major consequences of the war." The total cost of the last great war was upwards of two hundred billion dollars, shared by all the nations involved. An indebtedness so staggering is to leave ruin in its path; bankruptcies, wrecked fortunes, unbalanced budgets and economic failures. Yet in spite of this clearly defined evidence, some persons still insist that war brings prosperity.

Let us remain sufficiently sober in our judgment to ask, can we afford another depression? Surely we cannot. Then we cannot afford another war.

The economic consideration, however, is not the most serious aspect of the case. The loss of the man power of our country distinctly forbids another war. Ruined homes and broken hearts with a corresponding loss of "morale," even in spite of organized efforts of relief, do not argue for prosperity or for national security. One of the most important views, expressed by some men in high places of responsibility, is their apologetic attitude for having persuaded others to a favorable aspect of the last great war. In some of their published addresses they frankly apologize to the "dead soldier" whose life was sacrificed on the battlefield of the last war.

Since the recent war has left nothing but ruin in its trail, we are asking in all seriousness, just how safe is our western civilization when the modern weapons of warfare have supplanted the gun and sword with air raids, poisoned gas and diseased germs. We frankly admit we cannot afford another war if we want to preserve what is left of the culture of our civilization and save for posterity the soul of America.

Culture or reason, can be so refined by the highly educated in the last degree, as to almost reach the point of severance from spontaneous life.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

AUTUMN is one of the seasons when colds flourish. Many of these can be eliminated by attention to little things. So it is wise to take precautions. Colds, if light, are merely annoying but when severe may result in weeks of illness, sometimes accompanied with danger, and again resulting in a prolonged term of feeling miserable and run down, minus any danger element.

Whether the cold is severe or not it is contagious or infectious enough for an entire family to get it, one after another, or practically the same time and not in sequences. Great precaution has to be taken to avoid this annoying occurrence.

The change of season is reputed to be largely responsible for the prevalence of colds. This means that one should be on his guard to suit warmth of clothing to hot and cool weather. Also, as even a temperature as can be kept, should prevail in houses. Avoid having rooms too hot, as well as allowing them to be too cold. A medium heat during the days when there is sunshine to temper the atmosphere and an increase of it when the sun goes down and the evenings get chilly. Extra heat in the early morning is necessary also. The adapting of indoors heat to outside conditions helps to ward off colds.

Outdoor and Indoor Life. One of the dangers of taking cold is found in the change from a life in the open during vacations, and the confinement within four walls when work is resumed in the autumn. The body has become inured to the exigencies of outdoor elements. It has to readjust to indoor conditions. Therefore when it is possible, keep out of doors. It is one safeguard. Sleeping warm, and protected and having windows open to admit the pure outer air is another precaution.

And whether indoors or out seeing that the body is kept sufficiently warm, neither over protected and uncomfortably hot, nor without sufficient protection and liable to get chilled. With adults this should be their own concern, but with children mothers have the responsibility, and they have to keep an eye on the youngsters when playing lest they discard outer garments when they get hot instead of cooling off less suddenly.

As for guarding against taking colds from one another in a family, one way is for the person with the cold to sleep alone, not even in the same room with others. Another is the careful use of handkerchiefs to prevent them getting in the hands of those free from colds.

A person should always sneeze into a handkerchief, lest germs escape into the air. The use of paper handkerchiefs which are burned after using is an excellent idea.

The Way to Happiness. Satisfaction in life is seldom felt when a person is continually idling away time. Restlessness seizes such an individual. This is the urge to do something which will be of genuine worth. Those who are inclined to envy persons who, because of sufficient incomes, have leisure to do whatever they choose with their time, do well to consider this side of the matter. To follow the line of work one has chosen is really a privilege. To be employed in some worthwhile business is a satisfaction. To be of use to those one loves is a blessing.

Even when jobs are not entirely congenial, a person has the compensation of realizing he or she is a self-supporting individual, and this is gratifying. Or it may be that the person is not only doing this, but is contributing to the needs of the comfort, or both, of one or more other persons. Could idleness bring any such satisfaction?

The zest of recreation is lacking unless the pleasure is in contrast to every day experiences. When a person is being diverted by continual "good times," there has to be great diversity and after a time the rounds of pleasure pall. Dissatisfaction with life comes, and one is in a vortex of conflicting ideas. The wish to be continually amused is at war with the desire to do something real.

Happiness is an elusive elf, and is not to be coaxed. He flits with pleasure but abides with contentment.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives. MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation. Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all. Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Gloom Is Seasoning. Gloom is the seasoning which gives joy its savor, just as failure is the salt which provokes the appetite for success.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Mrs. F. E. STEWART, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, and Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for December 1 EZRA'S MISSION TO JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-16; 2:1-12, 31-32.

GOLDEN TEXT—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him. Ezra 1:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Bringing Gifts for God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ezra's Long Journey.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Helped.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Purposeful Prayer, and Courageous Action.

1. Who Ezra Was (7:1-10). A priest (v. 1-5). He was from the line which was to stand between God and the people. The leader of the first company was Zerubbabel, a man of military governor. The great need now was for a religious leader, for the people had gone far from God, as was seen from the noble reformation which Ezra effected.

2. A ready scribe (v. 6). He was a teacher of the law of God.

3. His high ambition (v. 7-10). He set his heart to seek the law of the Lord (v. 10). He set out definitely with the purpose to know God's Word. No one who purposes in his heart to seek the law of the Lord can fail.

4. He set his heart to obey the Lord (v. 10). He was not only concerned with knowing God's Word but obeying it. God's Word cannot be known in its fullness by the intellect; it must be experienced. An essential qualification for a teacher of the Bible, a preacher, or Sunday school worker, is obedience to God's Word.

5. He set his heart to teach in Israel God's statutes and judgments (v. 10). He not only had a love for God's Word but a desire to impart it in the hearts of others.

6. Ezra's Commission (7:11-26). He went forth backed by the decree from King Artaxerxes. The king gave him a copy of the decree which authorized him to lead a company back to Jerusalem. This decree empowered him to:

- 1. Collect funds (v. 15, 16); 2. Levy tribute (v. 21, 22); 3. Appoint magistrates and judges (v. 23); 4. Execute penalties (v. 26).

7. So great was the king's confidence in Ezra that he delegated all these powers to him. For this great favor Ezra lifted his heart to God in thanksgiving (v. 27, 28). He was mainly concerned with the fact that he was to beautify the Lord's house and acknowledge that God had put his purpose into the king's heart.

8. The Company Which Returned With Ezra (Ezra 8:1-20). This company was comparatively small, only 1754 males, but including the women, children and servants there were perhaps 5,000 or 7,000 people.

9. Before proceeding on the journey Ezra was careful to find out as to whether any of the Levites, the ministers of God, were with them (v. 15). He knew that the success of their enterprise depended upon the spiritual condition of the people. Temporal blessings and prosperity of the individual and the nation depend upon the people's attitude toward God.

10. Ezra's Prayer and Fasting (8:21-23). The first thing that he did was to seek God's guidance. The reason Ezra sought the Lord's help was that as far as possible he desired his mission to be free from human dependence. He did not minimize the dangers attending his journey, but since he had assured the king that the hand of the Lord would be upon all for good who sought him, he was ashamed to ask the king for a military escort to protect them from the marauding Arabs. His desire was to prove the reality of God's help, as God's honor among the heathen was at stake.

11. The Successful Journey (8:24-32). God heard their prayer. The treasure entrusted to them was great. Perhaps the entire value of money and sacred utensils was nearly five million dollars. Ezra's caravan to go through a country infested by these robber bands carrying such an amount of money was most perilous, but Ezra knew that God was able and would protect them. Observe:

1. The care and honesty (v. 24-30). The money was weighed into them at the start and was to be weighed when turned over to the authorities at Jerusalem. The incentive to honest and strict accounting of the trust was that they were holy men and were entrusted with that which belonged to God.

2. Their safe arrival (v. 31, 32). Some four and one-half months were required to make the journey. God brought them safely to their destination, thus proving that he is faithful to those who put their trust in him.

Perfect Love Perfect love is distinguished by the character of its enjoyments. It craves the spiritual, the holy and Divine. Its enjoyments are purely religious; they are sought by prayer, reading the Scriptures, pious meditations and acts of Christian duty and usefulness. The enjoyments of a pure heart are sober, rational and unvarying.

Objections Nothing will ever be attempted if all possible objections must first be overcome.—Johnston.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted BY WILLIAM BRUCKART NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—Several times in these columns I have adverted to criticisms that have been made of the Constitution and have reported the nature of attempts to obtain amendment of that document which is as old as our nation itself. I have reported to you likewise how President Roosevelt, himself, had hinted, if he has not said frankly, that the Constitution ought to be amended so that some of the policies for which he and his New Deal stand could be made operative. I have called attention as well to an apparent assurance that there will be a political campaign battle next year on these questions.

Now, because of developments within the past few weeks, I propose to discuss another phase of these attacks on the Constitution and their concealed purpose. Frankly, I cannot avoid the conclusion that many of the criticisms of our Constitution have as their main objective the clipping of wings of the Supreme court of the United States. I am convinced that many of the demands for amendment of the Constitution to permit broader latitude by congress are nothing more nor less than a disguised move to take away some of the independence which the court has and which, in my opinion, it ought always to possess. Further, I have no doubt that these "springs from within" represent the activities of those individuals of whom there are thousands who are not in sympathy with our form of government. So, if I am to serve my purpose as your observer in Washington, I would feel short of my duty were I not to say that in the election of the next congress lies the answer whether we will retain our Constitution and our traditions as a republic or whether we will lapse into some form of state socialism or of a proletarian government akin to that of Russia.

It was back in 1904 that the late Chief Justice Edward Douglas White—

Supreme Court

Confederate soldier—felt it necessary to make a public observation about the work of our highest legal tribunal. At that time there were certain attacks and criticisms being heard, none of a direct nature, to the general effect that the Supreme court followed the majority opinion of the nation's population. There were likewise veiled remarks that the Supreme court attempted to usurp power which was not its own. Strangely, present-day criticisms and attacks have had much the same flavor. To those of that day, Chief Justice White said:

"No instance is afforded from the foundation of the government where an act which was within a power conferred, was declared to be repugnant to the Constitution because it appeared to the judicial mind that the particular assertion of constitutional power was either unwise or unjust."

I have heard, and no doubt you have heard, assertions by unthinking people to the effect that since the court has held some New Deal laws unconstitutional, it was simply old-fashioned, outdated, or as Mr. Roosevelt said, its decisions were taking us back to the "horse and buggy days." Of course, anyone who has observed the Supreme court; anyone who has studied its precepts and examples; anyone who has considered the soundness of its logic and philosophy, cannot help reaching a conclusion that the Supreme court is not now and never has been an agency of government that is susceptible to the effects of rabble rousing or is influenced by suddenly developed waves of public opinion. It has consistently adhered to the principle of interpreting laws and administering justice without regard for the effect of its decisions upon the political plans or aspirations of individuals or groups.

I do not believe that a drive to limit the power of the Supreme court or use it in any other way than as the Constitution's drafters intended will be successful. Many people with whom I have come in contact, however, anticipate a drive of serious import. It may be that they wish to see it or it may be that they believe our Constitution is not sufficiently flexible and that we can hardly change the Constitution without changing the power of the Supreme court. However that may be, it does appear that the time has arrived for those who would be Americans and who would have America last as a Republic to be on their guard and to know before they vote for members of the house and senate whether those members are going to support and defend the Constitution, the Supreme Court and the things for which the Constitution and court stand in our national life. It is a non-partisan question; it is a non-partisan issue, and I think it is of as much importance as any question before the American people today.

All of this is highly important because of pending cases in the Supreme court. I need only recall to you that there are before the court for adjudication cases involving the validity of the Agriculture Adjustment act, the right of the federal government to control labor and employers as it has done in the Guffey Coal bill, the program of government in business as represented by the creation of the Tennessee valley electric layout and the sales of its product in competition with private industry, and four or five others of lesser consequence. I think it is generally agreed that the court will hold some of these legislative policies to be unconstitutional. Certainly, legal opinion is thoroughly divided and some of the lawyers must be right in their guesses as to the court's decrees. In that event, there will be disappointments. Those officials who have sponsored the various programs and projects that are now come into question will suffer because their pride will be hurt. The next step, a result that always obtains, the disappointed ones will attempt to find a goat on whom they can lay the blame. The goat undoubtedly will be the Supreme court but the general reverence held for the court will not permit open attacks upon it. Instead, these disappointed ones will seek to accomplish their purpose in another way, namely, by changes in the Constitution that will curb the power of the court. It will not be the first time that this has been done or that drives against the court have taken place. Proposals to change the power of the court by constitutional amendment or otherwise occurred in 1823, 1823, 1868, in the 1890's and again in 1923. Fortunately, congress rejected those proposals in every instance. It is to be hoped that congress will do it again.

Now, we have a total of four proposals in congress designed to accomplish changes in the power of the court. Probably the most important of these is that by Senator Norris of Nebraska who advocates a constitutional change that would give the Supreme court exclusive power to pass upon constitutional questions of law, and to pass on those questions within six months after enactment of the legislation in question.

On the surface, this would appear to be a meritorious proposition but I have found, in discussing it with men equipped to analyze the proposal, it contains some elements of grave danger. If such a provision were operative at the present time, for instance, it would be easy for some of the brain trust to make it impossible for the court ever to have an opportunity to declare the act constitutional or unconstitutional. The course that was pointed out to me was this: By the expedient of allowing a new law to be inoperative through non-enforcement for a period of six months, its terms could never be brought into question. If the administrative official did not seek to enforce the law and bring violators to the bar of the court within the six-month period the law would go on the statute books until repealed by congress.

Senator Norris likewise has argued that the Supreme court should never be allowed to declare an act unconstitutional unless two-thirds of the nine justices were in agreement in that regard. He has bitterly opposed rulings of the court which were decided on a five to four basis; so it seems the Nebraska senator may have a beautiful theory that could easily go off at a tangent when applied to humans.

Most of the other proposals now in congress will get nowhere in congressional consideration and, therefore, reference to them will be omitted. It remains as a possibility, however, that the next election could bring in enough rabble-rousing demagogues to put through resolutions proposing that the Constitution be amended. Of course, those resolutions from congress have to be adopted by the 48 states but it has always been the case that if proposed amendments to the Constitution are checked in congress the major battle has been won.

I do not know, nor do I care to predict, how the farmers of the country will react to a decision by the Supreme court holding AAA unconstitutional. Certainly, they will be disappointed but whether this disappointment will result in a concerted movement by them to amend the Constitution to permit operation of present AAA policies is a question only time can answer. There is this much that can be said, however, and it has no relation to politics: I believe they will regret it if they seek to open up the Constitution to amendments. If they do succeed, they will then find that all of the other interests in this country will be clamoring for changes and the result probably be a muddy mess.

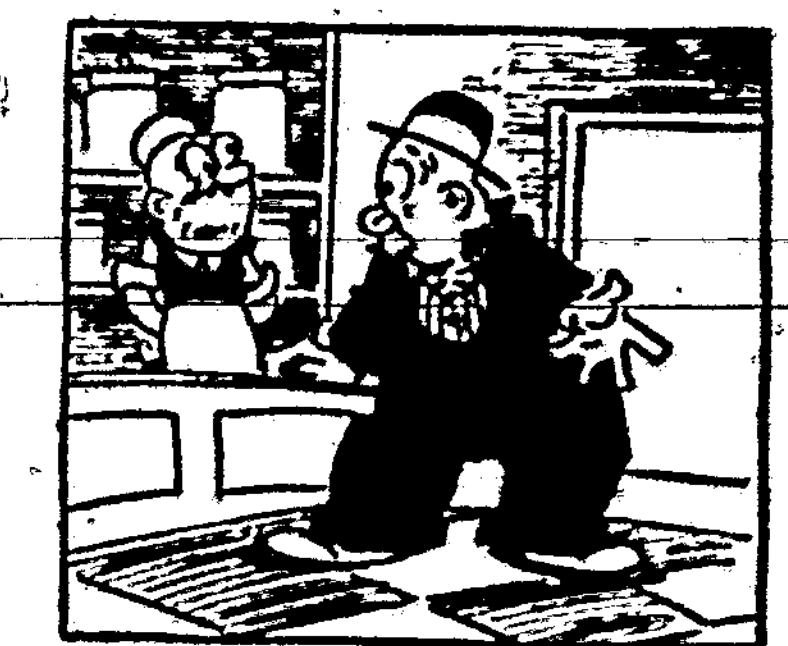

"Deadwood Dick" was Richard W. Clarke (1846-1930) and he was a frontiersman of the Black Hills district. Joining a party bound for gold digging in that region, he became a noted character, taking part in the Sioux wars, acting as express guard on stage coaches and aiding United States marshals in suppressing lawlessness. His alliterative name was popularized by dime-novel writers.

Possession Demands Our Service, Lost We Perish

The only hope of perfecting human relationship is in accordance with the law of service under which men are so solicitous about what they shall give. Yet people are entitled to the rewards of their industry. What they earn is theirs, no matter how small or how great. But the possession of property carries the obligation to use it in a larger service. For a man not to recognize the truth, not to be obedient to law, to render allegiance to the state, is for him to be at war with his own nature, to commit suicide. That is why "the wages of sin is death." Unless we live rationally, we perish physically, naturally, spiritually.

Twilight of the Lifeless Monuments

We are glad to see that good, sound sense, mixed with the milk of human kindness, has made its appearance among those who are sponsoring the memorials to men like Will Rogers—and others of national fame.

In olden times, money raised for memorials was always spent in the erection of statues, costly in nature and sometimes inlaid with precious stones—while in the very shadows of such structures people died of cold and starvation.

But things have changed now; we see that as in the case of the Will Rogers memorial fund, the money is to be spent for the care and treatment of crippled children and those who are afflicted with infantile paralysis.

Here will be a real monument to a man who was ever a true friend to the helpless little ones in need of aid. Will Rogers spent much of his valuable time in securing funds for helpless children, always heading the list with substantial donations.

Compare such a memorial as that which has met with the approval of the memorial board, with statues of cold stone with sightless eyeballs that hold out nothing to suffering humanity, save that of something to expose to the public view.

To our manner of thinking, when so much can be done with funds of that nature, to erect statues to men of note, is strongly akin to pagan idolatry.

Hero worship will always be with us, and in a certain sense it is all right, for without heroes, achievements would be impossible. We would still be living in a state of barbarism. But real heroes, could they be brought back to view memorials to their own fidelity and trust, would hail with gladness the ones in which the needy shared—suffering relieved and the glad sunlight of human kindness be allowed to shine in on darkness and despair. Then all hail to the living monuments that will bring gladness to human hearts. This is real advancement and progressiveness; let's not return to paganism.

Notice

To Contractors

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals for furnishing all labor and material for the construction of the Union High School Building at Capitlan, New Mexico, Public Works Administration, Project No. 8454, will be received at the present High School Building at Capitlan, New Mexico, by James H. Howard, Clerk of the Board of Education until 2 P. M. the 10th day of December, 1935, at which time and place proposals will be publicly opened and read.

The proposal will embody statements to the effect that the Bid is accompanied by a certified check upon some solvent bank in a sum not less than 5% of the maximum bid, or a bid bond equivalent to the 5% of the maximum bid as a proposal guaranty, payable to the Board of Education of Capitlan Union High School District, with the understanding that if the proposal is accepted, the bidder within ten (10) days after written notice to bidder, will enter into a contract and give a performance bond in the full amount of the bid for such work. In case of failure of the successful bidder to enter into a contract and give an acceptable bond, the proposal guaranty shall be forfeited to the Board of Education, Capitlan Union High School District as liquidated damages, otherwise it will be returned to the bidder within 30 days from the date of opening of bids.

The proposal will also embody statements that: (1) The Bidder is transmitting a statement from a recognized Surety Company that said company will furnish the bidder all the necessary bonds and insurance policies required on said project; (2) The bidder will furnish policies covering adequate public liability and property damage, workmen's compensation, contractor's contingent liability insurance, and a labor bond equal to the estimated maximum monthly payroll; (3) The bidder will abide by all the reasonable rules and regulations promulgated by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works in regard to work on the project; (4) The bidder is transmitting a record of experience, financial standing and general qualifications, and (5) The bidder is specifying the maximum number of weather working days to complete the project.

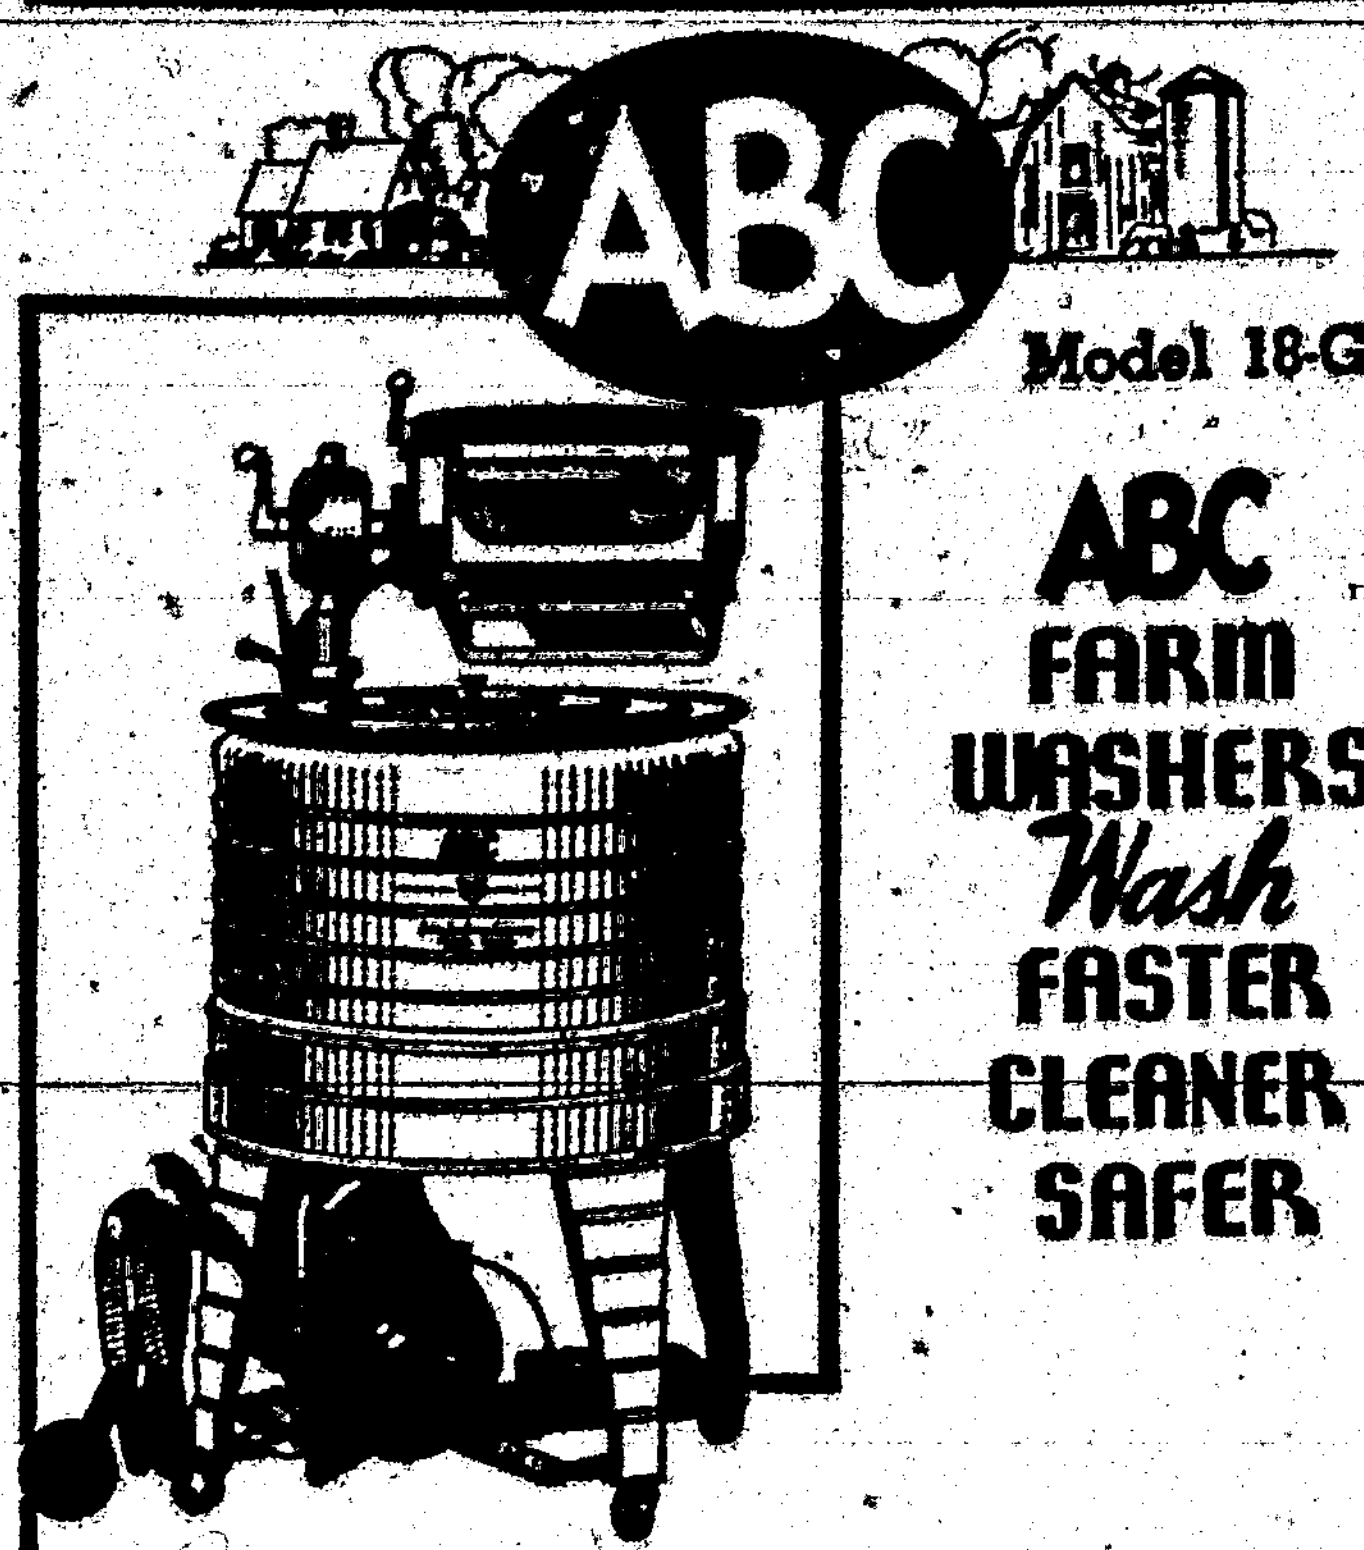

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rate prescribed in the instructions to bidders, and written in the contract documents accompanying the same, and approved by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on the project, and that the bids may be held for 30 days after opening thereof before finally making award.

Bidders desiring Plans, Specifications, and Contract Documents can secure the same from C. E. Carr & Co., Architects, Roswell, New Mexico, upon deposit of the sum of $30.00 which sum shall be remitted when the plans, specifications and said documents shall be returned in good condition on or before the date for the opening of bids.

Proposals must be transmitted in accordance with the Detail Plans and Specifications on the forms prescribed for that purpose, and the Board of Education for Union High School District, Capitlan, New Mexico, and the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to waive all technicalities.

Ordered by the Board of Education, Capitlan Union High School District, Capitlan, New Mexico.

A. N. Runnels, President of the Board. (Seal) Attest: James H. Howard, Clerk of the Board. N28

2,150 Pounds Amount of Food You Eat Per Year

You will eat a ton of food this year—2,150 pounds, the statisticians say. Milk, fluid and canned, and other dairy products, will account for half of this. (Milk is heavy.) You will eat about 150 pounds of meat, and about the same amount of fresh fruit; 150 pounds of fresh vegetables, not counting 150 pounds of potatoes.

In bread and cakes and breakfast foods and macaroni, you will consume 230 pounds of flour and cereals. Sugar, 102 pounds of it, is the next most important item. Of canned fruits and vegetables, you will eat 88 pounds, states Today.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are using for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the safest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this:

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

WATCH THE CURVES

By RICHARD HOFFMANN Copyright by Richard Hoffmann WNU Service

Following his father's bitter criticism of his life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically penniless but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Craddock, middle-aged Gino Kerrigan, sister Anastasia, a man; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crank, he starts his journey. Barry's reliance annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes an axe, but he is unable to make a cutting of any size.

Kerrigan's eyes danced merrily under their half-mastoches. "You're sure the torque hasn't taken charge?" he said. "Wouldn't like to stop off for a cold shower somewhere down the line?"

"Stop for nothing, sub," said Hal. "I want the Mississippi, what Ring Lardner jokingly called the Father of Waters. It is out here somewhere, isn't it?"

"Was last time I came through," said Kerrigan, the sparkle of his look laughing with and at Hal's.

Hal had a glimpse of Barry's face: her eyes, unpreoccupied, gave him brief, intimate approval, and his heart sang higher.

As each vista gave way to another level run over closely farmed country, Hal grew impatient for that comical to the rim of a long plateau which he conceived would reveal the Mississippi, flat and blue and broad, lying infinitely off toward the veil of the horizon on either hand. Then, after they had settled down to what seemed another whole country of unwatered farmland, Kerrigan took the dead cigarette end from his lips and leaned forward.

"The old fellow," he said quietly; and he added, as if he meant it to be all very casual, "Here, let me treat you to your first Mississippi crossing." He reached into his trousers pocket, jingling change.

They went out on the narrow track road, each slanted girder flicking a gentle ache at them, and neither Hal nor Kerrigan spoke. Halfway across, Mrs. Pulephers' voice bustled suddenly into the car: "Why, this is the Mississippi river."

"It is," said John, as if she'd waked him out of guilty reverie.

"Is it, Mr. Kerrigan?"

"The original, mam."

Hal said to Kerrigan, "Remember Huck Finn and that slogger on the raft; the leaves of bread with mercury in 'em floating down and a cannon booming over the water from the ferry boat, to raise their bodies."

"Gad, sir, wasn't I just thinking of that?" said Kerrigan—half startled, half pleased, as if it were a joint experience which he thought Hal might have forgotten. "I never cross the old rogue without thinking of it. I swear—just that minute—I was somewhere else but there."

"Then there's more than one mind-reader along," said Hal drily, a faint check upon his full pleasure.

"Meaning?" said Kerrigan.

Hal gave a brief shake of his head, aware of Crank sitting behind him, retrospectively aware that he had been there all afternoon. Hal had the curious impulse to recall what he'd thought and said in that time, as you might try to remember what you'd done in a room where you find you've been watched. Then he caught himself and shook off the quick discomfort. Crank might sit there as knowingly, as pleased with private, drowsy thoughts as he liked; he had nothing to do with Hal or the Mississippi or this moment.

Then Kerrigan tossed up a thick finger to indicate the Burlington shore where their bridge ran over the railway. "That belongs," he said. Four white ex-Fullman cars stood on a siding, a patiently ankered curvature to their wooden spines, broad roofs smoothed down over open-end platforms, window-arches gay with marbled glass. Along their white sides, gold letters were painted: "Davenport Bros. Great World's Fair Show."

"Gosh," Barry called from the back, "wouldn't it be fun to see their show?"

"It would," said Kerrigan. "I'd be fun to see it and stow away in those cars afterward."

"It'd be fun," said Hal, "to do almost anything." And in saying that, there was a separate sharing of this moment with both Barry and Kerrigan, a thankful comfort that could put away the unpleasantness of a minute ago—almost put it quite away. The night was near now, and his coming to Barry, to the rest of fear from her bravely, and to his hope at Fortune in the world.

Jenna rolled in luscious undulations, the road lapped over them like the heeled foot of a careful cat, the coming leaps visible from each rim. The man went behind a long, fogged sled in the west, carrying it with white indifference and spreading a fan of uncounted maple leaves. They greeted the black river and, rolled on over the sled and their toward the shining sea. If there had been a chance of far-reaching him, Publisher to not so with the facilities of a little place called Agency, Hal and Kerrigan would have stopped there, for the taste of its name. But Ockawa was close beyond, and they found clean tourist cabins in a grove of trees beside the Des Moines river, where the hopeful, snug squeaking of crickets in the grass made the gathered evening seem cooler.

The proprietor said that, given time, his old lady would throw together as good a feed-and-better, and cheaper, than any they could get in these places uptown. Hal took Hasputin to a garage and supervised his priming for tomorrow. And when he got back, the others were halfway through a meal that had even such intrepid appetites as the Pulephers' working uphill. The full bureaucracy that Hal had carried through the afternoon still refused to take account of hunger. He did the swift best he could, so that the proprietor's old lady shouldn't be hurt; but when Barry pushed her chair back from the long table and squeaked her lips at Doc, he abandoned the business abruptly and followed her outdoors.

Fresh eagerness exulted in his blood, tried to lift his body with a hundred different exclamations, urged him to leap and shout out his joy for these hints of immortality. He stopped her walking with his hand, turned her to him and held her while he said, "Barry, we've got to go somewhere—quickly."

In the light from her cabin under the trees, he saw that her smile was slow, the droop of her eyelids slow, weary. "Hal, we can't," she said, as if he had been urging her for a long time. "I couldn't—couldn't tell you what I have to. I'm too tired to be strong. I shouldn't tell you it's hoping, wishing, praying about you that's made me so tired, but I want to tell you. Because I—I—Hal, we can't go: I've got to go in." She moved a little, as if she were going to let her head go against his shoulder. But she stopped herself, and her low, lovely voice murmured, "My darling."

"You don't have to tell me anything," said Hal, shocked by the quiet decision that was trying to rob him of this time he had so surely looked for: "all you have to do is listen to me, to the things I must tell you. You can rest, listening to them—just up there, a little way, by the river. We'll sit against a tree, and when you want me to stop, I'll stop and you can sleep on my shoulder, I promise, if you tell me to. I won't speak again—not a word, not even what keeps on running and trembling in all my nerves, muscles, heart, tongue, everything: I love you. I love you so that—"

"Hal, don't, oh, don't, please, Hal, darling." Her free hand gripped his arm hard, and he couldn't tell whether it shook to enforce what she said or whether the desperation that shivered under her voice was in her body, too. "Barry," said Hal in a voice quiet. "You've got to listen. Why do you frighten yourself? Why do you try to frighten me—before you've let me say what I must say, before—"

Her exclamations was a whimper of fear, and she turned her frantic head toward the cabin, "Sister Anastasia!"

The door opened on the neat, lighted room of raw boards, with the nun's silhouette in the oblong. "Yes, sweet?" she said, her modest voice tranquil and soothing as the sound of a little wind among sleeping trees.

"Sister, I just wanted to know you were there. I'm coming now. Please wait for me." She bowed her head as if to see more clearly the joining of their hands in the dimness. "Good, night, my darling," she said hurriedly. "I'm a coward—a coward, and I'm so sorry."

She had her hand away from him, and quickly she was at the nun's side in the lighted doorway.

"I'll bet you," said Kerrigan, and the smoking cigarette end in the corner of his mouth looked short enough to burn him, "I'll bet you if we went in to town we could find a something would knock us out from under our hats."

"I'll bet you we couldn't," said Hal, justly, the echo of Hasputin's long drooping in his ears again. "I'll bet you two something we couldn't."

"Sir, a wager," said Kerrigan. "Do we ride or walk?"

"Walk," said Hal. "It's not far."

In spite of the fact that he had no use for it, he felt the soft, impermanent refreshment under the stars. It was to him as if, out of a world murmurous with simple expectancy and unentangled pleasure in the hushed rustling of the night, he were singled out for traffic with devotions and complications. Put into plain order of words, it was all so straightforward: he loved Barry; she indicated by every look, every gesture, every shading of her low voice that she was, at the least, ready to love him. He there they were—or should be. If she wasn't sure of herself, she could tell him so; if there was a more definite barrier against her coming to him, it could be spoken, faced, and—if not demolished—then circumvented. That was so simple. Barry was made of stardust, as beautiful as her golden head, her blue body, were lovely; yet she can draw him, let him to a darkness, in-deniable complexity in which he felt the restful necessity of fear and remembered the presence of something important, something that seemed to prevail in search out of the future, vanishing into it again when he looked within to see his shape.

Golden Phantoms FASCINATING TALKS OF LOST MINES

SECRET OF THE BIG HORNS

A POUCH full of "yellow bullets" which really were big gold nuggets, a "tree trapper" of the old times, and a fur company's greedy representatives: mix these well and add plenty of bad whiskey, and you have the story of another lost mine.

"Old Man" LaPondre, as they called him, was a stubborn old man. Years of free trapping had made him independent as a woodchuck, and he felt beholden to no man. He had found his "yellow bullets" lying in a creek bed, and there were plenty more where these came from. Just where, the creek with golden sands flowed, he would not tell. He wanted his little triumph first of course. He could imagine going to St. Louis, showing the nuggets, and creating a sensation of the first water. Why, he would be rich enough to buy the American Fur company, lock, stock, and barrel! The idea was balm to his soul.

And then, he planned, he would come back. He would leave St. Louis as ignorant as he found it. If these "yellow bullets" were what he thought they must be, he would cash in on them, buy some of the things he wanted, and come back to Fort Pierre. Then he would ask his friends to join him, and they would head toward the Big Horn and wealth.

Many a man had found gold in the Big Horn, thought Old Man LaPondre. But most of them had lost out, after all. Well, he wasn't going to lose out.

"Stick around, boys!" he said to his friends at Fort Pierre. "I'll be back in the spring, and we'll get out and pick rocks out of the creek." And he winked portentously, and chuckled at his little joke.

So his Dakota friends "stuck around" rather closely, for they believed the old man. And he, in high feather, went down to St. Louis to find out what was what. He found out—the nuggets were valued at almost unbelievable prices, and he, "Old Man" LaPondre, suddenly assumed the most wonderful importance.

The American Fur company, for instance, grew interested immediately. They offered to buy LaPondre, out, or to pay well for information, which would give them a chance at the location. But, "Nope," said the old man. "I'll keep what I've got. Me and my friends get first show." And so stubborn was he that no one could pry a word out of him which might betray his secret.

He was going back in the spring, he was, and his friends who waited at Fort Pierre should have their show. He had no more chance to get away with it than he would have today. Flashed with the dreams of his vast wealth waiting beneath the waters of that mountain creek, he "let go all bolts," and began to celebrate prematurely. He was aided, of course, by the lower element of St. Louis, who clung to him and fawned, and also by men who hoped to loosen his tongue and get the secret location. These men, though they were agents of the fur company, were working for themselves, for if they could discover the secret, they would never pause to tell it to anyone else. They kept the old man filled with liquor—nose too good, that it might take effect sooner. And take effect it did, but not as anyone had planned—for Old Man LaPondre grew ill, sank into a coma, and died. With him died the secret of that crystal stream paved with gold, and to this day no man knows where to look for more of those alluring "yellow bullets."

THE RABBIT-HOLE TUNNEL

IN STEVENS GULCH, near Strontia Springs, Colo., was a deposit of ore which the Indians knew of in the very early days. The men mined the ore, the women crushed and washed it, and the gold was placed in turkey quills and taken as far East as the Mississippi river to trade with the white men.

Some years before the Civil war, two young men from St. Joseph, Mo., came West and found this Indian mine. In some manner they managed to get an ox wagon into the gulch, and this they loaded with very rich ore, which they took home and sold. They made a map of the location, marking on it where they had hidden their tools.

In 1861, they started back to the mine, Near Devils Head, peak they were murdered, supposedly by the Indians whom they had despoiled.

A relative who had their map went it to Henry Jackson, a negro, who had lived in the region during Indian days. Jackson recovered the tools from the place marked on the map, but he could not locate the mine.

In 1911 a young man named Johnson found some promising ore in the gulch which, when crushed, and panned, showed a rich color. He noticed a rabbit go into a hole of some brush, but at the time he did not pay much attention. Later, when he heard the story of the lost mine, he returned and tried to find the tunnel, but it was no use.

Evening Silhouette Goes Classic

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS THE exquisite and lovely evening gowns which our creators of fashion have designed for the coming winter social season, go on parade, one is forcibly reminded of art and sculpture, of the paintings of old masters or of figures in classic drapes and pleats sculptured in marble or colorfully frescoing ancient palaces and cathedrales of ancient Rome.

It is in these new fashions for formal occasion which are to grace opera and ballroom and smart functions galore, as if Italian saints were descending from old-master paintings, in flowing robes of rich velvets that are girdled and jeweled in dazzling splendor. Then again it would seem as if Greek goddesses were stepping down from their marble pedestals in garments that are draped and pleated along sculptured lines of grace and beauty. And again oriental princesses clad in harem-skirted costumes with softly draped and richly bejeweled blouses seem to have come to life in array of gorgeous splendor. Verily "art in dress" holds sway this season.

The soft crepes, the supple superb velvets, the shimmering, glamorous gold and silver cloths, the diaphanous chiffons and dainty silk sheers, all lend themselves beguilingly to the present movement in costume design which calls for floating scarfs, huge wing sleeves, and fluttering side pleatings that go all the way around the skirt or are captured in cascades of exceeding grace.

At all times in these classic gowns the feeling of simplicity is maintained, even though a resplendent note be sounded in richly jeweled girdles or golden sandals or sumptuous evening jewelry. See the group of evening gowns that are herewith illustrated and be convinced that the very loveliest after-dark fashions are playing up sophisticated yet classic simplicity to the nth degree of perfection.

The eye-impelling gown to the left which so unmistakably bespeaks inspiration of the Italian renaissance is a Jeanne Lanvin creation. This glamorous robe is of magenta crepe, its rich beautiful tones matching up to the dark vibrant coloring in old master paintings. It is full, falling in generous folds starting from massed shirtings. The wide girdle and armlets are of cutout gold kid. The rich magenta coloring of this dress speaks eloquently of the present color trend, which stresses the rarely beautiful dark reds and purples and green that have come down to us through the ages via Italian art.

Hammered silver cloth fashions the adorable gown centered in the group. The glittering fabric falls with exquisite grace from the gathered waistline and is draped in a harem hemline. The wide belt worked in multi-colored jewels is a climaxing touch of artistry. Silver sandals are worn. The graceful wrap which this silver-gowned lady has in her hand is of royal blue velvet. It is fashioned with a surplice that ties at the back.

To the right in the picture, sculptured-like draping distinguishes a Grecian gown of classic beauty and simplicity. Sheer gray silk that looks like wool is edged with embroidered bands worked in coral, gold and turquoise beads.

Style notes which tune in to the classic trend tell of low-heeled Grecian sandals such as the smart Parisienne takes delight in wearing. The sari scarf is another item of interest. It is of tissue metal-shot weaves and sometimes it is richly embroidered with sparkling sequins.

Soy Beans Cause Soft Pork Losses

Oil Meal Produces Faster, More Economical Gains, Expert Says.

By Prof. Electric Bull, Associate Chief in Meats, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

A record crop of soy beans this year will mean heavy losses from soft pork if farmers attempt to use the whole soy beans for fattening hogs. While whole soy beans cause soft, flabby pork that is of inferior market quality, soy bean oil meal used as a supplement for corn in hog rations will make firm pork. At the same time soy bean oil meal will produce faster and more economical gains than can be obtained with whole beans.

It is suggested that farmers trade any whole beans which they would feed to hogs for soy bean oil meal, thus securing a valuable farm-grown protein supplement for their corn and at the same time avoiding the risk of soft pork losses.

It is to the advantage and profit of farmers to do everything possible to avoid soft pork, since neither shippers, feeders, meat packers, exporters nor consumers want such meat. The soft pork problem may become so serious that "soft" hogs will have to be discriminated against. A few loads of such hogs from any one shipping point would be sufficient to give that territory a reputation for inferior pork, with the subsequent danger of price penalties to producers.

An added inducement for using soy bean oil meal instead of whole soy beans is the fact that it produces just as good gains as tankage and linseed meal and at present prices is more economical than these two supplements. Experiments have shown that 14 pounds of soy bean oil meal and four pounds of alfalfa meal are equal to the standard corn belt supplement of eight pounds of tankage, four pounds of linseed meal and four pounds of alfalfa meal. At present prices the soy bean oil meal would be the more economical feed.

Other experiments in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio have demonstrated that soy bean oil meal used to balance corn produces 10 to 20 per cent more rapid gains than whole soy beans, shortens the fattening period one to two months, saves 10 to 20 per cent of the feed and makes firm pork of high quality.

Corn and soy bean oil meal fed at the rate of one bushel of corn and nine pounds of soy bean oil meal with alfalfa meal makes a good ration for fattening hogs. However, a mineral mixture should always be fed when soy bean oil meal is used in swine rations. A good homemade one can be mixed from two parts ground limestone, two parts steamed bonemeal and one part salt.

World Wheat Supply Is Cut 330,000,000 Bushels

This year's world wheat supply will be about 330,000,000 bushels less than in 1934-35, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics report on world wheat prospects.

Production is estimated at about 3,430,000,000 bushels and the world carryover outside of Russia at 800,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,230,000,000 bushels. Production last year was 3,450,000,000 bushels and carryover 1,100,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,550,000,000 bushels. The short crops this year will reduce world carryover by the end of this season to between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000 bushels, or not much more than normal world carryover prior to 1923.

Despite What?

Why don't they make a thorough survey of men over one hundred years old and find out why they live so long? Science ought not be content simply to point at and wonder.

LONGEST FIRE-BREAK

The Ponderosa Way, said to be the longest fire-break in the world, is nearing completion. J. H. Price, writing in American Forests, reported recently. It extends lengthwise through a major part of California, from the Pitt river in the north to the Kern river in the south, a distance of 600 miles. It varies in width from 50 to 200 feet, and follows the lower edge of the Ponderosa pine-belt, protecting the pines from fires starting in the foothills below.

METAL CLOTH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Glittering silk tulle makes this long-sleeved dinner gown. It is typical of the trend toward elegant fabric that is fashioned with utmost simplicity. The influence of the Far East is traced in the tall turban also fashioned of silk tulle and the long-streamered sash as a vivid hue, that falls in a cluster of fine side pleats to the hemline of the skirt. Note the new low-heeled sandals.

FUR BLOUSE IS NEW WRINKLE IN STYLE

The fur blouse is a new wrinkle in the fashion picture. They've used fur for everything else this season, from coat sleeves to hats, and now the fur blouse emerges as a swish accessory for the velvet cocktail suit.

It's done in white galyak, with a black velvet ascot and belt. The blouse is a brief peplum style, with short sleeves and a yoke.

Matching it is a white galyak top-coat, with breast pockets and a belt, and a little Cossack turban of matching fur.

Nothing could be more effective for those in-between occasions when you can't wear formal evening clothes, but still want a slightly dressy costume.

The fur vest, of black galyak, also is seen with some of the season's newest suits. It's effective with suits in the new renaissance tones of wine and green, with matching black accessories.

And if you want to do the thing up brown, you may have a matching muff of galyak.

Small fur ascots, styled to match the fur turbans and muffs of the season, are seen about town.

Elaborate Trimmings Now

Feature Shoes for Evening

The trend in evening shoes is toward elaborate effects, according to a recent report from Paris. They not only show original shapes and graceful straps, inspired by Greek sandals, but are made of unusual materials. One house is showing Balmain shoes in a glass-like acetate fabric from Colombia.

Velvets Hold Sway
For dresses, coats, suits and hats, non-removable velvets will hold sway in all forms.

Wheat and Rye Seed Need Special Scab Treatment

Because of the epidemic of scab on small grains this year, the disinfecting of winter wheat and rye seed is especially important this fall, says Dr. J. J. Christensen, plant disease specialist, University Farm, St. Paul. The scab organisms also cause rotting of the seed, seedling blight, and root-rot. Seed treatment is also important for the prevention of stinking smut of wheat and of smut and ergot of rye.

Before treating, seed should be thoroughly fanned to throw out light and diseased kernels and to eliminate smut balls and ergot bodies. When rye contains considerable ergot, fanning may not be enough. Immersing the rye in a strong brine will bring the ergot to the top where it can be skimmed off. The brine should contain 40 pounds of common salt to each 25 gallons of water. Afterwards, the rye should be washed in water to remove the excess salt.

For either rye or wheat, the treatment recommended is dusting with New Improved Cercosan at the rate of one-half ounce per bushel. Treated grain should stand for at least 24 hours before planting and may be stored for months if desired.

Mixed Tree Stands Best

It has been proved that locusts are about the easiest trees to grow in areas where a quick forest growth is needed for erosion control. Being of the legume family its long roots not only bind the soil but soon enrich it. But if such an area becomes infested with the locust borer the young forest is quickly destroyed. However, damage by the borers is found to be greatly lessened in areas where tree stands are mixed. In reforestation denuded areas, government forestry experts advise, hardwood trees adapted to local soils should be mixed with the locusts to produce a better leaf litter and to insure a tree stand if the locusts should succumb to a borer attack. It is pointed out that coniferous or evergreen trees do not usually thrive among black locusts.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Around the Farm

Soy beans, recently utilized by industry, have been grown for 5,000 years in China.

Live stock of farmers in the Irish Free State who do not pay their annuity taxes is seized and sold at auction.

A notable thing about alfalfa in Canada is that there is seldom, if ever, a carryover of the seed from one year to another.

Cheerio! How are you this fine day? A doctor asked a local man how he felt, and he replied, that he never felt better in his life. "Well, that's too bad," laughed the physician.

"Now that the deer hunting season is over, why not have a contest between the crack shots of Carrizozo and the entire County," quoting a citizen.

A travelling musician was in the office the other day and remarked "One may have more fun playing his instrument than John D. Rockefeller can with his check book."

Senator Chavez seems to have a hard time in convincing the veterans that he's their friend.

Japan demands of China that she turn over the murderer who killed a Jap soldier who was on guard duty. But General Sling Dung Hi says "Ah Fuey."

Dr. R. E. Blaney—We beg to apologize. The doctor slipped out of his office the last day of the deer hunting season — and returned poco pronto with a nice buck, killed on Church mountain. The deer was a 4-point, weighing about 100 lbs. dressed. Those steaks were delicious, doctor; many thanks. So we'll have to change the misprint of last week to "Dr. Blaney DID kill a deer."

While deer is the subject of discussion, let us say that Amigo John Harkey won the gun at the Kelley's Sport Shop offered as prize for the largest buck killed in Lincoln County. The deer John killed weighed 211 pounds.

The large building containing the Rolland Drug Store and the Kelley Hardware & Sport Shop has undergone pebble-dashing this week.

Advises from the Italo-Ethiopian war zone are to the effect that during the last major conflict, the battlefield was strewn with spaghetti.

"Betting in New York state for the presidential campaign of '38 is even money that Col Knox will be elected if nominated," utters a local professional man.

Carroll Hines and his associates are quite busy collecting advertisements for the Athletic Boosters' Association of Carrizozo this week. Presumably, the ad will appear in the next issue of The Outlook.

The Governor has made so many trips to Washington that rumor is afloat to the effect that he may move there after the next election. Clyde says he is "gonna run like hell" in the next gubernatorial campaign. No doubt — as the small boy says. But it is not the best of English for a Governor to use, perhaps we're wrong.

We note that Landon, the Republican candidate for the nomination for president, may use the dry platform in his campaign. While Roosevelt sticks to "temperance," Landon will presumably settle matters so no drink is obtainable except bootleg. This subject has been discussed pro and con before by different writers who think they are in the know. But, believe it or not, Yours Truly never drinks anything stronger than lemonade (and I don't crochet or do fancy-work, either.)

Hoover — Borah rival candidates. Let's hope there won't be any division in the rep party.

Adios; we'll be seeing you soon, no doubt.

Historic Bar

Fort Stanton Caduceus:

The bar in the Buckhorn Cafe of Bill Holmes, Capitan, is older than Capitan itself. It is a dark mahogany bar, which was originally in an old time wild west saloon at Ogalala, a mining town up toward the Capitan gap. Some old-timers report that they have seen as high as $1.00 pass over the bar in one evening. Several initials are carved upon it, and were its full history known, perhaps a number of famous western characters could be connected with it.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans of the CC Camp left for Duane, N. M., last Friday immediately after receipt of word that their twenty-month-old nephew, Kenneth Robert Evans, had drowned in an accident.

ANNOUNCEMENT

It is with pleasure that I return to Lincoln County!

And I invite you to come in and see the Newest Store in Carrizozo!

I am pleased to announce that J. A. (Andy) Wright and V. L. (Van) Cruse will be associated with me and we are going to strive To Please You.

We will operate for CASH because we buy for cash and there are so many people in Carrizozo Deserving of Credit

That it would take a large capital to carry charge accounts. I can buy for less by paying cash and will pass the savings along to you in order to make it interesting for you to trade at this store.

We will have only the best in Packing House Beef and Pork and we recommend that you try our Nuckoll's Bacon.

J. D. "Jeff" Herron,
"We Strive To Please"
