OUT-OF-THE-ORDINARY

Here is a pointer for golfers. Just as Robert Lewis was teeing off on No. 1, local golf course at Northfield, Minn., he noticed a flock of wild ducks flying over the fairway. Casting aside his driver, he picked up a spoon, hit the ball and saw one of the ducks drop with a broken neck.

Living like a wild beast for years in a jungle near Calcutta, India, and subsisting on the flesh of wild beasts and roots from trees, a wild girl was captured two years ago and an effort made to restore her to human characteristics. She refused to respond to the eating of cooked food and finally died of starvation. Being accustomed to walking on all-fours, refused to eat food brought to her and would get away from her keepers and dig for roots.

Now get this right! Donald Marshall, studio technician and step-brother of Norma Shearer, kicked his wife so hard, "right there," on the shins, that she wears the scar to show for it—she said she could not kick back because she had on tennis shoes. On those grounds, she obtained a divorce.

He was a dashing, daring Robin Hood, when on Jan. 16, he entered the First National Bank at Sayre, Okla., and at the point of a gun, backed three officials into a corner and got away with $1,577. He went to his car, laid his gun on the seat, returned to the bank and handed over the stolen money. After physicians examined the man they found out that his name was "Chester" Ford.

On Jan. 21, the coldest day experienced in Oklahoma for years, representative Marvin Wooten introduced in the legislature, a bill which provided two years imprisonment in the penitentiary for any person joining a nudist colony. He said: "I have never seen or heard of one in this state, but I want to keep them from springing up here."

"I suppose that after I'm gone, you'll marry a dizzy blonde flapper," mournfully said friend wife. "Not on your life," he replied. "I'll be looking for an old woman with $200.00 a month pension."

A man just released from the Illinois penitentiary announced his intention to get married next week. His intended bride has waited for the past 23 years for him. We'd be willing to wager that before a week goes by after the marriage that he'll kick like blazes if he has to wait 5 minutes for his breakfast.

The publisher of a little weekly newspaper at Dothan, Alabama, sends out the word that times are getting better. One day last week, he met two men who asked to be put on the mailing list and actually paid for one year's subscription in advance.

Quite out-of-the-ordinary is the report that Governor Tingley will ask the legislature to advance the salaries of men employed in the state penitentiary $10.00 a month. He said the men were working 12 hours a day and some were only getting $55.00 a month.

Thomas M. DuBois

The funeral of Thomas M. DuBois, 58, who died in the Veterans' Hospital in Albuquerque this week, was held at Corona yesterday afternoon and attended by a host of friends from that vicinity and also from other parts of the county. The services were conducted at the gymnasium.

Thomas Mickey DuBois, son of Capt. Frank A. and Sarah R. DuBois, was born Oct. 13, 1876, in Shelby, Ohio. He departed this life Jan. 22, 1935. His education was received in Ohio and in Kansas, where he moved with his family in 1887, and at Notre Dame College in Indiana.

With Captain DuBois, Tom came to New Mexico long before its statehood, starting the town of Santa Rosa and later coming to Corona, where his father homesteaded what is now the town site. Tom was married in Corona and leaves to mourn him, his widow, four children, Thelma, Zanta, Tom, Jr., and Warren, one grandson, Glen Thomas Greer, his brother Frank, and a wide circle of friends whom his Irish wit, kindly interest and pleasing personality won for him through the years.

During the Spanish-American War, he enlisted and served with Troop A, First Regiment, Ohio Cavalry Volunteers.

During his life in New Mexico and until a very few years ago, he was actively engaged in the general merchandise business, mining and ranching. He was a 32nd degree Mason and a Shriner, and a prominent civic leader, especially in any undertakings which would further educational interests in his community. Himself an athlete in his college days, he was fond of and encouraged sports.

As President and Clerk of the Corona Board of Education for a number of years, he was untiring in his efforts to develop a school of high standard. As a result of his efforts, three school buildings stand to his credit.

It is with unlimited sorrow that this community lays to rest its well-beloved citizen.

Mrs. C. O. Garrison received word from Los Angeles yesterday that her brother was critically ill and she left for that city on No. 11 last night.

The Ladies' Aid Society of White Oaks gave a supper last night and realized a neat sum from the undertaking.

Buffet Dinner

Saturday 19, at the home of Mrs. Carl Jones, a joint dinner to their many friends was given by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Barber. The color scheme of red and white was carried out in the red and white carnations, and red candles in crystal candle holders. The guests sociably wandered about in the spacious rooms, talking and chatting with friends and noting the arrival of each new couple, hoping they would prove to be the last, so enticing were the odors of food brought to the dining room. This lay at right angles to the center of the living room, thus exposing to view a lace-covered table, bright with decorations and lovely china filled with delicious food for a buffet dinner.

At last the merry crowd lined up; circled around the table, gathering delicacies as they went, then seated themselves at small tables as designated by place cards. Empty plates and second orders plainly bespoke the appreciation of guests. Messrs. Stokes and Finley, in their toasts, said lovely things of the hosts and hostesses and offered an abundance of good wishes. Mr. Reiter, accompanied by Mrs. Sears, favored the audience with two or three songs, much to their enjoyment. The evening's pleasures ended with dancing at the Country Club.

Guests present were; The Zieglers, Lemons, Shafers, Garrisons, Finleys, Becks, F. H. Johnsons, Stokes, Sears, Supt. and Mrs. Hall, Geo. Goodsons, Mmes. W. O. Garrison and Degitz, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Reiter of Las-Cruces.

Fort Stanton vs. Capitan Town Team

The Fort Stanton and Capitan basketball teams will tangle again Saturday night, Jan. 26, in the Capitan Gym. The last time these two teams met it was a battle royal from whistle to whistle, with a fist fight thrown in for good measure. The game finally ended 26-25 in Stanton's favor, but was so close that it should have been called a tie. The game will be called at 8 p. m. At 7 p. m., the Capitan H. S. takes on the Corona High.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Lowe were visitors at the Fritz ranch home near Capitan last Sunday.

PRETTY FOR THE SMALL DAUGHTER

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. But look again— isn't that double yoke attractive, ending in two demure little scallops that button down in the front? And the side pleats, which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well-cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Pattern 9826 may be ordered only in sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2 1/2 yards 30 inch fabric. Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

To Mark 300th Year of Boston Common

Pageant Next Summer to Depict Historic Events.

Boston—Saved from modern road builders and street widening only by the high-powered legislation of the Boston Common society, the tercentenary of fifty acres of cowpaths, lawns and shrubbery, unenclosed by rapid transit line or highway, will be celebrated next summer.

Of course, thousands of persons are inconvenienced each day because of the disinclination of Boston antiquarians to let go another foot of land from the Common for needed street widenings or permit the building of roads across it, but other thousands revere it for its place in American history and the breathing space it affords in the heart of downtown Boston.

For this reason, a committee is now raising a fund, tentatively placed at $300,000, to reconstruct the scenes and homes of vanished days, the docks, ducking stools and hangings, during the 1835 celebration of its three hundredth anniversary.

As It Was 300 Years Ago. With the help of the Emergency Relief administration, the committee, headed by Everett B. More, hopes to draw from the past a representation of three hundred years of history to show the plot as it was when Quakers and pirates dangled from its elms, as it was when young Woodbridge and his rival duelled at forty paces for the favors of a Boston belle.

The committee, if sufficient funds are raised, hopes to reproduce the Common's ducking stool; show the smoker's circle where "henpecked" devotees of nicotine repaired when driven from the home; reproduce the spinning bee of 1753 when young ladies revealed their matronly traits for the edification of their swains. The anti-slavery meeting of the '50s, Earl Percy and his retainers before the Revolution; William Blaxton (or Blackstone), Boston's first settler who sold his land, now the Common, to a community which he found too crowded and moved to Rhode Island; Beacon street "when respectability stalked unheeded"; the coming of the railroad in 1830; the water celebration in 1819, when a public system was first installed; the arrival of Lafayette on the Common, June 17, 1825, when he came to attend the Bunker Hill exercises; recruiting for the Civil war in tents near Tremont street all this and much more is in the scope of a celebration which could almost deplete a nation's history and progress as well as a city's.

First Woman in Boston.

Anna Pollard, a woman noted for her plain face, her fine tavern on Beacon street, and the fact that she was the first woman in Boston, may well find some mention in the ceremonies. She was a favorite of the Harvard class of 1633 as well as of 1639 and 1640, and others who loved her entertainment until at last she went to her reward. In those days Beacon street, according to a recent description, was "the tenderloin district."

More than sixty of America's great—soldiers, poets, statesmen, Presidents, preachers, architects—were wont to roam in leisure hours the routes that cross this patch of tree-studded green in the heart of a city.

Fish Found Alive in Shell of Oyster

Snow Hill, Md.—Dorsey Carman, of this city, found a fish in an oyster when opening oysters. The fish, while sluggish, was still alive, tightly closed in the shell. It is supposed that the fish entered the shell while the oyster had its mouth open to feed and was imprisoned when the shell closed. The clean and unspoiled condition of the shell was sufficient evidence that the fish ate the oyster. The fish was a bullfish, 3 1/2 inches long. It had become oyster colored.

The World's Greatest Need

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Questionnaires seeking information on every conceivable subject frequently come to one's desk.

They are sent by students pursuing advance courses of study, by business concerns and professional institutions, and in some cases are sent as advertising propaganda. The many received, we cannot remember one which seriously asked the important question, "What is the world's greatest need?" The financier would doubtless like an answer something like this: "The world's greatest need is a return to economic prosperity." The college president would doubtless reply that education is our greatest need. Social workers engaged in labors to reinforce humanity with high moral purposes would acclaim character as the world's most desperate need. All very good. The trouble is that none of these questions go to the root of the matter. The world may need all of these things but the greatest need is the power to bring about these results. It is not difficult for a physician to write a prescription after he has made the diagnosis. Were we to make a diagnosis of the world's moral and economic condition today, we would soon discover that the greatest need is not for "things" but for "spirit"—an attitude of mind and heart.

The spirit of good will is basic to all economic, social and moral recovery. Our racial problem is solved when the spirit of good will removes our prejudice against those not of our blood. The economic problem is solved when the spirit of good will removes the danger of that doctrine that only the fittest have a right to survive. The spirit of international good will solves for us the problem of universal peace. We have tried peace pacts, courts of justice, and gentlemen's agreements. We fought a war to end war. We failed miserably. Why not try the method of the Prince of Peace, the "spirit of good will"?

Butter Yellow for Walls

Butter color is a new shade of yellow for walls, taken up by a prominent interior decorator and rapidly becoming a vogue. It is especially effective in a room where a pleasant sunny air is needed—as a breakfast room or dining nook. One or two pieces of furniture may be painted the same, with upholstery and pillows to match. Contrast is obtained by window curtains and solid-hued rugs or carpet in raspberry color.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

HOME ironing can be the finest sort, or it can be just the opposite. It all depends on how it is done. This concerns not only the right handling of the iron and its varying degrees of heat, but how the material or garments are positioned on the board, whether they are ironed on the right or wrong side, whether they have an ironing cloth between the goods and the iron, whether they are pressed across the goods or lengthwise of it, or on the straight of the goods which means with the weave, etc. While there are many details to pay attention to, they soon become second nature to heed. Since at one time or another every woman irons or presses garments, or goods, or both, it is well to acquire early the correct knack.

Cotton and linen can be ironed either on right or wrong side. Damask linen, such as tablecloths, napkins, etc., should be actually damp, pressed on right and wrong sides with a hot iron, and have a polishing pressing on the right side. It will then have a high gloss, like new damask, and a body to the texture obtainable in no other way. Silk damask is treated like silk, not linen, and is ironed with a slightly dampened cloth over it and with an iron of moderate heat. Avoid a hot iron when pressing silks. It is detrimental. If a damp ironing cloth is not used, iron on the wrong side. If creases do not come out entirely (as desired) they may be dabbed with a damp cloth and then pressed again.

Effect of Ironing on Colors. Should the color of the silk change by this, it will be necessary to press it with a damp cloth over it to make the color uniform. Wait until the material is cold before doing this, however, as some colors change under heat but resume their original color when cold. This is especially true of purple in all its tints such as orchid, lavender, etc. In other textiles as well as silk. Such a curious changing and restoring of color through pressing and cooling is to be expected.

Pongee must be evenly damp all over or else dry when ironed or it will be spotted where there was moisture. These spots and streaks will come out as soon as the material is dipped in water and then pressed either while damp or after the material is dry.

Decoration of Mantels. The decorative treatment of mantelpieces and walls above and about them has always been a fascinating problem. Styles of mantels vary with fashions. Sometimes they are wide, sometimes narrow and sometimes they are eliminated altogether. But this last does not eliminate the decoration since the wall above a mantel is so allied with it that it becomes part and parcel of the treatment. There are three distinctive overmantel treatments which can be very beautiful. One is to have the space hung with a handsome old brocade, damask, or other suitable textile, or perhaps a tapestry of a pictorial character. Another is to have a picture hung in the space. A third way is for a mirror to be over the mantel. All these are accepted ways of decorating the space. For some years past the mantel mirror has been out of style, but it is gradually assuming its old popularity. Mirrors are very much in evidence today, and there are few places which lend themselves better to its reflecting beauty than above a mantel. There may be side lights in the wall or on the mantel which, in their duplication in the reflecting surface, supply extra illumination at no extra cost.

Baseball in the Far East

Japan Has Taken Wholeheartedly to the American National Game Since Its Introduction Into That Country in 1889.

HENRY CHAUNCEY, in the Literary Digest.

Babe Ruth and a team of major league stars visited Japan, slugging out home runs and fanning the best batters in the Far East. The invading Americans naturally won their games, but they were playing teams that were eager to learn every new trick of the trade. It is a characteristic of the Japanese that they pick up something new, master it, and then improve upon it. America can one day expect that the problem of parity will involve baseball as well as battleships.

The Japanese not only play baseball and play it well, but they eat, drink, and sleep it. It is their main source of recreation. Even though the Japanese are enthusiastic about all forms of athletics from their own judo (ju-jitsu) and kendo (fencing) to such western sports as basketball, skiing and rowing, baseball outranks all other games put together in the interest of Japanese. In every public park, one finds games being played from early morning (I have seen boys walking to the park all dressed up in their uniforms at six o'clock in the morning), until dark.

All who can play baseball, and those who are too old or too busy to play, follow the school and college games closely. The interscholastic tournaments, which are held in the big cities, and all of the games of the Tokyo University league are broadcast from the two biggest radio stations in Japan. Millions of people listen in. Stores, where there are radios, are crowded.

Baseball in Japan is now several generations old. It was first introduced into the country in 1859 by an American engineer who was working on the government railways. In his spare time he taught some of the laborers to play baseball, and organized games between the different gangs. American visiting professors did likewise for their pupils, and it was not long before most of the colleges had teams. Games frequently were played against the crews of American ships docked in Japanese ports, and against teams made up of American residents.

Then, in 1903, the Wacada university team made a trip to the west coast, playing against Stanford and other of the coast colleges. Incidentally, it was the first time that Japanese players used splices. When they arrived in Palo Alto, it was discovered that the spikes had all been put on backward. Every cobbler in the town had to be rounded up to make the necessary changes before the game the following day. From 1905 on, trips back and forth between American and Japanese colleges have been frequent. Some of the other American college teams that have visited Japan are: Stanford, California, Washington, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois.

A group of big league and coast league players went to Japan in 1908, playing games against Kelo, Wacada and an all-star team. Though the professionals won all their games, many of them were close. Five years later McGraw and Comiskey brought their all-star National and American league teams to the Orient. Their games were watched with eager eyes by the Japanese, who are ever anxious to learn all there is to know about the game.

Perhaps even more important in the development of baseball in Japan was Kelo's hiring, in 1911, two young players of the New York Giants, Arthur Joseph Schaefer and Fuller W. Thompson, to coach them for a month in a winter training camp at Kobe.

It was then, for the first time, that Japanese teams learned to play baseball scientifically. Since the university players coach the middle schools (corresponding to our high schools) during the summer, the knowledge thus acquired was quickly and widely disseminated.

As far back as twenty-three years ago, therefore, the Japanese knew how to play baseball, and played with reasonable success against American colleges. In the summer of the same year, 1911, Kelo toured the United States, playing against forty college and professional teams, winning 60 per cent of their games.

The Japanese take baseball very seriously, even more so than Americans take football. The players live together in a dormitory adjacent to the baseball field where they can talk baseball fifteen hours a day and practice three hours.

All in all, the members of these Japanese college teams are either playing or coaching baseball eight months out of the year. In the Kobe-Osaka district it is possible to play all the year round.

Record Pilgrimage

Nearly 60,000 men, all ex-soldiers of 15 nations, recently took part in the largest pilgrimage ever made to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes at Lourdes, France. Three former engines stood guard over the famous grotto, they being, at the request of the pope, a German, a Belgian and a Frenchman. Among the countries represented were the United States, Canada, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Germany, Hungary, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Brazil.

Father Neptune Pictured as Both Friend and Foe

The sea is at one and the same time Holland's foe and friend. The ever-present menace of breaking dikes hangs constantly over the heads of the country's placid burghers. Perpetual vigilance is a necessity. Without it more than half of Holland's population of 8,000,000 might at any time be swallowed up by the sea.

At the same time, the canals, which have been built in the progress of reclaiming the land, provide Holland with the cheapest and most effective system of transportation. Today about two-thirds of the country's transportation of goods is by water. As a means of protection against invasion from an outside enemy, the sea also is Holland's most effective ally. In 1672 the armies of France, England and a part of Germany, at war with the republic of the Seven States of the Netherlands, marched on Holland. They would have succeeded in taking the capital but for a flood artificially created to stop the invasion of the enemy. At the beginning of the great European war in 1914, everything had been prepared to flood a part of the country in the event of Holland being compelled to take part in the war. It is related that years ago, long before the World War, the queen of Holland visited her neighbor, the then German kaiser, at Potsdam. In honor of the distinguished visitor a review was held of the kaiser's famous bodyguard. The kaiser, with a significant side glance at the queen of Holland, is reported to have said, "The soldiers of my bodyguard are all six feet tall." Whereupon the queen is said to have answered, "That is just two feet short of the depth of the water with which I can flood Holland."

Spare the Spinach!

The main value of spinach lies in its good content of iron, its alkali-forming mineral, and its vitamin A, B, and C content. All these elements, however, are present in other vegetables. Naturally no two green vegetables are exactly alike in composition, but there is an advantage in this fact in that it provides release from monotony. Try serving some of the other green vegetables to your children and find out what they like; then you can gauge the amounts of these to provide exactly the same things for which you are using spinach.—Dr. Walter H. Eddy in Good Housekeeping.

FOOD AND EVOLUTION

Ease in securing food is the greatest factor in the development of a species, declares Dr. C. M. Young of England. Securing food is absolutely necessary to life, and many of the lower forms of life, consisting of only a few cells have scarcely changed in eons because their whole life had to be spent in obtaining food, digesting and eliminating it. Higher forms of life, which digest food outside the body cells, take much less time for feeding and have time to develop.—Pathfinder Magazine.

INSTANT STARTING LIGHTNING PICK-UP

TRY THIS BETTER WAY OF STARTING YOUR CAR IN EXTREMELY COLD WEATHER

Automobile makers recommend this method of starting in cold weather, except for cars with automatic starters. Try it for a quick, easy start without danger of "flooding" by too much choking.

*If your motor does not start instantly on Special Winter-Blend Conoco Bronze Gasoline, it needs mechanical service.

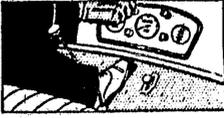

1. Leave ignition OFF. Pull choke out all the way. Push down your clutch pedal and keep it down.

2. Open hand-throttle one-third. Leaving ignition OFF, step on starter for several motor revolutions.

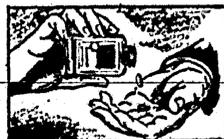

3. Push choke back in. Turn ignition on. Step on starter. Motor should fire instantly.*

4. Warm up motor gradually. Use choke sparingly, only enough to get smooth firing.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. The ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, while Penelope sells his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. He is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "riddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a responsible criminal and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lenny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, is won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III

Stephen elbowed his way into the courtroom. Nance Belden saw him, and from behind the bars of the prisoner's dock waved to him and called cheerily: "Hello, Steve."

"Silence—you!" the bailiff warned her.

Nance made a face at him; then, observing Stephen lay finger to lip in a warning gesture, she tossed her head, tilted her chin and bent upon the judge a cold and defiant stare.

The bailiff opened the door of the prisoners' dock and beckoned to her.

"Nance Belden," the judge queried, "have you anything to say as to why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?"

"I've got a mouthpiece," the girl retorted. "Ask him!"

From a chair beside the counsel's table a young man arose. "May I please the court, the public defender has withdrawn from this case and I am now counsel for the defendant. My name is David Tyrrell. I am reliably informed, your honor, that, following a fair and impartial trial, this defendant has been convicted of the crime of which she stands accused and is now before the court for sentence."

"Mr. Tyrrell, your client is now under a suspended sentence from the Superior court, for the crime of grand theft. She was there sentenced to two years in San Quentin penitentiary, but paroled for two years. Less than two months have passed since she was paroled, and today she stands before the court for sentence under a charge of petit larceny. The defendant evidently is incorrigible, and I intend to remand her to the Superior court for commitment under the old charge of grand theft."

"I thank your honor. I have been retained in this apparently hopeless case for the purpose of adducing a sound reason why this defendant should be neither sentenced under the present charge nor remanded to the Superior court for commitment under sentence for the former crime. To that end, your honor, I ask leave to present an expert witness to testify to the mental irresponsibility of my client."

"One moment, please, Mr. Tyrrell. Your action would be merely wanting your time and that of the court. I shall remand the prisoner immediately to the Superior court, with a request to the judge thereof that her case be taken up immediately. I sentence this prisoner to ninety days in the county jail, but the sentence will be suspended during her good behavior for one year from date. A bailiff will conduct you, your expert witness and the defendant at once to Department Number Six of the Superior court, and I will immediately telephone to the judge and request that he listen to your expert witness."

As they entered the Superior court the judge glanced at a document which evidently had reached him from the police-magistrate's court. "Mr. Tyrrell, I understand you desire to present some expert testimony in an effort to prove the mental irresponsibility of this defendant, Nance Belden. I may state that I have already been in telephonic communication with Doctor Bletcher, and have had a complete report from him on this case. You may proceed, however, to present your side of it. Who is your witness?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt, your honor," and Tyrrell indicated Stephen.

"I know all about Doctor Burt," the judge said pleasantly. "I had him in my court a year ago as an expert witness in the matter of the Carter will case." He nodded to Stephen. "This court is very much interested in getting at the facts in this case and it is obliged to you for your voluntary attendance. What is your professional opinion of this girl's mentality?"

"I have not had a fair opportunity to study her, your honor," Stephen replied, "hence I am not in a position to give the court more than a snap decision."

"How long have you studied her?"

"About thirty minutes, your honor."

"H'm—m!" Doctor Bletcher examined her on three different occasions, his examinations embodying a total of about six hours' time."

"With all due deference to my distinguished colleague," Stephen replied with his singularly charming smile, "six hours is not usually considered more than sufficient time to form an approximate opinion, which subsequent investigations may set at variance. If this girl were to become a patient of mine today, I should devote many weeks to an effort to demonstrate that my original opinion regarding her was in error."

"Is she crazy, Doctor Burt?"

"Not in the sense that we customarily employ the term, your honor. I should say, rather, that her psychology is abnormal, that she is neither moral nor immoral, but unmoral. For instance, when I asked her why she stole silk stockings, she told me quite frankly that she did it because there were runs in all her old stockings. That reply was very illuminating. As I talked further with her I noted her valiant moods and quickly came to the conclusion that she is suffering from dissociation by reason of shock. In other words, this girl, who doubtless in happier days possessed a single personality and that a normal one, has now acquired a secondary personality. In plain English, two entirely different people inhabit the one body.

"The first personality, which I shall call A, is the result of acquired instincts, habit, education, and repressions imposed on society by convention and the code of procedure which we call morals. This has been submerged wholly or in part by a second personality, which I shall call B, and when B personality rules her she has amnesia for what I have termed her acquired or normal instincts. Out of her unconscious mind then emerge, as definite impulses to action, the old antipathies to such action, which we medical men term conflicts.

"Let me illustrate. We will assume that at this moment she is possessed of her personality A, and in this state she realizes she has runs in all her stockings—that she must have new stockings, but she sees some stockings which she can readily steal. Normal people often have impulses to steal, your honor, and Nance Belden has an impulse to steal the stockings she needs.

"But here a factor intervenes. She has been taught, from the day she manifested thought, that it is wrong to steal, and this moral lesson has impressed itself upon her conscious mind. With repetition, the thought, becoming have been a very potent reason for the commission of such an unintelligent act as theft. So immediately I commenced to question her as to her family, her past.

"She could tell me nothing. She is not at all sure that her name is Nance Belden, and I am satisfied that her inability to throw any light on her genesis was not born of a desire to withhold that information. I believe she has amnesia for a certain period of her life, and we know that such a condition is usually the result of a severe mental shock. In such cases the patient usually has an intense desire to forget absolutely the unhappy, unpleasant or terrifying episode or person that produced the shock, and so intense is the power of will in certain highly sensitive people, women particularly, that not infrequently they succeed! Thus amnesia is produced. It is, in a sense, autohypnosis, and your honor undoubtedly is aware that people who have been hypnotized remember nothing of what occurs during the hypnotic state."

"I believe I follow you," the judge murmured.

"I have shown you why the normal Nance Belden would not steal. But now comes that mental shock I spoke of—with consequent amnesia for all of her life that has preceded it; or it may be a part of that life. With the amnesia comes what we term dissociation or mental disintegration. The unconscious overwhelms the conscious; the acquired instincts of morality—social usage—drop out of the conscious into the unconscious, and the thoughts and impulses that have lain dormant and defeated in the unconscious are now in the saddle. Unfortunately who have acquired dual personalities or a dissociated personality go from one personality into the other and back again, with or without amnesia for the preceding state.

"At a time when Nance Belden's second personality (B) ruled her, and she decided to steal those stockings, she was acting under the impulsion of an idea that could not be combated. To steal a habit, dropped out of her conscious mind to become conserved in her unconscious mind. Conserved there, it became a definite part of her personality—her soul, if you will. Thereafter it was not necessary to remind herself that it was wrong to steal. She knew it was, without having to think about it at all, and this unconscious knowledge was her protection in the fleeting moment of temptation, aroused by her definite need and the knowledge that, lacking money to buy the stockings, and faced with the absolute necessity for acquiring stockings, the sole alternative was to steal them. She got no further than that vague, conscious thought. Immediately the knowledge that it was immoral to steal—that nothing could possibly excuse theft—rose out of her unconscious mind and became a dominating conscious thought. Now, right there appeared the mental phenomenon known among psychiatrists as a complex or conflict. In all conflicts the stronger wins—and in this particular mental conflict, the will not to steal won instantly. It was an older habit of thought. It was an acquired instinct, whereas the impulse to steal was not a habit of thought, because she had never indulged in theft! We say we do a thing on instinct, but really we act after due, if incalculably brief, cogitation, based on reason, which is the result of habituation to doing certain things.

"This Girl, Who Doubtless in Happier Days Possessed a Single Personality and That a Normal One, Has Now Acquired a Secondary Personality."

"This defendant, your honor, is a healthy girl as far as I can judge from outward appearances. But she is what you often hear referred to as high-strung. And she is so unusually intelligent that I readily realized there must had become an acquired instinct, or at least a very strong instinct. There may have been a certain amount of repression against the act at first, but gradually that repressive instinct, i. e., her moral instincts, once part of her conscious mind but now relegated to her unconscious mind, grew weaker, until finally the stronger instinct won, and the result is, we have Nance Belden up before your honor for commitment to San Quentin penitentiary on a suspended sentence for grand theft."

"Have you any theory as to what this mental shock might be, Doctor Burt?"

"I have a very definite theory as to what prepared the ground, so to speak, for the mental shock, but I have not the slightest idea of the nature of the shock."

"This is most interesting, Doctor Burt. Pray explain."

"Look carefully at this defendant, your honor. You see a young woman about five feet, five inches high—normal height for a woman of her age, which I imagine to be about twenty-one or twenty-two. How much do you weigh, Miss Belden?"

"A hundred and twenty-eight pounds."

Political Craft in England

Back in eighteenth century England, political corruption was carried on in an open manner. Gentlemen wishing to buy government positions and office-holders having their for sale advertised in the newspapers. Often, too, prices were mentioned, some running as high as $15,000.

Manure Dressing Proves Good Plan

Wheat Yields Increased and the Following Hay Crop Will Be Larger.

By Earl E. Barnes, Agronomist, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.—WNU Service.

Top-dressing wheat with manure in the winter has proved very beneficial to wheat and to the new seeding. From this practice benefits to the following corn crop also may be expected, according to the results of experiments on seven county and district experiment farms in Ohio.

In the experiments the corn and wheat also received broadcast applications of 200 to 300 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate, and during the winter before the land was plowed for corn, eight tons of manure were applied. The amount of top-dressing given the wheat averaged 4 1/2 tons of manure an acre.

Over a five-year period the winter applications of manure on wheat caused six bushel increases in yield. The hay crop following the wheat was hoisted almost half a ton an acre. Increases in eastern Ohio were considerably larger than in western Ohio.

The effect on the corn crop. It is estimated from an experiment conducted at Wooster, is to produce a yield 85 to 90 per cent as large as when the manure is applied to the soil to be plowed down for corn.

This method of using manure offers protection to the wheat from heaving during the late winter and early spring, and furnishes the much needed nitrogen in the spring when rapid growth of the wheat plant demands it.

In dry springs it also adds greatly in conserving moisture in the soil near the surface, a condition which is almost sure to lead to an excellent stand of clover.

An application of manure on wheat is a fundamental soil treatment on farms where difficulty is encountered in getting a good stand of grass and clover.

Badly Weathered Hay Is Not Best for Dairy Herd

At the federal experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., cows have been kept continuously on grain and hay rations, with no pasture for a period of seven years. These cows have maintained their health, productiveness and reproductive capacity just as well as cows that had access to pasture during the summer. In all experiments in which green, No. 1 hay was used, alfalfa was used in most of the experiments, but in one case U. S. No. 1 timothy was fed, and no bad results of any kind were noticed. However, where poor quality, No. 3 timothy was fed, the cows fell off in milk yield, and many of the calves were born dead. The green hay seems to give good results because of its high vitamin-A content. Badly weathered hay has lost much of its vitamin-A, and so is not satisfactory as a feed for dairy cows.

Lime Content of Soil

Lime content of the soil usually determines the type of forage that can be grown, according to the agronomy department at the Ohio State university. Alfalfa can be grown only on soils which contain a natural supply of lime or which have been liberally limed. Red clover does well on soils which have received one-half to two-thirds the lime applications necessary to prepare them for alfalfa. Alsike and timothy establish themselves with difficulty on very acid soils unless manure has been used liberally. Bluegrass pastures will thrive on soils whose lime content is satisfactory for red clover if fertilizer needs are supplied.

Packing Citrus Fruits

The best grades of all the citrus fruits, says the bureau of agricultural economics, are very carefully sorted at the packing houses, washed, polished, wrapped in paper, and packed in crates for shipment. Such fruit rates a higher retail price because of its fine appearance, due to the care and labor expended on it, but it is not in any way improved in flavor. Oranges are often attractively packed in open mesh bags holding one or two dozen oranges so that the housewife can see the condition, and size of what she is getting, and buy in small quantities, avoiding waste.

Trees Cut Swiss Soil Erosion

Probably nowhere is the value of trees in the prevention of soil erosion and shifting recognized more keenly than in Switzerland, where mountain slides are a constant menace. For this reason the forest laws of that country are very strict. Every precaution is taken to save masses of trees that might be natural ramparts, and it is illegal for a resident to fell a tree, even on his own property, without government consent.

Campaign Against Rats

Rats are destructive at all seasons of the year but most noticeably during the winter when they direct their attention to granaries. This is the best time to start a campaign against both rats and mice in the barns. Each rat eats or destroys at least $5 worth of food in a year. They are also active agents in spreading diseases. In England where rigid quarantine rules were imposed to check outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease the rats continued to move about and spread infection.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—It will be remembered that prior to America's entrance into the World war, the then-President Woodrow Wilson pursued an announced policy of "watchful waiting."

We are seeing a simulation of that course at present although the country is at peace and not at war. The policy of watchful waiting, adopted by President Roosevelt, has reference not to international relations but to domestic affairs. To be specific, it relates solely to the political situation in the new congress. The President is confronted, as everyone knows, with a huge bloc of extremely radical members in the house and senate and he has his hands full in compelling the congress to rubber stamp administration legislation.

Recent developments, White House pronouncements and other straws tending to show which way the wind blows indicate definitely that Mr. Roosevelt is going to avoid open clashes as far as possible. He is not going to test the mettle of the radical group too far without being sure of his ground.

Therefore, we may expect to see considerable delay in enactment of new banking legislation and in dealing with highly controversial questions centering in section 7 (a) of the national recovery act. Likewise, there will be hesitancy on the part of the administration to push forward a program of revision for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the policy of waiting may be expected to be disclosed in some other phases of legislation such as the unemployment insurance scheme.

I do not mean to convey the impression that there will be an entire absence of bills—some of them already are in the congressional hopper—dealing with these various questions. But definitely, it can be said at this time that the White House is watching congressional developments to determine just how far to the radical side it must go in order to avoid a wide open split between the ultra-radicals and the New Deal contingent. Just where the conservatives will figure in this picture is yet too early to determine except that certainly they can prove themselves to be thorns in the sides of the Democratic leaders at most inopportune times.

Toughest of Questions

To better indicate problems confronting the President with respect to his relationship with congress, it is necessary only to call attention to that most controversial of all questions—section 7 (a) of the recovery act. This provision has had numerous interpretations placed upon it and its effect generally has been to assist the international unions in strengthening their organizations throughout American industry. Section 7 (a) specifies, in effect, that the union in any factory having the most votes speaks for all of the employees in their dealings with the plant management. This provision is what the American Federation of Labor describes as collective bargaining. It has resulted in many cases in disruption of the so-called company unions, organizations having no affiliation with any other union but usually fostered by the corporation or which the workers are employees.

The consensus among unbiased observers here seems to be that the Federation of Labor overplayed its hand last winter in enforcing such a far-reaching interpretation of section 7 (a) as to give the larger union the voice of all employees. At that time NRA, with Donald R. Richberg guiding the policy, committed itself definitely in favor of such a construction. Current developments are generally accepted as showing that either the NRA administration or union labor failed to look far enough into the future to foresee the reaction that is now taking place.

As a matter of fact, tremendous pressure is being exerted on individual members of the house and senate for a revision of this section, and something will come of it before congress adjourns. Of course, when union labor acts in concert, it usually turns the gaze of politicians very white from fear, but in the present instance, the politicians are torn between the devil and the deep blue sea.

Industrialists after all, are the boys who usually contribute to campaign funds. The politicians do not dare ignore that segment of political strength, either. Consequently, it is apparent now that there will be an attempt to rewrite section 7 (a) in a manner that will eliminate its ambiguities and take away from Mr. Richberg, now the policy director of NRA, the authority to do so much interpreting.

At the same time, the President has a problem of some consequence on his hands in the AAA. Chester Davis, the administrator, is generally regarded among Washington observers as a man with both feet on the ground. Such is not their view, however, with respect to some of the other individuals in the department.

Take H. R. Tolley, for example, Mr.

Tolley has the title of director of planning for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. His relationship with Mr. Davis is almost identical with that between Undersecretary Rexford G. Tugwell and Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Davis is known to lean upon Mr. Tolley, but Tolley and Professor Tugwell do not always see eye to eye. So there is a personnel problem that may or may not become acute.

But as regards the congressional situation Mr. Tolley carries much more water on his shoulders than does Professor Tugwell. Readers will recall efforts made in the last session of congress to "strengthen" the agricultural adjustment act. Professor Tugwell supported those amendments and, having his head out of water, he became the target. Actually, the best information available is that while the voice was that of Tugwell, the hand was the hand of Tolley.

The common gossip now is that Mr. Tolley is presenting, rather preparing, proposals for "strengthening" the act and that he has not taken Mr. Tugwell into his plans. This being true, the suggestion is frequently heard that Mr. Tolley may commit the administration in certain directions toward regimentation of the farmers to an extent which Mr. Roosevelt does not desire to go.

Mr. Tolley is said to favor inclusion of the fruit and berry and specialty crops under federal control. This is believed to come from his California background, but regardless of its root it must be admitted its sponsor is making headway with the plans.

None can tell, however, until the details of the Tolley program are out in the open exactly what congressional reaction will be. Suffice it to say at this time that there are numerous Democrats, important Democrats at that, who do not go along with Tolley or with Tugwell, and the prediction is frequently made that Tolley's name may receive treatment as rough in congressional debate as did the name of Professor Tugwell last winter.

Banking Legislation

With respect to banking legislation radicals and conservatives likewise are at each other's throats, only this time has become bitter already. Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve board has been made the target of a vicious attack by Senator Glass of Virginia, recognized everywhere as the outstanding financial authority among Democrats at the Capitol. Senator Glass openly charged Governor Eccles with exceeding his authority in a recent ruling requiring state banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve board to reduce their interest rate paid on time and savings deposits. These banks were reached through the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation of which they are members and with whose regulations they must comply. The Virginia senator holds that the Federal Reserve board under the guidance of Governor Eccles was responsible for this action and he was not careful in tearing off the bark in a letter stating his views. Senator Glass has forced a temporary halt in the order.

While the Eccles-Glass row may be regarded as purely a controversy between two individuals in positions of high authority, it is much more than that. It presages trouble on any banking legislation that goes farther afield than has occurred heretofore because Senator Glass is an unequivocal light for retention of the independence of the Federal Reserve system from treasury domination.

It is not difficult to see why Senator Glass fears such policy as the interest rate reduction. He thinks that the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation already has been figuratively swallowed by the treasury and he believes that the administration also desires the treasury to swallow the Federal Reserve board. The next logical step if the latter is accomplished, is for the treasury to seek establishment of a central bank where the currency would be under control of politicians instead of responsive to business needs as it is now with the twelve regional Federal Reserve banks in operation.

Too much attention should not be paid, in the opinion of astute observers here, to the mass of radical bills now flowing through the routine channels of introduction and reference to committees. Some of them, it is true, will become the basis of legislation later on but every house member or senator with an idea drafts it into the form of a bill and presents it in order that at some time or other his name may be attached to the legislation. But it must be remembered that with the radical strength existing in both houses of congress some of these bills may get further through the legislative mill than they ordinarily would reach. This fact apparently justifies Mr. Roosevelt's waiting policy. But at the same time, I hear, it is subjecting the administration to a fresh outburst of criticism among that segment of the population which would like to know what the administration policy is.

Paris Acclaims the Beauty of Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For sheer loveliness whenever, wherever, if ever has eye beheld a more entrancing array of lace evening gowns than those which are now gracing the mid-winter social scene? When we say sheer loveliness we mean just that—sheer and lovely as the smart new laces and nets, chiffons and marquisettes can make the party frocks and evening formal no so voguish.

centered in the picture, Paton has very ingeniously contrived to coax a youthful little peplum to circle the hips and go ruffling down the back. From the picture one might easily fancy that net of large open mesh fashioned this dress instead of lace. However, it is really a rather heavy lace, smartly patterned in a conventional design which is younger looking than the more formal and ornate orals. There is just enough sophistication about this dainty frock to appeal to the bud "just out" in society who aspires to poise and dignity.

CONTRAST SLEEVES

The idea of sleeves contrasting the rest of the dress is holding good in midseason styling. Advance spring fashions and resort modes also emphasize this feature. Not only are sleeves in direct contrast but the matter of cutting sleeves and yokes in one is important, according to reports in regard to advance fashions. The dinner dress pictured is of dull black velvet with cut-in-one sleeves and yoke of sheer ribbed velvet which makes this dress practical for late-into-the-spring wear.

NEW WRINKLES IN SPRING SHOWINGS

Peplums and pleats are the new wrinkles in advance style showings for spring, and in last-word touches for mid-winter costumes. Pleats are cropping out all over the place—in evening gowns and daytime frocks, used to give skirt fullness in back or front, or to add character to a peplum flare.

Wide Belts and Princess Lines Are Now Emphasized

Two fashion specifications—wide belts and princess lines—are emphasized to a degree that makes it seem certain that there's to be no fooling about women keeping their waistslimes well corseted and smooth. In either case, it must be carefully and thoroughly digested that it is not a pulled-in or bunched waistline. Wide belts are now shaped so that they have a curved profile to coincide with the natural waistline, and thus putting a stop once and for all to the abrupt cut at top and bottom that has been the big drawback in wide belts in the past.

THE CABIN

By R. H. WILKINSON

THE cabin was located in a grove of evergreens. High flung mountain peaks surrounded it, hemmed it in. A tiny river ran through the grove and from its banks a path wound up to the cabin's front door, 50 yards distant. It was mid-afternoon when Constable Thorpe Leonard of the mounted police forces at Lamonte beached his canoe and came up the path.

There were two men with him, Gene Lameraux, the half-breed trapper, who had brought news of Mitchell's death, and Dr. Nathan Irving, connected with the police in a medical capacity. The cabin was a single room affair. There was a cook stove, a bunk built into the wall, a home-made table, a chair, three empty soap boxes, shelves lined with provisions, a lamp and a litter of Mitchell's personal effects.

On the opposite side of the room he picked up a glass, smelted of it, screwed up his nose at the unfamiliar odor, and returned to the doctor. "Better analyze what's left in this glass, doc. It looks like Mitchell drank the stuff."

Leonard looked for and found more of the imprints, compared them with the others that were about. Presently Lameraux, who had been watching the operations, laughed. "There's nothing strange about zee imprint, M'sieu. I made it myself, early this morning."

The doctor was lighting a cigarette. "May not be strychnine, but something equally as powerful." "And something that would effect an instantaneous death?" "Yes."

Leonard seemed to consider, and Doctor Irving said: "It never seemed to me that Mitchell was the sort of guy who'd kill himself, despite his rotten luck." He shrugged.

"We'd better be moving along, in order to get to town before dark. Shall I carry the body down to the canoe?" "No. Let Lameraux do it."

He issued the customary challenge and reached under his jacket for the handcuffs that dangled there. "You should have kept up your bluff, mister; if it hadn't been for the glass you might have got away with it."

Leonard looked up sharply. "Glass?" he asked curiously. Leonard nodded. "To begin with Old Mitchell made his strike and was working the claim. Any fool could have seen that. Lameraux must have come along, talked with the old boy and then gone up to the cabin with him for breakfast."

Leonard looked for and found more of the imprints, compared them with the others that were about. Presently Lameraux, who had been watching the operations, laughed. "There's nothing strange about zee imprint, M'sieu. I made it myself, early this morning."

PETER'S LESSON IN HUMBLE SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—John 13:1-17; I Peter 5:5. GOLDEN TEXT—Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Ye, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: a hand.

Christ's Amazing Love for His Own (vv. 1-3). Jesus was fully conscious of what was immediately before him. He knew that the cross, with all its shame and anguish, was upon him; he knew that his disciples would shamefully forsake him in a few hours; he knew that one of that number would be the instrument in the hands of the devil in his betrayal; he was fully conscious of his Deity; he knew that all things were in his hands. He did not withdraw his love from them because of their weakness and the shameful failure which he knew would soon be made manifest. He not only loved them to the end of his earthly ministry, but loved them unto the uttermost.

Christ Washing the Disciples' Feet (vv. 4-11). He did not regard his hands too holy to do this menial service. The true Christian does not allow his rank in society to keep him from acts of lowly service. 1. Steps in this service (vv. 4-6). a. He rose from supper. b. Laid aside his garments. c. Took a towel and girded himself. d. Poured water into a basin. e. Washed his disciples' feet. f. Wiped them with the towel where-with he was girded.

These steps symbolize Christ's entire work of redemption. His rising from supper represents his rising from his place of enjoyment in the heavenly glory. His laying aside his garments symbolized his putting aside his yearning of majesty (Phil. 2:7, 8). His girding himself symbolized his taking the form of a servant (Phil. 2:7). The water in the basin symbolized his cleansing blood; his washing of the disciples' feet, his actual cleansing of them through his word (John 15:3; Eph. 5:26); his taking his garments again, his returning to his place and position in glory.

Peter's Impetuous Ignorance (vv. 6-9). When he realized what the Lord was doing, he refused to have his feet washed; when he realized the peril of refusal, he desired to be fully washed. 3. The significance of this service to those participating in it (vv. 8-11). a. It is a spiritual cleansing (v. 8). Fellowship with Jesus is possible only as we are continuously cleansed from our sins (v. 10). The cleansing here is not the washing of regeneration, but that of sanctification. He that is regenerated, that is, washed in the blood of Christ (symbolized by baptism) does not need a repetition of the act; he only needs the cleansing of sanctification, symbolized by the washing of the feet. After regeneration the believer is sanctified by his sins as he walks through this world. Christ's blood cleanses of all sins those who confess them.

A Judge of brotherly affection (v. 14). This act showed Christ's abandonment to the service of his disciples. It is a lesson much needed today. We need more and more to practice brotherly love. c. An expression of humility (v. 15). This was a lesson much needed by the disciples, and much needed by us today. They had just been disputing as to who should be the greatest in the kingdom. Thus their selfish ambition was expressing itself. On every hand we see manifestations of pride, vanity, and even arrogance of those who are professed followers of the lowly Jesus.

Equalization (v. 16). The disciples thus stooping to serve each other in the name of Jesus Christ will have burned out of them the lusts of the flesh. 11. An Example for Us (vv. 14-17). The disciples of the Lord are under solemn obligation in the spirit of humility to serve each other, even as Christ served his disciples. This obligation rests upon his Lordship (v. 14). To refuse obedience to him is to set oneself above his Lord. The way to happiness is implicit obedience to the Lord.

WEST INDIAN BEAUTY

More writers than one have likened the scenery of the West Indies to a theatrical back-drop because so many of the islands are so lovely that they seem too dramatic to be true. In Haiti the traveler steps into the very locale of drama, the setting in which the prototype of Eugene O'Neill's "Emperor Jones" spent his brief and gaudy career.

Whistler, the famous artist, was noted for his bluntness of speech. At an exhibition a critic once said to him: "Your picture is not up to the mark; it is not good this time." "You should not say it isn't good," quietly replied Whistler; "you should say you don't like it, and then, you know, you're perfectly safe."

Lightning Reveals Mirage
As a thunderstorm raged on the edge of the Sahara desert recently, members of an exploring party saw, during a flash of lightning, a range of mountains outlined against the sky. The phenomenon was repeated on another evening under almost identical conditions. As the nearest range in that direction was the Atlas mountains, 500 miles away, the explorers concluded that the lightning had produced a mirage.

RED CROSS AGENCIES SAFEGUARD HEALTH

First Aid, Life Saving, Nursing Care, Promote Health and Safety

Five outstanding services make up the health-conservation program of the American Red Cross, according to the annual report just issued in Washington. These services are first aid and life saving, which together have trained more than a million persons; nursing, with an active enrollment of 36,133 registered nurses; Public Health Nursing, conducted by 760 nurses in 424 chapters last year; and Home Hygiene, which has taught more than 700,000 men and women simple ways of caring for the sick at home.
"The achievements of the Red Cross in public health nursing place it among the leaders in this field," said James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations. "This service was organized in 1919 to meet needs developed by the World War and the ravages of the flu epidemic which in 1918-1919 took so great a toll of life."
"Since that time Red Cross nursing services have been pioneers in more than one half of the counties in the United States. Many services we established were taken over later by civic, state and federal agencies, and the Red Cross continues to establish services in other new fields. Red Cross nurses made more than a million visits to patients last year, and 628,025 children in schools were inspected.
"Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick are especially important in times of depression, because they teach families to maintain hygienic conditions in their own homes and to recognize symptoms of illness
