Out-of-the-Ordinary

STRANGER THAN FICTION

A. L. Burke

The old saying, "Man is not without honor, save in his own country," met with a decided reversal shortly before Christmas, when Rev. Santa Claus of Marshall, Mo., went to New York. Being in a strange city he called up central and the operator, who gave him "information," he said, "I'm a stranger. My name is Santa Claus. Please connect me with one of your leading newspapers." The operator giggled and said: "Get off the wire its too early in the morning for jokes. Go to a filling station." He then went to a hotel. The clerk looked at the signature and called the house detective, to whom he identified himself by letters from his home town chamber of commerce and got a newspaper office over the phone, when the following conversation took place: "Hello! this is Santa Claus of Marshall, Mo." The man at the desk answered by saying: "How do you do and nuts to you, I'm Alka Seltzer of the Radio. Pardon the advertising and go to bed!" He then entered a bank and produced a traveler's check. The cashier said: "Go to the next window and Lydia Pinkham will wait on you." If you think the above is untrue or in other words, if you think that yours truly has lied, just write the chamber of commerce, Marshall, Mo.

The Christmas seemed to have caught up everybody, even to the burglars. In Chicago, four thieves looted a tavern, held the watchman prisoner, but after Christmas carols from a nearby street, they released him, gave back what they had taken and twenty dollars more. At another place, a burglar entered a home and crept up stairs to where he saw a feeble light burning. As he neared the door, it opened and a man came out. The thief drew his gun but the man raised his hand and whispered: "Be as quiet as possible. Go over the house and take what you like, but make as little noise as possible, for my little daughter is dying in the next room." It was Christmas Eve and bells were tolling the approach to the midnight hour. The thief burst in to tears and rushing from the house he murmured, "I have a little daughter of my own."

After awakening from a four-year sleep, closely resembling death, Victor Cleave of Folkestone, England, joined his family to celebrate Christmas. He was shell shocked in the world war and in 1931 he began to doze over his meals. Then he fell asleep. Doctors worked in vain to arouse him and in order to keep him alive, they had to inject nourishment into his body. When he awakened he failed to recognize his wife and children. He can recall being in beautiful lands, among strange people and where silver rivers wandered over sands of gold. He begins life anew with a tired look on his face.

Place Names Take Strange Disguises

Spelling Altered to Fit Way They Are Pronounced.

Washington.—"Every godfather can give a name," according to Shakespeare; but keeping a name, is often a problem. Places have a harder time than people in preserving their names uncorrupted, according to the National Geographic Society.

"If the spelling of names continues to be altered to fit the way they are pronounced, descendants of persons now living in Gloucester and Worcester, Mass., and Sioux City, Iowa, might even come to spell them 'Gloster,' 'Wooster,' and 'Soo City,'" continues the bulletin.

"English pioneers in the United States encountering French names frequently pronounced them in such 'hot potato' fashion that the original form is scarcely recognizable. Thus Luray, Va., was once La Reine; Rickreall, Ore., was La Creole; Salinas, Okla., came from Salisson, meaning 'salt provision.' Names Are Garbled.

"Rivers, streams and creeks fared even worse than towns and cities in having their names garbled. In Arkansas, the Chemin Couvert stream became the Smackover.

"Spanish names, as well as French ones, have proved stumbling blocks. Among the familiar is Key West, Fla., evolved from Cayo Hueso, meaning 'bone reef.'

"Indian names have proved tongue trippers. The Indian name lawi-saquik, 'middle creek,' for a village and creek in Pennsylvania has become Loyalsock. Connecticut is the way pioneers pronounced the Indian Quonotacut, one interpretation of which is 'the river whose water is driven in waves by tides or winds.'

"Names are legion that have been spelled according to sound. The plateau known as the 'aux arcs' by early French settlers, later became Ozark. 'Aux Arcs' has been interpreted variously as referring to a French trading post among the Arkansas Indians, or to bends in the White river, which flows through that region.

"Slurring of combined names now and then forms a new name. The swift Rapidan river in Virginia is said to have been first called the 'Anne' for Queen Anne of England. 'Rapid' was added, referring to its current.

Blame Clerical Errors. "Sometimes a clerical error is responsible for an odd name. Glasco, Kan., derived its name when a postmaster misspelled Glasgow. The classic example of a place christened erroneously is Nome, Alaska. Cartographers applying epithets to places on a map of Alaska ran out of new names, and marked a cape tentatively Name? A draughtsman mistakenly copied it as Cape Nome, and so it has remained.

"While scores of place names become peculiar after being buffeted about for centuries, others are odd to start with. Among the queer ones Golald, Texas, formed from part of the name of the Mexican hero, Hidalgo; and Yreka, Calif., formed by transposing most of Bakery, Yewed, Okla., is the reverse of Dewey, in whose honor it was named.

"Another group of names are the hybrid pieced together out of scraps of several existing names. A well-known patchwork name is Texarkana, Connecticut has Hadlyns (from Haddam and Lyme) and Winsted (from Winchester and Barchamsted). California claims Callistoga (from Callifornia and Saratoga) and Calexico. Kansas contributes its share with Grenola (based on Greenfield and Kanola) Kanopolis (parts of Kansas and Centropolis) and Kanorado.

Personality

"The fellows raze me because my photograph won a prize, but it wasn't any beauty contest and I sure can use the money," emphatically declared Eugene Novik of Woodbridge, N. J., awarded the Parents' Magazine grand national prize of $250 in the Children's National Photograph contest. This thirteen-year-old boy's photograph of all the 99,000 coast to coast outprints was chosen as best reflecting personality and character.

Queer Malady Throws Doves Into Tailspin

Knoxville, Tenn.—An unusual malady which causes the birds to "go into a spin and fall to the ground" has been afflicting doves here.

Leo McClain, nurseryman who grows seed for doves, said the cause of the birds' strange behavior had not been determined and that it is the first of its kind he has seen.

"A dove will be flying around normally when suddenly it goes into a spin and falls to the ground dead," McClain said.

He said the bird usually had a lump in its throat and its jaw appeared to be jacked.

Was the Pacifist Right? By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The appeal for volunteers in the late war was met not only by a large number of young men who enthusiastically contributed their services, but by a much smaller group who steadfastly refused, for conscience sake, to bear arms. At the time these men were branded as pacifists and were looked upon as cowards, shirkers, unpatriotic, and unworthy of the privileges of American citizenship.

The sobering and painful experiences through which we have passed since Armistice day may cause us to inquire seriously: Was the pacifist altogether wrong? The experiences of the last decade have led many to interpret conditions in a far different light than during the crucial years of the war period. We are now inquiring in all seriousness: Was the pacifist right? Let the Unknown Soldier speak. Were his voice audible, we might hear him thus speak—I gave my life to make the world safe for democracy. It is no more safe today than when I went overseas. For what purpose did I fight? Whom did I serve? Was it all a hideous mistake that I made the supreme sacrifice? What is our honest and unprejudiced answer? We might, also, hear him speak like this—Never again. Edith Cavell was right; patriotism is not enough. The only way to put an end to war is to refuse to fight. Let the forces opposed to war organize to resist militarism. You cannot settle the question by mere argument, but it can be settled by the creation of a better social order, composed of right-minded people who in peace organize for the purpose of abolishing war.

Is the pacifist right when he tells us we must take pacifism out of the clouds of sentiment and make it a part of our practical politics? Is he right when he steadfastly and conscientiously affirms that war is wrong; socially, morally wrong, and therefore, has no place in a Christian civilization? Is he right when he affirms his intolerance with the theory of non-resistance to evil, and at the same moment hastens to argue that there are other ways of settling international disputes than by the shedding of blood?

The causes of war are primarily economic and social. These problems can and must be solved on the basis of an authorized system of Christian ideals. There is no other alternative. We must fight war with principles and not with swords. It is the task of no mere conscripted group, but of all of us who claim the right and privilege of citizenship.

The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IT IS well at this season of the year to be careful about draughts of air in a house. There are times when it is desirable to have the wind blow through rooms and fill them in every nook and cranny with the invigorating and restoring pure air. At night windows should be open, but there are few persons who can, with safety to health, sleep in draughts. When a person can, there is actual pleasure in feeling the air circulating. And breathing deeply of the health-giving ozone. I find this true with myself, but also, I realize how very few persons can endure the air currents without detriment.

There is a crude and homely saying that indicates the average attitude of persons towards draughts of air. It runs like this: "When you feel the air blowing on you through a hole."

Make your will, and take care of your soul. Immediately, you realize that the idea of illness lurks in such a situation. The person in the draught may take cold or become so chilled that illness, with suggestions of danger, may ensue. The doggerel stanza is a warning which it is wise to heed. It also indicates that the person in the draught is in an inclosure and not out-of-doors.

Indoors and Out. In the house there are air currents caused by open windows or open outer doors, sometimes from open inner doors when one room is cooler than another. The tendency then is for the colder air to waft into the warmer and more volatile atmosphere. Out-of-doors a person is seldom in a draught, but may be in a gale of wind. Little children playing on the floor feel air currents that do not rise higher. When a child is in a play yard, or pen, there should be a blanket, or thick rug, covering the inclosed space. The play yard should be positioned in some corner of a room free from draughts or near enough to the heating unit for the warmth from it to offset cooler currents.

Weak as a Curative. An aged person or one who is not in good health should be protected from draughts, which may be a necessary accompaniment of airing rooms. Or it may be that these persons are so susceptible to air currents that they feel them when others do not. Screens are a satisfactory aid in protecting them from draughts. By careful management of the screens, and by providing comfortable seats or sofas for patients where they can rest without being in danger of air currents, their comfort is increased. Then danger from draughts is eliminated entirely or reduced to a minimum.

When affairs are disquieting because of discordant thoughts or exciting times, pleasant or unpleasant, and when one gets a feeling of dissatisfaction with life, nothing is more restorative than to plunge with a will into some work which should be done. The fact that something is being accomplished is mentally steadying, and the use of the ferment of power, which is created is relieving and physically steadying. Unless something restorative is done, a tension is created that may make a temper snap, or nerves break down. So it becomes important to have the steadying element of work to keep temper and nerves normal.

While nature requires a certain expenditure of energy in work it also demands that it be done with proper moderation, not in speed but in quantity. Hard work is not necessarily unbeneficial unless the work is physically straining, nervously draining or mentally upsetting. To work with all one's energies, without overworking, promotes physical and mental well-being. Growth in these fields results. This realization of gain is stimulating. But just as an athlete has to grow gradually by exercise into power and skill, never overworking, so must those in other fields graduate their work to suit their strength.

Work in itself is not harmful, but beneficial, even though a person is not strong. But it must be done in amounts to conform to the energy of the person doing it. To do nothing is to lose power, to do little may be all that is possible when health is poor. But in each instance performance of work is steadying.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regular doses till Nature restores regularity.

Grandmother Believes Health and Wealth Responsibilities

Asserting that their grandmother is "old-fashioned and ignorant of modern methods of life," the two grandchildren of a famous financier publicly asked for her removal as their guardian.

The shortcomings of which these children of sixteen and seventeen complain on the part of their grandmother are not with reference to knowledge of financial affairs.

It is not her faults as an investor of which they complain in asking to have her removed as their guardian.

No. The matters in which she is "too old-fashioned" doubtless come closer—in their opinion—than that! Probably she is old-fashioned in such annoying matters as health. At her age she may be foolish enough to imagine that at sixteen and seventeen one is still growing mentally and physically, and that wholesome living is of paramount importance. Probably she cannot see the benefit of burning the candle at both ends. Faced with a choice between dancing and sleep, she is probably unreasonable enough on occasions to rule out the dancing.

And perhaps she is old-fashioned in money matters. Having been accustomed to wealth long enough to have a true sense of values, she probably objects to extravagance. Too old to see clearly, she probably feels that merely having money is no reason for dissipating it. Indeed she may even feel the possession of wealth as a responsibility, and try to train her grandchildren to self-respecting handling of it from that point of view.

Being old-fashioned, she may feel, too, that having money is not enough to bring one complete satisfaction in life. She may be urging them to sow the seeds of future usefulness—and therefore content—and happiness—in study and serious thought about taking their place in the world as the grandchildren of a man who from humble beginnings became the ruler of millions. That, of course, would seriously interfere with their preoccupation of having a good time.

Yes, the grandmother is doubtless old-fashioned in all of those ways. And they are ways which can be very annoying when one is sixteen or seventeen with plenty of money and no dearth of people who are quite willing to let one be one's own master.

Bright Colors Keep the Children on Safe Side

Dress children in bright-colored outer garments in wintertime for their own safety, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. While children should not play in city thoroughfares or even on country highways, because of automobiles, there are occasions when they have to cross streets or when they try to retrieve balls or other playthings from the path of traffic. They must be taught caution, but they can be further protected by dressing them in bright, conspicuous colors which motorists can see from a distance.

Children like to wear gay colors. Those of nursery-school age choose them by preference. Those a little older are governed to some extent by what others wear, so it may be necessary for mothers to get together and "create" a vogue for vivid colors in outer garments.

Late Christmas Dinner

by Gertrude H. Walton

IMPATIENTLY Louise shoved the steaming pans and kettles into the warming oven. Looking down the driveway as she had done for almost two hours, she exclaimed:
"Of course Horton called that no might be late. But what is keeping sister and Hal, and Aunt Jen, Uncle Jim, Betty and Clyde? Six people invited to a Christmas dinner and all of them late! Accident? Surely not all of them in a heap along the roadside unless each bumped into the other hurrying because they are late to our dinner!" Louise was smiling even before a honk sent her outside.

"Drive Me to Lorton Crossroads. Maybe We Will Meet Sister."

and Hal. Maybe they will know why the others are delayed. Sort of a news center at the crossroads, anyway."
"Fshaw! Don't worry. They probably think you will not have dinner promptly at 1 o'clock."
"But I told each one that we would have dinner promptly because I thought you boys might wish to hear the program at Baxter. Do you suppose they have all gone to the festival—before coming here?"
"That's it, exactly! Let's go, too! Then we can all come home together to a grand Christmas reunion dinner," Horton interrupted.
"Come home to cold turkey, dressing, and potatoes reunion dinner, you mean," Louise snapped.
Hurrying home and eating lunch, Horton, with Louise a bit reluctant, started for Baxter, where a special festival of Christmas music and drama, an annual community affair, for many years, between rival towns, would be presented at the Community Center playhouse. Prizes were awarded to best productions from the two towns.
"The guests must have misunderstood my letter. Whatever it is, they have all 'misunderstood together,' Louise whispered during applauding for the Hedgewood performers in which Horton blattered his hands, clapping for his home community.
He seemed unsympathetic to Louise's further peevish questions:
"But not one of our guests are here that I can see. Do you glimpse Uncle's bald head, or sister's fur, or Betty's red hat?"

His First Christmas

by Earle Hooker Eaton

RING up the Pole and telephone Without a moment's pause, Or by the wireless make it known To dear old Santa Claus, That Papa's Boy and Mama's Joy, And Sister's Precious Mite, While glad bells clang will gaily hang His stockings up tonight!

"Ting-ling! Ting-ling! Hello; hello! Is that you Santa, dear? Be sure your reindeer hear you 'Whoa! When you are passing here. What's that? You'll come and bring a drum, A jumping-jack and ball, And other toys for little boys? Dear Santa, you're best of all!"

'Tis Christmas morn, and to his shop Old Santa homeward flies; 'Tis five o'clock, but open pop The baby's roguish eyes. We're dead for sleep, but out we creep, And dress at once to get What Santa kind, has left behind For Toddekins, our pet.

From Pole to Pole there's surely not A babe more pleased than he, And how he crows, the happy tot, And gurgles in his glee. The jumping-jack, the ducks that quack, The drum, the horns, the ball, The chicks that peep, the horse, the sheep, He tries to eat them all!

On this his first glad Christmas lark, The toys with blocks he pelts, He makes old Noah wish the Ark Had landed somewhere else. A soldier blue he breaks in too, A puncture gives the drum, He fills the air with legs and hair, And then—he sucks his thumb!

The Sand-Man's surely come to town, And soft is mummy's lap; Clear up the wreck and smuggle down, 'Tis time to take a nap. Then rock-a-bye, close each blue eye, Rest, my darling, rest! (He's fast asleep, with baby sleep Hugged tight against his breast!) © Western Newspaper Union.

After the program Horton and Louise watched every means of exit for their guests, then hurried home, arriving at five o'clock. At sight of the left-over dinner, Louise sobbed:

"Never saw such a frost. What on Adam's earth could have happened? What have we—have I done to deserve such snubs?" She was almost suspicious that Horton had something to do with the absence of their guests. She leaped to the jangling of the telephone. Anything was better than silence—or was it?

"Ye—yes—yes—we'll be there—at once!" The receiver clicked.
"Horton, hurry. Someone needs you—at Herald's Corners. Hal called. No, Hal and sister are not hurt, but someone else. You run on and I'll stay to prepare beds."

"Horton, Hal, and Louise's sister soon arrived with a man, woman, and small child who had been buried under an automobile after being struck by a hit-and-run driver. When Hal found them, hours before, they were unconscious. After return to consciousness the doctor had consented for Hal to drive them to Horton's for the night, as no hospital was nearer than one hundred miles.

daughter-in-law, at exactly six o'clock! "We were determined to be on time for dinner," Aunt Jen called innocently.
"Yes, you are in time—to help nurse these injured strangers," Louise answered, trying not to look discomfited.
"Jim had too had a cold to go to the program at Baxter. So Clyde said he would drive our car and we would all come together. Clyde could not get away from the store until noon. We thought you would probably go to the program if we were not here to hinder during the afternoon. And we'd get here in time for your six o'clock dinner. Let us help make these injured ones comfortable. Or, we'll get the dinner on the table while you attend them." Aunt Jen rattled on.

"The date of the dinner's coldness seemed not to matter. One thing I've learned, that a cold dinner is no less palatable after eight hours, than for two hours' wait. It's all because of two times—two dates for dinner—12 o'clock—and six o'clock! Two things learned today!" Louise recited to herself the text of the letter sent to her guests, and as nearly as she could remember it was worded:

"Can you come for Christmas dinner? Come early if the men wish to go with Horton to the program at Baxter. We women will gossip the afternoon away until the men return. Dinner promptly then!"

"Dinner at six—for six late guests! But it all turned out right. The poor people were rescued by Hal's coming in the afternoon. Hal said that since he had the afternoon for driving he would leisurely drive by way of Herald's Corners to see the new viaduct just completed. You and I, dear, attended the program together. Uncle Jim needed a driver. Next time I'll make it plain which dinner hour to expect my guests—at one o'clock or at six o'clock on Christmas!" Louise smiled the next day after the injured strangers were on their way, and the guests had returned to their homes. © Western Newspaper Union.

Cheers for Calumet's New Low Prices—and perfect, never-fail baking!

"I never have baking troubles with Calumet—and I save, too!" says Mrs. J. C. Casky, 240 Avalon St., Memphis, Tenn.

"I get more than my money's worth when I buy Calumet," says Mrs. Nancy E. Williams, 499 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

"It's real quality at a saving!" says Mrs. E. J. Tobin, of Beverly Hills, Ill. "I've never had a baking failure with Calumet."

Why does Calumet give such "luck"? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl—a slower one for the oven. This Double-Action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening. Calumet is a product of General Foods.

New! Big 10¢ Can! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history... The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25¢! And ask to see the new, big 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

The Curse of King Tutankhamen

Whether the reader believes in curses, witches, or other things along that line, there is nevertheless a deep mystery surrounding the deaths of 22 of the archaeologists who were instrumental in opening the tomb of Tutankhamen.

After excavating and reaching the door of the tomb, they read the inscription or rather warning, that death awaited all who entered and disturbed the ancient King's remains.

Last of the selected crew, Dr. James H. Breasted, and one who had been the first to ridicule the so-called curse, passed away recently, saying that the talk was all "tommyrot." Strange as it seems, all the people connected with the opening of the tomb died of ailments which were beyond the power of the medical world to cure.

In the case of Dr. Breasted, he first went to some of the principal medical institutes across the seas, and receiving no benefit, he came to New York. The best physicians in that place shook their heads and acknowledged that the ailment was one of the most mysterious that had ever come to their attention—and they could do nothing for him.

Lord Carnarvon, head of the expedition, was the first to die by being bitten on the thumb by some strange insect which his comrades couldn't find after he was bitten.

The second was that of Richard Bethell, secretary to Archaeologist Carter, who committed suicide leaving a note saying, that he could "stand the horror no longer."

The remaining members of the crew died with different diseases until the last of the crew which opened the tomb had gone. We laugh when we are accused of being superstitious, but the fact that a crew of 22 men opening an ancient tomb, under a written warning of death to disturbers, all have died since 1923, causes one to think creepy things to say the least.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for December 22 MALACHI FORETELLS A NEW DAY

LESSON TEXT—Malachi 3:1-18. GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me, Malachi 3:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Best Promise Comes True. JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Kept His Best Promise.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Bringing in a Better Day. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparing the Way of the Lord.

(The lesson committee has provided as an alternative a Christmas lesson, using the text Matthew 2:1-12).

The subject of today's lesson is broader than the printed text. In order effectively to teach this lesson, the entire Book of Malachi should be surveyed.

1. The Base Ingratitude of Israel (1:1-5). God approached them with the tender affection, "I have loved thee." It was the burden of the prophet to declare this fact unto them (v. 1).

2. Against the priests (1:6-2:9). They were guilty of a. Profanity (1:6). Their profanity consisted in despising the name of God. To fail to honor God is to be profane.

b. Sacrilege (1:7,8). Their sacrilegious act was in offering polluted bread and blemished sacrifices. c. Greed (1:9,10). They were not willing even to open the doors of God's house without pay.

d. Weariness (1:12,13). Because of the absence of love, the routine of priestly duties became irksome. e. Not teaching the law to the people (2:1-9). Those set apart to teach God's law to the people have a great responsibility and God will most assuredly demand an accounting.

3. For ungodly marriages (2:11, 12). God's purpose in the prohibition of mixed marriages was that he might raise up a holy seed (v. 15). Marriage with the heathen would frustrate this purpose.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted BY WILLIAM BRUCKART NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Since it is only a few weeks until congress comes back to Washington for the second session of the Seventy-fourth congress, some of the problems which President Roosevelt must face have begun to take recognizable shape.

It is a very interesting situation. Some weeks ago, the President promised business a "breathing spell." No one knew at that time how long this "breathing spell" was to last nor did anyone know exactly what it meant beyond the President's verbal statement that his New Deal program was virtually completed insofar as legislation was concerned.

There can be no doubt that a large segment of business is emphatic in its demand that New Deal spending be reduced. That section of the country's economic life is determined to force New Deal plans for spending back within the boundaries of what business interests hold to be reasonable.

The budget cannot be balanced in the next year. Consequently, the government debt, now above $30,000,000,000, will be further increased. It means, moreover, that before long there will have to be additional taxes.

From the White House and from Warm Springs, Ga., where the President lately took his annual Thanksgiving rest, there came announcements, both direct and inspired, that the President was turning to economy in the government outlay.

Turns to Economy. The information, of an official character, indicated a desire on the part of the President to cut the ordinary expenditures of the government by $500,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936.

We have, as you know, really two budgets. The ordinary budget is like the budget that has been used since the passage of the budget and accounting act in 1922. It covers the running expenses of all of the established governmental agencies, provides for all field work and carries appropriations for payment of interest on the government debt and a bit or two for retirement of outstanding bonds.

It will be a matter then to which attention should be paid when the regular budget goes to congress and the President in his annual message gives some idea of what he proposes to spend for relief and recovery later on.

ular budget goes to congress and the President in his annual message gives some idea of what he proposes to spend for relief and recovery later on. The two must be taken together. Further, I believe if past practices are repeated, there will be White House requests for supplementary appropriations for the ordinary expenditures as well so that the total may not be disclosed for several months after congress meets.

Under conditions that always have prevailed, the political party in power has always avoided tearing down bureaucracy in Washington in an election year. The civil lists of the government include most of the local politicians on whom the party in power must depend in its campaign for re-election.

Thus, Mr. Roosevelt's task appears difficult. He will be seeking economy in government outlays in an effort to satisfy and reassure business which is calling for economy. At the same time he is under the necessity of holding his political machine intact as the vehicle upon which he will seek to ride to re-election.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho has been much in the news lately. He is indulging in a sport, or a game, he takes up once each four years. The date of this activity always coincides each time with the maneuvering that precedes the selection of the Republican Presidential nominee.

The woods are full of potential Republican Presidential nominees. Favorite sons are everywhere. In the midst of all of this stands the figure, somewhat bulky, of Senator Borah. He has given every indication in the last several months: first, that he is not a candidate for the nomination; second, that he is a candidate for the nomination, and third, that he has not made up his mind.

Having made quite clear that I am not informed as to Senator Borah's plans, I can fairly relate some of the things that have happened heretofore. I can recall for example that many times the Borah maneuver has had as their objective the establishment of a political circumstance for the senator that has enabled him to exert unusual influence on the Republican national convention when it came time to write a party platform and select the party standard bearer.

Mr. Borah is a master tactician in this regard. I know that some of the old-line party wheelhorses fear him and his tactics immeasurably. I have seen evidences of that fear during the last several months and I have no doubt that there will be more of it displayed in the months to come.

As astute political observers around Washington contend that the senator's outward flirtation with the question of a Presidential candidacy is nothing more nor less than a repetition of what he has done before. They argue that Senator Borah wants to dominate the 1936 convention of the Republicans and he is laying the ground work to that end right now.

Child Will Read Story That He Thinks Is Good

"Who shall define interest for another person, compounded as it is of the raw material of which personality is made?" queries a writer in the Parents Magazine, declaring that there is apt to be one of two reasons why a child does not like to read.

Howdy, folks. It won't be long now until the joyous Christmas tide. When we leave all petty differences (and politics too for that matter) aside and join Old Saint Nick in making merry.

Try The Outlook advertisers first while on your Christmas shopping tour.

We heard a broadcast over KSL in Salt Lake City direct from Honolulu about 10:45 Monday night of this week: It came through like a local station, atmospheric conditions being favorable for short-wave reception. An American orchestra played jazz (curses) a native Hawaiian ensemble sang "Aloha Oha," without which no Hawaiian program would be complete. And may we say that we've heard this song given a lot better in this country, for the prima donna had a voice that sounded like a fog horn. You are invited next Monday night to hear this program at 10:45 over Salt Lake City. From the land of gentle zephyrs, tropical moonlight and volcanoes. That's Hawaii.

Valuable Prizes at the Titworth Co. of Capitan
For a long period, about this time of the year, the Titworth Co. have been giving away prizes. This progressive concern offers this year a Cedar Chest, a Chair and $5 in Cash as awards. Details will be found in their ad appearing on page 8 of The Outlook.

"Yes," said a local business man, "I've had some terrible disappointments, but none stands out like the one that came to me when I was a boy — I crawled under a tent to see a circus and discovered it was a revival meeting."

An Oklahoma girl advertised for a husband and got him. The total expense for advertising, wedding outfit, etc., was $11.00. The husband fell heir to a fortune a short time later and they lived in ease and took a trip around the world. And yet some folks say that it doesn't pay to advertise.

Short sermon for this week—
In youth, there is always "tomorrow," the life ahead, always the thought that "before long I shall change my dreams to realities, my hopes to accomplishment and by achievement honor my father and mother."

A word to the wise people of Carrizozo and Lincoln County—
Patronize our advertisers; you'll find that it pays. And you can see what you're buying. Now, as Amos says, "Aint that Somepin?"

After seeing motion pictures of a lot of Halle Selassie's warriors in fighting uniform, we are of the opinion that Sally Rand would feel right at home over there.

Famous Sayings—It won't be long now!

A lasting gift — An oil painting of native New Mexico scenery. — At the Burke Outlook Art & Gift Shop. Also Christmas Cards; see them while the selection is complete.

When Grover Cleveland was president, a small boy was among his visitors. Cleveland patted the boy on the head, and jokingly warned him Not to become President of the United States. Who do you think the little boy was? Franklin D. Roosevelt!

So Adios — from the Land of Romance, Turquoise Sky and Perpetual Sunshine.
