CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1935

PRICE $2.00 THE YEAR

PERSONALS

The Fort Worth Star Telegram of March 18, contained pictures of four senior students at the McMurray College, among whom was that of Horace, son of Rev. and Mrs. Edgar Johnson of the local Methodist Church. Horace has his place among the leaders in the college and is editor of the "War Whoop," the college newspaper. Horace and his sister Elizabeth are seniors at the McMurray College at Abilene, Texas.

Mrs. R. E. Lemon left Monday night on No. 4 for the West Point Military Academy, where she will visit for about two weeks with her son Maurice, who is a cadet at the academy.

At the regular meeting of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., Tuesday night, Mr. R. E. Kent of Oscura presented the lodge with two beautiful hand paintings, one of which is the "Road to Jericho," the other being "The River Jordan" and scenery along its banks. The pictures were painted by Brother H. B. Norton of Birds, Ill., aged 88, who is an uncle to Mrs. Kent. The gift was much appreciated by the lodge and a vote of thanks was ordered sent to Mr. H. B. Norton and also to Mr. Kent and his wife, at Oscura.

Mr. and Mrs. George Goodson of Luna visited Carrizozo relatives and friends this Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn of White Oaks spent Saturday in town, visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Harkey and small daughter Earline of White Oaks, were guests last Saturday of relatives and friends at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sipple of White Oaks were Carrizozo visitors last Saturday. Ray was the manager of the White Oaks baseball team last season — and with the proposed C. C. Camp combined with the Carrizozo ball team, it is to be hoped that we'll have a glorious gang of sluggers for, as Ray says, you must hit the ball, first 'n' last.

Mr. and Mrs. Floy Skinner of Nogal were business visitors Tuesday of this week. They report considerable moisture in the Nogal vicinity, due to the heavy snowfall recently.

Mrs. T. G. James of the Kuder-O Bar O ranch near this place, presented the Outlook Art & Gift Shop with some lovely Pussy Willows, gathered on their place. These willows are now on display at the Burke Gift Shop; we thank you, Mrs. Tom James.

The many Lincoln County friends of Miss Charlotte Rice of Fort Stanton, will be pleased to learn that she is recovering nicely from her recent serious illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy McCamant, small son Bobby Gene and Miss Darlen Brockman were Carrizozo visitors from Corona this week. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jenkins, daughter, Marion Jolly and W. C. Monk were also here.

We note by the Roswell Dispatch that Mrs. Bert Pfingsten of Hondo was a business visitor at that place Tuesday.

WOMAN'S CLUB

met Mar. 15, at the home of Mrs. C. A. Snow, with Meses. Bowlin, Sale, W. O. Garrison, Carl Jones, Don English, A. L. Burke and Miss Tressie Davis as assistant hostesses. The meeting was called to order, with Mrs. Snyder in the chair. Mrs. English leading and Mrs. Kelley accompanying at the piano, the club sang "O' Fair New Mexico;" then followed with the "Flag Salute" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

It was gratifying to learn that the club play had brought to the club's exchequer $30.15. Reports from those who attended gave the home talent flattering notice. The building committee was still not quite ready to make a full report. Business concluded, Mrs. Kelley presented the following Irish program.

Song, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," Club; Violin and piano, "My Wild Irish Rose," Lin and Lealye Cooper, responding to an encore with "Irish Washerwoman;" Reading, "Irish Names," Mrs. W. O. Garrison; Piano solos, "Grasshoppers" and "Tally Ho," Zane Harkey; Songs, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" and "A Little Bit of Heaven," Meses. Lemon, Clouse and English; Song, "Where the River Shannon Flows" and "Peggy O'Neil," Club Refreshments were in keeping with the program — green salad, cheese wafers, candy shamrocks and a shamrock leaf, with coffee.

Rainbow Girls.

In response to the arrival of spring, the Carrizozo Rainbow for Girls have started things "to humming." Saturday, the girls met at the home of the Mother Advisor, Mrs. Shelton, and participated in an all-day "sewing bee." The object of the meeting being to work on dish towels which will be sold at a later date. At noon the chief attraction was a covered dish luncheon.

Sunday night, the girls had a theatre party which was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all.

Initiation will be held Friday, Mar. 22 and all Rainbows are urged to be present. Any Masons or Eastern Stars wishing to come and be with the girls will be cordially invited. — Contributed.

Mayor F. H. Johnson, Clint Branum, Tom James, Billy and Harry Gallacher were in El Paso Tuesday night and witnessed a big wrestling match.

Miss Nadine Lesnett is assisting at Ziegler Bros. Store, during the absence of Mrs. Lemon, who is on a visit to her son Maurice at West Point.

J. W. Sandfer of Tinnie spent several days in town the latter part of this week on business.

Mrs. Thelma Greer of Corona was a visitor here this week, returning home Tuesday evening.

Fred Baldonado and Les Harmon served as bailiffs at this term of court.

Mrs. Sherwood Corn and little granddaughter, Mary Ann Grey, are here from the Corn ranch over in Socorro county and will return home the latter part of this, or the first of next week, with Mrs. Corn's daughter, Mrs. Ada Grey.

ANCHO ITEMS

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Charley Marshall, a baby girl, Nancy Myrtle.

Virgil and L. L. Peters were Carrizozo visitors Monday.

Miss Jean Berry spent Saturday and Sunday at Ft. Stanton.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hendricks and Miss Norma Helms were Carrizozo visitors Saturday.

The Ancho Woman's Club met with Mrs. B. W. Wilson Saturday. We hope to have our president back with us before the next meeting.

L. N. Bell of Jack's Peak has sold his ranch to Mr. Walker of Amarillo, Texas. The Bell ranch is a very good ranch and is well located.

Barbecue at Roswell

New Mexico Livestock men, veterans of many a barbecue, don't know what real barbecue is until they take the meat prepared by Elma White and Harry Thorne, says the Roswell Chamber of Commerce. This barbecue de luxe will be a part of the entertainment provided by the Chamber of Commerce for New Mexico cattle growers and wool growers of the 3 day livestock convention at Roswell on March 25 to 27. The barbecue and other entertainments are scheduled for March 26, the day of the joint convention of the two associations, which will be held at the Eastern New Mexico Fair grounds.

Visiting stockmen will witness the Military Institute cadets in a special dress parade at 4:30 p. m., March 26, after which they will inspect the Institute buildings and grounds. Visiting ladies will be guests at a tea at the home of Mrs. J. J. Lane at 2:30 p. m. A dance for the visitors will be held at the Country Club in the morning. At the barbecue, the fine Hereford Bulls to be sold at the Eastern New Mexico Hereford Breeders' Association, will be on exhibit. The sale will be at fair grounds on the 27th.

Calves grown by members of the 4-H Clubs of southeastern Counties will also be sold at auction on the 27th. The New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association Convention will open March 25. The joint convention of Cattle Growers and Wool Growers will be held on the 26th. The Wool Growers will conclude their convention on the 27th.

Florentino Lopez left for Santa Fe last Sunday morning to serve on the Federal petit jury which convened on Monday at that place.

DISTRICT COURT

In the case of W. B. Payne, charged with grand larceny, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Attorney John E. Hall represented the defense.

The murder case of the State vs. Antonio Lucero, charged with the killing of Federico Lucero in Corona last October, occupied the attention of the court from Monday until Wednesday at midnight, when the same was turned over to the jury for their consideration. After deliberating for about 17 or 18 hours, the jury returned in a verdict of acquittal. Lucero claimed self defense in the slaying of Federico Lucero.

The court will wind up the term hearing civil cases.

Important Conference

A veterinary conference was held here Monday at the ranch home of Dr. Carl E. Freeman. Dr. J. P. Simmons of Washington, D. C., was in attendance and plans were formulated to complete the cattle testing in Lincoln and Otero counties, by June 1, after which it is planned to have sufficient veterinarians available to extend the blood test for Bang's Abortion Disease to all herds in which the owners suspect the disease to occur.

The Cattle Sanitary Board is arranging with the Bureau of Animal Industry so that the service will be free, and with no expense to the owners, who will make applications for the test. Those attending the conference were: Drs. Simmons, Washington, D. C.; W. E. Kemper, Albuquerque; E. P. Johnson, Clifton Carter, Roswell; Royal J. Nordstrum, P. E. Cleboun, G. D. Allen, Alamogordo.

Mrs. Russell Reed was a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Malley at Capitan last week.

Mrs. Murph Muirhead, formerly Miss Louise Sweet, now a resident of El Paso, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. E. H. Sweet and sister, Mrs. Jimmy Lee at the Carrizozo Eating House.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter LaFleur and son Walter, Jr., were week-end guests of the A. J. Rollands and Walter Grumbles.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ferguson and children of Coyote were visitors in town this Thursday.

Mrs. R. E. Lemon entertained the Gofus Club at her home this week, before her departure for the east.

Snake Stories Are Mostly Unfounded

Tale of Hypnotic Power Is Declared Untrue.

London.—In spite of the fact that the majority of snakes are quite harmless, the popular prejudice against them is insurmountable, writes E. G. Boulenger in the London Sunday Observer. Almost any absurd story about these reptiles is accepted at its face value and without the slightest attempt to ascertain the true facts of the case.

Specially remarkable is the current belief that snakes have the power to "fascinate" or exert hypnotic influence over their victims. It is possible that the absence of eyelids and consequent inability to close the eyes may be partly responsible for this fetish; the creature's sinuous movements and habit of probing the ground with its forked tongue may perhaps further encourage the common superstition.

Psychological Influence.

That the snake has from early times exerted a very powerful psychological influence over the imagination of man there can be no doubt whatever. One has but to recall the grotesque story of the hoop snake or the American Indian's belief that the rattlesnake adds a joint to its rattle every time it takes a human life. Serpents, moreover, have been deified in many lands, as is evidenced by the frequency with which many figures on innumerable tombs, temples, etc.

The actual "fascinating" power of the snake over intended victims has been disproved by many carefully conducted experiments. Many years ago, when it was customary to feed the zoo's snakes in public on living rats, mice, etc., it was usual to see such small animals contentedly feeding or cleaning themselves within a few inches of the reptiles.

Some years ago I met with a curious instance illustrating the indifference that most small mammals show toward serpents. A white rat was offered as food to a 4-foot long South African snake kept in the Natural History museum, but the reptile apparently not being hungry the rodent was left untouched for several months. With the approach of winter the snake retired into a snug hole which it had excavated. This retreat apparently appealed so strongly to the rat that it ejected the unresisting tenant and promptly appropriated the coveted shelter.

Snake Digs In Again.

Once more the snake dug itself a burrow, and yet again was the rightful owner ejected. Peace finally reigned for a considerable period. With the approach of spring, however, the snake recovered both appetite and initiative, with the result that the rat, one-time bully of the cage, was made to provide the snake with the first meal of the season.

Certain tree snakes inhabiting eastern Asia have the head produced into a lanceolate form often grotesquely patterned. The long bi-furcated tongue is so marked that when thrust rapidly in and out it continues the markings of the head and gives the snake's face the appearance of "telescoping" in a very startling fashion.

It has been established that the small birds and arboreal lizards on which these snakes habitually feed watch this phenomenon until the snake is enabled to approach within striking distance, and so make a meal of them. Such an occurrence, however, can scarcely be regarded as an example of a snake exercising hypnotic influence, but rather evidence of a natural curiosity on the part of the birds and lizards.

Makes Fireproof Paint That Withstands Blaze

Leningrad.—Tanned shavings were scattered over a house. Then paraffin and other highly inflammable liquids were poured over it. Finally the shavings were set on fire—the flames caught the paraffin. But the house remained unharmed. Window panes melted, but the woodwork round them was unharmed. It was a test of a new fireproof paint with which the house had been treated.

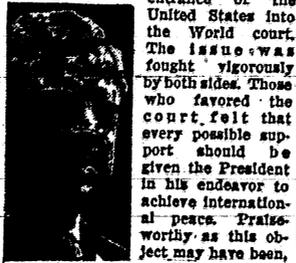

Dog Is Fire Alarm

Canyonville, Ore.—While G. C. Wolfe was visiting neighbors his house caught fire. His dog leaped through a window of the burning structure, ran to the neighbor's home and led them back to the blaze.

THE WORLD COURT

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The entire nation anxiously awaited the recent decision of congress on the entrance of the United States into the World court.

The issue was fought vigorously by both sides. Those who favored the court felt that every possible support should be given the President in his endeavor to achieve international peace. Praise-worthy as this object may have been, a still larger number of persons were thoroughly convinced that though the World court was a very important factor in achieving the President's goal, it was charged with dynamite. This group advocated the theory that membership in the court would place our country in danger of entangling alliances with foreign powers. This was believed to be destructive of our liberty and would compel our submission to the will of the majority of representatives in the court, who would vote in favor of the European powers. An appeal was made to uphold the theory of Washington that we avoid all alliances with countries beyond our borders.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss the merits pro or con of

Cruise and Travel Hat

Amusing "cork-tipped" buttons give a smart individuality to the new cruise and travel hat. The model shown is in beige felt with brown grosgrain band. It is being worn in pastel shades at the fashionable resorts, and in darker colors for early spring in the north.

The World court, but rather to emphasize the basic fact that international "peace" in the final analysis is a matter of international "good will." We advocate the theory that no amount of legislation can ever make a man good. His goodness arises from the "will to be" good. As an illustration: the depression which is still upon us will not be removed until confidence has been restored. As long as confidence, which is practically the spirit of good will, is an absent factor in our international relations, peace is an utter impossibility.

The problem is fundamentally a moral one and must be thought out and settled upon a moral basis. The only authorized system of moral principles which have been tested by history, is the Christian code. When we shall have accomplished the restoration of confidence and the spirit of good will, we need have no fear of World courts—in fact we may not even need them.

Human Sacrifice an Old Indian Custom

Washington.—The savage practice of offering human sacrifices to the gods of war was widely in effect in North America at the time of the coming of the white man.

So said Dr. Truman Michelson of the Smithsonian Institution. The practice is supposed to have been confined to the Aztec and Pawnee Indians, but actually was widely diffused throughout the continent, he said.

In the Aztec rites, the heart of the victim was cut out with a stone knife. In the famous "Morning Star" rites of the Pawnee, a maiden was sacrificed. The Hurons burned maidens at the stake, Doctor Michelson asserts.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

WHEN a homemaker requires assistance with her work, she has opportunity for preference about what that help shall be. Whatever will relieve her most is what she should choose. It may be that the homemaker is strong and well, but finds more work to do than can be accomplished by one pair of hands. Let us consider that she likes to clean her rooms and has sufficient strength.

What she may need, then, may be to have the washing and ironing done. These are time-consuming jobs. To be released from them allows the homemaker two extra days a week, more or less, according to the amount of laundry work her family needs. Many a homemaker has to be relieved of the work of laundering flat work even when she can manage to do the rest of the washing and ironing, or at least the rest of the ironing when the clothes require only finishing, having been washed by some one else.

Sewing.

It may be that the homemaker finds sewing, nervous work, and she would rather be relieved of this, even though it is not physically difficult nor tiresome. It is as hard to be nervously tired as physically weary. When the homemaker is one who finds sewing a strain, she is wise to have help in this work. Those who find sewing a relief from more strenuous housework, can scarcely appreciate the need of help in this work. Help with the harder tasks would seem to be more suitable, but it is for the homemaker to decide what it is that she, herself, craves to be relieved of.

There are homemakers who want above everything else to be relieved of the daily routine of ordinary household tasks. Such women may find laundry work and cleaning they can get done without any difficulty. But the continual round of washing dishes, daily dusting, chamber work and those small tasks which most housewives find not at all hard, these homemakers find irritating. Then, if possible, help should be had for these tasks. There are women who can be had to come in each day and do just such work.

Help Most Needed.

It is what the homemaker wants most that should determine the kind of help she should get. But first she should know whether better planning would not save her the expense of a hired helper. Then she should realize her own strength and appreciate that if this is not great, to save herself she requires aid in physically wearying labor. It is when work is too much for one person that choice is widest in the type to get. Such a homemaker may be in perfect health, but pressed for time. Whatever help releases the most hours and minutes is her special need.

It is a recognized fact that homemakers have different methods of accomplishing the same results. Nor is this confined to those who do housework. There are endless singing methods, accounting methods, bookkeeping methods, etc. Since there are so many different kinds of work in the business of homemaking, and each kind has many good methods of accomplishment, it is a mistake to expect all members of a family to follow any one system.

Willing Workers.

To relieve friction and continue to have willing and helpful hands in a family, it is important that no one insists on a pet method being followed. Even the mother, who has carefully trained her daughters in certain methods, finds when they are no longer little girls, that their individuality asserts itself in a desire and often a pronounced determination to follow their own methods. This may be because one has noticed other ways of doing things in the homes of her friends and she feels these are better than those she learned. Or it may be that she has thought out her own methods and wants to demonstrate their good points. Or it may be a reaction against home rules.

Venice Girls Man Boats in Hunt for Husbands

Venice, Italy.—Girls anxious to find husbands rode the canals in beddowed gondolas.

They observed an ancient Venetian custom, just revived after a lapse of nearly seven centuries, in which unmarried girls parade to display their charms for the approval of masculine admirers. The revival is in line with Premier Benito Mussolini's campaign for increased marriages and "more babies."

So He Won't Spank the Wrong One

William Northwick of Rockford, Ill., has discovered a novel method of setting out the correct punishment for his twin daughters. Once the wrong one was spanked because the father couldn't tell them apart, so he decided to have them fingerprinted to prevent a similar mistake. Here is Dorothy, left, and Dolores being fingerprinted by Detective Maurice Harbert.

The young church had met and overcome some serious difficulties. She first had to face religious persecution at the hands of Jews. Then came internal troubles, as to the support of certain widows. The separating wall of Pharisaical legalism was broken down in the admission of Gentiles into the church, but finally she had to meet the naked sword of civil authority. Through all these tests she was more than conqueror.

1. Peter's imprisonment (vv. 1-4). 1. By whom (v. 3). Herod, the grandson of the wicked Herod who slew the innocent children of Bethlehem. His half-sister, Herodias, secured the death of John the Baptist.

2. The reason (v. 3). It was to gain the favor of the Jews. Herod was not a Jew but an Edomite. Therefore, he knew that his success was dependent upon his having the good will of the Jews. He seems not particularly to have hated the church, but to have loved popularity, for the sake of which he manifested a deep sympathy for degenerate Judaism. Since the church had so developed as to be a successful rival of Judaism, he saw an opportunity to curry favor with the Jews by putting forth his hands against it.

3. The method (v. 4). He was arrested, put into prison and guarded by sixteen soldiers, one group of four for each watch of the night. Humanly speaking it was impossible to escape. They had doubtless heard of Peter's escape from jail before, so they thought they would take no risks this time. However, they reckoned without God.

11. The Church of God in Prayer (v. 5).

The church was at a crisis. James, one of the brethren of the church, was dead, and Peter, the most prominent of all, was in prison. In this desperate strait, they betook themselves to prayer. This was a noteworthy prayer.

1. It was unto God. All true prayer is unto God.

2. It was united prayer. There is peculiar power in the united prayer of God's people.

3. It was more than unceasing prayer. It was the intensely earnest desire of the soul stretched toward God.

4. It was definite prayer. They specifically offered prayer to God for Peter.

111. Peter Delivered by an Angel (vv. 6-11).

This occurred the night before Herod's plan to make a public display of him.

1. Peter sleeping (v. 6). This shows that he was not disturbed over the matter. The Lord keeps in perfect peace those whose minds are stayed on him (Isa. 26:3).

2. Peter leaves the prison (vv. 7-10). A heavenly light shone in the prison. The angel smote Peter on the side. The chains fell off. Peter put on his clothes and passed by one guard after another, through the iron gate and into the city. The whole transaction was orderly and leisurely, showing that God is not in a hurry.

3. The effect upon Peter (v. 11). Although the matter was so wonderful to Peter, who thought himself in a vision, when he came to himself he knew that God had miraculously delivered him from Herod's wicked hands.

IV. Unconscious Unbelief (vv. 12-19). 1. The behavior of Peter and the church (v. 12-17). Peter went to the house of Mary and knocked. The knock was answered by Rhoda, who was so overjoyed that she forgot to open the gate, and went right in and told them that Peter was at the gate. The disciples were not prepared for such good news, even accusing her of madness. She, undaunted, insisted. They offered as an explanation that perhaps it might be Peter's guardian angel in his likeness. Peter rehearsed unto them the Lord's dealing with him.

2. The behavior of the soldiers (vv. 18, 19). There was great agitation among them as to what had become of Peter. This was a serious matter, since they were responsible for him. Not being able to account for Peter's escape, Herod commanded that they be put to death. After this, Herod went down to Caesarea, where he was adored as a god. Because he arrogated this honor to himself, the Lord smote him. Herod died, but the word of the Lord grew and multiplied.

How to Love God To love God is to love his character. For instance, God is purity. And to be pure in thought and look, to turn away from unhallowed books and conversation, to abhor the moments in which we have not been pure, is to love God.

Good Rules of Life It is a goodly thing to die with the blessed consciousness of never having taken advantage of another's infirmity, or poverty, or ignorance; to die able to say that one has not extended the empire of evil on the earth.

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped!

(Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?
Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.
Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.
The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

Get Rid of Poisons That Make You Ill

IS a constant backache keeping you miserable? Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; attacks of dizziness, rheumatic pains, swollen feet and ankles? Do you feel tired, nervous—all unstrung?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits poisons to stay in the blood and upset the whole system.
Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They help the kidneys cleanse the blood of health-destroying poisonous waste. Doan's Pills are used and recommended the world over. Get them from any druggist.

DOAN'S PILLS

WRITER HAS NO WORD OF SCORN FOR THE MISER

A farmer living a life of penury, and killed in a fight over a dollar and a half, was found to have had an estate of about ninety thousand dollars, over fifty thousand of it banked in cash.

Every so often, says a woman contributor to press columns, we read of a recluse, man or woman, living in surroundings of poverty and even uncleanness, who when they die are found to have been rich. Recently there was that aged spinster living in a house that was literally falling in on her, who when she died was found to have been worth about half a million dollars. For weeks investigators dug cash and securities out of the walls and the cellar of the place she made her home.

What a terrible thing to contemplate, wrote one of our readers—people living without actual necessities, to say nothing of comforts and luxuries which might be theirs, of good works which might have brought them interests and self-expression, and then leaving a fortune to a world that cared nothing for them. There ought, she suggests, to be some way of finding out these people before it is too late, and helping them to see that their money is bringing them no happiness.

Perhaps I have lost that flaming spirit of youth that would teach others the way to happiness. But I feel no call to try to show misers the error of their ways. Their lives are "a terrible thing to contemplate" from the viewpoint of our own standards. But doubtless hoarding as an end in itself has peculiar joys for those addicted to it. If they did not find in it something of that "self-expression" for lack of which our reader pities them, they would probably not give up for it everything else in life. For in the case of most misers their hoards are out of all proportion to any rational needs for security or "the rainy day."

No, if the miser during his life enjoys hoarding, and does no one any harm, there are constructive purposes enough after his death to which the money can be put; and, I should say, let him hoard.

Many Methods by Which Finer Flavor of the Oyster Can Be Brought Out; Right Seasoning

"Oysters are in season." Everywhere we see the sign—in store windows and on walls of restaurants, an admirer of the succulent bivalve comments. I began my season early, to be exact, in August, on the Brittany coast, where I consumed them by the dozen in their raw form.

As good as they tasted to me then, with their high flavor, the American oyster tastes better to me now. How large even the blue points seem and how delightful it is to have them on their beds of ice! I can hardly decide whether to eat them without extra seasoning or to take the cocktail sauce which by contrast brings out their flavor so well. Did I tell you that even in the small coast towns of France a bottle of ketchup—a bottle of well-known American brand—came to the table with the vinaigrette sauce and the whole spices which always accompany oysters over there. If you like, you can make up your own cocktail sauce then and there.

Our American oysters have the double advantage of being satisfactory both for raw service and for cooking. How good an oyster stew tastes on a chilly day, and how easy it is to make, and yet not everyone knows how to produce it in its perfect form. I think I prefer the method used by one of New York's most famous oyster bars.

I cook the oysters just a moment. Just long enough to curl the edges, then add the milk, which should be rich milk with at least its full quota of cream, season it with just enough salt and paprika and let it cook just long enough to heat thoroughly. Creamed oysters should be prepared with much the same method. The liquor which develops as the oysters curl should be used to make up the quantity of milk needed to dilute the mixed butter and flour which is the foundation of the standard white sauce.

A little minced raw celery added with the oysters and merely reheated with them, gives an extra note of flavor which you will like, I am sure. For a change, try a brown sauce without celery.

Creamed oysters are also the basis for that popular American invention, oyster pie. You may line your tin with pastry or use only a top crust, which in any case should be baked with the oysters in a very hot oven, both for the sake of the pastry and for the sake of the oysters, which must not be overcooked. You know, undoubtedly, that overcooking toughens oysters. This is one of the reasons why very hot fat must be used for frying them after they have been crumbed or dipped in batter. To make sure that fried oysters are perfect for serving, drop them onto soft paper as you take them out of the fat, and you will have them crisp and dry, as well as tender.

The hot oyster canape, for which I am giving you the recipe, makes a good introduction to dinner.

- Oyster Bisque.
- 24 oysters
 - 4 cups milk
 - 1 slice onion
 - 2 stalks celery
 - Sprigs of parsley
 - Bit of bay leaf
 - 1/2 cup butter
 - 1/2 cup flour
 - Salt and pepper

Clean and pick over oysters, reserve liquor, add oysters chopped, heat slowly to boiling point and put through a coarse strainer. Scald milk with onion, celery, mace, parsley and bay leaf; remove seasonings and add butter and flour blended together. Stir until thick and smooth over the hot water. Add the strained oysters and season with salt and pepper. If too thick add more milk.

Oyster Canape.
Wrap strip of bacon around each oyster, skewer and broil very slowly until bacon is crisp and brown. Serve hot on rounds of toasted bread, garnish edge with white of hard-cooked egg, chopped fine, and mixed with ketchup and a few drops of onion juice.

- Oysters Manhattan.
- 24 oysters
 - 3 tablespoons butter
 - 1/2 teaspoon paprika
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 tablespoon minced parsley
 - 1/2 tablespoon minced onion

Have oysters freshly opened. Cream the butter, add the rest of the ingredients. Divide this mixture and put a bit on each oyster. Then cover each oyster with a small slice of bacon. Set shells on baking tin in a hot oven, 450 degrees F., cook about twelve minutes, or until bacon is crisp. Serve at once with sliced lemon.

- Quick Meal.
- Creamed oysters on toast
 - Celery
 - Potato chips
 - Radishes
 - Corn paprika
 - Green apple pie

The business woman housekeeper welcomes oysters in season, as it gives her an extra food which can be prepared easily and quickly. I am sure that she can prepare the meal suggested for tonight in practically no time if she knows a place where she can find an apple pie worthy of a place on her table. By the way, did you ever try reheating an apple pie before serving? It does much for the ordinary pie and even a little for the best.

I suggest using the whole-kernel corn, dressed with butter and paprika. Of course you will reheat your potato chips, to insure their crispness and full flavor, when you heat the pie.

- Order of Preparation.
- Prepare celery and radishes
 - Open can of corn and dress
 - Prepare oysters
 - Make toast
 - Heat potatoes and pie
 - Make coffee

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his marital troubles. But his wife never wanted her, and their attitude in the divorce court. As a result, she gave a ball strike to her young son, Penelope, on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin sends the child to Europe. Gatlin will Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young physician, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality for which her "middle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also an expert. Burt's final record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to emigrate on a letter, which a comrade of Nance steals. Nance escapes although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that Penelope Gatlin is believed to $75,000.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"She had leased the house Gatlin gave her in the divorce settlement, and about two years ago, when the lease expired and the old tenants departed, she came down here to have the place renovated and secure a new tenant. It was only then that she heard of Gatlin's death. She came to this block with her husband, making inquiries about Gatlin's estate, and tried hard to get control of it, but she was out of luck. That's how we located the house."

"What were the conditions of the trust?"

"The income was to be permitted to accumulate and be reinvested and the child was to have two hundred and fifty dollars a month until her eighteenth birthday, when the total income from the trust was to be turned over to her. She can never touch the principal, however, although Gatlin did provide that she might have up to ten thousand dollars of it at any one time if, in the judgment of the trustee, the emergency requiring such withdrawal was deemed good and sufficient. Gatlin had faith that the real estate, if held long enough, would appreciate tremendously—and it has. The trust is now worth three-quarters of a million and the income is close to twenty thousand a year."

"You say Penelope Gatlin has a checking account also?"

"Yes. We deposit the income from the trust semi-annually, in her account."

"Has she ever asked for an emergency withdrawal of ten thousand dollars?"

"No."

"Is her checking account active?"

"Not very. The cashier was speaking to me about it less than two weeks ago. She draws checks sporadically. Her checking account has interested me considerably for the past two years, because her monthly statements and bank checks have all been returned by the post office. With the exception of about a dozen checks made out to local merchants and probably in payment of her bills, Miss Gatlin's checks have all been in favor of one Ella Cates, of San Francisco. We traced the Cates woman down through the endorsements on the checks, but she stated she didn't know Miss Gatlin's address, that Miss Gatlin visited her occasionally, wrote out checks and asked her to cash them for her at the local grocery store or drug store. These people stated that Ella Cates never received the money at once, but that they collected the checks for her and then gave her the money. I don't like the looks of this, Chief."

"I'll soon find out all about it," McNamara promised. "And I know where Penelope Gatlin is—only I'm not going to tell you now. Would you mind letting me look over her old bank statements and the dead check?"

The banker readily granted him the privilege, and McNamara went through the checks carefully, noting those drawn in favor of Ella Cates. The last one drawn was in favor of a man named Hugh P. Taylor, in sum of five thousand dollars, and deposited by him to the credit of his account in the Federal Trust company of San Francisco.

"I have all the information I want with this exception," he drew forth one of the rogue's gallery photographs made at the central station by the police photographer. "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

"That's the girl, Chief. Is she in trouble with the police?"

Dan McNamara laughed. "Not at all. She's the sweetest little thing on earth. The only trouble she's been in is that she's been lost. Amnesia. Can't remember who she is or anything about her past life. Has several aliases she uses at will."

"How interesting—and how sad."

"Neither interesting nor sad—to me. We handle lots of cases like this. They're curable. You'll be good enough to regard this interview as strictly confidential, of course. It would be very embarrassing for the girl if news of her unfortunate predicament should leak out, for, of course, after her mind has been restored to its normal function, she will have no memory of the period in which she has been lost. I know a doctor that will fix her up in ten days."

"And after he's done that, the banker suggested, 'have a patient's pen fix up her nose. She used to be as lovely as a violet."

"Nancy about the nose," McNamara said, "but I've had the best plastic surgeons in town examine it and they're no hope." He held out his hand. "Thanks for your courtesy. You've been a great help. Meanwhile, don't send out any more of those bank statements and dead checks. Mum's the word."

Back in San Francisco, McNamara went directly to the city prison and looked over the blotter to see what strange fish his men had brought in during his absence.

He found a woman, an old offender, looked for drunkenness, and ordered her sent to his office. When she arrived he unlocked the door, and fingerprinted her on the appropriate card, after which he lectured her on the error of her ways. Then he went upstairs to the identification bureau and asked the chief clerk to have pointed out to him the files cabinets containing criminal records for the years 1914-15 and 1916.

He was searching for a face that was photographed on his remarkable memory, and at last he found it. It was that of a young woman, black-haired and with a "saddle" nose, but not quite so badly deformed as Nance Belden's nor did the contour of the face resemble Nance Belden's. However, since the original of that photograph had, to the chief's knowledge, been dead six months, he decided it would do. He slipped this record into his breast pocket and went back to his office. Here he carefully removed the three photographs from the card to which they were pasted in a row across the top. Below the row of photographs appeared the typewritten criminal history of the subject and in appropriate spaces on the reverse of the card appeared the subject's fingerprints.

McNamara picked up the fresh card, upon the reverse of which he had fingerprinted the woman who at times drank too much. He placed this card in the typewriter of his secretary, who had gone for the day, and carefully typed it in with Nance Belden's criminal record. Then he pasted over the Chief, and have Doctor Burt come over to bandage her wound; then the ambulance can call for her in the morning."

"I thought that was a good idea. When she came back Nance was just going out of the door. Miss Lanning tried to stop her, but her boy friends were still waiting, and grabbed her and beat it. The trouble was that Miss Lanning thought the girl was unconscious but Nance heard her and beat it. Now it's up to you two to find her."

"How long have you known Miss Lanning?"

"Quite a while," McNamara lied. "Well, even if she is a friend of yours, Chief, she's no clinging vine."

"Well, leave her alone from now on and don't waste your time watching her home. The Golden Devil won't come back there again. Another thing. We have criminals loose in our midst who are more important than a poor nut of a girl that only swiped a mess of silk stockings, so don't get excited and waste much time. That will be all, boys."

Outside of Chief McNamara's office door, Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelotti looked at each other meaningfully.

"He's up to his old tricks, Amadeo." "Always feeling sorry for the under dog, Pat. He makes me sick."

"I'll bet a month's salary he knows where the Belden girl is this minute." "I'm not quitting such a hot scent, Pat."

"We'll just split that two hundred and fifty-dollar reward—and see how the chief likes it. That old Lanny girl warned us to step softly or she'd have us broke, didn't she? Well, where does she get her drag with the old man?"

A. Angelotti jumped to the natural conclusion of his kind. "She's got something on him, I suppose."

"Sure she has. She knows he knows where she's hid the body."

"We've got to see the Belden girl's photograph and thumb prints and Bertillon measurements. They're in the upper office."

They went up to the identification bureau, called for the record of Nance Belden and studied it for a couple of minutes.

"I'd recognize that dame now if she was burned to ashes," Thus Angelotti.

Flynn drew his partner into a corner. "The girl was wounded. We know that from the guard that shot her and we're sure of it after looking at the blood in that speedboat."

"If she'd bled that much all by herself she'd never have gotten ashore under her own power, Pat. I'm inclined to think one of the crew got hit, too."

"There's hope for the dogies yet, my boy. You're right. It stands to reason some doctor fixed them up. Now, then, what doctor?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt," Angelotti decided.

"It stands to reason that if this Doctor Burt dressed their wounds last night he'll call on his patients every day until they're out of danger. If we catch him at his dirty work there ought to be a little something in this on the side, Amadeo."

P. Flynn thought that a thousand each would be a very modest sum to charge Stephen Burt for their silence—very modest.

An hour later they pulled up in front of Stephen's house, and behind a coupe parked at the curb. Flynn, circling around it, noticed a red cross on the radiator.

They circled the block and returned, to park at the lower edge of the block. At a quarter past eight they saw Stephen come out, bag in hand, enter his coupe, and drive away. So they followed him and came, in time, to Dan McNamara's house, into which they saw him enter, as they rolled slowly past.

"He had a latch key. He didn't ring the bell. An' no lights in the front of the house," Angelotti cried excitedly. "Drive back, Pat, and I'll get the number."

"That house," Flynn informed him dramatically, "is the habitat of His Royal Highness, Daniel McNamara, Chief of Police of San Francisco. I always knew he was a fox, but I never suspected he was fool enough to hide an escaped convict in his own house."

Angelotti was excited, but like all smart Italians he was not impulsive except when he was in a fight, or angry. "This pinch will keep several nights, because some of these birds ain't in no condition to be moved. This situation is ticklish an' requires calm an' mature deliberation."

"Maybe you're right at that, Amadeo. Well, we'll stick round a while."

They stuck around half an hour before Doctor Burt came out, and drove away. "Drop out an' watch the house," Flynn suggested to his partner, "an' I'll follow his sibs. I'll be back later."

He trailed Stephen Burt to the latter's home and saw him pull up across the sidewalk, preparatory to opening the door of his garage. So Flynn rolled past, circled, picked up Angelotti at the end of the block.

"After you, an' the doc left, I went up to the corner drug store and phoned the chief's home, but nobody answered," Angelotti confessed. "The gang's in there, all right."

"I'm as nervous as an old woman," Flynn confessed. "I wish I had a drink."

Old Dobbin Still Useful on Farm

Twenty Thousand Horses Will Be Needed in New York, This Year.

By Prof. H. W. Meyer, New York State College of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Despite tops, wheels, pulleys, and other evidences of the machine age, the demand for old Dobbin remains steady. In the spring of 1924, 23,000 work horses were in demand on New York farms. The demand promises to be greater, and the supply less next spring.

New York farmers now have about 300,000 horses. Since the average working life of a horse is about fifteen years, about 20,000 horses will pass the age of usefulness within one year and a like number will be needed as replacements. To meet this demand, less than 5,000 home-bred colts are coming into the working age, and farmers in the Empire state must look to other states to buy about 15,000 horses. The United States has about 17,000,000 horses and mules. Replacements call for more than 1,000,000 colts of working age, but only one-half of this number can be had.

Because of the small supply, prices are high and will be still higher before enough horses can be raised to meet the constant demand. Some farmers can raise horses needed for replacements.

Legumes Check Nitrogen

Loss in the Corn Crops

Although Illinois' corn crop this year was the smallest in 61 years, it removed so much nitrogen from the soil that it would take more than 21 million dollars' worth of nitrate of soda to replace it, according to F. H. Crane, assistant chief in soil fertility at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. For every 75 bushels of corn that are taken off the land, a quarter of a ton of nitrate of soda costing around $10 would be needed to put back the nitrogen that had been removed. The past year's corn crop is estimated at 100,816,000 bushels.

Fortunately, farmers do not have to buy this 21 million dollars' worth of nitrate of soda, for they can replace the lost nitrogen cheaply through the use of legumes for soil improvement or for feed crops, provided the measure is taken care of in the latter case, Mr. Crane pointed out.

In fact, the economic solution of many problems of soil management depends almost wholly on making full and proper use of the assistance plants can give, he explained.

Sorghum Seed Used as Feed With Other Grain

Sweet sorghum seed contains considerable tannin which makes it unpalatable. Its feeding value is only about two-thirds as much per pound as seed from the grain sorghums like kafir, milo maize and fetterita. It can be fed to live stock as a part of other grain mixtures. In three trials at the Kansas experiment station, says a report, pigs fed ground sorghum seed with protein rich supplemental gain 12 pounds daily, compared with 16 pounds for pigs fed ground corn in place of sorghum and 1.49 pounds for others fed on ground kafir. In these trials ground sorghum was worth only 68 per cent as much per 100 pounds as ground corn and only 70 per cent as much as ground kafir.

Making Concrete Block

A good quality concrete block can be made of a mixture of one part cement to two and a half parts of sand and three parts crushed stone or screened pebbles not over a three-quarter inch in diameter. To make a cubic yard of finished concrete of this mixture will take six and a half sacks of cement, three-fifths of a cubic yard of sand and a three-quarter cubic yard of crushed stone or pebbles. This amount of concrete will make somewhat over 60 blocks 8 by 16 inches with air spaces amounting to 23 per cent of the total volume. Bank run gravel should not be used for concrete blocks unless it is known to contain the correct proportions of sand and pebbles for concrete of maximum density.

Leads in Raising Goats

The West has been interested in the raising of goats for some time. California leads with the most goats; Texas is second. It is claimed that six goats may be maintained for the same cost as it takes to care for and feed one cow. A goat does not need much space and likes to browse among brush, weeds, leaves, twigs and bark. Goats are not the solution of what to do with one's old razor blades and tin cans. However, they do eat the paper from tin cans. They like paper, as it supplies fiber for them. Their feed is very much like that of a cow, consisting of alfalfa, hay, barley, bran and stlage.

Shelter for Live Stock

With a shortage of feed facing farmers in many parts of the country the need to provide animals with shelter against the cold of winter becomes more necessary than usual. It is necessary not only because it will add to the thriftiness of all live stock and lessen the chances of loss, but also because it decreases the amount of feed necessary. Animals exposed to the wet and cold are forced to draw on their own body fat for energy and this fat must then be replaced by feed.

Call It Repudiation

Washington.—Although it has been several weeks since the Supreme court of the United States rendered its historic making decision in the gold cases, there is no slackening in the disturbance from the effects of the administration's gold policies, even in the light of the court ruling. While the court held that congress had no power to enact legislation invalidating the gold clause in government bonds, it said in the same breath that collection from the government by a bond holder was another story. Since the government has taken gold out of circulation, collection appears virtually impossible but the appearance is not going to stop bond holders from seeking what they regard as justice.

It is now apparent that the government's action is going to be regarded both here and abroad as repudiation. That is, a nasty word when applied to governments and its repercussions likely will be heard for a good many years.

While the repudiation of the gold payments will affect comparatively few people directly, the significance of the action in a political way is becoming more and more apparent. The repudiation in its effect on the bond holders may be only temporary, but its effect politically will be far-fung.

I think it is generally considered now that the gold question will become a paramount issue in the next political campaign and it is not impossible that it will continue to be an issue over a period of years. This is so because, admittedly, actual damage has been done to American prestige in foreign lands. It is made to appear, therefore, that there will be a combination of international and domestic influences at work henceforth with respect to this government's gold policies.

Domestically, the issue was born in the presentation in congress of two bills designed to restore, partially at least, the status of this government as regards the gold policies to that obtaining before the devaluation of the dollar. Simultaneously, former President Herbert Hoover, in one of the few expressions made since retiring from office, declared his belief that the return of gold payments was necessary and vital to stabilizing conditions and re-establishing the United States in world favor.

Of course, with the abundant Democratic majority in congress, the gold bills will get nowhere very fast. Likewise, Mr. Hoover's expression can and will result only in providing ammunition for New Deal supporters, whose answer to criticism usually is a question whether it is desired to return to the conditions that caused the depression.

Nevertheless, I hear considerable discussion to the effect that these ripples must be considered as only the beginning. They will have the effect of causing many people to think about the problem. Discussions will take place in the homes and in the shops. There will be those who contend for sound money of the old style. Equally vehement defenders of the New Deal will arise. Thus, the issue becomes joined and it is not outside the realm of possibility that monetary questions will be as important in 1936 as they were in the Bryan free silver days.

Now as to the practical operation of the gold rulings:

Operation of Gold Rulings

There can be no doubt that the Congressional situation gives congress power to coin money and regulate its value. The Supreme court always has sustained this power. So, when congress, by resolution, allowed President Roosevelt to seize all of the gold in this country and hold it in the treasury, it accomplished indirectly that which it could not do directly. In this way it forced the invalidation of thousands of private contracts wherein one party promised to make payments in gold. Congress made such payments impossible and those who were to be paid have nothing left but disillusionment. As to the gold payment clause in the government bonds the Supreme court said that congress had no right to enact legislation the effect of which was to void that payment. It would seem, therefore, that some way should be found to force the government to make good. That way lies only through the Court of Claims of the United States, and when that court is denied jurisdiction in suits to recover, the bond holder is left with a right, but that right is unenforceable since the government can be sued only with its permission.

On top of these circumstances, and as a long range proposition, considerable attention has been directed to the relationship between the gold clause decisions and inflation. There is a direct link. This link, without doubt, should be watched by all of those who think of the future of this nation.

Inflation of the credit has been going on continuously since Mr. Roosevelt took office. The federal government has set no limit to the borrowing which it will undertake in its program for recovery. The Supreme court has said directly that government securities are worth whatever the administration and congress determine them to be worth because the dollar can be valued up or down as circumstances warrant.

But the value which the President and congress place upon the dollar may differ materially from the value which the public places upon the currency. The public will view the dollar in terms of its purchasing power. Public confidence in the currency, therefore, becomes an absolute necessity and once it is shaken, it history means anything. It takes a long hard pull to get it back. So, if congress shows a willingness to repudiate obligations as it has shown already, the public sooner or later begins to wonder what the end will be.

Throughout history, wherever and whenever such a condition has arisen, the public seeks to convert this doubtful currency into material things, those of a utilitarian value, which it may use. Money, being inedible, is sought to be exchanged for things to eat, to wear, to sustain life and comfort. This is what is meant in expressions "the fight from the dollars" or "the fight" from any other currency about which we have heard so much since the World war.

Up to the President

The situation in congress in the last few weeks has provided a test for President Roosevelt's political acumen. If he has been far more than otherwise would have been the case because for almost two years he has had a congress so obedient to his command as to merit the description of a rubber stamp legislative body. Now, however, the President is faced with the necessity for political maneuvers of the highest order and upon the results of his tactics much will depend. He can cement the links of the Democratic party or he can cause them to disintegrate by the courses he follows.

Some curiosity has been aroused by the fact that for the first time since he became President, Mr. Roosevelt omitted in several instances lately to send administration drafts of bills for congressional consideration. His practice hitherto had been to have the bills drafted in executive departments and submitted with a recommendation that they be enacted in that form. Until some of the factions in congress began to feel their oats this plan worked very well. A change has come over some of them, however, and they are now insisting upon preparation of the legislation themselves.

Another significant development—and this links to circumstances of several months ago—was the presentation by Senator Wagner of New York of a bill to settle labor disputes. This bill does not have administration approval. Indeed, it is quite contrary in some of its phases to the policies which Mr. Roosevelt has sponsored in his dealings with organized labor. It seems important, therefore, that Senator Wagner, who for so long was regarded as Mr. Roosevelt's alter ego in the senate, should deliberately offer legislation to which the administration had not agreed. With further reference to Senator Wagner, who comes from the President's home state of New York, it is interesting, even if unimportant, that Senator Wagner did not support the President in the latter's efforts to force the $5,000,000,000 work relief bill through the senate. Since Senator Wagner has been consistently a New Dealer many observers are asking with some logic whether the New Deal supporters have begun to crack up.

Extension of NRA

It will be recalled that in asking for an extension of the national industrial recovery act for a period of two years, President Roosevelt merely outlined in his message the fundamentals of the plan he was recommending. He carefully avoided reference to any draft of such a bill. It occasioned some surprise that this was so but closer analysis of the situation should have developed reasons therefor. Most of those reasons are traceable directly to the circumstances I mentioned above, namely, the necessity for tactical skill in maneuvering the political strength available to the President.

Observers here generally are agreed that Mr. Roosevelt can turn on full steam and hold a powerful majority in both House and senate. But the question is whether this is the wiser course from a political standpoint. In this connection the expression has been heard several times lately among Democrats who have been regarded as among the leaders that it might not be well to prod stubborn mules too far.

The best information I can gather is that while Mr. Roosevelt did not offer a draft of NRA extension legislation, a bill will be forthcoming in a couple of weeks from the senate finance committee that will have had prior approval from the White House. Something of the same course is scheduled for the house side. Thus, the picture becomes complete. The fine Italian hand of the administration comes into view.

The story we get around Washington is that this course of action will be used more and more as a means of avoiding open disputes and stubbornness on the floor of the house and senate.

"I'd Recognize That Dame Now If She Was Burned to Ashes," Thus Angelotti.

top of this record the three photographs of the dead woman he had taken from the old files, carefully burned all the evidence of the substitution, went upstairs and handed the record to the clerk, who replaced it in the files.

Promptly at six-thirty a knock sounded on his door, and to his hearty "come," Messrs. P. Flynn and A. Angelotti entered.

"I want for you two boys to tell you in no uncertain terms to lay off Miss Barbara Lanning," the chief began. "However, I owe it to you to tell you why. Miss Lanning is a friend of mine of long standing, and I know she is a worthy and dependable woman and absolutely truthful. She isn't interested in the girl, Nance Belden. It happened this way. I regarded that girl as a nut, and I haven't any confidence in the knowledge that does our medicinal work. So I took Nance up to see Dr. Stephen Burt. Miss Lanning is his nurse. She was very kind to the girl—very understanding—and the Belden had got stuck on her. She has an affection complex, understand."

Flynn and Angelotti had had to listen, many a time and oft, to Dan McNamara's observations on complexions to patients. They nodded languidly now.

"Apparently," the chief continued, "Nance hasn't any friends. The poor body had remembered Miss Lanning, and she wrote and asked her to visit her in the pen—and saw the warden arrange her transport out of San Quentin in a taxi with Nance's plan of escape. Well, maybe she did, but if she did, Miss Lanning didn't know it."

"Now, when the Belden girl came to see Miss Lanning's home she realized she couldn't harbor her. Within a minute after the girl entered, Miss Lanning led me on the phone."

"I've just heard a thump out in the hall," says she. "I think the girl's fallen. Better see her, but her in bed."

Many Cape-Suits, Many Cape-Coats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PREFIX the word cape to suit, coat or ensemble and you will be speaking in terms of smartest fashion. A tremendous vogue is predicted for the perfectly stunning cape-suits, cape-coats and cape-ensembles which are so dramatically lending their fashionable presence to the spring style panoramas.

The three models pictured were shown at the fashion revue recently presented by the Chicago wholesale market council. Seeing that they speak louder than words as to the new spring fashion trends, we are passing them on to you via illustration.

This trio of smart modes is style-revealing from any number of viewpoints. Firstly the group bespeaks the versatility of the new caped costumes—a coat to the left, one of the very new waistcoat effects in the center, a simple, youthful two-piece suit to the right, each of which is styled with a cape.

A most interesting feature in regard to the tailored suit on the figure seated is the narrow skirt which exploits a slit hemline, a detail which is considered tres chic for street wear. But wait until we tell you of the breath-taking color schemes of this charming tallent! The cloth of which it is made is in the new blue called "delphic," handsomely trimmed with a wide bordering of choice fur, and here is the big part of the story, it is dyed in a harmonizing darker blue "tropes"—a perfect symphony in blue even to the girlish off-the-face hat, the brim of which is smartly fluted at the edge. Fur dyed in exotic colors to match the materials it trims is one of the thrilling adventures which fashion is making this season.

Of more than passing interest, too, is the pointed turnover collar on the jacket which gives a decidedly youthful aspect to the neckline. The graceful fur-bordered cape has likewise gone pointed at the back to below the waistline in compliment to the collar.

In regard to the model centered in the group, the handsome moire brocade which fashions it is one of the interesting novelty weaves which emphasizes the fact that fabrics were never more varied and fascinating than they are for the new season. It is also said that we are entering into an era of color or the likes of which we have not known for years and the green-gold tone of the moire brocade for the caped waistcoat together with the beige of the skirt goes a far way to verify the statement. This compose of two striking colors also confirms reports that daring combinations distinguish the majority of costumes this season. Note the rope braidings of self-fabric which collar the throat and girdle the waist, which is a trend in current fashion that is chic to the nth degree.

Contrasting the color-glorious of the cape-suits shown, enter the handsome topcoat of black cloth to the left in the illustration. It is an aristocrat among spring coats, the sort in which best dressed women find appeal. The wide banding of superb silver fox adds greatly to its distinction. The cape fits snugly which is a noteworthy detail to keep in mind, as it is in keeping with the prevailing idea. It is also well to remember when selecting your new spring coat that silver fox is one of the very smart first-choice furs this season.

DARK ACCENTS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With the pastel costumes, dark accessories are considered good style. The outfit pictured shows what can be done with this theme. A cloth frock in a subtle soft pastel green is artfully contrasted with a scarf of plaided taffeta in rich deep green and golden yellow. Note the modish calf bag which perfectly the color scheme in that its dark green calfskin is enhanced with a diamond cut-out bar of gold finished metal. Or if you prefer to think of this costume in tones of blue the gown of pale blue would call for the scarf in navy and a lighter blue taffeta with thin white lines in its plaided design. The calf bag of course would be in navy. Which reminds us that the widespread hair for navy extends to footwear and that all the leading booteries are making a big display of navy blue shoes.

SPRING FASHIONS ARE INTERESTING

Rare color combinations, unique types and arrangements of trimmings, and tricky fabrics are doing their best to attract women's attention to the new spring fashions. The alliance of tomato red and chartreuse is one of the most arresting of the colors that you'll see but no more impressive than the use of red and yellow. A woolen jacket, costume of a porous, honeycomb woolen appears in the chartreuse shade but adds a stomacher of the tomato colored crepe.

One evidence of the discard of the red and yellow rule is a yellow knitted frock trimmed with bright red buttons. These buttons fasten the shirtwaist front, the composition of which they are made being duplicated on the red leather belt. A silk scarf that is striped with alternating bands of the two colors is tied carelessly around the neck.

Brown Woolly Tweed Now Combined With Taffeta

Tweed and taffeta meet today on a common footing. Marcella Dormoy combines them in a coat adequately named "Riviera" in a brown woolly tweed with a scarf collar-of-in solid brown taffeta.

The coat is three-quarters, flaps open in front from where the taffeta makes a crisp bow near the throat. It has that wide back flare that is so good now, and the sleeves are rather baggy but close in around the wrists. Jenny contributes a smart redingote in black tulle worn over a dress in white silk pique.

Chamois Colored Shoes

Smartest among the new sports shoes now being shown for resort wear are chamois color, trimmed with brown, with black or white. They can be worn with all light slacks.

YOU AMERICANS

By R. H. WILKINSON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNY Service.

IT WAS mid-afternoon when Gayle Alvin dropped off the train at Juan. He was a day earlier than Don Jose Gomez expected him; hence there was no one at the station to meet the train.

The place was deserted, save for a girl. And because the station agent was busy with the train's mail clerk, Gayle approached her with a question.

She was a pretty girl, dark and olive-skinned, having many of the characteristics, save for her exquisite beauty, that all Mexican girls possess.

"I wonder," said Gayle, "if you could direct me to the hotel? There is a hotel, I presume?"

Gayle had spoken in English, habitually, and he wondered whether or not the girl would understand.

He was, therefore, a little taken back at her remarkably precise use of the language.

"Indeed, señor, there is a hotel in Juan. And a very excellent hotel, you may be sure."

Her voice was deliciously sweet, reminding Gayle of the strumming of a guitar.

"Come, I will take you there."

Gayle picked up his bag and followed her across the dusty street and along the narrow pathway between the two rows of false-fronted buildings.

He felt a little uneasy.

He wasn't used to having girls guide him about, especially pretty girls such as the beautiful senorita, whose heels he dogged.

"It's lovely here, isn't it?" he said by way of making conversation.

She turned on him almost abruptly.

"Ah, señor, you Americans do not know the real beauty of Mexico, the culture, the civilization that is here."

Gayle realized his mistake.

He saw that she had misunderstood his meaning, and was looking at him defiantly.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I didn't intend—"

"You think we are crude," she cut in. "Crude and uncultured, savages. Oh, I know. I was educated at one of your American colleges. I am glad that you are here to see."

"But, really, I didn't mean to be rude. I'm sure the American idea is wrong. Positive, after meeting—"

Her white teeth flashed.

"You think me beautiful, señor? But, of course. All the foolish men think me beautiful. Their love-making is most amusing."

Her frankness was startling.

"One day I shall marry," she went on, sadly it seemed. "And then all my fun will be over."

"I suppose," said Gayle, with equal frankness, "you have had many opportunities?"

"Oh, many! But these men are so stupid."

She sighed.

"I will one day marry an American and he will come here to live and learn to appreciate our wonderful country. But here, señor, is the hotel. I must hurry along. Adios."

"But, say, Ma, I not see you again? This is rather abrupt, you know. Leaving me like this. May I not see you home?"

She shook her head.

"Ah, no, señor. My father would be angry with me. He does not approve of me talking to strangers."

"But how do you know I will not follow you and introduce myself to your father and ask if I may not call upon his charming daughter?"

"Because," said the girl, "I ask you not to. And you Americans are so gallant. You would not break a trust?"

There was no answer to this, and Gayle stood a little awkwardly and watched the slim, young figure vanish up a side street.

Gayle was thinking deeply as he entered the hotel and engaged a room.

The town wasn't so big but what he'd probably see the girl again, and he had every intention of knowing her better.

The sight of the papers lying in the bottom of his traveling bag recalled the purpose of his visit.

He glanced at his watch. It was still only three in the afternoon.

If he hurried he could call on Don Jose before dinner, perhaps begin negotiations for the purchase of the mine.

It was close to four o'clock when Gayle rode through the gateway of Don Jose Gomez's rancho.

The place was, he discovered, the largest and most palatial that he had seen since entering Mexico. More words could not describe its exquisite beauty.

Gayle dismissed his driver and strode up on the porch.

He was admitted by a pretty Mexican girl, dressed in the gay attire of the country, and ushered into the great living room.

A moment later Don Jose himself stood in the doorway.

"Ah, Mr. Alvin. A thousand pardons for not meeting your train. We understood it was tomorrow."

Gayle acknowledged the greeting with the nearest of nods.

He was starting over the Don's shoulder at the slim figure in the hallway.

Don Jose saw the look and turned.

"Carolina! What are you doing there! But come in and meet our guest, Mr. Alvin, my daughter, Carolina."

By neither word nor sign did Gayle indicate that he had had the pleasure of meeting Carolina before.

He bowed gracefully, conscious of a curious feeling of guilt.

She would never believe that he had not intentionally followed her.

Her opinion of Americans must assuredly have suffered.

Dinner was a rite.

Gayle, had his conscience been clear, would have enjoyed the ceremony immensely. But he felt Carolina's eyes on him, vaguely accusing, he thought.

The dim light provided by candles only served to enhance her beauty.

It was not until late in the evening, after Gayle had been persuaded by Don Jose to remain at the rancho during his stay in Mexico, that he had an opportunity to speak to the girl alone.

They were standing on the moonlit veranda, with the great snow-capped mountain peaks dimly visible beyond the sweep of lawn.

"I suppose," said Gayle, "you'll never believe I didn't follow you. I assure you it was most unintentional."

Carolina looked at him sidewise.

"You are forgiven, señor. It is I who should ask your pardon."

Gayle looked at her askance.

"I don't believe I understand—"

She hung her head, as if faintly ashamed.

"Señor, I knew who you were from the moment you stepped from the train; knew you were to be our guest. And I talked so. . . ."

Gayle's pulse quickened.

"But, I say, that was quite all right. About—marrying an American—I mean. That is—"

Gayle turned abruptly to face her. But the girl looked at him once, smiling, and then turned and fled into the house.

Gayle looked up at the moon and breathed deeply. Life, he told himself, was strange and sweet.

Workers on Pikes Peak

Uncover Spanish Weapon

A crude spear or lance left perhaps by Coronado's men, who sought fabled cities of gold, in the West long before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock, was unearthed by workers digging on the new north slope development of Pikes peak, says a United Press Colorado Springs correspondent.

Crudely hammered out by hand, the weapon appeared to be a relic of the sixteenth or seventeenth century.

Cowan H. Eastham, assistant city engineer, believes it may have been buried, or cast aside, by one of the band of intrepid Spanish explorers who, under the leadership of Vasquez de Coronado, headed northward in the 1540s from Mexico in search of the precious yellow metal.

The first person, other than American Indians, known to have seen Pikes peak was Lieut. Zebulon Montgomery Pike, who in 1806 led twenty soldiers on an exploration of the Louisiana Purchase. Historians doubt, however, that the weapon could have been left by a member of his band, because he kept an accurate record of where he went. He did not succeed in climbing the mountain, the winter snows preventing an ascent at that time.

They believe it more likely that straggling deserters from Coronado's band deposited it there. Coronado himself apparently did not see Pikes peak, because he failed to mention it in his account of his travels.

Wolves in Michigan

A peculiar understanding seems to exist about wolves that claim Michigan as their habitat, says the Detroit News. Every four-footed animal that bears any resemblance to the timber wolf is called a wolf, even though it may be a stray police dog or a western coyote. The record of kills made in the last few years proves that four-fifths of the "wolves" taken in Michigan are coyotes. Of recent years an eastern drift of the plains coyote into Michigan has been recorded, while at the same time timber wolves are gradually growing fewer. This is natural, for the timber wolf is a creature of the heavily forested country, while the coyote would naturally follow lumbering on cutover lands. It is an animal of the brush country and has found the Michigan cover much to its liking.

Statuses Discarded

Statuses of Napoleon III and Louis Philippe, Charles X and Louis XVIII, once proudly surveying their passing subjects from pedestals in Paris streets, now stand together, discarded, gazing at a gray wall in an ancient garden. Later-day heroes stand in their places receiving tourist attention. In a corner, half hidden by bushes, stands the Emperor Napoleon III, arrayed in a weather-beaten dress uniform, holding the sword of power in his hand. Louis-Philippe, in a Roman toga, and Louis Philippe in marshal's regalia, stand side by side, their bases deep in ivy. Louis XVIII has lost an arm and Charles X stands next to the Empress Eugenie, gazing into her eyes.—Montreal Herald.

Nugget Site Marked

A commemorative stone marks the spot where the famous Welcome Nugget was found, erected by the Ballarat Historical society in Ballarat, Australia. The inscription reads: "In this place was found on June 9, 1856, the Welcome Nugget. It weighed 2,217 ounces and was sold for 15,500 pounds."

"Snake Bells" Kill Six

Scientists believe that "snake fumes" caused the death of six men and the blinding of a seventh near Kaspurthak, India, recently. The men had set fire to a bush to roast a giant cobra and were overcome by the fumes. It is believed they inhaled poison from the burning reptile.

Wit and Humor

DOCTOR

Don had been interested in watching the doctor at his work while attending his mother in a recent illness.

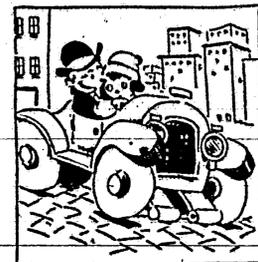

One day shortly after her recovery Don said:

"Mother, I want to look in your mouth like the doctor does."

His mother, humoring him, complied with his request. After considerable scrutiny, the little boy remarked:

"Well, mother, I can't see where your tongue comes from."—Indianapolis News.

A LOT OF DOUGH

Clara—One must know a lot to run one's automobile.

Frank—Not necessarily; but one must have a lot.

Mystery Solved

Stage Manager—Have you solved the mystery of Miss La Belle's missing costume?

Detective—No, but I've found the handkerchief of the person who stole it.

Stage Manager—Why, that's no handkerchief! That's Miss La Belle's costume.

Uplift

"Are you going to lift your voice in the next congress?"

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum, "if I am permitted to do so."

"And if not?"

"I'll smile on in silence. If I can't raise my voice, I can at least have my face lifted."

Not Kicking

"Doesn't it depress you to read about so many tragedies in a newspaper?"

"No, it makes me feel grateful that I am alive at all."

Double Loss

First Burglar—I need eye-glasses.

Second Ditto—What makes you think so?

First Burglar—Well, I was twirling the knobs of a safe and a dance-orchestra began to play.

Quick

"Are you an expert mathematician?"

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "I'll say I'm quick at figures. I can add up several billions in the time it takes to vote 'aye.'"

The End

"What became of that hired hand you got from the city?"

"He used to be a chauffeur and the idiot crawled under a mule to see why it wouldn't go."

BUT NOT CANDLED

"Ah, Miss Egg."

"Don't speak to me, you're entirely too fresh."

A Good Boy

"I don't like the looks of that little boy you were playing with today. You mustn't play with bad little boys, you know."

"Oh, but he isn't a bad little boy, mother. He's good. He's been to the reformatory school twice and they've let him out each time for good behavior!"

Water and Ice

Teacher—What is the most striking alteration when water becomes ice?

Pupil—The enormous rise in price.

Poised Herself on That

Lady (to cook applicant)—One of your references has replied to say that you are lazy, deceitful, untidy and thoroughly dishonest.

Applicant—Is that all? Nothing about my puff pastry?—Punch Magazine.

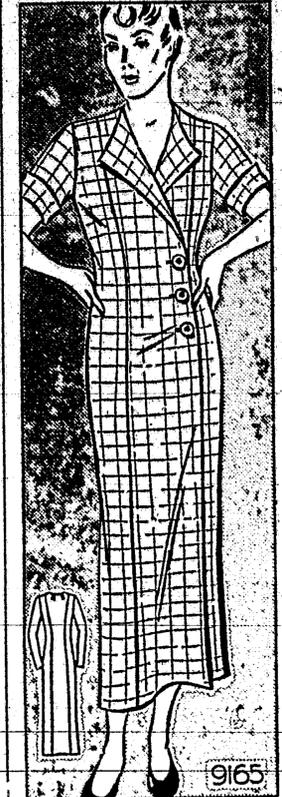

Earns His Pay

Boss—You ask high wages for a man with no experience.

Damon—the Dumb-bell—But it's so much harder work when you don't know anything about it.

House Frock on Coat-Like Lines

PATTERN 9165

Here's a house frock that's not only slenderizing and trim because of its coat-like lines—but essentially practical at the same time. For it's the sort of smart affair that you can slip into quickly—just three buttons to fasten—and be sure of looking your housewifely best!

As every figure-conscious woman knows, long panels sweeping from hem to shoulder, back and front, create an illusion of slenderness—and those pert revers add a nice clean-cut look to the whole frock. Of course, one of the best points about this model is that it may be spread out and ironed flat. Choose printed percale, broadcloth or gingham for it!

Pattern 9165 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Complete, diagrammed sewing chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

Smiles

AFFABLE BROKER

"What kind of money do you prefer?"

"I'm not fastidious," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "What kind have you?"

Spoke With Authority

Brown—I must give up tobacco or liquor or I won't live six months!

Jones—Nonsense! Who says so—your doctor?

Brown—No, my wife; she's twice as efficient and dangerous as a doctor!

Immaterial

Taylor—When your father sent you for samples of cloth didn't he want?

Small Boy—I don't think it matters, sir, he wants them for pen-wipers.—London Tit-Bits.

THE SWEET FLAVORED GUM

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Coyote Spring, about three miles southeast of this place, has a history and if it could talk, many incidents of the past could be narrated. In the early days, the spring was the watering place for weary travelers crossing the desert. Indians received their water supply from the spring. One bitter cold night during one of his trips from Lincoln to White Oaks during the gold rush, Billy the Kid stopped to water his horse and removed his gloves to hunt for fuel to start a fire. He wandered for some distance and on his return, his gloves were missing. It was a cold ride to White Oaks with bare hands, but there was a light snow on the ground and Billy followed the glove thief's tracks to a White Oaks saloon. Peeping through a window, he saw a fellow showing the gloves to the bartender and having a good laugh about it. The Kid quietly raised the window, slipped up just in time to hear him tell where he got the gloves. Standing beside the man, he said: "If you had no gloves of your own I'd say nothing about it; but you have. A man so mean as to steal another's gloves and cause him to suffer when he is provided himself, is not worth living." —And he didn't.

The Music-Drama Study Club met Feb. 28, at the home of Mrs. W. C. Hendren of Fort Stanton. This being guest night, the regular attendance was greatly increased. President the program a covered dish luncheon was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Degita, Vice-Pres., had charge of the business meeting as Mrs. Hester was ill and could not attend. Miss Grace Jones was voted in as a new member. Mrs. E. Kelley and Hendren were in charge of the program. The following members gave individual numbers: Plano, Mmes. Burns, Kelley, Hendren, Sale, Shelton, Miss Ruth Brickley; Readings, Misses Brickley, Shaver, Mmes. Degita, Snyder; Vocal solos, Mmes. Lemon, Beck; Book reports, Misses Melara, McGee. Before leaving for home everyone joined in the singing of familiar songs.

News Flashes

We note by an exchange, that Frank Maxwell has captured the first rattlesnakes of the season. You're quite welcome to them, Frank; we don't owe the snakes a cent, no Senor! We're like the colored gen'man about rattlers—better to say 'there he goes,' than 'there he lies.'

Rumor hath it that Corona is to have a town light plant. Don't get excited, for it is just hearsay. Regarding the light plant, we think it could very easily be financed, for different business houses and individuals to "chip in" toward that enterprise. Corona is too wide-awake a town to be left in darkness. Look at the energetic Capitan town.

Quoting Radio Rube — "The 'Opera Guild' program put on the air at 6 p. m. Sunday evenings is something the music lover can't afford to miss. All operas are put on the air in English, not a foreign tongue. Last Sunday night 'Carmen' was given by Metropolitan Opera House vocalists, as has been their usual custom. And we tell you we enjoyed it immensely. The opera lasts one hour over the NBC network. I get it through Dallas or Denver. One thing I can't understand, they referred to Don Jose in the opera as 'Don Jose,' with a hard accent on the 'J' as in 'Josephine.' It seems to me that a group of grand opera stars should know how to pronounce the name 'Don Jose' in Spanish as 'Don H—ose.' —Perhaps I'm wrng."

It is rumored that White Oaks is to have a CCC Camp. That is the logical place to have a camp of any description for gold, coal and wood are to be obtained in White Oaks. Perhaps the sign bidding welcome to the abode of 'Heart's Desire' (coming in to that historic place) will again team with activity—let's hope so.

Radio Rube begs pardon for talking once more—

If you enjoy high-class band concerts, Frank Simon, formerly solo cornet for the Sousa band, is conductor of the Arco Iron Works Concert band of Middletown, Ohio. This excellent organization is heard on Sunday afternoons at 4:30. Simon's band is made up of former Pryor, Sousa and other big band men, who are taught the trade or vocation, rather than trying to make a good band out of tradesmen who never had an instrument in their hands before. If you are weary of jazz, we suggest you hear this band, over the NBC network at 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

Stanley Squier, way up in Spooner, Wisconsin, writes that he'd like to come down some day and try out the golf course of the Carrizozo Country Club. Why not invite us up to go fishing (all of us) for we've been told they make 'em up in the Spooner country.

To Wayne Van Schoyck—After reading the delightful article by James W. Smith of Fort Stanton taken from 'The Caduceus,' we presume you're right by the assertion that White Oaks has everything we haven't here in Carrizozo. One thing we have that you don't in White Oaks—and that is the wind.
