

FORT STANTON NEWS

Dr. and Mrs. Porter returned Monday after having spent several weeks in Temple, Texas, in the interest of the service.

The School of Mines basketball team of Socorro proved to be our boys' superiors in the game at Capitan last Saturday night.

Bill Hale, Dr. Ech, Clarence Boyd and Sam Cox went down towards Carlsbad on a big duck hunt as a week end diversion. Needless to say, they didn't bag their limit, but it's not fair telling who killed ducks and who didn't.

Mrs. Boyd entertained Dr. Ech and Miss Squiers at a "ducky" dinner Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Rathman and daughter from Blair, Nebraska, arrived Tuesday evening to visit their son, Dr. Rathman and his wife. While here, they are living in one of Mrs. Fisher's apartments in Capitan.

The Misses Hazel Melaas, Ruth Kelley and Nellie Shaver of Carrizozo were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hendren last Sunday.

Miss Rose Harvey from the Marine Hospital in Chicago has arrived to take the place of Mrs. Halley, who was transferred to the Chicago hospital recently.

Dr. Trask, Commanding Officer in the Chicago M. H., was stationed at Stanton about 20 or 25 years ago, and although he has never been back, he has always kept a warm place in his heart for the place where he spent the first happy years of his married life.

Miss Minnie Black, who has been transferred to the Cleveland hospital after two years' service here, left Wednesday for her new home.

Roy Thomas, the CCC patient here, was pleasantly surprised Monday by a visit by members of his family.

The hospital is filling up again by victims of the flu epidemic.

New Siren

The new Siren whistle was tried out the first of the week. It is a loud-sounding siren and can be heard all over town (and then some.) The Fire Department, under Chief J. M. Beck, deserves commendation for this remarkable improvement.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of the Townsend Club in the Court Room next Monday evening, Jan. 21 at 7:30 p.m. Everybody cordially invited to be present. Come and bring a friend with you.

Edgar H. Johnson, Pres.
Frank J. Sager, Sec'y.

Mrs. R. E. Lemon will be the hostess to the Woman's Club of Carrizozo this Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Ada Grey entertained the Tuesday evening Bridge Club at the Carrizozo Eating House this week.

Jack Young and his "Harmony Boys" of Capitan will play for another big dance at the Carrizozo Country Club Saturday night, January 26. See the ad on page eight.

OUT-OF-THE ORDINARY

A physician at Austin, Texas, who had officiated at the birth of an infant, was surprised one morning after the event when he found a package on his desk containing 3000 pennies. A little note which said that the money was the result of several years of saving and it was for the physician's services.

In Burlington, Wis., recently, Jay Land picked up an old cancelled postage stamp which had blown against his feet. He traced it to a bale of paper that a junk man had removed from an old abandoned express office. He bought the bale of paper unopened and found it to contain many more cancelled stamps of pre-civil war period. He has already sold $150.00 worth of the old uncancelled stamps and he has made one more rare find that will bring him more than all the others he has sold.

The biggest fake ever pulled on the people of this country was what was called "The Cardiff Giant." In 1869 at Duke City, Iowa, a place where there is a large deposit of gypsum, sent a huge block of that substance to Syracuse, N. Y. It was taken to a farm near that city where a cunning designer carved it into a shape of a giant and had it buried 6 feet underground. For reasons which we readily see, a force of workmen was put to labor in excavating for a large building. They came upon the so-called petrified giant, supposedly a relic of a race of men that inhabited this continent ages ago. The figure was 10 feet, 4 inches in height and closely resembled that of a once live giant that millions of people paid from 50 cents to a dollar to see.

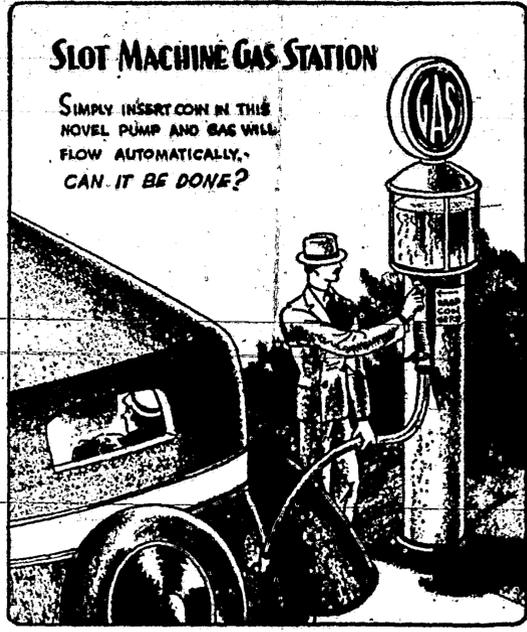

Not only that, but pictures of the fake sold at enormous prices. Finally, the truth leaked out when P. T. Barnum offered $150 for him which caused an investigation and revealed the fraud. P. T. said he was sorry, but the people like to be fooled anyhow.

After stealing a certain article from a Sherman, Texas, store recently, the thief came in with the comment "I'm returning the article; it wasn't worth the trouble I took to steal it." He then left the store as the proprietor watched him in blank amazement.

Unlike the old dump carts which would back to the edge of a fill and deposit dirt in leisurely fashion, the new ones on the $72,000,000 Ft. Peck project at Glasgow, Mont., go right down the fill to a depth of 30 feet or more, where it looks as though everything would end in a tangled mass, but the driver breaks one wheel, the truck pivots rapidly, spreading a portion of the load and follows by breaking a second wheel which unloads the truck and spreads without any further work. In that act, we'd think a bucking bronco saddle would work in pretty good.

At La Grange, Tex., a strange method by which 100 ducks committed suicide last week is a matter of record in the Texas state highway department. Flocks of ducks thought that they had spied water and it proved to be fresh asphalt used in surfacing a highway.

Fred Neighbauer

The funeral of Fred Neighbauer, aged 70, who passed away Jan. 11, was held last Saturday with the Rev. L. D. Jordan of the Baptist Church conducting the services and attended by a host of friends who had known him during his long residence here. The remains were interred in the local cemetery.

Frederick Neighbauer was born in the state of Texas, Jan. 1, 1865 and came to this section of New Mexico in 1885. The major portion of this time he was engaged in the stock industry. On Feb. 14, 1907, he was married to Mrs. Mary Corn Guise, who preceded him to the great beyond on Oct. 29, 1934.

Mr. Neighbauer, or as many of his old friends affectionately called him, "Uncle Fred," was a man whose friends were legion and his enemies, none. He was an ardent Christian gentleman, kind-hearted, generous and charitable. He was always ready with a kind word and was a living example of what a man should be. He leaves to mourn his loss, one daughter, Mrs. J. M. Caldwell of Hot Springs, N. M., and several grandchildren, to all of whom the sympathy of this community is tendered.

Carrizozo Beats Vaughn

Last Friday night, the Carrizozo H. S. Basketball Team defeated Vaughn at Community Hall by a score of 30 to 19, and on Saturday night, Carrizozo beat Tularosa by a 25 to 24 score. If you missed these games, you missed something worthwhile.

The attendances at the games have been disappointing and the management as well as the team members have been wondering if this was due to high admission charges. A lower price will be tried for the Carrizozo-Duran game on Friday, Jan. 25, and if it meets with the appreciation and support of the town's people, the same will be continued at future games. Let's all turn out and give the team our moral and financial support.

Mesdames Dinwiddie and Howard came up from El Paso Tuesday evening and attended the joint installation and social hour at OddFellows' Hall. They were accompanied by Roadmaster J. B. Dinwiddie, who took an active part in the ceremonies.

Joint Installation

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 and Coalora Rebekah Lodge No. 15, I. O. O. F., held a joint installation Tuesday night, when the ceremonies were performed before a large audience of members and visitors.

The newly elected officers are, Rebekahs: Noble Grand, Mrs. Mary Dozier; Vice Grand, Mrs. Clesta Prior; Secretary, Mrs. Birdie Walker; Treasurer, Mrs. Nellie Branum. The appointive officers will be installed at the next meeting on January 23.

OddFellows: Noble Grand, L. P. McClintock; Vice Grand, Otto Prehm; Secretary, W. J. Langston; Treasurer, L. H. Dow; R. S. N. G., J. B. Dinwiddie; L. S., A. P. Jones; R. S. V. G., Albert Roberts; L. S. V. G., Clint Branum; Chaplain, Thomas Cook; I. G., Fay Harkey.

After the installation, the Rebekahs served a luncheon, which was followed by a program of vocal and instrumental music, after which, a social hour was enjoyed.

Bobby's Birthday

On Saturday afternoon, Jan. 12, Little Bobby Gardenhire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Montie Gardenhire, was host to 12 of his little friends, the occasion being Bobby's 4th birthday. The little tots were entertained with various games, after which the guests were served ice cream and cake. Mrs. Gardenhire was assisted by her mother, Mrs. R. W. Dozier and sister Dorothy.

Leif Has the Medal

After centuries of investigation in which, Christopher Columbus was praised as the first discoverer of the western hemisphere, it is being gradually conceded that Leif Ericson planted his foot on this soil four years sooner than did the Italian, Columbus. So conceded is this, that several states have set aside Leif Ericson Days, among which are Wisconsin and Minnesota. The lower house of the state of Washington passed a bill recently to the same end. The new Lakeshore boulevard in Chicago has been given the name of Leif Ericson Drive and the Norwegians are planning to erect a monument to his memory.

Value of Kindergarten

Shown in After Years

Education is a lifelong process. The better the beginning, the better the life. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, chancellor emeritus of New York University, once said: "From the kindergarten to manhood is so long a span that it is hard for many people to realize the full significance of kindergarten training for the adult life of our people. But there are certain ways—not altogether obvious though long recognized by the friends of the kindergarten—in which this foster-parent of our child-citizenship is vitally related to our citizen-life in its entirety." And Prof. W. H. Lancelot of Iowa State college writes: "Our great mistake in the past has been to throw away in many cases the years in which the life and character of the child are most easily shaped. We now know that habit formation is at its height in the pre-school years and that this is one of the most critical stages of child life."

The child who goes to a good kindergarten usually enjoys his later school days, and whatever his adult occupation may be he still continues interested in the world about him and in the accomplishments of his fellow men, just as long as he lives. Be sure there is a class, conducted by a properly trained kindergarten, for the boys and girls of your community. If you need help write to the National Kindergarten association, 3 West Fourth street, New York city. There is no charge for any service rendered.

Government Agency Answers Questions

Information Service Called On by Many for Aid.

Washington.—Established by the national emergency council in March to assist Washington visitors to thread the maze of federal agencies and emergency units, the United States Information Service now answers questions from far and near. Whereas previously, inquirers resorted to the trial and error method, addressing queries to a particular department, they now have at hand an information "central" in close touch with every department, bureau, commission or other federal agency. Says the New York Times: "Directed by Miss Harriet M. Root, a graduate of Wellesley, a dozen expert research workers, all women, answer the queries which come in by personal call, by telephone and by letter. Not infrequently one day's mail will bring in 400 letters—each carrying one or more questions. On a busy day, as many as 200 persons have called at Miss Root's office seeking general information, or assistance in contacting some federal agency."

Cover Wide Range.
The queries cover an encyclopedic range. A New Jersey woman, for example, having what she believed to be ambergris in her possession, asked where she could find out whether it was genuine. Her question was referred to the bureau of fisheries. Requests for information on diving rods and buried treasures go to the bureau of mines. A lawyer in New York asked for a list of all federal corporations since the establishment of the United States government—a request that necessitated considerable research. Another letter called for "anything you can find on capital and labor." In due course, a reply furnished references to government publications on the subject. "Does a bullet from a high-powered rifle actually change its course when entering water? If it does, why? And in what direction?" inquired another correspondent. Here, obviously, was an opportunity for government ballistic experts, to whom the query was forwarded. From a small town came a request for a check on the source of certain statements carried in an article in a local newspaper. And a woman with potatoes to sell sought the help of the service in finding the best market for them.

Many Personal Questions.
Personal questions are numerous. The widow of a naval man who was lost when a ship went down in the war wanted guidance in preparing a claim for compensation from the government. Another inquirer sought directions on how to obtain a medal for a child who had saved a playmate from drowning. A father asked how he should go about finding for his son a billet in the merchant marine. And whenever former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker comes to town, the information service invariably receives one or more calls for his Washington address.

Requests for information on federal activities reflect the increased interest in public affairs, particularly in the work of the New Deal agencies. The national emergency council publishes a daily manual, covering changes in the federal setup, and also charts showing graphically the present federal organization. Both the manual and the charts are in great demand. Universities and schools and faculty members send many requests. A California college plans to use the NEC manual as a textbook; a professor in a midwestern university ordered 300 copies of the chart of the federal government.

Shrimp Town Claims Record for Nickels
Southport, N. C.—This town, on the southeasternmost tip of North Carolina, claims more 5-cent pieces in circulation per capita than any other place on earth.

Shrimp pickers are paid a nickel a bucket for all the shrimps they pick. Each bucketful is paid for as soon as it has been filled. More than $300 daily in nickels is necessary to pay them. From October 1 to November 17 457 net tons of shrimp were shipped from here.

A RIFT IN THE CLOUDS

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

That the depression brought to countless numbers of persons severe losses, no one can intelligently deny. We have seen too much genuine sorrow not to realize that an unmeasurable debt has—and must still be paid for the debacle of the last war. Without any effort to minimize the seriousness of this strain, a part of which almost every person had to bear, there are certain blessings which have come to us, both as a nation and individuals, which might profitably challenge our thought and call forth our gratitude.

A most remarkable testimony to the reserve strength and moral poise of this country has been the absence of a revolution. Some economists affirm that we are in the midst of an economic revolution. If that is true, it has the merit of being bloodless in character. Whatever we may think of the readjustments occurring in our social and economic order, we're persuaded that efforts affecting these readjustments are operating in the absence of bitter hatred or green-eyed jealousy. The pronounced attitude in favor of international peace, especially by the youth movement in America is indicative of the dawn of a better day. Our young people are appealing to reason rather than the spirit of mob psychology in settling their moral and intellectual problems. The day is gone when a mere wave of sentiment, call it by whatever name you will, is sufficient to persuade a young man to offer his life as a sacrifice to the god of war. Our educational system has not broken down. It has been curtailed in certain localities, but most of our schools are still open, and many of our young people are entering colleges in large numbers, indicative of the fact that in this country education is a permanent and indestructible asset in our national life.

Unlike other countries we have maintained our inherent right of religious liberty. Our churches are still open. The work may be financially curtailed but the spiritual appeal has not been checked. In many localities it is more real than ever before. Let us take courage. These are some of the rays of light penetrating through the darkness of the storm.

A Handsome Corner Treatment in Antiques. The French Chair Has No Central Back Support and Should Be Handled as Described for Hepplewhite Chairs.

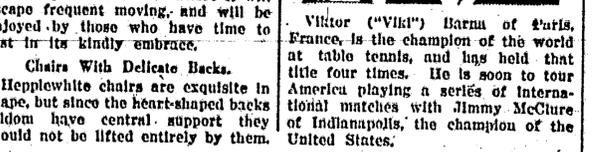

FURNITURE has to be treated with a certain respect for its infirmities. These may be due to the fact that it is old and has not had proper care, or because it is not of fine craftsmanship, whatever its age old or new. In every home, not entirely furnished with new pieces, there are certain articles which require kindly care. When it is possible, the pieces should be restored as nearly as they can be to their original state. However, it may be that the cost of doing over the article may be more than can be afforded at the time, or that, even after being put in excellent repair the piece may be rather fragile because of its delicate shape or slender construction. Genuine antiques frequently must have the consideration due after many years of active service.

Positioning Furniture.
Two of the most important factors in this kindly treatment are the placing of pieces where they will not get the brunt of hard and continual usage, and where they will not need constant shifting. A chair, for example, should be so positioned that it will not be the first to be sat on and where it will be in more continual use, probably, than in any other position. Also it is likely to be pushed back and forth more often than if it were in a less prominent place. This wracks the joints of furniture unless it is moved with special caution.

When a chair is heavy as an arm chair is apt to be, it is hard on it to be shifted about. It is not easy to move and it seems actually to balk. But its difficulty of easy manipulation is its protection. So place the chair in some pleasant corner where it will escape frequent moving, and will be enjoyed by those who have time to rest in its kindly embrace.

Chairs With Delicate Backs.
Hepplewhite chairs are exquisite in shape, but since the heart-shaped backs seldom have central support they should not be lifted entirely by them.

Fur, Flowers and Velvet for Winter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TAKE velvet for the coat, top it with one of the swanky fur capes such as every woman listed in the blue book of fashion is wearing this winter, give it a glamorous touch via a cluster of hot-house orchids—for the answer see the costume centered in the group of high-style costumes here pictured. Which goes to show that fashion is indulging in habillment of the most luxurious type this season. Who said "depression"? Well, anyway, sumptuous furs and magnificent coats (rich cloaking velvet a favorite) with boutonniere or corsage of exotic flowers (preferably orchids) is the new deal which fashion's followers are having dealt to them.

By the way this vogue for flower adornment is increasingly apparent. For tailored daytime clothes, one lady-slipper orchid in a gold and silver tube pin on the lapel of one's coat (see thumb-nail sketch in the left lower corner) is in excellent form. Jewels and orchids form a regal alliance for evening. With the new low-front necklines it is smart to wear a necklace, with orchids in the center instead of on the shoulder, as sketched in the right hand corner below. Recently at a debutante party a dress of white billowy tulle with nosegays of wax-white camellias snuggled here and there was the loveliest sight evening lights ere shone upon. The flower vogue also extends to dinner gowns, the flowers in this instance are usually hand made to match or contrast the color of the velvet or other material which fashions the dress.

Returning to a style analysis of the handsome models in the picture, it is plain to be seen, judging from the perfectly stunning outfit shown to the right, that fashion has recognized Russia in no uncertain manner. Cosack furban, high collar, belted waistline, deep cuffs and an abundance of fur, each speaks eloquently in terms of a Rose. It is a stunning ensemble. To our way of thinking you couldn't find anything smarter in the way of a winter outfit. The fur is nutria, which is of outstanding favor this season. The cloth, which combines with the fur, is a diagonal ribbed beige wool. This model would be very effective in black suede cloth made up with seal or black caracul, or in gray or brown-dyed kidskin with a color-matched velvet wool weave.

The black seal bolero to the left might easily be taken for one of the new separate fur pieces which are so smartly in fashion this winter. In reality it is made as an actual part of the coat. The fur merely tops the cloth sleeves. It would, however, be a most practical idea and thoroughly in keeping with present style trends if this bolero had been one of the detachable sort.

This idea of separate fur capes and stole collars and gilets which look almost like sleeveless jackets with their two long stole ends belted in at the waistline, has much to commend it. With accessory fur novelties including perhaps a high-turban hat and a muff-bag to match, any cloth suit or coat takes on an air of distinction. Many women of a practical turn of mind are taking advantage of this new vogue in that they are having their out-of-style fur coats of past seasons remodeled into stylish boleros or capes or gilets which impart any amount of chic to their appearance without an extravagant outlay of money. However, unless the fur you have is of real value, it is almost as thrifty to invest in ready-mades, for the shops and departments are showing intriguing fur pieces of voguish peltry which are not at all beyond the average budget.

The vogue for big flat fur pockets on cloth coats is also worthy of note. Just to give their cloth coats a "new" look quite a few women are ordering their fur cuffs made into huge pockets, which are ornamental as well as useful.

SHINING BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For restaurants or wherever there are shinning lame blouse in pale gold with a dropped shoulder treatment is ideal. The full sleeves are styled according to the latest. The tie-collar is new, too, and very flattering. It is worn with a floor-length skirt of black crepe. For evening with glittering blouse or tunic floor length, the slightly trailing black crepe skirts are latest.

FINE FURS USED AS LINING FOR COATS

Some of the finest furs this winter have taken to cover. Time was when the cheapest, ugliest furs were underneath cloth coats for linings. It made them cost less, of course, even though we were a bit ashamed to let the hems flap out so that the lining could be seen.

All that is past, now and we are proud now if the fur lining of a coat displays itself to the most critical gaze. Instead of rabbit under a nice broadcloth coat, there is real ermine, mink, even sable. Some of these fur-lined coats are reversible.

Practically all lavish fur collars are detachable. This permits a change of effect that seems to meet with the approval of smart society, as well as of the thrifty minded.

Evening Gown Has Pockets

Like Miniature Panniers

The evening gown with pockets! It was Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli who first conceived this idea. Now, however, Mme. Georgette Renal has elaborated on the pocket situation for evening and produced a most remarkable and practical result.

The Renal evening pocket is a delight to the woman's heart who always is wishing she had her hands free to wrap her coat closely about her without having to clutch a handbag. The evening pocket also routs the nightmare of a purse clattering to the floor amid a shower of lipstick, powder and small change.

Renal pockets are stitched and cut so they stand out like miniature panniers.

CAVEMAN TACTICS WIN HER DIVORCE FROM SIXTH MATE

Aviatrix's Marriage to Dowling, After "Love Kidnaping," Is Failure.

Hollywood.—Sensational caveman tactics with which R. C. "Dapper Danny" Dowling wooed Marjorie Crawford, beautiful aviatrix, might have won her heart six months ago. But—Caveman tactics pursued after marriage, were too much—and the blond flyer has obtained a divorce on the grounds of "extreme cruelty."

It was only half a year back that Miss Crawford startled Hollywood with amazing allegations of a sensational "love kidnaping."

She charged that Dowling had carried her off at the point of a gun to Yuma, Ariz., in an effort to win her love.

Dowling, Hollywood dance director, declared the then-five-time married aviatrix accompanied him of her own free will.

But Marjorie fled charges, and when Dowling returned voluntarily to Los Angeles from Yuma, he found himself formally accused of kidnaping and felonious assault on two counts.

The hearing was a four days' sensation—and provided Hollywood with plenty of giggles and titlers.

Admits Blow.

Dowling admitted her caveman charges by confessing he had struck her when he called at her home last March and found another man visiting her.

But he said that after he struck her in the face, she had pleaded her love for him.

"I melted like butter in a hot sun," he continued, describing the abatement of his jealous anger.

Love notes written by Miss Crawford to Dowling also were read into the testimony. Each of two letters, identified by the flir as having been written by her to Dowling, concluded with: "Oceans of love . . . I love you . . . sweet child."

At conclusion of the hearing Dowling was held for trial. But when the case was due for trial Miss Crawford and Dowling appeared at the district attorney's office together. She sat on Dowling's lap and indulged in kisses after kiss for the edification of cameramen—and revealed that they had been married. His caveman tactics had won out.

The court refused to dismiss the charges at first, however. It was not until August that District Attorney Burton Flitts obtained a dismissal in Judge Harry Sewell's court.

Again in Court.

And then—only a few weeks later—Mrs. Dowling was in court again. Married life continued to be as full of caveman tactics as had been her astounding wooing, she declared.

She told Superior Judge Georgia Bullock:

"He cursed me, struck me, threatened to blow my brains out, threatened to throw acid in my face, tore rings off my fingers several times and once slapped me in a cafe when I would not eat pork instead of beef," she testified.

The decree was granted. Property settlement was arranged out of court and Mrs. Dowling did not ask for any alimony.

The caveman tactics which led the pretty blond aviatrix to take off on her sixth romance, when continued during her marital flight made her love take a nose dive.

Does Heavy Farm Work With Bullet in Heart

Halls Summit, Kan.—On November 27, 1930, Virgil Bennett, then eighteen years old, was getting ready to go hunting when the trigger of his rifle struck a door knob and a bullet struck him behind his right ear.

The bullet pierced the mastoid cells, and was deflected downward through the esophagus. At first it was believed the lead had reached Virgil's stomach, but an X-ray revealed that it had lodged in the pericardium.

Periodical examinations of Bennett have shown him to be in excellent health and suffering no ill effects from the shot. The bullet has not moved despite Bennett's activity in working on the farm of his parents.

Dentist's Drill Balks Just at Right Moment

Columbus, Ohio.—The buzz of the dentist's drill had started in a school clinic. A pupil nervously braced his feet against the foot rest and clenched the arms of the chair. Then the lights went out and the drill quit running.

Five children who had come to have their teeth worked on trooped merrily back to their classes while an electrician was summoned to fix a short circuit.

Thieves Cart Off All Except Hole in Wall

Borger, Texas.—Officers scratched their heads over this one: "Some our landish 'casuals' stole my 10-foot windmill," complained Jack Hodges, rancher. "They also took a 24-foot steel tower and 100 feet of casing—every thing but the hole."

Est. 36 Acres of Corn

Paris, Mo.—C. H. Davis, Paris farmer, startled friends when he announced he and Mrs. Davis ate 36 acres of corn at a Sunday dinner. Asked for particulars, he said the entire harvest consisted of a single "mess" of poorly developed roasting ears.

AZTEC MONARCH PIONEER IN THE ART OF GLIDING

Constantly they are discovering few things about the ancient Aztecs. Just the other day it was learned by student research that the early inhabitants of Mexico had invented a very modernized form of football; but even later comes, via Madrid, news of the Aztecs some five hundred years ago.

Discovery of this extraordinary fact was made by a Polish archeologist while delving into ancient records of the Franciscan missionaries. The Pole, Tenebaum by name, had spent nine years in research in Mexico and, among the monkish documents there, found a description of what might be called an aviation school conducted five centuries ago by King Netza. Bird worship existed in Mexico as well as in Guatemala and also in the Mayan-regions of Yucatan. An interest in flight quite naturally followed and flight, in the native thoughts, connoted feathered wings.

Unable to create power artificially, King Netza and his assistants fell back upon wind power in combination with gravitation. According to the Franciscan manuscripts, Netza insisted that his people should become more like their feathered gods so he began equipping them—and himself, with wide-spreading wings fabricated from storks' feathers. And the monarch, personally showing the way, "used to glide from the heights of the mountains into the deep valleys."

An engraved stone, said to have been discovered by Professor Tenebaum himself, shows the gliders in action and, most striking fact of all, the Aztec aviators are seen wearing goggles "not greatly unlike those worn today." Professor Tenebaum recently exhibited his proofs to a scientific body in Madrid, but no doubt further research will follow this opening lead.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Artificial Chlorophyll

Within a year scientists expect to be able artificially to create chlorophyll, the substance used by plants for transforming solar into chemical energy. Dr. Paul Rothenmund, research fellow of Kettering Foundation of Antioch college, recently reported to the Academy of Sciences that synthetic production of this substance, the basis of plant life, appears to be only a matter of months.

Get Perfect Quilt With This Design

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The quilting on a patchwork quilt may make or ruin the entire work, if the design and work is not done neatly. Beauty in the design is necessary, but the needlework and evenness of the stitches bring out the design, and if done right the result will be perfect and always admired. Needleworkers know the best way to transfer a design to cloth is through a perforated pattern. The design is perfectly drawn and perforated so that each stamping is alike and requires very little time. The stamping powder can be brushed off when work is finished, leaving no lines or marks.

Package No. 33B shown above contains seven actual size patterns, perforated on bond paper, also blue powder for stamping and full instructions just how to do it.

Pattern D 12—10 inch Spider Web is suitable for the center of the Wedding Ring Quilt. This outer line may be omitted if a smaller size is wanted. D 11 is a 4 inch Butterfly.

Motif suitable for corners. D 10 is a 1 1/2 inch Tall Border. D 13—5 inch Feather Circle. O 7 a 2 1/2 inch Floral border and corner. O 8—7 1/2 inch Feather Circle. O 9—6 1/2 by 8 inch Pineapple motif. These patterns can be used singly or in combination, and can be used many times. If they interest you, send 15c to our Quilting department, and these seven patterns will be sent you by return mail.

Your Winter Garden

Next to good drainage, the earth is of greatest importance to potted plants. Since they cannot adventure far afield for their food, the bit of soil enclosing them must be fairly rich and nicely porous. Here is their favorite soil recipe: one-half good garden topsoil—if this can be had from a truck farm, where the land has been cultivated over a period of years, so much the better; otherwise the soil immediately below grass roots, with a few roots chopped up in it, is ideal—a handful of finely ground oak leaves, a handful of white sand, a generous portion of lumpy aged sheep or cow manure, and a dash of tobacco dust and powdered charcoal. This will make a most satisfying mixture. Just try it on ferns and begonias; their comeback will astonish you!—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

NEW MEXICO PRESS ASSOCIATION

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Jimmy Lamb vs. Abie Zinn

Rumor has it that the New Mexico Legislature will be called upon to oust Supreme Judge Zinn and also J. D. Lamb, a member of the State Corporation Commission.

Zinn, it will be remembered, sitting in the lofty seat of the Supreme Court, has been charged with dishonesty and the New Mexico Bar Association has requested his removal which should be done without delay, but will it be done—is another question. We predict that he will remain as a matter of politics, no matter how severe the charge may be.

With Mr. Lamb, it is quite another matter. Although elected on the Democratic state ticket for a period of six years, he has done nothing to warrant his impeachment except that of supporting Senator Cutting in the last campaign. For that act, so goes the talk in the lobbies, he is to be taken for a ride.

Zinn, as we have said, is charged with dishonesty, while Lamb had the nerve to stand out for what he thought was a right and did not hide behind the bush in declaring himself; therefore, for exercising his right to preference and refusing to dance to the party whip, he is slated for impeachment. Zinn is a hard-boiled politician; Lamb is a liberal. Lamb is honest in his convictions; Zinn has no policy above politics and self-gratification.

If Lamb is impeached, it will be purely a matter of politics and nothing else; if Zinn is impeached, it will be something justly due him. Both were elected, but Lamb has filled his office in a satisfactory manner and no crookedness has ever been charged against him, while Zinn, sitting in "Moses' Seat," stands guilty before the people for dishonesty and should be speedily removed. Let's keep an eye on the outcome.

The theme for Sunday morning: "New Beginnings." And since this is the beginning of the New Year, we should begin anew, and look forward to greater and better things, both materially and spiritually. The better things materially, without fail, follow the better things spiritually; for Jesus says: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and these (material) things shall be added unto you. Won't you come, and help while you may, for 'The time cometh, when no man worketh.'"

ADS. WILL TELL BANKERS' STORY

American Bankers Association President Announces Move to Stimulate Newspaper Advertising

NEW YORK.—Plans for stimulating wider use of informative newspaper advertising by banks in promoting public understanding and confidence in regard to existing banking conditions and methods have been announced by R. B. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, as a part of his organization's activities in aid of business recovery.

A general groundwork was prepared through a nationwide survey of advertising by banks relative to their willingness to extend justifiable loans to industry and trade. This, he said, revealed that a large number in all parts of the country are pursuing aggressive policies along this line and encouraging their customers to develop forward-looking business plans. "It is our aim to aid in fostering this constructive attitude whenever possible," he said.

The Theme of New Advertising

The association's Advertising Department, under the direct supervision of the general executive officers, has prepared, at the headquarters in New York City, an informative advertising series for the use of member banks in the association to aid them in developing in their own communities better general public understanding regarding banking, Mr. Hecht said.

"The underlying theme of this advertising is that sound banking is based on helpful human relations and that it has a unity of interest with the people of its community which binds them together with a common purpose," he said.

"We are confident that if a clear understanding of this is brought home to the people in all our banking communities, it will go far in restoring the public confidence which good banking deserves. A bank in which people deservedly believe is doubly safe, it is to the public interest for the people to have confidence in their banks.

The Place of Advertising

"We feel that bank advertising has a special public duty to perform in this connection under existing conditions. The copy which will be supplied in the service we have developed will not only aid the individual bank in promoting the use of its own facilities but is also aimed to bring about with the aid of newspaper advertising a clearer public viewpoint regarding the essential part it occupies in the life of its community."

Mr. Hecht emphasized in regard to the new advertising facilities being offered to the members of the association that they are not a profit making venture and that there is no intention to disturb existing advertising arrangements, the idea being that these institutional services shall supplement rather than replace present plans, or that they will give assistance to member banks now lacking satisfactory arrangements.

MANY BANKS LONG LIVED

In the United States—
168 Banks over 100 years old.
2,472 Banks over 50 years old.
10,391 Banks over 25 years old.

There are in the United States 168 banks that have been in continuous existence for more than one hundred years. There are 2,472 banks over fifty years old, while 64% of all the banks in this country, or 10,391, are twenty-five years old or older.

In other words, practically two-thirds of the banks in this country have come through several successive periods of depression and panic, including 1907, 1914, 1920 and 1929-33.

The Oldest Bank

The oldest bank in the country, which is in Boston, was chartered February 17, 1784.

In the 64% of banks that are twenty-five years old or older is lodged a major portion of the banking resources of the nation. In commenting recently upon the stability of a great majority of the banks in the United States, Dr. Harold Stonier, Educational Director of the American Bankers Association, said:

"The fact that we have so many banks that have been in existence a long period of years is an eloquent tribute to the genius of American managerial ability, for no other country has experienced such wild gambling eras and resultant periods of business stagnation as those through which our country has passed at frequent intervals during the past century."

NEW WEALTH FROM SOIL

New wealth which comes from the soil is of special interest to those to whom falls the responsibility of maintaining our credit structure.

Unless agriculture is successful farm borrowers cannot ultimately succeed, neither can the banks they serve. Foreclosure sales are not a sound basis for good farming or good banking. Bankers, therefore, are as much interested in the permanent success of the agricultural industry as are the farmers, whether the deposits come direct from farm patrons, or indirect through the ordinary channels of business.—D. H. Otis, Director of Agriculture, American Bankers Association.

Peter B. Kyne

at His Best in "Golden Dawn"

Peter B. Kyne, that famous writer of absorbing fiction, tells a thrilling tale of love and mystery in GOLDEN DAWN, which will be published as a serial in this paper. GOLDEN DAWN, like all of Peter B. Kyne's stories, has the characteristic of appealing simplicity, and the human quality which endears a writer to his readers. Perhaps that is because Kyne had behind him a long and varied experience of life before he ever turned his hand to authorship.

He was born in San Francisco where, working in the wholesale lumber and shipping business, he obtained the material which he afterwards used in the famous "Cappy Ricks" series. He fought in the Spanish-American war, seeing much action in the Philippines. In the World War he was a captain of artillery.

With such a background and with a wide knowledge of people gained by rubbing elbows with them all up and down the world, Peter B. Kyne is enabled to write the sort of stories those same everyday people enjoy. In this story of a girl who was really two girls, of her lively adventures and her rescue from the mental shadows by an engaging young doctor, Kyne is at his best. This story has love and mystery, humor, suspense, surprise—and above all, ACTION.

BOOKLET ON FARM CREDIT

A booklet has been published by the Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association, on "Factors Affecting Farm Credit" for the purpose of furthering on a national scale the taking of farm inventories and the making of credit statements as sponsored by the commission in cooperation with the state colleges of agriculture and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The goal is better relationships between farmers and their banks.

The booklet is devoted to the types of loans generally required by farmers. The need for farm credit, how it can be obtained, when it is safe to borrow, what principles to follow to establish credit in advance of needs, and how both the lender and borrower are interested in sound, productive farm credit.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. He is granted by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "middle nose" was in part responsible.

"Lanny" Stephen reproved her. Then to Dan McNamara: "Do you mean to tell me you left her out there unguarded? How would you explain her escape—if she had chosen to disappear?"

"I don't think she'd duck, Doc. But even if she tried it, I got a plain clothes man on guard."

"Please bring the patient in, Lanny," Stephen pleaded. "And then you might—" he glanced eloquently at their empty glasses. Lanny glared at him so he smiled—and she ceased to glare. But she went on mumbling.

Dan McNamara shook his head sadly. "Nothing wrong with that woman's thinking apparatus," he informed Stephen.

And then Lanny ushered the new patient in. She paused just inside the door, swept the room with a slow glance and permitted her gaze to come to rest on Stephen Burt, who rose and bowed to her. Instantly the frozen hostility in her glance faded and she smiled. "Reminds me of a gargoyle," Stephen reflected.

"Meet my friend, Dr. Stephen Burt. Nance," Dan McNamara introduced her airily. "Doc, this is Nance Belden, alias Dorothy Case, alias Fay-Barham, alias Elizabeth Vernon."

Stephen said politely that he was delighted to make her acquaintance, and Nance replied with acid directness, "Why?" Whereat Stephen Burt laughed and set a chair for her. Nance plumped herself down in it with a weary sigh, jerked off her jaunty hat and threw it on Stephen's desk. "All right, Steve. Shoot! What's the idea of the big convention? Another fishing expedition?"

"Now, Nance," Dan McNamara soothed her, "you cut that out. You're not talking to Doc Bithen. Doc Burt's a gentleman."

Nance remembered her manners. "My error," she apologized.

From the doorway leading into the waiting room, Lanny gazed upon the girl with frank disapproval. Over Nance's shoulder she caught Stephen's eyes and shook her head sorrowfully.

"The old girl's shocked!" Nance laughed softly without looking around, while Lanny disappeared.

"How do you know, Miss Belden?" Stephen inquired.

"Mirror," and Nance Belden pointed. "Close your eyes," Stephen commanded, "and describe this room to me."

"All right. There are two empty highball glasses on the telephone stand back of you," she sniffed. "Doubtless the stand's three feet high and the telephone book is in the compartment under the top of the stand. The telephone is one of those combination receiver-mouthpiece things like they use in English stage scenes, and the telephone cord is white. The desk is solid walnut, I think, flat-topped and clean. You have a bronze combination inkwell, pen-rack, and pin-tray. There is a blue crayon-pencil and a red crayon-pencil and a black, gold-banded fountain pen on the pen rack. The fountain pen has a nib in it. I know because on the calendar pad on the desk, which is dated at November 23—although this is the 24th—you've written something with the pen very recently. You're sitting in a walnut swivel chair, brown leather upholstered, and a high back up to your shoulder tops. The chair's seat is an over-stuffed rocker, and if you give him another drink he'll fall asleep in it. On the wall back of you, there is a framed diploma in Latin, issued to Stephen John Burt by Leland Stanford Junior University Medical school, and about four feet from it is the Oath of Hippocrates in a black frame, like the diploma. This print is old English and done in black and red. Across the room; in back of the chief, is a walnut bookcase, built in detachable tiers, and there's a white washstand in the corner close by it. The rug is beige-colored and Chinese; and on the wall in back of us, where you can look at it readily, is a framed photograph of your father. It must be a photograph of your father because he looks a great deal like you. In back of me a door leads into the old lady's den and—" out a small mirror, held it up and opened her eyes an instant—"yes, I thought so. That door is ajar and the old lady is listening to every word I say."

"Now, I'll describe you. You're a darling. You're tall and you haven't started to grow a tummy yet. You're about thirty-two or three years old, your hair is dark brown and your eyes dark blue, and you have nice teeth, and they show when you smile. You have nice hands and your nails were manicured this morning, but you have a dirty spot on the finger-nail of your right index finger—no, it isn't dirt. It's iodine. Pardon! My error. Do I win first prize, Doc?"

"In a walk, Miss Belden. You are absolutely the most amazing person I have ever examined. You are one in a million—one of those rare persons who not only see everything at a glance, but take a mental photograph of it. And remember it. Yes, you win a prize."

"I'll have a highball with you boys," said Miss Belden composedly.

"You'll not, you little—this and that," Lanny countered from behind the door. "The very idea!"

"Then the party breaks up here and now," Miss Belden informed Stephen.

"Lanny," Stephen called. "I hope you aren't forgetting the laws of hospitality."

"Come on, kid," the girl entreated Lanny. "Buy me one and I'll get the chief to do something nice for you in return."

"What influence has the likes of you with the chief of police?" Lanny was emerging with two highballs.

"Do you drive a car, Miss Lanning?" Nance Belden whistled sharply to Dan McNamara.

"Get out your card, Dan. Here's the fountain pen. Write as I dictate. Ready? To all traffic officers; The bearer, Miss Rebecca Lanning, has the freedom of the city. She has my authority to park where she pleases and she shall not be tagged. She cannot be arrested for anything except murder and espionage; then she must not ride in the wagon. Signed: Dan McNamara, Chief of Police."

Dan McNamara obeyed, Nance Belden visced the card, blotted it and handed it to Lanny. "Now, you tell 'em all who's kind to you, Rebecca. I'm some kid, am I not? You bet I'm some kid. Dan knows it and your boss knows it and if, by now, you don't know it, I hope Steve fires you."

"You are some kid, I admit it. Thank you, dear. You shall have a highball."

"Have one yourself," Nance suggested grandly. "Let's all be sociable, eh, Steve?"

"Miss Belden—" Steve began.

"Call me Nance," the strange young creature interrupted. "Why all the formality?"

"Have you any objection, Nance, to telling me your real name?"

"None at all. I don't know my real name."

"Who were your parents?"

"I don't know."

"Why did you steal the silk stockings?"

Nance threw back her head and laughed. "Why you silly, I had runs in every pair I owned."

"Poor dear!" Lanny was speaking, her hand strayed over the girl's jet black, shiny bob; her fingers sought a shell-like ear and tucked it gently.

Nance looked up at the nurse, surprise and friendliness shining in her eyes.

"Why, you're sweet, aren't you? Why, you darling!" And she lifted her face for Lanny to kiss. Lanny kissed her. Trust Lanny for that.

"It's too late to go further tonight, Dan," Lanny said. "Bring her in at nine tomorrow morning."

"Can't, Lanny." With a bound the excellent McNamara had landed beside Lanny in the garden of friendship, as one might say. "She's due in the police court at nine o'clock for sentence. Right away she'll be walked over to the Superior court to the judge that gave her a suspended sentence two years ago. She hasn't made good, so he'll be some time before we see our Nance again."

"Has she an attorney?"

"The public defender, that's all," Lanny looked at Stephen. Stephen looked at Lanny. Both nodded.

"Get the best in town, Dan," Lanny urged the chief. "Doctor Burt will appear in court and plead for a stay of sentence. We'll tell that judge a few things about criminal psychology and just why it would be frightful social injustice to put this girl in San Quentin."

She turned to Nance Belden, drew the girl's face down on her breast and patted the rounded cheek. "See you tomorrow, dearie," she promised. "Be a good girl now and be nice to Dan McNamara, because he's one of the best friends you'll ever have."

"Kiss me again, please," Nance whispered. And when Lanny had complied, the girl came around the desk to Stephen Burt. "I want you to kiss me, too," she said. "You're sweet—thank you a lot."

When Dan McNamara and his prisoner had departed, Lanny and Stephen looked at each other throughout a long silence, which Lanny was first to break.

"That girl's clean, Steve. Not a touch of the stammer about her. She could pass the Binet intelligence test so fast she'd meet it on her way back. And she isn't tough at all. She's only trying to be, and she finds it uphill work."

"Defense mechanism largely," he said. "Better go home, Lanny. Get a good night's sleep and try to forget what a mad world we live in."

"It'd be a d—d slight sadder if you didn't live in it," she snapped.

Under stress of emotion, Lanny, as she grew older, occasionally indulged herself in a little mild profanity. Stephen didn't mind. He knew she was disillusioned, middle-aged in point of years, but old with the wisdom and sadness of the world, as only a doctor or a trained nurse can be; that she had earned her privileges. As a surgical nurse she had been sworn at by doctors whose nerves grew taut as piano wires, during a dangerous operation, and she had learned to give as good as she received—wherefore the men of her world respected her and liked her, for her courage and efficiency.

"See to it that you're on hand in court tomorrow morning, Steve, with a sweet line of scientific argument to bewilder that judge and the district attorney," she charged a little later. "Good night, my dear boy."

Dear old Lanny! Once more had occurred to her the miracle of love. A stranger—a bit of fetsam and jetsam on the muddy sea of life—had looked behind her brusque, businesslike, beligerent exterior and found the great

Again at Crossroads

Washington—Time after time since President Roosevelt entered the White House, many observers have insisted that he had reached a crossroads and that on those occasions he necessarily had to choose between the right and the left. They contended with considerable justification that he either had to be conservative or radical. But somehow the President arranged to follow both roads at once. At least that conclusion has been reached by those who classify themselves as liberals.

Now, observers are saying again that the President has reached the crossroads and must choose between the right and the left. With the convening of congress there has come forward the usual number—perhaps I should say more than the usual number—of proposals for radical or conservative legislation as the case may be. There are dozens, almost hundreds, of bills advocating nostrums and crackpot ideas which cannot possibly do more than take up time and keep the government printing office busy at the expense of the taxpayers in printing the bills themselves. There are in all of this mess as well many pieces of worthwhile legislation as well as the proposals bearing earmarks of drafting under White House guidance.

In addition there are close to six dozen presidential appointments upon which the senate must act. Some of these names are of individuals of known radical tendencies. Some others are recognized as equally conservative. It will be the senate's job to pass upon these nominations which, some observers insist, represent perhaps the widest variation in economic views that has ever been sent to the Capitol for confirmation of appointment.

As a corollary for this confused state, there are the growing differences of opinion, based on presidential policy proposals, as to whether the government should attempt to provide relief through work as Mr. Roosevelt desires or should turn to a plain, unadulterated dole. There is the demand from the White House for legislation putting the federal government further into competition with business by expansion of publicly owned power facilities and the question of liquidating or continuing to expand such programs as that of loans to home owners and extension of NRA.

Summed up, it would appear, superficially at least, that Mr. Roosevelt is definitely at the crossroads. I am told by legislative leaders, however, that the administration program thus far advanced again does not commit Mr. Roosevelt definitely to follow either the radical or conservative pathways. They point out that there is an unusual admixture of two schools of economic thought represented in legislation bearing presidential approval and their thought seemed to be that Mr. Roosevelt will avoid being forced into either camp at this time.

More Action Than Results?

It has been most interesting to observe the fluctuation of temperature among the various New Dealers. Prior to the last election they were very low in spirit. Many of them were saying, in private at least, that Mr. Roosevelt was getting out of hand as they were concerned and was turning certainly toward the conservative school of thought. At the same time among conservative members of the administration and in congress and to a considerable extent among business leaders, there was a growing feeling that they had witnessed the phenomena of having their own ears pinned back just when they thought they were on the upgrade.

Following this change of trends, along comes the mass of White House legislation, some of which pleases the New Dealers and some of which pleases the conservatives. Each finds fault with that portion of the program that is reasonably satisfactory to the other. This contrariety of opinion extends into the ranks of members of the house and senate. Consequently, the question to which the observers are now seeking an answer is whether Majority Leader Robinson in the senate and the Democratic wheel-horses in the house are going to be able to keep their tremendous numbers in line. Thus far, there has been no word from the majority leaders either in the house or the senate indicating any doubt on their part that the administration whip will fall to drive recalcitrant members into the proper alley. Unbiased observers are taking the position, however, that time alone will tell. And it may be added with some emphasis that if the wild horses break loose from the hitching post once, the current session of congress may provide much more action than results.

Soldiers' Lobby Strong

Present plans of the Republican leadership, if there are enough Republicans left to make their presence felt, indicate that the Democratic commanders need not expect any help from that quarter in pulling hot chestnuts out of the fire. For example, I understand that the soldiers' bonus question will be used by the Republicans as a sort of prod with which to disturb the majority party. It seems definite that the house and senate will pass legislation for immediate payment of the bonus. It may not be a program for full payment of the sum that is not due until 1945, but the pressure is so strong that some action will be forthcoming.

If Mr. Roosevelt sticks to his guns and vetoes any bonus legislation excepting that proposing to care for the destitute ex-soldiers, sailors and marines, there is enough strength in congress to pass the legislation over his veto. The soldiers' lobby is strong; of that there can be no doubt. The members will be thinking of their political future, not Mr. Roosevelt's, when the question is put before them. Then is when the Republican minority could be of distinct help to the administration but, apparently, that is just the thing the Republican minority is not going to do.

The administration is now examining various avenues of a possible compromise on the bonus payments and it is through this course that a hope exists on the part of administration leaders to avoid the showdown mentioned above. Knowing that it cannot count on the Republican minority for any help to carry through its plans, the administration may make some concessions to the bonus advocates. These most certainly will be made unless a count of noses by the leadership shows a little later that the supporters of a full bonus payment can be whipped—and right now that is generally considered by observers as being impossible.

Here again the views of radicals and conservatives clash. There will be some radicals supporting the bonus payment in order to force the President into a position where he must inflate the currency further. That group thinks inflation of the currency will boost prices and provide the necessary hypodermic injection to get us out of the depression. Opposed to these are a considerable number of house and senate members who fear inflation and its results like they fear the poison fangs of a rattlesnake. So, when the bonus question is joined as an issue it seems to me we will see an interesting exposition of how politics makes strange bedfellows.

Federal Loans to Cities

President Roosevelt is about to open up the federal treasury for loans to cities to provide funds for construction of municipal light and power plants. He has announced definitely that he favors this procedure and, therefore, in effect has invited cities to join the march on Washington for more federal loans.

The newest development in the administration program of loaning money here and there seems to have resulted in repercussions of a more important nature than objections voiced to other types of federal loans. Here in Washington considerable discussion has developed as to the wisdom of this policy and this has been followed by speculation as to the ultimate end of a program of this kind. Opinion throughout the country apparently has not been definitely crystallized yet but from all indications it appears we are due to hear much debate on the new Deal idea.

Objectors to the program of providing loans to cities for construction of municipal light and power plants insist that Mr. Roosevelt has taken the longest step toward state socialism thus far to be made a part of his New Deal. They contend that Mr. Roosevelt has gone beyond his recovery program and has embarked upon a plan representing part and parcel of his scheme for public ownership of all industries impressed with a public interest through service of a monopolistic character.

Opponents also argue that the President is placing privately owned industries under a severe handicap by forcing them to compete with what should be private industry but what actually is their own government.

In some quarters also I hear expressions of a fear that if any substantial number of cities borrow federal money to build their own light and power plants, the federal government will have expanded to that extent its domination over those cities. Through loans to banks, to agriculture and to many other lines, federal influence daily is being exerted upon the private life of the country until, some observers declare, states, counties and municipalities are gradually sinking into oblivion insofar as their own self-government is concerned.

On the other hand, such advocates of public ownership as Senator Norris of Nebraska, are elated over Mr. Roosevelt's decision to proceed along public ownership lines. Senator Norris believes Mr. Roosevelt has authority now under public works and recovery act provisions to promote publicly owned light and power plants about any place he pleases. The Nebraska senator, it will be remembered, was the spearhead of the movement that resulted in creation of the Tennessee Valley authority and the program for development of electrical energy from the Muscle Shoals dams in the Tennessee river. Already, privately owned light and power companies in many sections contiguous to the Tennessee river plant have been virtually forced to sell their properties to the TVA.

Precautions Called for With Perishable Food

Study of human reactions to tin have been exhaustively investigated by the food research laboratory of the bureau of soils in Washington. These studies show that no toxic action need be feared from the use of tin containers. For that reason it has been widely stated that food-stuffs need not be removed from the can after opening because of any danger from tin poisoning.

It must be apparent, on the other hand, that products like milk or canned fruits, vegetables, and meats are perishable substances. Once the can is open, they are subject to contamination from the bacteria of the air just like any fresh product. For that reason it is certainly not desirable for perishable foods to be allowed to stand in open containers any appreciable length of time unless they are kept very cold. Furthermore, though cold delays the growth of these bacteria, it does not entirely prevent their growth. Hence foods cannot be kept in refrigerators in open containers indefinitely.—Dr. Walter H. Eddy, Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Congenial Isolation

An Englishman and an American traveled in the same compartment on one of the Liverpool expresses. The former spoke not a word to his companion, who was the only other occupant of the compartment, and it was only when the train was crossing Runcom bridge that the American said: "Excuse me, sir, but your tie is riding up over the back of your collar."

"Well, what if it is?" was the curt reply. "Your coat pocket has been on fire this last five minutes, and I haven't bothered you."—Montreal Star.

Little Girl's Face Inflamed by Psoriasis

Healed by Cuticura

"My little girl's face was so inflamed that her eyes were swollen almost shut. The trouble was diagnosed as psoriasis. She scratched night and day and was not able to obtain rest. The scratching aggravated the trouble and each finger tip was red and swollen with infection. She became so emaciated that she was very pathetic looking. After three months' suffering I recalled the Cuticura treatment used by my mother. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and used them according to directions. The first treatment brought relief and she is now healed." (Signed) Mrs. Marie J. Johnson, 4720 Ames Ave., Omaha, Neb., March 14, 1934.

YOU NEVER KNOW

By AMY CAMPBELL

LOIS moving in and out among the homing birds was suddenly filled with expectancy. "It was not quite sensible to be so stirred by the mental reiteration of a certain phrase. Not a spoken one caught in the conversations of the street. Not one from business slogans traced in electric signs. Merely a small group of words that just flashed across her ordinary thinking. Oddly and like a flash, something within her was saying right in the middle of her arithmetic—"Just as she turned the corner—"As she walked cautiously through the wet streets, trying to avoid splattering her stockings, this new phrase, kept coming between everything she was thinking until, with a certain quality of impatience, she paused mentally to charge back at the inner voice—"And what happened if she did turn the corner?" Her mind was an instant blank. This annoyed her into further challenging—"Who turned the corner, and what for—and all the rest—go-on—"

And all the way home the two girls talked to him and Jerry talked back to them and Lois listened only vaguely because now she was lost again and shy. "Oh, here we are so soon!" Jerry announced as the car stopped and he slipped out to take Lois to her door. "Some other night, Lois," he murmured carelessly and disappeared so quickly she stood on the step a moment wondering, under her flat green parasol if he had only been part of a dream. The next day Jerry was late at the office and Lois did not look up as he passed her desk. His buzzer sounded and she stole in to take his dictation with a sense of dread. "Of course he would read in her eyes that she had thought about things into the night—remembering him—counting his words like jewels—wishing they had not gone back around the corner and met the others. Oh, wanting him desperately to, tangle his umbrella with her parasol before ever it rained again. "Good morning," he said abstractedly, not looking up. "I'm late. We'll have to work fast." She settled herself for rapid copying. Her small hand flew in cool accuracy while the other hand held her place and turned pages like a swift purposeful wind. She masked herself with efficiency. When he had finished she sighed a little out of breath physically and mentally. He reached over and caught her fingers—pencil and all. "Lois, did I go too fast?" She studied him coolly, needing her hand instantly to gather up her pencils. He did not smile as a certain reproach crept into his voice. "Well, take your time getting the stuff out," and his tones dismissed her. The inner voice was speaking, "Just as she turned the corner—Jerry—" It stated adventurously. She stopped typing and imperceptibly stamped both her small feet. Tears were blurring her notes. Of course last night to him was just an incident he had forgotten. Just before closing time Jerry signaled for her. "Lois," he said, "What are you doing tonight? Can we go somewhere—dinner and anything we like afterward?" She smiled with a brilliance she hoped was convincing. "Aren't you nice? But the week's all dated." "All of it?" "Yes-a."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for January 13 PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION LESSON TEXT—Matthew 16:13-23; I Peter 2:5, 6. GOLDEN TEXT—And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matthew 16:16. PRIMARY TOPIC—How Peter Pleas'd Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter's Great Answer. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What It Means to Confess Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Think Ye of Christ? The disciples had been with the Lord for several years. They had heard his wonderful words and witnessed his mighty works. Various opinions were extant about him. Since Jesus was soon to go to the cross, it was necessary for the disciples to have a definite and true conception of him—in order to help them into the right conception, he provoked this confession from Peter, as the spokesman of the group of disciples. 1. Peter's Confession (vv. 13-16). I. How provoked (v. 13). Two questions put to the disciples called forth this great confession. a. Who do men say that the Son of Man is? (v. 13). He first inquired for the opinion of the people concerning him. It is not enough to think that he was a great teacher. Had he been content with this, he would not have been molested at Jerusalem, for this the Jews willingly acknowledged. It was his persistent claim to be the God-Man, the Messiah, the Son of God, that sent him to the cross. b. Who say ye that I am? (v. 16). This question involved the personal opinion of the disciples. To be able to tell what others think of Jesus is not enough; there must be definite, correct, and personal belief in him. Belief and character are inseparably united. 2. What Peter's confession involved (v. 16). It was his Messiahship and Deity. The burning question of the hour is, "What think ye of Christ?" It is a question that must be answered by every one. 3. Christ's commendation of Peter (v. 17). He pronounced him blessed. He was truly blessed, for he both possessed and confessed Christ. His confession showed his touch with the Heavenly Father. II. The New Body, the Church, Announced by Christ (vv. 18-20). At this juncture Christ declared his intention of bringing into existence a new body. Peter was to have a distinguished place in this body. He declared that Peter should be a foundation stone in his Church. Christ is the chief corner stone upon which the Church is built. Christ's person and Messiahship were confessed by Peter, and on this rock, the truth confessed, is laid the foundation of the apostles and prophets (Eph. 2:20). He further declared that association in this new body could not be broken by death, for the gates of Hades should not prevail against it. III. The Cross the Way to the Throne (vv. 21-23). From that time Jesus began to show unto his disciples that he must go unto Jerusalem, to suffer many things, to be killed and raised again the third day. This, indeed, startled the disciples. They did not as yet realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the sufferings of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter said, "This shall not be unto thee." Peter later saw through this darkness to the glory of the hill tops. A new hope then filled his breast (1 Pet. 1:3, 4). Christ's victory through death is yet a stumbling block to many. Many are stumbling over the doctrine of salvation through the sufferings of the cross. Salvation by blood is hated by the devil. IV. The Grand Objective of the Members of the Church (1 Pet. 2:5, 6). It is the highest ambition of every Christian to become a working part of Christ's glorious Church, which has as its supreme design the showing forth of the glory of God. It is this that beckons the believer on to the highest and best in life. No higher motive can actuate anyone than to make manifest the glory of God. The Church, God's spiritual house, has the living Christ as its chief corner stone and head. Because of their relationship to him, the believers are living stones, deriving their preciousness from him. While the world saw no beauty or comeliness in Christ, God esteemed him precious and esteems every believer precious because of his vital union with Christ. Belief in Christ The condition of salvation is that kind of belief in Jesus Christ which authenticates itself in repentance for the past and an amendment of life for the future.—L. L. Noble. The Soul's Aspirations The immortality of this life makes men yearn for a better country. The soul of man, the mark of the Creator upon his creature, should make him long for that heavenly city. The soul is too big to be satisfied away from God. Believe in Yourself Too soberly and with clear eyes believe your own time and place. There is not, and there never has been, a better time or a better place to live in.

Good Seed Curing Means Good Crops

Proper Care Is Important During Winter; Will Increase Income. By R. H. Reed, Agricultural Engineer, University of Illinois.—WNU Service. Providing good curing and storage conditions for their seed corn this winter, rather than poor or even average conditions, will be worth $40,000,000 on next year's Illinois corn crop, should 1935 be a normal year and corn prices remain favorable. This is revealed in eight years of records kept by farmers enrolled in the farm management service conducted by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, in co-operation with county farm bureaus. In these records, involving the growing of approximately 70,000 acres of corn, the difference between good and poor seed corn curing and storage amounted to 2.3 bushels an acre in the resulting crop. Even average curing and storing conditions cut the resulting crop two bushels an acre below what it was from good curing and storage of the seed. Two bushels an acre on the average annual Illinois crop of nine million acres, with corn worth 60 cents a bushel, would amount to more than $10,000,000 in corn returns. By good curing and storage is meant that the seed corn is dried rapidly and protected from freezing until the excess moisture has been removed. These conditions are not met where the corn is hung on the back porch or in the driveway of the corncrib as is practiced on many farms. Rapid drying of seed corn requires the use of some artificial heat, unless the weather is unusually favorable. For small quantities, the ears can be hung in the kitchen, or in an upstairs room around the chimney, or over an open hot air register. Large quantities of seed corn may be dried in the farm shop, garage or other buildings where a fire can be maintained. Care, however, should be taken to see that none of the corn is exposed to a temperature above 120 degrees Fahrenheit. Ventilation is also an important factor in obtaining high quality seed corn. Unless the air immediately around the ears is constantly changed, the atmosphere becomes laden with moisture, the drying will be much slower and an ideal condition is established for the development of molds. Need More Horses, Mules, to Meet Greater Demand Demand for horses and mules is expected to increase materially for the next few years. Although production has been increasing for two or three years, the number now being produced is hardly enough to meet 70 per cent of the expected demand for work stock. A large proportion of the work animals now on farms are in the old age group, and even if production of colts continues to increase, by the end of 1936 the low point in horse and mule population will be reached, in the opinion of Ohio State university farm economists. Higher feed prices this year may encourage greater use of mechanical power and may check the anticipated increase in breeding plans, even in the face of an expected rise in the price of work stock. Feeding Work Horses Wintering work horses will be a troublesome problem in view of the feed shortage. To maintain a fair condition, work horses need a daily ration of from ten to fifteen pounds of clean roughage such as hay, corn fodder, or straw. Even idle horses, in addition to the roughage, should have a little grain, especially if the roughage consists of prairie hay, straw, or corn fodder. On five to six pounds of grain per day a horse will hold its weight, the amount of grain, of course, depending somewhat on size of the animal. Horses at work need from ten to fifteen pounds of grain per head a day if they are to hold up in weight. Barley can be substituted very well for corn or oats, but it should be ground or rolled.—Missouri Farmer. Agricultural Notes The tomato is classified by the Encyclopedia of Food as a fruit. Unless in a sealed package, honey should be kept in a dry, warm place. Two-thirds of a pound of dried beet pulp takes the place of one pound of hay. Canadian western sheep ranges produce from 150,000 to 200,000 lambs each year suitable for fattening purposes. Every 3 1/2 feet from the barn to the milk house means a mile of walking for the farmer for each cow in one year. Fluorine compounds with which many fruits are sprayed have been found to be very injurious to the teeth. Twelve to fourteen per cent of protein in the grain mixture is enough for typical cows fed plenty of good alfalfa hay and corn silage. Hundreds of acres of vegetable crops were plowed under by produce farmers near St. Louis, Mo., as they found their products more valuable as fertilizer.

BUTTONS BESTOW SMARTNESS HERE

Buttons emphasize every smart detail of this unusual dress with such slender lines. See the way they follow the surplice from the right shoulder, close it at the side, and strut half the way up the forearm of the sleeve. Tiny vertical tufts are used to mold the waistline at the back, giving extra ease to the bodice. Then, too, stitched seeming down the front of the skirt seems to take away inches from the hips. The irregular neckline is softened by a most becoming scarf. This design would be charming in black satin with a scarf of the queerly named, but very lovely, dirty pink color, or metal cloth. Pattern 9176 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 3/4 yards 39 inch fabric and 1/2 yard contrasting. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included. Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plain your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE. Send your order to Sewing Circle, Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

SHE KNEW Scribbler—Ah! A check for $100 from Dribbler! And I don't know what it is for! Wife—Oh, that's for my new gown and bonnet, dear! I've been paying for it a week! For Appearances Debt Collector—Shall I call tomorrow? Young Lawyer—Twice, if convenient! I have an idea that folks think you are a client.—Answers Only to Make Him Stop Woman—Why do you want your husband to go to the hospital? He is not seriously hurt. Friend—Well, he won't whine in front of the nurse. Popular Neighbor Man—Well miss Smith when he moves. Neighbor—Yes; he has the only good lawn mower in the neighborhood.

This office acknowledges receipt of a beautiful calendar from the London, England Times. It contained 52 Rotogravure scenes in an antique frame. Also, a lovely calendar from Miss Elizabeth Foreythe, formerly a visitor in White Oaks. The calendar was from Belfast, Ireland, and contained numerous rotogravure sketches of the delightful "Old Sod." As we say in Spanish, "Gracias."

Mrs. Albert Roberts entertained the L. R. U. Bridge Club this week at the Carrizozo Eating House.

Mrs. Mary Dexter and daughter, Mrs. Monte Gardenhire, have been ill this week.

We note a newspaper clipping that says—Expert Tells Life Begins at 70. The wise man further states "Ignorance and foolish tradition have made the age above 70 the darkest area of human existence." Note—This is the first time we recall the age of forthcoming usefulness as being placed at 70 — we always thought "Life Begins at 40."

The Outlook Art & Gift Shop wishes to announce that they have just received a new line of Ladies' Chic Millinery. Your inspection invited.
