To Albert Snow: Ever hear the latest popular song entitled "Since O'Keefe is on Relief?" We heard it on the radio Wednesday night. This ditty tells about the O'Keefe (on Relief) becoming high-hat because they have a limousine, chauffeur, radio, butler, go golfing and hold all night parties. The question naturally arises as to who pays for their fun - the poor saps, the Taxpayer. We've been told that Albert is a Democrat - well, Texas aren't any respecter of politics, race or creed.

Memorial Day

Smith for President

A boom for Alfred E. Smith for President is reported to be gaining headway in the East, with an active 'Smith for President Club' that already boasts a membership of around 15,000. It is a non-partisan movement, bringing forth comment and support for his nomination as a Republican as well as a Democrat.

The movement is another one of those that has its foundation in opposition to the re-election of Pres. Roosevelt. It encom passes men in both parties who are seeking to bring forth some candidate who has a chance against Roosevelt. To date there has been a lack of timber.

It is not in the realm of possibility that Mr. Smith will be able to capture either the Republican or Democratic nomination in the conventions next year, even though he should give his full support to the movement in his behalf.

It is only another indication of the widespread search that is being made for a candidate who will be able to lead a growing opposition to the spending policies of the Roosevelt Administration, the lowering of the value of the dollar, and the rapid increase in taxation. - Albuquerque Journal.

May Build Houses of Eggs and Milk

Better and Cheaper Building Materials Promised.

New York.—Even eggs and milk may enter the making of new construction materials in a building boom predicted by famous chemists at the opening session of the American Chemical Society's tercentenary celebration. A boom in the building industry inspired by discoveries of chemists, many of them made during the depression, was forecast by Prof. James R. Withrow of Ohio State University. This inspiration includes better and cheaper materials, he said, than even those provided by nature. New mineral wools were listed as promising heat and cold insulation at low cost. Electric wires will have thinner insulation, both safer and requiring much less space for wiring. Artificial stones are already made in every color and with any degree of hardness a customer desires. New glues smell no better, but bugs of various sorts no longer eat them. Lightweight Bricks. Bricks that partake of the lightness of thisledown, and other lightweight construction materials promise much higher, yet even safer skyscrapers, for the future. F. Lee Smith, chief architect of the technical division of the Federal Housing administration said: "In addition to the basic building materials, we might add practically all the known substances, both organic and inorganic in character. "Even milk, eggs and other food products can be included in this list, although the connection appears to be rather remote. Resins, oils, gases and vegetable fibers have a place in the construction of buildings." Dr. Walter J. Podbielniak, Chicago chemist, told the scientists of his new separating device, which, he said, would make it possible to buy the rarest perfumes at penny prices, eliminate the hangover in whisky and instantly age liquors. He called his invention a "super contactor" and explained that it will separate the finest impurity from any liquid. As to the Hangover. The "hangover," according to Doctor Podbielniak, is caused by the presence of certain impurities always found in "new" whisky. They are partly removed by aging from four to eight years in charred oak barrels, but are completely removed by the new whirling machine. In another report, G. F. Schnabel of Kansas City declared that eating cereal grass is better than eating carrots, spinach, lettuce or a dozen other well-known vegetable greens. He said the great food value of grass had remained unknown because previous tests were made when the grass was too old. Old grass, he said, loses two-thirds, at least, of its protein food values. He tested young cereal grasses such as oats, wheat, barley and rye, cutting them before they formed their first joints. He said that one pound of this grass contained as much vitamin and "greens" value as 50 pounds of lettuce. By Schnabel's method the grass is dried and ground. He said that it may be used in baking cookies, pancakes and chocolate candy with good results on the flavor.

CO-OPERATION By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The inhabitants of a small village in Germany have a unique custom of discovering whether or not two people are suited for marriage. They are escorted to a wood, given a large buck saw, with which they must cut in two the trunk of a tree. If one pulls with all possible strength and the other takes it easy, the prophecy is that one will so dominate as to make life very unhappy. If both pull with a sort of laissez-faire attitude nothing will be accomplished, because there is a lack of co-operation. Happiness and prosperity is predicted for the engaged couple if they both bear and forbear with one another, each doing an equal share in the task. This German custom is highly suggestive of reasons why some persons fall in life and others succeed. Co-operation is basic to all progress in

The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

PROCRASTINATION is one way of defeating ourselves. It is through this very thing that we often lose what we crave. For example, I know of one young woman who wanted a scholarship in a summer colony very much. She inquired into it one year, realizing that it was too late for that season, but in preparation for the next. The head person considered her eligible. The young woman must duly apply next year at some time in January. But the month slipped by and it was not until February that she awoke to the fact she had not put in her application. She did it then with all speed, but her procrastination lost her the scholarship. The reply was that while she was fitted for the work, and could be entered as a student, all scholarships had been given out. She could not afford to enter, and so lost her chance through her delay. Procrastination in returning library books says the purse of pennies. Delay in putting winter things away in moth preventives sometimes costs us the price of a new suit next season. These things are realized, yet procrastination makes us pay the price. A young woman of my acquaintance bought a handsome new evening gown, and delighted in wearing the becoming costume. When a notice from a club of which she was a member, came telling of a ball to be given a month later, she was well pleased. Here she would have an enjoyable time dancing in a beautiful setting in her new gown, and all for a minimum cost. The invitation was put aside and the girl felt confident she would remember the date, but failed to set it down. When she did look it up later in the month, she found she was just one day too late, the ball was the evening before. Her intention had been to glance at the invitation the beginning of the week, but she procrastinated.

Specials. In these days when special prices are often offered for certain days in markets, or for week-end specials, it doesn't pay not to put in the order in time. The stores have made special rates for the period stated, and if you procrastinate you lose out. Many sad regrets would be eliminated if we did not procrastinate in writing letters to those we love, or if we delay in sending a sick person flowers or greeting cards, etc. Time is ever on the wing, and it waits for no one to do things. We have to keep abreast of it or lose out. Humility and Timidity. There is a great difference between humility and timidity, although one is often confused with the other. A humble person may be very brave. A timid person lacks this quality. Great persons are proverbially humble while people of far less ability are prone to be arrogant and even boastful. The timid person seldom has courage enough to forge ahead into hazardous realms of discovery whether they be of experiments or of progressive thinking. The timid person may be sweet natured, and frequently is. The humble person is respectful of the opinion of others because he or she realizes the vastness of knowledge, and is hopeful and eager to learn from any source. He never endeavors to be impressive, or can he be impressed easily. A timid member of a family has to be protected against alarms, while fear is not associated with humility. One reason why humility and timidity are confused is because of the modesty and even the reticence that is a mutual characteristic, although for differing reasons. The timid person is often so fearful of expressing an opinion, that this retiring quality is ascribed to humility. © Bell syndicate—WNU Service.

Baseball Farmer

Larry S. MacPhail, vice president and general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, goes in for baseball farming in a big way. He has connections at Toronto, Fort Worth and many other points, enabling him to nurse young players along from their teens up through the minor leagues until they have developed into big leaguers. Larry used to be a football referee but now his baseball duties take all his time and attention. Trains and automobiles are too slow for him so he flies on most of his journeys, which take him from coast to coast and from Texas and Florida to Canada.

Man Ends Life Despite Prediction of Success

Milwaukee.—A stooped old man stumbled up the Federal building steps. At the top he pulled a razor from his pocket and gazed long at its blade. Only a few of the hundreds of persons hurrying by noticed him until he sighed, dragged the blade slowly across his throat and pitched forward, dead. A numerology chart in his pocket identified him as Christ Zwick. It predicted success.

any organized work. The first suggestion made to a new employee in a large department store is the necessity of being loyal to the purpose and methods of the organization and to cooperate with all others in this same endeavor. No house divided against itself can stand. We learned early in our grade school readers that seven sticks bound together could not easily be broken, but when separated, the contrary was true. The chord which binds together human effort in its struggle to arrive at efficiency is hearty co-operation. No person should assume an attitude of inferiority either toward himself or his task. Every bolt in an automobile is important or it would not be placed there. The man who feels his task of driving that bolt is of no consequence, may through his inefficient labor be the direct cause of a serious accident. Some persons with an inferiority complex feel that their work is not worthwhile and thus they lose all initiative and self-confidence. Others with a superiority complex want to direct the entire enterprise when ability compels an assignment to a place farther down the line. Both of these complexes are wrong, and make for unhappiness, inefficiency, and in many cases failure. Permanent advancement in life comes not through a piece of work outgrowing you, but you outgrowing it. © Western Newspaper Union.

They Have the Oddest of Jobs

Miss Peggy Robertson and Miss C. Davies of Liverpool, England, claim that their job is the oddest in the world. All they have to do is to walk 12 miles every day in a new pair of shoes. Each attaches a pedometer to her leg. After their day's walk the pedometers are checked and the girls go home. They are testers of new shoes and it is estimated that they walk 2,000 miles during the course of a year. They are shown here having their pedometers checked at the end of their day of walking.

Massing of the Colors

THE annual massing of the colors service at Washington Cathedral has become an institution of the life of the Nation's Capital. For several years the patriotic organizations of the city have joined in the impressive commemoration of the heroic dead, and the beautiful southern slope of Mount St. Alban is a perfect place of assembly for the thousands who have wished to attend.

Nowhere else in the United States is there to be found a more deeply stirring spectacle than the procession of flags which is a distinguishing feature of each recurrent occasion. There are usually more than six hundred banners in line when the bugles sound the signal to advance. The bearers start from St. Alban's Parish church, at the west gate of the Cathedral Close; follow the tree-sheltered lane into the Cathedral walls and descend into the amphitheater by way of the Pilgrims' Steps—a brilliant tide of red, white and blue flowing to the music of drums and trumpets. The service proper centers about a cross of poppies raised in a woodland grove which nature seems purposely to have provided. There the colors are brought into one single focal point which symbolizes the significance of the sacred ceremony—a united people, a united hope. No denominational differences mar the event, no political dissonance disturbs it. And no chauvinistic extravagance ever is permitted to intrude. Gratitude and respect, tolerance and peace are the keystones of the rites. Invariably, the President speaks or sends his greeting, and the sermon of the Bishop of Washington is an appeal to conscience of the multitude to the end that "these dead shall not have died in vain."

The service is a memorable experience of the type which, at least once in his career, every American should have, observes a writer in the Washington Star. Its pageantry, its majesty, its living grandeur and its compelling stimulation have an enduring influence in the mind and heart. It represents a nation at worship, a nation aspiring toward a common unselfish ideal, an all-inclusive love of country, God and man.

Battles of CHICKAMAUGA and ATLANTA

THE battle of Chickamauga was fought September 19-20, 1863, when Gen. William Starke Rosecrans was marching on Chattanooga, with Gen. Braxton Bragg slowly retreating, and expecting reinforcements. These reinforcements came suddenly and unknown to Rosecrans, relates a writer in the Indianapolis News. Bragg halted at Chickamauga, and deployed his troops. Rosecrans placed his troops with Gen. George Henry Thomas on the left, Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Crittenden in the center, and Maj. Gen. Alexander McD. McCook on the right, along the Chickamauga creek. September 19, the Confederates crossed the creek, and Maj. Gen. Leonidas Polk struck Thomas' line. Thomas returned the assault, confusing Bragg's plan. September 20, Thomas was again attacked. He frequently called for reinforcements, though he held his position stoutly. Finally Gen. Thomas J. Wood, misinterpreting an order, made a false move, which precipitated the Confederate attack on a weak point in the Federal line, and the day was lost. Rosecrans fled to Chattanooga, but Thomas kept fighting until Gen. James Abram Garfield was sent to summon him. The combat engaged 55,000 Federals and 70,000 Confederates. The Federals lost 16,000 and the Confederates 18,000. The battle of Atlanta took place July 22, 1864, in Atlanta, between Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's army of the Tennessee, numbering three corps, and Brig. Gen. John Bell Hood's corps of Gen. Joseph Eggleston Johnston's army. The Confederates were defeated and driven back to their intrenchments within the town. Hood began the attack on Brig. Gen. William E. Hardee on Sherman's left. Gen. James B. McPherson, of the Federals, gained a position on a high hill, commanding the heart of the town, and then the fight went on all along the line. Battery F, Second United States artillery, was lost in a sharp skirmish on a country road, and McPherson, riding to its assistance, was killed. The battle lasted more than four hours. At four o'clock Hood plunged into the remnant of McPherson's line and drove it back 400 yards, carrying two important batteries in the face of murderous fire. Gen. John M. Schofield's batteries were hurried up to maintain this desirable position and aid the Fifteenth corps to regain its lost ground, in which he was successful. Hood retreated to his intrenchments, having lost all his guns except the two advance ones. Sherman lost 3,722 men and Hood many more. Atlanta was afterward besieged by Sherman and captured, on Hood's abandoning it, September 2, 1864.

Flag of the Confederacy
THE Stars and Bars flag was the original flag of the Confederacy, with three horizontal bars, red, white and red, and a blue union, on which were seven white stars arranged in a circle. The name is also sometimes applied to the later flag or Southern Cross, with blue St. Andrew's cross bordered with white on a red background, and having three white stars on each arm and one at the intersection. Only eleven states actually seceded, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Texas, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas. Two others, Kentucky and Missouri, were expected to do so, but remained in the Union. The seven stars in the original flag represented the first seven states to secede.

DIET, TEETH, EXERCISE

MOST people feel that the condition of their own mouths and the condition of their children's mouths is their own affair. We should get away from this selfish, erroneous and dangerous attitude. With every breath from an unclean mouth, millions of pathogenic micro-organisms easily capable of inoculating another person with a disease-producing germ are expelled from one to ten feet.

To the healthy individual it really matters little how many pathogenic varieties of micro-organisms there may be, or how prevalent they are, because man possesses a natural immunity to infections and is normally immune.

If this were not true, man would have been exterminated from the earth long ago by the myriads of microscopic foes always surrounding him. But just let the individual reduce his natural bodily resistance below a certain point, through fatigue, overeating, loss of sleep, worry, etc., and "some little bug will get you" soon.

The chief concern, therefore, of both the individual and society at large should be to maintain this natural immunity instead of trying to discover cures or remedies for natural conditions that are sure to follow a lowering of the natural resistance to disease. Every disease germ that enters the human system must enter through the mouth, nose or a break in the skin (with the exception of venereal diseases), and it is estimated that 90 per cent of all disease enters through the mouth and incubates in the mouth.

Should not a clean, healthy mouth then be the first consideration in the prevention of disease?

During the present generation the physician has proved that there is a direct connection between unclean mouths and the rapid increase in kidney, heart and circulatory diseases, formerly attributed to deranged metabolism, but now known to be due to a constitutional poisoning of the system from bacteria and their toxins.

Sanitation and hygiene can change the mouth from one of the most infected and unhygienic parts of the body to one that is wholesome, disease-free and clean, and eliminate it as a plague spot for the entire system.

A clean mouth will prevent disease. A suitable diet will insure a well-nourished organism. Exercise will insure proper elimination. These three things will insure health, happiness and longevity.

MALNUTRITION

MANY articles have recently appeared in the newspapers in regard to malnutrition in school children. Insufficient food is generally supposed to be the only cause. Just at present the depression is blamed. But this condition has existed for many years. Too little food or improper food is of the utmost importance, not only to the children, as children, but for their adult life as well.

Several years ago the American Open Air School Journal said that of 549,000 school children examined in fifteen cities in the United States, about 4,000 were undernourished. It would seem that the various school boards or state governments, as a matter of political economy, as well as human mercy, would find some means to supply adequate food to growing children.

How can a child possibly be well nourished, no matter what quantity of quality of the food, if it is mixed with a fetid, decaying mass of food from cavities in the teeth with its millions of germs of putrefaction and pus germs from abscessed teeth? This constant drain of poisons into the intestinal tract causes stomach and intestinal troubles. Bacterial products are absorbed into the system and produce fevers, eye-strain, headaches, anemia, malaise and constipation.

The poisons from the mouth are insidious and slow in their action. Many can, and do withstand them for years, if the powers of resistance are high, but in time these poisons are sure to destroy a good digestion and undermine the system.

A child cannot be expected to develop into a healthy adult with a strong mind if it is deprived of efficient means of chewing its food properly, or if the food must pass through an infected, uncared-for mouth. Is it any wonder that such children are sickly and lacking in strength? Is it any wonder that they are not bright and intelligent and many times figure in the mentally deficient classes in school?

Where, but in the unclean mouth is found the germs of spinal meningitis, measles, diphtheria, and scarlet fever, ready to set up their specific diseases as soon as the resistance is lowered? These unfortunate are also a menace to the health of other children because of their susceptibility to infectious disease.

Taking, then, this specific knowledge as to the deleterious effect of a diseased mouth and malnutrition upon the child, school, state and nation into consideration, it becomes a great sociological problem that should appeal to all of those interested in child welfare. The problem of nutrition will be solved within the first three inches of the alimentary canal.

HERE'S ANALYSIS OF COW, AS MADE BY CITY FELLER

The cow is a female quadruped with an alto voice and a countenance in which there is no guile. She collaborates with the pump in the production of a liquid called milk; provides the filler for hash, and at last is skinned by those she has benefited, as mortals commonly are.

The young cow is called a calf, and is used in the manufacture of a chicken salad.

The cow's tail is mounted aft and has a universal joint. It is used to disturb marauding flies, and the tassel on the end has unique educational value. Persons who milk cows and come often in contact with the tassel have vocabularies of peculiar and impressive force.

The cow has two stomachs. The one on the ground floor is used as a warehouse and has no other function. When this one is filled the cow retires to a quiet place where her manners will occasion no comment and devotes herself to belching. The raw material thus conveyed for the second time to the interior of her face is pulverized and delivered to the auxiliary stomach, where it is converted into the cow.

The cow has no upper plate. All of her teeth are parked in the lower part of her face. This arrangement was perfected by an efficiency expert to keep her from gumming things up. "As a result, she bites up and gums down."

A slice of cow is worth 8 cents in the cow, 14 cents in the hands of the packers, and $2.40 in a restaurant that specializes in atmosphere.—From "The Buller."

If Dennis Chavez, recently named Senator from New Mexico hurries away to the national capital in time to arrive for the Bonus vote he is going to get a taste of the hot spot the first crack out of the box. It will be remembered that Mr. Chavez during the last campaign made the rounds telling that he stood squarely behind the President in all administration moves.

Pres. Roosevelt is dead set against the recently passed Patman Bonus Bill which would pay the ex-service men in newly-printed currency.

It will also be remembered that Mr. Chavez, during the last campaign wasted reams of paper telling the soldier boys that his every vote in the Congress in which he had been a member was cast in their behalf.

Apparently, the new Senator is between the devil and the deep blue sea, provided he clings to the vows of the campaign of 1934. Supporting both the President and the ex-service men on the Bonus question may call for a lot of gymnastics. -Roy Record.

We have been advised by A. Lehman, Acting State Director, National Re-employment Service, Denver, Colo., that in the past there has been an annual influx into Colorado of workers from the adjoining states at the beginning of the beet season. This year there is a more than adequate supply of labor of this kind in Colorado. We ask that you give this publicity in your paper, so that long expensive trips will not be made to Colorado in the hope of finding employment in the beet fields.

Several New Mexico ranches have turned to polo pony raising and are making a success of the business, according to an article by Brownlow Wilson, manager of the WW Land and Cattle Co., Cimarron. Several New Mexico polo ponies are outstanding in eastern polo games.

The story of the ghost lumber town, Catskill, in Colfax county, is told by Manville Chapman, young Raton artist-writer, who illustrates his own article. He is also the subject of a story in the Art and Artists department.

Other articles are "Beaut's for the Basket" by Earl W. Scott; "A Trio of Fighters" by Ray C. Hogan; "Going to Carlsbad" by James Luther; "Juan Catorce" a folk tale by Frank Dobie, author of "Coronado's Children," "Vaquero of the Brush Country" and other books; "The First Printing in New Mexico" by Margaret Abreu, besides many other features.

SYNOPSIS

Doctors Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope" in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that her real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, asleep. Then she disappears, and McNamara learns that she is living in Paris. He also discovers he is in love with Lanny. Stephen warns Penelope by cable to leave Paris, as her whereabouts are known. She flees before the French police get on her trail, and pops back into Lanny's home in San Francisco.

"We'll not fix it in this city, my boy," Thus McNamara.

"Why not?"

"Because when that girl is well she'll probably elect to live her life here, and I don't want a soul in this city, with the exception of ourselves, to know that once she had a saddle nose and a dual personality."

"We can trust the ethical integrity of the man I purpose—"

"I'll trust nobody but myself—and then not too much. Where is the best plastic surgeon in this country?"

"In New York city."

"Lanny, I'll ask the police commission for a sixty day leave of absence. We'll be married at once and take this child to New York with us, put her in a hospital there and have the job done. While it's being done we'll have our honeymoon."

"Three is a crowd—on a honeymoon," Stephen warned.

"It's nothing of the sort," Lanny defended. "Stevie, you mind your own business. Dan and I know our way about."

"Indeed? Well, just because you're so contemptuous, I'm going to tell you something. If I hadn't promoted this engagement, you and Dan would not now be engaged. Dan had you up on a pedestal—which is where you never belonged—and you're so naturally manly you never even learned the rudiments of the common as practiced by the dullest, so I talked the matter up!"

"You didn't talk it up to me."

"No, but I listened sympathetically when you raved about what a grand man Dan McNamara was, and my neck is still stiff from nodding agreement. I told Dan you were crazy about him and worked up his courage."

"You're a liar," McNamara charged, feebly and without malice.

"Dan McNamara is one man who doesn't have to have help with his courage or thinking," Lanny declared proudly. "And you do, Stephen Burt. You're adept at fending it over your bearded patients, but Rebecca P. Lanning is a horse of another color."

"I think I'll go home," Stephen retorted, and went.

He was back in the morning with the impedimenta of his profession. Penelope greeted him gravely. "Good morning, Doctor Burt."

He started. The strident note of Nance Belden was gone from her voice. She spoke now in the low, level tone of the girl of breeding. Then she sat down, and they conversed for half an hour on topics of general interest, but during that time she did not move once from her seat. Her vocabulary was free of underworld expressions, her diction perfect, her sentences grammatical.

"You have had a good night's rest, Miss Gatlin," he ventured.

She nodded, smiling a little. "I am not at all nervous this morning, Doctor Burt. When I am very tired, or excited about something, I am always horribly nervous."

"And you get dreadfully depressed, do you not?"

She nodded. "So depressed that at times I want to die."

"Well, we might as well start your physical examination. I'm going to try to ascertain why you can't be cheerful always. There's a reason, of course, for your nervousness and depression, so I want to examine you very meticulously and see if your trouble can be charged up to some physical condition. Let me feel your pulse."

It was eighty-three, full and strong. Stephen's examination of the girl was as complete as modern medical science could make it, and when the last laboratory report came in three days later, he called Lanny in to discuss the girl.

"With the exception of a subnormal chest expansion, Lanny, that girl is without doubt the healthiest young woman I have ever examined. Her sole physical defect is her nose. But for that I think she'd be a hunky little athlete right now. She told me she always wanted to excel in tennis, golf and dancing—well, of course she'd want to excel in something. She couldn't compete in good looks. I'll give up my report on her and you can hand a copy of it to the man who is to do the operation. I've wired him that I was sending on a patient, and he has agreed to care for her. I see by this morning's paper that Mac has been given a leave of absence."

Lanny nodded.

"When are you and Dan to be married?"

"Tomorrow. We're flying to Reno to avoid the three-day notice of intention to marry demanded by the California law."

"Penelope flying with you?"

"Naturally. She's my bridesmaid."

"Who's going to give the bride away?"

"Nobody. Dan and I are too old to stand for a long-drawn-out marriage ceremony."

"Well, I suppose I'm stuck for a wedding present. How much money have I got in the bank?"

"Approximately twenty thousand. I'm going to buy you some Argentine bonds today. There's no reason why those bonds shouldn't be selling at—"

"Lanny, you're mercenary. I don't care for a dissertation on bonds. Draw yourself a check for ten thousand and spend it all in riotous living. Give old Dan a real blow out—"

"Stevie, you're mad!"

"Quiet, please. Love from the boss, Lanny, and no back talk from you. And for heaven's sake do get a half-way intelligent nurse to take your place while you're away."

"I've engaged Miss Ordway."

"Horrible. Her face would stop a parade. She's efficient, but terrible to look at."

The tears were welling in Lanny's eyes. "Oh, Stevie, I want you to be safe—while I'm away," she choked.

She Nodded. "So Depressed That at Times I Want to Die."

"No holly-tolly—youth thing—with her sweet smile—and winning ways—and your such a—softy—oh, Stevie, Stevie, I can't bear to leave you. If I do, something dreadful will happen to you." And Lanny laid her head on her desk and sobbed quite heartily.

However, Stephen knew what was good for Lanny. "You make me ill," he said coldly. "You carry on like a girl of sixteen."

Instantly Lanny was furious. "You don't appreciate me," she charged.

"Be still—Where's the check book?" On an occasion such as the present I suppose I should sign the check myself."

"It wouldn't do any good if you did, darling. You've never registered your signature at your bank and you have no authority to sign checks on your own bank account. How funny!" and Lanny commenced to laugh. "How lucky I thought of that before leaving!"

Thereupon Stephen put both arms around her and kissed her three times and told her she was as the shadow of a rock in a weary land; that she was very dear to him; that whatever she did was O. K. with him and he'd stick with her dilly fight with her; and finally so comforted her that she consented to let him fly to Reno and give the bride away. It developed that she had always wanted him to do this but loathed putting him to so much trouble.

At the expiration of his leave McNamara returned to duty, but Lanny remained with Penelope in New York. Performed by a master, the operation had proved successful thus far. The actual work of the operation had been the least of it; the subsequent care of the bone and skin graft, and the surgeon's artistry in reshaping the nose were what required time and patience. Lanny reported that the patient would not be discharged for at least three months more.

"How did Penelope approach the operation?" Stephen queried of McNamara.

"Happily. Not a whit nervous. Lanny had complete control over her," he grinned. "I passed as her Uncle Dan and the wife as Aunt Lanny. Lanny saw to it that the girl didn't do any talking while the doctor was present."

"You're a good fellow, Dan."

"Well, McNamara admitted humorously, "It wasn't much of a honeymoon, I'll admit. However, we'd let our hands to the job and we couldn't turn back, God help us."

"Well, you have this consolation, my friend. Your job's over, and mine will commence when Lanny returns with the girl."

"D'ye think you can pull her through, lad?"

"I'm sure I can, Dan. A psycho-neurosis generally is impossible to cure unless you know its causative factors and can remove them. If you can do that, it's as simple as removing a wart. Dan, have you looked up the girl's ancestry?"

"I have not."

"Then do so immediately. We might run into a situation that will shed a bright, effulgent beam of light on my job."

"The attorney that handled Gatlin's affairs ought to be a good man to start with, Stephen. I'll motor to San Jose tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

"The bank president did know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that the man had been dead six years. McNamara thereupon called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if the Gatlin file he might find a clue. He was informed to his amazement, that about two years and a half before, Mrs. Merton had called upon her, asked for the file and had been given it."

There was but one club in the city—the Elks—and McNamara wondered if Theodore Gatlin had belonged to that. He discovered Gatlin had, and from the dining room steward who remembered Theodore Gatlin very well, he ascertained the names and addresses of three men with whom Gatlin had according to the steward, seemed very friendly.

Of these three men, one was dead and the others were unable to shed any light upon the parentage of Gatlin's adopted daughter, although one man had a hazy recollection that the child's father had been an army officer and had been killed in the Philippines. The chief's questionings, however, elicited the names of two women who had been friendly with Mrs. Gatlin, so McNamara called upon both. They could furnish him no information beyond the fact that Mrs. Gatlin despised the child Penelope; that she had never been enthusiastic about the adoption; that she had never been kind to the girl; that Gatlin and Penelope had been inseparable pals. They had a feeling that Mrs. Gatlin, while apparently delighting in persecuting her husband, was, nevertheless, insanely jealous of his love for his adopted daughter; that up to the day of her accident, Penelope had been a bright, healthy, normal child, fun-loving and affectionate and humorous, and the delight of her foster father.

CHAPTER XI

Dan reported to Stephen, somewhat depressed, because he had returned, he thought, without a scintilla of worthwhile information. Stephen, however, thought otherwise. "I'll have to question Mrs. Merton again," he decided. He rang for Miss Ordway. "Telephone to Mrs. Merton," he ordered, "and tell her I wish she'd drop in here some day soon. Tell her I'd like the latest report on her health."

"What are you going to do?" McNamara asked.

"Hypnotize her again, of course. I've got to release her from the mental inhibition I set upon her in the case of her adopted daughter. Otherwise she'll not talk."

A minute later Miss Ordway entered the room. "Mrs. Merton says she will be down for her interview in half an hour, Doctor."

"When she arrives, Dan, you step out into the nurse's office until I have her under control; then I'll admit you. I want you to take copious notes."

Mrs. Merton fluttered into Stephen's consultation room forty minutes later. "Oh, Doctor Burt," she whined, "I'm so glad you've sent for me. My insomnia is worse than ever," she wailed. "Oh, Doctor, do you think I'm going crazy?"

"Not at all, not at all," he soothed her.

"You are excited over nothing. But you are in a highly nervous condition, of course, and until you have settled down it would be useless for me to attempt to examine you. If you could have a little nap for say half an hour on the couch in the next room, I'm sure you would awaken much refreshed."

"Oh, if I could only sleep half an hour, Doctor, if I only could. What a relief it would be."

"Nonsense, my dear lady. We doctors have ways of inducing sleep even in the most obstinate cases of insomnia."

At his command she lay down on the couch and Stephen placed a cushion under her head. Employing the appropriate method of inducing hypnotic sleep, Stephen had her drowsy within three minutes; in ten minutes she had passed into a profound state and Stephen summoned McNamara, gave him a pad and pencil and silently indicated a chair.

Mrs. Merton, however, was aware of his presence. "Who's there?" she demanded in a drowsy tone.

"Doctor McNamara, Mrs. Merton. I have called him in to confer with me on your case."

Lesson for May 26

THE LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:17-30; 1 Corinthians 11:23-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—This do in remembrance of me.—1 Corinthians 11:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Supper Jesus Gave His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Have the Lord's Supper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Observe the Lord's Supper?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Lord's Supper.

1. It was instituted by Christ (Matt. 26:17-30).

2. The circumstances of (Matt. 26:20). It was in connection with the eating of the Passover. At the command of Jesus the disciples had made ready the Passover, and while they were eating he took bread and blessed it and gave to the disciples.

3. The elements used (v. 26). Bread, doubtless common bread of the Passover feast, and the cup which was the fruit of the vine.

4. The significance of the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 11:24-29; cf. Matt. 26:28-29).

5. Jesus took natural and literal elements and made them to be symbols of his own body and blood. Just as our bread and drink are transformed into spirit and drawn, becoming integral parts of our bodies, so by means of these symbols the communicant partakes of Christ. We are in him and he is in us.

6. It is a memorial of the Lord (Luke 22:19). When he left the world he left the bread and the cup by which the disciples would remember him. Every true disciple will gladly avail himself of the opportunity thus to remember his Lord.

7. To show the Lord's sacrificial death (v. 20). Jesus Christ did not die as a hero or as an example of unselfish devotion, but as a substitutionary ransom. On the cross he made expiation for sin.

8. It is a guarantee that our sins are forgiven (Rom. 4:25).

9. It was the signet of the Son of God attached to redemption.

10. It symbolizes the believer's reception of Christ (1 Cor. 10:16). The communicant thereby participates in the body and blood of Christ, becoming a member of his body.

11. It is a forward look to a completed redemption (1 Cor. 11:26). When faith is exercised in Christ, redemption begins and its completion will take place at the coming of Jesus Christ (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). The bread and the cup constitute the keystone of the Lord until he returns. These elements possess not only a spiritual, but a tremendous psychological value, both as a memorial and as a prospect.

12. Qualifications for Participation in the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 11:27-29).

1. A proper apprehension of its meaning (v. 27). Eating and drinking unworthily primarily refers not to the demerit of the communicant, but to the failure to grasp the meaning and importance of the ordinance. To engage thoughtlessly in this service is to do it unworthily. Only a regenerated person can discern the Lord's body. Faith in the integrity of Christ's person and work is essential. Anyone who does not believe in the absolute deity of Christ and his vicarious atonement is an unworthy communicant.

2. Church membership (1 Cor. 11:18-22). Christ's body is the Church, which is composed of regenerated men and women united to him as head and to each other as members of that body by the Holy Spirit.

3. Orderly walk. Conduct which disqualifies for participation in the Lord's supper is a. Immoral conduct (1 Cor. 5:1-13). It is most perilous for one who is guilty of immorality to approach the Lord's table (1 Cor. 11:30). Sickness and death are often visited upon such. This explains why some are mysteriously taken away in death.

b. Heresy (Tit. 2:14; 1 John 4:23). The one who does not believe in the deity and incarnation of Christ is in the heresy. Such should be excluded from the Lord's table.

c. The one who stirs up party strife (Rom. 10:17). Those who cause divisions in the Church should also be excluded from the Lord's table.

Freedom and Triumph

To be gripped by an iron-handed necessity from without is slavery; to be borne along the path of duty by an inward force, which we would not resist if we could, is freedom, peace, triumph.

SEED THOUGHTS

Often it takes some tide of grief to lift us to our best.

Remember that every drop of rain that falls bears into the bosom of the earth a quality of beautiful fertility.—G. H. Lewis.

All things and all acts and this whole wonderful universe proclaim to us the Lord our Father, Christ our love, Christ our hope, our portion, and our joy.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Probably the most notable incident of recent days in Washington is the explosion of a bomb by business. It is significant and important that the business voice, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has spoken in such emphatic terms about the New Deal. It is further a matter of significance that the business voice criticized the New Deal generally as well as specifically, because it is the first time in the period since President Roosevelt took charge that anything like unity in business thought has been presented.

Blast at New Deal

The reaction was instantaneous. First, Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce mustered 21 members of his business advisory committee for a counter attack. It was all drowned out by the chamber's roar. Such was not the case however, with the President's reply. He waited until the convention had ended to let loose a charge that the business interests were selfish. It made all the front pages.

This brings us to the crux of the condition precipitated by the outburst of the Chamber of Commerce convention. It is seldom, and I believe the record shows this statement to be absolutely true, that annual conventions of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States have been taken seriously by the newspapers. The business men have been looked upon as possessors and promoters of rather antiquated ideas. Their interests have been and are of a selfish character: That is quite obvious and quite natural. But at this time, the voice of business speaks more than just business views. It speaks politically.

Hence, when business spoke this time the newspapers of the country paid heed. The result was an unprecedented amount of publicity was obtained by the chamber through the medium of its contention this year.

Whether this represents a change in the thought of the country, surely no one individual of any group is able to say definitely. It must be recognized, however, that for many months a highly vocal minority of politicians has been accusing the administration of thrilling criticism. Although this group fought vigorously and charged the administration with having the greatest "propaganda machine ever to exist, it obtained little publicity for those views. Most newspapers dismissed them by publication of three or four paragraphs, buried on the inside pages of the metropolitan dailies. So, necessarily, significance attaches to the fact that when the business voice was raised in apparent unity the newspapers accorded columns of space to it. It can be construed in no other way than as meaning there is a larger opposition to some phases of the New Deal at least than most of us had expected.

For quite a while such groups as the American Liberty League have pounded away at certain phases of the New Deal. To the Washington observers it appeared that these groups were getting nowhere and getting there fast. Of a sudden, however, the voice opposed to the New Deal seems to have found itself. Certainly at the moment and for the first time, there is an approximation of unity to New Deal opposition and that fact is reflected in a rather important way. I refer to the courage exhibited in congress where there is more and more evidence of a decision on the part of the legislators to assert their independence in contradistinction to previous silent obedience in the White House.

I believe it is too early to attempt a prediction whether the Chamber of Commerce leadership will last. If I were to make an individual guess I would say that leadership of this type will crumble. That guess is predicated upon the record of the past because heretofore it has been true that business always suffered defections and presently there was bushwhacking in its own camp. Regardless of whether that condition develops again, the explosive character of the speeches in the chamber's convention have added a momentum to Roosevelt opposition which it has lacked heretofore. It is just possible, therefore, that even if business leadership falls in its efforts to curb radical tendencies among the administration group, a well knit opposition may now be developing.

Pursuing this assumption further, one hears suggestions around Washington to the effect that a genuine and basic issue for the 1936 campaign may be in the making. It would seem that Mr. Roosevelt will be forced into the position again of appealing to the forgotten man of his 1932 campaign who has since been forgotten. The conservative thought of the country meanwhile will marshal behind the home owners, the possessors of property and capital and the workers whose income must be taxed heavily in subsequent years to pay for the program of spending our way out of the depression.

Some support is seen for this theory of probable issues in 1936 in the recent statement of Postmaster General Farley who spoke politically as chairman of the Democratic national committee.

In almost so many words, Mr. Farley declared that the business interests had not been favorable to Mr. Roosevelt; that they were not now favorable to him and that there was no reason to expect the support of business hereafter. Mr. Farley, clever politician that he is, recognizes that under present conditions there are more votes on the side of the man who appeals to those who have not than there are on the side of the man who appeals to those who have.

On the other hand, government statistics show that something like 83,000,000 persons hold life insurance policies; that something like 20,000,000 have saving accounts in banks; that there are around 10,000,000 home owners in the nation, and that even at the lowest point of the depression there were more people working for salaries and wages than there were unemployed; Mr. Farley's guess apparently is that so many of these workers have had their incomes reduced that they will support a candidate who promises to improve their condition. In their numbers lies the difference between victory and defeat.

In addition to these factors, there is to be considered the probability of defections caused by such demagogic leadership as the Longs and the Coughlins. Saner thinking people know, of course, that the programs which Senator Long and Father Coughlin have been preaching far and wide are as impossible of fulfillment as was the EPIC program advanced by Upton Sinclair in his California campaign. But it may not be overlooked that these men can and will pull together several million voters.

No discussion of the controversy between business and President Roosevelt would be complete without consideration of the NRA.

It is the hottest spot in congress right now. The situation is of such a character as to be comparable to a carbuncle on your neck. Those who have had carbuncles will fully understand.

A few days ago, Mr. Roosevelt called the most obstreperous of opposition senators to the White House for a conference on the question of what to do about extending the national industrial recovery act. It is due to expire by limitation of law on June 10. He cleverly invited Miss Perkins, the secretary of labor, and Donald Richberg, the guiding hand of the Recovery administration, to sit in on that meeting. It was only natural that two such avid New Dealers as Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg should hold out for continuation of NRA for a two-year period. And it was only natural for senators who do not believe wholeheartedly in all of the NRA principles to insist on a makeshift, or temporary continuation. The President put them into a cockpit to fight it out. The resulting disagreement was perfectly logical but the President had put himself in a position to trade with congress.

Since the NRA opponents in congress did not yield, they naturally went back to the Capitol and framed their own program. They propose to have NRA continued, with some of its unsatisfactory features eliminated, to April of next year. They probably will be able to muster enough support to pass some such legislation. If they do, the President will accept it. Actually, he has no choice. His entire policy represented by NRA, to crash completely. It would mean a political defeat which the President, strong as he is, probably could not withstand.

It is a wiser and sadder Blue Eagle that is proposed in the senate resolution continuing NRA.

That resolution is equipped with scissors to trim the tail feathers of the famed eagle so that it cannot operate against businesses whose traffic is wholly within a state—intrastate—nor will it permit price fixing.

The senate finance committee which drafted this resolution reported it to the senate by the overwhelming vote of sixteen to three. That shows better than any words of mine how thoroughly determined that senate group was to override the Richberg-Perkins views on administration policy. Succinctly, the continuing resolution provides for changes in the current law as follows:

1. No price fixing shall be permitted or sanctioned under any code except in codes covering mineral or natural resources industries that now embody the price fixing principle.

2. No trade, engaged wholly in intrastate commerce shall be placed under code.

3. The President will have 30 days in which to review present codes of fair practice in order to revise and adjust each so that it will conform to the provisions of the new NRA.

"I think this is the best way out," said Senator Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, chairman of the committee. "I feel certain we can pass this resolution without a great amount of debate and it will give NRA time to adjust itself and give the courts time to rule on the various questions of NRA validity."

Smart Daytime Fashions of Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A LACE epidemic is raging throughout the realm of fashion. You couldn't escape wearing lace if you would and you wouldn't if you could, not after you have seen the charming, smart and flattering apparel designers are creating of lace this season.

Not in all the centuries past has lace played so versatile a role as it is now playing. Fashion has decreed that we are not only to dine and to dance and attend functions of high degree clad in filmy, exquisitely patterned lace but we are to wear tailored lace in the daytime, go swimming in lace bathing suits, make our smartest sports clothes of lace tuned to the occasion and if we keep pace with the mode our lace-gloved hands will carry handbags of lace. The newest number on the summer program is the all-lace hat; also capes, jackets and evening wraps that are fashioned of lace.

The idea of lace used in a fabric way has been welcomed by designers as a new avenue of expression for their talents. The outstanding feature of the moment is the shirtwaist dress which is tailored of fabriclike lace. It is smart in navy and other dark colors and it is adorable in the new pastels. We predict that the new season will not be far spent ere the majority of us will be going about in these flattering lace shirtwaist fashions. For a summer of travel and week-end visits a lace shirtwaist is ideal, for it packs without creasing or wrinkling and it looks smart wherever you go in the daytime.

Lace has been shown in beautiful striking creations at every Paris collection this season and our own American designers are equally as enthusiastic and exciting in their use of it. While lace is fashionable for every hour of the twenty-four, the big news about lace is its acceptance as a medium for practical daytime clothes.

One of the most distinctive daytime lace costumes of the Paris season is shown to the right in the illustration. It is a Martial et Armand creation in answer to the call for an ensemble that would be appropriate for the races without having to resort to a formal full-length gown. A beautiful pattern of ecru in cotton lace was selected to pose over, black silk. Both the dress and jacket are made of this combination of black all-silk crepe and lace. The black crepe is used also for the belt which ties like a sash.

While the all-lace theme is vastly important, it is not any more so than is that of lace used in a trimming way. Lace edgings and trimmings cannot be left out even in tailored things. For instance Dikusha tailors a blouse (pictured to the left) of navy blue linen using narrow white lace on the sleeves and the cuffs and in rows up and down the front. In fact, all of the French designers are making voluminous use of lace for trimming this season.

Speaking of lace sports fashions, you will be wanting one of the new jacket-wraps made of cotton lace in the color you like best. They are to be worn over your linen and pique frocks this summer.

GRAY IS MODISH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Among best dressed followers of fashion gray is proving a favorite. Gray woollens fashioned into coats, suits and tailored street dresses make special appeal. The gray woolen dress here pictured is typical of the sort of costumes worn by the smart set. The stunning cape is lined with red woolen and is detachable, in that it buttons on to the sleeves.

Smart Sport Suits

Little tailored jackets with detail of pleats and fullness at the back in men's suiting, flannel or gabardine worn with odd skirts will constitute smart sports suits this spring.

Wrist Ruffles

Wrist ruffles are haunting their graceful folds on some of the new and dreezier blouses. They usually occur with jabots or ruffled collars.

NEW BLOUSES HAVE FEMININE ACCENTS

When considering blouses, remember they have gone feminine. Some of them are even made of chiffon. Soft lines, delicate colors, ruffles, all the typical feminine accents, make this season's styles.

For example, shirring is smart and new. Shirred collars, cuffs and pockets shirred shoulders, even shirred sleeves, are among the most popular style notes. One of the smartest of these is shirred in black at the neckline, just as a peasant frock. But it doesn't stop there. Three rows of shirring are used to set the sleeves into the blouse.

Monograms to Be Popular

The ultra-smart maid and matrons will bear labels this season. Handsome monograms in the new modernistic letters are available for handbags and vanity cases.

There are brooches in beautifully-wrought metal or wood or rhinestones for scarfs and the lapsels of tailored suits.

There are broad metal bracelets with an open side into which initials may be slipped, and a smart metal fob on the same principle. Even pull-on gloves are being lettered with small initials especially designed for gloves.

Cellulose Tissue Fabrics

All Glitter Like Metal

Wonders no end! The new "glass fabric" heralded earlier in the year has been duplicated in several cellulose tissue fabrics for the style-right spring wardrobe.

The fabric is much like the tissue used in wrappings and has a mystifying effect when first seen. It is stiff as molar, but very light in weight, it is durable, and glitters like metal cloth.

You'll find it in black, white and rainbow colors, and wear it in glamorous evening gowns, formal blouses and collar and cuff sets that lend a formal note to the street clothes for afternoon.

Farmers to Plant More Than in 1934

Crop Acres Expected to Be Within 5 Per Cent of 1932 Harvest.

Prepared by Ohio State University Agricultural Extension Service, WNU Service.

Reports from 46,000 farmers in all parts of the country, reflecting the plans of all, indicate that they intend to plant 17 per cent more crop acres; exclusive of cotton acreage, than the greatly reduced acreage that was harvested last year.

Although indications, when the poll was taken, pointed to a larger harvest than last year's, the 1935 acreage is expected to be about 5 per cent less than the harvested acreage in 1932. The reduction below the 1932 acreage level, according to Guy W. Miller of the department of rural economics, Ohio State university, is due to crop control programs, unfavorable seeding conditions in the drouth area, shortage and high cost of seed, and reduced requirements for feed following recent liquidation of live stock.

Corn producers intend to plant about 96,000,000 acres, slightly more than were planted last year but nearly 8,000,000 acres more than were harvested.

Spring wheat intentions point to an 18,000,000 acre crop. Last year not more than 9,000,000 acres of spring wheat were harvested.

Farmers expect to plant 29 per cent more land to oats this year than were harvested a year ago.

Should present plans materialize, burley tobacco acreage will remain nearly the same as it was last year.

Little change was reported in potato planting intentions. Planted acreage is expected to be less than 1 per cent under the harvested acreage of last year. Ohio growers plan an acreage cut of 3 per cent.

Increases are expected also in acreage of soy beans and barley. But hay plantings, owing to seed shortages, are expected to decline.

Ventilated Silo Is Used in New Hay-Making Plan

This is a changing world and it would not be surprising to see a change in the process of hay-making. In fact, it has already arrived, declares a writer in the Wisconsin Agriculturalist. The putting up of hay, both by the sugar process and the acid process, is practical and can be applied to almost any kind of forage. Hay canning is also being used. This is simply a ventilated silo where the hay is put either cured or partially cured and by ventilation the curing process goes on without combustion. Large hay bays are not only expensive but there is always considerable danger of fire. By ensiling the hay directly from the field there is no loss caused by woody fiber, moldy or spoiled hay caused by rains, or dusty moldy hay that has been put up improperly cured. Simply a few silos will furnish storage for all the roughage and it will be in the finest condition for feeding. Less barn space will be required and the animals will always receive fresh succulent balanced rations.

Bees by the Pound

There are approximately 5,000 bees in a pound and they may be obtained in packages holding one or more pounds, but the two-pound size appears to be the most popular for all purposes. There are, however, many beekeepers who prefer a three-pound package, thinking that the extra pound of bees will enable the new colony to build up more rapidly. But, says a prominent apiarist, experiments with the two sizes of packages do not seem to warrant this assumption, for the two-pound packages will usually build up as rapidly and store just as much honey as do the three-pound packages. If the bees are young and the loss during transportation not excessive, there are enough of them in a two-pound package to care for all the brood that can be produced by the queen, and the colony will build up just as well without the excess workers.

Temporary Pastures

Winter wheat may be seeded in the spring at the rate of two bushels to the acre for a good early summer pasture, says the Prairie Farmer. Oats, seeded heavily (three to four bushels) will supply a lot of feed during June, July and even August if the rainfall is sufficient. Sudan grass is the most dependable crop for midsummer pasture. If seeded shortly after corn planting time it will be ready for pasture early in July and will furnish feed until frost. If alfalfa, clover or grass seed mixtures are sown with oats or wheat, the seeding will come along better when the grain crop is pastured than if it will cut for grain. Amount of grain seed should be reduced if grass and clovers are seeded with it.

Curb Berry Bushes

Minnesota, seeking to control the white pine blister rust, has decided to restrict the planting of gooseberry and currant bushes. The organism of the rust attacks the white pines with serious effect, but only after being harbored on the gooseberry or currant plants. The berry bushes are vital to the life of the rust. Tests have indicated that the rust spores will carry as far as ten miles from a single bush and it is hoped to obviate further trouble.

Blood and Thunder

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ISAH FLEMISH was past fifty. He was fat and bald and prosperous. He was accepted in the better circles, was, in fact, regarded as somewhat of a social lion.

He attended operas and musicales. Occasionally he took in a stage hit or went to the movies.

In short, Isaih Flemish was not unlike forty or fifty million other Americans who are past fifty, bald and prosperous.

And, like all of the other forty or fifty million, Isaih had a weakness. It lay in the realms of literature.

That is, if blood and thunder stories can be called literature.

Isaih doted on stories of real heroes, men who carried six-shooters and handled them with uncanny skill; men who thought nothing of running a knife between the ribs of other men, men who lived by the law of might and cunning.

It is said that all great men mix blood and thunder reading with the classics.

Not that Isaih was great. He was like great men only from a literary standpoint. And probably like the rest, Isaih's weakness was frowned upon by a socially ambitious spouse.

There was no use explaining to her that blood and thunder, to Isaih, was meat and drink to a soul that had been deprived of adventure.

As far as Mrs. Flemish was concerned, it was all a silly and uncalled for business.

Hence Isaih was forced to do his reading in private, and was forbidden to mention the extent of his literary achievements in public.

It would, Mrs. Flemish stated, ruin them socially.

He was told—and he believed it, too, that blood and thunder stories were for morons and nit-wits.

No one, he was given to understand, with an ounce of intelligence, would waste time and money buying and reading blood and thunder magazines.

As a result of this Isaih, through fear of being ridiculed, never mentioned his weakness to any of his compatriots.

His opinions and ideas regarding the great open spaces and the men who rode the range, were confined to his thoughts and secret dreams.

This, of course, was before Isaih met Buck Willard.

He was returning one day from a business trip to New York and chanced to glance over the shoulder of the man occupying the seat in front of him.

His heart leaped.

The man was perusing the contents of Isaih's favorite blood and thunder periodical.

Moreover, the particular story then being perused was written by none other than the great Buck Willard, foremost of all blood and thunder writers.

Isaih stood up and with apologies seated himself beside the stranger.

Here, he thought, was a kindred spirit, an understanding soul.

One who would listen to and appreciate the prattle that he had for years longed to pour into the ears of one who would know what he was talking about.

"I noticed," said Isaih by way of an opening, "that you are reading a story by Buck Willard. A great writer, Willard. I enjoy his stuff immensely."

"Glad to hear it," said the stranger, smiling in friendly fashion.

"I'm one of his most ardent admirers. In fact, my name is Willard. Buck Willard. I wrote this story."

Isaih's jaw sagged. He gulped. Reddened.

"You—you don't mean it! You're not Buck Willard, really?"

"None other. And no one enjoys reading my stuff better than myself. Great, I call it!"

"Say!" Isaih's eyes filled with admiration. "By George, this is a pleasure. By George! You don't know how I've followed your stories. This is an honor! Can't imagine anything I've wanted more than to meet a real hero-writer like yourself. You're good!"

Mr. Willard beamed.

"Sure, I'm good. Hope to be better some day."

"Look here, Mr. Willard," said Isaih earnestly, "mind telling me how you get material for stories? It must be interesting work."

"It isn't," said Mr. Willard. "It's drudgery. Forever plowing through encyclopedias and reading western novels and going to movies. It's drudgery, I'll tell a man."

Isaih was a little nonplussed.

He couldn't quite conceive how a writer of blood-and-thunder stories could call his work drudgery.

Isaih changed the subject. "What part of the West do you come from, Mr. Willard? Arizona, I suppose? Most of your stories are laid down there. Must be a great country?"

"Don't come from the West," Mr. Willard said briefly. "Never been outside of New York state in my life. Don't want to. Like it here. Wouldn't live in the West if I was paid for it."

Mr. Willard picked up his magazine and went on reading.

Isaih hesitated.

He was bitterly disappointed, sick to his stomach, disillusioned.

He hesitated a minute, made an effort to speak, changed his mind and stood up. He returned to his seat, and his glance fell on a copy of the latest issue of Western Thrills, his favorite magazine.

He had anticipated an enjoyable journey home, with two-gun artists as his dream companions.

Sight of the magazine angered him. He picked it up, flung it on the floor and slumped into his seat.

After all, he thought a man is foolish to read that sort of stuff.

Hereafter, he'd devote his time to better literature.

Read the classics, try to improve himself so that he could talk intelligently when Shakespeare or Trollope or Dickens was being discussed by his literary friends.

Isaih did not again see Buck Willard. The writer left his seat shortly after Isaih had returned to his own compartment, and disappeared.

At Bridgeport, Buck Willard alighted, even though his ticket read to Boston.

"Easier than I thought," he told himself as he hurried into the telegraph office. "Old lady ought to be satisfied."

He grabbed a blank and scribbled off the following message: "Mrs. Letty Flemish, Boston, Mass. Plan worked fine. Your husband fell for gag. Is thoroughly disgusted with Buck Willard and all blood-and-thunder stories. Will expect check by return wire. Signed, Paul Jones."

So eager they all were that a long queue had to be formed for the birds to wait their turn. The large ones came first, the little ones stood at the end of the line.

Last of all, among the small birds, was the goldfinch. Such a restless, perky little attractive fellow, too. Chirping impatiently to attract the fairy's attention, he hopped about restlessly, instead of keeping his place.

"What a lot there are to be painted before my turn comes," he thought. "I'll take a fly around while I'm waiting."

Up and up he soared on his little wings, revelling in the clear sunlight and bright blue sky. Presently he flew down again. What a lovely world it was, fresh and young and glowing with color. He was admiring the just-opened flowers and leafy trees when he suddenly remembered his own coat and flew back to the window. But the long queue of birds had gone. They had all been decorated, and the angel fairy was packing up his paints and palette.

The poor little goldfinch was left dowdy and plain in a beautiful world. Overcome with sorrow, he sat weeping on a branch until the fairy took pity on him.

"You were too late, through your own fault, little bird," he said. "My paints are nearly finished, but I will do what I can for you."

He still had some scraps of color left and set to work on the finch's coat with these. There was a dab of crimson for his face, a touch of blue on his head and looking feathers, cream and yellow and soft browns for his body, and what luck—a big splash of red for each wing. So that is—so it is said, how the little goldfinch came by his beautiful coat.

Hall a Great Menace

Hall, the coming of which cannot be predicted, is a menace that hangs over all crops east of the Rockies, particularly in the Midwest. A hailstorm can reduce a promising field to a total loss in a few minutes. Hailstones, says Dr. W. J. Humphreys of the weather bureau, are formed in the vigorously rising air of a thunderstorm. Raindrops are blown up to a level where it is so cold that they freeze. But the ascending air is puffy, so that many of the frozen lumps must make several excursions back and forth between the levels of snow and rain. All the time they grow larger and larger, by capturing snow crystals in one level and raindrops in the other, until at last they are too large to be supported by the uprushing air and fall to the ground.

Sweden Keeps Relics of Past

In preserving relics of its past, Sweden keeps not only examples of costumes and handicrafts, but whole houses, barns and mills from every part of the country. At Skansen in a 70-acre outdoor museum are buildings representing almost every development in Sweden's national life and giving one a full picture of life in former times. To preserve the illusion completely the curators have furnished the dwellings with kitchenware, furniture, hangings and wall paintings typical of each period.

Few Know Gaelic

In North America, outside of the island of Cape Breton, in the province of Nova Scotia, very little Gaelic, the native language of the Gaels, is spoken. Some Gaelic is spoken on Prince Edward Island and some enthusiasts in the village of Valleyfield, P. E. I., hold classes to cultivate the language.

C. A. certificate showing that the Carrizozo school is still a member of the association. This certificate will be left on display for the next 4 or 5 days so that those doubting same may be satisfied.

Boxing at Lyric Theatre

The boxing program as advertised for the Lyric Theatre was carried out before a large audience Wednesday night.

The curtain-raiser was fought in a two-round bout between two game youngsters, Green of the transient camp and Morgan of Carrizozo, in which the decision went to Morgan.

The second was a four-round bout between Devasher and Becker, both from the transient camp, the decision going to Devasher.

The third was another four-round bout between Jim Clark of the transient camp and Grant Miller of Carrizozo and after 4 rounds of clever boxing, it ended in a draw. Thanks for holding the division of the honor for us, Grant.

The fourth, which was the main feature of the event was a ten-round bout between Jack Smith of the transient camp and Curtis Latham of Carrizozo. The bout was no "tea party." In the beginning, Smith seemed to be picked as the winner, but after Latham got started, he convinced the fans that there was another fellow in the ring besides Jack Smith. The decision went to Latham and he well deserved it.

Notes of the Event

Coch Detloff performed in professional manner as referee and Grady Miller made a wonderful bell-ringer with a cow bell and carpenter's hammer, but it suited us as well as an electric time bell. Some money changed hands but our modesty on one hand and the safety of our hides prevents publication.
